STANLEY'S MISSION.

Stanley Will Devote the Remainder of His Life to Civilizing Africa.

Count Deu Gives Logical Reasons for the Late Revolution in Brazil.

The Dread Influenza has Spread from Russia to Berlin and Vienna.

STANLEY'S MISSION.

ZANZIBAR, Dec. 9.—Telegraphic congratulations have been received by Stanley from Queen Victoria, and the khedive. At divine service to-day, on board the man-of-war Turquoise, Stanley briefly addressed the crew. He declared his belief that the mantle of Livingstone had fallen upon his shoulders. His mission had only now commenced. To it he would devote the remainder of his life.

AFRICAN SLAVERY.

LONDON, Dec. 7.—Cardinal Lavigerrie in speaking of the return of Emin Pasha and Henry M. Stanley to civilization said: "The darkest page on the story of slavery is that which tells of its present revival in the interior of Africa, with the horrors of the scourge. The recent conference of representatives of the powers held at Brussels was powerless to deal, for the conference could only define the obligations of the civilized powers, and those extended only so far as the authority and control of such powers prevailed. Civilization controls the coast of Africa. It has planked its feet on the southern and northern regions of the continent and on the mouths of the Niger. It has a possible channel into the interior along the waterway of the Congo, but the interior of Africa from Sahara and the desert of Korosko to Zambesi is outside the pale of civilization and is given up to plagues such as have no parallel in recorded history. A dark, brutal fanaticism, taking upon itself the once proud title of Islam has spread over this vast region, destroying with unspeakable horrors millions of human beings in order to make captives of the thousands of wrecthed survivors. This strange revival seems to have originated in the populous regions between the middle Niger and Lake Chad. Perhaps it began in a peculiar sect, first made known to Europe through the movement of Senoussi in the bank lands of Algeria."

INFLUENZA SPREADING.

LONDON, Dec. 9.—Many cases of influenza have appeared in Berlin and Vienna, and it is feared the St. Petersburgh epidemic has spread to those cities.

CHIEF WILLIAMSON DEAD.

LONDON, Dec. 9.—Chief Williamson, of the English detective force, is dead.

INFLUENZA IN LONDON.

LONDON, Dec. 9.—An eminent physician reports he knows of only two cases of influenza in London.

MORE CONGRATULATIONS.

BRUSSELS, Dec. 9.—The anti-slavery conference has resolved to forward a congratulatory address to Emin and Stanley.

STILL DOUBTFUL.

ZANZIBAR, Dec. 9.—Emin Bey is still in a dangerous condition. Symptoms of lung troubles have developed.

WELL RECEIVED.

BERLIN, Dec. 9.—The Emperor William and the Grand Duke of Hesse visited Worms to-day to witness the festal drama. The emperor received a most enthusiastic greeting, and was presented by a deputation of workmen with an address and a laurel wreath.

CHAMBERLAIN'S ADVICE.

LONDON, Dec. 9.—Joseph Chamberlain writes from Cairo expressing the opinion that the government ought to show a readiness to the proposed subsidies in the Gladstone bill.

WORK OF AN OPIUM FIEND.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Dec. 7.—Caspar Clispy shot and fatally wounded John Anson and his daughter, Mary, and seriously wounded the latter's younger sister Agnes, then blew his brains out this morning. Anson and Clispy were machinists, and the latter was in love with Mary, but had been forbidden to visit her. He was a confirmed opium fiend.

THE ROMANTIC SOUTH.

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Dec. 7.—Governor Seag sent a telegram to-day to Mrs. Jefferson Davis, saying: "It is the wish of our people that his grave be made beneath the monument to the confederation on the Capitol Hill at Montgomery and hard by the very cradle of the confederacy."

VIRGINIA MOURNS.

RICHMOND, Va., Dec. 7.—Governor Lee sent the following telegram to Mrs. Davis: "The sympathetic cords of the hearts of our people are deeply touched at the loss of one we have ever regarded with the greatest affection, and the memory of whose valor and virtues we will ever hold sacred."

A SMART THIEF.

WILMINGTON, Del., Dec. 7.—While John C. Patterson was standing at the Delaware bank counter this morning clipping coupons from the bonds which he had on deposit there, an unknown man seized Patterson's deposit box, containing $30,000 in securities, and ran away. The police are trying to find the thief.

DECLINES TO INTERFERE.

OTTAWA, Dec. 7.—His excellency the governor-general has had under consideration a petition from Hamilton, praying a mitigation of the sentence passed on the girl, Agnes Day, for concealing the birth of her child, and he declines to interfere in the matter.

ANOTHER RAILWAY.

OTTAWA, Dec. 7.—Application will be made to incorporate a company to build a railway in British Columbia to connect with the American railway at the mouth of the Dorreme river to the Nelson; also a railway in British Columbia to connect with American railways near the head of the Kettle river, to the mouth of the Fraser river or to the coast. Also a branch line in a northerly direction to the south end of Okanagon lake.

TERRIBLE SUFFERING.

MONTREAL, Dec. 7.—The terrible sufferings of two men on the Lake of Two Mountains, were related on Wednesday. Arthur J. Bertrand and Jos. Seguin were taking a barge up the Ottawa river to winter quarters near Como. In the afternoon a terrible snow storm arose, the craft struck a sand bank two miles from shore and partly sunk, leaving the half frozen men clinging to the sails, while every moment the waves dashed over the disabled barge. The men remained in this position until Friday morning, when they were seen from the shore by three farmers who went to their assistance. Bertrand and Seguin are badly frozen, but will recover.

MERCIER WARNED.

MONTREAL, Dec. 7.—Le Sud de Sorel warns Mercier to have a care in his uncalled for interference in religious matters, and intimates that it may bring about political changes which would compel the Jesuits to leave the country. It is looked upon as the most significant article yet published, and is referred to as direct proof that Mercier's tactics are not approved of by a large portion of the French Canadians.

READS WELL.

OTTAWA, Dec. 7.—The Saskatchewan Railway and Mining Company will ask for an extension of their chartered line from the present terminus to Saskatoon, crossing the South Saskatchewan river and running northeasterly to Fort La Corne, thence to the crossing of the Saskatchewan river at Grand Bend, thence northerly by the most favorable route to a junction with the projected Hudson's Bay Railway; also from the terminus in a northerly direction, crossing the North Saskatchewan, thence northerly to Green Lake, crossing Beaver river to Waterhen river northward.

OTTAWA NOTES.

OTTAWA, Dec. 7.—The rumored reorganization of portfolios authorised by parliament two years ago, will take place shortly.

The name of J. J. Curran, Q. C., M. P., Montreal, is connected with the solicitor-generalship.

Dr. Montizambert, the chief Dominion quarantine officer here, is urging the government to adopt precautionary measures with the view to the likelihood of an outbreak of Asiatic cholera here next year. He says that the American government is devoting a large sum in improving the quarantine service.

Mr. Henry F. Bronson, the millionaire lumberman, died here to-day.

Mr. Jefferson Davis, the late confederate ex-President, lived for many years in Canada after the American civil war. The eastern press pay many tributes to his memory.

Tried to Skip.

Friday evening word reached the police from Esquimalt, that ten or twelve sailors from the fleet were missing. The police at once started out on a man hunt, as it was believed the bluejackets were about to desert. Early this morning eight of them were captured just as they were trying to get aboard the Sound steamer. Some of the men fought like cats, but the police were too many for them, and the would-be deserters were safely lodged in the cells. All but one of them were dressed in civilians' clothing, and took their arrest with the best of good nature, after they found it was useless to kick. The most of them were fine looking fellows, and small wonder at the naval authorities not liking to lose the men. In the police court, Mr. Edwin Johnson Q. C., ordered that they all be handed over to the naval people, and a file of marines under the command of a lieutenant took charge of the culprits and marched them away down to Esquimalt.—Times.

Arrival of S S. Abyssinia.

The steamship Abyssinia, Capt. George A. Lee, arrived at this port early Saturday morning after a passage of just 15 days, bringing 12 bags of mail from China and Japan and a very valuable cargo of silk. She left Hong Kong on Nov. 9th, Amoy 11th, Foochow 13th, Shanghai 16th, Kobe 21st and Yokohama 23rd November at 7 a. m. During the first two days out strong head winds and heavy seas were encountered, but after that the weather was exceptionally fine with smooth sea and light, variable winds, in fact, it was the finest passage she has ever made across the Pacific. Cape Flattery was passed last night at 8:20 p. m. and Victoria was reached about midnight. There were only 6 first class passengers and 35 steerage. Her cargo consists of 2,000 tons, mostly tea and silk, of which 640 tons is consigned to Pacific coast points, 450 tons for Canadian points and 990 tons for the eastern States. There are 1,130 bales of silk, nearly all of which is for New York.—Vancouver News.

The Wreck of the Rustler.

Mr. M. Manson and the crew of the steamer Rustler, have arrived back by the steamer Clyde from Nelson Island. He gives the following account of the wreck of the Rustler. The steamer Rustler was lying at the Nelson Island Granite Quarry and only stopped there about fifteen minutes when they discovered they were fast upon a rock, the tide having rapidly receded while they were lying there. Captain LaBlanc attempted to get her off but the rock held her fast in this position and later on as the tide went lower she heeled over and filled with water, compelling the crew to leave her. Captain LeBlanc then left for Vancouver to obtain assistance, and going in he met Mr. Manson, and together they went back to the Rustler in the steamer Tepic, with a scow to to try and get her off. After working a considerable time they found she was completely broken to pieces, and therefore a total loss. The Rustler did excellent service last summer in the trade between Nanaimo and Texada Island, where she took many a good prospector and where she was at times most anxiously enquired for by them. The McKenzie Bros.' steamer Clyde, left again this morning for Nelson Island intending to take the boiler and machinery from the hull of the Rustler. Mr. Manson informs us he is not insured one cent for the Rustler, and he further states $6,000 will not replace her.—Free Press.

The dwelling of John Modler, a farmer of the third concession of Lansdown, South Leeds, Ont., was burned Thursday night, and Modler lost his life in trying to save his property, after having with difficulty saved his children. The remains, burned crisp, were recovered from the ruins.

MOUSSA BEY

Banished to Syria by the Sultan for Outraging Christains in Armenia.

Land Troubles in Egypt Threaten to Place 30,000 Bedouins in Rebellion.

The Gasworkers and Coal Heavers in London Threaten a Monster Strike.

A SPY ARRESTED.

ST. PETERSBURG, Dec. 9.—The Novoe Vremya states that an Englishman has been arrested at Sebastopol on a charge of making sketches of the batteries and forts of the city. Documents of a compromising nature were found in his possession.

HOTEL BURNED.

AMSTERDAM, Dec. 9.—The Hotel Suisse was burned last night. The inmates escaped.

THE PAPAL DELEGATE.

LONDON, Dec. 9.—Mgr. Satelli, the papal representative, has arrived in England.

GREAT STRIKE THREATENED.

LONDON, Dec. 9.—Two thousand gas workers met in a suburb of London today and adopted resolutions embodying the grounds of their demands for better compensation, and declaring their unalterable determination to force a recognition of their rights. It is confidently asserted that the coal handlers will strike in sympathy with the gas workers, if the latter go out.

INVASION THREATENED.

LONDON, Dec. 9.—Egypt is now threatened with an incursion by thirty thousand Bedouins who have hitherto maintained an inoffensive attitude. The cause of the present movement is the refusal of the Egyptian govt. to grant certain trivial claims in regard to land. Though differing widely from the system of land tenure prevalent among nations which call themselves civilized, the custom of the Bedouins in regard to land occupancy are well defined, and any infringement upon them is bitterly resented. The Egyptian govt. might doubtless save itself much expense and annoyance by deigning to study the prejudices and customs of the children of the desert, instead of riding rough shod over them, and acknowledging no right but force.

MOUSSA BEY PUNISHED.

LONDON, Dec. 9.—The action of the sultan in banishing Moussa Bey after that chieftain had been acquitted according to the approved Turkish methods of justice, causes much astonishment here. It is hinted that the Porte received strong representations from the European governments to the effect that Christendom might demand international interference if the policy of outrage upon Christians was maintained by Moussa Bey, and endorsed by his acquittal were continued. It is not believed, however, that the actual condition of Christians in Armenia will be bettered by the disgrace of Moussa. Outside opinion will be satisfied for the time being, and the outrages will go on under other chiefs, unmolested until matters become so bad as to again challenge the attention of the civilized world.

PROMINENT PHYSICIANS.

BERLIN, Dec. 9.—The celebrated physician, Dr. Leydan, has been suddenly summoned to St. Petersburg to attend the czar, who is suffering with influenza. Dr. Bergman, the noted laryngologist, who was one of the attendants upon the late Emperor Frederick, is quite ill with inflamation of the lungs.

TO CHECK THE KINDS.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Dec. 9.—Moussa Bey, the Kindish chief, who was acquitted on charges of outraging the Christian population of Armenia, has been exiled with his family to Syria. The force of gendarmes in Armenia will be increased with the purpose of holding the Kinds in check.

A BASELESS RUMOR.

BERLIN, Dec. 9.—The Zeitung states semi-officially that the report of a marriage having been arranged between a Russian prince and the Princess Margaret of Prussia is untrue. Gossipmongers have had a difficult task in trying to strike the right combination for Princess Margaret and positive statements have been made bethrothing her at one time to a Dutch, then to a Spanish and finally to a Russian prince. The latter rumor has been the only one to elcit a denial from high quarters. Whereat some infer that the Emperor William resents even a suspicion of any strengthening of the ties between Germany and Russia.

THE REASONS WHY.

LISBON, Dec. 9.—In an interview to day Count Deu, son-in-law of Dom Pedro, said of recent events in Brazil: The republicans were not numerous, they profited by the estrangement of the large landowners who were bitter against the government because of the immediate abolition of slavery. Many merchants, also conservatives, were also alienated by the abolition movement. The republicans industriously spread the idea that the throne was wholly responsible for the hastening of the emancipation, whereas this action was only the logical consummation of a policy extending back many years, and which had received the support of all classes. Meanwhile the army had become tyrannical and insolent. The only means of checking this dangerous tendency was to at once revive the Garde Nationale, which was always a conservative body. Before nominating the officers the government resolved to create a regiment at Rio. The republicans bruited about that the government intended to revive it everywhere, and to disarm the existing forces. The military thereupon decided to revolt under Fonseca, who is a weak man and easily managed. At the beginning the only cry of the military was "Down with the government." "Viva Libertiad," but in the evening students cried, "Viva Republic," and the military joined in. Regarding the prospect of the restoration of the empire the count said: "Brazil is too far from Europe for proper steps to be taken. There is also lacking a man to bring the army around to the side of the empire. Had the emperor been able to show himself to the crowd in the streets they would have cheered him and the revolution would have collapsed. It is now too late.

THE CHURCHES.

Summaries of Some of the City Sermons Spoken Sunday.

ST. PAUL'S CHURCH.

At St. Paul's Reformed Episcopal church yesterday morning the Rev. Thos. Haddon spoke on "True Greatness," taking Matt. 20 c., 25 to 27 v. as the basis of his remarks. He said: Perhaps there is hardly a man in the wide world who has not at some time in his life had a desire to be great, and hold some position of honor amongst his fellow men. Ambition is inherent in man; it comes into prominence even with the disciples in their dispute as to who should be the greatest; then in connection with the text the mother of Zebedee's children is ambitious for her sons to sit in honor near Jesus, in what she looked for as a temporal kingdom, and coming from the narrative, in the indignation of the ten, is a witness of the inherent ambitious craving. The desire to know which should be accounted the greatest was met in a similar way to that recorded in the text. One thought arises just here. If Peter was present on this occasion, as he certainly must have been, and he was to be accounted the chief among them, why did not Christ say so? Why did not the disciples regard him as chief? The interpretation of that remark Christ made to Peter, "Thou art Peter, and upon this rock I will build my church," as made by the teachers in the Romish Church, is erroneous; it was upon Peter's confession, that Jesus was the Christ, he would build His church. Upon the principle, upon the belief, and not upon the man; imagination must take wide scope to come to any other conclusion. The church of Christ, divinely instituted, divinely honored, certainly would have divinity as a foundation rather than man. None of the early churches recognized or acknowledged Peter as greater than any of the rest; even Paul, who by his achievements might be counted the greatest of all the apostles, calls himself the least. My impression is that in the text the Lord does not in the least seek to crush ambition, but would have it founded on a sure, true and honest foundation. Humility is the true source of greatness, and Christ's own case of ministering and sacrifice for others is an example. Jesus acknowledges the right of princes, but as differing from the ordinary course. The men of influence in the world are in many cases looked upon by God as unstable beings, and while many counted among the noble and the daring have conquered and ruled nations, they have not succeeded in conquering and ruling their own hearts. Men like Alexander the Great, when he had conquered all the then known world, wept because there was nothing more to conquer, but he had forgotten his own heart. Count not that man great who has reached the top of the ladder of fame and yet has not started to climb toward heaven. The measure of true greatness is in proportion to the profession of the graces of the spirit, and the willingness to minster for and to others rather than self. May we be led to labor on at His command and offer all our works to Him, and then the reward will be sure. Let us take Paul's advice, "Be ye steadfast, unmovable, always abounding in the work of the Lord, for as much as ye know that your labor is not in vain in the Lord."

HOLY TRINITY CHURCH.

At Holy Trinity church yesterday morning Bishop Sillitoe preached another interesting discourse on eschatology, or the doctorine of the last or final things; death and judgment. In beginning his discourse the preacher descanted on the utter impotence of man and his puny judgment in face of spiritual things. It has been too much the custom to turn the idea of the day of judgment into a mere ceremony devoid of all meaning, but it is not so, but will be a terrible reality. Human faith though sadly weakened is still used as a battlefield in which the genii of good and evil struggle for the mastery. The speaker then described the doctrine of fatalism; that what is has been ordained from the beginning. The work of redemption stretches far away beyond the needs of human nature; the gospel is a remedy for all human ills. There is a wide difference between fatalism and Christianity. If arguments, as an excuse for not being Christians, are to be based on the ground of unfavorable circumstances, where are we to draw the line? Every one is more or less unfavorably situated. And it is a question whether a man born among thieves and vagabonds is more unfavorably situated than one born in the higher ranks of society. Blessing after blessing has been attached to poverty and persecution, and curses and warnings unto the rich. Dives was not so favorably situated as Lazarus. Another great question on this field of battle is that of purgatory versus heaven and hell. Among the Jews the intermediate state was termed Sheol, but in the gospel we have Hades. It was the Roman church that attempted to substitute purgatory for Sheol, and the idea of purgatory became established. According to the primitive idea neither heaven or hell was attained until after the day of judgment. Even Justin Martyr cherished this belief. With the dawn of the idea of purgatory this belief exploded. And now according to the Roman church imperfect souls are relegated to purgatory. After the Reformation the Protestant theologians at once rejected the doctrine of purgatory and made heaven and hell the immediate issues. If this doctrine is correct of course all those who have died outside the pale of the church are lost. There is no other alternative. The consequence of sin in this life is immediate consignment to hell after death. We have cut out from theology the intermediate state and substituted heaven and hell; they are the final things. Next Sunday the bishop will continue the series in another sermon on the same subject.

The celebrated case of the Jesuits against the Mail for $50,000 alleged damages, has passed into a new stage. Hon. Mr. Lafiamme and F. C. Smith, the Mail's counsel, have made a motion to amend their pleading by inserting certain special causes of the constitution instead of general allegations, which were argued, and Judge Doherty took the matter en delibre.

Monday Evening, Dec. 9, 1889.

If anything were wanted to demonstrate the utter contemptibleness of the local morning paper, the evidence is forthcoming in the vulgar and dishonorable tactics which that sheet practices at election contests. Misrepresentation, untruth, and the endeavor to foment denominational and class differences are the unworthy weapons to which it has recourse by preference whenever an election contest of any sort is on. This was amply proved by its conduct during the late Corbould-Cunningham contest in this city. On the very next opportunity—which the civic elections offered—the "wretched" paper rushes incontinently to its dirty tracks again. In its usual erratic and unreasoning way, the Church street freak imagined that it wanted to oppose Mr. James Johnston in ward two. Forthwith Mr. James Johnston must be maligned in some way. Without daring to assert directly what it knew to be an untruth— or, to give it the benefit of the doubt, what it did not know to be true—the organ of undoubted veracity invented a fiction, and introduced it in the assassin style, "It is alleged," etc.; but took care before concluding to assume its own allegation to be fact. When the cowardly untruth was publicly branded by this paper, instead of retracting, true to its character, the misnamed sheet has kept on reiterating its false insinuation. In its issue of Sunday morning Truth (?) says: "Although every opportunity has been given them to do so, neither James Johnston or his coadjutor, THE COLUMBIAN, have accepted Truth's challenge to deny that he is alleged to be connected with the Salvation Army, and that there has been some justification for the allegation." To show how thoroughly and stupidly unscrupulous in its statements the morning paper can be we will reproduce a sentence from an editorial paragraph in this paper on Friday last: ....."in the interests of strict truth, now that the question has been raised by a falsehood, we may state, what all Mr. Johnston's friends know, that in matters of religion he is one of the staidest of Presbyterians—the very antipodes of the demonstrative Salvationists—and, in fact, is known to have personal predilections not favorable to the Army." No reasonable, honest mind could ask for a more emphatic contradiction than the above so far as this paper is concerned. With respect to a flourishing denial in its own columns by Mr. Johnston, which the morning paper appears to expect, we may state, for its delectation, that Mr. Johnston, very properly, entertains too strong a contempt for the sheet in question to defend himself in its columns. Without Mr. Johnston's knowledge, we published our correction of Truth's (?) false insinuation, on Friday last. The next day Mr. Johnston called at this office and thanked us for voluntarily correcting the utterly groundless insinuation concerning him; he expressed himself perfectly satisfied with the contradiction in this paper, and intimated that he would scorn to have his name appear in the columns of the morning paper in contradiction of such a gratuitous and contemptible falsehood. We owe our readers an apology for noticing a comparatively trivial matter at such length. It is not so much the matter, however, as the principle that induced us to notice the question again. Truth's (?) malign influence is bound to affect a few in the community. It is well, therefore, that its true characteristics should be pointed out occasionally. Otherwise it is beneath notice.

PRIZE fighting as a sport seems to stand a fair chance of revival. Of course the practice of the manly art has never yet died out, but the brand of the law having been fixed on it, sporting gentlemen have had to be satisfied with carrying on the little game sub rosa, more or less. The vigilant policeman has had to be watched, and his eagle eye diverted by all manner of means, to enable combatants to blacken each other's optics, or pound each other into jelly, all in the interest of "sport." But a revival of old times seems to be imminent, and prize fighting, so far from being dead as a polite art, is still in high favor with the "cream of society." That such is a fact is conclusively proved by the accounts of a "glove contest" which recently took place at the Pelican club in the fashionable west end of London. The combatants were Jem Smith, the champion heavy weight of England, and Peter Jackson, the colored pugilist of Australia. The reports of this degrading fight are simply revolting, and we have no intention to inflict any of the horrible details upon our readers. It is suggestive, however, to read that "never before in the history of modern London has such a sight been seen within the walls of a club house. Every class of society may be said to have been represented. Here were leading lights of fashion, there popular actors; playwrights jostled stockbrokers, and guardsmen from Wellington barracks and cavaliers from Canterbury elbowed solicitors and financial agents. Music-hall proprietors, negro comedians, and theatrical managers were packed like sardines with foreign office clerks, racing men and newspaper owners. At least two composers could have found inspiration for a 'hurly-burly' chorus from the din by which their ears were greeted, and writers of comic copy might fairly have annexed some of the jokes which country squires had brought with them for the edification of Londoners. But be it remembered that all these spectators were in faultless evening garb, that not even the smoke of a cigarette rose towards the electric girandoles, while no oaths or coarse language defiled the attendance, which was positively saintlike in its demeanor. The lack of refreshment was a great inconvenience." From the preceding remarks it is very clear that the exhibition of fistic brutality was patronised by many persons of prominence in "society", and the fact that the encounter came off at a fashionable club house like that of the "Pelican" is proof positive that this "glove contest" was no second rate affair, but on the contrary quite "the thing." That it was a prize fight pure and simple is only too evident from a perusal of the particulars. Thus the accounts, after gloating over a great deal of brutality, declare that "Smith was knocked all over the ring and had to cling to the ropes to prevent himself from falling," and then add that "the colored man struck Smith repeatedly in the face, the latter being quite incapable of returning the blows."

The question at once arises, Where were the police, and why did they not prevent this affray? Prize fighting is illegal in England, and it seems scarcely credible that such a very representative gathering of spectators could have been in "the know," in regard to the contest without some inkling of what was about to happen reaching the ears of the authorities. Cock fighting, bull baiting, and the manly art were in high favor with Englishmen of a bygone generation, but so was habitual intoxication, and we had hoped that sport of the prize ring order had gone out with the last of the three bottle men. It seems, however, as though the jeunesse doree of to-day are apeing the blackguardism of the past without the excuses of their predecessors. It is high time that Mr. Secretary Matthews should awake to the fact that the purlieus of Piccadilly and Pall Mall are after all very little better than the courts and thieves' kitchens around Ratcliff highway, if there is a tittle of truth in the disgusting revelations brought to this country over the cables. The club houses seem to have degenerated into gambling hells or worse, and nameless horrors are reported as being perpetrated by the rising aristocracy of the greatest empire the world has yet seen. For the credit of our common race, for the good name of the mother country, we hope that much has been exaggerated, but it behooves the government of England to see that the law is obeyed, and that offenders, no matter what their or position in society, are brought to justice for their misdeeds.

NOTES AND COMMENTS.

Indestructible boors, with leaves and covers of asbestos and printing in gold or silver letters, have been suggested.

Nothing, says the New York Tribune, serves to measure the grade and character of a people to the eye of a thoughtful traveller so readily and distinctly as the condition of the rural roads.

Though scarcely ten years old, Volapuk is said to be studied by 2,000,000 people, to have been the subject of more than 2,000 books, to have regularly issued in its interest more than 30 periodicals, and to have led to the formation of more than 600 societies.

There is a remote part of the Russian empire, says an exchange, where the girls do all the courting. The young woman calls at the young man's house and makes the proposal; if the young man declines she remains there in the hope of coaxing him into changing his mind. The poor fellow is not permitted by the custom of the country to turn her out or even to be rude. His only recourse is to go away and leave her in possession of his house until her patience is exhausted. Thus the young woman can secure a home whether she gets married or not.

Among the centenarians of all nations and all times, says Dr. Felix L. Oswald, a significant plurality were either rustics or city dwellers addicted to out-door pursuits. Centenarians are remarkably frequent among the baliff-ridden boors of southern Russia, and the five oldest persons of modern times were careworn if not abjectly poor villagers. Peter Czartan, who died in a hamlet near Belgrade, 1724, in his 185th year; the Russian beggar Kamartzik, a native of Polotzk, who reached an age of 163 years, and died in consequence of an accident; the fisherman Jenkins, who, in spite of life-long penury, lived at least a century and a half (the estimate of his neighbors varying from 158 to 169 years), the negress Truxo, who died in slavery on the plantation of a Tucuman physician, in her 175th year; and the day laborer, Thomas Parr, who attained the pretty well authenticated age of 152 years, and who died a few weeks after his removal from country air and indigence to comfort and city quarters.

YOU DID NOT COME!

The sun was gliding down the western sky,
The hours of day had almost reached their sum;
Who kept the tryst that was appointed? I!
You did not come!

I sat and watched the evening's closing ray;
The sunset woods were desolate and dumb;
I waited till the last faint streak of day—
You did not come!

'Twas but to give me back a flower or two—
A ring—my letters, foolish, doubtless, some—
Mere trifles! Yet I thought not so; and you—
You did not come!

The moonlight rose and spread its silver flood;
I heard the death-moth round the nightshade hum;
A chilly loneness froze my fevered blood—
You did not come!

'Twas at the call of war that forth you went,
With blare of trumpet and with beat of drum;
Your parting passed without a farewell sent—
You did not come!

One word upon a scrap of paper writ—
Of pitying comfort but a single crumb,
It was not much; you might have spared me it!
You did not come!

And so, until the end of all arrive,
I wander far apart—my heart is numb;
Severed for aye the courses of our lives—
You did not come!

Life can not be what it has been before—
The hours of joy have reached, alas! their sum;
The tryst you kept not can return no more—
You can not come!

EPIDEMIC DISEASES

Precautions to Be Adopted to Prevent Their Spread.

An important memorandum on the proceedings which are advisable in places attacked or threatened with epidemic disease, which has been drawn up by Dr. George Buchanan, F. R. S., has been issued to sanitary authorities by the Local Government Board. In this memorandum, says the London Times, it is stated that whenever there is prevalence or threatening of cholera, diphtheria, fever or any other epidemic disease, it is of more than common importance that the statutory powers conferred upon sanitary authorities for the protection of the public health should be well exercised by those authorities acting with the advice of their medical officers of health.

Proper precautions are equally requisite for all classes of society. But it is chiefly with regard to the poorer population, therefore chiefly in the courts and alleys of towns, and at the laborers' cottages of country districts, that local authorities are called upon to exercise vigilance and to proffer information and advice. Common lodging-houses and houses which are sublet in several small holdings always require particular attention.

Wherever there is accumulation, stink or soakage of house refuse or of other decaying animal or vegetable matter, the nuisance should as promptly as possible be abated, and precaution should be taken not to let it recur. Especially examination should be made as to the efficient working of sewers and drains, and any defect therein and any nuisance therefrom or from any foul ditches or ponds should be got rid of without delay. The ventilation of sewers, the ventilation and trapping of house drains and the disconnection of cistern overflows and sink pipes from drains should be carefully seen to. The scavenging of the district and the state of receptacles for excrement and of dust-bins will require close attention. In slaughter-houses, and wherever animals are kept, strict cleanliness should be enforced.

In the removal of filth during periods of epidemic disease it is commonly necessary to employ chemical agents for reducing or removing the offense and harm which may be involved in the disturbance of the filth. In the removal of privy contents these agents are more particularly wanted if the disease in question be cholera or enteric fever. The chemical agent should be used liberally over all exposed surfaces from which filth has been removed. Unpaved earth close to dwellings, if it be sodden with slops or filth, ought to be treated in the same way.

Sources of water supply should be well examined. Water from sources which can be in any way tainted by animal or vegetable refuse, especially those into which there may be any leakage or filtration from sewers, drains, cesspools, or foul ditches ought no longer to be drunk. Above all, where the disease is cholera, diarrhea, or enteric fever, it is essential that no impure water be drunk.

The liability of leaky pipes to act as land drains and to receive foul matters as well as land drainage through their leaks is not to be overlooked. And such leaky pipes, running full of water with considerable velocity, are liable to receive, by lateral insuction at their points of leakage, external matters that may be dangerous. This latter fact is not recognized so generally as it should be, and ignorance of it has probably baffled many inquiries in cases where water services have in truth been the means of spreading disease.

If, unfortunately, the oily water which for a time can be got should be open to suspicion of dangerous organic impurity, it ought at least to be boiled before it is used for drinking, but then not to be drank later than twenty-four hours after it has been boiled. Filtering of the ordinary kind can not by itself be trusted to purify water. It can not be too distinctly understood that dangerous qualities of water are not obviated by the addition of wine or spirits. When there appears any probable relation between the distribution of disease and milk supplies, the cleanliness of dairies, the purity of the water used in them, the health of the persons employed about them, and the health of the cows that furnish milk should always be carefully investigated. Even apart from any apprehension of milk being concerned in a particular outbreak of disease, it is desirable that English people should adopt the custom, which is always followed in some continental countries, of boiling all milk at once upon its reception into a house.

The washing and lime-whiting of uncleanly premises, especially of such as are densely occupied, should be pressed with all practicable dispatch.

Overcrowding should be prevented. Especially where disease has begun, the sick room should, as far as possible, be free from persons who are not of use to the patient.

Ample ventilation should be inforced. It should be seen that the windows are made to open, and that they are sufficiently opened. Especially where any kind of infective fever has begun, it is essential, both for patients and for persons who are about them, that the sick room and the sick house be constantly traversed by streams of fresh air.

The cleanliest domestic habits should be enjoined. Refuse matters should be speedily removed or destroyed; and things which have to be disinfected or cleansed should always be disinfected or cleansed without delay.

Special precautions of cleanliness and disinfection are necessary with regard to infective matter discharged from the bodies of the sick. Among discharges which it is proper to treat as infective are those which come in cases of small-pox and scarlatina from the affected skin; in cases of cholera and enteric fever from the intestinal canal; in cases of diphtheria and scarlatina from the nose and throat; likewise, in cases of any eruptive or other epidemic fever, the general exhalations of the sick. The caution which is necessary with regard to such matters must, of course, extend to whatever is imbued with them; so that bedding, clothing, towels, handkerchiefs, and other articles which have been in use by the sick may not become sources of mischief, either in the house to which they belong or in the house to which they are conveyed. So far as articles of this class can be replaced by rags or things of small value, it is best to use such things and burn them when they are soiled. Otherwise clothing and infected articles should be subjected to the disinfectant of the sick-room, or be removed for disinfection by heat.

In enteric fever and cholera the evacuation should be regarded as capable of communicating an infectious quality to any nightsoil with which they are mingled in privies, drains, or cesspools; and after such disinfection of the mass is practicable, they should be disposed of without delay and under the safest conditions that local circumstances permit. They should not be thrown into any fixed privy receptacle, and above all they must never be cast where they can run or soak into sources of drinking water.

All reasonable care should be taken not to allow infective disease to spread by the unnecessary association of sick with healthy persons. This care is requisite, not only with regard to the sick house, but likewise with regard to schools and other establishments wherein members of many different households are accustomed to meet.

If disease begins in houses where the sick person can not be properly accommo*dated and tended, medical advice should* be taken as to the propriety of removing him to an infirmary or hospital. Every sanitary authority should have in readiness a hospital for the reception of such cases.

Where dangerous conditions of residences can not be promptly remedied it will be best that the inmates, while unattacked by disease, remove to some safer lodging. Privation, as predisposing to disease, may require special measures of relief.

In certain cases special medical arrangements are necessary. For instance, as cases of cholera in this country often begin somewhat gradually in the comparatively tractable form of what is called "promonitory diarrhea," it is essential that, where cholera has appeared, arrangements should be made for affording medical relief without delay to persons attacked even slightly with looseness of bowels. So, again, when small-pox is the prevailing disease, it is essential that all unvaccinated persons (unless they previously have had small-pox) should very promptly be vaccinated; and that revaccination should be performed in cases properly requiring it.

BESS AND RUBE.

The Strong Attachment of an Elephant for a Setter Dog.

"Nothing is more curious and interesting among the many strange things to be noted in and about a menagerie," said the veteran manager James M. Nixon to a New York Sun reporter, "than the devoted affection that elephants frequently demonstrate for dogs. The big pachyderms form no other attachments so strong and enduring, and the dogs seem to reciprocate the feeling.

"One of the best illustrations that I ever saw was the love between Bess and Rube. Bess was a female elephant that we had in the Barnum show in 1873-4, and Rube was a setter dog. Bess was never easy when Rube was out of her sight. Her keen little eyes would follow his every movement if he was frisking about, and if he disappeared she would utter a little scream that would bring him gallantly back to her in a hurry. She never seemed so happy as when he was lying asleep on the hay in front of her, with her big trunk waving over him. One time Rube got sick. She took the best care of him that she knew how in her elephantine way. She made a bunch of hay about a foot thick and large enough for him to lie coiled upon and in some way made him understand that he should lie down upon it. Then she deftly worked her big trunk around under the bunch of hay so as to take it up, with him on it, as a woman takes up a sick baby on a pillow, and there she held him and gently swung him to and fro all night long, rocking and lulling him to sleep. In the morning he was well again, and Bess appeared as happy as a mother who had nursed her child through a spell of illness.

"While we were showing in Boston I happened to mention to a group of reporters one day the strong affection Bess showed for Rube. They evidently considered it a 'circus fairy story,' and were not delicate in saying so. 'Very well,' I said, 'if any of you doubt it, just get Rube away from Bess a little distance and hurt him slightly, enough to make him yelp.' I hadn't any idea that they'd do it, and I didn't stop to think of where Bess might be, and whether she was chained or not. The fact was that she was at the time going through a rehearsal in the ring, loose, and Rube was sitting up on a folded carpet some way off. The reporters left me and strolled out into the canvas. Pretty soon they edged around to where Rube was, and one of them gave his tail a twist, which the dog instantly remarked loudly. Bess, at the sound of his yelp, wheeled around into the ring, threw up her trunk with a shrill scream of rage, and started out for those reporters. They flew. There was no time for explanation, argument or dignified leisure. The forty or fifty employes who were standing about ran too. Bess stopped at Rube, and when she saw that he wasn't seriously hurt she calmed right down, walked back to the ring and went on with the rehearsal.

"When we were going to Lowell from Boston, Rube, who had a sore foot, was put in one of the baggage wagons and sent on ahead. When they came to start the elephants for the march Bess missed her pet and broke out in open rebellion. She stood and trumpeted for him, snorted, and tramped around in excitement, and would not be driven. The other elephants began to share her excitement, and a man had to be sent on a swift horse after Rube. The wagon he was on came back. The doors were thrown open so that Bess could see him. She went up to him, touched him gently all over with her trunk, blinked at him, made a succession of sounds that sounded like the blowing off of steam from the exhaust pipe of a boiler, and then jogged along behind him contentedly all the way, the doors of the wagon being kept open."

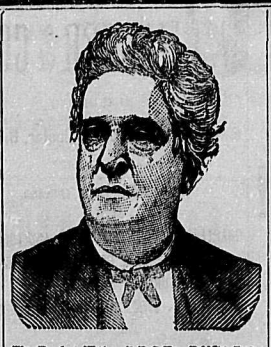
A Queensland Cattle-Raiser Wins a Bride in Very Short Order.

Marriageable young women are in great demand in this part of the Queen's dominions, writes a correspondent from Rockhampton, Queensland, Australia. The sexes in this colony are in the proportion of one hundred and twenty-five males to eighty-eight females. The towns, however, retain more than their share of the fair sex, and in the sugar planting districts there is a deplorable dearth of women. Nearly all the land-owners and large planters are married, but most of the whites in their employ are bachelors, and, what is worse, many of the poor fellows haven't a chance to change their condition if they wish to. The result is that whenever a nice white girl goes into the interior on the plantations she has to get married in self protection or else she is so pestered with attentions as almost to drive her out of the country.

A remarkable case of sudden and almost unpremeditated matrimony occurred on a plantation near Winton a few weeks ago. A planter had been to Rockhampton, and had here engaged a strapping good-looking girl to assist his wife in her household duties. After she had been in her new home several days she took her wash-tub out of doors one morning to do the family washing. While hard at work, with soap-suds up to her elbows, along came a squatter who kept a small herd of cattle in the neighborhood. He didn't intend to lose this chance to make the acquaintance of a woman. So he sidled up to the wash-tub and began to talk, and it wasn't long before she was giving him more than half her attention.

After awhile the young man owned up that it was a case of love at first sight as far as he was concerned and he popped the question without any ado. The girl said she was willing if her mistress would indorse him as a worthy young man. That lady thought it would be a good match, and said so, and a quarter of an hour later the brand-new lovers, in their work-day clothes, were footing it three miles away to the house of a magistrate, where the knot was legally tied in short order. The bride finished her washing in the afternoon and that evening she transferred herself to the home of the squatter, which she now adorns, apparently as happy a woman as there is in Queensland.

A great many people do not like this climate, for we are twenty degrees nearer the equator than the residents of New York. But those who do not object to our superabundant sunshine, which makes most of our days pretty warm, though not unbearable, are doing well; and any presentable young woman who ventures into this colony is apt to have her name changed almost before she knows it.



THE LATE PROF. PHELPS.

The above is a portrait of the late Prof. Edward E. Phelps, M. D., L. L. D., of Dartmouth college. He was a strong, able man, who stood high in the literary and scientific worlds. It is not generally known, but it is, nevertheless, the truth, that Prof. Phelps was the discoverer of what is known to the medical profession and chemists universally as Paine's Celery Compound, unquestionably one of the most valuable discoveries of this century. This remarkable compound is not a nervine, an essence, a sarsaparilla or any devised article, but a discovery, and it marks a distinct step in medical practice and treatment of nervous complications. It has been freely admitted by the best medical talent in the land, and also by the leading chemists and scientists, that for nerve troubles, nervous exhaus*tion, insomnia, debility, senility* and even the dreaded and terrible Paresis, nothing has ever been discovered which reaches the disorder and restores health equal to this discovery of Prof. Phelps.

Paine's Celery Compound is now being prepared in quantities, and can be procured at any reputable druggist. An attractive bunch of celery is to be found on every wrapper. It has become specially popular among professional men, mind workers, ladies burdened with exciting social duties and frequenters of the leading clubs.

At this rate the item for cab hire alone must be very large, and will make a large hole in Mr. Oppenheimer's civic salary, should he happen to be elected.

New Tug for Harrison Lake.

Messrs. Joseph Martin & Sons, proprietors of the Harrison River Saw Mills, have commenced building a fine new tug to be used on Harrison Lake, in connection with their mills, for towing purposes. The machinery, which is daily expected from the east, will be strong, giving the new steamer all the power necessary for the class of work she will be engaged in. It is expected that the tug will be afloat and ready for operations within sixty days.

Lighted by Electricity.

For the first time in the history of the Royal City, the electric light shone in Westminster last night. By some means the new telephone line got crossed with an electric light wire in Vancouver, and Mr George Pittendrigh, the local manager, noticing that something was wrong, disconnected the Vancouver line and closed it to the ground line. In doing so he received a shock so severe that he dropped both wires and fairly danced with pain. Knowing that some unusual power was at work on the wires, Mr. Pittendrigh procured a carbon and attached it to the ground wire, brought the Vancouver line in close proximity to it, and in an instant the central telephone office was ablaze with electric light. The stolen light lasted some time, but was finally shut off, and the telephonists were once more reduced to probe their way by the blinding glare retailed by the Westminster Gas Company.

Beautiful Snow.

About noon yesterday snow commenced to fall, coming from the northwest in small flakes. A little later the wind veered to the west and then the southwest and the flakes became larger and the fall more steady and heavier. During the whole afternoon and evening the "beautiful" descended, and when the sky finally cleared about three inches of snow had fallen in the lower, and four and a half inches in the upper portion of the city. Churchgoing people on their return home last evening experienced a very fatiguing journey up the hill, and many were completely "done out" before reaching home.

This morning the corporation gang got to work bright and early, and cleared all street crossings in the lower part of the city. The weather set in mild, and the probabilities are that a couple of days will see the last of the snow. No attempt at sleighing was made, except by the small boys on coasting sleds, as the snow was too slushy and the ground underneath too soft. A few telephone and telegraph wires suffered, but beyond this no damage was done.

Drift Floats.

Mr. William Smith, deputy minister of marine, has issued the following notice to mariners: Lieut. Commander Chas. H. Stockton, commanding U. S. S. Thetis, reports that, during the past summer, while on the north and northwest coasts of Alaska the Thetis set adrift numerous drift floats. The floats are made of wood, about two feet long and nine and a half inches thick, with the name of the ship, date, and the words "for drift" cut upon the face. In a cavity at one end of the float, plugged with soft wood, there is a copper cylinder containing a letter requesting the finder to inform the U. S. hydraulic office, Washington, D. C.; the nearest U. S. consul, or the commanding officer of the Thetis, the time and place where the float was found. These different floats are intended to show the direction and strength of the currents off the coast of Alaska, and any information obtained from them will be of value to navigation. Masters of Canadian vessels in British Columbia and Alaska waters, or residents on the coast of British Columbia, finding any of these floats are strongly urged to comply with the request contained therein.

A Thrilling Escape.

One of the most thrilling and hairbreadth escapes that has been chronicled in railroad history for a long time, occured near Donald Saturday. From one of the passengers a representative of THE COLUMBIAN gleaned the particulars of the accident. The Pacific express had proceeded west of Donald about three miles, when one of the sand boards of the Colonist sleeper became detached and dropped to the rail throwing the car and three following coaches from the track. The airbrakes worked like a charm, and the train speedily came to a standstill. The spot where this accident occurred was near the mouth of a tunnel, and at a place where the road is cut out of the side of the mountain, the lower side being almost perpendicular for nearly 300 feet. When the train stopped three of the derailed cars overhung this terrible precipice, only held from an awful fall into the depths below by the strength of the couplings. The accident together, with the perilous situation in which the lives of all were placed, caused much consternation among the passengers, and the agony endured by some of them during the few minutes that passed before they could be removed, was something intense, and never to be forgotten. Conductor Unwin, who was in charge of the train, behaved with the utmost coolness throughout, and his cheery manner and quiet way served to re*assure many of the passengers* whose nerves had sustained a rude shock by the mishap. Jackscrews were quickly got out and placed under the endangered coaches, and by these means they were once more set upon the rails and the train proceeded, reaching its destination yesterday afternoon without further accident.

COMMENDABLE.

All claims not consistent with the high character of Syrup of Figs are purposely avoided by the Cal. Fig Syrup Company. It acts gently on the kidneys, liver and bowels, cleansing the system effectually, but it is not a cure-all and makes no pretensions that every bottle will not substantiate.

Job printing of all kinds neatly done at the COLUMBIAN office. Prices will be found as low as at any other office in the province.—Adv.

THE CIVIC ELECTIONS

And Election of Waterworks Commissioners Pass off Very Quietly and a Small Vote Polled.

A more unfavorable day than to-day for inducing the ratepayers of Westminster to attend the polls could not have been made to order, and thus the smallness of the vote is easily ac*counted for. The roads and sidewalks* were covered with slush, and walking was so unpleasant and fatiguing that many voters living quite close to the polls refused to make their way thither unless a carriage was provided. As most of the carriages were in Vancouver, it was difficult to oblige all who wished to ride and as a consequence many votes remained unpolled. The lack of any very important issue in the elections, and the consequent absence of any great enthusiasm, had also probably much to do with the smallness of the vote. Voting commenced at 9 a. m. and closed at 5 p. m. Following are the official returns:

CRIMINAL COURT.

Before His Honor Judge Bole.

A warrant was issued for the arrest of Ah Toy, one of the witnesses summoned in the Foo Sing, robbing with violence at Ladners, case, and who did not appear. Edward O'Brien, the victim of the crime, was the first occupant of the witness stand. The indictment was read over to the prisoner and he pleaded not guilty. The witness stated that on Sunday, Nov. 17th, he met the prisoner half way between Ladner's Landing and his farm. They travelled on for some time until they came to a fallen tree, on which they sat for a while and prisoner told witness he had cut his foot with an axe; witness told him to come to his house and he would give him some sticking plaster. While at the house the prisoner acted very imprudently and witness ordered him out, after having given him a meal. The Chinaman returned about an hour later while witness was lighting a fire in the stove, and throwing his arms around witness' neck pushed his head into the blazing wood; an old felt hat which witness was wearing fell forward and saved his face. Witness' hands were burned. Prisoner then snatched his watch away, breaking the chain, then jumped up and took witness' shot gun out of a corner near the door, and ran away bareheaded across the fields. The gun was loaded. Prisoner dropped his hat in the flight and witness delivered it to the magistrate at Ladner's Landing.

The prisoner stated, through an interpreter Cum Yow, that witness had given him whiskey and neither food nor sticking plaster. Witness admitted that he had offered prisoner some brandy, but the latter refused it. Witness positively identified the prisoner as the man who robbed and assaulted him, having seen him often before.

Ah Toy, for whose arrest a warrant had been issued, turned up a few minutes before his name on the list of witnesses came round. He took the stand and was told that if he did not answer the questions directly he would be sent up for a year; this had the desired effect. Witness, prisoner and four others went over the river from Ladner's Landing. On returning witness said that prisoner had no hat. Several other witnesses gave evidence in the case.

Chas. Calhoun said he had never figured in the witness stand before and evidently thought the best way to do was to fence the questions. His honor called his attention to the warning that had sufficed for the Chinese witness. His honor finally ordered him out of the box. His honor sentenced the prisoner to seven years' penal servitude.

The case of E. Sealen, the man charged with receiving stolen goods, knowing them to be stolen, was the next, and the evidence was identical with that already given in the police court and reported in these columns. A clear case was made out, and his honor in imposing a sentence of 3 years and 6 months in penitentiary said he was determined to put a stop to this species of crime in the city. Westminster had enjoyed a comparative immunity from it in the past, and he would see that it did not become epidemic. His honor as good as promised that the next case of this kind that came before him would meet with a punishment that would likely stop all such crimes here.

CORRESPONDENCE.

A Contradiction.

EDITOR COLUMBIAN. — SIR: Rumors have been circulated that it is my intention to remove from New Westminster to another field of practice. Some of my friends informed me this morning that they had heard that I had already left. Will you kindly allow me space in your columns to deny all such reports. The movements of another individual, with whose surname mine has frequently been confounded, has doubtless given rise to the rumor. I have no intention of leaving this city, which, as a home, I prefer to any I have yet seen.

Yours truly,
I. M. MCLEAN, M.D.

New Westminster, Dec. 9, 1889.

Somewhat of a sensation has been created in Ottawa by the elopement of Mrs. Colin Campbell, wife of a well known employe of the militia department with a young lieutenant in the Princess Louise Dragoon Guards, Fred. O'Conner. The husband saw his faithless spouse take her departure on the train, but she was dumb to all his entreaties. Mrs. Campbell is a large woman, about 40 years of age, while her paramour is perhaps 25. Her conduct for years past has been such as to create scandal and to excite sympathy for her husband, who married one greatly beneath him in social position.
