STRATHCONA'S HORSE.

How Their Organization Found Birth in Their Founder's Brain.

The Montreal "Gazette" notes that the Strathcona Horse bears a name that is already familiar wherever the events of the day are subjects of intelligent observation and reflection. It represents a new departure, a new idea, a fresh application of patriotism. But the new has it roots in the old and it may be worth while to ask where the germ of this organization is to be found. A dozen years, nay, half-a-dozen years ago, the name itself—a romantic and musical synonym for another name no less romantic, but darkened, alas! and crimsoned too with tragic associations—had not yet put forth its gladly acknowledged claim on our attention. Thirty years ago the man to whom it was to be a name of honor was serving his country unostentatiously in the only settled portion of the Great Lone, the Wild North Land. Two years had yet to pass before Captain (now General Sir) W. F. Butler aroused young England to a sense of the vastness and manifold possibilities of her inheritance in North America. The Hudson's Bay Company had no longer any reason to depreciate the prairie country or the region to north and west of it. On the contrary that venerable Corporation had a joint interest in extolling the resources of the Northwest. The transfer had not been accomplished without trouble, and it was in helping to disentangle the unhappy complications that followlowed Riel's resistance to authority that Mr. Donald A. Smith (now Lord Strathcona) first came definitely before the Canadian public. His career from that time forward is part of the history of our time.

If Lord Strathcona is, to some extent, a product of the West—though he belongs to the class of men who create circumstances instead of being made by them—the West, as it is today, is still more a product of Lord Strathcona. He was at its birth in more than one capacity and tended its youth with watchful zeal and an enterprise that recoiled from no difficulties. We find his name mentioned with respect by Colonel P. Robertson Ross in the report of that memorable Reconnaissance in which we may perhaps find the official germ of the movement to which we owe the Strathcona Horse. "On the termination of the annual training of the Militia in the Provinces of Ontario and Quebec, I proceeded in the first instance, via Lake Superior and the Dawson route to Manitoba, and in accordance with instructions, subsequently crossed the continent through Canadian territory to the Pacific coast and Vancouver Island, travelling nearly the whole distance from Fort Garry on horseback." Thus begins the report of the Reconnaissance. The Colonel commanding the Militia left Collingwood on the 16th of July, 1872, and reached Thunder Bay on the 22nd. He describes the places at which the steamer touched, closing with an account of Port Arthur, where municipal government had lately been established. On the same day he started by wagon for Lake Shebandowan, proceeding thence by canoe to the northwest angle of the Lake of the Woods. He discusses the military capacities of the Dawson route and the advantage for settlement of the country between Port Arthur and Fort Garry. In the summer season, he points out, any light carriage can be easily driven from the N. W. angle across one of the most fertile and beautiful countries in the world to the very foot of the Rocky Mountains. He found the Militia of Manitoba under the command of Lieutenant-Colonel Osborn Smith, C.M.G., D.A.G. Major Kennedy's Field Battery was armed for inspection, with some light field guns, "kindly placed at their disposal by the Hon. Donald Smith, M.P., Chief Factor." It was during the remainder of his remarkable journey that Colonel Robertson Ross became convinced that "The great security for the preservation of good order and the peace of the Northwest Territories, under the changing state of affairs, will for some years be found to lie in the existence and presence of a disciplined military body, under its own military rules, in addition to but distinct from any civil force which it may be thought proper to establish." He dwelt on the affection of the Indians for the red coats, and their prejudice against soldiers wearing any other color. He speaks of the "immense herds of buffalo," and of the nefarious traffic by which the Indians were defrauded of their birthright for worse than a mess of pottage. Here we have the germ—the official germ—of the Strathcona Horse. Here we have Lord Strathcona himself in germ—so to speak—contributing in a comparatively small way with characteristic generosity and consideration to the efficiency of such forces as Manitoba could then boast of. From Colonel Robertson Ross's suggestion was doubtless evolved, after due deliberation at Ottawa, the policy that resulted in the organization of the North West Mounted Police. And but for that fine body of men and the spirit of patriotism, daring and endurance, and the high sense of duty which made it what it is, such a force as the Strathcona Horse could not have been called into being with such admirable promptitude. In "Blackwood's Magazine" for April Mr. C. Banbury Williams gives a fine picture of the Mounted Police, under the title of "The Riders of the Plains." But just now it is with the later organization that we are especially concerned. They represent what is most heroic, most romantic in the spirit of the new West. "From all parts of the Northwest Territories you come," says Mr. N. F. Davin, M. P., in his eloquent speech delivered at Lansdowne Park, when Sudbury presented its flag—"from the wide plains of Assiniboia, from the ranges of Alberta and Maple Creek, from the Peace River and the Yukon; from desk, mine, mart and farm; from the school, from the professions, scions of nobility, the sons of wealthy men, sons of Canadian governors and statesmen, sons of the plough, sons of the shop—all leaving comfort, some opulence, and the greatest opportunities of peace; unasked you go as spontaneously as those who have gone before you." This spontaneous, enthusiastic patriotism, this splendid fearlessness of valor, touches a chord in Mr. Davin's heart. He knows something of war by experience, but he considers it a poor thing without enthusiasm, and there is, he holds, no enthusiasm like that of ideas. In old times and in later ages it had done grand things, but none had fought for nobler ideas than those which inspired his "comrades of the West." Slaying or slain, they would be victors, for their deeds should have passed into the thought of the world, and their own land would cherish their memory forever. And the soldiers were not unworthy of their western comrade's praise.

PROVINCIAL NEWS.

Archibald McNaughton, postmaster at Quesnel, is dead.

The shoot for the Brownlee trophy, which took place at Victoria recently, resulted as follows: Mr. T. B. Ware, of Spokane, came first with 21, and Lenfestey second with 20. In the team contest Spokane teams came first and second, and Victoria third.

An effort will, it is said, be made shortly to incorporate Silverton among the cities of the Province, as the town is steadily growing as a Slocan mining centre. It is hoped, also, to secure the establishment in the town of a branch of one of the great chartered banks of Canada.

Word has been received at Vancouver by a C. P. R. official that H. R. M. Princess Aribert, granddaughter of Queen Victoria, and daughter of Princess Christian, of Schleswig-Holstein-Sonderburg-Augustenburg, who intended visiting the coast, has decided not to come.

A curious instance of a Chinaman's tenacity of life is reported from Quesnelle, via Ashcroft. A Chinaman named Ah Mow, whilst hunting for strayed horses, got lost. He was found nine days later by Indians, very weak and nearly dead. His horse meanwhile had died of hunger and exhaustion. The Chinaman survives.

A Vancouver press despatch says: Albert Edward Beck, registrar of the Supreme Court, has received the appointment of Queen's Counsel. Mr. Beck, when he came to this city about fourteen years ago entered John Boultbee's office; he was subsequently appointed deputy registrar of the Supreme Court when Vancouver was in the Westminster district. Upon the formation of Vancouver district he was appointed registrar. He is a barrister-at-law of the Province of Manitoba as well as British Columbia.

Work on the Chilliwack dyke is progressing favorably and with the advent of one or two months of fine weather the construction should go ahead rapidly. Altogether, about fifteen miles of dyking will be done along the Fraser. The undertaking was commenced this spring by the contractors, Messrs. McLean Bros., of Vancouver, and up to date some four and one-half miles of embankment has been thrown up. The present work is being carried out by the Provincial Government, the payment being guaranteed by the settlers of the district. That portion of the land lying behind the partially completed dyke is now in the most perfect condition; formerly the swampy character of the soil prevented any extended agricultural operations.

Convict Welsh, one of the Welland Canal dynamiters, has been promoted from the stone pile to the tailor shop of the penitentiary.

Members of the English Paper Manufacturing Association, now touring the United States, will be entertained at Montreal to morrow.

It is estimated that the total shortage on lumber shipments from Georgian Bay points will be 240,000,000 feet. Prices will go up in consequence.

Evangelist E. Joly, the Dominion Express agent at Joliette, convicted of having stolen $7,000, has been sentenced to nine years in the penitentiary.

Mr. Stinson, former messenger of the Dominion Express Company, was acquitted at St. Catharines of the charge of stealing money from the company.

The Executive of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association have appointed P. W. Ellis of Toronto, president, to wait upon the Dominion Government and urge a grant of $100,000 for the Dominion exhibition in Toronto next year.

"Jack" Roach, the notorious robber, who held up a cigar dealer named Rooney on Dorchester street, Montreal, and relieved him of $100 some months ago, has been sentenced to 20 years in the penitentiary by Justice Lacoste of the Court of the Queen's Bench.

It is worth noting that Canada, in the persons of W. R. Hare and W. A. Hare of Aylmer, Ont., drivers in the same section of "D" Battery, R. C. A., furnishes the only example of known record of father and son literally fighting side by side in the British army.

J. R. Booth will receive $202,500 to cover his lumber losses at the Hull-Ottawa fire in April. This amount, however, will not cover half what Mr. Booth lost in connection with his lumber destroyed, and a conservative estimate places his total loss on all property destroyed at $350,000 over and above insurance.

George Moreland, foreman of the Miner printing office, Rat Portage, has been drowned in the bay. He attempted to swim to a small steamer anchored some distance out but was seized with cramps and went down. He was a son of the jailer of Brantford, Ont., and was a general favorite. He was 30 years of age.

Unless a uniform wage of $2 a day and a working day of nine hours are conceded, the linemen working for the Canadian Pacific Telegraph Company, the Canada Atlantic Company, the Ottawa Electric Light Company, the Ottawa Electric Railway Company and the Bell Telephone Company will go on a strike. About 200 men have already stopped work.

MONDAY, JULY 2, 1900.

A Coast newspaper has published a report from Rossland to the effect that prominent supporters in that city of Hon. C. H. Mackintosh's candidature in connection with the Provincial elections last month, have affirmed that ballot stuffing occurred there, that the names of some 70 aliens were placed on the electoral roll and these men voted, and that a strict government investigation is to be demanded into these and other irregularities alleged. It will be a matter for regret should another election be found necessary, but considerations of convenience or expense should not stand in the way of righting a wrong if it be found that one exist.

Whilst direct benefit to individual mining camps or districts of the Province can seldom be traced to any particular display of specimens of ores there can be no doubt that the public exhibition of a collection, especially a large and varied one, illustrative of the mineral resources of any country, is a very desirable advertisement and one that will in some degree assist in drawing the attention of mining men and capitalists to that country as a favorable field for operation or investment. It is therefore gratifying to find that the Boundary district is sending an exhibit of ores to the forthcoming Winnipeg exhibition, where among the tens of thousands of visitors who will attend it there will assuredly be numbers who will carefully inspect British Columbia's mineral exhibit. The Provincial Government is erecting a separate building in which to there display to advantage samples of the staple industries of the Province of which the mineral industry is by no means least.

Five in eight days! That is the number that took voluntary leave of the Greenwood jail between June 23rd and July 1st. We have not heard of any more getting away since but even that is a record breaker. It seems as if it were as impossible for the Greenwood lock up to hold prisoners as for a strainer to hold water. It is as porous as a sieve. It will not even hold boys. So how can it be expected to keep in the old and hardened convict, who has made a life study of how to escape? The city is provided with innumerable officers. That part of the business is alright but it is the question of how to hold the prisoners after they have been corralled that is bothering the city at present. They believe that a bird in the skookum house is worth two in the United States at any time in the season, but it is the same old, old story: "when officer so and so visited the lock-up early next morning he found nothing but empty cells." The officers must be getting used to looking at empty cells by this time, in fact an occupied one would be a great surprise to them. We would suggest that a roulette table be introduced into this historic lock-up, give each prisoner a few stacks of chips and he will become so engrossed with the game that he will never think of leaving and even if he did the officers would be on hand to catch him.

For Display at Winnipeg.

Mr. E. Jacobs, last Thursday boxed up ores from the undermentioned claims. These ores have been sent to the Provincial Mineralogist, Victoria, who will forward them for display at the forthcoming Winnipeg Exhibition.

A sample of coal from White Lake, near Fairview, was also included.

The Vernon & Nelson Telephone Company is extending its telephone system to Summit camp. The Columbia Company did so months ago.

Judge Dugas of Dawson is engaged in enquiring into the charges against Gold Commissioner Senkier, accused of illegally recording 21 fractions on Last Chance Creek.

The Mountain View, adjoining the B. C., is again at work.

Some nice copper ore has been met with in the cross-cut at the 100-foot level of the War Eagle, in Greenwood camp.

The Winnipeg mine, in Wellington camp, with Mr. Nicholas Tregear in charge, is being put into shape for sending out regular shipments of ore.

Mr. James Kerr returned from the Carmi, upper West Fork, last Thursday. He brought down a fine sample of ore to be sent with the Boundary Creek ore exhibit to the Winnipeg Exhibition.

Ten carloads of ore reached Eholt last Monday evening—five from the B. C. mine and five from the Golden Crown. The latter mine has now sent out 27 cars, or a total of between 600 and 700 tons.

Mr. Archie Connors is sinking a shaft on the Silver Plume, situate near the Emma, in Summit camp, and owned by Mr. Stirling of Vancouver. Some nice looking copper ore is being opened up by this working.

Mr. F. W. Rolt, of Rossland, secretary of the Zala Consolidated, owning the Zala M. mine in Sheridan camp, Washington, and south of Midway, was in town last Saturday morning on his way to the mine.

Mr. R. N. Dickman, a mining engineer from Chicago, last week made an exhaustive examination of the Mother Lode mine, in Deadwood camp, on behalf of some eastern holders of stock in the British Columbia Copper Co.

It is stated that the non-completion of the dam over the North Fork of Kettle River, from which the water supply for the Granby smelter will have to be obtained, will further delay the blowing in of the smelter for several weeks.

The total quantity of ore shipped from the City of Paris mine to the Granby smelter is now more than 1,500 tons. This mine ranks next to the B. C. in its ore shipments to date, but in both instances the average daily shipments are small in comparison with what they may be expected to reach next year.

Mr. A. J. McMillan, managing director, and Mr. J. W. Astley, consulting engineer of the British Columbia (Rossland and Slocan) Syndicate, owning the Snowshoe, in Greenwood camp, were at the mine for several days last week. An underground survey of the mine workings was then made by Messrs. Oldham and Blunt.

A 25-horse power boiler and a 6x8 Bacon hoisting engine have been installed at the R. Bell mine, in Summit camp. This plant will be used to deepen the lower shaft, already down a vertical distance of 90 feet. Meanwhile a tunnel is being driven to connect with the upper workings and thereby to provide for both drainage and ventilation.

The working force at the Miner-Graves group of mines in Greenwood camp has been reduced. The reason assigned is that the ore bins are full of ore as, too, is all available space under ground near the stopes. As rail connection was last week made with the Granby smelter, at Grand Forks, it should now be practicable to relieve the pressure on space at the mines by transportation of the ore to the smelter.

Mr. E. Jacobs last week received from the City of Paris mine, Central Camp, for display at the Winnipeg Exhibition, some excellent specimens of ore representing the two separate ledges occurring on that property. These parallel each other, with an intervening distance of about 50 feet. The ores are very distinct in character. That from No. 1 ledge is silver-lead ore, worth about $50 per ton, and that from No. 2 ledge gold-copper ore, valued at about $25.

The B. C., Summit Camp.

Messrs. Frederic Keffer, M. E., and E. Jacobs visited the B. C. mine, in Summit camp, last Monday. After entertaining his visitors at luncheon Superintendent S. F. Parrish took them below ground and explained to them very fully the conditions under which the big shoots of chalcopyritic ore occur in the levels run at 50, 150 and 250 feet depth respectively. The mine workings at these several levels were carefully examined, and besides seeing large quantities of ore in place the visitors had the benefit of Mr. Parrish's observations and conclusions in connection with the geologic conditions so far as have been disclosed by the somewhat extensive development work done to date in this mine.

The deepest shaft in the mine is as yet only 272 feet, but much exploratory work has been done between this depth and the surface, aggregating nearly 4,000 feet, about one-sixth being sinking and raising and the remainder drifting and crosscutting. Shipments to the Trail smelter average 50 tons of ore daily. The amount will be materially increased after the larger hoist, now in position, shall have been made available by the receipt at the mine of a wire rope of suitable size in place of the too-large cable sent with the hoist. A safety cage is also expected to arrive shortly. With these more adequate appliances in use the ore that has accumulated in the stopes can soon be hoisted to the surface and the daily [illegible] conditions that will then prevail the larger air compressor installed last spring will be used instead of the smaller one now running and the available power for rock drilling operations will thereby be greatly added to.

Total shipments to the Trail smelter now exceed 4,000 tons, which is the largest quantity any individual mine in the Boundary district has so far shipped. In fact the B. C. mine is the only one to date to take advantage to any appreciable extent of the transportation facilities provided by the C. P. R. company in the construction of spur lines to the mines. With the additional facilities for raising ore that the mine will shortly have the output of the B. C. should soon be doubled, and the working force, now numbering about 80 men, be correspondingly increased.

and you know the old speech best,
'Tis not by tags or titles we Britons are banned or blest.
We've fought on the veldt together, and you've said we were kith and kin;
That we just hailed from Without, whilst you did abide Within.
Have it your way, John o' England, you know best the ancient speech;
We've finished the task we met for; it isn't for us to preach.
But when you asked us to stay here, John, to 'colonize the land,'
We own our feelings rose a bit? Can you not understand
Your Queen is the same as ours, man, and we bow to a single Lord,
And our flag and our speech are one, John and we strike with a common sword;
That we're not perpetual campers-out (we've had cities for several years),
Or tillers of earth, or woodmen, or helots, or pioneers?
That when we took down rifle as our sires gripped blunderbuss,
We fought to help the Empire—and that the Empire's US?
We're a Nation same as you are—don't call us colonists,
Or we'll have to tack your Normans on your immigration lists.
But if you will, well, brother, you know the folk-tongue most—
The Afric sun is setting! you're sailing for England's coast,
So, good-bye, John; we've done our work on the veldt of Africa.
You have your home in England John, we've ours in Canada!"

FIGHTING AFFRAY.

Theo. Moran Seriously Knifed at the Alberta Hotel.

The Would-be Assassin after being Arrested Makes his Escape from the Lock-Up.

Saturday afternoon, about 5 o'clock the town of Greenwood was thrown into great excitement over a stabbing affray which took place at the Alberta hotel, Silver street. It appears that a Frenchman named Roe, who was slightly under the influence of liquor, made improper proposals to the wife of Theo. Moran. As soon as Moran was informed of the insult to his wife he immediately struck Roe several times with his fists, whereupon Roe took his knife and rushing at Moran stabbed him in three places, once near the heart and twice in the abdomen. He then attempted to escape, but like a hunted animal paid no attention to where he was going. He ran up to Government street then down in the valley opposite the Miner's hotel, where he dropped down in a clump of bushes hoping that he would be passed by undetected by the excited crowd who were in pursuit, but he was surrounded and kept guarded until the chief arrived and arrested him. Medical attendance was secured for Moran. The wounds are serious but the doctors in attendance are hopeful that they may not prove fatal.

Roe was taken to the city lock-up, where he was heavily shackled, but Sunday morning when they visited the cell Roe was not there. He had made his escape through the ceiling by lifting a plank which had never been nailed. A reward of $25 was offered for his capture, but up to this evening nothing has been heard of him.

GREENWOOD CELEBRATION.

Beautiful Decorations—A Successful Trades Procession—A Large Number of Visitors.

Even Solomon in all his glory was not arrayed like Greenwood on June 29th and 30th. Early on Thursday the city began to don its holiday attire and ere the approach of evening the little town looked superbly grand with its decorated windows, flags, Chinese lanterns, etc.

The sports opened Friday morning with a trades procession, which was a credit to so young a place. Among the business houses represented were Winnett's carriage shop, the Elkhorn brewery (which received the prize for the best float), the Yale Lumber Co., Butler's saddlery, the Russell Hardware Co., Rendell & Co., Smith & McRae, Frazee's bakery, the Vienna bakery, White's second hand store and several other firms, many of which showed considerable originality in their get up.

Although Greenwood had no suitable place set apart for the holding of sports, yet everything went off very successfully, and the large crowd—many of whom were from other towns—went away feeling satisfied with the pleasure afforded them by the celebration at Greenwood.

HYMENEAL.

One of Midway's Most Prominent Citizens Weds.

On Wednesday, June 7, at the Masonic Hall, Greenwood, Rev. W. A. Robins, M. A., united in marriage Mr. K. A. Matthes and Mrs. Eva Hillman. Mrs. J. Madden of Greenwood acted as bridesmaid. The bride, who is one of St. Louis' most popular ladies, was handsomely attired in a costume of white organdie trimmed with Valenciennes lace and insertion, over white satin trimmed with white silk lace. Mr. Julius Ehrlich assisted the groom. After the marriage the bridal party sat down to a sumptuous dinner at the Pacific hotel. The bride and groom left the same evening for Midway to take up their residence in the beautiful cottage at the corner of 4th and Haynes streets, recently built by Mr. Matthes. Upon the arrival of the happy couple the Midway Orchestra turned out en masse and in its sweetest strains welcomed Mr. and Mrs. Matthes to the coming metropolis of the Boundary country, to which Mr. Matthes in a few words and many dollars very fittingly and generously responded.

Mr. Matthes is one of Midway's most prosperous business men, having for a number of years conducted the Midway Meat Market. Mrs. Matthes comes from St. Louis, and it was while on a trip there that the bride and groom first met.

Postal Improvements Needed.

A communication received recently by the Rossland Board of Trade directed attention to the length of time that it takes, under present inconvenient arrangements for letters sent by mail from Rock Creek to Chesaw and other near by towns across the International Boundary line, or vice versa, to reach their respective destinations. It was stated that notwithstanding that the towns named are only six or eight miles apart, the mail route is such a round about one that about a week passes ere letters reach the post office to which they are addressed. The board decided to make representations in the proper quarters with a view to securing more expeditious delivery of the mail.

Canadian Military Gazette Points out Necessity for Improvement.

If there is one subject which more than another should receive attention at this time, it is rifle shooting. It is no disparagement to the past achievements of our Canadian marksmen to say that the system under which they now work is not wholly up to the mark, that there is too strong a tendency to cling to the elementary instead of reaching out to the more advanced and more practical. The D. R. A. has done a great deal to foster and develop shooting in Canada, and to the efforts which it has exerted must be attributed a large measure of the success and distinction which our riflemen have attained. There is, however, room for improvement. Carrying out from year to year the time-worn programme governed by unchanged conditions becomes somewhat monotonous for the crack shots who journey to the Rockliffe range at each successive meeting. Some more practical change might be inaugurated. To do such, as extra expenditure by the government would in all probability be involved, but we do not conceive any strenuous opposition to such steps should they be taken, considering that political differences are, or ought to be, lost sight of when any measure is introduced which is calculated to promote the interests of this most important branch of military work.

We see representatives of both parties in parliament in attendance at the annual meetings of the D. R. A., and, from the departmental heads down to those of lesser standing, the utmost good will is expressed towards the association coupled with an evident willingness to promote the interests of the association and the hundreds of riflemen connected with it. Some of these professions might be implemented by the granting of an allowance sufficiently augmented to enable the D. R. A. to introduce some more advanced system of marksmanship in its matches, especially for old competitors whose experience from year to year leaves little for them to learn. To line a sight or hold a rifle properly, to attain correct elevation, and the like, should not be the work of years. Firing constantly at fixed targets is inconsistent with practical requirements.

What should be encouraged by the rifle associations is firing at objects moving and appearing at unexpected places and unknown distances, advancing and retiring, collective shooting, and in practical formation for attack. This would much more conform to practical requirements, and enable those who do not look on rifle shooting as a mere pastime to perform much more effective work if ever called upon to participate in modern warfare. Preparation for national defence is the cardinal principle upon which all rifle competitions should be conducted. Those who regard the subject in no light other than a pastime or pleasure cannot be said to have its best interests at heart.

Midway Public School.

The mid-summer examinations at the Midway Public School were completed Friday afternoon in the presence of a number of parents and friends of the scholars, who were much pleased with the progress made, as evinced in the course of the examinations conducted by the teacher Mr. A. A. McPhail. The highest average monthly attendance for the half year just closed was 40.

Some very creditable specimens of mapping and penmanship were shown, these being examples of the pupils' ordinary work.

Before the scholars were dismissed for the summer holidays a few remarks were addressed to all present by Mr. E. A. Hain, Mr. J. R. Ferguson and Mr. J. Sutherland, all speaking in the highest terms of the excellent teaching work done by Mr. McPhail and congratulating the school upon the general good results attained and impressing upon the scholars the importance of taking full advantage of the educational opportunities now open to them.

Good Management.

In a certain church in Ireland a young priest was detailed to preach. The occasion was his first appearance, and he took for his text, "The feeding of the multitude." He said:

"And they fed ten people with 10,000 loaves of bread and 10,000 fishes."

An old Irishman said:

"Begorra, I could do that myself!" which the priest overheard.

The next Sunday the priest announced the same text, but he had it right this time. He said:

"And they fed 10,000 people on ten loaves of bread and ten fishes."

He waited a second, and then leaned over the pulpit and said:

"And could you do that, Mr. Murphy?"

Murphy replied:

"And sure, your reverence, I could."

"And how could you do it?" said the priest.

"And sure, your reverence, I could do it with what was left over from last Sunday."
