PUT ALDERGROVE ON THE MAP

When the Centennial Copter dips down in Aldergrove on August 30th, it will have covered most of Canada from Signal Hill National Park near St. John's, Newfoundland, and from Aldergrove it will finally go on to the sands of Wickaninnish Bay on Vancouver Island. It will have visited Pelee Island, Canada's southernmost point, and repeatedly have penetrated the arctic north.

Both craft and crew will be dressed with color in mind. The helicopter will carry the Canadian flag, the official Centennial symbol, and all provincial and territorial shields will be on the fuselage.

It will also carry the legend "Centennial Panorama in Words and Pictures."

When the copter dips down on all these communities throughout our beautiful country, mail will be dispatched from the craft, and transferred to the local post office, from where it will be mailed to philatelists all over the world.

Several communities are working on the issue of a commemorative "First Flight Cover", as a method to let the world know about their area during the Centennial year.

When carried by the Canadian Centennial Copter, such cards or envelopes will be of considerable value to Worlds Philatelistic Society or the American Air Mail Society.

Covers prepared by collectors themselves will be carried free. Covers specially prepared on official colorful commemorative envelopes, and autographed by the crew are available from Centennial Copter headquarters, Box 1967, New Westminster, B.C

Aldergrove has now been given the opportunity to let the world know about its existence, and an envelope signifying Aldergrove can be prepared, which will, like other mail carried by the helicopter be of value to stamp collectors all over the world.

Matsqui Favours Amalgamation

Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell has given several lower mainland municipalities two years to move toward amalgamation. Campbell says if North Vancouver City and district, - Mission city and district, - and Langley city and district fail to initiate amalgamation voluntarily within two years, the provincial government will probably have to move in and do it for them.

Hunter Vogel's feelings on the subject of amalgamation is that unification of services should come about voluntarily, and that the reason should be economical rather than political.

He agrees that an amalgamation of the city and district of Langley would be of economical value, but he doesn't intend to support any compulsion.

Monday at council meeting this threat of enforced amalgamation of the municipalities by the provincial government was discussed, and it was remembered that co-operation between the municipality and Langley city has been sought before in a suggestion of a joint water supply, but this try ended up in failure after several months of negotiations.

Langley city mayor John Conder showed great concern over the statement made by Mr. Campbell Mayor Conder could not see why the government should terminate the city's charter after an existance of only 14 years.

A discussion sparked by councillor Doug Taylor at last weeks council meeting in Matsqui, ended up in a unanimous vote in favor of the amalgamation of the MSA municipalities.

Doug Taylor wanted the councils approval for a proposed province wide system consisting of electorial seats for municipal councillors. This in turn would mean, Doug Taylor said, that certain areas of each municipality would return their own councillor to local government.

Council's opposition to his statement that the ward system had not been satisfactory in the past, led to a lengthy discussion on the amalgamation of municipalities.

Amalgamation of municipalities would be a great advantage in many respects. It would make full use of equipment that are now only being used part time. Only one municipal engineer and one solicitor would also mean a saving, as would the advantages gained in the operation of garbage collection, one full time fire department, one ambulance service, and one police force on a 24 hour patrol for the whole area.

Reeve J. A. Murphy pointed out that this would take joint planning. He further said that "now we are almost working against each other to the detriment of the best interest of the whole community; it is my firm conviction that amalgamation is the only answer."

Councillor Gordon Gardner said that since it will have to come anyway, why prolong it, "we don't want to wait and have the government (provincial) force it upon us."

Councillor Taylor even though in favour of amalgamation, would like to see some of the ward system maintained. It would be necessary to have proper and adequate representation for the electors when dealing with such a large area and a population of 25,000 he said. The local representative should not get lost in bureaucratic inefficiency, he felt, but rather be in a position where the elected representative can keep in constant touch with his electors.

Abbotsford to incorporate

Abbotsford village council wants to incorporate as a city.

Council has had a lengthy discussion following Matsqui's bid for amalgamation of Abbotsford, Sumas and Matsqui.

Abbotsford officials conclude amalgamation with the other two members of the MSA area would leave them with a rather large rural area.

Instead, Abbotsford village council would prefer an extension of its borders so it could become a city.

They would need a population of 5,000 to accomplish their objective.

At the present time Abbotsford village comprises 160 acres with a population of 707.

But council says the figures fail to give a true picture of the village. They feel the volume of business is strong enough to warrant taking aim at a city charter.

Sumas council has not yet discussed Matsqui's proposal, but municipal clerk Harold Harnett says it will be on the next agenda.

STRICTER PRACTICE FOR PROMOTERS

Sumas municipal council is cracking down on promoters who obtain permits to build apartment blocks and other costly projects, and then back out of their deals.

In future, such practices will earn the promoters $1,000 penalty. However, the performance bond will be returned if construction is completed.

Aldergrove Girl Competes for C B C Prize

Miss Helen Hagnes of 28904 Fraser Highway, R. R. #2, Aldergrove, leaves for Montreal tomorrow morning by Air Canada on an all-expense paid trip by the CBC to compete for a $1000 prize.

Miss Hagnes has been chosen as one of the two finalists in a Canada-wide competition, after having gone through auditions, preliminaries and semifinals.

She will perform in Montreal, solo, and accompanied by a Symphony Orchestra on Friday night, April 21st.

The winner will be announced over CBC the same evening.

Miss Hagnes will return home Saturday.

This competition was open to all Canadians, both professional and amateur for those under 30 years of age; Helen has just turned 18.

She will also be on a TV performance with the Vancouver Symphony Orchestra, which event will be filmed by the CBC TV on May 11th and 12th.

Helen has also entered the Centennial Scholarship competition, which will be held Monday, April 24th at Vancouver under the auspices of the B. C. Music Festival.

Helen is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ed Hagnes of R. R. #2, Aldergrove.

We feel confident that Helen will bring the $1,000 prize with her back to her native B. C., to add to all the many other honours she has brought to our community in the past.

Two Aldergrove girls brought honors home after participating in the Upper Fraser Valley Music Festival in Chilliwack last week.

Linda Scanlan came in first in 14-year-class vocal, and Valerie Joy Bradford came first in her class, 12-year-vocal.

In the finals, out of 10 girls, the Aldergrove duo was awarded the Ganton Walton shield by the judge.

Both girls were of equal high standard in their respective classes, so the judge did the only fair thing, awarded the shield to both of them to share. The girls will hold the shield for the coming year, as Junior High Voice Champions of the Upper Fraser Valley. Both girls are pupils of Mrs. Jean Sampson of Livingston Rd.

Fire Call

A fire call to Aldergrove Fire Brigade last Monday night brought the firemen out on the Fraser Highway just west of town, where the tires of a semi trailer had caught fire.

The fire was extinguished without any difficulty and no one was hurt. The truck was carrying a load of canned goods, and continued on its way after a new set of tires had been installed.

Cleaner Streets for 'Grove

The request to municipal council from Aldergrove Chamber of Commerce to get a street cleaner to sweep the streets in the town has paid off.

In the future the streets of Aldergrove will be swept once a week it was decided at last weeks council meeting. The previous practice of street cleaning once a month has proven to be inadequate, the superintendent of public works pointed out to the council last week, and council decided to adopt the recommendation made by the superintendent to have the streets swept once a week.

Aldergrove Blooms

Trees were planted in Aldergrove's new planterboxes last week. The trees are commonly known as flowering cherries.

Aldergrove Chamber of Commerce sent a vote of thanks to Jack Nackbar for planting the trees, and to Ernie Bird who donated the soil for the boxes.

At a dedication ceremony, to take place at a later date, a copper plate with the words: Canada Centennial and British Columbia Centennial 1867-1967 and 1866-1966 will be placed on the box in which reeve Poppy and Langley Centennial Committee chairman Mr. Hope will be invited to plant the last tree.

Three more planterboxes will be ordered, it was also decided by C. of C. These will be placed around town where there are no boxes at present, and where store owners are willing to water and otherwise maintain the trees.

Jack Nachbar suggested to the C. of C. meeting that a spray of red and white petunias be planted in the boxes to cover the soil.

The Chamber will also send a letter to Patricia Women's Institute thanking them for placing the benches at the two bus stops in town.

JUBILEE CENTENNIAL PROJECT

Jubilee has a Centennial Project of its own. - The old Jubilee hall is going to be restored after having stood empty for 7-8 years.

In an interview with an elderly gentleman who was himself one of the active builders of the hall about thirty years ago, Bill McCormick of Marsh McCormick Road, the Star was informed that the hall is going to be repaired and modernized as a special Centennial project.

The Jubilee community club which owns the old hall has put on a drive to raise money and volunteer labor for the project, and so far there has been a terrific response to the idea.

A large number of Jubilee citizens have promised their support, and the municipality of Matsqui has offered a yearly grant of $500 to the club.

The municipality has also promised to clear the grounds for a park around the building and make parkingspace for approx. 60 cars.

Bill McCormick, who is the treasurer of the club, says that the project is already underway. The first step will be to replace the roof, which is in a poor shape, and after that the building will be painted.

The young people of the area are delighted of the idea of getting a place where they can meet for dances, sport, and other events.

The Jubilee Community Club will meet again tomorrow night and they would like to see as many, of the persons interested in the project, as possible turn out for the meeting.

New Hospital Districts

Opposition leader Strachan warned last week that the new regional hospital districts will change the governmental system in British Columbia.

Although he favours the districts in principle, Mr. Strachan says the government will use them to evade provincial responsibilities.

Municipal affairs Minister Campbell said the hospital district boundaries were decided following a study of property tax assessments and hospital utilization patterns.

The next step in implementing the districts will be issuing the letter patent for the 27 areas, he said.

Mr. Campbell says the Alberni Clayoquot district on Vancouver Island, and the district in the Skeena area will likely hold the first hospital construction plebiscites.

Local Boxing

by Dennis Ross

Langley warriors staged a raid to Victoria Friday night and came away on the winning end of the battle.
126 lbs Sid Douglas of Langley and Victoria's Bob Scarfe staged the best bout of the night. Both were gore spattered, and both were down once. Scarfe gained the nod, and both received trophies. Localite Don Fraser dubbed a split decision to Islander Doug Andrews after a wild slugging match, and 147 lb. Chester Douglas had to go the limit to eke out a close one over the capital city's Jimmy O'Neil. Tiny terror, 70 lb. Neil Austin received the "most aggressive" trophy after totally routing B.C. 75 lb. Champ Davy Way of the Island, and brother Derek (112 lb.) recently crowned Vancouver Diamond Gloves Champ, staged a great show with ex national champ Harold Handlin (118 lb.) from Prince George. Austin, caught napping in the first round, had to peel himself off the canvas and shake the effects of an educated left hook out of his whiskers. Derek rose and carried the fight from there on, winning the final two rounds handily. Club manager Walt Austin says that he plans to take a group to Alberni in the near future.

Track & Field

Four protegees of the Langley Legion Track and Field program made their presence felt very strongly in the Surrey Centennial Indoor High School Track meet Friday and Saturday at the North Surrey Recreational Centre.
John Anderson, in the senior boys 50 yd. heats ran fourth and was eliminated.
Debbie Brill, last months 15 year old silver medallist hit paydirt again. She reversed last month's loss to Cathy Thomson of Vancouver Olympic Club. This meet saw Miss Brill carting off the gold medal, and Miss Thompson the silver. Debbie's final height was 4' 10 1/2".
In the Senior Girls Class, Langley was represented by veterans Maxine Harris and Marilyn Mascoe. Friday evening, when the dust settled, the two big girls from Langley were tied for first place, having cleared 5'0", and Toni Lindsay, reigning B.C. and Canadian National high jump champion from North Van, was in 3rd. The two elected to battle it out. Both missed 5'1". Both missed 5'0". Both made 4'11". Marilyn missed 5'0" and Maxine made it, claiming the gold medal. A terrific effort by both.
Maxine, who was in indoor running events for the first time of her career pulled off another upset of sorts. In the 50 yds. she was 2nd in her heat, 3rd in the semi, and 4th in the final. In the 50 yd. hurdles she was 2nd in the semi, and collected the silver medal for 2nd in the final. The long jump saw the two pitted against each other. Again extremely closely matched. Miss Mascoe placed 3rd with 16'2", and Miss Harris 2nd with 16'2 1/4". The winner jumped 16'3 1/4".
Coaches Swensson and Ross feel that considering that these events are Provincial Championships, and that 691 athletes competed in them, we are very well represented indeed.

Centennial Athletics

GARDEN NOTES by A.R. Buckley

Trees for the Birds can be ornamental

Fruits of the Lavalle hawthorn provide birds with winter food.

Most birds appreciate hospitality at any season and at certain times of the year it can be the matter of life and death to some. If you love birds (and all gardeners should) give some thought to planting versatile trees that will attract them. You may also have a double motive for you can choose the trees that beautify your home grounds and also provide food for the birds.
For a tree that has fruits in June, I would first suggest the white mulberry (Morus alba) or the hardier Tartarian mulberry (Morus alba 'Tatarica'). Although its short fruiting season detracts from its ornamental value it is a shapely medium-sized tree with peculiar lobed dark-green leaves. When in fruit it is a tremendous attraction to all kinds of birds. Bird watchers in Massachusetts have observed 59 species feeding on these trees in June. In the Arboretum of the Plant Research Institute the fruits are quickly devoured by robins. The native red mulberry (Morus rubra) has the same attraction but it is not quite as hardy.
Two excellent wild cherries that bear fruits in summer are the European bird cherry (Prunus padus) and the choke cherry (Prunus virginiana). Both provide abundant fruits and are quite ornamental in flower and leaf.
For added beauty plant the Shubert choke cherry (Prunus virginiana 'Shubert'); this shapely small tree has reddish leaves all summer long and provides fruits in July as well.
The shadbushes and juneberries (Amelanchier spp.) are so attractive to birds, particularly orioles and waxwings, that their fruits seldom remain on the trees for more than a few days after ripening. They are also good trees to plant for early spring flowers and vivid autumn colors of the leaves.
Fruits for autumn fare are, of course, more abundant, but in this category I will include only those that are usually eaten in the fall and not left for winter use. These are usually soft berries and those that drop quickly. The black cherry (Prunus serotina) and the pin cherry (Prunus pensylvanica) produce their fruits a little later than the European bird cherry and the choke cherry. These trees have beautiful summer blooms and in early autumn their attractive fruits provide food for a large number of bird species.
The downy hawthorn (Crataegus mollis) is a very beautiful tree in flower as well as in fruit; it is of medium size and has a shapely rounded form. This tree is one of the best for the small garden, and unlike the other hawthorns it is not so subject to ravages of the leaf miner.
Of the trees for winter food supply, the gray birch (Betula populifolia) is one of the most attractive. It is often sold as the clump birch in eastern Canada because of its habit of producing two or three main trunks. It is the seeds in the catkins of this particular tree and the other birches such as the yellow birch (Betula lutea) and the river birch (Betula nigra), that provide the winter food.
Even if we discount its value in providing winter fare for birds the best medium-sized ornamental tree for planting around homes in most of Canada is the Siberian crab apple (Malus baccata). It so happens, however, that its fruits, which persist nearly all winter, are rated by the bird population as the best of any tree in our Arboretum. This tree will provide you with abundant fragrant white flowers in May, soft green leaves all summer, vivid crimson and gold fall foliage colors and these attractive, small persistent gold and crimson fruits nearly all winter.
For winter, the European mountain ash (Sorbus aucuparia) is also extremely popular, particularly with the cedar waxwings. There are many cultivars of this species with various shapes and forms. For a home with limited space I would suggest the fastigiate form (Sorbus aucuparia 'Fastigiata'), which fruits well but has a narrow columnar shape taking less than 36 sq. feet of area at maturity. The hackberry (Cedtis occidentalis) is another favourite with the birds, attracting as many as twenty species in milder climates. One of the most showy hawthorns in the Arboretum right now is Lavalle's hawthorn (Crataegus lavallei) with orange scarlet fruits that brighten the surrounding area. These fruits persist long into the winter.
For early spring feeding birds often take fruits that ripened the previous summer or fall. These are 'last resort' fruits, which the birds passed by earlier in favour of more palatable kinds. In spring, when nothing else prevails, these neglected fruits suddenly seem as delicious as red elderberries in June.
Although this short article deals only with trees, it should be pointed out that trees alone, however, bountiful in fruit, will not attract birds. Adequate shelter and cover is needed by the lavish use of shrubs. Choose thickset shrubs, such as red elderberry, peking cottoneaster, black haw, nannyberry and highbush cranberry, which themselves produce berries. In place of the usual spreading junipers for foundation planting choose fruiting kinds such as the Grey Owl juniper (Juniperus virginiana 'Grey Owl') For an upright evergreen use Canaert's juniper (Juniperus virginiana 'Canaertii'). These will provide shelter, a place of refuge in summer and winter alike, and they will produce abundant fruits for both summer and winter appetites.

SOCCER SCORES

Aldergrove's 7th division soccer team lost in the semi final against Ocean Park eleven, in a game played on April 8th in Crescent Beach.
Ocean Park won 3:1 in overtime after the regular game ended in a 1:1 tie. Harry Steensma was the scorer for Aldergrove.

EMPLOYMENT UP SLOWLY

Expansion of business activity continued throughout the month of March with strong support from the construction and manufacturing industries, states Ross Pennington, Manager of the New Westminster Canada Manpower Centre.
Early resumption of agricultural activity was encouraged by favourable weather conditions with heavy demands for experienced dairy farm-hands.
General gains in construction activity, particularly in house and apartment construction, provided employment for an increasing number of building tradesmen. Major construction projects in the interior of the province absorbed many building tradesmen to build up their summer work force.
Shortages developed in a number of skilled construction trades. In particularly scarce supply were house-framing carpenters gas fitters, dry-wall applicators and tapers.
The seasonal upswing increased activity in the technical and professional categories. Although an increased number of draftmen became available as a result of staff reductions in several larger engineering firms they were readily absorbed into the labour market. Openings for administrative occupations remained limited.
Snows hampered logging activities at higher levels but larger logging companies operated with full crews. Local log-sorting firms were very busy and there was a steady demand for experienced boommen.
Local plywood plants reported few hirings but anticipated increased need in the immediate months ahead. Inventories were high at most local plants but no reduction in output was expected. Most sawmills were in full production and a fair amount of hiring occurred.
Papermills hired additional staff in preparation for increasing summer demands. Shingle mills operated at near capacity levels. Limited demands were received from a variety of manufacturing employers for female help. Generally, these demands were for packers and unskilled plant labour.
Catering occupations were surplus to employers demands. Rest homes and hospitals showed limited activity and staff turnover was minimal.
Speciality sales people, including ladies ready-to-wear and family sales-persons were in demand by local retail outlets. General sales clerks remained surplus. Automotive parts salespersons were in short supply for automotive dealers demands. A general increase for clerical help was noted.
All regular longshore gangs were steadily employed at the port of New Westminster with considerable work for casual workers developing. Lumber, plywood, metal and fertilizers were the main cargoes loaded.

SUMAS

Construction in Sumas in the first quarter of 1967 shows an increase of 300% over the same period last year; from $165,000 in 1966 to $513,000.00 this year.
The Sumas financial statement for 1966 showed an excess of revenue over expenditures amounting to more than $45,000.
Education this year will cost Sumas ratepayers about $320,000 but reeve Ken Thompson says he thinks Sumas can hold the general mill rate at 15.4 mills, the same as last year.

EDITORIAL

HOME PAPER READ THROUGH

from The Printed Word

One of the drawbacks of daily papers, wrote a weekly editor back in 1927, was that they were getting to be too cumbersome.
Some of them, he said, contained such a large amount of reading matter and advertising that much of it was never read. It may be wondered what he would think of papers forty years later.
Some of the weeklies have grown fatter too and the weekend issue of the New York Times is so big that small boys in New York have been known to make a little pocket money by accepting tips for carting the Sunday Times home for the feebler residents of Manhattan.
But the point that the editor was leading up to is probably still true: that the weekly community paper is likely to be read by all the members of the family right through.

No Dunces need Apply

An assistant professor of journalism in the United States has discovered a belief that a managing editor must have a college education with a "major" in journalism.
The fact is that a managing editor should be well educated, whether or not he has certificates showing that he has graduated from a school of journalism or the equivalent. There have been in the past many great editors who did not attend college.

REMEMBER THE CHEQUE AND CHECK-UP

72,000 Canadians are expected to undergo treatment for cancer this year. This growing figure can only remind us of the importance of funds available to fight this dreadful and killing disease.
The annual appeal for funds started off this month, using the slogan "Fight Cancer With a Check-up And a Cheque".
This year the campaign will be conducted by appeals through the mail, and it will be followed up by door-to-door calls.
Should the caller miss you, send your donation to the local cancer society chairman, Mr. Jack McKinnon, 6887 - 200 St., R.R. #7, Langley.
When you neighbour calls on you to donate towards this campaign, give generously, remembering that the money you give will go to provide cancer patients with the so very important pain-killing drugs, rehabilitation services and research, and perhaps also bear in mind that you could possibly be one of those 72,000 Canadians.
April is designated as Conquer Cancer Month. Give generously.

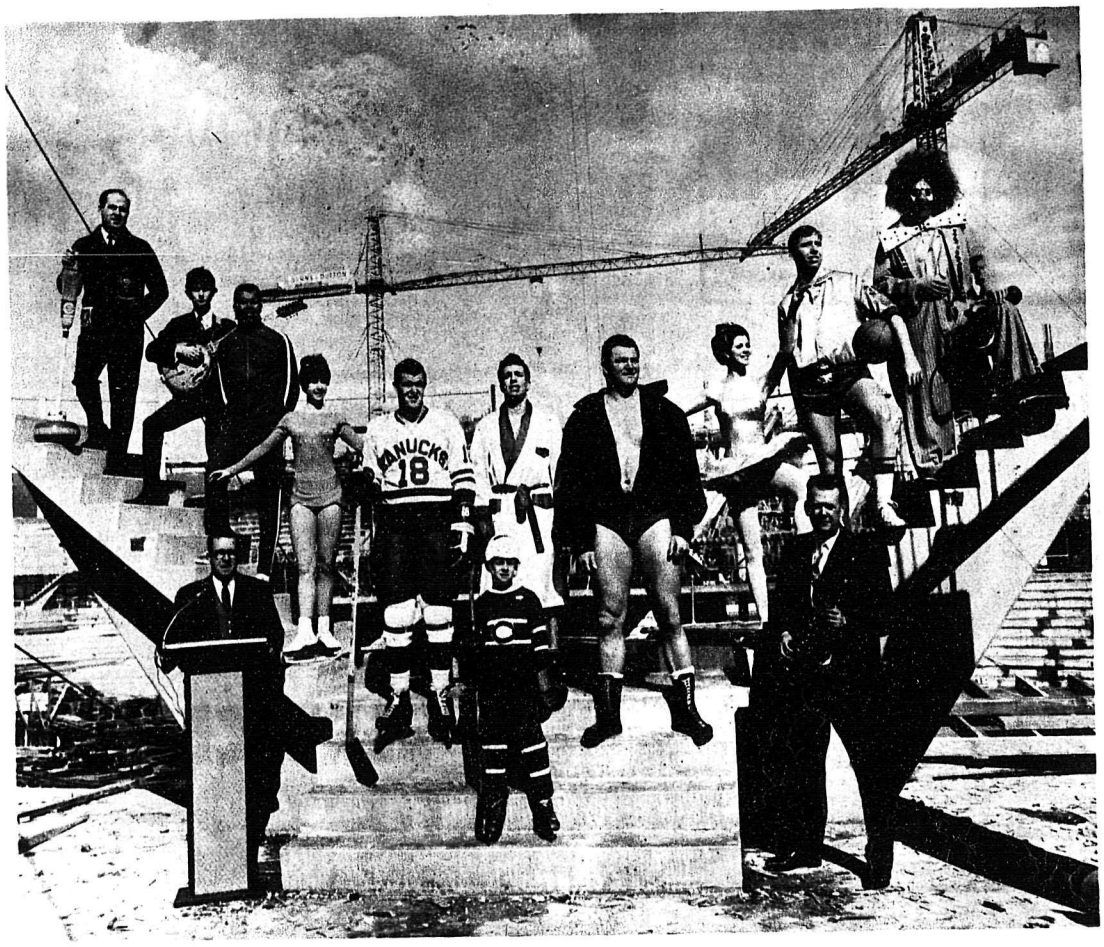
Towering Douglas firs from British Columbia protrude from the roof of the Western Provinces' Pavilion at EXPO 67. The 180-foot high "Man in the Community Pavilion", one of the five theme pavilions illustrating "Man and his World", was built of Douglas Fir beams from B.C.



Representatives of some of the major attractions which will appear at the P.N.E.'s new 15,004 seat Exhibition and Sports Building are framed against the steelwork and masonry now rising rapidly above the adjacent buildings at Exhibition Park as workmen race against time to have this giant, $6 million facility ready for the official opening scheduled for no later than early 1968.

Company replaces Books after Fire

Shortly after the T. Brennan home of 22039 0 Avenue, Langley, was completely destroyed in a devastating fire early this year, Bob Edge, the local representative for Field Enterprises Educational Corp. (World Book and Child Craft of Canada), sent a note to his company's head office in Chicago, explaining the hard fate of the stricken Brennan family. Shortly before the fire levelled the Brennan home with the ground, and destroyed every possession of the Brennan's, Bob had sold the family a complete set of World Book Encyclopedia and Dictionary.

Recently, Bob received a return letter from Chicago, expressing the sympathy with the Brennan's and stating in part: "As you know the educational materials are not insured after they leave our premises as they are ordinarily covered by the household property insurance carried by the customer. However, we try to be understanding of our customers needs and do what we can to be of help." The letter, which was signed by Jerry M. Zelenka, manager of the Customer Service Division, went on to say that after special consideration the company had decided to present the Brennan's with a replacement set of Encyclopedia and Dictionary completely free of charge. Due to this generous gesture of the renowned educational company the Brennan family will still be able to have an excellent reference library when they get their new home build.

fashion news BY NANCY GAYLORD

FASHION CONSULTANT TO THE 160 SINGER CENTERS IN CANADA.

Pitch a tent in chiffon, crepe or drapery wool. NOT for dancing. Freely swinging from the shoulders with not a hint of body shaping, then dropping to a rippling bias hem. Anyone can wear it, no matter what shape you're "really" in. Truly a "Quickie" to sew, and as a bonus there are no fitting problems here. Sew brilliant in jade chiffon or dainty in pale apple crepe. Touch a little glitter to throat or hemline.

Sewing chiffon need not be difficult. Cut out on a flat, non-shiny surface with very sharp shears. Make narrow French seams and bias bindings instead of facings. Omit interfacing. To avoid puckering, stitch over tissue paper, which can be ripped away afterwards. Tie thread ends instead of backstitching.

Where there's a shirt, there's a tie . . . long and skinny, fat and dotted, flowered or paisleyed. Wear with shirts sporting long pointed button-down collars and wide, wide cuffs, in spring prints or luminous neon stripes, in voiles and hopsack, silks and perma-press blends.

THE RULE OF THREE. Fabric costs $10? Then with careful style choice and good dressmaking, you can create a dress worth $30. One-third of a garment's value lies in the fabric; one-third in the style and fashion-rightness for you; one-third in the workmanship. Sewing makes dollars and sense!

Zippers zoom in 'fly-front' style on pants, slashing diagonally across ski-jackets and boldly bared on raincoats. Zippers are a status symbol in Paris where really good skirts have two short zippers instead of the usual long one. Paris puts zippers in unusual places: off centre if there are no centre seams. Always, always, they are stitched in by hand with tiny picking stitches.

CBC REPORTER TO COVER CHINA AND VIETNAM

Veteran newsman-author William Stevenson, an expert on the Far East, has been assigned to cover fast-moving events in mainland China and Vietnem for CBC television and radio news.

Stevenson has been keenly interested in the Far East since 1950 when the Toronto Daily Star assigned him to Korea to report the conflict there.

Working out of Hong-Kong, he now will file exclusive, first-hand reports of major happenings in China and Vietnam for CBC.

Stevenson's wide experience makes him an ideal choice for the post. Besides covering the Korean War for the Star, he was CBC Far East correspondent (based in Hong-Kong) from 1954 to 1959 and is author of several books about Southeast Asia. He's also familiar with Vietnam, having reported the Geneva Conference on Indo-China in 1954.

He has made several trips through mainland China and North Vietnam.

Stevenson has also worked for the Globe and Mail in Africa, for the London Economist in Indonesia, and for Indepentent Television Newsfilm in London, England.

He returned to Toronto from Malaysia last November to take a post of editor with the weekly CBC-TV series Newsmagazine.

About returning to the Far East so soon, he says:"The situation there is so interesting now that it's too hard- from a professional point of view-to resist going back".

Stevenson is author of a work entitled China and Southeast Asia and of a summary of the Peking regime, The Yellow Wind, which he recently revisied for reissue. His latest novel, Flutes of Zanzibar, will be published this spring.

Stevenson was born in London, England in June of 1924 and first came to Canada to train as a naval pilot in 1942. He is married and has four children-Three born in Canada and one in Hong-Kong.

Herb Albert and the Tijuana Brass

Herb Alpert and the Tijuana Brass, whose distinctive sound has made them a major musical phenomenon of the '60's, will star in a full hour all musical special in color Tuesday, April 25 from 9 - 10 pm. on Channel 12.

The special, on tape and film, will include a performance by the Brass of their neoclassic arrangements and a reprise of their record hits from a variety of locations around Southern California and Mexico. They will also feature some new TJB arrangements.

Based on the premise that the whimsical "TJB sound" - a blend of south-of-the-border flavor with New Orleans overtones and a dash of Chicago - knows no geographical limits in either music or audience, the program will project the Brass against such backgrounds as a bull ring in Tijuana, Mexico; Disneyland; a recording studio; the Pacific shore and a football field.

The special is produced by Gary Smith and Dwight Hemion. Script is by Frank Peppiatt and John Aylesworth. Nick Castle is the choreographer.

Gold on our Kitchen Table

Carle Hessay took me prospecting over the weekend and we brought home a pretty good haul from the banks of the Fraser River not far from Greenhorn Farm.

Hold on a minute!

Not to start a gold rush, please! Carle and I did plenty of shovelling and sweating to get that gold. We put a good two yards of rock, sand and gravel down the sluice box, and carried hundreds of gallons of water. From before noon Saturday up to two o'clock Sunday afternoon we slugged hard, taking time out only for food and sleep. Then we brought the concentrate home to Greenhorn Farm so Nora and the girls could watch the final panning right over the kitchen table. It was fascinating. By nine o'clock there was a little pile of gold which, together with the dust which had clung to the sluice box blanket, weighed more than an ounce and was worth $41.

Now the twins, Kathy, and Nora all want to take a fling at prospecting. They say it's a lot better hobby than the hunting and fishing I engage in, at an average cost of $50 per bird or fish - at a conservative estimate.

So I'm having a rocker and sluice box made. Any tinsmith can do it. It is really a trough made with aluminum, some screening and an old wooden blanket. I'll let you know the total cost of the outfit when I get the bill, in the event you decide to take it up as a hobby for fun or profit.

As for us, we are hooked! How many farmers have a gold pile on their kitchen table? It looks lovely beside the parsnips - and helps to butter them.

Stand aside, Fort Knox - here comes Greenhorn Farm!

PONOKA POT ROAST

PONOKA POT ROAST - A joy for any budget balancing homemaker, this hearty dish is flavour enriched by browning the meat in herb and garlic liquid dressing, and then is gently simmered in a tenderizing broth of the dressing, lemon juice and water.

A Thrifty and Nifty Dish

Pot roasts are the joy of any budget-balancing homemaker. They offer fine eating at reasonable price. While they need more tender loving care than a regular oven roast, the pampering pays off in flavour dividends.

This recipe for Ponoka Pot Roast browns a three to four pound pot roast in flavour-rich herb and garlic liquid dressing and then simmers it slowly in a mild marinading sauce of the dressing, lemon juice and water.

We suggest thickening the gravy by addition of sour cream - a European trick which is rapidly gaining favour in Canadian kitchens.

Ponoka Pot Roast (Serves 4 - 6)
3 to 4 pound pot roast
1 cup (8 oz. bottle) Herb & Garlic Liquid Dressing (Kraft)
3 cups water
1 tablespoon grated lemon rind
2 tablespoons lemon juice
1 cup coarsely chopped onions
2 medium green peppers, coarsely chopped
4 medium parsnips (cut diagonally in large pieces)
Salt - Pepper
1 cup commercial sour cream

Brown meat slowly in 1/4 cup liquid dressing. Add remaining dressing, water, lemon rind, salt pepper and lemon juice, cover and cook slowly for 2 1/2 hours, adding more water if necessary.

When liquid is reduced to approximately 1 1/2 cups and meat is tender, add onions and parsnip. Cook for 15 minutes adding green pepper in last five minutes. Stir in sour cream to make gravy.

Your MODERN Men are Good Men to Know

When you drive along Fraser Way and come to Modern Building Supplies, you will see a sign hanging over the big building, reading Allont. You may have asked yourself what that sign means. The manager, Doug Hynd explains it this way. Being a member of Allont gives us the buying power of 200 dealers from Newfoundland to Port Alberni. These 200 individual dealers do a combined business of $ 25, 000, 000. 00 a year. A buying power of that quantity means a big saving, and this is passed on to you, the Allont customer. Allont also stands for quality, they deal only with the best. And the best is what you will find at Modern Building Supply, where the best storing facilities are provided as well. In November of 1966, after seven years in the location on South Fraserway, Modern enlarged their premis es and they have now 8, 500 sq. ft. of warehouse space, which in turn means that material subtle to weather, such as for example plywood is stored in large quantities and varieties, under roof. New offices were also built, these being designed in such a way as to give the customers a good picture of all the different applications of for instance panelling on the modern market. The showroom was enlarged to twice the original size, and here you can find anything in arborite, paint and screendoors to smaller items like doorknobs and hinges displayed. Outside in the two-acre yard, every variety in framing- and siding materials are stored, easily accessible for customers.

Doug Hynd, the manager, has twenty years of building supply business behind him. When he started as manager for Modern Building Supplies in 1959, he had been working for ten years in wholesale, and two years in retail. Doug has nine highly qualified men working with him in the shop, and four truckdrivers to take care of long- as well as short distance hauling.

Abe Conrad is store manager, and Ed Olson take care of the Credit Department, and for Retail Sales there are Alvin Toews, Abe Barkman and Art Matschke. Rod Fast and Rick Brandsma are in charge of shipping; and perhaps the most important of all is the man the handles the annual payroll of $40, 000, bookkeeper Ben Klassen. All the men live in the Matsqui district, and they all are anxious to serve you when you deal with Modern Building Supplies, and they can guarantee you satisfaction for they know that they handle only the best.

A very recent addition to Doug Hynds sales staff is Walter Finlay. Pictures and story of the rest of the staff will appear in next issue.
