Foreword

During the closing months of 1959 a co-operative arrangement was completed between the British Columbia Department of Labour, the Dominion Bureau of Statistics, and the Provincial Bureau of Economics and Statistics in the matter of the collection of labour statistics within this Province. Prior to the date of this new agreement the collection of labour statistics for the Department of Labour Annual Report was maintained on the basis of annual industrial and business surveys covering employment, payrolls, and wage information conducted by the British Columbia Bureau of Economics and Statistics. While these annual surveys provided continuity with previous years, as far as the British Columbia picture was concerned, comparability of the data with that of other Provinces or Canada was not possible. Some duplication of inquiry also resulted from Federal and Provincial surveys being conducted within the Province at the same time. Under the agreement now in effect the local collection of this material has been discontinued, and is replaced by the joint collection of Provincial data through the Federal agency, and the sharing of the information by both authorities. Under the new arrangement more timely statistics on a monthly as well as on an annual basis can now be provided. The 1958 statistical section which was submitted in a previous Annual Report therefore constitutes the last in an annual series which commenced with the first statistical tables shown in the Annual Report of the British Columbia Department of Labour for the year 1918. The statistical section which follows, covering the year 1959 and the first eight months of 1960, including historical trends, is based on data similar to that in use by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics, Ottawa.

Highlights of the 1959/60 Statistical Report on Trades and Industries

This statistical review of the year 1959 and the first eight months of 1960 represents the forty-second in the annual series of reports issued by the Department.

From the general recession in some areas in the economy during 1958, the year 1959 marked a period of considerable recovery, and satisfactory progress in most instances. Recovery continued during the early months of 1960, but showed diminishing strength as the year progressed.

A growing labour force employed at higher wages proved a strong factor in the rise in the level of personal income, and with prices generally stable during the greater part of 1959, consumer spending was relatively increased. Personal income continued to rise in 1960, although consumer spending, particularly in durables and semi-durables, was somewhat less than during the previous year.

Competitive market conditions abroad, and the difficulties of containing production costs in the face of rising wages, and labour-management problems continued to have their combined impact on the over-all economy.

Construction levels continued to decline from the high mark established in 1957, and although considerable manufacturing expansion and industrial development was evident during most of 1959, the decrease in housing construction during the latter months of that year and in 1960 generally offset any over-all gains in employment. Continuation of the Municipal Winter Works Incentive Programme during the 1959–60 period, with the sharing of labour costs on approved projects by municipal, Provincial, and Federal authorities, assisted in the over-all employment picture.

In spite of labour difficulties which hampered production during a portion of 1959, the forest industries showed increasing activity, with primary production ahead, and considerable development noted in secondary industries, with further plant expansion, new mills, and facilities taking shape in the programme for 1960.

The pulp and paper industry continued to expand, with further modernization and improvement of existing plants and construction of new units. The growing demand for pulp in world markets points the way to full utilization of all facilities within the near future.

The production of natural gas and crude oil in Northern British Columbia continued to grow in importance, in comparison with some sections of the mining industry. Continued fluctuation of base-metal prices and difficulties relating to import quotas in some instances created further set-backs in production schedules, although the over-all value of mineral production at the year-end showed an increase from 1958 totals. The 1960 production total has shown a further gain in base-metal and oil and gas values.

Developments in hydro power continued apace, with construction of additional units of generating capacity and transmission facilities under way by major utility companies.

Average weekly hours of work showed little fluctuation from the 1958 figures, with increases in some industries offset by decreases in other classifications. Longer hours were apparent in the forest industries, highways, and bridge construction, and some manufacturing industries, but were balanced by shorter working-time reported in housing and general construction, service trades, mining, and transportation.

Earnings for industrial workers were higher in 1959, and continued to advance in 1960. Representing the industrial composite figure for all industrial workers, the average weekly figure of wages and salaries rose to $80.09 in 1959, as compared with $75.88 in 1958, and reached a high point of $83.82 in June of 1960. The index of aggregate payrolls, based on the year 1949 as 100, rose to 202.1 from the previous high point of 200.6 established in 1957, and was considerably above the figure of 190.7 recorded in the recession of 1958. The index continued to climb in 1960, to show a high of 218.6 for the month of June. Detailed statistics on employment, hours, and earnings in major industries follow in separate tables.

Employment by Industrial Classifications

In spite of adverse factors which developed during the year, considerable improvement was noted generally in the over-all employment picture during 1959. Recovery from the lower totals of 1958 was particularly apparent in forestry, with activity in logging increased due to improved conditions, a moist summer with increased production during the usual period of forest closure, and a somewhat brighter outlook in the construction field during the first half of the year. The strike affecting the lumber industry during the third quarter constituted a major set-back in production schedules for Coastal operators, but resulted in increased activity for firms in the Interior. The employment index for logging rose 7 points from the low of 67.8 recorded in 1958 to 74.8 in 1959. Construction totals were higher than during the previous year, although the increase was confined to a 2.7-point rise in the index, from 110.2 in 1958 to 112.9 for the twelve months of 1959. Employment in trade and finance increased, the index rising from 116.2 to 118.4 and from 159.8 to 165.0 respectively in these two sections. The industrial composite index for British Columbia, based on 1949 employment figures, rose from 114.7 in 1958 to 115.1 for the year under review.

In comparison with 1958 levels, employment totals in manufacturing, transportation, and service were slightly lower in 1959, the index for manufacturing declined fractionally from 117.4 to 116.9, while the transportation index dropped from 125.4 to 123.2 and the service group from 124.0 to 121.8.

The industrial composite index and the index figures for the major divisions are shown in Table 1, based on 1949 totals, for the years 1950 to 1959. Also shown are the monthly trends in the above indicators for the twelve months of 1959 and the first eight months of 1960. The impact of the lumber strike during July and August of 1959 may be noted in the index figures for these months in certain of the industrial divisions mostly affected.

The industrial composite index of employment in British Columbia was higher for the first three months of 1960 than during the first quarter of 1959, but failed to maintain strength in the usual period of increased labour activity in April, May, and June, due largely to the drop in domestic construction and lower employment in some manufacturing industries. The index for June of 1960 was noted at 119.2, a little below the figure of 121.8 recorded for the industrial composite index in June of 1959.

The Labour Force

Monthly totals showing the trends in employment and unemployment covering a six-year period are shown in Table 2, the figures indicating the variation in the total labour force, employment and unemployment, from 1954 to 1959 and during the first ten months of 1960.

The table also shows the twelve months' average for each year, and the winter and summer averages, based on a six months' coverage of the seasonal totals in each case.

During the six-year period shown the total labour force increased from an average figure of 461,000 in 1954 to 562,000 in 1959, while employment averages rose from 437,000 to 526,000 during the same period. Relative totals of unemployed varied considerably during the six-year span, the monthly figures showing a high employment ratio during the summer of 1956, when only some 5,000 persons were reported as unemployed, in comparison with a lower ratio of employment during the early months of 1958, when the total in this group rose to a high of 66,000. Latest monthly totals shown in the table for October, 1960, showed the total labour force at 584,000, an increase over the previous month, but a little below the high of 593,000 reached during the summer peak in July. In October, 1960, total employed stood at 539,000, while those unemployed numbered 45,000 for the same month.

Monthly trends in terms of total labour force, employment and unemployment, for the period 1954 to 1959 and the first ten months of 1960, are shown in Fig. 3. The shaded section between the trend lines on the chart represents that portion of the total labour force unemployed. A graph showing the varying percentages of the labour force included in this latter group follows, under heading of Fig. 4.

Hours

The survey of weekly hours worked by British Columbia firms showed a slight upward movement during 1959, with an approximate 75 per cent of the major classifications covered reporting working-hours increased from the lower levels of the previous year. Greatest increases in average working-time were noted in the logging industry, where the weekly average climbed to 35.8 hours from 32.5 previously recorded, and pulp and paper mills, with average working-time increased from 35.8 to 39.6 hours in 1959. Sawmills and other wood-manufacturing plants showed somewhat longer hours in 1959, while smaller increases were also apparent in highways, bridges, and street construction, ship-building, and most manufacturing establishments. Average weekly hours for all manufacturing in British Columbia increased to 37.9 from 37.3 during the previous year. With a few exceptions, most increases were sustained during the first eight months of 1960, although shorter hours were noted in some industries during the second quarter.

Shorter working-time was evident in some sections of the construction industry, and noticeably in the service trades. Comparative average working-hours for selected industries covered in the survey may be noted in the tables which follow, together with similar figures for previous years.

Labour Income

The total of wages, salaries, and supplementary income received by paid workers in British Columbia during 1959 was estimated at $1,881,000,000, an approximate 8-per-cent increase over the figure of $1,742,000,000 for 1958.

The British Columbia figure represented some 10.6 per cent of the $17,717,000,000 national total for Canada in 1959.

On a monthly basis British Columbia labour payroll during 1959 rose from a total of $143,000,000 for the month of January to a high of $169,100,000 for the month of October. Beginning in July the monthly totals of labour income dropped sharply during the third quarter, as a result of the loss of working-time caused by the strike of some 27,000 forestry workers during that period. The monthly trend of estimated labour income in British Columbia during 1959 is illustrated in Fig. 5, together with a comparable picture of the first eight months of 1960.

High point during the first half of 1960 was reached in June, the total labour income for that month being estimated at $172,200,000, compared with $167,600,000 in June of 1959. Labour income for the first eight months of 1960 was some 6.7 per cent higher than during the corresponding period of the previous year.

Earnings

Average weekly wages and salaries in British Columbia advanced by some 5.5 per cent in 1959, and continued to show higher figures during the first eight months of 1960. Representing the major group of non-agricultural industries, the industrial composite figure for average weekly earnings rose to $80.09 in 1959, from $75.88 in 1958, and continued to increase in 1960, showing an average of $82.83 for the first eight months of that year.

Almost without exception, increased earnings were shared by workers in all classifications mentioned in the tables for 1959. Percentage increase in weekly salaries and wages was greatest in the logging industry, with average weekly earnings noted at $95.95, up 10.2 per cent from the previous year. An 8.2-per-cent rise in average earnings was apparent for workers in public utilities, followed by the transportation industry, with an advance of 7.4 per cent. Service trades reported earnings increased by 6.9 per cent, while in the manufacturing group average weekly salaries and wages for food and beverage workers increased by 6.3 per cent.

Average weekly earnings for workers in all British Columbia manufacturing establishments climbed to $83.49 in 1959, an increase of 4.7 per cent from the figure of $79.72 for the previous year. Comparative average earnings for major classifications and individual industries are listed in tables which follow, for the years 1950 to 1959 and the first eight months of 1960.

Changes in the Consumer Price Index are reflected in the annual and monthly averages of real earnings based on 1949 dollars, as shown in Table 4 and Fig. 7. While for wage-earners in manufacturing the 1959 average weekly earnings increased to $79.39 from $75.95, up 4.5 per cent, when expressed in terms of 1949 dollars, real earnings advanced only 3.4 per cent during that period. Relative figures representing real earnings were $60.72 in 1958, increasing to $62.77 in 1959. Also listed in the table are similar comparative figures showing the trend of monthly averages and real earnings during the first eight months of 1960.

Summary Statistics of Employment, Payrolls, and Average Weekly Wages and Salaries, by Industries, 1950 to 1960 (First Eight Months).

The following tables summarize the historical trends established in various industries and major groups covering the period 1950 to 1959 and including the first eight months of 1960. Representative figures shown indicate the annual fluctuation in employment, payrolls, average weekly earnings, and hours of work.

Summary of New Laws Affecting Labour

(Passed by the Legislature of British Columbia, Session 1960)

Metalliferous Mines Regulation Act

Several amendments were made to this Statute to further protect employees by augmenting certain safe working practices. Among other revisions, a new section provides for daily supervision of employees employed underground by a shiftboss who is the holder of a shiftboss certificate issued under the Act.

Workmen's Compensation Act

An amendment to this Act revised the investment practices to be followed by the Board in connection with the Accident Fund.

The Honourable the Minister of Labour,
Parliament Buildings, Victoria, B.C.

SIR,—We have the honour to present the twenty-seventh annual report of the Board of Industrial Relations for the year ended December 31st, 1960.

Meetings and Delegations

The Board held fifty-two meetings during the year, forty-nine of which were held in the City of Vancouver and three in the City of Victoria.

Hearings attended by representatives of employers and employees concerned were held in connection with the revision of the Minimum Wage Orders concerning public places of amusement, the construction industry, the occupation of patrolman, and the pipe-line construction, oil-well drilling and service industries. Representations were also made in connection with the application of Order No. 12 to employees of certain irrigation districts.

Orders and Regulations Made during 1960

Minimum Wage Orders

1. Male and Female Minimum Wage Order No. 31 (1960).—This Order, which previously applied to employees employed in what may be referred to in general terms as public places of amusement, was broadened in its application to include driving-school instructors, and employees of physical culture or health clinics and studios, charm and modelling schools, zoos, and driving-schools. It establishes a minimum wage of 75 cents per hour for all employees covered by the Order, except pin-setters, who are required to be paid not less than 55 cents per hour.

2. Construction Industry—Male Minimum Wage Order No. 12 (1960).—This Order establishes a minimum wage of $2 per hour for " tradesmen " and $1.30 per hour for " other employees." The previous rates had been $1.50 and $1 per hour respectively. Overtime requirements are revised to provide that employees shall be paid a multiple rate for hours worked in excess of eight in the day and forty in the week.

3. Pipe-line Construction Oil-well Drilling and Service Industries—Male and Female Minimum Wage Order No. 28 (1960).—The Minimum Wage Order, which had previous application only to employers and employees in the pipe-line construction industry, has been broadened to include in its application employers and employees in the oil-well drilling and service industries, as defined therein. The Order establishes a minimum wage of $1.30 per hour for employees in those industries, with the requirement that a multiple rate be paid for all hours worked in excess of eight in the day and forty in the week.

4. The Occupation of Patrolman—Male and Female Minimum Wage Order No. 32 (1960).—This Order rescinds the previous Order, which had been in effect for many years, and establishes a minimum wage of $1 per hour for patrolmen employed by a private patrol agency, as defined. Whereas the rescinded Order did not limit the working-hours of patrolmen, this Order requires the payment of a multiple rate for hours worked in excess of eight in the day or in excess of eight in any one shift, and also for hours worked in excess of forty-four in any one week.

Regulations Made Pursuant to the Hours of Work Act

Regulation No. 21 (1960).—By this regulation the fresh fruit and vegetable industry was exempt from the operation of the Hours of Work Act from June 1st to November 30th, 1960.

Regulation No. 42 (1960).—By this regulation, employees in the pipe-line construction, oil-well drilling and service industries, as defined, are exempt from the operation of the Hours of Work Act.

Christmas Regulation.—This annual regulation of the Board permits employees in retail establishments to work up to ten hours a day on any two days during the two-week period ending December 24th, 1960.

Investigations and Wage Adjustments

During the year 1960 the Industrial Relations Officers of the Department made 29,958 investigations, and through the efforts of the Department and the co-operation of the employers, adjustments made during 1960 amounted to $162,663.14. Department cars travelled 183,806 miles in connection with the administration of the legislation.

As certain employees exercised their civil rights under the Male and Female Minimum Wage Acts through the Courts without coming to the Department, it may be presumed that the amount of money paid to employees as a result of legislation administered by this Department is considerably in excess of that recorded in the following table:—

Comparison of Investigations and Wage Adjustments, 1959 and 1960

	1959	1960
Number of investigations	28,296	29,958
Number of Industrial Relations Officers[1]	25	26
Male Minimum Wage Act—
Firms involved	67	128
Employees affected	379	491
Arrears paid	$10,719.14	$16,940.86
Female Minimum Wage Act—
Firms involved	36	46
Employees affected	77	84
Arrears paid	$1,624.85	$2,068.81
Annual Holidays Act—
Firms involved	749	980
Employees affected	1,225	1,552
Arrears paid	$33,096.65	$45,392.62
Total adjustments	$45,440.64[2]	$64,402.29[2]

[1] Average.

[2] In addition to the adjustments made under the Minimum Wage and Holidays Acts, 821 firms paid 1,234 employees $98,260.85 under the provisions of the Semi-monthly Payment of Wages Act. Total adjustments for 1960 were therefore $162,663.14. Total adjustments for 1959 were $107,990.25.

Court Cases

When employers fail to co-operate with the Department in the matter of compliance with the provisions of the orders and regulations of the Board, it is necessary to resort to the Courts in order that the necessary compliance with the legislation will be obtained. A summary of Court cases during the year 1960 follows:—

Court Cases for the Year 1960

Name of Act	Number of Employers	Charges	Convictions	Charges Dismissed or Withdrawn
Annual Holidays Act	23	42	30	11 dismissals 1 withdrawn
Female Minimum Wage Act	2	3	1	2 dismissals
Hours of Work Act	7	8	8
Male Minimum Wage Act	3	5	5
Semi-monthly Payment of Wages Act	63	116	103	11 dismissals 2 withdrawn
Totals	98	174	147	24 dismissals 3 withdrawn

Special Licences, 1960

Provision is made in a few of the Orders of the Board for a graduated scale of wages to inexperienced employees for whose employment permits in writing have been obtained from the Board. The following table shows the number of licences issued in the various lines of work in 1960:—

	Male	Female	Total
Hospitals (practical-nurse students)	----	92	92
Laundry	----	1	1
Manufacturing	3	24	27
Mercantile	----	6	6
Office	1	35	36
Woodworking	----	1	1
Totals	4	159	163

No part-time permits issued in 1960.

Change in Board Membership

During the year Mr. D. McAlister and Mr. E. Campbell resigned for personal reasons. One of the vacancies was filled on May 3rd, 1960, when Mr. R. B. Carpenter, James Island, was appointed a member of the Board.

Conclusion

At this time the Board would like to thank employers, trade-unions, other organizations, and employees for the co-operation extended to its officials during the year 1960 in the administration of the various labour laws.

Control of Employment of Children Act

Unless a permit has been granted to the employer by the Minister of Labour or a person duly authorized by him to issue such permits, the employment of children under 15 years of age in certain designated occupations or industries is prohibited by the Control of Employment of Children Act.

In order that the health and scholastic standing of the children will not be adversely affected by their work in industry or business, the Department works in close co-operation with the school authorities and the parents or guardians of the children. Permits are issued only when it has been established that the child's health will not suffer, and that the work will not expose the boy or girl to unsafe conditions or interfere with their standing at school.

The Schedule to the Act specifies and defines the occupations or industries for which permits are required; these include:—

(1) Manufacturing industry.
(2) Ship-building industry.
(3) Generation of electricity or motor power of any kind.
(4) Logging industry.
(5) Construction industry.
(6) Catering industry.
(7) Public places of amusement.
(8) Merchantile industry.
(9) Shoe-shine stands.
(10) Automobile service-stations.
(11) Transportation industry.
(12) Laundry, cleaning and dyeing industry.

Equal Pay Act

No complaints were received under this Act during 1960.

Complaints received	36[1]	10
Complaints referred to Industrial Relations Officers	33	7
Complaints settled by Industrial Relations Officers	16	5
Complaints referred to the Board	17	2
Complaints withdrawn	1	1

[1] In the case of one complaint the Act did not apply. In another the wage differential was based on a factor other than sex and was therefore not a violation of the Act.

Fair Employment Practices Act

During the year two complaints under section 3 of the Act were referred to Industrial Relations Officers, who advised that the complaints had been resolved to the satisfaction of the complainants.

Four complaints under section 5 of the Act in connection with discriminatory questions asked in advertisements of application for employment forms were received. All matters with respect to these four complaints were satisfactorily concluded. Where necessary, revisions were made to application for employment forms to meet the requirements of the Act.

A complaint made to the Department in 1959 was referred to the Board of Industrial Relations under section 7 of the Act. An employer, after voluntarily changing the application for employment form to settle all matters involved in the complaint except one, maintained that it was not contrary to the Statute to retain a question regarding an applicant's place of birth. The Board, after hearing representations, made its recommendation to the Director. The Director recommended to the Minister that no form of application for employment, used or circulated by the employer, shall contain any reference whatsoever to the place of birth of the applicant for employment. The Minister, on this recommendation, accordingly issued an Order under section 7(6) of the Statute.

The above-noted reference to the Board and Order issued by the Minister were the first made under the Act.

The Department at this time would like to acknowledge with thanks the co-operation of employers who have revised their application for employment forms to meet the requirements of the Statute. The co-operation of the Vancouver Labour Committee for Human Rights, and its executive secretary, Mr. W. Giesbrecht, for bringing violations of that Statute to the Department's attention is also acknowledged with thanks.

The Honourable the Minister of Labour,
Parliament Buildings, Victoria, B.C.

SIR,—I have the honour to present the annual report of the Labour Relations Branch for the year ended December 31st, 1960.

It is with sincere regret that the death of William Fraser, Chief Conciliation Officer, must be recorded. Mr. Fraser died suddenly, September 27th, while in attendance at the annual meeting of the Canadian Association of Administrators of Labour Legislation in the Empress Hotel, Victoria.

Mr. Fraser had been with the Department as Conciliation Officer since July 17th, 1944, and was made Chief Conciliation Officer January 1st, 1953. Though past retirement age, his services had been continued because of his value to the Department.

Mr. R. G. Clements, Senior Conciliation Officer, a member of the Department since 1936, has since been appointed Chief Conciliation Officer.

During the year, Mr. D. McAlister and Mr. E. Campbell, members of the Labour Relations Board, resigned from the Board for personal reasons. Their resignations were accepted with regret, and the vacancies thus created were filled by the appointments of Mr. R. B. Carpenter, Works Manager, Canadian Industries Ltd., James Island, and Mr. J. R. Edgett, of North Vancouver.

The past year has been noteworthy in that there have been fewer man-days lost through industrial disputes than in any other year since 1955. The time-loss as a percentage of the estimated total working time of wage and salary earners is but .035, which is comparable to 1950 and 1955 in which minimal losses were recorded. The time-loss involving disputes within the jurisdiction of the Province, compared with 1959, is approximately one-fortieth of the total for that year.

During 1960, one dispute, involving three employers in the retail-trade classification, and 605 workers, was responsible for the loss of 30,352 man-days out of a total loss during the year of 35,848 man-days.

Of the fourteen industrial disputes within the jurisdiction of the Province, causing time-loss in 1960, two were carried over from 1959. Of the remaining twelve, seven occurred without prior reference to conciliation procedure.

In addition, there has been a decrease in the number of strike votes supervised by Departmental Officers, the number of appointments of Conciliation Officers, and the number of appointments of Conciliation Boards. Fewer applications for certification were received than in 1959. However, the number of applications made to the Labour Relations Board, pursuant to section 7 of the Labour Relations Act, has shown an increase.

Section 7 of the Act provides that if upon inquiry it is shown to the satisfaction of the Board that an employer, trade-union, or person is doing any of the acts prohibited by sections 4, 5, and 6 of the Act (which include engaging in unfair labour practices, attempting to persuade employees to join or not to join a union during working hours, and using coercion or intimidation to compel or induce a person to become or refrain from becoming a member of a trade-union), the Board may order the employer, trade-union, or person to cease from doing the prohibited act, and to rectify the act so done.

The Labour Relations Board met during the year on sixty-nine occasions, authorized the issuance of 458 certificates, and rejected 109 applications for certification. Eighty-two applications were withdrawn.

The Board entertained ninety applications for decertification; thirty-eight were rejected and fifty-two authorized.

Administrative personnel conducted forty-two representation votes.

The Board considered applications for permission to prosecute upon sixty-six occasions: Fifty were granted, seven rejected, and nine withdrawn.

Forty-five orders were made by the Board pursuant to section 7 of the Labour Relations Act.

There were 313 disputes referred to Conciliation Officers during the year. Twenty-seven cases, unterminated at December 31st, 1959, were carried over from the preceding year.

Settlements by Conciliation Officers

Of these, Conciliation Officers settled 127, and ninety were referred to Conciliation Boards. In thirteen cases the application for the appointment of a Conciliation Officer was withdrawn, or the appointment cancelled, and in sixty-three cases Conciliation Officers did not recommend Boards. There were forty-seven cases unterminated at the year's end.

Of the 340 disputes dealt with by Conciliation Officers, sixty-three were referrals by them in conformity with the provisions of section 29 of the Labour Relations Act; that is, the Officer reported that it was not advisable to appoint a Conciliation Board, and therefore made recommendations concerning the matters in dispute. Seven similar cases, unterminated at December 31st, 1959, were carried forward. These recommendations were sent to the parties, and in each instance took the place of a report of the Conciliation Board.

Of these seventy disputes, in seventeen instances the Officers' reports resulted in immediate settlement; there was eventual settlement, without time-loss, in eighteen instances, and in thirty-five cases the decisions of the parties, upon the acceptance or rejection of the Officers' reports, had not been received at December 31st, 1960.

In accordance with the provisions of the Labour Relations Act, chairmen were named by the Minister for fifty-three Conciliation Boards. The nominees of the disputant parties selected chairmen on thirty-four occasions.

Ninety disputes were referred to Conciliation Boards by Conciliation Officers, and one case was referred to a Board without prior reference to a Conciliation Officer. In addition, four cases in which a Board had not been appointed at December 31st, 1959, were carried forward to 1960. Of these ninety-five referrals, two were settled before Boards were appointed, one was withdrawn, ninety others were covered by the eighty-seven Boards appointed, and in the remaining two cases Boards had not been appointed at December 31st, 1960.

Administrative personnel conducted sixty-four strike votes.

Arbitration Boards

On the requisite application, in cases where grievance procedure under collective agreements had been invoked, chairmen were named to thirty-five Arbitration Boards.

Strikes and Lockouts in British Columbia, 1960

In the following tables, strikes and lockouts are recorded together. The term " dispute " refers to either strike or lockout.

Figures shown are inclusive of all industrial disputes involving time-loss which have come to the attention of the Department. Methods taken to obtain this information preclude the possibility of serious omission, but revisions may be made in the light of later information.

Estimates of time-loss are computed by multiplying the number of days a work stoppage lasts by the number of employees directly involved in the dispute which leads to the strike or lockout, and who are on strike or lockout and not replaced. Summaries include only the record of time lost by these workers.

Disputes are listed by industrial classifications, and in order of the date of their commencement.

[4] Industrial Conciliation and Arbitration Act came into force on May 15th, 1947, and replaced the British Columbia Wartime Labour Relations Regulations Act, 1944. During the war years and prior to 1947 the Canadian and Provincial Governments worked jointly in the field of labour relations. Figures for 1946–47 thus show time-loss of all disputes.

Legal Decisions Involving the Labour Relations Board, 1960

Western District Diamond Drillers Union, Local 1005, International Union of Mine, Mill, and Smelter Workers (Canada), Applicant.

and

Minister of Labour for British Columbia,

Respondent.

On or before October 1st, 1958, Local 1005 entered into a collective agreement with Boyles Bros. Drilling Company Limited for a period of two years.

The agreement provided that it might be reopened with respect to wages only, as of October 1st, 1959.

The Union gave notice of its desire to bargain collectively; the bargaining did not result in agreement, and a Conciliation Officer was appointed. The report of the officer was rejected by the Union which asked that a government-supervised strike vote be taken.

The request for the strike vote was refused upon the ground that the opening of the agreement for the purpose of negotiating wages did not terminate it. Section 46 (2) of the Labour Relations Act was also quoted as follows:—

" No employees bound by a collective agreement, whether entered into before or after the commencement of this Act, shall strike during the term of the collective agreement, and no person shall declare or authorize a strike of such employees."

Counsel for the Union submitted that the Minister was without jurisdiction to refuse the vote and asked for an order by way of mandamus requiring the Minister to direct such a vote. It was argued that the agreement had been terminated, or, alternatively, that the parts thereof dealing with wages had been terminated and that the agreement was severable in that respect and that the provisions of the Act relating to collective bargaining, strike votes, and strikes are applicable pro tanto to the parts of the agreement relating to wages.

Counsel for the respondent argued inter alia that the interpretation suggested by the Union would frustrate the two-year provision and suggested that there was an agreement in force, notwithstanding the fact that the wage matter was in suspense (and even if the wage item were out entirely), the agreement is still a collective agreement.

Mr. Justice Norris on February 2nd, 1960, found that section 46 of the Act operates to prevent a strike and it would be meaningless to take a strike vote, mandamus would be an empty gesture, and the Court would not make an order which is not effective.

Elsewhere the Judge found that section 23 (of the Labour Relations Act) endeavours to bring about a measure of stability in the duration of agreements and sets out the conditions under which labour agreements may be terminated. There is nothing in this section or elsewhere in the Act which provides for the termination of agreements in part. It was clear that the proviso in article II of the collective agreement was repugnant to section 23 of the Act, and must give way to the provisions of the section and is therefore without effect.

The application was dismissed.

The Canadian Brotherhood of Railway, Transport, and General Workers, Local 400, and Cock, Respondents, v.

Labour Relations Board.

On November 7th, 1960, Mr. Justice H. W. Davey rendered the judgment of the Court of Appeal, pursuant to section 26, subsection (2) of the Court of Appeal Act, Mr. Justice Sidney Smith having died before the hearing of the appeal and before the judgment of the Court was delivered.

The Canadian Brotherhood of Railway, Transport, and General Workers, Local 400, had applied to the Labour Relations Board to be certified as representatives for a unit of employees of Black Ball Ferries Ltd., then represented by the Seafarers' International Union of North America, Canadian District. The application was based upon the claim of the Local that the majority of the employees in the unit, namely 90 out of 135, belonged to it and were members in good standing.

Regulations passed under the Act provide that for this purpose a member in good standing is a person who has at the date of application for certification signed an application for membership and has himself paid the specified union dues.

At the hearing before the Board the Local led evidence under oath that some eighty-five employees out of the ninety had signed application cards for membership in the Local and had themselves paid the dues required by Regulation 8. Specifically, it was testified that six Chinese, included in the eighty-five members, had themselves paid the necessary dues, and their signed applications and the receipts issued to them for the dues were filed with the Board. The Seafarers' Union, in its turn, called the six Chinese and each swore that he had not paid the dues. The Board also had before it the information elicited by its own investigation of the application.

The Board rejected the application upon the ground that it was " satisfied that membership in good standing has been falsely represented by the applicant . . ."

The Local, and Cock acting on behalf of its officers, then moved for writs of certiorari and mandamus to quash the decision of the Board and require it to certify the Local as the representative of the unit, or alternatively to order a representation vote by the employees in the unit, or to direct the Board to hear and determine the application according to law.

It was argued that even if the six Chinese had not themselves paid the necessary dues and were not members in good standing in the Local it still had as members in good standing a majority of the employees in the unit, which entitled it to certification.

The learned Judge in the Court below had upheld these objections, quashed the decision of the Board, and had directed the Board to hear and determine the application according to law.

The Labour Relations Board appealed.

Mr. Justice Davey in his judgment expressed the opinion that " these writs should not be granted, even upon grounds otherwise legally sufficient, to applicants who in the matters have committed the fraud, trickery, and apparently perjury, found against the respondents here."

He would " allow the appeal and dismiss the motion."

Annual Survey of Organized Labour in British Columbia, 1960

The annual survey of organized labour in British Columbia was again conducted by the Provincial Bureau of Economics and Statistics, working in conjunction with the British Columbia Department of Labour and the Federal Department of Labour at Ottawa. On the basis of information received from trade-unions, organizations and associations of workers reporting in the survey, details of union membership as of January 1st, 1960, are shown in the summary table which follows in this section, with comparative figures for previous years. A chart is also included showing the percentage distribution of trade-union membership by industrial classifications as of the above date.

The inclusion of the name of any organization in the listing Organizations of Employees (Labour Organizations) does not necessarily constitute its recognition as a trade-union within the meaning of the Labour Relations Act.

Labour Membership

Total membership reported in the 1960 survey of organized labour in British Columbia was 215,437 as of January 1st, a decrease of 1.75 per cent from the 1959 total of 219,279. The estimate of paid workers in British Columbia was below the revised figure for 1959 (448,000 as compared with a revised total of 452,000). At the same time the percentage of organized-labour membership represented in relation to the paid workers decreased from 48.5 to 48.1 per cent in 1960. A broad classification of the major industrial groupings is contained in the chart which follows Table VIII, indicating the proportionate distribution of over-all membership.

Major Industrial Groups

Public and personal service groups were again in the lead, accounting for the highest percentage of the total membership figure. Some 30.4 per cent of the total union members were reported in this composite group, the classification consisting mainly of Federal, Provincial, and municipal employees. Manufacturing industries claimed the next largest body of union workers, with 24.9 per cent of the over-all total included in this section. Greatest coverage of union organization in the manufacturing classification was in wood and wood products, this group alone accounting for 13.7 per cent of membership distribution on the chart. Third largest section of union membership was in the construction industry, which accounted for 15.3 per cent of the total, followed by the composite group covering transportation and communications with 13.9 per cent of all union workers. Other group classifications represented on the chart include the logging industry with 4.6 per cent of the total; fishing workers, 3.6 per cent; trade, 2.4 per cent; public utilities, 1.3 per cent; and all others, 0.3 per cent.

Geographical Distribution

The list of British Columbia labour organizations, which follows, is arranged alphabetically according to location. It should be noted that in accordance with changes in the 1960 questionnaire the designated location of the union local signifies " the city or town where most of the members are employed," and therefore may not necessarily agree with the post-office address of the organization or addresses of the union officials.

Report of the Factories Inspection Branch

Administrative Office - - 411 Dunsmuir Street, Vancouver 3, B.C.

Administrative Official of the Branch

ROBERT M. PURDIE - - - - - Chief Inspector of Factories

The Honourable the Minister of Labour,
Parliament Buildings, Victoria, B.C.

SIR,—I have the honour to submit the annual report of the Factories Inspection Branch for the year 1960.

Elevators

A slight decrease in the number of new installations was noted in the elevator field during the year. This, however, did not ease the duties of the Inspectors in any way as the widening of the inspection field is fast becoming a problem. We were fortunate in 1960 to complete all elevator equipment inspections by the end of December.

It is of interest to note that no car switch-operated elevators were installed in the Province in 1960. While this may be bad news for licensed operators, it indicates the trend toward operatorless elevators and is another contribution to the push-button age.

In the early part of November Mr. W. G. Ferrier, Chairman of the Canadian Standards Association B44-1960 Safety Code for Elevators, Dumbwaiters and Escalators, called at the Department office with a view to discussing and explaining interpretations of the Code with the Elevator Inspectors. Meetings over two days proved of great interest and benefit to the Department. The aim of the C.S.A. is to have all Provinces operating under a standard code for elevators. Mr. Ferrier has been an untiring worker to this end and is ever ready to assist the various inspection departments with any Code problems.

The B44-1960 Code was published in June, 1960. Several of the Provinces have already adopted it and all others have adoption under consideration.

We are again proud to state that no fatal or serious accident occurred on any elevating equipment under our jurisdiction during the year 1960.

Elevator Inspections

Passenger-elevators	873
Freight-elevators	888
Dumb-waiters	286
Hand-power elevators	79
Man-lifts	45
Escalators	77
Reinspections	250
Total	2,498

New Installation Plans Received

Passenger	60
Freight	11
Dumb-waiters	18
Man-lifts	1
Escalators	4

Permanent	312
Renewals	1,147

Factories

New factory construction dropped considerably during 1960, although plans examined for such amounted to $22,136,500. The Kootenays saw their first pulp-mill opening before the end of the year and this multi-million dollar project was the largest factory completed in the Province during the year.

There were only seven new multi-million dollar factories constructed during the year, whereas the majority consisted of excellent medium-sized buildings that were below the million-dollar figure.

During the year the Lower Mainland municipalities have rendered close co-operation with us by notifying the Branch when tenant factories occupy new or old premises. This has enabled us to contact hundreds of manufacturers in this category at an early date, to inform them of the factory requirements that may apply to their particular type of industry. The results achieved from this procedure have been gratifying in that an employer can be assured that the premises are adequate for his employees, or that alterations can be completed in the early stages of occupation or before if possible.

The Branch, since the introduction of this reporting system, is in a position to assist employers occupying older industrial buildings in particular. Previously we had experienced great difficulty in determining when new tenancies of such buildings had occurred. While most industrialists now automatically submit architectural plans of new factories to us, we particularly noticed last year the increasing number of firms that have informed us of proposed alterations and additions to old buildings. This would indicate that this service is also becoming better known. We trust that it will become common knowledge because the firms have realized that our services are of great value at this time as well as when a new factory is being built.

A few years ago in the Interior of British Columbia we completed work on the provision of adequate heat in garages, while dealing with factories in general in this area. However, the next step that the garages had to take was the elimination of toxic fumes and more adequate ventilation in these shops. Actually the need was greater than at the Coast on account of the winter weather conditions which necessitate the closing of doors and windows. This year saw the completion of this protection for employees. Exhaust systems have been installed in many garages, large and small, to meet the needs of spray-painting and motor tune-up work.

Factory Inspections

Factory inspections totalled 1,400; child employment investigations, 6; homework investigations, 56; office and field interviews, 525.

Homework

A local firm, as a sales-promotion scheme, started a campaign to sell sewing-machines on the basis of the purchaser doing homework to help meet the payments on the machine. This procedure was reported to the Factories Branch before many people became involved and an immediate investigation by the Department was started.

As a result of this investigation and directives issued, the firm ceased this unauthorized homework practice without delay. Due to the efforts of the Inspectors in this matter we feel that many householders were protected from victimization by these unlawful tactics. This particular investigation revealed clearly to all concerned, and especially the public, that the Factories Branch duties are becoming better known, and when contacted promptly we can quickly arrest unauthorized practices that come within our jurisdiction.

In 1960 three large firms, by providing new factory space, were able to considerably reduce the number of homeworkers operating on permits. This not only provided steady employment for these workers, but was the means of reducing the number of Homework Permits to the lowest number on record.

Conclusion

We take this opportunity to acknowledge the assistance given our Branch by other Governmental departments and the continued co-operation of members of the staff. Also, we wish to thank all officials and employees connected with industry for their co-operation during the past year.

Respectfully submitted.

R. M. PURDIE,
Chief Inspector of Factories.

Apprenticeship Technical Training

Technical and trade training in schools was conducted to supplement the training supplied on the job by employers. Three categories of classes were operated—namely, evening classes in centres where the concentration of apprentices is sufficient to set up a proper programme, daytime classes for apprentices from areas of low industrial concentration, and for trades that do not lend themselves to short evening sessions and pre-apprenticeship training classes.

Evening classes were held in Vancouver, Victoria, Kitimat, and Trail. Special classes were conducted on behalf of the Department of Labour by the Department of Education, the Vancouver School Board, the Victoria School Board, the Trail School Board, and the Kitimat School Board. Training in these evening classes was supplied to 1,236 apprentices.

Daytime classes for apprentices were conducted at Vancouver and Nanaimo. Instruction was given to 528 indentured apprentices in this part of the programme.

Pre-apprenticeship classes were conducted at Nanaimo and Vancouver in the trades of automotive mechanic, benchwork and joinery, boat-building, bricklaying, carpentry, electrical work, electronics, heavy-duty mechanic, lathing, plastering, plumbing, sheet metal, and structural steel. These courses are designed to provide the student with basic skill and knowledge before he enters employment in a trade. He is thus prepared to enter employment as an apprentice with the ability to begin practising the trade at once and so progress to journeyman status much more effectively. There were 411 persons who received training of from six to ten months in this programme.

School Training Facilities

As in the past, the apprenticeship technical training classes were conducted for the Department of Labour by various School Boards and by the Department of Education. This training of apprentices is financed by the Department of Labour.

In June of 1960 the first units of the British Columbia Vocational School, Burnaby, were formally opened, and classes that had previously been accommodated in temporary quarters at Exhibition Park and others that were dispersed in Vancouver schools were moved to the new Burnaby site. It was not possible to accommodate all of the apprenticeship classes from the Vancouver area in the new school, but the announcement that more buildings were to be built during the coming year is promising for the future.

Field Supervision and Promotion

Routine investigation of apprentices was conducted by the Industrial Relations Officers of the Department, and reports of these investigations were submitted to the Branch. In those cases where some problem existed, the matter was referred to Apprenticeship Counsellors for attention.

The counselling staff visited the majority of the secondary schools in the Province to inform the students, counsellors, and principals of the apprenticeship and pre-apprenticeship programme. Visits were also made to employers and organizations to promote participation in apprenticeship and to deal with the problems encountered by employers and apprentices.

Provincial Apprenticeship Committee

The Provincial Apprenticeship Committee met four times during the year to consider and approve new contracts of apprenticeship, transfer of apprentice between employers, cancellation of apprenticeship contracts, and the issuing of certificates to apprentices who completed their training.

The Committee considered representations submitted by industry in respect of the heavy-duty repair trade and recommended that the trade be added to Schedule

A of the Act. As a result of that recommendation, the trade was designated by Order in Council on March 3rd, 1960.

The Committee also heard and considered representation from the trade-union and employer organization in the piping industry relative to expanding the scope of apprenticeship training for that industry and agreed that contracts of apprenticeship would be approved for a five-year period instead of the previous four.

Federal-Interprovincial Co-operation

Under the auspices of the Federal Government, the apprenticeship officials of the eight Provinces which participate in the Federal-Provincial Apprenticeship Training Agreement continued to work toward more uniform training standards. Apprenticeship completion examinations for plumbing, electrical work, sheet metal, and carpentry were drawn up for consideration by the eight Provinces in preparation for use in the coming year. Analyses of various trades that had been prepared in the past were reviewed with the object of keeping them up to date.

Tradesmen's Qualification Examinations

The Examining Board for the radio-television servicing trade convened on three occasions to examine candidates. Seventy-one persons were examined, of whom forty-eight were successful in obtaining certificates of qualification.

In the refrigeration trade there were nine persons examined, of whom four obtained certificates.

The trade advisory committee for the automotive trade made considerable progress in the preparation of an examination for automotive mechanics. An examination was drawn up and tested on a group of senior apprentices and a group of active mechanics. Amendments were made to the examination in light of these trials. A group of mechanics was given an additional practical examination in the automotive shop of the British Columbia Vocational School, Burnaby. The committee is now analysing the results of the written and practical trial examinations, and it is expected that the examination will be completed in final form for use in the very near future.

Respectfully submitted.

Director of Apprenticeship.

Report of the Trade-schools Regulation Administrative Office
