The President and Secretary were authorized to sign the lease, and the following committee were appointed to attend to the building and maintaining of the track: Messrs. Bridges, Covert, Johnston, Boden and Campbell. New cattle and horse sheds will also be built, and in a short time the Comox Agricultural Society will have the finest fair grounds in B. C. The Secretary reported that the membership was increasing. The secretary was appointed a committee to interview the farmers in the district with a view to having them help in the building up of the fair grounds and buildings. The entertainment committee will endeavour to have some new and spectacular attractions this year.

Made Him Anxious

In a country town in the English Midlands there is a man who is so noted for his conversational abilities that his acquaintances avoid giving him unnecessary opportunities to talk.

One cold morning this man rode up to an hotel in the neighborhood just as the guests were finishing breakfast. He dismounted, walked in, saluted the landlord in his usual loud tones, and declared that he was so cold that he could hardly talk.

Just then a nervous traveler who was present stepped up to the landlord, and taking him by the coat, said:

Mr. L——, have my bill brought as soon as possible.

What is the matter, my dear sir? inquired the anxious landlord. Has anything happened?

Nothing, nothing. Only I want to get away from here before that man thaws out.

He was a man who gave little and got much. Today, for instance, he had got a clothes-brush, a basin of water, a towel, and a shave, and he had given nothing at all. Tr-r-ring! went his bedroom bell. The hotel attendant smiled sourly. This was the fourth time he had been summoned, and he didn't hurry. I thought you were never coming, exclaimed the visitor, when the attendant appeared at last. Are you nicknamed Slow-coach? No, sir, answered the attendant. They call me Billiard Cue! Billiard Cue! repeated the visitor frowning. Then an inspiration dawned. Ah! because you are a stick, I suppose? Wrong again, sir! retorted the attendant. It's because I work better with a good tip.

BABY'S OWN TABLETS USED FOR TEN YEARS

When one medicine is used in a home for a number of years it is the strongest testimony as to the value of that particular remedy. Thousands of mothers have been using no other medicine but Baby's Own Tablets for years—in fact many of them say they would have no other medicine in the house. Concerning them Mrs. Jas. H. Konkle, Beamsville, Ont., says: "I have used Baby's Own Tablets for ten years and would not be without them as long as there are children in the house." The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

A Mild Pill for Delicate Women.—The most delicate woman can undergo a course of Parmelee's Vegetable Pills without fear of unpleasant consequences. Their action, while wholly effective, is mild and agreeable. No violent pains or purgings follow their use, as thousands of women who have used them can testify. They are, therefore, strongly recommended to women, who are more prone to disorders of the digestive organs than men.

Mollere relied entirely upon the temperance of his diet for the re-establishment of his health. What use do you make of your physician? said the king to him one day. We chat together, sire, said the poet. He gives me his prescriptions; I never follow them; and so I get well.

MORE THAN EVER

Increased Capacity for Mental Labor

Many former tea and coffee drinkers who have mental work to perform day after day, have found a better capacity and greater endurance by using Postum instead of tea and coffee. A Western woman writes:

"I had drank coffee for about twenty years, and finally had what the doctor called "coffee heart." I was nervous and extremely despondent; had little mental or physical strength left, had kidney trouble and constipation." (Tea is just as harmful because it contains caffeine, the same drug found in coffee).

"The first noticeable benefit derived from the change from coffee to Postum was the natural action of the kidneys and bowels. It two weeks my heart action was greatly improved and my nerves steady.

"Then I became less despondent, and the desire to be active again showed proof of renewed physical and mental strength.

"I am steadily gaining in physical strength and brain power. I formerly did mental work and had to give it up on account of coffee, but since using Postum I am doing hard mental labor with less fatigue than ever before."

Name given by Canadian Postum Co., Windsor, Ont.

Postum now comes in new, concentrated form called Instant Postum. It is regular Postum so processed at the factory that only the soluble portions are retained.

A spoonful of Instant Postum with hot water, and sugar and cream to taste, produce instantly a delicious beverage.

Write for the little book, "The Road to Wellville."

Sore Back, No Fun, Cure It To-Day, Rub on "Nerviline!"

It Will Cure Your Aching Back, Stop Your Suffering, Keep You Well

Back Sufferers, Read Below

"I am just so delighted with the comfort Nerviline brought me that I want to talk about it all the time," writes J. C. Caughlan, of Saskatoon. "For ages I have been subject to an aching, dragging feeling at the base of the spine. When attacks came on it made my whole body ache. It appeared as if I had taken cold and a soreness developed all through my muscular system. When in Winnipeg one day a friend spoke to me of Nerviline, and I bought a 50c. bottle. That was the best half-dollar I ever spent, it did so much for me. It is hard to convince some people of what a really good medicine can do, but there will be no sceptics after they try out Nerviline. I use it for everything now. It's fine for Rheumatism and Neuralgia and all sorts of muscular pain it cures quickly. But internally, if possible, Nerviline is even better. It cures a cramp in ten seconds, and, as for gas and upset or sour stomach, nothing could excel Nerviline. I think it should be kept in every home as a protection against sudden ills, and also to cure ills that resist other treatments."

ASSOCIATED ADVERTISING CLUB

The Greatest Business Convention in History Beckons You to Baltimore

Every man who uses publicity in any form—every man with advertising or merchandising problems to solve—should be in Baltimore from the 8th to the 13th of June. The occasion is the ninth Annual Convention of the Associated Advertising Clubs of America. Ten thousand delegates and guests are expected to be present. They will come from all parts of the United States and Canada, and even from abroad. The general sessions, held in the Fifth Regiment Armory, will be addressed by the most progressive and successful American advertising and business men. Departmental and other special meetings will discuss in open forum the problems of various branches of the great business of advertising and selling merchandise of every description.

At this convention you will have an opportunity to hear of the great progress which is being made in efficiency in advertising—how advertising is being made more produotive and profitable. You will hear from the lips of the leaders in the movement just what has been done and is to be done to check and punish those who are guilty of fraudulent or misleading advertising. The great educational movement, inaugurated by the Association and now being carried out by scores of clubs, will also be fully described by those in charge of the work. Lay sermons by prominent advertising men will be delivered from the pulpits of Baltimore on Sunday, June 8th.

Don't fail to visit this great convention—send your advertising or sales manager if you cannot come personally. All will be welcome, whether members of advertising clubs or not. All will have an opportunity to hear the addresses and to participate in the splendid program of evening entertainments which Baltimore has provided.

Write now to the Associated Advertising Clubs of America, Convention Bureau, 1 North Calvert Street, Baltimore, Md., for the full program, hotel accommodations, etc.

"SOME HA'E MEAT, AND CANNA EAT"

So Bobby Burns tersely describes the rich, but still poor, dyspeptics. But their case is not now so desperate as when Burns wrote. For the man who has the food now can eat without suffering for it, if he just follows the meal with a Na-Dru-Co Dyspepsia Tablet.

These remarkable tablets banish the troubles of the chronic dyspeptic—the man who is bilious—the sufferer from heartburn, gas on the stomach or occasional indigestion. You can eat hearty meals of wholesome food—and digest them, too—if you take Na-Dru-Co Dyspepsia Tablets.

Compounded by expert chemists, after probably the best formula known to medical science, they are quick and certain in their action, giving prompt relief from all forms of stomach trouble, toning up and strengthening the digestive organs and bringing about permanent cures.

A man is no stronger than his stomach. Fit yourself for your best work by taking Na-Dru-Co Dyspepsia Tablets. 50c. at your druggist's. National Drug and Chemical Co. of Canada, Limited, Montreal. 144

This label has no "second grade"

THERE'S only one quality of Canada Cement. It is the highest quality that can possibly be made with modern equipment, scientific methods and rigid inspection by expert chemists.

The Canada Cement you buy for a garden walk is the same cement that is sold by the trainload for great dams, elevators and bridges. The engineers in charge of these great works have ample facilities for testing the quality of cement.

Canada Cement

comes up to their most rigid requirements.

The farmer has not these facilities for testing the quality of cement. He must buy a product upon which he can depend for a grade that is always of highest quality, and that therefore does not need to be tested.

You can place absolute reliance upon the quality of Canada Cement.

It's always the same and always the best. The large output—which enables us to keep the price down, enables us also to maintain the factory equipment and organization that keeps the quality up.

A Canada Cement label appears on every bag and barrel of genuine Canada Cement. See that it's on the bags and barrels of cement that you buy.

NOT ENOUGH BOATS.

Traffic To Canada Has Outgrown the Present Facilities.

This year has shown more clearly than ever before that there are not nearly enough steamers on the Canadian routes to carry the people. The statement was made the other day that one company's office in London was turning away a hundred people a day, because it could not give them berths. The same incapacity to take bookings is being experienced by the other steamship companies, and there has been a great deal of scurrying round to purchase or charter vessels for this year's phenomenal traffic.

There are four liners building at present on the Clyde, whose construction has been accelerated as much as possible and when they enter into the trade congestion will be relieved. Two of them are Allan liners, the "Calgarian" and the "Alsatian," of nearly 20,000 tons gross. These will be the largest vessels on the Canadian route, but for how long? The other two are Cunard s, both of which will make their maiden voyages this summer. They will carry over 2,000 passengers. Beside the mammoth Allan boats, they are comparatively small, however, having a gross tonnage of only 13,000 ons.

Not many years ago, vessels of 4,000 and 5,000 tons were the rule in the Canadian trade, and there are to-day liners of about this tonnage carrying passengers to the ports of the Dominion. Canadian shipping progress is, indeed, on a par with Canada's expansion in other directions, and the record of the past ten years implies that the future will lie with the big boats. After all, Canada has only just started. The excellent result already achieved and the thousands of settlers taken year by year to the Dominion are only the promise of future growth. It is only the foundations which have been laid. That they have been well laid is evident from the fact that the most potent emigration agency to-day is not the highly equipped chain of Government offices, but the settlers themselves who become successful in the Dominion.

It is not many years ago that ordinary well informed people knew nothing about Canada, and in the country it was an unknown topic. It is a simple fact to-day that in many cases the ordinary newspaper reader has a better knowledge of some phases of Canadian life than he has of some in his own country. He can talk with knowledge of the methods and profits of Canadian apple growing, whereas it is reasonably certain that he could not with equal knowledge speak of conditions in Kent. There is a reason for this, and it is this: There is not an editor of a newspaper of any size in Great Britain who does not receive every week in the year a number of items dealing with all branches of Canadian life. These are supplied by the Dominion and Provincial Governments' offices in London, and they appear for the compelling reason that there is a wide demand for information of this character. It is safe to say that no country is so well advertised in this valuable way as Canada. A London newspaper of nearly half a million circulation receives so many letters daily asking for information on Canada that it has decided to establish a Canadian page, and is arranging to have enquiries answered by a staff who can speak with knowledge of Canadian conditions. In the provinces and Scotland, this has long since been a necessity; but it is a new move for a big London journal.

Alphabetical.

The effect of random newspaper clippings is sometimes serious. Mr. Lorne S. Douglas, of Meaford, recently read the following in a weekly journal:—

The difference between (1) a gardener; (2) a billiard player; (3) a gentleman and (4) a sexton, is: the first minds his peas; the second minds his cues; the third minds his p's and q's, and the fourth minds his keys and pews.

Whereat Mr. Douglas sat down and penned the following jingle:—

Here's to the sailor who sails the C's,
Here's to the grocer who sells good T's,
Here's to the honeyman covered with B's,
Here's to the moneyman taking his E's,
Here's to the man that nobody O's,
Here's to the boy who will (U's his Z) "use his head,"
Here's to the girl with two pretty I's,
She's for myself "begorry" I'm Y's.

—Toronto Saturday Night.

The Beaver.

The beaver will grind up almost any kind of wood that comes his way. A white birch tree, twenty-two inches through, has been cut down by a beaver. A single beaver, generally, if not always, amputates the tree, and when it comes down the whole family fall to and have a frolic with the bark and branches. A big beaver will bring down a fair-sized sapling — say, three inches through—in about two minutes and a large tree in about an hour. As compared with the otter or mink the beaver is a very slow swimmer. His front legs hang by his sides, and he uses only his webbed hind feet for purposes of swimming.

School Gardens.

"Brighten up the dark spots around the school and you will brighten the home, for the one is affected largely by the influences of the other," says Prof. H. L. Hutt of the Ontario Agricultural College

MERRY MOCK FUNERALS.

An Old Cambridge Man Tells What a 'Varsity Rag Is Really Like.

One of the most exciting times in the life of the undergraduate is when he is "sent down" for some offence against the laws of the University.

"Sending down" is the Varsity phrase for expelling a man from Oxford or Cambridge, though to be expelled doesn't always mean that it has been done for anything disgraceful.

When a well-known man is sent down from Cambridge, he is given a "mock funeral." Recently, for instance, a popular member of Christ's College was given one of the most showy "funerals" he is ever likely to have in his life!

I remember one of these funerals because it was, up till then, the largest and most extraordinary that had ever taken place. A hearse had been hired and the "corpse" sat on the top of it in solitary glory. On his head was fixed a policeman's helmet which he had acquired in a former rag, while as the hearse moved slowly down the street the "corpse" vigorously played the latest airs on the bagpipes!

In front of the hearse walked a number of undergraduates dressed in all sort of weird costumes, in skirts, rowing "shorts" as boy scouts, policemen, Red Indian, nigger minstrels, and so on. Each man had an instrument of some kind with which to make a noise. Rattles, bones, trumpets, megaphones, whistles, and bells served to make such "music" as had never been heard at a funeral before.

Behind the hearse followed scores of vehicles, which extended for nearly a mile. Coster barrows, bicycles, old four-wheelers, up-to-date motor-cars, hansoms, and a milkman's cart, crowded with "sorrowing relatives" stretched away behind the "corpse." Four undergraduates had acquired a cart horse from somewhere, and made strenuous efforts to ride it all at once.

In this way was the "corpse" escorted to the station to be seen off by train.

Your average undergraduate makes any excuse sufficient for a rag. I remember the year the "All Blacks" played Cambridge at Rugby. Though the Varsity were defeated they were not disheartened, and a gigantic rag followed the match.

Special police had been drafted into the town, and the Market Square was surrounded by mounted constables. I have never seen a body of mounted police scattered in quicker time than on that night. Hundreds of undergraduates surrounded the square, each armed with squibs. At a given signal these were lighted and thrown under the horses' feet.

It was, of course, an exceedingly dangerous thing to do, but at a time like that your undergraduate doesn't think about danger in the slightest. That night we did a thousand pounds' worth of damage in a couple of hours.

Every available thing that would burn was burnt. Hundreds of feet of wooden pailings were torn up and thrown on a huge fire. Next day, however, the University authorities issued a notice stating the amount of the damage and asking the undergraduates to pay. The thousand pounds was subscribed before nightfall.

Besides those times when the colleges combine to have a gigantic rag, every college has its own rag time. November 5th always sees half a dozen college rags, as does the night when the annual "bumping" races are finished.

On one such night the authorities of one of the colleges anticipated a rag and patrolled the college grounds ready to quiet it. Hour after hour passed by and nothing happened. Eleven o'clock struck, twelve o'clock, and then one Hardly had the clock finished chiming than the grounds were picked out by a powerful searchlight, and the dons were shown prowling round to catch any unfortunate undergraduate.

The whole college, however, was on the roofs! As the searchlight swept the grounds there came the sound of "Rule, Britania," played on various weird instruments. The dons procured ladders, but squibs and crackers were showered down upon them, making their attempt to carry the roofs hopeless.

Rock Cannon.

When the island of Malta was under the rule of the Knights of St. John they defended their fortifications with cannon bored in the living rock. Each one of these strange weapons contained an entire barrel of powder, and as it was not possible to vary the aim of these cannon fifty were made ready, facing various directions from which the enemy might approach. When the fame of these arms of defence became known to the world the idea was taken up of transporting rocks to summits to serve the same purpose, but it was soon recognized to be impracticable, and the cannon of Malta, bored in solid rock, have passed into history as the sole weapons of the kind ever known.

Newton's Fearful Crime.

At the end of a meal at Haydon's house Keats proposed a toast in these terms: "Dishonor to the memory of Newton."

The guests stared at him in questioning surprise, and Wordsworth asked for an explanation.

"It is," answered Keats, "because he destroyed the poetry of the rainbow by reducing it to a prism." And the artists all drank, with one consent, confusion to the savant.

STORING FOOD FOR CRUSOES.

Lonely Islands Fitted With Provisions For Castaways of the Future.

That all expeditions, whether Arctic or otherwise, place food depots within reach in case of need is, of course, well known, but few people are aware that there are certain rarely-visited islands and desolate coasts where depots of provisions and necessities have been placed for the use of shipwrecked crews. The most extensive supplies of this sort are those existing on some of the lonely islands in the South Indian Ocean. South of the liner track to Australia, via the Cape, lie Crozet and Kerguelen Islands.

In the jubilee year of Queen Victoria, a French warship placed in a hut on one of the Crozets a good stock of food and necessities, including two spears and two hatchets. It is highly probable that the bulk, if not all of these stores, are still there, for the warship in question found the provisions left by a British warship eight years before absolutely intact.

The handbooks furnished to all British shipmasters indicate exactly the whereabouts of these cached stores. A seal hunter, who sought to find the depot on Kerguelen Island, wrote: "It was as easy as if we had a sign post."

The Kerguelen depot was fitted out by the French ship Eure, which, in 1893, left "2,250 pounds of preserved beef in boxes of 9 pounds, 1,125 pounds of biscuits, 20 swanskin shirts, 20 pairs of woolen drawers, 20 woolen blankets and 4 packets of matches." Furthermore, great trouble was taken to protect the stores from the weather.

The beef boxes were coated with tar, as were the iron-hooped barrels containing the biscuits and clothes, and the matches were in boxes painted over with red lead.

On Amsterdam Island, farther north, the English Board of Trade's handbook notifies the fact that the French supplies are in a cavern where have also been left a cooking pot, cots and dry wood. On this island the stranded Crusoe will find, too, abundance of wild cabbage and celery growing, and lobsters and fish are plentiful.

On the west coast of Tasmania there are some very lonely districts. At Rocky Point shipwrecked mariners may find relief stores, and, in order to aid them to regain civilization tracks have been made for their benefit, with "iron index fingers every quarter-mile, pointing in the direction of the relief station." And, on a river where fording is necessary, a raft has been left in readiness.

Similar provision exists on some of the outlying islands of New Zealand, and these are visited by a Government steamer once or twice each year in case castaways are needing rescue. In Vancouver shelter sheds are erected on some lonely shores, and thence the shipwrecked sailor can ring up a central station on the telephone.

Refugees in Tierra del Fuego learn from the same source above quoted that "they can trust the Yaghans to conduct them to mission stations or settlements;" but the "Alacalufs are aggressive and treacherous, though, however great their number, they will not attack a combination of three or four persons, especially if they are aware that these persons possess firearms or implements resembling them."

Pipes Never Went Out.

One of the oldest of social clubs ever established in London was the Everlasting Club, limited in membership to one hundred. The members divided the day amongst them in such a way that there were always some members present upon the club premises. The club house was burned down at the time of the Great Fire in London, when the only remaining member on the premises was nearly burned to death because he had refused to leave before he had emptied all the bottles on the table. The fire for lighting the members' pipes was never allowed to go out, an old woman being kept solely for the purpose of attending to it. During the fifty years of its existence the members smoked fifty tons of tobacco, and drank 30,000 butts of ale, 1,000 pipes of port, and 200 barrels of brandy, besides other drinks.

The Training of a Sailor Prince.

Quite recently Prince Albert embarked on a six months' trip to the West Indies on H.M.S. Cumberland. He is one of about sixty cadets who are being trained under a scheme whereby the Admiralty gives to naval officers a thorough grounding in the work aboard a warship.

Prince Albert is being treated just like the other cadets. He has to turn out of his hammock at six in the morning, and his work during the day will be divided between gunnery, seamanship, and engineering. He takes his turn in the stokehold, and during his leisure hours is taught boxing, fencing, and gymnastics.

"Murdering" a Monkey.

"There are always other animals you must not kill on pain of suffering yourself," says a writer. "A superstition concerning animals that is deep rooted in certain parts of the world is that the killing of a monkey will bring ill luck to the killer. Anglo-Indians and others can give chapter and verse for many strange fatalities that have happened to unfortunate persons who have accidentally or wilfully done the deed. To kill a monkey is horribly close to murder, he is so embarrassingly like a man."

THE HUMAN SPINE.

Science Says It Is Imperfect Because Man Walks Upright.

According to the osteopathist, you do not have a perfectly formed spinal column, for he is firmly convinced that no person in the world has a back that is perfect. His ideal is a spine of a particular curve, whose twenty-four bones are at equal distances apart, of the same formation on both sides and equally distant from the sides of the body.

The child's spine is much nearer normal and far straighter than the adult's, and the society woman who does no work is more likely to have a back whose curve comes nearer the ideal than the college athlete. The spines of strong men, such as the laborer or pugilist, are most defective, for the reason that constant pull and strain on the spinal column accentuate its weaknesses. The Igorrotes, strong as they are, have weaker and more crooked spines than civilized men.

The spines of lower animals are stronger and more normal than ours and consequently are not so readily affected by disease. If man had decided to walk on all fours his spine might be just as good as his cat's or dog's. Spinal trouble started when our ancestors determined to walk upright, and even after untold centuries it seems that the human spine has not thoroughly adjusted itself to our method of going about. Spencer wrote: "That all important organ, the vertebral column, is as yet but incompletely adapted to the upright posture. Only while the vigor is considerable can there be maintained without appreciable effort those muscular contractions which produce the S like flexure and bring the lumbar portion into such a position that the line of direction falls within it."—New York Sun.

AGGRESSIVE REPTILES.

King Cobras and Mambas Are the Worst of the Snake Tribe.

The majority of snakes are not, as most people suppose, aggressive in their habits; but, like the British viper, far more anxious to get out of the way of the human intruder than into it.

But there are a few famous, or infamous, exceptions, and the mamba—one of the largest of the cobras and a native of Africa—is said to be the most dangerous reptile in the world. It will fly at anything and anybody; goes out of its way to pick a quarrel with every passerby and has even been known to come down from a tree where it was resting, apparently fast asleep, to try conclusions with a man armed with a gun. The only snake that at all approaches the mamba in ferocity is the great king cobra or hamadryad of the east, which is larger than the mamba and generally quite as ready to interfere with any living creature that comes within its ken. It has been known to chase a man on horseback, and so fast can it travel that it is said none but a swift footed animal has any chance of escape.

The poison of both these snakes is so powerful that, as some one once stated in an examination paper on reptiles, "even a scientist when bitten by either of these ferocious creatures ceases to be interested in the matter after the space of a few minutes." Among the Australian cobras, the pit vipers of America and the great west African vipers, there are certain species that prefer the offensive to the defensive method, and in most cases it is the aggressive varieties that carry the most poisonous fangs.—London Globe.

Lead and the Teeth.

A tendency of the teeth and gums to absorb lead has been observed by Viktor Hinze, a German dentist, among the workers in an accumulator factory. The teeth all had much tartar, and that scraped from the teeth of one man affected with anemia and other symptoms of poisoning was found by analysis to contain about one-half of 1 per cent of metallic lead. Extracting the seventeen teeth still retained by this man, the metallic lead in the crowns was shown to be 0.038 per cent and 0.033 per cent in the roots—sufficient to give continuous lead intoxication. The tartar was removed from the teeth of the other workers, and this was followed by marked improvement in the condition of gums and general health.

The Greater Attraction.

A correspondent of the Boston Transcript says that "in looking over some memoranda made by John Whittier of East Haverhill (father of the poet) I find this item, made under date of Feb. 13, 1819: 'First snowstorm of the year.' This is possibly the storm his son commemorates in 'Snowbound.' The lad was then in his twelfth year. The item immediately preceding the one I give above is dated May 9, 1816. 'An elephant came to town.' As President Monroe 'came to town' that same day, it is odd that his coming is not also chronicled as equally memorable."

Prologues and Epilogues.

Garrick tried to abolish prologues and epilogues, but the audiences of his day would not consent.

INSIDE THE NEEDLE.

Cleopatra Obelisk In London Contains a Queer Assortment of Goods.

How many of the thousands who daily pass Cleopatra's Needle on the Thames Embankment know of the exceedingly miscellaneous collection of articles which was placed in the cavity in the base of the obelisk on its erection? The following is a complete list:—

Standard foot and pound.
Bronze model of the obelisk, 1-2 inch scale to the foot.
Copies of "Engineering" printed on vellum, with plans of the mechanical contrivances employed in erecting and transporting the obelisk, together with its complete history.
A fragment of the obelisk itself, chipped from it in the process of levelling the base.
Jars of Doulton ware.
Complete set of British coinage, including an Empress of India rupee.
Standard gauge of 1,000th part of an inch.
Baby's feeding-bottle and children's toys.
Parchment copy of Dr. Birch's translation of the obelisk's hieroglyphics.
Portrait of Queen Victoria.
Bibles in French and English, the Hebrew Pentateuch, the Arabic Genesis, and a translation into 215 languages of the sixteenth verse of the third chapter of St. John's Gospel.
A shilling razor.
Bradshaw's Railway Guide.
Case of cigars.
Some pipes.
Box of hairpins and sundry articles of feminine adornment.
A hydraulic jack, as used in raising the obelisk.
Specimens of wire rope and submarine cables.
Twenty-four maps of London.
Copies of daily and illustrated newspapers.
A two-foot rule.
A London directory.
A Whitaker's Almanack.
And last, photograhs of twelve beautiful Englishwomen of the day.

The Boer Umbrella.

Umbrellas, for some inscrutable reason, for the seasons in South Africa are not so changeable as ours, are much used by the Boers. In common with our own views, the Boer believed that an umbrella gave a man an air of distinction, though the shocking specimens they carried, which reminded one very much of Sairey Gamp, would not have been calculated to possess this attribute among our own countrymen. Where those umbrellas came from is one of the many unknown facts of the old-time republic, says The Outfitter. They were big and bulky, as a rule of alpaca, and the catch was generally out of order, but they were always to be found in the guest room when the "old man" was at home, and always accompanied him in the spider when he journeyed into town on Saturday. They were rarely opened in public, because if the weather was wet the Boer stayed at home. An umbrella is not considered necessary on horseback as a rule, but the Boer carried it here just the same as he did when driving in his spider, and often used it as a whip to urge his steed on.

Prevents Splashing.

An invention which is long overdue is a device to prevent the damage and inconvenience caused to pedestrians by mud-splashes from motor-buses and other vehicles. It would seem, however, that this problem has now been solved. An apparatus has just been invented by Mr. Stuart Oswald which, it is claimed, will entirely abolish what has been a serious nuisance since the advent of the motor-bus. The invention, which was recently tested by Scotland Yard and an engineering inspector of the Local Government Board, consists of a flanged rim, which can be fitted to any existing wheel, and a skirt attachment which is held at the base of the wheel. In the tests the vehicle on which the apparatus was fitted was made to run into kerbs with great force, but the skirt remained undamaged.

Saved a Lawrence Portrait.

After lying for nearly forty years stored away in the cellars of the National Gallery a portrait by Sir Thomas Lawrence which was black with dirt has now been completely restored and has been hung in the vestibule. It is a life-size portrait of Mrs. Francis Robertson, the mother of the historian, and was presented to the gallery in 1837. Some six months ago Sir Charles Holroyd during a visit to the cellars came across the picture begrimed with dirt and so cracked that it looked like a crocodile skin. He called in Mr. Buttery, the famous expert and restorer to the National Gallery. Mr. Buttery thought that something might be done, and the picture was sent to his studio. It has now emerged, as Sir Charles declared, as fresh as the day it left the painter's hand.—London Graphic.

This is an excellent drink for those suffering from cold or sore throat.

Soak one-quarter cupful of Irish moss over night and pick over very carefully before cooking. Wash in several waters and when quite free from sand put in a double boiler and pour two cupfuls of boiling water over it. Let it simmer until the moss is dissolved, then strain through cheesecloth and add the juice of two lemons with sugar to taste. This drink is served very hot.

Not to be behind the times Mr. Lewis has decided to build an addition to the Courtenay Hotel. The new part will be placed on the north side and will be three stories high. Containing about thirty rooms. The bar and dining-room and kitchen will be enlarged, and a handsome office placed in the front rooms.

CUMBERLAND

The funeral of the late G. W. Clinton took place from his parents residence on Thursday afternoon last, to Holy Trinity church, where the Rev. F. Franklin-Watson, assisted by the Rev. J. X. Willemar of St. Peter's church, Comox, delivered a funeral sermon. The Rev. gentleman spoke of Wilt going to Comox on Sunday last in his car and taking Holy Communion. The floral tributes were numerous from various parts of the province, flowers were placed in the church, of which he was a member. The hearse that carried his remains to their last resting place was covered with flowers as well as the carriage that contained the pall-bearers. Wilt was held in high esteem.

Sandwick

Among the successfull candidate, at the Vancouver Normal school examinations were the Misses Gibson, Mathewson and Whitman, wherefore Sandwick lifts up its proud head still higher.

Mr. and Mrs. Jas Parkin accompanied by Mrs. John Grieve motored through Nanaimo on Sunday the two latter intending to spend a few days at that place and the former enroute for Victoria in the interests of Parkin Bros.

Mrs. J. A. Halliday has been attending the W. C. T. U. convention held recently in New Westminster.

July 1st, needless to say will be observed as a public holiday in Sandwick as well as in Courtenay, and the local stores and government offices will be closed.

It is high time that poultry fanciers took steps to organize, both in their own interests and in those of the public. For instance, every egg should bear a rubber date impression and the name of the poultry ranch from which it is emanated. This would enable stale eggs to be traced and also put a limit on lengthy storage. It remains to be seen who will take the lead; meanwhile Comox eggs lack the honorable name to which they are entitled while Cowichan forges ahead. Organize!

The Misses Edith Whitman and Lizzie Gibson are home from Vancouver for the vacation.

Another batch of successes may be looked for at the end of July as several boys and girls are taking the high school entrance at Cumberland as this matter is being sent to the printer.

Local strawberries are now on market and are being eagerly sought after.

Leo Harris drove a prairie schooner this spring from Spokane to South Fort George in thirty-eight days a distance of 750 miles.

MURRAY MURGATROYD JOURNALIST

By Morice Gerard

The journalist waited for some minutes, during which the two men were supplied with the staple article of the place, and Jordan was just settling himself down to his night's enjoyment when he felt a touch on his arm. Murgatroyd had leant over to attract his attention.

I haf beesness with you, said he in an undertone. Jemmy looked both annoyed and suspicious.

I don't know you. Can't it wait?

I know you, Mr. Jordan, and my beesness will not wait.

Jemmy muttered an oath.

Out with it then.

Is there no room in which we can talk—more private than these?

What does it mean, pal. Swag?

It weel be worthy our while, Mr. Jordan, beleef me. He spoke with the emphasis of deep undertone.

Jemmy pondered for a minute or two; then he touched a bell in the wall, close above his head. The janitor reappeared.

Is the fly-room empty?

Yes—no one been in it for some days.

Jemmy strode to the door, Murgatroyd following. Outside, the former said: I must blindfold you. I suppose it's all right by your being here, but we don't let spiders into the fly-room—if we know it.

Murgatroyd had come to see this matter out, and was not going to be daunted by a trifle.

Very well, he said briefly, in the same assumed tone. Jemmy bound his scarf round Murgatroyd's eyes and wig. It it had not been for the gloom of the passage he would assuredly have found out the imposture—and the end might have been different.

He took his hand and guided him for some yards. Then he stopped and Murgatroyd's quick ears detected a click like the snapping of a lock. A rush of cold air outside—the night air of January—struck upon his face. Jemmy took his hand again, and they went over a fledged court-yard apparently. Then there was another pause and a second click.

They had passed in another minute into inside air again, but unwarmed, very different from that of the opium chamber.

Murgatroyd felt chilled—a chill of the heart rather than the body, although the two were obviously connected.

Jemmy struck a match; then he nudid the scarf. The room was lighted by a common candle, in a tin candlestick, which was spluttering in the first enthusiasm of ignition by the match which lay smoking in the tray.

There was light enough to show that the room was to all intents and purposes a prison, with a barred window high up in the wall, a truckle bed scantily covered with a blanket and worn rug, a single rickety chair, and a strong deal table. The door which had closed behind them, was so artfully concealed in the wall as to be indistinguishable.

Jemmy was watching Murgatroyd with keen little eyes, to note the impression made by his new environment.

We need a jug quite as much as the police sometimes, he remarked facetiously.

Murgatroyd instinctively placed his hand in the deep pocket of his coat in which he had placed the revolver.

It was not there.

Jemmy simultaneously held up the candle, which by this time was giving a stronger and a steadier light. He wished to mark the effect of the discovery Murgatroyd had just made, and the result of the scrutiny elicited the remark, which was a compliment coming from whence it did—

You're a cool 'un, you are, to—be sure.

Murgatroyd's answer was calmly to divest himself of his wig and beard.

Mr. Murgatroyd, as I'm a living sinner, ejaculated the astonished Jemmy. Well, you took me in, to be sure.

There seems to be only one chair in your sitting-room, Mr. Jordan, so perhaps we had better stand. I came to see you.

Yes, and brought your toothpick with you? I guessed that in the smoking room.

I did not bring it to oblige you.

Thanks. Mr. Jordan laughed a little malicious laugh; then he asked—What's your business with me? A too long talk might provoke other people to ask questions—not so amiable as me—and that might be awkward.

In the first place you were in St. James's Park this afternoon!

Jordan's eyes flashed ominously.

That's a lie! S'elp me bob, I've not been so fur west this three week.

While there you picked up a lady's watch, which she happened to lose, went on the journalist quite calmly, taking not the slightest notice of the interruption. I want that watch handed to me. I see you have it on you. Anyway, the end of the chain—which was broken—is just perceptible, sticking out of your waistcoat pocket.

Jordan had taken off his great-coat before entering the smoke-room. He now thrust in the incriminating bit of chain with an oath.

I s'pose you know your life ain't worth very much, with a bit like that about you, down i' these parts. He was nevertheless evidently somewhat cowed by Murgatroyd's cool matter-of-fact manner.

Don't bluster, it only wastes time. Now I want that watch, and I'm willing to pay a fair price for it. That is not all. I want you too, Mr. Jemmy Jordan.

I'm often wanted, chuckled the artful Jemmy, but not always at home.

I want you to take a little trip with me into the country.

With you! to—be—sure, ejaculated the astonished Jemmy. You've not taken up with our line now, 'ave you?

Perhaps! Anyway I want you; and I'll make it worth your while to come.

That's business.

You will have to travel and pass as my servant. I dare say you have done a bit of valeting in your time.

You may lay that; I was a gemman's servant one time.

Murgatroyd did not speak for a minute or two; he was thinking.

Better put on your toggery again.

The journalist took the advice. It was lucky he did so, for in a moment there was a click, and the mysterious door opened. Jemmy whispered something, which was apparently satisfactory to the incomer, a burly man with a red, beery face; for the latter disappeared again, Murgatroyd noting the spot where the spring of the door was. Jemmy chuckled.

You couldn't manage that. I'll let you try directly. There was once a chap what tried at it the best part of the night; he knew he should tell no tales in the morning; but bless your innocent face, he couldn't find it. And Jemmy laughed again at the sinister reminiscence.

For the first time Murgatroyd began to repent of his errand; but he had gone too far now to draw back.

I was wondering, he said, what form of oath would be binding on you, which I could trust you to keep. He spoke more distinctly than he had hitherto done.

I generally keeps my word—when I gives it, Mr. Murgatroyd. But I'll swear by my mother's grave if you like, and I'd rather die than break that'

Very well; swear that if I take you with me, you will do only what I tell you, and no more. There is to be no casula displacement of articles not in immediate use, explained Murgatroyd euphemistically.

Before I swear I should like to know the terms.

That's fair enough. I will give you $25 a day and pay all expenses, and if we succeed in what I am aiming at you shall have $250 in addition.

Jordan's eyes glistened.

I'm your man, he said. I suppose it's this sort of job if we fail? and he expressively circled his throat with his index finger.

Murgatroyd laughed.

Nothing like so bad as that. You are going to do a good deed for once.

Jordan was incredulous. The sum named was excessive for good deeds.

I shall want you to meet me at Waterloo at 10.45 a.m. The express leaves at 11. Come dressed as a gentleman's servant, your understand, and as quietly as possible.

Jemmy nodded.

Now, how about that watch?

Well, I did happen to pick it up in the grass, you understand; but I've taken quite a fancy to it. It's a pretty little thing, and Jemmy drew it out of his pocket, and gazed at it like a weak parent on his first-born.

Well, I suppose you must have it, though it goes to my heart to part, that it does—$100, and I throw in the toothpick. The revolver appeared out of another pocket.

I haven't got it, remarked Murgatroyd. Will a blank cheque filled up do?

Oh, I trust you, answered Mr. Jordan magnanimously; we don't care about paper. I'm a bit rusty about the signature. Bring the shiners along with you to-morrow.

NERVOUS DISEASES IN THE SPRING

Cured By Toning the Blood and Strengthening the Nerves

It is the opinion of the best medical authorities, after long observation, that nervous diseases are more common and more serious in the spring than at any other time of the year. Vital changes in the system, after long winter months, may cause much more trouble than the familiar spring weakness and weariness from which most people suffer as the result of indoor life, in poorly ventilated and often overheated buildings. Official records prove that in April and May neuralgia, St. Vitus dance, epilepsy and other forms of nerve troubles are at their worst, and that then, more than any other time, a blood-making nerve-restoring tonic is needed.

The antiquated custom of taking purgatives in the spring is useless, for the system really needs strengthening, while purgatives only gallop through the bowels, leaving you weaker. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are the best medicine, for they actually make the new, rich, red blood that feeds the starved nerves, and thus cure the many forms of nervous disorders. They cure also such other forms of spring troubles as headaches, poor appetite, weakness in the limbs, as well as remove unsightly pimples and eruptions. In fact they unfailingly bring new health and strength to weak, tired and depressed men, women and children.

Sold by all medicine dealers or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Ask for Minard's and take no other

A recent despatch from Prince Rupert received at Grand Trunk Pacific head-quarters in Montreal reports that 5,000 poles for use on the telegraph lines along the Panama Canal, are to be cut from Graham Island. This is the first of the Graham Island timber that has found a market and may presage the development of an important industry as experts are agreed that nowhere else could trees be found more adaptable to the manufacture of poles in general and flag-staffs in particular. Some of the timber has not a branch for 100 feet up, while poles 6 inches at the butt and tapering to 4 inches at from 60 to 100 feet, can be cut out in any quantity.

Spare the children from suffering from worms by using Miller's Worm Powders, the most effective vermifuge that can be got with which to combat these insidious foes of the young and helpless. There is nothing that excels this preparation as a worm destroyer, and when its qualities become known in a household no other will be used. The medicine acts by itself, requiring no purgative to assist it, and so thoroughly that nothing more is desired.

Well, you see, sir, Mary replied, blushing, none of the young men has asked me yet.

Keeping the Body in Repair

Nature intended that the body should do its own repairing—and it would do so were it not for the fact that most of us live other than a natural life.

Nature didn't intend that we should wear corsets, tight collars or shoes, nor live in badly ventilated and draughty houses, nor eat and drink some of the things that we do, nor ride in street cars when we should walk.

The consequence is that the body when it gets out of order must look for outside help to make the necessary repairs.

For weak stomachs and the indigestion or dyspepsia resulting, and the multitude of diseases following therefrom, no medicine can be more adaptable as a curative agent than DR. PIERCE'S GOLDEN MEDICAL DISCOVERY.

Lived too Long

Pittsfield, in the Berkshire hills, had in the old days, like many another New England town, a number of men and women who were called characters. One of these was Bill Brown, a man unfortunately addicted to drink and frequently intoxicated for days at a time.

On one occasion he went into the shop of the local hatter, Mr. Smith, and asked for the best beaver he had. Mr. Smith produced the desired article saying, as he took the money:

That beaver will last a man a lifetime.

Bill went proudly down the main street with his fine beaver on his head and immediately celebrated the event with a protracted debauch.

When he recovered he returned to the shop with a most disreputable hat.

Look here, I thought you said this here beaver would last me a lifetime.

So it would, growled Mr. Smith, if you had died when you ought to.

ZAM-BUK CURED HIS ECZEMA

Mr. James McComb, of Thornton, Ont., writes: "For eight months I suffered from eczema and could get nothing to give me relief. I heard of several cases where good results had followed the use of Zam-Buk and decided to give this remedy a trial. Within three days I felt much better, and within two weeks the sores were entirely cured."

For all skin diseases, eruptions, boils, scalp sores, etc., Zam-Buk is without equal. It is just as good for cuts, burns, bruises, blood-poison, piles, varicose ulcers, bad leg, inflamed sores, etc. All druggists and stores at 50c. box, or post free from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, upon receipt of price. Refuse harmful substitutes and imitations.

AN OLD SETTLER FINDS QUICK RELIEF

CHAS. MARSHALL CURED BY DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS

Mrs. Marshall Tells How Her Husband Suffered, and of His Speedy Recovery When He Used the Great Canadian Kidney Remedy.

Parkinson, Algoma, Ont. (Special—Living far from towns and with doctors not within easy reach, many of the settlers have found Dodd's Kidney Pills an inestimable blessing. One of these is Mr. Charles Marshall, Sr., whose recovery from a severe case of kidney disease has recently been the cause of much satisfaction to his family and friends.

"My husband was suffering very much with his back and legs," Mrs. Marshall says, speaking of her husband's cure. "He went to see the doctor, and he told him he had urinary trouble, but he did not seem to get any better.

"Then I sent for some Dodd's Kidney Pills. Since taking them, he has no more pain in his back and legs, and his other troubles are all gone.

"I am indeed thankful for what Dodd's Kidney Pills did for my husband, and I hope other sufferers from kidney disease will benefit by his experience, and use Dodd's Kidney Pills."

Urinary troubles are caused by diseased kidneys. So are backache, rheumatism, lumbago, and heart disease. The natural remedy is to cure the kidneys by using Dodd's Kidney Pills.

A Lofty Character

Our idea of a lofty character is one who can smoke a bad cigar and not hate the famous man it is named after.

I want a license to marry the best girl in the world, said the young man.

The clerk nodded smilingly and replied: Sure. That makes the 1,300 licenses for that girl this season.

Tired and Weak Nerves Exhausted

The feelings of fatigue and languor which overcome so many people at this season of the year tell of the exhausted condition of the nerves.

It is impossible to keep up the action of the heart and the vitality of the nerves when the blood is thin and watery, and this is why nearly everybody needs tonic treatment in the spring.

Some of the symptoms are restlessness, purposeless activity, insomnia, absent-mindedness, tired gait, lack of ambition and enthusiasm, headache and neuralgic pains, dyspepsia and feelings of languor and depression.

Monotony of work and mental overstrain or worry sap the nervous system, as does also the strenuousness of modern life, whether in the business or social world.

More and more men and women are obliged to seek the assistance of such concentrated foods as Dr. Chase's Nerve Food to restore vitality to the tired and worn-out nerves.

Such treatment is necessary, because diseases of the nerves do not right themselves. As nerve force runs low the digestive system fails to extract the necessary nutrition from the food. Dr. Chase's Nerve Food supplies in condensed form the ingredients required, and restores health.

A little patience is necessary in treating diseases of the nerves, and rest helps to restore strength. You can be sure -- lasting beneficial results when you use

Entered the Unseen Temple

On Sunday morning June 22nd, death claimed one of Courtenay's best known and most highly respected citizens in the person of Mr. Walter Sterling McPhee, of the firm of McPhee & Morrison. He was only taken ill on Wednesday with hemhorage of the liver, and no alarming symptoms develped until late Saturday night, when further hemhorages occurred, and he gradually sank, passing away at 4 o'clock. He was the eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph McPhee, being born in 1879, and had spent all of his life in the Comox disrrict, receiving his education here and at a business college in Vancouver. At an early age he developed good business abilities, and for a number of years was associated with his father and brother in the general store business, and on the retirement of his father five and a half years ago, he with Mr. Hugh Morrison, took over the business, and had conducted it successfully ever since.

He was an enthusiastic Mason and early obtained all the honors to be conferred in Hiram Lodge, and in 1911 was elected District Deputy Grand Master, in which capacity he visited all the lodges on the Island. He was also a member of the local Orange lodge and Foresters. In 1906 he married Miss Margaret Urquhart daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alex. Urquhart, who, with two children survive him, and who have the deepest sympathy of the whole community in their bereavement. Besides his wife and children, his parents, three brothers and one sister survive.

In politics he was a staunch Reformer. and was held in high esteem by the party. He was also a member of the Presbyterian church.

The funeral procession was the largest ever seen in Courtenay, there being about one hundred Masons and Orangemen marching, 64 carriages and 12 automobiles, besides a large number which preceded the procession to the cemetry

The floral tributes were many and beautiful and included a Harp from the store staff ; a wreath from Mr. Morrison ; Masonic emblem from Hiram Lodge ; a pillow from the Orange lodge, and a wreath from the Foresters.

The funeral was conducted under Masonic auspices, the cortege being escorted to the grave by a large number of the Masonic and Orange brethren, where the last rites were performed over the remains of our departed brother, which were interred in the Sandwick Presbyterian Cemetry. Rev. Mr. Wallace conducted the service at the house and offered a prayer at the graveside.

The pall-bearers were:-- Wm. Allison, J. H. Milligan, H. Stewart, Dr. McNaughton and Alex. Grant, all Past Masters of Hirman lodge.

A struggle, a cry, a pain,
We enter this life's abode,
A struggle, a cry again,
We stand in the presence of God

Daniel Nugan, who fell off a load of ties at Camp 4 last Thursday, died at the hospital on Tuesday. The remains were brought to Sutton & Kirkwood's parlors where an inquest was held, and a verdict of accidental death reached. The jurors were: Chas. Charleon, foreman, Karl Hoheim, Chas. Armstrong, Alf. E. Perse, Chas. Cook and V. W. McCann. The funeral takes place Sunday.

S. Y. Daita, the Jap who shot at a painter named Sydney Booth, at Campbell River, was sentenced to 3 months hard labor by Judge Barker, at Nanaimo last week.

An old friend who has known Mr. Walter McPhee since his baby hood, contributes the following:—On Sunday morning June 22nd 1913, Walter Sterling McPhee one of Comox' most beloved and respected citizens, was called away in his young manhood. His death has thrown a gloom over the whole valley. No native son was ever more respected, he had a loving, kind, manly disposition.

"Thy trail is done, thy rest is won."
