IF COUNCIL CAN HELP IT

No more 'dollar-a-year' taxpayers

by Rudy Langmann

In order to raise additional revenue from the property tax, municipalities have either to increase the tax rate or to raise the level of assessed values.

With these words of introduction a submission to the special committee of the provincial legislation on taxation was contemplated by Langley district council Monday morning and sent members headlong into a deep think tank.

"Natural annual increases in assessment are rarely large enough to satisfy the annual demand for more revenue (and) accordingly annual increases in tax rates and frequent upward adjustments of assessed values are necessary and commonplace," the brief continued.

The lengthy brief, prepared on council's behalf by a senior official, listed 10 recommendations to the provincial committee, one of the more important being that it would see the elimination of "dollar-a-year" taxpaying property owners.

"In conjunction with the provincial homeowner grant (if this is to remain) a realistic minimum tax rate payable should be set (at a) minimum of $200 upward," the letter recommended.

Council members discussed the advisability of this, or perhaps a minimum payable property tax should be set at $100? Almost all agreed, though, that payment of $1 (after home owner grant) was unrealistic. And many property owners previously paying the minimum amount this year received cheques from the taxation department of $30. Things had gone from bad to worse, councillors agreed.

Advised by Mayor George Preston who involved council in a most prolific general discourse on the evils of socialism versus rugged individualism, councilmen decided to leave the $200 minimum suggestion in the brief.

Other recommendations were that multiple mill rates to several classes of property such as residential, agricultural, commercial, industrial and institutional be applied with legislation to provide a minimum tax rate for each category, or alternately that the mill rate remain static, applied to differing percentages of assessed valuation.

Agricultural land, the brief said, should be taxed according to classification, such as farmland, agricultural development land and agricultural residential land, with general farmland assessment based on soil productively not being an equitable method farmland evaluation. Farmers should continue to be taxed on the home and homesite principle for social services, the letter said.

The submission was prepared on council's request by municipal treasurer Larry Cruikshank.

Reunited after 30 long years are brothers Tom and Joe Isherwood. With brothers in Aldergrove are wives Sheryl and Dianna and Joe's daughter Tara.

Isherwood meets his brother

Two brothers who were separated during the blitz on London at a time when both were only toddlers, were reunited last week when Tom Isherwood's younger brother Joe arrived at Vancouver International Airport.

Tom, of 6612 County Line Road, came to Canada in 1944 at the age of four and Joe remained at the Middlemore orphanage where both spent their early years after their father's death and the disappearance of their mother.

Tom was brought up by Canadian foster parents and Joe was sent to Australia after the war, in 1949 when he was six years old.

The elder Isherwood had always wondered what became of his kid brother, and two years ago Tom's research was crowned with success. He traced Joe to Fairbridge Farm in Penjarra, Western Australia. Tom phoned, was told that they thought Joe had moved to Perth and somehow obtained the phone number of his younger brother's place of work there.

One hour later Tom called Perth, Australia once more and there - after 30 long years of separation - the two Isherwoods heard one another's voice across the Pacific.

From that day both saved and last week Joe, his wife Dianna and 15 month old daughter Tara came to visit. About 150 friends and neighbours came to meet Tom's brother at party held in his honor at the Aldergrove Legion Friday night.

Tom and wife Sheryl will go for a return visit to Perth, Australia where Joe is a union representative with the Australian Workers Union, in 1975 when they plan to spend X-mas "down under".

The two brothers look very much alike, and the greatest difference, in spite of the long separation, is that one speaks with a typical Canuck accent, the other with an Aussie drawl.

BUILDING SPLURGE CONTINUES

Matsqui municipality recorded a total of $1,591,140 in building permits issued for July. Of the total amount, $730,000 was allotted for school building additions.

There were 22 single family dwelling permits at $468,630, 24 dwelling addition permits, 14 barns valued at $103,890, four commercial permits for more than $140,000 and numerous smaller building permits.

July's total brings the yearly amount to more than $19 million dollars, more than $8 million greater than last year at the same time.

So far 276 single family residence starts have been made this year.

Welfare on the rise

The percentage of Langley people on welfare was up slightly this month, 4.2 per cent as compared to 3.93 last month and the same one year ago, Ald. Bill Blair reported to council Monday morning.

SUSPECTS FREE ON BAIL

Arms blaze at NorLang

Two North Vancouver men charged with arson in connection with a fire bombing in Langley municipality last August 16 were released on bail Monday, August 19. Charged with arson are Robert Michael Powshuk, 33, of 1158 Lynn Valley Road, N. Vancouver and William Gerald Finlay, 19, of 258 East 19th Avenue, N. Vancouver.

The incident was reported to Langley R.C.M.P. at 3:55 a.m., Friday, August 16. Powshuk and Finlay allegedly threw a molotov cocktail through the living room window of an 88th Avenue residence in northwest Langley, causing extensive damage.

The resident of the house then fired upon the culprits with a .303 rifle, causing a minor arm wound to one of the arsonists.

Powshuk and Finlay were arrested in North Vancouver.

SOME CRACKERS

Amateur "safe crackers" gained nothing from their efforts in an aborted attempt on the safe at the Aldergrove Post Office sometime overnight August 14 - 15.

The would - be - thieves had gained entry through a rear window of the Post Office and had succeeded in knocking the safe's tumbler dial loose, and failing to break the safe door open they then left through the same window.

Nothing was reported stolen.

Institutes do well

Aldergrove district womens institutes have again this year done well with their entries in the Pacific National Exhibition's home arts, craft and hobby show.

Beaver Institute, c-o Mrs. Dorothy Rasmusson, 6818 - 272 Street, won first prize for their place mates in the knitted, lace crochet or tatting category.

And Peardonville W.I. c-o Ms. B. Friesen, 28950 Huntingdon Road, won two firsts and two seconds for adult knitted sweater, hooked rug, knitted baby set and child's party dress submitted to the competition.

Mrs. Maude Friesen and Mrs. Clara Sims, both of Langley Memorial hospital won honorable mentions for their embroideries in the textiles section for hospitalized people.

First prize for a rug was won by Lilios Peardon, of Huntingdon Road, and honorable mention for a quilt by Mrs. E. Olson, also of Huntingdon Road.

Other prize winners were Carol Alexander, of 3429-199 A Street, Langley (third for dinner cloth), Mrs. A. Woudstra, of Mt. Lehman Road, Aldergrove (third for a small doily), and Mary S. Janzen, of 33245 Holland Avenue, Abbotsford (honorable mention for crocheted article)

The PNE show continues to Labor Day.

CFB no longer needs water

Canadian Forces Base Aldergrove does not wish to join the municipality's water service after all.

The base last month approached Langley district concerning the possibility of hook up to the Aldergrove system since their own water supply was running low and new test wells had produced only water with a high sodium content.

But now, says a letter from national defence headquarters, a well had been produced which yields water appearing to be "satisfactory for all purposes."

If the water is acceptable to the surgeon general, the letter says, DND "shall no longer require to obtain a supply from municipal sources."

However, if the personnel at CFB Aldergrove should increase and more water be unavailable on the navy's property, the possibility still exists that a merging of the two systems should be desirable. But this does not appear likely, the letter concludes.

PROTECTION COST UP

The new policing contract for 1974 - 75 was presented to Langley district council's protection committee Monday.

According to the contract it will cost the district $9,633.26 per man for the first five men on the Murrayville detachment and $14,449.88 for each additional man.

Mayor George Preston says the higher figure includes payment for "air - and dog protection." The district is in this way paying for the service of police aircrafts whenever such may be needed, and police dogs from Surrey or Chilliwack.

Blair laments

Langley Ald. Bill Blair says if he operated his farm like the municipal workshop in Murrayville is, he'd be broke.

Blair made the comment in council Monday morning after hearing evidence that a tractor operated at the museum in Fort Langley was sent in for repair and in the meantime a new tractor being used was found to need a valve job. When this machine got back from the garage, the first one had to go in for repair again, according to Blair.

The alderman says the municipal garage has the finest line of equipment in Langley, including commercial garages and repair shops.

No ban the bang

We're back to normal.

The Canadian Forces Base, Aldergrove once more asked district council to include the 1,000 acre DND property in the "no-hunting" zone on the municipality's hunting bylaw map.

But no, it seemingly can't be done. It couldn't in 1973 and it can't in 1974.

It is really such a nice big-size hunting ground, but anyway, "they can post their property," councilmen say, and that way, they contend, achieve the same result.

It could also be that some among the military personnel would want to hunt the land themselves, an alderman suggested. And how could that be done if it was banned from hunting altogether?

Another alderman didn't think they would. And it was also pointed out that individual "no-hunting" sign posting of land anywhere was but of little use. There's always some ambitious nimrod who comes along and pulls the signs down and tears them to pieces. And from there it is open to anyone until the land owner gets around to putting up new signs. And so on.

A year ago CFB Aldergrove asked to have their acreage banned to hunting because they have some extremely valuable antennas erected on the base.

NO INJURIES IN HIT & RUN

Matsqui Police received a report at 9:10 p.m. August 7 regarding a hit and run motor-vehicle accident at the corner of Bourquin and South Fraser Way. There were no injuries.

Canadians can be trusted

"Hasn't the time come to have done with many of the bits and pieces of social legislation?"

The question is asked by the department of church in society of the United Church of Canada in a submission to the twenty-sixth general council, meeting at Gueph, Ont. this week.

The paper notes that in 1973 the federal government disclosed a plan to extend social security, the various propositions to be considered by the welfare ministers of the provinces with concerned groups making contributions to the discussions.

The department's response is termed "somewhat critical but hopefully constructive." It also is sweeping in scope.

Among its points:

"We concur that the present social security system in Canada is one of the most advanced in the Western world. Our hope is that in recognizing this we will not be lulled into contentment with the status quo but be spurred to grapple with human need as it still exists in Canada."

The department's submission recalls that Ottawa's working paper on social security in Canada states: "We believe that Canadians hold to the value of independence, or self-dependence. They expect to meet their own needs through their own efforts."

Says the department's submission to general council: "As something set down at the beginning of a presentation on social security, we find the emphasis on independence both misleading and threatening. It tends to undergird a two-fold emphasis already too prevalent in Canada: that the haves are in that fortunate position because of their hard work, initiative and self-dependence, and the have-nots are in their unfortunate position because they lack initiative.

"But the fact is that most of the poor in Canada are hard-working and struggling people, and the remainder, except for an infinitesimal number, are poor because of health, age, marital breakdown and other factors acknowledged in the working paper itself.

"It seems to us a peculiar type of blindness for the affluent to attribute their relative or absolute affluence to their self-dependence. Given the situation where most people want to be self-dependent, but a fifth of Canadians are in poverty, the social security value of independence is sterile. The irony is that the poor of Canada want to be independent - to work at gainful employment - and it adds insult to injury to keep playing the theme. . . . . .

"To come to it directly, we suspect that the working paper is hobbled by the government's fear of reprisal from that part of the Canadian community with most to gain from the rewards and incentives of the socio-economic system as it presently operates to their advantage, and least to gain (so they think) from serious reforms involving redistribution of income and taxation."

The department calls upon the federal and provincial governments to institute a guaranteed annual income for all Canadians. This would be universal, non-discriminatory and eventually delivered as a demogrant. It would replace old age assistance, the guaranteed income supplement, family allowances and other types of assistance programs.

Says the department:

"We take the view that Canadians can be trusted, that in order to have incentive, they do not need to be kept in economic tutelage. Some will undoubtedly opt for a life of ease and indolence, but the vast majority will want to work for either themselves or their communities.

"We understand that the demogrant approach cannot reasonably be expected tomorrow, but we call upon governments to start moving in that direction through the time of the present discussions."

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Strictly non-partisan

Editor, The Star, Dear Sir,

In your last weeks issue of The Star - you present a photo of Syd and Edith Murrell - 'legion presidents' welcoming Premier Dave Barrett to the NDP picnic in Williams Park. You on subsequent pages produce more photos of Legion members - quote - 'Aldergrove Legionaires' - unquote in connection with the NDP picnic.

Sir, I wish to advise you, that the Legion is a non-paritsan organization. The "political affilations" of those persons photographed have nothing what so ever to do with Aldergrove Legion, and the fact that they are Legion members should not have been publicized in affiliation with any political party, - - those are part of our Legion rules and regulations.

The caption used was unfortunate, both presidents and members are aware of the Legion regulations.

All Legion members have their own political views - not necessarily NDP.

Sincerely,
E. Bradley
Ladies Auxillary,
Branch 265,
Publicity and Historian Chairman

(Editor's Note: We recognize that it is no prerequisite for membership in the Royal Canadian Legion that you belong to the NDP - or for that matter any other political party.

However, we do not believe in "guilt by association" and personally we do not know (or for that matter care) how many of the people who came out to meet Premier Dave Barrett in Williams Park are actually card - carrying socialists.

Thus we were told that some of the Legionaires who were present that Sunday afternoon came to ask Barrett certain questions pertaining to the Western Provinces lottery - a cause to which branch 265 is deeply committed. The entire proceeds from the sales of these tickets by local Legionaires will go one hundred percent toward juvenile sports in Aldergrove.

Perhaps it is unfortunate that the Aldergrove people were mentioned in the captians as Legionaires, however, they are well-enough known that we didn't feel it of importance to try and keep them incognito.

To us they were just Aldergrove citizens who came out to meet the premier and we would probably have used the same approach had it not been Barrett, but Bennett, Stanfield, or Trudeau.

All Legion members (just like all newspapermen) have their own political views, that is true, but if you should judge the political color of a newsman from the people with whom he gets into contact, he would certainly be a multi-colored specimen.

And the same, we presume, goes for a Legionaire.

Sign will be moved

Following protests from residents of 32 Avenue in Aldergrove since "no parking" signs were installed on the south side of the road, the municipality's public works sub-committee last week decided to revise its stand.

The signs will be removed from the south side and installed on the opposite side of the road.

Think it out

Editor, The Star, Dear Sir,

I pose several questions to Langley elected officials, merchants, and school board.

1. How can you justify a proposed large municipal hall with a population of 27,000?
2. Why is it we have school grounds that either look like a gravel pit or a farmer's hay field?
3. Why is it all the city merchants have dirty side walks in front of their business establishments?
4. Why is it that some elected officials always use their offices for a stepping stone, instead of serving the people that elected them?
5. Why is it that some elected officials make their city hall decisions according to the political philosophy they believe in?
6. Why is it only those people that are in business or have financial status, run for city and municipal offices?
7. Why is it that Langley district still follows the policy of letting merchants build new business shops without having enough customer parking space?
8. Why is it Langley Airport wants the taxpayers to buy an interest in their business?
9. Why is it that every taxpayer is penalized in additional tax, when they add beautifying additions to their property?
10. Why is it that the old age pensioners still have to pay school tax until they are laid to rest?
11. Why are capable welfare recipients still drawing money and fruit farmers can not get workers?
12. Why is it every dog must have a licence yet owners of destructive dogs have no damage charges laid against them?
13. My suggestion for the week: That all those who do not have their thinking caps screwed on right, is to apply to the federal government for a L.I.P. grant for a Think Tank.

Sincerely Yours
Gerald C. Cuthbert

Langley road fight

THREE DENIED JUSTICE, COURT TOLD

Three Langley residents claimed Monday that they were denied natural justice when the city refused them a hearing before taking over part of their property for a road widening project.

Mr. Justice W.A. Craig was hearing an application brought by the city to set aside an action brought by Mr. and Mrs. John Timmerman, 20286 Douglas Crescent, and Agnes Herlihy, who owns property leased to an oil company at 56th and Devine Road.

The Timmermans have had a running battle with the city since Januar. Mr. Justice Craig was told that the city took 1,700 square feet of their property for the replotting project destroying it as residential property. Mrs. Herlihy lost 250 feet frontage.

Lawyers David Bell and Donald Nundal earlier brought an action to quash a city bylaw under which the property was taken and to obtain a hearing on the matter.

Both lawyers said the properties had been rendered nonconforming by the city's action.

"A man shouldn't lose his front garden without having anything to say about it," Bell told Mr. Justice Craig on behalf of the Timmermans. He said the couple had tried to suggest some other route for the road and that the city's reply was to have bulldozers on the property pulling rees out.

Bell said they sould have had a chance to be heard but were not called upon. He asked the judge to order a hearing for the couple, who he said had always wanted to take the case before council but were unable to do so.

He also told the judge that no proper notice has been given to the Timmermans as required by the Municipal Act and he said the provisions of the act must be rigidly followed when a municipal body acts to take someone's land.

"There was a duty on the council to give a hearing before the replotting decision became final," Bell said.

He said it would still be possible to change the route of the road and leave the Timmermans more property.

Howard Thomas, acting for the city, aksed Mr. Justice Craig to rule against the application because he said there had been less than "full and frank disclosure" in an affidavit by Mrs. Timmerman.

He said she claimed to have had no notice from the city since January and yet negotiations had been continuing regarding the property.

He also claimed there had been undue delay by the affected parties in bringing legal action and that the city was prejudiced by this delay.

The hearing was to resume yesterday.

Weather hits exhibition

Cool and cloudy weather put a damper on attendance at the Pacific National Exhibition Monday.

A total of 65,582 people went to the fair during the day, down 4,567 from the same day last year.

Over-all attendance for the first three days was 215,313, up six from the same period in 1973.

Rothwell loses car

Both the expected and the unexpected happend at Langley Speedway Saturday.

The expected was another victory by Gordie Hemrich of Vancouver in the A main race for super stocks. The unexpected was a 100-mile-per-hour collision with the cement fence by Johnny Rothwell of Burnaby.

Rothwell was driving a '73 Chevelle owned by Tom Mair of Vancouver during the hot-lap warmup session when his accelerator stuck sending the car into the concrete guard rail. The vehicle was a total loss but Rothwell escaped with a badly bruised leg and harness burns.

Hemrich, the defending champion and current season super stock points leader, passed Richmond's Rollie Walker on the 32nd lap of the 35-lap feature to win the A main in his '72 Chevelle. Walker settled for second while Andy Fentie of Aldergrove grabbed third.

RUSH JOB NO GOOD

by Rudy Langmann

Councilmen in Murrayville believe the construction of the Aldergrove lacrosse box, next to the highschool on Boundry Road, was too rushed.

And because of that, a proper job wasn't done.

Ald. Dan Kitsul says the blacktopped box will have to be resurfaced. A patch job won't do, he says, since it already has been patched and it would end up "patches on patches".

Kitsul says, and Mayor George Preston agrees, that the contractor who finished the job a few months ago should pay for the repair. A final payment or holdback of $5,800 is still due contractor Sinclair of Chilliwack.

Councilmen Monday morning decided to release only $3,300 of this amount and inform Sinclair that the remaining $2,500 will be spent on resurfacing of the lacrosse box. They also agreed that "too much pressure" was exerted on council by a local sports group and that this, in connection with the contractor's wish to get on with the job added up to a "rush - rush job."

The councillors also questioned the value of using volunteer engineers on future jobs of this sort. Two professional engineers, also involved in juvenile sports, supervised part of the construction of the Aldergrove lacrosse box which took nearly two years to complete.

Logie is charged with providing a current assessment of the total community theatre scene in B.C. and giving on-the-spot assistance and advice to the more than 70 theatre groups in the province.

A survey conducted by Mrs. English, former Theatre Consultant, last year revealed local theatre groups in B.C. annually produce more than 400 plays and musicals involving more than 20,000 people, directly or indirectly, playing to a total audience of 300,000 and incurring an expenditure of a quarter of a million dollars.

Logie, an experienced playwright and director, has been involved in the community drama field for more than 20 years. He founded the Pit Theatre of Chilliwack 5 years ago, and has produced more than 50 plays and musicals in the Lower Mainland, the Fraser Valley and the Island over the past 10 years.

The annual BCDA Drama Festival and Workshop held in June in Kelowna and Vernon involved 200 amateur actors, technicians and directors and drew a total audience of 2500. CBC producer, Esse Ljungh and Citadel Theatre of Edmonton's Phil Silver adjudicated the Festival.

Logie will tour the province over the next 10 months in his capacity as Theatre Consultant.

Commemorating the arrival of the Mennonites

1974 marks the centenary of the arrival of the Mennonites in Manitoba and the Canadian post office has decided to honor this centenary by the issuing of an eight-cent ethnic stamp.

The Mennonite religion originated in Switzerland during the Reformation. When the movement spread to the Netherlands, there were intense efforts to stamp it out. Consequently, the Mennonites fled to East Prussia where they had been promised exemption from military service. Eventually, the Prussians became fearful that this might weaken the fighting power of the state. They imposed restrictions which caused many families to leave for Southern Russia. All was well there until 1870 when the Czar embarked on a campaign of Russianization. As the German-speaking Mennonites had a tradition of migration to avoid persecution and secularization, they resolved to send delegates to investigate the possibilities of North America.

The British Colonial Secretary was the first to inform the Canadian government about the situation in Russia. Ottawa acted swiftly and decisively. It offered to defray the expenses of delegates visiting Canada and to subsidize the travel expenses of the potential newcomers. It granted exemption from military service and the right to religious schools. The government set aside twenty-six and one-third townships of free land for the Mennonites, and Parliament authorized a loan to them of up to $100,000.00. The Quakers, the Tolstoyans and the Ontario Mennonites also did what they could to pave they way to Canada.

To expedite matters, however, an immigration agent was necessary, and the government dispatches Mr. William Hespeler. In those days an immigration agent needed the stealth of a secret agent and the promotional ability of a used car salesman. The Russians, for example, tolerated immigration, but severely punished those who furthered it. The local British consul informed Hespeler, when he arrived in Southern Russia, that he would soon be in jail. Nothing quite so drastic happened, however, although the police did confiscate a case of pamphlets. Under these difficult conditions Canada's agents had to overcome the blandishments of the United States, South Africa, Brazil, Argentina, and even Russia, and to refute the unpleasant rumours about Canada fabricated and spread by her rivals.

In 1874 the Mennonites came to both Canada and the United States. Their delegates had been more satisfied with American soil, but Canada had made more concessions. The new Manitobans arrived by way of the Sea of Azov, Odessa, Hamburg, Liverpool and Quebec City. The trip also included a voyage on the Red River. On contingent was shipped up the Red River without shelter "on a barge already laden with railroad iron." Everyone who saw the new settlers was impressed. The Quebec immigration agent noted that "they were of a robust appearance, very mild and temperate, docile, and under the thorough control of their leaders. They brought a considerable amount of specie with them, as well as drafts for large amounts. . .Their clothing was well adapted for the climate of Manitoba. . ." The Montreal agent was pleased to see their many children.

Once farming began, the Mennonites made rapid progress despite floods, grasshoppers, and the fact that these people were among the first non-Indians to live on the open prairie. The new group introduced cellar dwellings, Russian stoves fueled by grass and dung, agricultural villages, summer fallowing and flax, and thus taught Canadians much about prospering under prairie conditions. Of the many large tracts of land set aside for specific groups or companies, the Mennonite reservations were among the few which quickly attracted large numbers of settlers. By 1880 the first Mennonite reserve was full. By the early nineties, daughter colonies were growing in what are now Saskatchewan and Alberta.

"million dollar mistakes"

"Million dollar mistakes are far too frequent with the N.D.P. government," according to Bill Bennett, leader of the opposition. Bennett said that paying Mincome to people who had just stepped off the boat was one of the first million dollar mistakes.

"The life time pensions of $50 a week to 23 people because of a mistake in I.C.B.C. regulations is another example of incompetence," Bennett said.

According to Bennett, I.C.B.C regulations cannot be blamed on clerks because regulations are passed by cabinet.

"The minister responsible for putting the order-in-council to cabinet should resign," Bennett said. This province cannot afford ministers who make million dollar mistakes so regularly.

Scouts go tax free

The boy scouts in Langley will get some $4,000 in grants from the public purse to take care of property taxes on scout park lands.

This decision was made in Langley district council Monday morning, overruling two aldermen who believed the scouts should pay their taxes like everyone else since the parks are used by youngsters from all over B.C. as well as scouts from south of the border.

By Bob McClelland, MLA, Langley

The on-again, off-again, on-again emergency session of the Legislature last week to deal with striking firefighters in four lower mainland areas was a real lesson in NDP hypocrisy.

The labor-management posture adopted by the NDP government has been clearly discredited as a result of the recent actions and Labor Minister Bill King turns out, along with Premier Barrett, to be the most hypocritical of all.

Bob McClelland, MLA

During debate last fall on Section 73 of the Labor Code of British Columbia Act, members of the opposition practically begged the government to withdraw the provisions allowing workers in essential services the right to strike. On October 26, 1973, I suggested in the House that section 73 was "dishonest" because the government would never treat these workers the same as workers in any other area of employ, but would in fact take legislative action the minute any of them walked off the job. And what happened the very first time the legislation was tested? The government had to call an emergency session to force the men back to work.

And what did Labor Minister King have to say at that time? He said, also on October 26, "We assert that everyone has a right to withdraw their labor." If the labor minister truely believes that, I suppose that is also his right, but on Wednesday, August 7 of this year, Mr. King called it "abhorrent" that the firefighters would withdraw their services. First he gives them the right to strike and says, in effect, that they should use the strike weapon if they need to - and then he calls it "abhorrent" when the firefighters take him at his word.

Health Minister Dennis Cocke called it a "form of slavery" not to allow every person the right to strike. Government members and NDP backbenchers as well eloquently championed the right to strike concept. Two of the most vocal were Harold Steeves of Richmond and Colin Gableman of North Vancouver - Capilano, both of whom were quick on their feet during last week's special session to speak in support of the back to work legislation.

I too supported the emergency legislation - but I was being consistent with arguments advanced in the House on a number of occasions that essential services, where lives of people can be put in jeopardy, must be treated differently from other labor, and the people involved must not be allowed to arbitrarily remove their services.

The picture of Labor Minister King and Premier Dave Barrett still vigorously defending the right to strike while advancing legislation taking the right away, as they did last Friday in the House, is surely one of the most graphic examples of people speaking out of two sides of their faces at the same time.

At the next session of the Legislature, Social Credit will table legislation calling for repeal of section 73 of the Labor Code, and calling for a system of compulsory arbitration for essential services. Hopefully, the NDP government will have come to its senses by that time and will choose to adopt a similar approach.

The search for the missing inheritants

Tucson, Ariz., Aug. 22 - A sizeable fortune of approximately $30,000 is searching in greater Vancouver, British Columbia and in the area around Toronto, Ontario, for children of John and Mary (nee Bridges) Armstrong, or their descendants, to share in the estate about which they are obviously unaware.

This became known here today when Gordon L. Cox, probate genealogist, 302 West Elm St., Tucson, who specializes in tracing missing relatives to settle estates, took over the search with clues from the distant past as his only guide.

"We are searching for the children of John Armstrong who was born in Ireland, and his wife, Mary Bridges Armstrong, who was born in Canada in the 1840's.

"It has been ascertained that they were the parents of at least five children who were born in the 1860's and 1870's. One of the children married a William Mitchell; another daughter became the bride of a William Button, while still another daughter married William Bradley. Two sons born of the union were named Robert and William Armstrong.

"Records indicate," Cox continued, "that the Armstrong family was living in Toronto, Ontario, in the 1880's. However, it appears that at least some of the family later moved to Vancouver, British Columbia. If they are deceased, their children or grandchildren would be entitled to share in the inheritance."

Cox said he is also seeking people who may have known members of the Armstrong family and can give information which will help them claim their share of the estate.

Some people go to school just for the fun of it.

Some people go to school in order to pursue a career, gain a degree or get ahead in their chosen vocation.

Others go to school just for the fun of it.

They're the people you'll find at high schools and Community Colleges throughout British Columbia — writing, painting, learning languages, exploring, discussing, advancing and, simply, enjoying life to the fullest.

You could be one of them. You could turn those spare hours into fascinating new interests.

All it takes is the investment of a little time and almost no money.

And you'll probably be amazed at how much fun you get in return.

ABBOTSFORD MAN TOPS IN GLADS

Leonard Hoon, of 33270 Marshall Road, Abbotsford almost cleaned up totally in the special gladiolus show section at the 1974 PNE.

Hoon won 18 first prizes, 17 seconds, five thirds, and four special prizes for his floral entries.

A junior, James J. Cox, of 4557 Mt. Lehman Road, took both first and second in class 1360 (gladiolus, one spike of any size, any color for juniors of 16 and under).

Another Step Taken to Develop Humane Trap

A British Columbia committee on humane trapping has been formed to make recommendations to the federal-provincial committee and speed up development of humane trapping in this province.

Members of the new committee include professional trappers, the Union of B.C. Indian Chiefs, and B.C. Association of Non-Status Indians, the fish and wildlife branch, the department of Indian Affairs and northern development, the S.P.C.A., and the B.C. association for the protection of fur bearing animals. The new committee chaired by George Clements, will also serve as a co-ordinating and advisory body to produce joint recommendations for action in B.C.

The collection and testing of humane trapping devices is already underway so that firm recommendations can be made and implemented by the target date of 1978. A patent advisory service has been established by the federal-provincial humane trapping committee to offer information and advice to potential inventors.

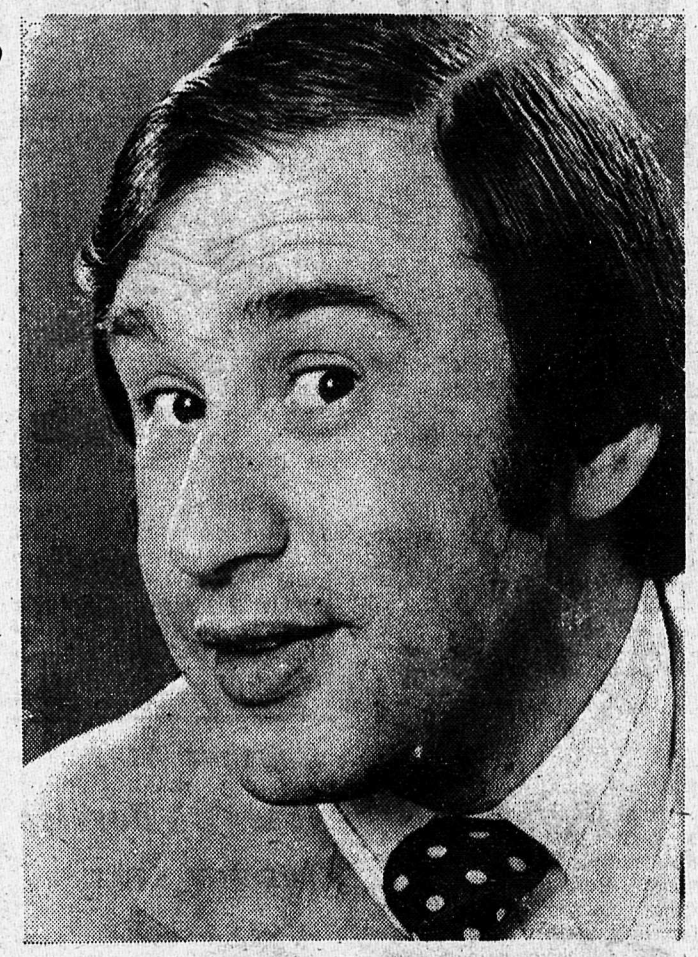
THIS IS THE LAW



This is the Law panelist Hart Pomerantz doesn't always correctly identify which obscure law has lawbreaker Paul Soles spending the night in jail — but there's usually a laugh for viewers in his outlandish guesses. The comic antics of Pomerantz and Soles are part of the fun when the CBC-TV series returns Monday nights at 8:30, starting September 9.

Conferences at International Youth Festival

Secretary of State J. Hugh Faulkner today announced federal aid totalling $90,500 for three conferences which will take place in Quebec City at the International-Youth Festival from August 13 to 24.

The Comite d'Organisation de la Rencontre Internationale des Animateurs Francophones (CORIAF) has received $50,000 for a conference of French-speaking "animateurs." An equal amount has been provided by the Quebec provincial government.

A grant of $35,000 will enable 150 members of the National Federation of Young French-Canadians to conduct a symposium at the Festival. The program will include discussion of federal youth-oriented programs and dialogue with francophone youth from other countries.

Under the federal program for Official Language Minority Cgroups, CORIAF has been granted $5,500 to help cover the expenses of 13 of Canada's francophone journalists outside the province of Quebec who will take part in the International Conference of Francophone Journalists. These journalists will have an opportunity to both report on the International Youth Festival and meet with colleagues from around the world.

Canadian Artists at International Youth Festival

This group of young painters, sculptors, poets, singers, musicians and comedians will assist the previously announced Canad- the previously announced Canadian delegation in representing the many facets of francophone culture in Canada. The festival will take place in Quebec City August 13 - 24.

The artists come from provinces which participate in activities of the Agency of Cultural and Technical Cooperation of francophone countries, the sponsor of this festival.

The Secretary of State has provided $12,000 and is coordinating the activities of this delegation in cooperation with the three provincial governments.

Pleasant weather, good rains make fall planting attractive

As the leaves begin to turn, home gardeners will be doing the same, only their turn will be in the direction of shovel and rake, getting ready for fall planting. This should be the routine from now until the end of October. Why plant in the fall? First, you've more time. The weather is in your favor, soil temperatures are ideal for active root formation, and nice warm rains are more common in the fall. So, looking at the situation squarely in the eye, you've got everything going for you.

Secondly, there's no better time to start a lawn than in the fall — more moisture, warm soil, and cool nights — the three most beneficial things required to give your seeds a good start to develop into the Lawn Beautiful.

Lawns: It is most unwise to go looking for "bargain-priced seeds; the best seed is what you want for a long-lasting lawn. I like the results produced using a mixture of Merion and Kentucky Blue.

Preparing the lawn area: If your lawn has been thin, or looks brown, best thing to do is brush it with your hand and see how much thatch might be in between the blades of the growing grasses.

It has to be removed to give the grasses a better start. Then when you've grown a good stand of grass and see the results from fall sowing, feed the lawn with a low nitrogen content like Pink Vigoro for winter protection.

I wouldn't want you to use a high-nitrogen fertilizer to stimulate growth during winter, but I would like you to feed the root system, and that's what a fertilizer like Pink Vigoro does for newly sown grass seed as well as for the established lawn.

Weeding: If you are starting a new lawn area, either rototil the area or dig it by spade, then rake it level, and apply the seed — and, neighbors, apply seed heavily — follow the directions; if the seed is of the type that only one pound is needed to cover 1,000 square feet, use just that amount applied evenly, and you'll have a good lawn.

But while the seed is germinating, you'll find the weed seeds germinate faster, and you'll have unwanted growth. This is natural; those weed seeds had been laying dormant until you

TALKING GARDENING with

'DOC' HARTNOLL

If you haven't been using a grass catcher on your mower, then the cut blades of grass fall in between the growing grasses and the thatch builds up. The build-up prevents moisture and fertilizer from getting to the roots of the grasses, and then you have trouble.

FALL PLANTING HAS IT BEAT !

disturbed them. Then they can get air, moisture and heat to germinate. Sometimes the homeowners think the seed they purchased is full of weed seed.

The weeds that grow after you've seeded a lawn were there to start with. They won't live long. Once your lawn has started to grow, the grass will crowd out the weeds.

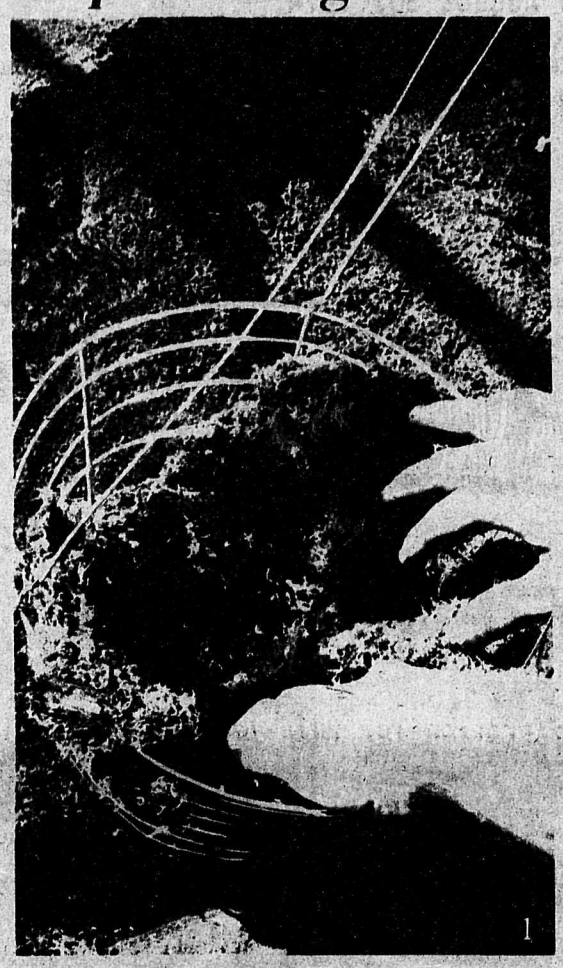
If they are the persistent type, don't use weed-killers until after at least the second mowing; the young grasses can't take those strong chemicals. All I suggest you do, is live with it until you've gotten the grasses to grow good and strong, then if need be, use a weed-killer.

Feeding: Feeding your trees and shrubs in the fall helps to fight poor growth, insect pests and disease at one shot. A good lawn fertilizer works well for trees and shrubs. As you'll be using a fertilizer like Pink Vigoro to put the lawn to bed for the winter, it will benefit the trees and shrubs as well. I like to give this last feeding when the leaves of the trees begin to fall.

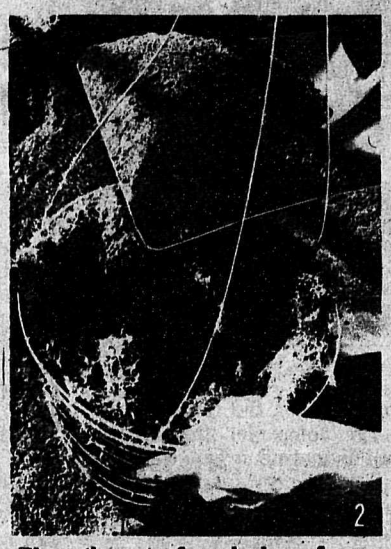
The best method of application is to make two or three circles of holes about 18 to 24 inches deep, and about the same distance apart. Then add a half cupful of fertilizer per hole.

If you have any more lawn and garden questions, write to me at the Garden Information Centre, 165 University Avenue, Toronto, Ontario, M5H 3B8 enclosing a stamped and self-addressed envelope. It will be my pleasure to answer them.

Hanging plants keep winter green



Prepare hanging basket by first lining with long-fibre sphagnum moss to provide a good soil-holding base and proper root drainage.



Place three to four inches of prepared soil in the bottom, over the moss, and firm lightly.

After placing soil, add the plants you'd enjoy seeing brighten up your windows during the winter.

The energy scene

(First in a series of articles)

"The key to our energy problems is increased efficiency," according to John Woolliams, who is demonstrating the Energy Game at the PNE Alternative Energy Show. "We could be 30 per cent more efficient by using one third less energy without changing our life style It's not the amount of energy but what we het out of it that gives us our high standard of living."

Working with the organizers of the Alternative Energy Show, Woolliams is preparing games that can be played on the Energy-Environment Simulator, a computerized control board that will project alternate energy futures. The board estimates how long the sources of energy will last. As the game moves electronically into the future at a rate of one hundred years per minute, up to twenty-five players are able to adjust the consumption of energy through adjusting a number of dials. Variables include different energy uses, options of present and non-growth rates of population, and personal energy growth consumption. Environmental impact is an important indicator. Dangerous situations such as exhaustion of a particular resource, such as natural gas, or excessive pollution are registered by red flashing lights requiring action by the players. Decisions must be made between using natural gas for producing electrical energy or more important uses.

The energy game was developed by the U.S. Atomic Energy Commission for their Citizens' Workshops program and is on loan to the Alternative Energy Show for the entire length of the PNE, August 17 to September 2.

There are savings through increased efficiency of energy that can be demonstrated on the board.

One is the increased use of railways. Rail freight transportation uses only one fourth the energy of truck freight and in the long run is the cleanest environmentally.

Another saving is in the increased use of buses. A full bus gets 200 passenger miles per gallon; a full car 80, and partly-filled cars less.

Also, mass transit other than buses could replace automobiles. For each gallon of fas consumed by a car, the equivalent of two thirds of a gallon in energy i s used to build highways and manufacture the cars.

A 50 per cent saving in heating could be made just by improving insulation in our buildings.

Recycling: Beer in throw-away cans costs 50 per cent more than the same amount of beer in a returnable bottle, and the production of aluminum cans takes up to three times as much energy as the production of returnable bottles.

"One of the real challenges," according to Woolliams, "is to search for alternatives for the generally wasteful ways we derive and use our energy resources. Our system is built not to be efficient, but to be profitable. Scientific research now disputes the claim of the energy companies that all we need is more energy. We need a mixed energy future without relying heavily on exhaustible energy sources."

Solar energy could provide half of all house heating and it is the only alternative on the board that adds no extra heat to the earth's atmosphere. Geothermal energy may provide a tenth of all our energy needs in western North America.

"Coal, the most abundant energy source, can be converted into either gas or liquid form, but presents a need to clarify its environmental problems."

The Energy - Environment Simulator gauges the supply of coal, petroleum, natural gas, hydro - electrical power, nuclear power and geothermal and solar power. It is an excellent device to aid people in making personal decisions regarding the future of energy in society.

Faced with the physical reality of running out energy resources, the B.C. Alternative Energy Show assesses the rising costs of fuel and the environment.
