Community Halls Or White Elephants?

"What we are going to do about the West Langley community hall, is basically going to set a precedent for the whole district," Alderman Bill Blair told Langley district council Monday morning.

The West Langley Hall Association recently applied for monetary assistance from the local government.

"And we may be requested (from other sources) to put a plebiscite before the people in December to the effect of whether the district needs a larger arena," Blair added.

Alderman Walter Jensen, a resident of West Langley, was in favor of financial help being extended to the community hall association which he termed "a very active group."

"But it is very hard for the West Langley group to raise a big sum of money," he said.

Welfare Climbs

No Work Or No Will?

The number of people on welfare in Langley district rose to a high of 9.02 percent during June, according to welfare committee chairman, Ald. Joseph Breier. This figure compares to 8.2 percent last month and 6.49 percent in June 1969.

Strikes and lockouts were cited as contributing factors in report made to Langley municipal council Monday.

The number of unemployables rose by 30 people last month, the report stated.

"So many are single people, I guess there just isn't employment around, or people don't want to work," Breier said.

Changes Made In Utility Regulations

Recommendations made by the Aldergrove utility committee regarding water and sewage connection and service fees were approved last week by Langley district council.

The connection fees for the water system were increased under the new ruling i each occupant in any building will be required to pay the full uses charge. Alderman Joe Breier stated that the district was losing revenue in the amount of $2,800.00 a year because of duplexes, fourplexes and even sixplexes now only sharing the cost of single service hook ups.

A petition from residents of the Jantzen subdivision, located northeast of 32nd Ave. and 268th Street, for permission to connect to the Aldergrove water system was turned down by council. "It is not possible at this time," said Breier.

"But is this the proper way to deal with the progress of the community?" asked Mayor Bill Poppy.

Clerk Derek Doubleday, however, assured the chief magistrate that it wasn't possible at the present time to change the status of the subdivision, located outside the community plan designated area. "In order to change the area from its present one acre minimum status, it would require changes in the regional plan, the community plan and the various utility areas," Doubleday said.

"Well, I just thought I would bring this up," said the mayor, "as I feel this is an important question."

Last Chance

It was further decided to raise the sewer system connection fee from $120.00 to $150.00 as a study showed that many other districts charged a similar amount.

Property owners not yet connected to the system, were given until August 31st to connect and only pay $120.00. After that date they will have to pay $150.00.

"This is the last warning," Poppy said.

Andy Horujko rests outside Speedie's Service in Aldergrove before continuing on his long journey. John Speedie's tourist information sign shows that he has walked 2439 miles so far, from Anchorage, Alaska.

Speedzoning Referred

A request from the Aldergrove chamber of commerce for an extended 30 mile per hour speed zone on the Fraser Highway in the eastern end of town, was referred to R.C.M.P.

In a letter from Staff Sgt. Wally Maguire, Langley district council was informed that this proposal was quite feasible, but since the highway is a Provincial artery, the decision would have to come from Victoria.

Council decided to send copies of the two letters to the provincial government's highways department.

Andy's Two Ambitions

One Coming Up - Another To Go

by Rudy Langmann

I met an ambitious man last Thursday. 48 year-old, Andy Horujko from Chase, Michigan, on his way from Anchorage to Tierra del Fuego stopped at Speedies Corner in Aldergrove for a chat.

So far Andy has barely scratched the surface of the 12,000 mile trip from Alaska to the southernmost tip of South America but already he's in his seventh pair of boots. "I reckon these will last me to about Seattle," Andy said.

"Why am I doing it?" he said, "Well, everybody got to be superior in some way or another... no matter how foolish it may seem." Well, I'll buy that.

"But it is also a protest against pollution," said Andy, who is a mechanical engineer. "Air pollution is by far the most serious threat to mankind and 65 to 75 per cent of this is caused by automobiles burning fossil fuel." Andy hasn't been driving a car himself for years.

He flew from Michigan to Anchorage and started his long trek March 31st.

When will he be at the end of his journey? "About ten months from today, as I am averaging 35 miles a day," he said. "And I figure the whole thing is going to cost me in the neighborhood of $5,000.00."

Andy doesn't miss for company on the way. All the time some hitch-hiker or wanderer falls in with him. "I meet some interesting young college graduates," he said. "They all got different stories to tell."

Now back in the U.S., he will follow the coastal route through Washington, Oregon and California to Spanish-speaking Mexico. He's not too bad at that language himself, he told me. And I suppose he will be able to speak it fluently next year.

What is Andy going to do once this adventure is completed?

"I got it all planned," he said. "Next I will fulfill my second life ambition. I am going to go to Denmark or Sweden and find myself a wife. But she has got to be a well educated beautiful blonde."

And Andy will do it. Even if he has to walk all the way.

Disease Can Kill Here Too

Langley district council Monday decided to follow in the footsteps of Langley city council by making application to the provincial government for a local meat inspection officer.

Alderman Bill Blair expressed concern for a couple of smaller local slaughter houses who might not be able to afford the added cost of meat inspection. "We don't know what the initial capital investment for these enterprises would be," he said. And he added that at the present time possibly only one local slaughter house could afford the expense.

Council discussed the possibility of compulsory meat inspection to be initiated at the April 1, 1971 trades licence renewal deadline. Under this scheme all animals killed and offered for sale, or handled by a slaughter house or meat packing plant would be subject to provincial inspection. A slaughter house could either employ a full time inspector or limit their killings to certain days of the week when they would be visited by an inspector and subsequently assessed a certain amount according to the number of animals killed.

Inspection was recently proposed by the medical director for the Fraser Valley Health Unit, Dr. James Robinson, and accepted by Langley city council.

Dr. Robinson had issued a public warning to the effect that uninspected and possibly diseased meat was being sold and eaten in Langley. The medical director was especially concerned about recent cases of salmonella in the district. And even handlers of diseased animals can be carriers for a long time, council was told. Surrey has recently been designated a provincial meat inspection area, and Alderman Joe Breier commented, "If an animal can kill a person in Surrey, it can do the same here."

Council decided to invite Dr. Hays, veterinary inspector, and Dr. Robinson to address it's next meeting on July 27th.

Nobody Eaten - Yet

The construction of the Vancouver Game Farm, which is scheduled to open some time in August on Bellingham Highway, just south of the freeway 401 intersection, is going ahead according to plans.

The fences in the new Aldergrove Zoo are being put up at the present time, a rhinoceros is waiting in Seattle, and other future residents are temporarily housed in several other locations throughout the country.

The owners of the Zoo, Pat Hines and Klaus Mueller have obtained a licence from the Fish and Game Branch and Monday morning Langley district council gave the venture their official blessing.

Despite warnings issued to nosy sidewalk superintendents, we haven't heard of any trespassers who have been eaten - so far.

Cut and Insert

by The Newsmonger

I might as well come right out and say it. If you're interested at all you'll find out anyhow, and then it's nicer that I've already conceded that I just wasn't good enough.

No, I wasn't among the chosen few who were allowed into the latest edition of Who's Who in British Columbia.

There, I've said it.

And I say it, like Tiny Tim, in a shrill falcetto voice while I go about dancing through the tulips. Just like nothing happened. Fa-lal-la-la-la.....

After all, there are quite a few who didn't make it. Neither the Mad Monk nor our local member of parliament. Yes, and many more aren't there. Matter of fact, I guess we are more outside than in.

Geoffrey Edgelow's 681 chosen are not the silent minority. They are the noisy minority. Sawbones, shysters, shepherds and senators and other prima donnas. What, in the name of nob hill, would I do in that company?

After I, with eager hands, had opened the book under "N" and seen that once more Victoria had missed the boat I leafed through the 224 pages and saw that very few writers, women or people from the Fraser Valley were listed. And the book is supposed to contain all "well-known" British Columbians. And then they don't even know me. Ridiculous.

And I think that just a few lines about me in Edgelow's publication would have enhanced it tremendously. In a simple and modest way my life's achievements could have been presented to the gaping public. It would have dressed it up considerably. But, anyway, here they are, so you can cut them out and paste them in between Dr. Raymond Cyril Newby from Victoria and the billiard playing Unitarian Minister Dale Chas. Newsum who teaches sales techniques at business seminars in his spare time.

This is where you insert the following:

Newmonger, Nutty, not born yesterday, B.S., Phib., D. Rib. Sc., Cand. Pot., R.B.F.L. (Rejected by Foreign Legion), L.A.M., P.O.O.N. (Longtime Associate Member, Party of Ornery Newsreporters) Schooling: Successfully completed Dick and Jane, with further post graduate study in grade three old math.

Travels: Extensive, to Bellingham (Dec. 21, 1959), Sumas and Pt. Roberts (The Breakers) for intellectual ambrosia. Several ego trips and journeys with the Mad Monk.

Honourary titles: Director "Who's Who in the Lower Fraser Valley" (to be published soon - maybe) Contributors please note: Send profile sheet (not exceeding 1000 words) accompanied by certified cheque or money order in the amount of $25.00, to the Newsmonger, care of The Star, Aldergrove, B.C. But hurry. We close for entries as soon as we figure we've milked the market dry.

Residence: See Summer abode.

Summer Abode: See above.

Recreation: Needling of windbags, blowing minds.....

Then, and not until then, is your $40.00 copy of Geoffrey's book complete.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Feeling Was Against

Editor, The Star, Dear Sir,

Please find enclosed a copy of the letter giving the results of the Court cases involving the evictions of MacBrides and Ericksons from Smith Trailer Park.

We wish to express our deep thanks for your help and support during the turmoil of the past leading to these cases.

It did much for all involved to think there was someone who would listen to us, investigate our statements, and then print the information when we felt the general feeling was against us.

This gave us the feeling that the lowly individual trying to fight for what he feels is right can still be heard.

A further addition to this story has been made in that it has been learned that on Monday of this week Mr. E. Smith applied at Provincial Court, Cloverdale for proper affidavits of eviction to be served on R. Breed and R. McLeod. It is felt that these will probably be presented to the families around the first of August.

It has also been brought to our attention by letter from B. Komms, former tenants, and supporters, of the evictees, that on the twenty-sixth of June, when driver B. Hadcock of Art Bell Towing was approached by the owners of the Park; who told him the trailer couldn't be moved until the hydro bill of twenty-two dollars was paid. This had already been paid by Komms directly to B.C. Hydro, they had their paid statement with them.

Many thanks again for your articles in your paper.

Yours truly,

Mrs. Dawn Yerex, Secretary
Langley & District MHOA

SMILE

"Alex," the caller ventured, "is that your number?"

"Ehyah, 'tis."

"Wal, aintcha goin' to answer it, for gossakes?"

"William," said the other, looking up, "I'm busy and I had that durn thing in for my convenience!"

Where Is Red Cross?

Editor, The Star, Dear Sir,

I enclose an open letter to Mark Rose. It refers to an item on Page 3 in the Wed. July 8 morning paper, "The Province".

I am in Prince Rupert as my husband is ill and in hospital. Perhaps there is a way to stop man's torture of his fellows. I get so angry when I read of these things, but maybe if enough of us did that we'd get off our passive behinds and insist on our government doing something.

Dear Mr. Rose:

In this Wednesday, July 8th, "Province" on page 3 under the heading Monsoon's Slow War but Prison Storm Rages, are reports that made me want to vomit. Eye witness reports of brutal, inhuman treatment to political prisoners in South Vietnam National Correction Centre, 60 miles south of the Mekong River. Is there nothing we Canadians can do to help stop this torture of our fellow human beings? Where is the Red Cross? The Americans (some want it whitewashed for fear their own men will receive the same treatment), why not stop it because it is against all the decency should be reason enough, God knows.

Respectfully,

Mrs. Frances Evanoff,
Jubilee

Applicant Told - Buy Your Way In

Langley Municipal Council voted Monday to protect two local businessmen by refusing to grant a trades license to a man who intended to start a garbage collecting business in the district.

Alderman Bill Blair told the applicant, Mr. MacKenzie, that two people were currently engaged in the business in the two Langleys, and these two had quite an investment to protect. "Do you want to take business from these men, or do you intend to solicit new customers?" Blair asked. MacKenzie was of the opinion that there would be enough business for everybody since "only four trucks were picking up in the district," and he only wanted to make a living too.

"I understand that this is not a very lucrative business at the present anyhow," said Walter Jensen, and Art Woolley advised MacKenzie to keep working at his present job, "and if one of the present operators should decide at one time or another to sell out, then you can always buy your way in," he added.

Caretaker Hired

A new caretaker has been hired by Langley District Council for Williams Park.

John Liban, 52, of Surrey was chosen for the job from a total of 45 applicants, and will commence work tomorrow. He will be residing at the park.

Mrs. Liban is a registered nurse who is not working. "This will be very handy in the park." some council members felt.

Matsqui Get Temporary Loan For Sewer

Bids will be called in the beginning of August for the installation of Matsqui's new water and sewer system. Municipal council Thursday, managed to obtain temporary financing from the Bank of Nova Scotia for the sum of one million dollars. Interest rates to be charged by the the bank are prime rate plus one half per cent, equalling nine per cent.

Mayor Douglas Taylor and the members of the treasuries staff of the Municipality have been chasing financing for several months now, in order to have the sewer installed in the community's two residential areas, Matsqui and Mill Lake.

The thirty days quashing period has already begun, after that council is free to call for tenders to the system installation. Mayor Taylor predicts that apartment dwelling in Clearbrook will boom once the system is finally installed. It will also take care of domestic and industrial effluent on its Mill Lake extention.

One New School Needed A Year

One new 15 - 17 room school will be needed every year from now on, according to Langley schoolboard secretary-treasurer Vern Mercer Langley District Council was told Monday.

"The current population growth trends indicate the absolute need for these added facilities," acting mayor Ralph Barichello told council.

At Douglas College

Operating Budget Not Affected

"Despite provincial government decision to provide only one third of the funds expected by Douglas College for building needs, the College will provide facilites for students from its seven school districts," said J.V. Smedley, Council chairman of Douglas College, last week.

"The government decision affected only the planned leasing arrangements," said Smedley. "Operating budget has not been curtailed. Consequently, the full complement of faculty, all courses, library facilities and other student services will be available."

"After several years of planning and seven months of close consultation, the government decision came as a shock to the College Council," he said. "It had been entrusted with the responsibility for making post-secondary and career education available to students with the economy and opportunity close to home campuses afford. This purpose will be realized.

"At a meeting of the College Council on Thursday of last week, several plans were advanced to ensure adequate accommodation for the required student services. A sub-committee comprising administrative and faculty members of the College was made responsible for assessing the various proposals and reporting back to Council at an early date.

"The feasibility study and survey from the seven school districts indicates a projected annual enrolment of ten thousand students within a decade.

"While current accommodation arrangements for the opening of the College are being revised, the planning for permanent sites continues," Smedley concluded.

Matsqui Presents Resolution On Preservation Of Farm Land

Resolutions calling for the preservation of Agricultural land in British Columbia is to be presented for approval to the U.B.C.M. Convention in Penticton in September.

The resolution by Matsqui council also provides a method of obtaining that goal in asking their aldermen for approval of the plan last Thursday, Mayor Doug Taylor explained that funds to enable the purchase of development rights should come from profits made on property development.

He added that landowners are making money every time property is rezoned; uban, commercial or industrial, from agricultural.

His plan calls for a provincial government body to assess the potential value of present agricultural land, that value will be paid out to the farmers in exchange for development rights, thus insuring the preservation of farm land.

The Municipal delegation from Matsqui at the Convention in September 16th to 18th will ask the Agriculture committee of U.B.C.M. to study the proposal and a policy embodying developing rights be forwarded to Victoria.

Library To Move ?

Alderman Ralph Barichello told Langley district council, Monday, that negotiations were underway with the schoolboard to move the Aldergrove library to facilities at the Aldergrove high school.

"I think we can give the local citizens as good or better facilities if the library was incorporated with the school," the acting mayor said.

There was some concern with this location from various council members.

"I don't think we should worry about this," Alderman Joe Breier said, "people do drive cars, and besides this is where the future residential area of Aldergrove is going to be."

Council has been looking for new library facilities because of recent rent increases and Barichello said, "the rent is apparently going to be increased with regular intervals."

Cool, Elegant, Fresh Blueberries

Beautiful fresh blueberries have travelled far and wide since Indian women dried them for seasoning in soups and with meats. Rated as now one of America's favorite fruits, you'll find them stimulating dawn to dusk. Spoon them out for breakfast as a change of pace. They love to go to lunch in salads and fruit cups. Fresh blueberries take over the oven in cobblers, tarts, pies and cakes. Blueberry nibblers enjoy them any hour of the day.

Here's a quickie pie with large and luscious blueberries. It's also bound for cheers if you elect to use raspberries or honey sweet blackberries as a switch from blueberries. Try it all three ways!

Looking for an easy summer menu? Fill tomatoes with chicken salad. Pass soft rolls. Then come generous wedges of the pie.

Fresh BLUEBERRY Cheese Pie

1 packaged 9-inch pastry shell; 1 pint fresh blueberries (fresh raspberries or blackberries may be substituted, as desired; sugar; 1 package (8 ounces) cream cheese, softened; 1 cup milk; 1 package (3¾ ounces) instant vanilla pudding mix; ¼ teaspoon grated lemon rind; 2 teaspoons fresh lemon juice.

Bake pie shell according to directions on package; cool. Reserve two-third cup blueberries. Sweeten remaining blueberries to taste; spread evenly over bottom of pastry shell. Beat cream cheese until smooth and fluffy; gradually mix in milk. Add pudding mix, lemon rind and juice. Mix to blend thoroughly (about 2 minutes). Spread over blueberries in pastry shell. Chill one hour. Before serving, arrange reserved blueberries over surface of pie. Makes one 9-inch pie.

Do You Think You Are Loosing Your Mind? - It May Be Something You Didn't Eat

by M.L.Chazottes

"Do words move when you read? Does your face get bigger when you look in the mirror? Do you hear your name called when there is nobody there?" Dr.R.Glen Green, a family doctor in Prince Albert, Saskatchewan, puts these rather startling questions to patients who come to him with vague aches and pains but no evidence of any real disease.

Often enough, the patient confesses with some embarrassment that these illusions have made him wonder if he is losing his mind. Then, Dr.Green assures him that the trouble is not mental illness but simply an unsuspected diet deficiency.

After more than 22 years as a family practitioner, Dr. Green says that as many as one in 10 of his patients suffers from lack of nicotinic acid in his or her diet. In its most serious form this deficiency causes a disease called pellagra. It's generally thought to be rare in Canada, but Dr.Green is certain that a mild form he calls subclinical pellagra is more common than doctors suspect.

The symptoms most patients mention are sore throat, headache, pains in the chest and stomach, cramps in the legs, and earache. They rarely talk about the hallucinations.

Since even the most thorough checkup reveals nothing, and the pains are more or less vague and tend to come and go, most doctors prescribe a mild tranquilizer. But the patient is back in a few weeks with the same trouble.

The deficiency can be more serious for children, says Dr. Green, because it interferes with their reading in school. "Often the words move so much that they can't catch them," he wrote in an article in the Canadian Family Physician. "They fail to reach their potential for no discernible reason. They lie down after school. They are tired, cranky, and miserable. They suffer pains in almost every organ. They are sick; yet, physically, you can find nothing."

It's possible that the current craze for low-cholesterol diets, which cut down on butter, cheese and other dairy products, has something to do with the cases Dr.Green and his colleagues across Canada are seeing—sometimes without recognizing them.

Dairy products are high in nicotinic acid — which exists in all living cells and has nothing to do with the nicotine in cigarettes — and the related B vitamins Other foods rich in nicotinic acid are protein substances such as liver and kidney, green-leaf vegetables, and peas and lentils — many of which might be missing from a family's diet.

Dr.Green's theory is only part of a growing mass of evidence that Canadians are not eating as well — or as wisely — as they may think. A team of experts from the research laboratories of the Food and Drug Directorate of the Department of National Health and Welfare in Ottawa recently reported that we don't seem to be getting nearly enough vitamin A in our diet.

Their suspicions were aroused by investigations in Ottawa in 1968. Liver specimens from people who had died from various causes showed very low amounts of the vitamin. They had no reserves to fight off infection.

The latest study reported in the Canadian Medical Association Journal shows that liver samples tested in Halifax, Montreal, Winnipeg and Vancouver all had low levels of vitamin A. Montreal showed more low values than any other location. Vancouver had the fewest, with Halifax, Winnipeg and Ottawa in between.

Klaus Hoppner, who headed the study for the FDD's nutrition-research division, says in his report on the more than 400 samples tested: "Many of these Canadians failed throughout their life span to accumulate significant reserves of vitamin A. (It) could not be detected in almost 10 percent and a further 21 percent had stores typical of the new born."

Since vitamin A is an important weapon in the body's fight against infection, this implies that many Canadians — often influenced by the trend to low-fat diets — have allowed their reserves to run dangerously low.

Hoppner's findings suggest that here again, cutting down on dairy products could be the basic trouble. "If these products are avoided or eaten in small amounts, a great reliance must be placed on vegetable sources," his report says.

But while B-carotene found in some vegetables can be turned into vitamin A by the body, it's not known how well the body handles the job. In any case, say Hoppner and his team, "it may be unrealistic to believe that all Canadians will eat sufficient green and yellow vegetables to meet their needs."

The nutrition-research team has a positive solution: vitamin A should be added artificially to some staple item of food, and if newly developed foods replace any significant source of vitamin A in our diet, then they should contain the vitamin themselves.

At least one world authority on nutrition is convinced this type of vitamin deficiency springs from diet fads. Dr.Frederick J. Stare, professor and chairman of the Department of Nutrition at the Harvard School of Public Health, told the annual meeting of the American Medical Association that there is "an abundance of diet fads, quackery and charlatan ism around today."

Dr.Stare says that if people want to lose weight they should cut down on their overall food intake, instead of cutting certain foods right out of their diets. And they should exercise more.

"If you consider the hazards of too many calories, too much saturated fat, too much dietary cholesterol and not enough polyunsaturated fat as a sign of malnutrition, as I do, we have considerable malnutrition," he says.

"And with this line of thought, if one thinks of iron-deficiency anemia, iodine-deficient goiter and fluoride-deficient ospeoporosis, I think there is abundant evidence of malnutrition."

The fact that such deficiencies make people ill should be enough to convince anybody that the diet isn't something you should experiment with — or take for granted. You should check with your doctor before starting on any reducing diet. Otherwise you may be reducing your intake of important vitamins in one type of food without making it up in another.

What's This

The House Of Commons Is Out

by Eric Flowerdew

Yes, the House has closed for the summer, but one thing I'd like to remind you of is our swingin' Prime Minister gave his word that before this session ended he would see that the white paper on Veteran's increased pensions would be given to the members - did he keep his word? Of course not - I suppose it's just not cricket to call our national leader a 'Liar', but I can say his word is not worth a damn. Before the house opens this fall many of the veteran's the white paper could have helped will be dead - as will be many of the old age pensioners.

Yes, conditions are getting worse, everymorning when we wash our hands there are blood stains on them for we are allowing certain groups to make profits they don't deserve. As I have said before and will say again, we have a wonderful country, the best in the world, but as with other faded Empires which have lost their powers, this American continent, the all powerful, will destroy itself, unless we do something now to change our ways.

I VISITED COUNCIL

It was an interesting affair, I tried to tell them that they must either fight the provincial government now, or suffer the burden of taxpayers being taxed out of house and home. At one time the provincial government carried the full cost of education and other social costs, but now they have forced the local councils to pay an extra 10 per cent cost of Social Assistance. It's the same old gag of splitting up the people. The value of money received, such as old age pensions, is getting more and more worthless. Our council, like many others, suggests that changes will have to made. I submit there would be no problem if take home pay was increased then workers wouldn't have to go out on strike.

STRIKES

I believe many people out on strike now voted against the party which could have solved their problem. I maintain workers who produce the goods we need should be partners in the company they work for - no one has ever been allowed to look over the books to see the profits made by large corporations in Canada.

I am in favor of guarenteed incomes for everyone, but until such policies are inforce strikes will continue. You know the average worker must learn to improve his way of life, but we never take into consideration how to run our country, we rely on the promises made at election time, and the party that has the most money for expenses and public relations and gives the most promises gets elected.

I WONDER

How many workers in our Post Offices can boast of retiring from the savings they have piled up. No worker should have to work unless they have a contract.

NEVER HEARD ANY MORE

As the local hospital is getting ready for increased patients this fall and winter I have not heard one murmur from our local councils. What do we know, for example, of government to the province, I'm damned if we know whether the monies for health are going to dams or hospitals.

As I said who cares a damn as long as we as individuals are not directly affected.

In the meantime don't forget a few thousand Old Age Pensioners who will die so that people can save many thousands of dollars. Is is worth it?

AS THE CHAP SAYS

I notice another chap living on Otter Road give the communists the devil for the way they kill off their prisioners. I should remind him that the Americans seem to have found the best ways to kill - I don't think they can beat the Communists at this killing of so called 'game' - after all it creates more jobs.

Society Teaches People To Compete In The Crib

By the time you read this column the second session of the 28th Parliament will have closed and my family and I will excaped the oppressive Ottawa heat and humidity and gratefully be on our way home. I do not consider the summer to be a vacation only but a chance to be in closer contact with constituents.

During the summer I can be reached through the following phone numbers, 936-3202, 942-7684, and 826-6464.

Here is an item of current interest accompanied by my comments. You are invited to add your comments to this and other matters at any time.

UNIONS HAVE GONE TOO FAR

Surely you must have heard this phrase - "Yeah, I agree that unions were necessary once but now they've gone too far, they're only interested in themselves and don't give a damn about the pensioners or those workers who don't have a union."

Now, like most statements designed for public consumption, there is enough truth in it to capture the support of those people suffering from the twin tragedy of simultaneous unemployment and inflation. But haven't the doctors, like union workers organized themselves collectively to protect their interest - haven't the lawyers and teachers? What about corporation and bank profits, retail prices and rents - aren't these factors also inflation contributors caused either by a monopoly position or ones in which there is no legal profit ceiling imposed on prices charged, profits made or rents collected?

The Prime Minister said recently to some Ford workers - "If you guys get 20 per cent out of an economy that is only growing at 5 per cent somebody is going to get screwed - and it's not going to be you guys. It's going to be old people on pensions, it's going to be poor people who are unorganized, and it's going to be guys without jobs....."

While some might be offended by the P.M.'s choice of words, the point is that only one segment of our society have been singled out to play the role of scapegoat in our present inflation struggle. Some countries have been very successful in providing full employment while containing inflation. But if the price of full employment is a moderate amount of inflation, shouldn't our government be taking the lead in guaranteeing that pensions be tied to the cost of living? And should not our Department of Labour be encouraging more Canadian workers to join collective bargaining units to protect their interest - and more government effort be directed to expanding our economy to provide jobs for our growing population?

Our society teaches people to be competitive from the moment they're born. Through our schools and business life we applaud competition. People trained from childhood in the competition practice can't stop it all at once because the government at the moment doesn't want wage earners to compete for a larger share of the national wealth.

Trudeau is talking nonsense and misleading the Canadian people.

- There is a deliberate government policy creating unemployment.
- The government can pass legislation at any time to improve things for veterans and pensioners - and all opposition parties will support it.
- Laws can be changed so that the unorganized may more easily form bargaining units to protect their interests.
- If wages are to be limited, so should all forms of income.

Perhaps the P.M. is trying to tell us that citizens shouldn't work together to improve their lot.

BC Rockshow In October

The monthly meeting was held Saturday, July 11th, in the evening, at the Old Age Pensioner's Hall, in Aldergrove.

Forty members and visitors were in attendance, with president, Ernie Pfister, in the chair.

Mr. Jim Greenwood reported a successful disposal auction of rocks for the late Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Merryfield. Members who were able to attend this worthy cause were not disappointed.

All clubs to have grab bags ready for the B.C. show in October.

Show chairman, Alex Rose, reported on the new law regarding lotteries.

It was moved to call the display table, the 'Merryfield Table', as a memorial to Mrs. Merryfield.

Stuart Evans called on the members to identify their displays.

Mr. Ferguson explained the difference between a limb, and a limbcast.

The Jim Greenwoods had fossil in Concreton, from Hornby Island. Herkimir diamonds from Herkimer county, N.Y. Flower rock from Vancouver Island, Mr. J. Dyck had opalite ocean agate.

Mr. Dyck gave the Rock talk. His subject, the lovely sky-blue or blue-green Turquoise, rare, scarce and expensive. An opaque or translucent hydrous aluminum phosphate.

The best turquoise is found in Persia and in North America it is found in Nevada, New Mexico, Colorado and California. Oil is not good for turquoise. Use a thin, water cooled blade to cut. Soak the stone in water before polishing.

Mrs. W. Kuchemmuller won the Rock draw so will be giving the Rock Talk next meeting.

Mrs. Elgird introduced Mr. and Mrs. Edwards who have recently returned from a trip to Japan.

The slides and travelogue Mr. Edwards gave was most enchanting.

Anyone going should travel light. You can buy what you need cheaper there. Transportation and language, no problem, service is instant!

Don't try to drive yourself - sage advice.

Thank you Mr. and Mrs. Edwards.

The next meeting will take place August 8th. Visitors are always welcome.

Applications Approved — Cautiously

The application for a licence to run a steel rolling factory on Livingstone Road was OKed Monday by Langley district council, subject to the approval of radio station CJJC.

The plans called for the operation of two electrical generators to run 24 hours a day, and council expressed concern that this might cause noise or interference with signals emitted from the radio station's transmitter located nearby.

Another application, for a glass factory on Coglan Road near the B.C. Hydro railway was approved providing water and disposal requirements were met.

Garden Notes

Pansies and Violas

Botanically all pansies are violas but among the gardening fraternity, viola has become a vernacular name for a group of plants obtained by crossing the garden pansy (Viola x wittrockiana) with the horned violet (Viola cornuta) bearing the group botanical name of Viola williamsii. These are better known in British Columbia and the Pacific Northwest as bedding violas.

They differ from pansy by their unmarked clear flowers that are slightly smaller. Unlike the flowers of that group they do not get smaller as the season progresses, but stay the same size. In climates with cool summers they last over a much longer peiod and are more perennial in nature. They are usually propagated by cuttings and sold as named cultivars - the most common one probably being Maggie Mott.

In eastern Canada the name viola is most often linked with the violettas, derivatives of the cross between the horned violet (Viola cornuta) and the graceful violet (Viola gracilis), the group name for which is Viola x visseriana. This group contains hardier cultivars than the ordinary pansy and bedding viola, but they are short-lived and best treated as biennials. They have much smaller flowers than the pansy and bedding violas, but are extremely useful for planting in rock gardens, as edgings to borders or for planting among spring flowering bulbs.

The garden pansy (Viola x wittrockiana) is a group of hybrids, derived mainly from the common heartsease (Viola tricolour), that varies a great deal in habit and flower color and has the characteristic of Viola lutea and Viola altaica.

In the early days from 1830 on there were about 400 named cultivars on sale from selections made primarily by T. Thomson, gardener to Sorel Gambier of Iver, Buckinghamshire, England, of all clean-coloured, round-petalled types. About the same time selections in Belgium and France had their greater range of colors and less formal shapes. The modern large flowered pansy is derived from intercrossing these two strains.

From these three distinct groups are known in gardens today: the bedding kinds, that are bushy and compact plants with almost self-colored blooms except for center markings of the flowers; the Trimardeau hybrids (the group under which a number of strains, such as the Felix and Oregon Giants, are classified, as well as the large flowered pansy cultivars that come true from seeds such as Delft, Berna and Ullswater); and the winter-flowering groups made up of cultivars that flower very early in the year in Europe and in British Columbia.

Such cultivars as Celestial Queen, North Pole and Winter Sun are in this category and should be grown in B.C. Niagara Falls or in the Windsor area where the climate is milder and the beauty of very early pansies can be better appreciated.

Violettas and pansies are easily grown from seed in all parts of Canada. If you sow a packet of seeds now you will likely have enough plants to border all your flower areas and have some to spare. What is more, you can count on vigorous stock plants that will flower next year over a longer period than those you are most likely to buy locally.

By growing your own plants from seed it will be possible to pick and choose the kind of pansy you like best and the plants you grow will also be more to your liking than those you buy next spring.

First, get seed from a reliable firm, preferably one which specializes in pansies. You may be rather taken back at the price you have to pay for the very select kinds, but you will receive considerably more enjoyment from the larger blooms and purer colors they produce.

Sow seeds of pansies in prepared flats filled with a mixture of peat moss, soil and sand in equal parts and add one and one half ounces of superphosphate to each bushel of this mixture. Sprinkle the seed over the flats or sow in rows two inches apart and cover with a fine layer of soil. Water well after sowing and cover with shading for a few days or place in shady part of the garden.

After the seedlings have formed two or three leaves, transplant them to other flats filled with the same prepared soil to which has been added one cup of complete fertilizer per bushel of mixture. As an alternative they may be set in nursery rows in the garden. Shade them for a few days until they have recovered from the shock of transplanting.

In eastern Canada, and where the winters are severe, the following winter protection should be adapted. About the middle of September transplant the plants to a cold frame for the winter. Leave the frame open until the ground feezes and then cover with boards.

In early spring the plants can be set out where they will show to good advantage. Fading blooms must be removed from all plants or they will soon stop flowering.

Shape Up Or Ship Out

A local business will be told to "shape up or ship out." Langley district council made the decision at their regular meeting Monday morning.

"We keep getting complaints regarding South Otter Salvage," clerk Derek Doubleday told council.

Alderman Walter Jensen moved that the owner of the business be notified that unless his front property is cleaned up right away he will be required to erect a fence around the entire property, or his trades licence will be revoked.
