The Wrong Box

Smiling, Pat strolled into the examination room, where candidates for the police force underwent their physical test.

Strip! ordered the police-sergeant.

Phwhat's that? demanded the uninitiated.

Get your clothes off and be quick about it!

Mumbling and muttering, Pat disrobed, and the doctor proceeded to the test.

Hop over this bar, ordered the doctor.

Pat did his best, which landed him on the small of his back.

Now jump under this cold shower, ordered the doctor

Shure, that's funny! muttered the applicant, as he obeyed.

And now, concluded the doctor, run round the room ten times, to test your heart and wind.

Pat hesitated then—

O'll not! he blurted out. O'll stay single.

Single! inquired the doctor mystified.

Yes, single repeated the Irishman. What's all this fussing got to do wid a marriage license?

He had strayed into the wrong office.

This one may seem a little out of date, said the salesman in the fur department of a big store, but it actually happened to me one day in the past winter. A woman walked up to the counter and said:

I'm looking for a muff.

Yes, madam, said I; what fur? please?

And she snapped back:

Well to keep my hands warm if it's any of your business.

Wilton Lackage, the player has a story of an animal show in the west where the principal feature of the programme was billed as 'The Happy Family,' the said family consisting of a lion, a tiger, a puma, and a lamb. Some one in conversation with the proprietor of the show asked how long these animals had lived together. Quite confidentially the proprietor replied:

About eight months, I think, but the lamb has to be renewed occasionally.

While passing an old-fashioned inn in Scotland some tourists were attracted by an aged bagpiper, who was tooting atrocious sounds through an instrument that was both dilapidated and squeaky.

Great Jericho, Sandy! exclaimed one in desperation. Why don't you have your bagpipes repaired?

The old man ceased playing and looked up in astonishment.

Havers, mon, ye dinna understant! If ma bagpipes wor in good tune the inn mon wadna give me twa shillings to move on.

Not a Bachelor

The Chicago Record-Herald relates that William J. Burns, congratulated on his success in capturing the Musica family, said to a New York reporter:

It is all a matter of observation and analysis. To the good detective every slightest action speaks volumes.

I, for example, was once looking for a widower. But the man I had under surveillance stoutly declared himself to be a bachelor. One morning however, I saw him pay a bill—and in doing so he turned his back to everybody in the room before taking out his pocketbook.

Instantly I laid one hand on his shoulder.

Come with me, I said. You are no bachelor. You are a widower or a married man.

Small Robert had been given oyster stew for dinner. The oysters were unusually large and after peering into the bowl for some time he finally swallowed one. Laying down his spoon he said: Mamma, I don't like them big hoppy toads.

Willie, aged five, was one day sent away from the dinner table for misbehaviour. He went into the kitchen and the maid said:

Willie, I'd be ashamed to be sent away from the table, as big a boy as you are.

Well, that's what a fellow gets by being born in a preacher's family, rejoined the little fellow.

EVER HAVE CRAMPS, NAUSEA, VOMITING?

THEN USE NERVILINE.

For Stomach Pains and Cramps, No Remedy so Prompt as Nerviline

A Western Experience Related.

"It's in an unsettled part of the country like our far West that proves how valuable Nerviline is in the home," writes Mr. Patrick M. Dehaney, from Fort Saskatchewan. "Chills are frequent—a hot drink of Nerviline sends life circulating through the body in three minutes. Cramps or sudden illness at night is one of our terrors. No druggist or doctor is near, but if Nerviline is handy you can get relief. The worst cramps Nerviline has cured in my children in half a minute. I don't think any farmer's wife has any right to be without the protection of Nerviline. In our family we use it for a hundred ills, and it cures them all. One night one of my kiddies had earache and another toothache. Without Nerviline no one could have slept—I applied it as directed, and the children's pains disappeared. My husband uses Nerviline for lame back, rheumatism, aching joints and all sorts of muscular pains. It is as good inside as outside, and is as much a part of my home as my kitchen stove."

You find a thousand uses for a good family remedy like Nerviline. Get the 50c. family size bottle; it's more economical than the 25c. trial size. Sold by all storekeepers and druggists, or The Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N. Y.

Making a Profit

A party of amateur pigeon-shooters some time ago arranged for a match and ordered thirty pigeons from a dealer in a neighboring town. The shooting was of a really wonderful character, but the actual performance need not be described in detail. The net results will be gathered readily from the following note, which was subsequently received from the dealer. It ran—

Gentlemen,—I beg sincerely to thank you for your order, and to intimate that I shall be only too happy to supply you with any number of birds on future occasions of this sort. The whole of the thirty birds, for which you paid me at the rate of 35c. per head, returned home in safety, and, moreover, brought with them a stray pigeon. My price to your party henceforth will be sixpence a dozen.

Not a Thunder Expert

The masterful manner in which some people evade an issue was mentioned at a recent dinner when this one was recalled by Rear Admiral Philip Andrews.

In New Orleans one night, the admiral said, there was a man on the stage who offered to answer by mental arithmetic any question that might be asked by the audience.

Just so long as the questioner remained in the expected channel the sailing was easy, but finally one man got beyond the bearings.

If you please sir, said the man, rising from his seat: How far off can you hear thunder?

I can't tell you, sir, was the prompt response of the wonder on the stage.

You can't tell me? responded the fan. Why, I thought—

Not about thunder, replied the stage party, doing a quick piece of dodging. You see I am a lightning calculator.

Sensible Advice

Why, Henry, she exclaimed, what is the matter with you? You seem excited.

It was a minute before he could control his voice sufficiently to speak.

I am, he snorted. I have been insulted.

How? Who did it? And her spirit rose.

By a scoundrel who came into my office this morning. I have nursed my wrath all day, and now I have come to you for advice. What would you do if a man were to tell you to go to Jericho and stop there?

As he strode about the room he kicked over the table and a couple of chairs.

Why, dear, she replied, after the impulsive manner of women and with the utmost sincerity, I wouldn't go.

Then he sat down and thought that a good wife's advice was an anchor to windward in a husband's most temptuous moments.

How Concrete Work Was Made Easy For You

UNTIL a few years ago farmers considered concrete a rather mysterious material, that could be used successfully only by experts. They knew that upon the quality of the cement depended much of the success of concrete work. They had no means of testing cement, such as big contractors employ, and so could not be sure of its quality.

Yet the farmer needed concrete.

He was kept from using this best and most economical of materials by

1. Lack of knowledge of how to mix and place concrete.
2. Lack of a brand of cement upon the quality of which he could absolutely rely.

Canada Cement

has supplied both these requirements.

We employed men to make a thorough investigation of the farmer's requirements; to find out where and how he could use concrete with profit to himself; to discover all problems he might come across and to solve them. This investigation was expensive. But when it was completed we had the material for our campaign to show the farmer how and where to use concrete, and we printed a book, "What the Farmer Can do With Concrete," for free distribution. That book makes every farmer who reads it a concrete expert, as far as his needs are concerned. He finds that there is nothing mysterious about concrete—that a few simple rules supply all the knowledge required.

At the same time we met the farmers' second objection—inability to test the quality of cement—by producing cement of a quality that does not need to be tested.

The Canada Cement that you buy by the bag is the same Canada Cement that is sold by the train-load for great elevators, buildings and bridges.

There is a Canada Cement Dealer in Your Neighborhood

If you have not already done so, write for the book "What the Farmer can do with Concrete." It is Free.

UP IN THE AIR

Or How His Consent Was Won

By CLARISSA MACKIE

Mr. Lysander Tatem looked upon the latest invention of the young man who wanted to be his son-in-law with unconcealed interest. He had accepted the invitation to witness the trial flights of Jules Hazen's new aeroplane with all the skepticism that the hard headed man of business brings to bear upon the fanciful dreams of the inventor of things, and he also brought along with his distrust a strong dislike for the youth who had dared to fall in love with his only child, Katherine.

Katherine stood beside him, small and fair and wonderfully interested in the complication of canvas and machinery which Jules so skillfully guided through the air. There were just the three of them—Jules, Katherine and her father.

Jules essayed another flight, and as his machine rose gracefully to the level of the treetops Mr. Tatem shaded his eyes with his hand and followed his course. At last he brought his eyes down to earth.

"It must be a fascinating pastime if one is young and can afford to spend the time and money," he added hastily.

"That is Jules' profession, father. I suppose he might as well be an inventor as a banker or broker or anything else," said Katherine with spirit.

"Don't you think the life of an aviator, for instance, contains more risk than that of a banker?" demanded Lysander Tatem, who was fond of an argument.

"No, indeed," and Katherine lifted her pretty brows in surprise. "Just think of all the bankers who are killed in automobile accidents!"

"Humph!" snorted Mr. Tatem impatiently. "As if a man's profession made any difference when two automobiles come together. Just as many lawyers and brewers go to smash, my dear, as bankers. Be sensible now and admit that Hazen's profession or trade, or whatever you call it, of inventor and aviator is a hand to mouth existence at best. Did you ever hear of many rich inventors, Katherine?"

"No."

"That's the situation in a nutshell. Hazen is as poor as a church mouse. I suppose he thinks if he marries a banker's daughter he'll have a backer for his inventions."

Now the aeroplane swooped downward and alighted before them. Jules leaned out, his keen young face alight with pleasure.

"Will you go up with me, Mr. Tatem?" he asked. "I'm sure you'll enjoy the sensation of soaring in space. I promise to return you safe and sound to the earth."

Lysander Tatem hesitated for a moment, and then, persuaded by his daughter's encouraging smile and ashamed to admit his own reluctance to leave the earth in that manner, he stepped into the seat beside the young aviator.

The banker clung desperately to the slender supports as the birdlike machine swooped up, up, above the treetops and then glided evenly along above the earth. After the first sickening feeling as he saw the ground with its familiar objects dropping away beneath them, where Katherine stood a tiny speck waving a pin point of white after them, Lysander Tatem really began to enjoy the sensation of flying. He felt a new respect for the young man who wanted to be his son-in-law, and he earnestly hoped that the science would be perfected with such rapidity that he, too, might enjoy the sport of air flying.

Jules Hazen said little. Now and then he indicated the blurred outline of a city beneath them or explained the working of the machinery to the interested passenger, who grew more exhilarated as the minutes passed until an hour had gone by.

"Where are we now?" he asked at last.

"Blakeport," returned Hazen as he swung the machine circling about and headed for home. "There's rather a nasty wind coming up from the northeast. We'll see if we can't beat it."

They didn't beat the rapidly rising wind. It made such headway that the aviator guided his machine to a higher strata, hoping to escape the unfavorable wind. Higher and higher they arose until the feeling of nausea attacked the banker again, and he was obliged to exert every effort to maintain his seat.

"Close your eyes!" commanded Jules. And Mr. Tatem was gladly obedient. The first doubts of the aviator's ability to take him home again now assailed him.

"What's that?" He had to repeat this question in Hazen's ear, because the engine was giving forth such sharp staccato cracks that hearing was difficult.

"What's what?" shouted Jules.

"That noise, like the cracking of all the steel ribs," explained the uneasy passenger.

"Engine missing strokes," said Jules briefly, and Mr. Tatem had to be content with that explanation. But not for long was he satisfied with the situation. The machine was rushing through space with terrifying speed. Below them were cold, gray clouds and above them a clear, deep blue sky, from which the sun shone warmly.

There was absent the smooth gliding motion which had at first fascinated him, and there was something in the action of the engine and in the rigid lines of Hazen's profile that hinted to him that the young aviator, incensed at the banker's reluctance to accept him as the suitor of his daughter, might be sending them both to destruction.

"Hazen!" he shouted suddenly.

"Well?" returned the other without turning his head.

"I understand the situation now. If you're using my safety as a lever upon which to swing my decision in your favor you've attacked the wrong man, understand?" He screamed the last word in Hazen's ear, and the latter nodded, unsmiling, but still the machine went on its rushing course.

"Where are we now?" Mr. Tatem yelled again.

"Give it up. I can't tell yet."

The banker looked at the grim profile beside him, and something gave way in his spinal column. He must reach solid ground again at any price, he told himself. Jules Hazen might not prove so undesirable a husband for Katherine after all, he argued. His own safety was a matter of paramount importance just then.

All at once the aviator reached forward and did something to the machinery, and the aeroplane dipped down, down, down, until it speeded toward the gray clouds at a sickening angle. Then they were enveloped in the damp clouds and were out of them with the earth far below, and they were certainly falling down. Lysander Tatem lost his self control as he realized this fact.

"Hazen," he cried, "bring me safely to earth again and I'll consent to your marrying my daughter."

Jules turned a flushed face to his and made an unintelligible reply. Still they fell toward the earth, while the engine gave out that irresponsible staccato click. All at once Hazen leaned back in his seat, touched a lever and fumbled with some handles, and immediately the aeroplane stayed its dizzying fall, the engine swung into rhythmic beat, and they hung in the air for a moment while the aviator took his bearings. Then they went inward, perhaps a couple of hundred feet above the earth, until the banker recognized the familiar layout of the aviation field below.

Slowly, gracefully, like a weary bird, the machine glided toward the field and at last rested safely on it. Katherine Tatem ran toward them with fluttering handkerchief.

As Lysander Tatem stepped to the ground, stiff and sore and quite fagged by the excitement of the flight, he turned a pale and angry face toward Jules Hazen.

"Of course I shall keep my word, young man," he said harshly. "But I shall always have the greatest contempt for your methods!" and he strode toward his daughter, who was quick to observe the strained relations between them.

The appearance of the Tatem motorcar at that instant made the leave taking a matter easily concluded, and soon Katherine and her father were on the way home.

"You haven't said anything about the flight, father," said the girl after awhile. "You were gone so long I was afraid that something had happened."

Lysander Tatem swallowed a lump in his throat before replying. "It was an unusual experience, my dear. It had one result which will gratify you—I have told Hazen that he has my consent to your marriage."

Katherine's warm hug was received by her father with manifest discomfort, and, perhaps realizing that this yielding of his really caused him suffering, she soon settled quietly beside him and was silent.

* * * * * * *

Several days passed before Jules Hazen made his appearance at the town house of Lysander Tatem. Then he asked for the banker and was shown into the gloomy grandeur of the library.

Mr. Tatem was reading before a west window, where the afternoon sun touched his white hair into a sort of golden radiance that made him look unusually benevolent as he arose to greet his visitor. This effect disappeared as soon as he stepped out of the sunshine, and Hazen saw that his face was grim and uncompromising.

"I've been expecting you, Mr. Hazen," said the banker.

Jules lifted his dark eyebrows. "I was afraid you were laboring under a delusion, Mr. Tatem," he said gravely, "and I called to set your mind at rest. While we were in the air the other day the machinery actually went wrong, and I really thought we were both going to destruction. After you mentioned your daughter I suddenly realized that you were Katherine's father and must be saved for her. Then my wits came back, and I recollected the emergency levers. The rest was easy. I release you from any rash promise you may have made in the moment of danger." He turned toward the door with a slight inclination of his head.

"Wait!" said Lysander Tatem in an agitated voice. "What about Katherine? I have told her that you have my consent."

The ticking of the clock broke regularly on the silence that followed. Jules Hazen's handsome face wore an expression of obstinate pride. Lysander Tatem found himself hoping that Hazen's pride would give way to love for Katherine. His own face was softening with pity for the daughter who was everything to him.

"Hazen," he said manfully, "I'm proud, but I can swallow it for Katherine's sake. I can't face her and tell her it was a mistake—she is so happy. Will you let bygones be bygones?"

Jules Hazen's face cleared as if by magic. "Thank you, sir. You won't regret the trust you have placed in me. Shall we go together and find her?"

IS IT "LAZY MAN'S WAY?"

Use of Commercial Fertilizers Discussed For and Against.

Mr. Fullerton, who, with his wife, is the "head and front" of the Long Island experiment farms, discourses as follows on the use, or, rather, abuse, of commercial fertilizers. In answer to the question, "Aren't you ever going to use fertilizer, Mr. Fullerton?" he said:

"Bless your souls, yes. Didn't I use fertilizer when I plowed that rye under? Next fall I am going to put on about ten tons to the acre of manure again, and I am going to turn under crimson clover, vetch and rye on every square foot I can get planted.

"Then I shall use lime for a sweetener, for we now can afford the lime a little time to work. Next summer when I am putting in a second and third crop on the same ground I shall probably use blood and bone meal.

"Don't misunderstand me. I think chemical fertilizers are bully for old, wornout land, but it would be like 'carrying coals to Newcastle' to put them on virgin soil.

"The craze for chemical fertilizer has gone too far. There are places where they have put it on so heavy (with the theory that if one ton is good two tons will be better) that they have chemical laboratories, not farms. All chemical fertilizing is 'lazy man's way.' He claims he will not have weeds, so will save cultivation. Weeds are the farmer's best friends. They force him to cultivate, and lack of cultivation is the crime of modern farming. If they'll pile some old manure on that ground now and so liberate through decomposition the various component parts of the chemical fertilizers they will have farms again."

SMOKING OUT THE BUGS.

Fumigation a Good Way of Getting Rid of Henhouse Pests.

Fumigation is a means of reaching germs and insect life in the air of the room and in the cracks and crannies of the woodwork, says the American Cultivator. The house or room should be tightly closed and all fowls excluded during fumigation.

A simple method is to burn the sulphur candles now sold at stores dealing in poultry supplies. The fumes of brimstone may also be produced by burning in a metallic basin (such as an old iron kettle) a number of rags previously soaked in melted sulphur.

Sulphur may be mixed with a little alcohol or kerosene oil and burned, or it may be sprinkled upon live coals placed in a chafing dish. The house or room should be kept closed for several hours and then opened as thoroughly as possible to allow the wind to drive out any remaining trace of poisonous gas.

In fumigating by burning substances be careful not to set fire to the building. Remember also that in most cases the substances which are used are poisonous to human life and to fowls. Carelessness in their use or in leaving them about where chick or child can get at them may have dire results.

How to Preserve Eggs.

Dip fresh eggs, one at a time, in hot melted paraffin, enough to cover the egg. Take out immediately with wire tongs made for that purpose of baling wire, let paraffin harden and dip quickly again, reversing egg. Let cool. Wrap each egg separately in waxed or paraffin paper. Wrap carefully, so as not to scratch or break the coating. Pack cold in tin fruit cans and seal with paraffin, which excludes the air. Eggs so canned air tight will keep several months, the paraffin having closed the pores in the shell. Keep in a cool place and label can, "Handle with care."—Farm and Fireside.

Keep Off the Grass.

"What does that sign say?"

"Keep off the grass."

"They have, haven't they?"

"You bet! They haven't let a blade grow."—Harvard Lampoon.

PECULIAR HORSES.

They Have Little Hair and Eat Butter and Sugar With Flour.

The greatest peculiarity of the Turkoman breed of horses is their hairlessness. They have naturally very little mane, and what they have is always carefully cut off. Their skin is very soft and thin. Colonel Stewart in "Through Persia In Disguise" tells of the great care taken of these animals.

They are never stabled, but picketed in the open. They are, however, warmly clothed. First the Turkoman puts over his animal a thick felt body covering of the size that an English horse wears. Over this he fastens an immense piece of felt that covers the horse's ears and his whole body down to his hocks. This clothing he keeps in place with a long roller, which is passed three times round the horse's body.

The Turkomans feed their horses when in camp on barley or chopped straw and give them flour and sheep's tail fat or clarified butter when they are going to call on them for great exertion. I myself in India have often given my horses a pound each of flour and coarse sugar and half a pound of clarified butter made into balls when I have ridden them far and wanted them to go on again. The horse easily digests this ration, and he is ready to start sooner than if a feed of corn is given him. It is also supposed to give great strength.

Turkomans give their horses almost anything they eat themselves. Although hardy in respect of food, the horses require a good deal of care as to clothing, for fine coats and delicate skins make them very susceptible to colds.

LEADERS OF MEN.

It Is by Success That They Attain Prestige and Power.

As soon as a certain number of living beings are gathered together, whether they be animals or men, they place themselves instinctively under the authority of a chief.

As enthusiasm becomes inflamed it happens most often that the then leader is he who started as one of the led.

He has himself been hypnotized by the idea whose apostle he has since become. It has taken possession of him to such a degree that everything outside it vanishes, and every contrary opinion appears to him an error or a superstition. In time by affirmation, repetition and contagion great power is given to his ideas, and he acquires that mysterious force known as prestige. Every successful man, every idea that forces itself into recognition, ceases ipso facto to be called in question.

The proof that success is one of the principal stepping stones to prestige is that the disappearance of one is almost always followed by the disappearance of the other. The hero whom the crowd acclaimed yesterday is insulted today should he be overtaken by failure. The reaction indeed will be the stronger in proportion as the prestige has been great.—Le Bon in "The Crowd."

Verdi as a Politician.

The name of Verdi, we are told, was a political and patriotic symbol. He belonged to the Italian Nationalist party, and his name was scribbled on the walls of Italian towns which were under Austrian rule. This honor, however, as is carefully explained, was not paid to Verdi himself, as his name happened by accident to be formed by the initial letters of "Victor Emmanuel Rol d' Italie," with which inscription Italian patriots often cover their walls. Verdi was a politician. He was elected deputy, and subsequently Emmanuel made him a senator. The story is told that the maestro was in the habit of orchestrating the sittings of the chamber of deputies and noting the tone of the various speakers, so that he could go up to each of them in the lobby and tell him that his speech was in such and such a key.—Westminster Gazette.

A Generous Rebuke.

Nicholas Wain, one of the great men of the time described in "The Colonial Homes of Philadelphia and Its Neighborhood," had a wit as whimsical as Lamb's, although there was less of it.

Annoyed by repeated depredations upon his woodpile, he bought a cart load of wood and sent it to the offender.

"Friend," was the courteous explanation that accompanied the wood, "I was afraid thee would hurt thyself falling off my woodpile."—Youth's Companion.

The Crooked Way.

District Attorney Whitman of New York was talking about the sad case of a western banker who had stolen a great sum from the depositors.

"The man, said Mr. Whitman, "lived beyond his means—motorcars, a house with eleven baths, son at college, daughter coming out, wife hungry for diamonds. The inevitable result followed."

Mr. Whitman smiled and added:

"The unfortunate fellow got straitened, so he became crooked."

Cookery Points

Honey and Junket.

Honey Gingerbread.—Put into a basin a cupful of honey and half a cupful of butter and melt it before the fire without stirring. Put into an enameled saucepan with half a cupful of sour milk (not buttermilk), two eggs beaten separately and half a teaspoonful each of ginger and cinnamon. Mix well together till thick. Pour into a greased square tin and bake sharply.

Honey Trifle.—Heat together half a cupful of milk and half a cupful of honey. Cut into cubes two sponge cakes and dip into the mixture; then pile into a dish. Make a custard with two eggs, half a pint of milk and a cupful of honey. Pour the custard over the cakes, decorate with preserved fruit as preferred and serve either hot or cold.

Honey Mousse.—Beat separately the yolks of two eggs and mix with a cupful of honey. Heat gently over gas until the mixture is thick. Do not boil. Let it cool; then stir in the whipped whites of two eggs. Add half a pint of whipped cream and mix carefully. Put into a mold and set on ice to freeze.

Honey Fudge.—Boil together a cupful each of sugar and milk until it forms a soft ball if tested in cold water. Add a cupful of honey and boil until the mixture can be tested as before. Then add a nut of butter and a tablespoonful of vinegar. Mix all together and pour into shallow tins to cool.

Quite a variety of appetizing yet most nourishing dishes can be evolved with the aid of junket tablets.

Chocolate Junket.—Dissolve half a cupful of sugar in a quart of lukewarm milk. Melt two squares of chocolate, add half a cupful of warm milk and bring to the boil. Remove from the fire immediately and add remainder of the milk, quarter teaspoonful of vanilla and one dissolved junket tablet. Stir well and pour into small fancy cups to set. Now take half a cupful of thick cream, add a few spoonfuls of sweetened milk and beat till quite stiff. Beat the white of one egg till you can cut it and add slowly to the beaten cream. Pour the cream mixture over the junket just before serving and decorate with crystallized cherries.

Junket With Coffee Flavor.—Pour half a pint of boiling water over two ounces of coffee. Take a quart of milk sweetened to taste; add the clear boiling coffee, which should make it lukewarm. Add one junket tablet, stir well and pour into a glass dish. Serve with whipped cream on the top.

Cocoanut Junket.—Sometimes a little junket is left over and is usually wasted. Here is a nice way of using it: One cupful of cocoanut, one cupful of curd from which the whey has been poured, one cupful of cream, two yolks of eggs and one cupful of sugar. Place all in a saucepan on the fire and stir till thick; then pour into a buttered pie dish and bake slowly for ten minutes.

Fruit Sandwiches.

Fruit sandwiches are more generally used than they used to be and are so delicious that they ought to form a part of every sandwich repast. They satisfy a natural craving for sweets and are more wholesome and more easily made than cakes or candies.

Dates can be made into many savory pastes for sandwich filling. Make the foundation by stoning the dates and running them through the meat chopper. To a pound of this paste add the juice of an orange and the pulp that squeezes out with it, rub it smooth and spread between buttered bread. To a half cupful of dates add a quarter cupful of chopped English walnut meats and a teaspoonful of lemon juice and spread between buttered bread.

Short Cuts.

A quick way to warm plates in cold weather is to dip them in hot water. Dry in a dish rack or with a towel. Invert the handles of knives, forks and spoons in a pitcher of hot water to warm them.

When covers lose the orginal knobs replace them with others that can be bought for 10 cents per dozen at a novelty store.

The flavor of fish is greatly improved if fried in fat saved from a former frying.

A Genuine Bull.

The flies had been unusually troublesome, and one night after Nora had gone upstairs her mistress spread insect powder round the windows and other places in the kitchen where the flies congregated.

In the morning she asked Nora if there were not a great many dead flies in the kitchen.

"Yes, there are, mum," replied Nora. "The room's alive with them."—Youth's Companion.

On Sunday afternoon the local Orangemen attended divine service. Rev. T. Menzies preaching a special sermon. In the evening a number drove to Cumberland to attend the service there.

The July meeting of the Women's Institute was held at Duncan's hall Wednesday July 9th. There was a fair attendance. The subject for discussion being the Flower Show, which will be held in the Agricultural Hall on Thursday Aug. 14. Committees were appointed and arrangements are being made to have a successful flower show this year. The ladies also intend to exhibit work at the Agricultuarl fair this fall.

Besides the improvements to the Courtenay hotel noted last week, there are several other buildings upon which work has either been started or will be commenced shortshortly, viz: McKean's new store, Mr. Perez, a new store next to the butcher shop, and Sam Calhoun contemplates building a couple of stores on his lot. They will be 40 by 80 feet. Mr. Bruce Towler is also building a fine new house opposite his residence, for his mother.

A daring hold up occured on Friday afternoon last when two foreigners held up two young bank clerks named Rowe and Buchanan, while returning from Union Bay to Cumberland. They secured about $2600. Policemen have been on the trail since but as yet have failed to capture them. They paid a visit to one of the camps south of Union Bay and forced the Chinese cook to give them food, for wlich they gave him a pile of small silver which the police think is a part of the stolen money.

Dr. McPhee, of Nanaimo met with a somewhat serious accident last Friday night when his automobile overturned when he struck some fresh gravel while going to see a patient. He lit on his face, and plowed along the ground for several feet, with the result that he was more or less cut and scratched, the most serious being a gash above his eye, which had to be stitched together. He was taken to the hospital, where he will be confined for a few days yet. The auto caught fire and was totally destroyed.

Mr. Gray the 3rd operater at Cape Lazo Wireless Station left on Tuesday's boat for Vancouver. Mr. Harwood and Mr. Arnold are now left to do the work between them for a time, working 12 hours each.

July 1st was quite a day at Kye Bay. There were 7 different picnic parties enjoying themselves and the children had a fine time on the large expanse of sand at low tide.

Mr. Bannerman had the misfortune to be run into by M. G. Doan in his car, the latter was going his usual speed of 45 miles an hour. Had not time to stop so went right through between the rig and horse and squared it with Mr. Bannerman. It is about time high speeding was stopped or the license taken away from those who persist in it.

Mr Albert Grant moved his donkey engine through McCutcheon's point to Hart's sawmill on Friday.

There is an epidemic of measles in Comox and it is time precautions were taken to prevent the spread of this illness as it is most annoying to have to be in quarantine if not to have the measles.

To late for last week.

The 'Kaluk' with the members of the Stefansson Artic expidition aboard passed Cape Lazo last Friday bound for Nome. Captain Bartlett of the Perry Artic expedition is in command, he expects to reach Nome about July 9th. The Kaluk will put aboard more provisions there and leave for the unknown Artic waters about July 20. God-speed and all good luck to the first Canadian Artic expidition.

The Geodetic Survey party who have been camped at Cape Lazo recently, left last week by the gasoline boat Dawson for Lund.

Kye Bay is proving an attraction to those who appreciate bathing and a good beach. There were quite a number of people on the sands last Sunday, bathing paddling and enjoying their outing generally.

Mr. Gray the 3rd operator at the Wireless Station left at the end of last month. He is to be married and will settle at the Wireles station at Estevan on the West Coast. His borther who was also an operator here for some time and who is in charge of Estevan Wireless station, is also to be married on the same day, and both the brides-to-be are now en route from the Old Country. The many friends of the Gray brothers wish them all luck and happiness in the future.

Mr. R. Ainslee also a recent operator at Cape Lazo is staying at Comox, having just returned from Alert Bay Wireless Station. He expects to be added to the Wireless station at Triangle Island any day, but may have to resume his duties at Cape Lazo pro-term after Mr. Gray leaves.

Robert Knight has finished his hay barn and the building looks a very imposing work and reflects great credit on the builders.

Mr. Lowly's house is completed, and is of the bungalow style and looks very well.

Board of Trade Meeting

On Thursday afternoon last a well attended meeting of the Board of Trade was held. A number of communications were read from different boards of trade. Most of whom did not see their way clear to endorse this Board's recommendation that Asiatics should not hold land in this province. The Committees appointed re-dredging the river and Indian reserve reported progress.

A letter from the post office inspector re daily mail service was read, and the matter will be taken up with other local associations.

Applications for membership were received from six citizens, which will bring the total membership up to about 55

The Secretary will be empowered to charge a rental for use of the Board rooms.

He was also instructed to secure a lease for 1 year from Mr. Fechner.

It was also decided to favour the formation of a Centrl Board. Composed of representatives of all the Boards of Trade on the Island.

A committee was appointed to endeavour to have the road from Little River as speedily as possible.

The Board also decided to issue a description pamphlet shortlv.

A motion was carried that the Board make application to the local government for a reserve to be placed on Brown's river for water for the use of Courtenay.

Post Office for Courtenay

CITIZENS ENTHUSIASTIC IN ANTICIPATION OF NEW BUILDING

A meeting was called on Thursday evening to discuss buying a site for the new post office building for which Mr. Clements our member has had placed in the estimates the sum of $5000. On motion Dr. Millard was appointed chairman and F. D. Cameron secretary. After the chairman had briefly explained why the meeting was called. The Secretary read the correspondance that had been received from the member in connection with the new buildings here, and which was then laid on the table for discussion.

After considerable talk as to where would be the best site for the building, which the citizens are expected to donate, R. McCush's corner was proposed, but the price $2200 seemed prohibiting.

Mr. Sutton suggested the corner opposite the creamery. Mr. Shannon, the corner back of the Builders' Supply Co. Dr. Millard's corner was suggested, and the Doctor said that if the government would put a good building on the corner they could have it at a very low figure.

The lot which Mr. Cudmore has sold to the Japanese was suggested, but as it is only 60 x 80 feet it was thought to be too small.

As it seemed impossible to agree upon a site, a committee, composed of Messrs. Shannon, Cameron, Collins, and the president, were appointed to see what suitable lots were available, and the price of same, and to report at next meeting. In the meantime Mr. Johnston told the meeting not to worry, as he had the post-office in his vest pocket.

The next day it developed that the Postoffice Inspector had been in town the day before, and that Mr. Lewis had been seen, and that he had offered a site free, and that the deed was then on the way to the government.

At the meeting held on Saturday night, after a lot of discussion, three lots were offered free of charge for the site. Mr. Lloyd Dunham offered a choice of two lots on the Lake Trail Road. Mr. McPhee offered all the land required, between the school house and the Cumberland road, but he was strongly of the opinion that a five thousand dollar building would be much too small a building for the requirements of Courtenay, but would give the land for whatever building was put up.

Mr. Parez offered as much land as was required up to 120 feet square at the corner just south of Dr. Millard's residence, this was the largest, most valuable and most central site offered, and had it been generally knswd the day before that Mr. Perez would give a site then, it is quite likely his offer would have received more consideration, but as Mr. Dunham offered a lot as soon as it became generally known that a site was required, his west end friends thought his offer should be supported, and they turned out in numbers to do so with the result that the vote stood 25 for Dunham's site; 11 for McPhee's; and 10 for Parez', and the secretary was instructed to write the authorities accordingly, and when an engineer comes he will make a selection.

Tree Temperature

It is not shade alone that makes it cooler under a tree in summer. The coolness of the tree itself is to be considered, since its temperature is about forty-five. Fahrenheit, at all times, as that of the human body is a fraction more than ninety-eight degrees. So, it will be seen, a clump of trees cools the air as a piece of ice cools the water in a pitcher.

It is for this reason that municipal experts contend that trees should be planted in the tenement districts of large cities. If, they reason, the air can be made cooler and purer by the trees, fewer children will die of heat ailments. As more children die during the months of June, July. August and September than in any other period of the year, the importance of the suggestion has received widespread notice.

Forehanded

A fine old gentlewoman, brought up in all the most strict traditions of its bluest circles, announced to a friend one day that she had begun the study of Hebrew. As the student was close upon fourscore, the statement produced some surprise. "Why Miss Blank," the friend asked, "what good in this world will Hebrew do you?" The old lady, who has a wit still nimble dispite her years, replied with demure swiftness: "It may not do me much good in this world; but when I get to heaven and meet my maker, I should like to be able to address Him in His own language."

The greatest man is he who choses with the most invincible resolution.

The Secretary of the Anglo-Japanese Society was here on Monday of this week, in an endeavour to have the Japs and Chinese farmers allowed to sell cream to the Comox Creamery. The patrons would be unwise to allow the product of these people to mix with their cream. It has taken many years for the Creamery Association to get their butter up to the high standard it now enjoys. The older patrons will remember when they got but 10 and 13 cents per pound, and when they compare that with last year's average price of 33 cents per pound for the superior article, they will doubtless hesitate to allow anything to happen which will have a tendency to depreciate their butter, or its selling qualities. If the orientals are good butter makers and want to get into the business let them build a creamery themselves.

MURRAY MURGATROYD JOURNALIST

By Morice Gerard

Not an easy man to manage or move from any purpose he had formed, was Murgatroyd's mental comment, after a rapid but fairly-searching glance.

It is good of you to come, Mr. Murgatroyd. Let me introduce my friends, Mr. Pickering and Dr. Spencer. Both law and medicine are products of civilisation. These exact sciences could have no better representatives, Mr. Murgatroyd.

There was a deprecating wave of the hand, and half-movement of the great shoulders, as if to apologise for the implied question. Mr. Muller spoke without accent of any kind, but slowly as a man does who thinks in one language and translates into another while speaking.

I am a barrister.

Murgatroyd was conscious that he was being read. The strong light of a pendant oil-lamp was resting on his face.

Mr. Muller seemed to have nothing at the tip of his tongue, but it was Pickering who actually spoke—

I think I have heard your name, sir, in another direction.

Murgatroyd did not help him. He regarded the conversation rather as an impertinence, and besides he had no wish to say more about himself than was absolutely necessary.

As a journalist, Pickering went on after a pause, slightly reddening, for he saw the topic was not appreciated.

I write a little, Murgatroyd said coolly; but not sufficiently to be heard of outside a limited area in Fleet Street.

Muller read his visitor's dislike to the interrogation, and turned the subject by proposing cards. Little more was said until eleven o'clock, when the party broke up. Dr. Spencer and Pickering left at once, but Muller detained Murgatroyd.

You have a key?

Yes! The Falcon is liberal in that respect.

Then stop and have a smoke.

There was nothing Murgatroyd desired more than a tete-a-tete with his host, although he felt already the certainty of failure in his diplomacy.

The man-servant had brought in whisky and soda water early in the evening. Mr. Muller handed his guest some very fine Turkish tobacco.

This is not to be bought in England nor anywhere else for the matter of that, he added. You English like apotheosized hay. The niceties of a properly scented and flavored tobacco are lost upon the British palate.

They had by this time settled themselves to smoke in lounge-chairs on either side of the lc fire which blazed cheerily in the wide hearth. Murgatroyd was nettled more at the tone of calm racial superiority than at the actual words, but it was not his business to quarrel with this huge German whom he had come, if possible, to propitiate.

I have never taken much pains to investigate tobacco from the ethnographical point of view, he laughed.

I study men in all departments. I weigh them in the fine balances of a discriminating judgment. I generalise, but from carefully systematised data. My conclusions are born of a wide knowledge of men in varying circumstances spread over a long period of time.

Murgatroyd looked at his host with an even deeper scrutiny than the one he had vouchsafed him before. Muller interested him, while he repelled him. He felt he could weave about him an atmospheric web which would suit him exactly, an intellectual environment suited to the a rid tendencies of his temperament; but in his diagnosis there were mental complications still unravelled, depths as yet unsounded. He read a good deal in that calm, cynical, colorless, carefully shaven face, but—there was more to read still.

What age was the man? When Murgatroyd first entered the card-room he had taken him for a trifle over forty but now, on closer scrutiny, after the fatigue of a well-fought game, he felt that to add twenty years to the sum might not be wide of the mark. The hair, what there was of it, was of the sandy hue which grows grey and then white almost unperceived, by graduation rather than change, a development of degree.

There was a long pause while they smoked. Muller had leant back in his arm-chair with his eyes closed, enjoying the fragrance of the weed which he smoked in a deep-bowled, carefully colored meerschaum pipe. Murgatroyd was wondering how lead up to the subject which was absorbing his thoughts. It was Muller who first broke the silence.

I have studied you English the world over—in Africa; in America; on the continent of Europe; in your own country. He spoke with slow emphasis.

I hope your verdict is not altogether unsatisfactory?

I like you—some of you—very well. I like your nation, I trust you—not at all.

Murgatroyd shifted his legs. He was getting angry; yet he did not want to be angry. It is nearly always bad policy; it was more than bad policy; it was more than bad policy at the present time.

I thought it was only the Frenchman—not you Germans—who was ready to call perfide Albion at the slightest provocation, and when it was quite safe to do so.

I am not a German; I have forgotten my nationality. I am a cosmopolitan. In Berlin I am a Prussian, in Vienna an Austrian, in Buda-Pesth a Magyar, in Paris a Parisian, in St. Petersburg a Russian, in New York an American.

And in London? Murgatroyd was eyeing him, as a gladiator of old would have watched a competitor in the arena.

In London—with a little laugh, I read the Pioneer. It is a liberal education. The Pioneer amuses me. They know so much at the Pioneer—and so little.

Murgatroyd had begun to question how much his host knew of himself. It seemed a curious coincidence, if nothing more, that Muller had brought the Pioneer into the conversation.

Muller went on in the sort of half-soliloquy he affected—

No, I am never an Englishman. London is big enough for all the races, and they seethe and seethe in its midst. One day they will tear its great heart out—but that will not be yet. But if the German ever does land—then look at home. He will find plenty of allies, and all of them mind you, trained soldiers.

England will be ready when the time comes—if it ever does.

It will.

Murgatroyd took no notice of the interruption.

We shall never seek war. It is against our interests as well as our instincts. All we ask is fair play and our just rights. There is this Transalpian question for instance, and Murgatroyd shot a glance at Muller.

The latter was re-lighting his meerschaum, apparently only half attending. When the pipe question was satisfactorily adjusted, he turned to the other—the international one.

Yes, there is the Transalpian matter; I have heard of it.

Most readers of the papers have, the journalist replied tartly. Such fencing was poor stuff as well as irritating.

I only read the English papers occasionally. They irritate me, and disturb my digestion. A man cannot afford to tamper with his digestion at my time of life.

I thought it was a generally recognised fact in foreign circles that our Press was second to none in the world—the Times, for instance.

And the Pioneer! Ho!

Muller gave a guttural laugh.

Your press is like yourselves. It is a bully! A take-all and give-none; a live and not-let-live. It bolsters up spoliation and robbery with a show of moderation and justice. Ah, it is hypocritical that Press of yours, friend Englishman.

Murgatroyd kept his temper, but with difficulty.

In this Transalpian question, at any rate, we are in the right without a shadow of doubt. There is only one evidential link wanting. Murgatroyd paused a moment then went on speaking very directly to Muller, who sat buried in the chair opposite, watching the rings of smoke from his pipe ascending towards the ceiling. The man who produces the necessary evidence will assist the cause of justice—and can command what reward he likes.

Muller chuckled.

Ah! now we come to the point! You speak authoritatively, Mr—Mr. Murgatroyd?

ITCHY BURNING ECZEMA ON FACE

Very Bad Case. Little Blisters Broke and Formed Scabs. Thought Would Be Disfigured for Life. Used Cuticura Soap and Ointment a Month. Completely Cured.

Cold Brook, St. John, N. B.—"Cuticura Soap and Ointment certainly cured my little girl of a very bad case of eczema. She had eczema on her face for almost two years. First little white blisters covered her face, then these would break and form scabs, and they were very itchy and burning. I used to have great trouble in getting her to sleep at night. She scratched so I had to do all I could to prevent her, for sometimes she would scratch the scabs off and then it would be very sore and burning. She was certainly a great care. I treated her for it and also used different kinds of blood medicine, and ointment but got no cure. I thought she would be disfigured for life.

"It had lasted about two years when one day I saw an advertisement for Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment in the paper so decided to give them a trial. I had not used them for more than a month when she was completely cured. I cannot praise Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment enough. Of course I continue to use Cuticura Soap as I find it the best soap on the market for children." (Signed) Mrs. John Newman, Dec. 30, 1911.

Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment are sold by druggists and dealers everywhere. For a liberal free sample of each, with 32-p. book, send post card to Potter Drug & Chem. Corp., Dept. 30D, Boston, U. S. A.

HER "BEST FRIEND"

A Woman Thus Speaks of Postum

We usually consider our best friends those who treat us best.

Some persons think tea and coffee are real friends, but watch them carefully awhile and observe that they are two of the meanest of all enemies for they stab one while professing friendship.

Tea and coffee contain a poisonous drug—caffeine—which injures the delicate nervous system and frequently sets up disease in one or more organs of the body, if its use is persisted in.

"I had heart palpitation and nervousness for four years and the doctor told me the trouble was caused by coffee. He advised me to leave it off, but I thought I could not," writes a Western lady.

"On the advice of a friend I tried Postum and it so satisfied me I did not care for coffee after a few days trial of Postum.

"As weeks went by and I continued to use Postum my weight increased from 98 to 118 pounds, and the heart trouble left me. I have used it a year now and am stronger than I ever was. I can hustle up stairs without any heart palpitation, and I am free from nervousness.

"My children are very fond of Postum and it agrees with them. My sister liked it when she drank it at my house; now she has Postum at home and has become very fond of it. You may use my name if you wish as I am not ashamed of praising my best friend—Postum." Name given by Canadian Postum Co., Windsor, Ont.

Postum now comes in new concentrated form called Instant Postum. It is regular Postum, so processed at the factory that only the soluble portions are retained.

A spoonful of Instant Postum with hot water, and sugar and cream to taste, produce instantly a delicious beverage.

Write for the little book, "The Road to Wellville."

"There's a Reason" for Postum.

Studying Eastern Slope Forests

The Forestry Branch of the Department of the Interior is, this summer, continuing the study of the forest conditions of the eastern slope of the Rocky Mountains, which was begun a couple of seasons ago by Mr. T. W. Dwight, M.F.

The result of Mr. Dwight's investigation has lately been published in pamphlet form by the Branch as their bulletin No. 33, entitled "Forest Conditions in the Rocky Mountains Forest Reserve." The forest reserve mentioned, it will be remembered, comprises the entire eastern slope of the Rocky Mountains, from the international boundary to a point farther north than the latitude of Edmonton. The study takes in only the southern part of the reserve.

In the bulletin referred to, Mr. Dwight describes the trees of the region and discusses the effect on them of altitude, aspect and other conditions. He also goes into the effect of fires, lumbering and other factors on the forest and its growth. Methods of lumbering are also discussed, with the idea always in mind of renewing the forest and getting a second crop of timber. Methods followed on the United States 'National Forests' in Montana are described in this connection, and the bulletin concludes with a number of tables of a technical nature, showing, among other details, the yield to be expected from forests of the various types. A number of half tone cuts are used to illustrate the bulletin.

Copies may be obtained gratis from the Director of Forestry, Ottawa.

A GOOD MEDICINE FOR THE SPRING

Don't Use Harsh Purgatives----A Tonic is All You Need.

Not exactly sick—but not feeling quite well. That is the way most people feel in the spring. Easily tired, appetite fickle, sometimes headaches, and a feeling of depression. Pimples or eruptions may appear on the skin, or there may be twinges of rheumatism or neuralgia. Any of these indicate that the blood is out of order—that the indoor life of winter has left its mark upon you and may easily develop into more serious trouble.

Do not dose yourself with purgatives, as so many people do, in the hope that you can put your blood right. Purgatives gallop through the system and weaken instead of giving strength. Any doctor will tell you this is true. What you need in spring is a tonic that will make new blood and build up the nerves. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills is the only medicine that can do this speedily, safely and surely. Every dose of this medicine makes new blood which clears the skin, strengthens the appetite and makes tired, depressed men, women and children bright, active and strong. Mrs. Maude Bagg, Lemberg, Sask., says: "I can unhesitatingly recommend Dr. Williams' Pink Pills as a blood builder and tonic. I was very much run down when I began using the Pills, and a few boxes fully restored my health."

Sold by all medicine dealers or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Some little girls were boasting of their respective families. They had passed from clothes to personal appearance, and finally came to parental dignity. The minister's little girl boasted:

Every package that comes for my papa is marked D.D.

And every package that comes for my daddy is marked M.D., retorted the daughter of the physician.

Then followed a look of contempt from the youngest of the party. Huh! she exclaimed, that's nothing; every package that comes to our house has three letters on it—C.O.D.

Home-Grown Tablecloth

The Bishop of Richmond, England, used to tell this story about his father:

He was a farmer, and a nice old gentleman, too. One year he took it into his head to grow flax, so he sowed the seed, and having a good crop, sent it away to be made into a tablecloth.

Some time later, when seated at dinner, he remarked to a lady near him:

Do you know, I grew this tablecloth myself.

Did you really? she answered, with the greatest surprise. How ever did you manage it?

Well, most mysteriously, if you'll promise not to tell anyone, I'll tell you. I planted a napkin.

Small but Potent.—Parmelee's Vegetable Pills are small, but they are effective in action. Their fine qualities as a corrector of stomach troubles are known to thousands and they are in constant demand everywhere by those who know what a safe and simple remedy they are. They need no introduction to those acquainted with them, but to those who may not know them they are presented as the best preparation on the market for disorders of the stomach.

A funny mistake occurred lately in printing labels for a meat-preserving company. The printer had been in the habit of labelling tins of beef or mutton as the case might be, with the words 'without bone' prominently displayed. The company having added kidney soup to its list, the new article was duly ticketed as 'Kidney soup—without bone.'

"BLOOD IS THICKER THAN WATER"

Without good red blood a man has a weak heart and poor nerves. Thinness of the blood, or anaemia, is common in young folks as well as old. Especially is it the case with those who work in illy ventilated factories—or those who are shut up indoors in winter time with a coal stove burning up the oxygen or emitting carbonic (oxide) gas. This blood, or blood which lacks the red blood corpuscles, in anaemic people may have been caused by lack of good fresh air breathed into lungs, or by poor digestion or dyspepsia. Sometimes people suffer intense pain over the heart which is not heart disease at all, but caused by indigestion. Whatever the cause, there's just one remedy that you can turn to—knowing that it has given satisfaction for over 40 years.

Contradictory Terms

An American visitor to Cambridge sought explanation of some unfamiliar terms, which a genial Don was delighted to elucidate. Full term, he explained, is three-quarters of a term, and the May week is the first fortnight in June. A day of general admission is the day on which men leave the University, or ordinary degree is one conferred by a special exam, and an inspector of art is one who has been an art student for at least six years.

The Yankee passed a hand across his weary brow. And will they, he queried, put me in the London train if I ask for a ticket to Cambridge?

George was famous for being late at his appointments. He was engaged to be married to a young lady in a neighboring city, and when the day of the ceremony arrived George, as usual, did not put in an appearance. The bride was on the verge of nervous prostration when the following telegram was received from the missing bridegroom:

Dear Helen—Missed the early train. Will arrive on the 4.31. Don't get married until I get there. George.

It Will Prevent Ulcerated Throat.—At the first symptoms of sore throat, which presages ulceration and inflamation, take a spoonful of Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil. Add a little sugar to it to make it palatable. It will allay the irritation and prevent the ulceration and swelling that are so painful. Those who were periodically subject to quinsy have thus made themselves immune to attack.

Two women, one of whom carried a baby, entered a well-known furnisher's one day last summer and signified a desire to look at some carpets. It was warm, but the salesman cheerfully showed roll after roll until the perspiration streamed from his face. Finally one of the women asked the other if she did not think it was time to go. Not quite, was the answer of her companion; and then in an undertone she added: Baby likes to see him roll them out and we've plenty of time to catch the train.

Must Remember Him

A well-known goalkeeper while taking a stroll in a certain North Country town, was greatly surprised one day when a stranger rushed up to him, seized him by the hand, and shook it warmly.

There must be some mistake, stammered the football player. I——

Mistake! Oh, dear, no! broke in the stranger. That is to say, you are ——, aren't you?

Yes; but what has that got to do with it?

Oh, don't you remember when S— shot at goal yesterday you tipped the ball over the net into the crowd.

Again came the reply in the affirmative.

Then, hang it all, exclaimed the stranger, triumphantly, you must remember me, I was the chap who threw the ball back again.

ALL THE TIRED NERVOUS WOMEN

CAN FIND A CURE IN DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS

Madame Perreault Tells How She Cured Her Kidneys With Dodd's Kidney Pills, and Found Health and Contentment.

Verner, Ont. (Special)—"I am very content. Dodd's Kidney Pills have made me well." Those are the words of Madame Eugene Perreault, a highly-respected lady of this place, and mother of a large family. For twenty years she was a sufferer. But let her tell her own story.

"I was always tired and nervous," she states. 'I felt heavy and sleepy after meals. My limbs were heavy and I had a dragging sensation across my loins. My skin itched and burned at night. I had a bitter taste in my mouth especially in the morning. In twenty years I hardly knew what it was to have a well moment. Then I commenced to use Dodd's Kidney Pills. Six boxes cured me".

Madame Perreault's symptoms were those of kidney disease. They are the symptoms of nine out of ten of the nervous, rundown, pain-racked women of Canada. Madame Perreault found a speedy and complete cure in Dodd's Kidney Pills. They simply cured her kidneys.

Just Like Men

Dolly was not quite six when her mother bought a flock of nine Plymouth Rock hens and a rooster, and diligently explained to Dolly that the rooster was the papa hen and the rest were all mamma hens. After two or three days of confinement, to accustom them to their coop, they were let out to wander about the yard, and Dolly was set to watch them. The hens stayed together nicely, but the rooster showed a tendency to wander into the next-door neighbor's chicken yard. Dolly chased him back time and again, until she was tired and out of patience. She turned her back for a minute, and when she looked round there were the hens by the coop, while the rooster was sedately pacing across the garden towards the next yard.

Dolly stamped her foot on the sidewalk and screamed: Come back here! Come back to your own family. The rooster proceeded with perfect equanimity. Dolly watched him for a moment with a look of utter disgust. Then her mother heard her say, very emphatically:

That's just like you men, anyway.

Lord Dufferin delivered an address before the Greek class of the M'Gill University about which a reporter wrote:

His Lordship spoke to the class in the purest ancient Greek, without mispronouncing a word or making the slightest grammatical solecism.

Good heavens! remarked Sir Hector Langevin to the late Sir John A. Macdonald, how did the reporter know that?

I told him, was the Conservative stateman's answer.

But you don't know Greek.

True; but I know a little about politics.

Where have you been, Frank?

In Manchester.

What were you doing there?

I ran a photograph gallery.

Did you get anything to do?

Well, I should say I did. I put out a sign: Babies taken here, and next morning there were four of them left on the doorstep.

Thought it was Poetry

A celebrated journalist once concluded an important article with a carefully composed and eloquent peroration. To his dismay, however, a printer's idiosyncrasy caused this peroration to appear to the world cut up into separate lines, and posing as a poetical quotation.

The irate journalist, conscious that some of his best work had been spoiled, rushed wildly into the editor's sanctum and pointing to the printed muddle, excitedly exclaimed—

Look here at this. See what that fiendish printer has done. He has ruined—utterly ruined—my work.

The editor, with that serene composure and affability which is so characteristic of his race, listened quietly to a recital of the printer's crimes, and then gravely arose.

I will see justice done, my good fellow, he murmured; and then, armed with a copy of the paper, strode into the composing-room.

Jenkins, did you set up this?

A compositor of the good old school came forward.

Yes, sir, that is some of my work.

And very fine work it is, too, exclaimed the editor. Do you know that this is some of Mr. S——'s finest prose, and you have been thick-headed enough to set it up for poetry?

Prose, is it, sir? muttered the compositor. Well, I looked at that passage, and I read it for'ards, and I read it back'ards, and I read it likewise upside down, but I couldn't make head nor tail nor common sense out of it, so I thought it must be poetry and printed it as such.

Minard's Liniment used by Physicians

What He Wanted

With the air of one who has no moment to spare, she bustled into the bookshop.

I want a book for my husband, please, she began. It's his birthday, and I want it for a present. He'll be forty-four. Show me what you have—and be quick, please! Nothing too expensive, and I don't want anything cheap, either. He's a mild-mannered man, and not fond of sports, so don't show me anything in that line; and for goodness sake don't offer me any of those trashy novels; and no matter how you try to persuade me, I won't take anything in the line of history or biography. Come now, I'm in a dreadful hurry, and you have already wasted too much of my time here! Of course you don't know my husband, but from all I've said can't you suggest something appropriate?

The assistant lifted down a small volume from one of the shelves.

Yes, ma'am, he answered. I think I have the very thing. Here is a little book entitled: How to Manage a Talking Machine.

Nothing as Good for Asthma. Asthma remedies come and go but every year the sales of the original Dr. J. D. Kellogg's Asthma Remedy grow greater and greater. No further evidence could be asked of its remarkable merit. It relieves. It is always of the same unvarying quality which the sufferer from asthma learns to know. Do not suffer another attack, but get this splendid remedy today.

It's no use talking, remarked Banks dejectedly. It's impossible to make a woman understand even the first principles of finance.

What's the matter now? inquired Henderson.

Matter! ejaculated the disgusted Banks. Why, when I was away yesterday the baby swallowed a threepenny-piece. And what does my wife do but call in a doctor and pay him half a guinea for getting that coin back

Talked in Vain

This, madam, said the house agent, is the larder. You will observe that it has a brick floor and slate shelves, which keeps the meat delightfully cool. The marble slab is designed to hold a week's supply of fish. That patent ventilator causes a constant current of fresh air to circulate round the game, so that your pheasants will never be too high to reach; and here we have hooks for joints not required for immediate use. The fact of its facing south is a great advantage as new-laid eggs placed near the window in the morning will often turn into spring chickens during the afternoon.

You may spare me further details, remarked the lady acidly. We are strict vegetarians.

Health Necessary for Good Work

Whether working for oneself or for others, no man or woman can do efficient work unless the health is in good condition.

Competition is keen these days, and success goes to those who are strong, energetic and ambitious.

From a purely financial standpoint you cannot afford to neglect the warnings given by headache, neuralgia, sleeplessness, indigestion, loss of energy, mental vigor and physical strength.

Most workers, whether their work is manual or mental, find themselves handicapped at times by a run-down condition of the system.

For all such we have a message that will bring joy and gladness into their lives. We want you to know about Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, the great restorative, which forms new blood and restores feeble, wasted nerve cells.

By using this food cure you can instil new energy and strength into every organ of the human body. Pains, aches and physical weakness soon disappear, and health is brought up to high-water mark by

DENMAN ISLAND

The first of July being Dominion Day the people of Denman and Hornby Islands meet at Chalmers beach and spent a most enjoyable day, picnicing. Sports for the grown up folks and the children, such as racing, jumping, tug-of-war and a number of other events. We thank the ladies for bringing such an abundant supply of good things to eat, which was served on the grounds. After supper there was a baseball game played, thence a goodly number of the party proceeded to the hall where they danced until an early hour in the morning.

Most of the farmers have started haying this week. The appearance of the hay crops look to be good this season.

The government surveyors have been here the past week surveying for a number of the farmers.

Mrs. J. Anderson, of Courtenay, is spending a week with Mrs. P. C. Smith.

Mrs. F. Dumaresq and family from Vancouver are spending their holidays at with Mrs. S. Dumaresq

Ladies' Aid Meets

The July meeting of the Ladies' Aid of the Presbyterian church was held at the home of Mrs. Salmond. There was a large attendance from Courtenay and Sandwick. It was found that after paying all expences $123.25 was cleared at the Strawberry Festival.

It was decided to hold a Raspberry social the latter part of this month. The ladies also decided to give $500 towards the building of the new church at Courtenay.

After the business meeting was over Mr. and Mrs. Salmond entertained everybody to a tempting repast set out on the lawn, the usual bountiful supply of strawberries being enjoyed by all.

The ladies will meet next month at the home of Mrs. Lucius Cliffe.

Automobile Dance

The Automobile Association's first ball was held in the opera house on Tuesday evening, and was a delightful success. The music wus furnished by Prof. Harvey's orchestra, of Nanaimo, and was fully up to its usnally high standard. The ladies were handsomely gowned, and the gentlemen well groomed, while the supper provided by Mine Host Fechner at the Biverside, was all that could be desired. There was not quite so good a crowd as was expected, but the hall was comfortably filled and was beautifully decorated with bunting, flags and streamers. The members had thoughtfully placed their autos at the disposal of their guests which was much appreciated.

Messrs. Selby & Pollock, contractors, from Nanaimo, have decided to locate in Courtenay. They find there is a demand for a better class of lumber than is to be procured here and to that end have decided in the near future to have a stock of No. 1 kiln dried lumber on hand.

Call of The Hills

Come, let us seek the Hill-god's shrine,
O, my Love make no delay,
Come, with you onlo can be mine
All the gladness of this day.

Come, let us seek the Hill-god's shrine,
By the aisles of pine-woods dim,
There ling'ring list the chant divine,
Of Nature's opening hymn.

Come, let us seek the Hill-god's shrine,
'Yond the utmost wind-bent boles,
And let his living light to shine
On the dark hills of our souls.

Come, let us seek the Hill-god's shrine,
On the wide free moors above,
There let us drink the Hill-god's wine
To the pledge Eternal Love.
