Meeting of City Council

Pool Rooms By-law Receives Second Reading -- New Building By-law -- Salaried Building Inspector.

A meeting of the city council was held Saturday last, his Worship the Mayor, Alderman Leckie, Cox, Copeland, Dalgleish and Jones being present.

The minutes of the previous meeting were read and confirmed.

A letter was read from the Kelowna Sawmill Co. requesting the council to provide a place for storing sawdust, as the property previously used for this purpose would not be available this year. The letter was refered to the Light and Water Committee.

The following accounts were referred to the Finance Committee to be paid if found correct:

Ald. Copeland reported that the Fire Protection Committee had purchased from W. B. M. Calder the necessary supplies for the Fire Brigade, in accordance with the authority given them by the resolution passed at the last meeting of the council.

Ald. Dalgleish, on behalf of the Board of Works, reported that the gravelling of Richter street would be completed within a few days. He suggested that authority be given to gravel Water street north of Bernard avenue.

It was mentioned that a portion of the street had been given a coating of gravel last year, but as there was now a great deal of traffic over it, and the foundation was bad, it would be necessary to make the road serviceable.

The council, after some discussion, sanctoned the work.

By-law No. 86, the purpose of which is to regulate pool rooms and billiard halls was read a second time.

An amendment was proposed and carried that clause 4, which stipulates that the view into the interior of the pool room shall not be obstructed by "blinds, paint, screens or other devises," be struck out.

By-law No. 87, to regulate the erection of buildings in the city, was then introduced.

Mayor Sutherland mentioned that the by-law was not yet complete, there being some details which could be filled in at a later stage.

The By-law divides the city into three portions, the limits of which are not yet definitely defined. In the central area all buildings must be of solid brick, stone, cement or a combination of these three materials, and the roofs covered with non-inflammable materials approved by the building inspector.

In the second section the fire-proof structures are limited to stores, factories, hotels, restaurants, boarding-houses and livery stables, and a minimum value fixed for all buildings within the area.

The council is given the power to appoint a competent and practical inspector of buildings and fire-limits, who will be a salaried official. His duty will be to issue permits for the erection, enlarging or alteration of buildings in the city in accordance with the provisions of the by-law, and to keep records of construction, sanitary appliances, heating apparatus, electric apparatus, elevators, fire escapes, etc.

Provisions are made in the by-law for the safe construction of chimneys, and the provision of bricked-in thimbles where stove-pipes pass through partitions and floors.

The by-law was given its first reading.

The meeting then adjourned until Saturday next, March 11.

Famine and Plague Ravaging China

Famine and plague are sweeping over China. The known deaths number 30,000, and according to the official statistics the death rate averages 200 daily. But officials have limited knowledge of conditions in the interior or are not permitting the facts to be known. It is impossible to estimate the number of deaths that have resulted from lack of food.

Dr. Samuel Cochrane, an American who is engaged in the work of relief writes, "One million people will die before the first crop is harvested. This will be scanty, because the people have not the strength to till the soil; few animals remain for ploughing."

The Chinese for political reasons are directing their efforts to control the plague, chiefly along the railways and frontiers.

Since the recent Russian request for permission to cross the border and quarantine Chinese towns along the Amur, China has been attempting to check the plague along the frontier, but the Russian legation says this has been done inefficiently, because there are no doctors there familiar with modern methods of sanitation.

Although the central government has issued explicit orders both supplies and funds are lacking. Japanese and Russians have offered assistance, but only in a few places have these offers been accepted, the Chinese not liking to receive favors from foreigners whose political motives they mistrust.

Owing to the political question involved and the presence of foreigners along the railways, the plague in Manchuria is receiving greater attention than the famine, but the death rate from the famine is many times greater than from the plague.

The famine is the result of the distruction of the crops by sixteen inches of rain in two days last August in a district where the people ordinarily lead a hand-to-mouth existence. As soon as the first pangs of hunger were felt, they left their homes, but many of them were unable to get beyond the borders of the devastation. They returned and took up the death struggle beside their homesteads. It is said by many of the medical authorities that such an epidemic as the present which is entirely pneumonic, has not visited the world since the middle ages.

E. C. Scott & Co. have been in receipt of several large shipments of goods during the past few days, which makes their stock of kitchen hardware and household utensils complete and comprehensive. Every available corner of the store and out-buildings is now packed with the big stock. Every conceivable contrivance for the assistance of the busy housewife, and a a good many things the busy husband will appreciate too. Crockery, pans, dishes, glass-ware, table cutlery—but call and see for yourself.

American Fruit-growers Organize

Central Agency Formed to Handle Entire Western Crop

By establishing the central selling agency for the fruit crop of all the north-western states, representatives of fruitgrowers' unions of Oregon, Washington, Idaho, and Montana last Friday, created the greatest organization of the kind that has ever been formed.

Not only was the selling agency formed, and rules laid for its operation, but plans were made for the organization of district associations and their relations with the growers' associations.

Resolutious adopted by the convention provided that the central exchange will have the selling of all fruit or products controlled by the district associations. It will establish a sales system covering all markets where it is practical to sell the products of its members. establish such rules and regulations as are necessary for the proper caring for and marketing of products also such rules as are necessary for the maintaining of uniform grades and packs and for the placing of the products of its members on the market in the best and most saleable condition.

It will maintain an efficient system of market and crop reports and do such advertising as is found necessary for the carrying of an aggressive campaign for the expansion of the market.

Ellison District Notes

The closing concert of the Literary Society held in the school house on Feb. 28th was well attended, and although on entering the hall the temperature seemed to indicate a frost, the audience gradually got warmed up as the programme proceeded. English, Scotch and Irish melodies were rendered. Mr. Hayman's West Country songs were enjoyable, as also were "The Admiral's Broom" and "The King's Champion" by Mr. Whittaker. Some amusement was caused by the shadow play, while Mr. H. Schwab was preparing for his character song "Poor John" but his appearance produced still more more hilarity. Mr. F. Mawhinney was in good voice and very appropiately sang "My Ain Folk" when all his family were on the platform with him. Piano solos were given by Misses Cottingham, M. Hereron, W. Lang, W. Homuth and Mr. G. Weedon, and Mr. H. Allen enthused the audience with his violin selections. The evening's enjoyment was contributed to by the following vocalists, Mrs. A. Wilcocks, Miss L. McGarrity, T. Smith and M. Hereron. The proceeds, in aid of the piano fund, amounted to $16.25. Light refreshmenta were served and the gathering dispersed after singing, "God Save the King."

The Young People's societies of the different churches met in the Presbyterian Sunday School Hall on Monday evening last at a social gathering. Songs were rendered by Mrs. Brooke, Mr. J. H. Davies, Mr. Geo. McKenzie, and recitations by Miss Fannie Copeland and Miss Harding. Judge Swanson, who was present, held the attention of the large gathering by a most hearty speech. A quartette sung by Mesrrs. McKenzie, Davies, Hill, MacFarlane was encored, as was a violin solo by Miss M. Laidlaw. Ice cream and refreshments then followed.

The Baptist Church choir are giving a Social Evening on Tuesday next, March 14th, at 8 o'clock. Musical items will be rendered and games indulged in. We cordially invite you to be with us and so make this Social time a great success.

Mr. W. Eaton arrived this week from Saskatchewan to take up a position in Mr. McKeown's barber shop.

Senate Adjourns Without Voting On Reciprocity

Extra Session Called For April

The sixty-first Congress of the United States passed out of existance shortly after noon last Saturday without taking the action necessary to ratify the reciprocity agreement with Canada, although many attempts have been made to bring the matter to a vote. President Taft at once announced the calling of the sixty-second Congress in extra session, fixing April 4 as the date.

Fire Brigade Busy

Two alarms of fire have occurred during the past week. The first call the brigade boys received proved to be only a slight matter—a chimney in Fullers' house catching fire last Thursday ninght. The trouble was over almost as soon as the boys arrived on the scene.

The second fire was more serious, and but for the promptness of the brigade in getting to work, might have had quite a disastrous ending. Soon after 11 o'clock on Tuesday night, smoke and flames were seen issuing from a stable behind J. N. Cameron's blacksmith shop. The alarm was at once given, and being but a stone's throw from the Fire Hall, a stream of water was soon pouring on to the blaze. Fortunately there were no horses in the stable at the time, but something over a ton of loose hay had just been stored there, and this, as usual, gave considerable trouble, by breaking out in several places. Water, however, was poured on it until thoroughly soaked, and all danger of a further outbreak past.

The damage was not very heavy, but had the flames reached Mr. Cameron's shop a serious loss would have resulted, that building being well stocked with a large number of buggies and vehicles of all kinds.

The cause of the fire is not known, but it is conjectured that some one was in the stable enjoying a cheap night's lodging, and possibly a quiet smoke.

Settlers Coming Into Glenmore

Home Building Commences in Earnest - Further Development This Year

With the advent of sbring and the prospect of fine weather, the new Glenmore sub-division being developed by the Central Okanagan Lands, Ltd., and the Kelowna Irrigation Co., is assuming an air of activity. A large number of lots were disposed of during the fall and winter months, and the newsettlers are now arriving almost daily to take possession of their property. Several of the new owners have already commenced the erection of houses and barns, and in a short time the district will have quite a populous air.

Mr. Silver and his family, who come from Sherbrook, Que., arrived last Friday. He is looking after the interests of a group of investors who under the name of the Richmond Syndicate have purchased a number of fine lots. Mr. Silver is putting up house and buildings on the land, and will plant and care for the young orchards for the owners. Mr. Johnson of Vancouver, who recently purchased some 40 acres is also building. Other arrivals are Mr L.G. Mayhew and Mr. Emwrick, from the Cobalt district. Mr. A. Gibson, from the same country is visiting town this week, having made some large purchases in Glenmore.

Mr. A. W. Davidson, another purchaser, arrived from Montreal during the week with a car of furniture, prepared to take up residence at once on his lots. A telegram, however, acquainting him with the sudden illness of his wife, who had remained behind in the meantime, compels him to return.

Mr. G. A. Melville, who has been town for the past few weeks, has commenced the erection of a house and barn on his lot and expects to move in within the next month. Mr. Geo. Ward is busy sinking a well and preparing for his new house.

During the past week lots to the value of $30,000 were sold by the company, and indications seem to point to an exceptionally large number of sales during the next few weeks.

A large amount of further development work is planned for the coming season. Teams have been busy for the past week hauling up wood pipe for use in distributing water from the main ditch. About 20 cars of this pipe are now on the road, also about 20 cars of cement are yet on order, and will be used for another concrete-lined main ditch on the west side of the valley.

In addition to all this the Company are undertaking the work of development on a big scale. Over 40,000 trees are to be planted, under the care of Mr. A. V. McCarthy, an horticulturalist of wide experience, having charge of the extensive orchards of the Company, and absentee lot holders.

The second annual meeting of the Kelowna Tennis Club will be held in the old K. L. O. offices, Leon avenue, on Friday, March 17 at 3:30 p.m. All interested in tennis are requested to attend.

"Pendray Spray" seems to be the stand-by of our orchardist this year. Messrs. Morrison-Thompson Co. are handling a car of it this spring.

House Prorogued Thursday Last

Second Session of Twelfth B. C. Parliament Ends Labours

The second session of the present legislature ended last Thursday afternoon with an unusual absence of ceremony. His Honor, the Lieutenant Governor attended at the brief afternoon sitting to release the members from further attendance. Parliament, being duly prorogued with the following short speech from the throne.

At the close of the second session of the twelfth parliament of British Columbia I desire, in relieving you from your legislative duties, to express my appreciation of the care and earnestness that have characterized your deliberations.

It is pleasing to note that the continued expansion in revenue has enabled you to make increased appropriations for public works throughout the province.

The formation of a department of railways and the act dealing with coal Mines Regulations should both prove most beneficial in further preserving life and safety of the public.

The great importance of agriculture warrants the efforts made by you to assist that industry.

The many other important measures with which you have dealt will inure, I trust, to the benefit of the province.

I thank you for the supplies granted for the public service.

I now take leave of you, trusting that your labours on behalf of your country may be blessed with abundant success.

The announcement that the session was at an end was made by the provincial secretary in prescribed form upon His Honor's withdrawal, and the House joined in singing the National Anthem.

The session has been an unusually busy one. The list of bills assented, no fewer than seventy-eight in number, in itself further emphasizes the strenuous nature of the expired session and his Honor's entry and closing address to parliament were unostentatious, terse and practical—the scene in its entirety offering striking contrast to the brilliant spectacular formalities incident to the assembling of the legislature on January 12th.

By curious chance, the closing was participated in by members exclusively supporting the Conservative government and policy, this being the first occasion in British Columbia's political history upon which the representative of the Soverign has taken leave of any parlament displaying no opposition complexion; most probable, too, an occurance without parallel in any Canadian province. As for the Socialists, Messrs. Hawthornthwaite and P. Williams, it has long been their practise thus to assert the revolutionary "principles," for which they ostensibly stand, by withdrawing from the chamber on all occasions of His Honor's official visits. Mr. Brewster, the respected representative of Liberalism in the councils of parliament, does not in any way concur in or approve of this policy of studied impoliteness, but earlier in the day had sailed for California after making his excuse to Mr. Speaker and the Premier for unavoidable absence on the occasion of prorogation.

Westbank Old-timer Dies

The death occurred on Tuesday last of Arthur Keefe, one of Okanagan's earliest pioneers.

Deceased was born in Dublin, Ireland, about 55 years ago. In his early days he was a sailor and sailed practically all over the world. He came to British Columbia from California about twenty-five years ago, and to the Okanagan about sixteen years ago, to Penticton. Afterward he moved to West Bank where he has resided for the past sixteen years.

Interment took place at the Catholic cemetery on Wednesday last, the Rev. Father Verbeke officiating.

PHOEBE'S CATCH.

A Fishing Trip That Had Most Satisfactory Results.

By CLARISSA MACKIE.

[Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.]

There was a tinge of autumn in the air, although the calendar still showed its September page. Here and there on the hillsides a tree flamed out, herald of Jack Frost. The bay wrinkled crisply into white capped waves, and over all was the odor of ripe grapes, sweet cider and burning leaves.

Phoebe Allen leaned over the gate and drank in the sweetness of the air and looked at the blue and white water and saw the flaming tree.

"Smells frosty," she sniffed delicately. "I'm always mighty glad when winter comes around. It's the coziest time of the year. Wish I knew which way the wind was blowing."

Her pleasant face wrinkled in a frown as she tried to peer around the corner of Captain Amos Dodge's new house. All her life she had been wont to see the weather vane on the peak of Channing's barn, and now that Captain Amos' house had interposed its bulk Phoebe felt personally aggrieved.

IT FELL OUT AT HER TOUCH.

She had even approached the doughty captain and laid her complaint before him. "I never can tell what the weather's going to be without seeing that vane," she said.

"I'll put one up on my cupola," promised the captain affably.

"I won't look at it—probably it'll not be good for anything," said Miss Phoebe peevishly, and so she went home.

Captain Amos and Phoebe had known each other all their lives; they had gone to school together, and they had attended merrymakings as they grew older. Phoebe had danced holes in her slippers under the skillful guidance of Amos Dodge, and Amos had been caught by his father while concocting a love letter to Phoebe, and an incipient romance had been destroyed.

Amos had run away from his motherless home, and Phoebe had forgotten all about him until years afterward, when his father was dead and buried, he came home a childless widower and built a house on the brow of the hill beyond Phoebe's solitary cottage.

There had been no sentiment about their meeting. Their first words had been a disagreement about the weather vane, and neither had recovered. Now Phoebe craned her soft round throat in a vain endeavor to learn the direction of the wind.

A barefoot boy whistled past, a fishing rod over his shoulder and a can of bait dangling from his hand.

"Where you going, Hennie?" asked Miss Phoebe.

"After blues—they're running down in the channel," returned the boy.

"Which way's the wind?" asked Phoebe.

"I dunno," said Hennie stupidly. "Don't make no difference about wind. The tide's coming in, and the blues are running in with it."

"I believe I'll go and get some for my supper. It's too fine a day to stay in. Hennie, I'll give you a nickel if you'll get me some bait. What you got there?"

"Mummies."

"Want to sell 'em?"

"I don't mind."

"I'll take 'em. Wait a minute."

After the transaction was concluded Phoebe ran back to the cottage and donned an ancient skirt and knitted jacket. On her head she tied a pink sunbonnet, and over her feet she drew rubber overshoes. She packed a small basket of lunch, fed the cat, hunted a rod and line from the woodshed, locked up the cottage and scurried down to her little boathouse on the beach below.

Presently she was rowing slowly out toward the harbor's mouth, where little boats were dotted about laden with eager fishermen, for bluefish were running plentifully.

Phoebe's bright brown eyes had discovered a more isolated spot where she had learned by experience that the current ran swiftly and where excellent luck might be had. This was between the breakwater and the long sand spit that became an island when the tide was high.

It was fast becoming an island now, and save for one lone fisherman the little channel was quite deserted, for there was exciting sport in the harbor's mouth.

Such a clever little sailor woman as Phoebe Allen found no difficulty in getting her boat into the right position, dropping her anchor overboard and preparing for sport.

The lone fisherman proved to be her especial abhorrence, Captain Amos, and and as his broad back was turned to her and his great flapping hat quite covered the back of his head he was recognizable only by his size and the dainty lines of his new boat.

One, two, three, into the boat they flopped, little silver beauties. Phoebe's cheeks grew pink with excitement as she pulled them in. Enough for her own supper at first and then supplemented by others there were enough for gifts to various fishless neighbors.

It so happened that Captain Amos was fishing with a rod, and so was Phoebe Allen. It is an awkward way to catch fish from a small boat, but Phoebe loved to see the silver booty come swinging through the air into her craft, and it was also Captain Amos' favorite method.

At last Phoebe impaled her last bit of bait and swung the line overboard. It jerked forward, and she felt the weight of a captured fish. As she pulled in the pole flew up, and the baitless hook sailed over her head and caught neatly in the slack of Captain Amos' shirt between his broad shoulders. It caught and stayed there.

Almost in the same instant Captain Amos lost his bait in the same way, and his pole performed the same upward leap, his line flew over, and the hook imbedded itself in the woolly intricacies of Phoebe's knitted jacket.

Then Captain Amos, feeling the point of the hook in his tender flesh, yelled murderously.

"Woman!" he threatened, turning his head as far around as pain would permit.

"Man!" snapped back Miss Phoebe, straining at her pole and against the captain's hook.

"What in tarnation"— sputtered Amos, groaning. "Woman, you have killed me."

"Keep still, do," said Phoebe impatiently. "You've gone and caught yourself in my hook. It was the last one I had. If you'd reach around you might get it out."

"Get out nothing! Do you understand the English language?" asked Captain Amos, with deadly calm.

"Of course I do."

"Then listen. Your hook is caught in my skin—s-k-i-n—skin, and I'm bleeding to death. If you'll have the goodness to look around and see what damage you've done," suggested the captain savagely.

"Perhaps you'll look around and see what you've done," said Phoebe crossly.

She craned her neck and looked around at the captain's back, which the point of her fish hook barely pricked. At the same moment Captain Amos peered around to see his own hook caught in his neighbor's jacket.

Something in the ridiculous situation broke the icy crust of years of separation; it recalled another day when, as children, they had fished for minnows in the millpond and, sitting together in the old green boat that had belonged to Phoebe's father, they had hooked each other quite as neatly as they had done today.

"Amos Dodge, you little ninny!" cried Phoebe in the same teasing words she had used on that former occasion thirty-five years ago.

"Girls don't know how to fish," retorted Amos as he had done in that other day.

"Does that hook hurt, Amos?" asked Phoebe.

"Not much," admitted the captain, twisting his neck around to look into Phoebe's sunbonnet. "Your boat's drifting a little, Phoebe. Don't get any farther away from me," he said in a queer voice.

"I won't," said Phoebe gently. "Just wait a minute, Amos, while I slip off this jacket—there! Now I'm free of your hook. I'll help you. Wait, now, till I get my boat over."

By dint of careful maneuvering Phoebe ran her boat near enough to the other to lean over and touch the hook. It fell out at her touch.

"I was afraid the point might have caught, but it's all right, captain"—

"Amos," said the captain briskly. "I wasn't any captain when I knew you."

"Amos," repeated Phoebe obediently, "I hope it didn't hurt you."

"Not a mite, Phoebe. To tell the truth"— He reddened and looked doubtfully at his old sweetheart.

"Tell it," commanded Phoebe in her old imperious way.

"I caught you on purpose," confessed the captain.

"Why?" blushed Phoebe. "Whatever"—

"Just to get acquainted again. You have been as stiff as a ramrod ever since I came home again and"—

"Tide's turning," said Phoebe from the depths of her pink sunbonnet. "I've got lunch to eat."

"So've I," returned the captain promptly. "Let's go ashore and have a picnic."

"Let's," said Phoebe.

That night when they trudged up the hill swinging their strings of silvery fish somebody saw them and said:

"Well, if Phoebe Allen ain't caught Captain Amos at last!"

Somebody else saw them and said, "Land sakes, if Captain Amos ain't caught Phoebe Allen, after all!"

And just then Captain Amos was saying, "When you get over to the big house with me, Phoebe, there won't be anything to shut off your view of the weather vane."

"I guess there won't be anything to obstruct my happiness either," sighed Phoebe contentedly.

News of the Valley.

The delegates appointed by the Armstrong W. C. T. U. to attend the convention in Kelowna are Mrs. Gamble, Mrs. Ed. Chambers and Mrs. T. Ball.

Mr. C. S. Stevens, who has been in charge of the Dominion Government Telegraphs and Telophones in the interior of B. C. during the past seven years, will sever in connection with the Department, on May 1st, next. During his superintendency Mr. Stevens has extended and developed the government system from 67 miles of line to 543 miles, from 10 agencies to 54 offices and from a total revenue of $50 a month to one of $1,800 per month. Local exchanges of the Government tetephones have been installed at Hedley, Merritt and Princetown during this time with over 100 subscribers in all. Of all the government lines in Canada, this is the only one which yields an increase of revenue over expenditure. When Mr. Stevens accepted the position seven years ago it was on conditions stipulated by him that he work on part salary only and that he be allowed to continue his private business until one or both became too large to be well conducted together. That time has now come and Mr. Stevens retires to devote the whole of his time to his private interests as managing director of the Lake Shore Telophone Co., Limited, of Summerland.—Summerland Review.

News and Views From the East

Reciprocity and the Financial Interests - Continued Opposition - Quebec Bridge

Montreal, March 6.—Business men, manufacturers and others in Montreal are very anxious to obtain the views of the large banking houses on the reciprocity question. Sir Edmond Walker, President of the Bank of Commerce has already come out strongly against the proposed agreement, it is true. But that was in Toronto, and Sir Edmond did not give any specific reasons for the stand he has taken. Sir Edward Clouston, President of the Bank of Montreal, has now been asked, not in the interests of any one particular branch of trade or commerce, but in the interests of the Dominion of Canada as a whole, to either make a statement for publication, or to address a gathering called for the purpose. He has not yet consented to do either, but he will likely be persuaded to speak at a special meeting of the Board of Trade which will be called for the eighth of March.

Strange as it may seem, reciprocity talk has not disturbed the financial world one way or the other that is although there is a great deal of comment and chatter, money is still moving along the regular channels, and stocks are soaring or falling as the case may be in much the same way as they would on a quiet summer's day. Last week, it is true, was rather dark in some quarters, but that was owing rather to affairs in the United States than to reciprocity agitation. Reciprocity is a freak. Fruit lands in British Columbia, which people of that province say will be ruined if the pact goes through, are selling beautifully. Sawer-Massey stock, the new company which is turning out farming implements and which has just been placed on the Toronto exchange, has jumped about ten points and at one stage of the game was as high as thirty-three. And there was much doubt in the minds of the farming implement men as to reciprocity.

There was another big meeting at the Board of Trade this week to discuss reciprocity. The same old arguments and the same old speakers were to the fore, and, although the atmosphere was distinctly of a threadbare second-hand store variety, it was proven once again that Montreal business interests intend to fight to the death against the proposed agreement. Peter Laing, the packer, was almost the only speaker who turned on a fresh breezy argument. He told of what the packing industry might be led to expect, and quoted Pat Burns, the Calgary Cattle King, to show that thewest, in this respect at least agrees with the sentiments of the east.

The rather sudden resignation of Mr. H. E. Vautelet, the engineer from the Quebec Bridge Commission has given rise to all sorts of rumors in regard to the future plan of construction of that famous and ill omened structure. It will be recalled that Hugh Lumsden, chief engineer for the Government of the Transcontinental, resignee under somewhat similar circumstances. After the resignations had been made public the same excuse was offered to the people from the floor of the House of Commons concerning both men. The minister of railways said that Lumsden had resigned on account of ill health and overwork. The Minister of Public Works announced the same thing in regard to Mr. Vautelet. Both are walking around as chipper as may be. Mr. Vautelet will say nothing, but it is safe to predict that the last has not been heard of the matter, and there are going to be fireworks of some discription before the plans of the bridge have actually been decided upon.

Lieutenant Bague, accomplished a sensational and daring feat by flying over the Mediterranean from Antibes to the little island of Gorgona, off the Italian coast. He covered the distance of more than 200 kilometers, establishing a new record for oversea flight.

In many places dogs and cats are being killed for food, and houses are being pulled down by the occupants and the debris exchanged for anything that can be eaten.

Lord Rosebery has accepted the chairmanship of the House of Lords committee for the entertainment of representatives of Dominion parliaments during coronation.

Saturday's Canada Gazette contains a despatch from Downing street stating that it is the wish of His Majesty the King that his birthday should be officially celebrated in the Dominions beyond the seas on the actual date of its anniversary, June 3.

Informal polls taken in the United States senate show a majority for the reciprocity measure arranged with the Canadian government.

The Canadian government has received an invitation from the British government to send a parliamentary delegation to the coronation. This will be drawn from both sides of the House, and the result may be that the parliamentary session will be curtailed. The present indications are that owing to the reciprocity debate the session will be prolonged.

Right Honorable Augustine Birrell, chief secretary for Ireland, speaking at Oxford, indicated that the government's home rule for Ireland bill will be on the lines of Gladstone's second home rule measure, subject to modifications that time has shown to be wise. He said that the government was now engaged in an inquiry into the financial position of Ireland preparatory to granting home rule.

The United States Government began a fight last week, against what is alleged to be one of the most complete monoplies in the country. Suit was filed against thirty-five concerns engaged in the manufacture of incandescent electric lights. The National Electric Lamp Company, which has its headquarters at Cleveland, O. and the General Electric Company of New York, are named as two of the defendants, and together are charged with being the keystone of a trust that has ramifications in every state in the union. According to the government's petition, the defendant companies are in a conspiracy in restraint of trade, and thereby have control of 97 per cent. of the country's supply of electric lights.

The Vienna Council has ordered the police to seize any woman's hat pin with unprotected ends, and 1,000 have already been confiscated.

George Anderson, alias "Old Bill" Miner, well known in British Columbia, was given a prison prison sentence of twenty years and George Hanford and Charles Hunter sentenced to fifteen years each at Gainsville, Ga., Friday, for complicity in the robbery of an express car on a Southern Railway passenger train near White Sulphur Springs recently.

From information given out at the offices of the Canadian Pacific Railway Company the amount of money which the railway will spend this year on the section from Revelstoke to Field has been estimated at from $1,000,000 to $1,500,000, which it is said will entail the employment of about 1,500 extra men during the coming summer. The work is to be largely along the lines of that carried out in previous seasons — being the construction of new stations, and the laying out of heavier rails, side tracks and switches.

The announcement that a miraculous spring has been discovered bubbling forth from under the altar of the Church of St. Clotilde Montreal, brought crowds from far and near on a visit to the church. An altar, on which a new statue of the Blessed Virgin had recently been placed, suddenly required the attention of a plumber. Investigation showed the spring of pure water bubbling from the earth. A similar occurrence was reported some time ago from a church of the same name in Leu, France. It is said that since the discovery of the spring two people, who were suffering from different ailments, were cured instantly by the use of the water.

Early this spring two exploration parties will be fitted out Montreal, one to go to the Pacific coast, near Prince Rupert, and the other to push its way into the Peace River country. They are being sent by Corporation Agencies, Limited, for foreign clients and it is not unlikely that their reports, when they return this autumn, will mean the investment of more foreign capital in Canada. Both parties will be composed of competent engineers. The Pacific coast party will report upon a new industrial undertaking which it is proposed to establish near Prince Rupert. The other exploring party, which will be under the control of E. H. Drury, the civil engineer who recently made the preliminary survey of the Hudson's Bay railway route for the Dominion Government, will make a report in the interests of a French syndicate of certain proposed undertakings in the Peace River district.
