False Statements Regarding Am. Life & Ins. Co.

President Webster in a Comprehensive Statement Explains Situation—Oregon Insurance Commissioner Restrained by Judge's Decision

In reference to the article published in your paper as reproduced from the Saturday Sunset, of the 3rd inst. there is very little of it which is true, and the few statements which are true, are so connected with those which are false as to give anentirely wrong impression. The assertion that the Company's statement showed mortgage assets to the value of $153,000.00 is true. The statement that the Insurance Commissioner was not satisfied with the securities is partly true. The statement that there were three notes of the Marietta Realty Company amounting to $100,000.00 is also true, but the statement that these notes were conditional notes is absolutely and unqualifiedly false. There were notes made directly to the Company and they contained a clause which made them non-negotiable: but the notes were absolutely unconditional. The non-transferable feature of these notes is entirely satisfactory to the former Insurance Commissioner who occupied that position at the time the notes were taken. Before these notes were taken, they were submitted to the then Commissioner and were quite satisfactory to him. All of these notes were secured by first mortgages. It is not true that it was revealed anywhere or to anybody that the interest on these notes had not been paid, and, on the contrary, the plain open entries in the books of the Company show that the interest was paid and just when it was paid.

One of the mortgages thus submitted was a mortgage for $60,000.00 executed by the Marietta Realty Co. upon property which is conservatively appraised at almost three times the value and the note evidencing this indebtedness is the ordinary negotiable note, the non-negotiable feature having been eliminated because of the objections of the Insurance Commissioner. There is not the least warrant or authority in the law for the Insurance Department to demand as was demanded by this Commissioner, that the Company should deposit $25,000.00; but as above stated, we were endeavoring to so placate the Commissioner as to avoid the effect of his open opposition and so set about to further comply with those demands. Arrangements had been made to effect this result when there appeared in the newspapers a garbled account of the affair which embarrassed us in immediately realizing upon our securities without unwarranted loss. After some further effort, we decided to take the matter into Court and there to assert and maintain our clear and plain legal rights as against the Commissioner.

We have employed three of the best known lawyers in the state, who have carefully gone into the whole matter and who advise us that there is not the slightest question that we have a legal right to a certificate to transact life and accident insurance business and that the Commissioner was entirely unwarranted in the action that he had taken. The Court has granted us an injunction by which the Commissioner is prevented from revoking our licence and in which he is commanded to himself revoke and set aside his order of suspension, thus by the mandate of the Court fully and completely vindicating our contentions, declaring our financial stability and reinstating our rights to transact Insurance business. This company had all of the assets that it ever claimed it had. It has never made a false statment nor an overstatement to anybody. It has always promptly paid every just claim at the time when it should have been paid. It has dealt fairly and openly and honestly with everybody with whom it has had dealings. It has solicited business in British Columbia and it intends to continue to do so and not withstanding the false and malicious statements of those who hope to profit by its injury, it is and it will continue to be one of the most just fairest and safest companies that ever did business in British Columbia or anywhere else.

Claims paid out

Since May the following Claims have been paid from the Cranbrook Branch of the American Life and Accident Insurance Co.

Paul Cotie, fractured limb, $320.00; Thos. Kaloway $275; William Culham $100; John Bermingham $120; James Chisholm $31.65; Felix O'Donnell $76.50; Fred A. Macken $10.00; Chas. A. Rogers $21.66; William Holmes $5.00; Elmer A. Carver $46.66; Walter Rock $50.00; T. S. Osborn $15.00; Ben Hargrave $21.66; Russell Dickenson $48.40

Policy holders who keep up their policies and hold policies with the American Life will find more security and better satisfaction with this company than with any of the new Companies that offer such liberal policies and are trying so hard to gain our business by malicious statements thrown broadcast over the country.

General Booth, S.A., Dead

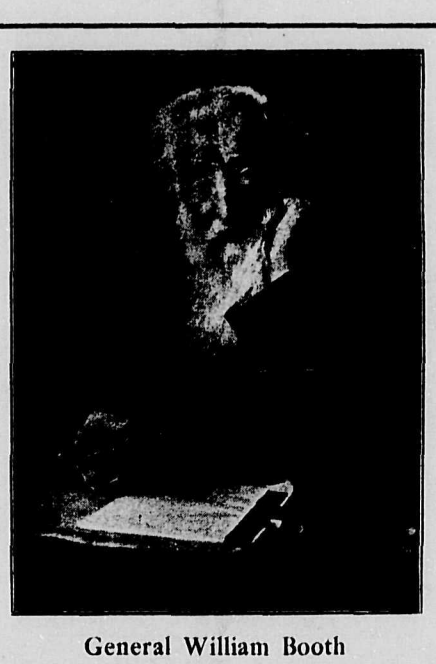
Bramwell Booth, the son, to Succeed his father



General William Booth

London, Aug. 21.—General William Booth, commander-in-chief of the Salvation Army, died at 10.30 o'clock last night. He was born at Nottingham in 1829.

The veteran Salvation Army leader was unconsious for 48 hours before his death. The medical bulletins had not revealed the seriousness of the General's condition, which for a week, it is now admitted, was hopeless.

Twelve weeks ago, General Booth underwent an operation for the removal of a cataract in his left eye. For two days after the operation indications gave hope of his recovery. Then septic poisoning set in, and from that time, with the exception of occassional rallies, the patient's health steadily declined. The General recognized that the end was near and often spoke of his work being finished.

Throughout the commander-in-chief illness his son, Bramwell Booth, chiel of the staff of the Army, and Mrs. Bramwell Booth, gave their unremitting attentions to him.

The aged evangelist died at his residence, the Rockstone, Hedleywood, eight miles from London, where he had been confined to his bed since the operation. Present at the bedside when the end came were Mr. and Mrs. Bramwell Booth and their daughter and son, Adjutant Catherine Booth and Sergeant Bernard Booth; the general's youngest daughter, Commissioners Mrs. Booth-Helberd, and Commissioner Howard, Colonel Kitching and Dr. Wardlaw Milne.

Almost the last words of General Booth were uttered just before he lost consciousness. He was referring to God's promises and, speaking with great difficulty, said:

"They are sure—they are sure—if you will only believe them."

It is probable the obsequies will include the lying in state for several days at Congress hall, Clayton, followed by a memorial service and a procession from London to Abney Park.

William Booth was born in Nottingham, England, April 10, 1829. He became a minister of the Methodist New Connection, 1850; was appointed to hold special evangelistic services until 186, when, being required to settle in the ordinary circuit work, he resigned and began his labors among the churches as an evangelist.

Finding that most of the inhabitants of London attended no place of worship, he began the "Christian

Over Six Million Votes Cast in Prospector's Contest

Master Robert Pye wins Capital Prize with a total of 2,353,250 votes—Miss Annie Weise wins Upright Grand Piano. Con- a Grand Success

The "Prospector's" Contest has passed into history. The end came last Saturday night and the success which has attended the venture was more than could have been anticipated. The great increase in circulation for the "Prospector" proves the success of the campaign. The idea of the contest was not to make money so much as it was to secure circulation and widen the scope of usefulness of the leading weekly newspaper of the Kootenays.

And the candidates who participated in the voting contest are all well satisfied. The rivalry throughout was of a friendly nature and the results accomplished by the various contestants not only proves their ability and ambitiousness but also their popularity with a host of friends and supporters.

Almost six million votes were polled during the campaign. Robert A. Pye, the youngest candidate in the field, won the capital prize automomobile with a total of nearly two and a half million votes. He had a lead of almost a million and a quarter votes over the second contestant. This is surely a record for weekly newspaper contests and it is doubtful if ever a contestant reached this high mark in contests of a similiar nature. On Monday, Master Pye received a certified cheque for the $700. cash prize in preference to the automobile as advertised..

Miss Annie Weise was second on the list and carries off the Upright Grand Piano. The piano was delivered to Miss Weise on Monday and during the week many remarks of satisfaction have been passed by her friends and herself upon the excellence of tone, style and workmanship of her new instrument. The piano is an Innis No. 10 and is the produce of the wellknown firm, New Scale Williams Co., Oshawa, Ont.

The third prize goes to Mr. J. B. Henderson, the fourth to Miss Roberts and the fifth to Mrs. Wolf. Miss Roberts achieved splendid results and it must be admitted that the most conscientious work and best individual work was done by this popular lady.

And now the "Prospector" has a circulation of which any newspaper could feel proud. This will be of interest to all advertisers, for they know that the paper with the circulation is the paper for the judicious advertiser. Advertising is of value according to its distribution and the distribution which is now available through the Prospector can not be secured in any other weekly journal in the Kootenays.

The contest has been a success and everybody is satisfied. The campaign was under direction of the Northern Circulation Co., of Montreal, Que.

R. A. PYE

To the Editor:

Burden to Great

Whether or not R. P. Bennett, K. C., M.P., intends to contest a seat for the British house of commons he would not say on his way home to Calgary from a visit to England. He has been over to the old land three times this year and will go again shortly. Referring to the navy question in Great Britian, Mr. Bennet said:

" The situation there is far more serious than we in Canada have any idea of. The British taxpayer cannot stand the burden he is carrying much longer. Just what my observations are on the situation between England and Germany. I do not care to express offhand. One should think before he speaks on such a subject and think seriously.

Mr. Bennett declared rather frankly that he is not altogether in favor of the visit to Canada of Winston Churchill.

"I am afraid that some religious and sectarian disputes would follow and we have had enough such disputes in this country," he declared.

Fail to Re-open Suit

Attorney F. C. Robertson, F. T. Post and John Gray, of Wallace, yesterday presented affidavits before Judge William A. Huneke in asking for a re-opening of the case of W. J. and J. B. Langley against A. J. Devlin and Alfred page, in which a judgment had been given of $371.000 last June.

The attorneys for the defendant asked to re-open on the offering of affidavits of D. C. Corbin, who wished to to correct his testimony regarding a trip he made to Crow's Nest, B.C., in 1905. It was alleged that testimony would be introduced to show th at Mr. Corbin had not seen the coal property previous to the time he was alleged to have entered into an agreement to buy it.

Theerror of a telegram sent to the hotelkeeper at Crow's Nest asking him to bring the hotel register was said to have kept the testimony from being offered before the former trial closed. It was alleged that the telegram was sent in 1905 but when received read "1939".

After arguing the matter all afternoon Attorney E. J. Cannon agreed to let the affidavits be introduced into the record, but no testimony heard. Judge Huneke denied the motion to reopen the case after the stipulation had been made.

Strikes Imperalistic Note With Vigor

Premier Borden at Clydebank—Steamship Lines are Arteries of Empire—Must be Protected —Statesmen Relied On.

"We of the overseas dominions are thoroughly conscious of the great problems which even now await the statesmen of the empire, regarding the bringing about of a more thorough and more effective organization between the mother country and the vast overseas possessions. We are conscious of these problems and the responsibilities which that connection has laid upon us, upon you in these isles.

"I am convinced that British Statesmen, and I use the word "British" in its widest sense, will be equal to the magnitude of the task, whatever may be its greatness or developement in long years to come, not so much in extension of territory as territory—for the empire is already large enough; not so much in its resources, because they are all any one of us desire but in the influence of the empire for the welfare of humanity, for the advancement of civilization, avd for the peace of the world. So that as the poet says, 'Wider still and wider may her bounds be set, God who made us mighty make us mightier yet.'"

CHRISTENS BOAT

This was the stirring peroration of a speech delivered by Premier Borden at Clydebank on Saturday, when Mrs. Borden christened the steamship Niagara, built for the Canadian —Australian service. The ceremony was the concluding one of Mr. Borden's visit to Scotland, a visit which has been as remarkable for the warmth of welcome displayed to the Canadian premier as any he has encountered during the strenuous time of the last few weeks.

Premier and Mrs. Borden were guests over nigat of Lord Inverclyde and with their hosts and other guests motored to Loch Lomond, sailed up the Loch and motored back to Clyde bank.

The launching ceremony was entirely successful, Mrs. Borden, as the vessel glided down the ways, saying: "I wish every success to this beautiful ship."

MRS BORDEN HONORED

The luncheon was a success. The Niagara was proposed by Charles Ells who described the vessel amid applause, as the last link in the All-Red route of which so much had been heard recently. Sir J. Mills, chairman of the Union Steamship company, replied and said Premier Borden and his colleagues had done much to educate the people of this country as to the relationship which ought to exist between the mother country and her dominions which were no longer to be looked upon as naughty children or poor relations, but as partners in the firm. He then presented Mrs. Borden with a diamond pendant.

Mr. Borden acknowledged the gift on behalf of his wife and expressed the pleasure he and Mrs. Borden had in being present on such a happy occasion. He was not yet an old man (laughter) in fact he considered himself a mere boy (renewed laughter), but he remembered some years ago in Nova Scotia meeting a Scotchman who told him he had paddled and forded the Clyde where the great ocean steamers sailed today. It was something of a marvel to them in Canada where the government assisted private tnterprizes a great deal, to know that the development of the Clyde had been practically unaided and carried out by sheer foresight and courage of men who had the ability, he might say the audacity, to undertake to make Glasgow what she is today. (Applause)

He felt sure every Canadian who had visited the Clyde would go back inspired with even keener determination to make the most of the vast resources at his country's command. Canadians had resources unbounded and believed they had made good use of them in the past, but looking to what had been accomplished in Glasgow he was sure every Canadian would be inspired to even greater things in the future. Allusion had been made to the importance of keeping open the great channels of of communications between the mother isles and the overseas dominions, also between the overseas dominions themselves He had referred to the courage and foresight of the men who had laid the foundations of the industries of Glasgow and the Clyde, but equal courage and foresight seemed to him to have been displayby those who under took to lay the foundations of the great line between Canada and Australia.

As cables, wires and wireless telegraphs might be likened to the nerve of the empire without which they could not live, so the great lines of steamships might be likened to the arteries of the empire and the empire could not be made secure unless the arteries were safe. They had that day entered upon another stage in the development between Canada and the other colonies, but he hoped that the development was only a foretoken of a much greater development in the future.

Then followed the peroration already referred to, the cheers of the auditors creating a most inspiring impression. Later Mr. and Mrs. Borden motored to Glasgow and subsequently entrained for Newcastle.

West Recognized as Never Before

Addressing an audience of over 3,000 people at a Conservative picnic at Goldstream saturday Sir Richard McBride dealt in an illuminating way with the recognition the West is receiving from the present goverment at Ottawa. That the west is at last coming into its own was the keynote of his speech.

"There are today" he said, "no more prominent questions than those dealing with Western Canada and considerable time is devoted to their solution. It is quite right that this should be so because the time has come when we should demand and receive that recognition and treatment to which this portion of the Dominion is entitled. Mr. Borden is dealing eminently fairly with us in the matter of public works and he is re-recognizing the importance of the west as it has never been recognized before.

"Where there was a Laurier with an indifferent navy and a miserable reciprocity policy twelve months ago there is to-day a Borden with a strong determination to announce an efficient naval policy and reciprocity down and out forever.

"It has turned out since, that many of the things said and felt at the time when reciprocity was before the country were only too well in season. It has been shown from the disclosures of certain correspondence that a high authority in the United States believed that Canada would become an adjunct of the union to the south. Surely, never again in the history of Canada will any public man have the temerity to offer for the consideration of the electorate the question of reciprocity."

Speaking on the naval question the premier said that he believed that Mr. Borden, after consultation with his colleagues, would be prepared to promulgate a naval policy which would measure up to the dignity of Canada and show to the world that this country stood for unity of empire. "It would have a profound effect," said Sir Richard, "in letting the nations know that this strong country is prepared to spend every dollar to keep the old flag flying.

Continuing, the premier delt with the prosperity of the province which he said now enjoyed a splendid surplus. It is the intention of the government, he stated, to continue its carefulness in the expenditure of public money. The object of his administration will in the future, as in the past, be to preserve the credit of the province, induce more capital to come here and be prepared in the years to come to undertake further works that will do wonders for the province and the Dominion as well.

In the course of his address the premier paid a high tribute to R. F. Green, the member of Kootenay. "When Mr. Green goes back to Ottawa," he said, "he will go as a representative not only of Kootenay but the entire west will find in him an enthusiastic, warm and sympathetic friend and ardent champion."

Among other speakers were Hon. Thomas Taylor, R. F. Green, M.P., J. H. Burnham, M.P., for west Peterboro, and local members of the legislature.

SMART SUMMER WARDROBE FIXINGS

BLACK AND WHITE NET RUCHE.

SHEPHERD'S CROOK PARASOL.

THE FASHIONABLE RUSSIAN BLOUSE AND (BELOW) CORRECT SUMMER FOOTWEAR.

IT isn't the frock that counts nowadays in the sartorial picture half so much as the accessories that accompany it—shoes, sash, gloves, neckwear and the thousand and one "trifles light as air" which this season are more alluring than ever. Take the matter of footwear, for instance. There are three styles that lead this summer, all of which are to be seen in the footwear illustration. First comes the trim buttoned boot of white buckskin which is worn with white serge, mohair and linen and with the summery frocks if desired. In the center of the group is the new buttoned oxford, a dressy little shoe which makes the foot and ankle look especially graceful and which has to a large extent supplanted the laced oxford tie. The colonial pump, with its high tongue, trim, straight heel and metal buckle across the front, is liked with piazza and house frocks, but is not as fashionable for the street as the buttoned boot or oxford.

Fascinating things in the boa line appeared in the accessories sent over from Paris the past spring, and as the days go by these bewitching little novelties have become more and more attractive. Not only do young girls and women in the forties wear the boa, but women verging on old ladyhood are glad to have such things in their wardrobe, though with the latter the knot is brought round in front and looks very fetching.

Flower neckpieces are the fad just now and are worn at afternoon functions with low necked gowns. Some of these boas are masses of lilies of the valley, heliotrope, forgetmenots and tiny flowers sewed to tulle or black velvet, though when the latter is used very few flowers are put on, usually only a stemming of the flowers, sewed at both edges of the velvet.

Summer styles demand low necks, and some women sensible enough to know that their necks are not pretty or young enough have adopted this method of concealing probably the worst part of their anatomy.

Then, again, there are lovely neckpieces of two inch wide velvet ribbon in color or in black, with an edge of narrow lace at one or both sides of the velvet. Flower collars, however, soon become common, and unless one can originate a boa that is a bit out of the ordinary it is apt to look commonplace.

The charming little ruche pictured is always good style. Black and white net are the component parts, with black velvet ribbon as the leading motif. Such a neckpiece is quite within the province of the amateur to make.

Some of the picturesque parasols for lawn use have handles at the ferrule end, and the parasol is carried upside down. This is almost essential in the case of a fringed parasol like the model pictured, for a fringe parasol carried in the ordinary manner catches in everything and is not as graceful in effect as when the fringe droops downward from a closed cover. The parasol in the cut has a broad border of black velvet, which matches perfectly the black velvet sash shown on the frock.

The smart little Russian blouses of the season really come under the head of accessories. With the peplum, plastron, postilion and other devices which make it necessary to wear the waist outside of the skirt, the Russian blouse is having a decided success. The model pictured is of handkerchief linen and is handmade and trimmed with tiny crochet ball buttons. The collar and cuffs are of black chiffon, over which is a frill of plaited shadow lace. A black patent leather belt and a velvet tie add the French note.

To return to the boa subject once more, if you want to be in the front rank of fashion next fall you must own one of the little boa plumes that merely encircle the neck and fasten at the back with long hanging bows of velvet. If you have several ragged ostrich feathers that are not good enough to make into a long plume take the bundle to a plumer and he will surely deliver to you a charming little boa in a few days that you will be delighted to don on the first cool days of autumn.

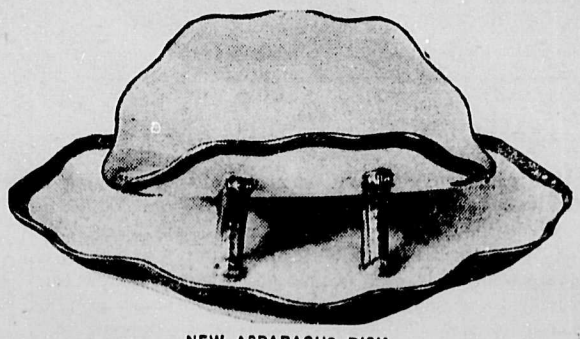
ASPARAGUS DISH FILLS A GREAT WANT



NEW ASPARAGUS DISH.

ASPARAGUS, delicious vegetable, has given many a housewife weary hours racking her brain as to which is the best way to serve it. Now some ingenious person has invented the dish seen in the illustration. It eliminates all further cause for worry. The dish seems to be made in two pieces, but it is really in one and resembles a cigar tray in shape. It is part of a white dinner set trimmed with gold.

WELL TESTED FRUIT RECIPES

To Serve Melons Simply.

HAVE the cantaloupe thoroughly chilled before using, then cut in half, remove the seeds, but be careful not to scrape out the delicate pulp nearest the seeds, as this is the most delicious part of the fruit. Place the halves of the melon on plates of cracked ice, reversing the usual order of seriving ice in the hollow of the melon, which method draws out the flavor instead of preserving it with the pulp.

Melon Marmalade.

Take large citron melons, quarter and remove the seeds. Weigh the melon and to every pound of the fruit allow a pound of loaf sugar (double refined). To every three pounds of melons allow two lemons and a teaspoonful of ground white ginger. Grate the melon on a coarse grater, not too close to the rind. Grate off also the yellow rind of the lemons and with the ginger add to the sugar. Mix all the ingredients in a preserving kettle. Set the kettle over a moderate fire, boil, skim and stir until it is a very thick, smooth jam. Put it into warm glasses, lay a double round of tissue paper on the surface and seal the jars.

Melon Mousse.

Place the cantaloupe in a preserving kettle with half the quantity of sugar. Stew down until rather thick, rub through sieve and replace on stove. Have dissolved half a box of gelatin for each pint of pulp, first softened in a little cold water, then more thoroughly dissolved by pouring on it a half pint of boiling water and placing it over steam. Add this to the cooked melon, stirring until it begins to cool and thicken, then place in wetted molds and set on ice till firm and serve with cream. Less gelatin may be used if preferred.

Melons For Salads.

Perfectly ripe melons are delicious for salads when cut in cubes and served alone or with other fruits such as peaches or bananas. Tomatoes may be used. Serve with mayonnaise plain or flavored with liquor or French dressing, to which has been added a suspicion of maraschino, or serve with whipped cream.

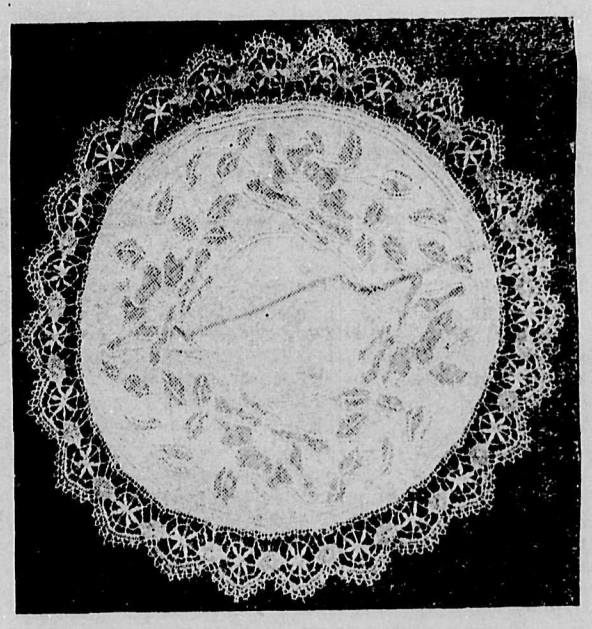
Watermelon Sherbet.

Scrape all the red pulp of the melon, carefully saving the juice and retaining sufficient pulp to give strength of flavor. Allow to one gallon of liquid a pound of sugar and freeze. When half frozen add the whipped whites of eggs (one for each quart of the mixture) and finish the freezing.

Watermelon Half Frozen.

Break the ripe pulp of a watermelon into fine bits with a silver fork and place it in an ice cream freezer without the dasher. Let it stand for two hours packed in salt and ice. Serve in sherbet glasses.

FOR THE SUMMER NEEDLEWORKER



PUNCHED WORK CENTERPIECE.

THIS summer the needlewoman will occupy her time with a very pretty and effective sort of embroidery, which very much resembles drawn work, but is not nearly so difficult to do. This pretty centerpiece is embroidered in white floss on oyster white linen, and real cluny lace is used about the edge.

IMPORTANCE OF BACK VIEWS

AS a rule, girls do not pay nearly enough attention to their backs. Yet no one can be well dressed unless she can bear an all round scrutiny. Many a woman would be astonished at the "character revelations" which she carries at her back. To a great extent a girl shows her character in her clothes and the way in which she wears them, but not only viewed from the front.

When a girl dresses her hair to suit her face, with never a thought to what it looks like viewed from behind, she will probably give the same one sided attention to other—more important, perhaps—matters. However charming the hair may look from the front, when the back discloses straggling ends or hair tightly strained—anything which shows carelessness or untidiness of arrangement—the whole effect is ruined.

It is important that a girl should never buy a hat by merely seeing her face beneath it. Viewed so it may suit her, but what of the back? For example, crowds of girls wear big hats which fall over their shoulders and completely hide the neck. The back view in such a case is absolutely ludicrous. Small hats and toques have a reverse habit unless carefully chosen and put on well. Many a toque presents a bird-like appearance at the back, showing a gaping void between hair and hat. Whenever a woman wears a small hat she should be quite sure that people behind can see she has a hat on and that her hair is dressed at the back in a way to accentuate the good appearance of the hat.

Women who wear veils should not be content with an attractive frontal arrangement. A veil is badly arranged when it drags unevenly across the back of a hat or the ends obtrude in an ungraceful way.

Neckwear and the arrangement of it are bad feminine failings. It is a common thing for girls to wear jabots and collars which look delightful in front, but which are fastened in an "anyhow" fashion at the back—probably with a big, hideous safety pin. If pins are indispensable, and they seem to be for some collars, use tiny gilt or gold ones and fasten them in such a way as not to strike a note of untidy discord. When pins are not necessary women should provide all their collars and neckwear with proper fastenings put on in the proper places. The latter is important. Unless the fastenings are in the right places on a collar there will either be irritating gaps between them or the collar will fall crooked and the whole back effect be altogether wretched.

The same thing applies to blouses which fasten down the back. Many a woman's blouse, otherwise charming, shows a succession of little gapes where it is fastened. A blouse, too, should always be well connected with the skirt. Women often give scanty attention to the arrangement of the waist at the back. There should be no separation between blouse, belt and skirt. The blouse should be pulled taut and smooth beneath the skirt. There should be no unevenness above or ugly ridge of blouse beneath the skirt. The skirt band should be fixed securely into position.

That a skirt should "hang" well is perhaps more essential from the back view even than the front. Many girls pay no particular attention to the back of a skirt when it is in making. Consequently many skirts look all wrong at the back—bad length, tightness or hideous bulkiness caused by bad arrangement of material.

A girl who does not trouble about the back views of her appearance may be usually depended upon to display a similar spirit with regard to other matters. There are plenty of people who know this, people who scrutinize a woman's back carefully to find out what sort of person she really is.

CHECKED SUITS ARE STILL SMART

TRAVELING SUIT OF BLACK AND WHITE CHECK.

CUSTOM cannot stale the infinite variety of the checked suit, and each year it appears in a new and more attractive guise. The latest model in this design is pictured in the cut. The check, as may be easily seen, is very fine, almost of an invisible character. A touch of vivid green about the collar of the coat is a strikingly chic feature of this natty little model.

For the Summer Girl

FROCK OF EMBROIDERED BATISTE.

VERY simple, girlish and attractive is this frock of white embroidered batiste. The skirt is slightly gathered about the waist and trimmed with entre deux of eyelet embroidery. The tucked waist has a bib effect of the embroidery

THE NEW STYLE BATHING CAPS

IMITATE the shape of the headgear of the peasant girl of any country having native garb if you wish your summer's bathing cap to be ultra smart. It is going to be the fad to look picturesque when in the surf, and naturally this effect must be mainly provided by the cap.

If you firmly decline to let your locks get wet you may have a Normandy cap of fluted white silk trimmed with a big bow of ribbon matching the shade of your suit and beach cloak, or you may have the Russian peasant girl's cap unless you prefer the Norway woman's headdress or the equally elaborate one worn by the maiden of Holland. The shape of these caps perfectly suits the Teutonic type of beauty, but they do not accord well with Latin features, and for girls of that strain of blood there is no prettier model in bathing caps than the Italian kerchief of brilliantly striped wash silk or the turban of the masculine Turk, which is also a large handkerchief.

If you will adopt the cap of the Irish peasant woman of mature years you may dive recklessly, for this perfectly protects the hair when made up in silk rubber cut in circular shape and edged with a fluted frill which stands away becomingly from the head and the face.

A Beauty Hint For the Young Girl

IF you are a young girl and your face is marred by pimples do not be worried. They are not the sign of bad blood or anything else. On growing girls hairs are coming through the skin. It is an invisible down, but nevertheless it is the cause of skin eruptions often up to twenty years of age.

Plenty of water taken into the body will give you in time a glorious complexion. Tea, coffee, "soft drinks," etc., injure your chances for a clear and attractive skin. So will a diet of pies, doughnuts and pickles.

Never squeeze a pimple. If you do it it is liable to cause much harm, for, remember, pimples are only inflamed spots, and bruising them makes them worse and may bring on a skin affection known as acne. This latter skin affection is a difficult matter to cure.

Wash the face night and morning in warm water and pure soap. Don't use a highly scented soap. After this dash cold water over the face if you are going out into the cold air. Then be patient—your reward will be well worth it. You cannot hurry nature in her processes of development.

Appetizing Sandwiches

Red pepper sandwiches are artistic and appetizing. Use the canned sweet red peppers, chop fine and mix to a smooth paste with mayonnaise.

A rather snappy filling is made from cheese thinned with mayonnaise, with chopped nuts and red peppers stirred in. On top of the mixture is placed an anchovy or a bit of boned and skinned sardine.

INTERESTING VACATION PASTIME

A DELIGHTFUL pastime which adds greatly to the interest of a vacation at a distance to any person of literary tastes is the private illustration of books by photographs gathered up on the scene of the story itself.

A schoolteacher who began to form a special library of this kind some years ago now has a shelf of favorite stories which exceed in novelty any illustrated copies that could be purchased.

For instance, while in the far west of our own broad land she collected or took photographs to illustrate the story of "Ramona." During vacation wanderings in Italy she found copious illustrations for stories of Roman or Florentine setting such as "The Marble Faun," "Romola," etc. Scotland yielded many views for several of Scott's novels and London or England in general for favorites from Dickens. Some views of medieval Paris seemed particularly fitting for Victor Hugo's "Notre Dame."

The traveler in question has no trouble in finding such photographic views at very moderate prices, while the work of searching for them gives a more intimate acquaintance with the foreign quarter in which the scenes occurred.

The work of rebinding the illustrations into the text can be done by the collector herself or confided to a small bindery when time for this work is lacking.

THE SLEEPING CAR ROBE

A SLEEPING car robe it is—but such a sleeping car robe! No woman who sees it will ever again wear a silk kimono or shapeless black india silk garment happily in a Pullman car.

This new robe is of the uncrushable jewel silk, lovely in coloring. It is made all in one piece, buttoning straight down the front, the skirt shirred a little into the waist band, the blouse eased in a trifle also. This waist band is a two or three inch elastic run through a soft corded puff of the silk and giving comfortably with every breath, though holding the frock in snugly. There is a little soft collar of white silk, with a coquettish cravat. The sleeves are loose and just below the elbow—wide and open at the bottom, as are many of the new sleeves. The frock is trim and smart enough to be worn even on the street or for traveling if one chooses to do it, yet absolutely comfortable and as easily slipped on and off as a dressing gown.

Remembering the appalling apparitions appearing in the women's dressing rooms and aisles of every Pullman car, one feels inclined to wish that this new sleeping car costume might be required by law of all feminine travelers; but, alas, it is too expensive for the rank and file. One of its delectable details, by the way, is the silk bag or case in which the frock is to be kept—an envelope shaped affair made of the same silk as the frock and with a strap handle of silk. On the flap of the case is embroidered "Sleeping Car Robe," and just above is to be embroidered the monogram of the owner.

Could anything more useful and attractive be tucked into the trousseau or traveling outfit? Yet the whole thing in the case would occupy no more space than an air cushion in a case, and its weight is almost a negligible quantity.

Chamoisette Gloves

THE woman who is to travel much in the summer is adding to her shopping list "several pairs of chamoisette gloves." These come in white and chamois color and are a boon to any woman, for the double reason that they wear well and are also most reasonable. They are to be procured in elbow length and short also. The newest colors in dress gloves are "old gold color" and "cafe au lait." The latter particularly are seen in twelve button length.

General Booth Dead

mission," 1865, which soon grew to be a large organization formed on military lines, and was in 1878 rechristened the "Salvation Army." Under this name it has become widely known, and has grown to immense proportions.

A weekly paper, the War Cry, established in 1880, has a very large circulation throughout the world. General Booth published several hymns and music books "Salvation Soldiery" and "In Darkest England" and "The Way Out," a work proposing ambitious schemes for alleviating poverty and supressing vice. His sons and daughters are all actively engaged in the Salvation Army or the Volunteers of America.

General Booth's wife was an enthusiastic co-operator up to the time of her death in 1890.

When the name of "Salvation Army" was adopted in 1878 military terms were substituted for the ecclesiastical designations, which were first adopted. Uniforms were devised for the laborers, which were intended to be distinctive but plain and inconspicuous, and not to depart too noticeably from the usual costume. Hence they vary in different countries, and are adapted to the national dress.

The doctrines of the Salvation Army are described as in harmony with those of the orthodox churches. No distinctions are recognized, except those of individual ability and piety, and women serve in all duties on precisely the same plane as men. Conventionalities are thrown aside, and all permissible devices are adopted and practices followed that will attract popular attention. The system of government and the nomenclature are absolutely military. The local districts and stations are provinces, districts, posts, etc., the bodies of the working force are corps; the officers are the general commandants, colonels, majors, captains, lieutenants and sergeants. While funds are derived from subscriptions the aim is to make the posts self-supporting.

The Salvation Army has extended its field of operations until it now carries on campaigns in forty-nine countries and colonies of Europe, Asia, Africa, America, and Australasia. It reports more than 7,000 corps, circles, and societies. The gospel is preached in 31 languages.

London,—In the presence of all the Salvation Army commissioners and the principal officials in London General Booth's testament, intrusted to the Army's solicitor 22 years ago, appointing the late commander-in-chief's son, Bramwell Booth, to succeed him, was opened today and read Bramwell Booth, who has been chief of staff of the Salvation Army since 1880, accepted the succession formally with much feeling.

General Booth's funeral will take place on the afternoon of August 29th, at Abney Park cemetery, in Stoke-Newington, where his wife is buried. Thousands are expected to participate in the funeral service for the Army, which will be held the preceeding night at the great hall of Olympia.

BRAMWELL BOOTH SUCCEEDS

At the meeting of Salvation Army officers today the solicitor produced a sealed envelope which had lain in his safe 22 years. It bore in the general's handwriting:

"The appointment of my successor, William Bramwell Booth, 21st August, 1890."

Solicitor Ranger cut open and read the formal appointment of the chief of staff as commander-in-chief. The solicitor then formerly asked Bramwell Booth if he accepted the post. The chief of staff replied with deep emotion, accepting the appointment. All the commissioners followed, speaking of their determination to support the new general as they had his father.

Solicitor Ranger then announced:

"All the legal formalities having been thus observed, Bramwell Booth is legally installed and is now in fact and in law general of the Salvation Army."

"My comrades, I accept this appointment. I do so, even if no other consideration moved me in that course, because it was my general's wish.

"I promise in the strength of God that I will, to the full measure of my ability, discharge the obligations this office imposes on me, as they are set forth in our foundation document I will do this in fear of God, out of love for the Army and out of regard to the memory of him whose thought and purposes these instruments express.

"I must, with the whole strength of my heart, ask you to help me and my dear wife. So far as God shall enable us we accept these blessings with a single eye for His glory, for the blessing of the world and for the salvation of the people. My dear comrades, I accept the appointment of the general."

King George was one of the first to telegraph his condolences to the bereaved family. Messages also were received from Premier Asquith, the archbishop of Canterbury and other prelates of the church of England, the lord mayor of London, representatives of all Protestant creeds and prominent Jews.

"I am grieved to hear the sad news of the heath of your father. The British nation has lost a great organizer and the poor a whole-hearted and sincere friend, who devoted his life to helping them in a practical way. Only in the future shall we realize the good wrought by him for his fellow creatures. Today there is universal mourning for him. I join in it and assure you and your family of my true sympathy in the heavy loss which has be-fallen you."

CROP BULLETIN

A bulletin on the condition of the field crops of Canada, compiled from data supplied by correspondents in all parts of the Dominion at the end of July, is issued from the Census and Statistics Office. The bulletin states that good rains which fell generally throughout Canada during July have improved the outlook, and on July 31 the condition of all grain crops was favorable, with the exception of fall wheat in Ontario and in Alberta, where this crop never fully recovered from the effects of the exceptionally severe winter. Fall sown wheat represents however only a comparatively small proportion, viz., 7 p c., of the total area underwheat. The condition of spring wheat is 83 p.c. of the standard for the whole of Canada; it is above 90 in the two extreme provinces of Prince Edward Island and British Columbia and between 80 and 90 in each of the other provinces, excepting Ontario where it is just below 80 and in Quebec it falls to 70. Oats, barley, rye, mixed grains and flax seed are all marked above 80 for Canada as a whole, and for each province except Quebec the range is between 80 and 90 and in certain cases even above 90. In Quebec the condition is lower being between 70 and 80. Buckwheat in the Maritime provinces shows over 85; but in Ontario and Quebec the averages for this crop are respectively 75 and 73. Corn for husking is 70.37 and for fodded 73.19 for Canada the condition being comparatively low in Ontario and Quebec owing to the cold and wet weather of the early part of the summer. The condition of potatoes, turnips, mangolds and other root crops is generally excellent, the figures being above 80 for Canada and either approaching or exceeding 90 in the Northwest provinces and in British Columbia. Only in Quebec are the prospects unfavorable, the condition being little above 70. Hay and clover crops are excellent upon the whole, Quebec being again the exception. The condition is especially high in the Northwest provinces and in British Columbia. Sugar beets are given as 77.17 in Ontario and 86.50 in Alberta.

The Canadian Crop situation at the end of July may therefore be summarised as generally favorable, giving neither the exceptionally favorable promise of this time last year nor the equally exceptionally unfavourable promise of the year before. In Quebec the condition of all crops is below that of the other eight provinces.

A preliminary estimate of the yield per acre of the fall wheat is 21.48 bushels as the average for the total effective area of 781,000 acres in the four provinces of Ontario, Manitoba, Saskatchewan, Alberta and British Columbia. This indicates a total yield of 16,773,300 bushels as compared with the final figures of 1911, viz: 26,014,000 bushels from 1,172,119 acres. The average yield per acre of hay and clover is placed at 1.45 tons giving upon an area of 7,633,600 acres a total production of 11,088,000 tons. Alfalfa, with an average yield per acre of 1.59 tons, shows an estimated total production of 177,300 tons from 111,300 acres. The first estimates of 1911 gave 12,684,000 tons tons hay and clover and 227,900 tons alfalfa.

Reading Defined

C. L. Armstrong, in August Canada Monthly.

Ev'ry stone I hit's a roller,
An' this pack hangs just like lead.
Mebbe, though, the Boss'll stop us—
Just a little ways ahead.
Durn the flies; they're getting thicker
Wisht I had some balsam salve.
Likeways wisht I had some licker,
Like ole Adam used ter have.
Wisht when I get tired hikin',
They was somethin' I could ride.
But the only thing I'll straddle'll
Be the top o' this Divide.
Durn this pack; I'm goin' ter tump it
Wow! It's like ter break my neck.
If I stick with this here outfit
Won't be nothin' but a speck
Left o' me time we hits Babine:
But—whoopee!—we're goin' ter flop!
Now fer grub an' pipes an' blankets;
Laws, it's good ter hit the top.
What's in this pack? Canned tomatoe
Felt like double-headed picks!
Now fer comfort. What yer sayin'?
Lovely view?—aw, fiddlesticks!

Seeking a Home Ladies

This problem may be very satisfactorily solved by calling up Phone No. 280. Ask the Cranbrook Agency Co. to arrange to take you out to see the much-talked-of Buena Vista Gardens. A very necessary thing to remember is—DO IT NOW. Since the Opening Day of the sale of these choice five-acre tracts, only a few weeks ago, there has been a remarkable demand from local business men and ladies, so you can readily understand that it will be necessary to act quickly like the "lucky ones" who have already made their selections. A few years from now, you, too, will consider yourself one of the "lucky ones" when these tracts are dotted with beautiful homes.

THE SUPPLANTER

A Modern Romance

By WILMOT KAYE

No, she answered with a shudder. Don't you like him?

I hate him, Lady Barton said fiercely.

But it was he that recommended you to me.

Lady Barton qiuckly saw that she had said more than she intended.

I only know him in a business way, and perhaps hate is rather a strong word. But he is a cad, in spite of his suavity, and he is a man that I label dangerous.

I think you are right, Vera answered with a quick look at her companion, and she could not help noticing the flushed face. She scented a mystery, but she did not think the present an opportune moment to inquire into it. She really liked Lady Barton, and she made up her mind to trust her.

I am very glad you came to me, even if it was through Crawley Brann, she said suddenly, and now you can tell me all about the furnishing.

Everything will be ready in a couple of days. The place will be charming, Lady Barton replied eagerly, for she was only too glad of the chance of changing the conversation.

While she was dressing for dinner Lady Barton was busy with her thoughts. She really liked Hilda and she was struggling hard to be loyal to her. Were it not for those fateful letters in Crawley Brann's safe, she would have been quite happy. The question that was troubling her was whether she might safely be loyal to Vera, and refuse to do Brann's dirty work, but she could not make up her mind to run the risk. If she had only known that he dared not use the letters which he held she would have been supremely happy.

CHAPTER IX.

David Clay was very unsettled in mind. The more he saw Vera, the greater became his love, but he could not feel that she gave him any encouragement. He seized with avidity every opportunity to be in her presence, but her reception of him was merely friendly and nothing more. He was comforted by the thought that he had no rivals, for Brann never entered into his calculations.

He happened to notice that there was a large estate in the market, and like most millionaires his thoughts ran into the direction of real property, so he took a run down in his car to see it. The house was almost a mansion, and was about four miles inland from Bognor. The price asked was a stiff one, but he had fallen in love with the place, so he closed the bargain. The property had belonged to an ancient family that had fallen on evil days, and with the house he had bought a great deal of the old furniture. He at once started a small army of men at work and a great firm of decorators and furniture people promised to have the place ready for habitation in an incredibly short space of time.

He had not even told Mrs. de Lisle of his new purchase, and he broke the news at a dinner party given by Vera, the night before she was to take possession of her new flat.

I want you all to come down to my new place, he said suddenly.

Where is that? Helen de Lisle asked curiously.

Radnor Manor, in Sussex.

Is this a new purchase? Vera asked.

Quite; and I want you to be present at the house warming. He spoke directly to Vera, and Mrs. de Lisle had difficulty in hiding her irritation.

I presume you will want me to act as hostess. I believe I am your nearest female relative, she said quickly.

That was my intention, he answered with politeness. I suggest that we celebrate our Christmas in the real old fashioned way. Yule logs and Christmas trees, and that kind of thing.

And the weather will probably be muggy and sloppy, Mrs. de Lisle broke in dryly.

We will give you a day or two to get into your flat. Will next Monday suit you, Miss Grant? We can all motor down together.

It is a charming idea. That reminds me that I want a car. I wish you would choose one for me, she said to Clay, who expressed his willingness to do so.

After dinner David Clay succeeded in getting a few minutes alone with Vera, and he used them to the best advantage.

I suppose your father told you a good deal about West Africa, he began.

Yes.

He did not notice the flush that tinged her cheeks, but continued quickly. I think the life there, even if it is only for a year or two, changes one's whole outlook. The nearness to death—the burying of a friend who has dined with one the night before gives one a better perspective of human nature., One values the things that matter, and frivolities are thrust aside. I have never told you how deeply I feel the sacrifice that your father made.

Please don't, she said protestingly.

I can never repay the debt I owe you, but for me he would have lived and you would have him with you now.

He quite naturally placed her agitation to the thought of her father.

I am going to do everything in my power to make up to you for his loss, sometimes I imagine that a kind fate will—

Please don't say any more, she broke in hurriedly and there were tears in her eyes.

I will be silent for the present, he said earnestly, and as his eyes met hers she blushed deeply.

She could see them brimming over with love for her, and she choked back a sob, as she thought of the happiness that might have been hers. She began to loathe the money that she had obtained so despicably, and longed to be able to undo the past.

I often look at you to try and find a trace of your father, but I suppose you are like your mother. Yet there is something in the expression of your eyes—so tender—so soft—yet capable of a change that—

Yes, I think I take after my mother, but I do not remember her, she said hurriedly.

I found an old photograph among your father's possessions. It was much faded, but the face of the woman who held a child on her knees was sweet and beautiful—I suppose that child was you.

I suppose so.

He did not tell me much about your youth. Where did you live before you went to the convent.

We travelled, she answered indistinctly.

He was very fond of you. All his plans and thoughts were of you, his wish for riches was only for your sake. I remember just before he died, he said in his delirium that he would make you a Princess. Your name was almost the last word he uttered.

I cannot bear it, Vera cried, and she broke into a quiet sob.

What a brute I am, he cried. I forgot how it must pain you to hear all this.

No—no, she exclaimed, for she hardly knew what she was saying, so torn was she by her conflicting feelings of hatred of herself and love for this man, who was torturing her so horribly with his words.

After all there is no reason for sadness. He died a brave death. The Victoria Cross has been awarded for many a deed that required less pluck for it was done in cold blood, with death staring him in the face. You ought to be proud of having had such a father.

She was incapable of making any reply, but longed for him to cease.

But it was of myself that I wished to speak, he continued quickly. I want you to understand me, Miss Grant. Before I went to West Africa and met your father I had led a life of slothful ease. I thought of nothing but my own enjoyment, and I thank kind providence that drove me to work for my living. I am sure you would never like a mere idler.

I have had to work to keep myself, and I don't regret it. Even now I would gladly live those few weeks over again back in my garret. How differently I should act, she cried, and her voice vibrated with the intensity of her passion.

Then I should never have met you. Do you regret having done so?

No.

Is it the money you hate

Yes—no, she answered frantically, for the situation was becoming unbearable.

He looked at her in astonishment.

I don't think I can be very well, she said more calmly, for she had made a supreme effort to recover her composure.

I ought not to have spoken of your father, he replied, and he was satisfied that this was the cause of the strangeness of her manner.

He maintained silence until he saw that she was quite calm, but he had not a further opportunity of speaking for Mrs. de Lisle, who had been looking at them uneasily from the other side of the room, came over to them.

I have been telling Miss Grant what her father said, Clay said to her, for he wished to account for the traces of tears which were evident on Vera's face.

It was very sad. No wonder you feel it so deeply, Mrs. de Lisle remarked, but there was no sympathy in her voice.

But one has to take risks in that dreadful climate. I expected to hear of your death by every mail, David. Don't you think we must be going. It is rather late.

It is only ten o'clock, he said, impatiently.

A servant came in, and approached Vera.

Mr. Crawley Brann has called. Will you see him, madam.

Vera looked undecided, for she felt that she could not bear any further strain, but, on the other hand, David might think it strange if she refused to see him.

Ask him to come up please, she said at last.

Itching and Burning on Face and Throat

Sores Disfigured So He Dreaded to Appear in Public. No Rest Night or Day. Cuticura Ointment Cured.

"Six months ago my face and throat all broke out and turned into a running sore. I did not bother about it at first, but in one week's time the disease had spread so rapidly over my face and throat and the burning itching sores became so painful that I began to seek relief in different medicines, but none seemed to give me any relief. The sores disfigured my face to such an extent that I dreaded to appear in public.

"I suffered terribly and could get no rest night or day. At last a friend advised me to try the Cuticura Remedies. I had about given up hope, but thought I would have one more try, and so I used a little Cuticura Ointment, and it helped me from the start. I continued using it and in six weeks' time was completely cured, and can say I would advise anyone suffering from skin disease to use Cuticura Ointment, as it is the best healing balm in the world." (Signed) Roscoe Good, Seven Persons, Alta., Feb. 18, 1911.

FOUND RELIEF ONLY FROM CUTICURA SOAP AND OINTMENT

"My little girl when only a few weeks old broke out on the top of her head and it became a solid scab. Then her cheeks became raw and sore and after trying different remedies found relief only from using Cuticura Soap and Ointment. It lasted six months or more, but after a thorough treatment with the Cuticura Soap and Ointment never had any return." (Signed) Mrs. W. S. Owen, Yadkin College, N. C., May 26, 1911.

For more than a generation Cuticura Soap and Ointment have afforded the most successful treatment for skin and scalp troubles of infants, children and adults. A single cake of Cuticura Soap and box of Cuticura Ointment are often sufficient. Although sold by druggists and dealers throughout the world, a liberal sample of each, with 32-p. book on the skin, will be sent free, on application to Potter Drug & Chem. Corp., 54 Columbus Ave., Boston, U. S. A.

LIGHTING THE COMMONS

British House Extremely Poorly Lighted Under Present System

The system of lighting the House of Commons is now under review, the question of substituting electric light for the present gas being the matter under consideration.

The actual fount of the illumination is not visible in the house; there is no chandelier, and none of those brackets against the wall which one sees in modern drawing rooms. But the roof has a considerable space of thick ground glass; there are sixty-four glass panels set in a framework of brown beams, and each of the panels bears a rendering of the English red rose. Above this glass there is a kind of attic, from which the lighting is done.

The House of Commons is very often sparing of the gas bill. On a quiet summer afternoon the debate will go on in the fading light of day, 'till members can hardly see one another's faces, and then the clerk of the house suddenly realizes that he cannot see the paper under his nose. He looks up and finds the house wrapped in shadows. He touches a bell; a servant comes in and receives the direction for the lights. The light is turned on in the attic above the glass panels with the rendering of the red rose.

It arrives in the house like a shower of rain on a summer night. First a faint tentative stirring, a softening, a sponge in the face, then after that the deluge, and the room below is drenched in a mellow downpour. The dark spaces beneath the galleries drink it up like a thirsty land. The whole scene is refreshed. Strangers in the house look up into the roof, and then they sit up and begin a more intelligent reading of the men and things below.

Great Seal of England

Besides being stolen, and twice thrown into rivers, the Great Seal of England was once buried to escape being burned. In 1882 Lord Chancellor Eldon's house took fire, and he promptly rushed away with the Great Seal, which he buried in the flower-garden. On returning, he records in his diary, he was "so enchanted with the pretty sight of the maids, who had turned out of their beds and were handling buckets of water to the fire-engine, all in their shifts, and so alarmed for the safety of Lady Eldon, that next morning he could not remember in which flower-bed he had buried the Seal. You never saw, adds Lord Eldon, anything so ridiculous as the whole family down the walks dibbling with bits of stick until we found it.

Mr. Adolphus Liddell, who has been secretary to many Lord Chancellors, describes in his Reminiscences how an impression of the Great Seal is made. The wax is not put upon the paper as in ordinary seals, but is in the shape of a disc with an impression on each side. This is kept in a tin or plated case, and attached to the document by a tag embedded in wax. Consequently the seal itself is not a signet, but consists of two heavy silver plates in one of which is cut the impression of the front of the device, in the other that for the back. The present plates were made at a cost of £700. When a seal is required a large chunk of wax is first softened in hot water, then cooled in cold, after which it is placed between the two plates and pressed, emerging in the shape above mentioned.

Inventions by Royalties

One of the eight daughters of the Archduke Frederick, the eldest brother of the Dowager Queen of Spain, is taking out a patent for a new form of candle. She is only following an example set by several other royalties. The most successful of these is the Grand Duke of Oldenburg, who has patented a screw which has been adopted by several German shipping companies. Prince Henry of Prussia holds the patent of an invention for preventing the clouding of wind screens on motor cars, and his nephew, the Crown Prince, has patented a special form of sleeve link. The Kaiser is credited with the invention of a brake for automobiles, but up to the present this has not been patented.

Early Rising in Kansas

I reckon, said the first farmer, that I get up earlier than anybody in this neighborhood. I am always up before 3 o'clock in the morning.

The second farmer said he was always up before that and had part of the chores done. The first farmer thought he was a liar and decided to find out. A few mornings later he got up at 2 o'clock and went to the neighbor's house. He rapped on the back door, and the woman of the house opened it. Where is your husband? asked the farmer, expecting to find the neighbor in bed. He was around here early in the morning, answered the wife, but I don't know where he is now.—Grove County (Kan.) Advocate.

Among the world's left-handed geniuses was Leonardo da Vinci, who wrote a treatise on aviation, the handwriting of which travels from the right side of the page to the left. Nelson, too, was left-handed—but that was from necessity. J. R. Green records a story of Nelson's visit to Yarmouth to receive the freedom of the boroug.. A storm met him on his landing, but the danger failed to prevent his appearance on the quay. When the free man's oath was tendered to him, the town clerk noticed that the hero placed his left hand on the book. Shocked at the legal impropriety he said, 'Your right hand, my lord.' That observed Nelson, is at Tenerife.

"Yes I consider my life a failure." "Oh, Henry, how sad! Why should you say that?" "I spend all my time in making money enough to buy food and clothes, and the food disagrees with me and my clothes don't fit.

Dispensing With Coal

An ocean-going ship 370 feet in length, capable of carrying 7,400 tons of cargo, operated with motors, has been launched and tested on the Clyde and proved a success. Those who feared that the world's fuel supply would soon run out were counting without the inventor. The year that does not see some development of a device for getting power without coal is worth noting.—Montreal Gazette.

Glasgow's Great Night School

In a big, five storey-and-basement building in Glasgow, where the Technical College is located, 500 young specialists work amongst test tubes, text-books and assay furnaces daily. But at night the visitor sees the enrolment jump from 500 to more than 5,000, and along with the night course collegians two regiments of student workingmen march in and the whole building is packed.

For ten shillings ($2.50) a term, a Glasgow man may learn at the night trade classes the first principles of the plumber's or printer's trade, says the Technical World Magazine, and for seven an' sixpence ($1.87) boiler-making or sheet metal work; for five shillings ($1.25) how to cut cobblers' patterns or a course for a shoe store salesman.

There are rooms full of looms and fabrics and dyes, if the student cares to learn the principles and practice of textile manufacture, and there are other laboratories for bakers, watchmakers, tailors, furniture designers or sailors. Three in every four of his classmates will be older than twenty, so he need feel no shame at going to school again. Hundreds of the men he passes in the halls will have only a common school education.

That Public school buildings should be used only a few hours in the daytime implies an inadequate return on the taxpayers' investment. In Glasgow Scotch practicability has seen this and applied a remedy. Result: the efficiency of an education plant was multiplied by ten.

It is characteristic of the Scotch to solve a problem by commonsense, whenever such a problem arises. Are their schoolrooms empty at night? Then they must be filled! The invitation is given and the thing is done.

Piece of Newton's Apple Tree

The British Royal Astronomical Society has recently become the owner of an interesting, because apparently well authenticated, relic of Sir Isaac Newton. This is a small log from the apple tree in the garden at Woolthorpe, on which the famous apple (the most famous apple since Eve and Eden, with the possible exception of those of Helen of Troy and Wilhelm Tell), grew. Mr. C. W. Waller, of Burwash, Sussex, who presented the log to the society, sent the following history with it.—His father, born in 1807, was at school when ten or twelve, with the rector of Stoke, Lincolnshire, named Pearson. After a heavy storm news reached the school that Sir Isaac's apple tree had blown down. The rector and some of the boys at once set out for Woolthorpe, which is not far from Stoke. They found the tree, which for many years had been propped up to preserve it, lying on the ground. The rector obtained a saw, and cut a number of small logs from one of the limbs. Mr. Waller's father received one of these and preserved it with great care until his death, when it came down as one of the heirlooms to his son.

Putting Him at His Ease

When Fred Hall was the city editor of the Tribune, says Drury Underwood in the Chicago Post, he was characterized by an extreme gravity, a full beard, an office straw hat with holes punched in it and a corncob pipe. Courteous and considerate, he did not invite familiarity, and when some old timer around the shop called him by his first name the recruits looked up.

A reporter, budding into metropolitan journalism after transplanting from a small town, failed to take proper cognizance of the gravity, the beard, the hat and the pipe. Approaching the hours when the majority were to go to supper, he went to the main desk and said:

Anything more just now, Fred?

Mr. Hall looked up, and replied:

Why be so cold and formal? Call me Freddie.

There were times when McFee gloried in the fact that he was the father of nine children, even if they were on the lines of the proverbial human stepladder, but on the day when he was taking them out for a walk he felt chargrined.

He was walking along at a fairly good gait when he was halted by a policeman, who asked.

I say, you, what you been doin'?

Nothing, replied McFee. Why?

Well, what's the crowd following you for.

The Way in Manx

A Manx employer has invoked the aid of a 17th century statute penalizing a laborer who leaves his employment without due notice with imprisonment on bread and water. There is another unrepealed Manx law the enforcement of which would cause some agitation in the island. It enjoins all Scots to avoid the land with the next vessel that goeth into Scotland, upon pain of forfeiture of their goods and bodies to prison. This law was the result of a series of raids on the Manx coast by a Galloway rover named MacCullock, whose name inspired a prayer:

God keep the good corn,
The sheep and the bullock,
From Satan, from sin,
And Cutlar MacCullock!

A Modern Instance

Murray Wheeler, vice-consul for Russia at Mobile, said at a bouillabaisse luncheon, apropos of Independence day:

It is a sad but inspiring thing to think of that bellringer who, ringing out the tidings of American freedom died for joy.

But a young English remittance man sneered at this remark and said:

Have you ever known anyone to be actually killed by joy.

Mr. Wheeler smiled at the Briton and retorted:

Well, I did know a beautiful Yankee heiress once who was found lying dead across the coffin of her husband old Lord Laclands.

During evolutions in the Gulf of Venice, the Italian submarine Giauti remained under water for 22 hours without causing any inconvenience to the crew.

Character in Walking

Obstinate people who, in argument rely more on muscularity than on intellectual power rest the feet flatly and firmly on the ground, walk heavily and slowly, and stand with legs firmly planted and far apart. Quick steps are indicative of energy and agitation. Tiptoe walking symbolizes surprise, curiosity, discretion, or mystery. Turning-in toes are often found with preoccupied, absent-minded persons. The miser's walk is represented as stooping and noiseless, with short, nervous, anxious steps. Slow steps, long or short, suggest a gentle or reflective state of mind. When a revengeful purpose is hidden under a feigned smile the step will be slinking and noiseless. The proud step is slow and measured, the toes are conspicuously turned out, the legs straightened. Where the direction of the step wavers and follows every changing impulse of the mind, it inevitably betrays uncertainty, hesitation and indecision.

The Passing of Punch and Judy

And is it true that Punch and Judy dear to youthful English citizens, and a pleasant memory to their parents and grandparents as well, are to vanish from the land; that Punch and Judy with his inimitable squeak, and Judy who took her beatings with such unmoved calm, are to be read out of court. It is to be feared so, for the London Post says the law books look on the old puppets and their showman as "an obstruction," and one that should be removed. London is so full that the Post complains that busy men pursuing their relentless way down Spring Gardens must not be forced by bunches of crowd to diverge from the mathematically straight line which is the shortest and speediest way between two given points. But one cannot help remembering that once upon a time there used to be a Punch and Judy show in Palace yard and all good Britons were friends of the show and the showman. Now, it appear, old friends are forgotten, or considered simply as a nuisance, and Punch and Judy must succumb, and molder away in the the hands of their present owners—or, in happier fortune—be cherished as specimens of old and once popular divertisements.

Speaking of the days that were, the London Post says: Every Wednesday at 6 o'clock the house used to rise. Prompt to the minute came that loud and arresting crow which for so long as any of us can remember has announced the arrival of Punch and his consort. The legislators used to gather, and with care and solemnity the ancient drama was played through. Punch could not have got much nearer to the national heart than Palace yard. Now the national heart beats to other rhythms, and Punch is "an obstruction." That long road which he has followed through so many decades of unwearied journeying is leading him at last to its end in the land of shadows. He is almost the last of many figures that once were with him on the road to make the life of the wayfarer joyous. Where, for instance, is the old dancing bear that when we were little children so often used to bring us terror and delight! Years and years ago that rough and genial beast shouldered his ragged staff and marched away out of our lives for good."

Orthodox Hicksite

More than a hundred and fortp thousand Friends are now members of the various meetings. In England they are all of the so-called Orthodox branch, and number about twenty thousand; in America these Orthodox Quakers are nearly a hundred thousand strong, with three-quarters of them in the new lands west of the Alleghanies. Philadelphia is the centre of the Hicksite branch, and their twenty thousand are chiefly in the East. Furthermore, to these main bodies must be added a few scattered meetings of the Orthodox in Ireland and in Canada, and the Wilburites, a small American subsect which still professes the rigorous Quakerism of the eighteenth century —The Century.

SALLOW FACES

Often Caused by Tea and Coffee Drinking

How many persons realize that tea and coffee so disturb digestion that they produce a muddy, yellow complexion?

A ten days' trial of Postum has proven a means, in thousands of cases, of clearing up a bad complexion.

A Washn. young lady tells her experience:

"All of us—father, mother, sister and brother—had used tea and coffee for many years until finally we all had stomach troubles more or less.

"We all were sallow and troubled with pimples, breath bad, disagreeable taste in the mouth, and all of us simply so many bundles of nerves.

"We didn't realize that tea and coffee caused the trouble until one day we ran out of coffee and went to borrow some from a neighbor. She gave us some Postum and told us to try that.

"Although we started to make it, we all felt sure we would be sick if we missed our strong coffee, but we tried Postum and were surprised to find it delicious.

"We read the statements on the pkg., got more and in a month and a half you wouldn't have known us. We all were able to digest our food without any trouble, each one's skin became clear, tongues cleaned off, and nerves in fine condition. We never use anything now but Postum. There is nothing like it." Name given by Canadian Postum Co., Windsor, Ont.

"There's a reason," and it is explained in the little book, "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs.

The Museum Lecturer

It is reported in Nature that the installation of an official guide to the collections of the British Museum has been such a success that the Natural History Museum at South Kensington has added a similar functionary to its staff. He will make two trips a day through the Museum, each one lasting an hour, and presumably involving a visit to and brief explanation of the most interesting and instructive habits. To say that this plan will double the educational value of the Museum is to state the case for it very mildly. For many of the visitors, probably the vast majority of them, the collections in such museums undescribed, mean nothing. The same thing is true to a lesser degree in zoological gardens, and even art museums. The provision of a lecturer, sufficiently (and obviously) scientific or artistic, so that the tipping problem was eliminated, would add enormously to the value of every public museum. There seems no way in which the amount of money necessary to secure the services of a really competent man for this position could be spent to better advantage.

Potted Roses

There was a time when Englishmen could celebrate St. George's Day by feasting on roses as well as wearing them. Old cookery books abound in recipes into which rose leaves enter.

One writer tells how to make potted roses. I first pound some of the most fragrant roses in a mortar, then I take the brains of birds and pigs well boiled and stripped of every particle of meat. I then add the yolks of some eggs, some oil, a little cordial, some pepper and some wine. After having beaten and mixed it well together, I place it over a slow fire. When this dish is brought to table the most delicious fragrance issues forth, covering the guests with delight. Every good housewife in the seventeenth century made rose water, which was used for flavoring food.—London Chronicle.

One He Didn't Make

The colony or artists living in St. Botolph street are having a laugh on a man who has been considerable of a nuisance to them the past few months. This man prides himself on a brusqueness that he mistakes for wit. The other night he was introduced to a young sculptor whose fame is getting beyond the confines of Boston.

So you are the chap that makes mud heads, are you, asked the witty man.

Not all of them, the sculptor remarked quietly.—Boston Traveler.

The Home of the Death Flower

The crew of the vessel which is setting out to solve the mystery of the mammoth statutes of Easter Island must steer clear of El Banoor, another Island of the Pacific. One of our early explorers, Hugh Arkwright, who sailed the Pacific in 1581, warns travelers against visiting El Banoor—the home of the death flower. This flower, we are told, is so large that a man can stand upright inside one of its blossoms. But if he does so he will surely fall asleep, lulled by the strange fragrance it distills. Then the flower folds its petals and suffocates him. And so he passes into death through splendid dreams, and gives his body to the death flower for food.—London Chronicle.

Are You Blue and Worried?

Nervous? Some of the time really ill? Catch cold easily and frequently suffer from biliousness or headache? The reason is that your system does not rid itself of the poisons in the blood; just as impossible as it is for the grate of a stove to rid itself of clinkers. The waste does to us exactly what the clinkers do to the stove; make the fires burn low until enough clinkers have accumulated and then prevent its burning at all. Your liver is sluggish—you are dull and heavy—sleep does not rest, nor is food appetizing. In this condition illness develops. Doctor Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery eradicates the poisons from the body—a glyceric alterative extract made from bloodroot, golden seal and mandrake root, stone and queen's root, without the use of alcohol. No matter how strong the constitution the stomach is apt to be "out of kilter" at times; in consequence the blood is disordered, for the stomach is the laboratory for the constant manufacture of blood.

MRS. BENJ. BLAKE, of Port Dover, Ont., Box 36, writes: "I have been a great sufferer for years from throat trouble, catarrh, indigestion, female troubles, bloating, constipation and nervousness—at times I would be in bed, then able to be up again. Was under many different doctors' care, and would get better for a little while, then I would go down with chronic inflammation all through me. For nineteen years I had this poison in my blood. After trying nearly everything I got worse. I read in The People's Common Sense Medical Adviser of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy. I have taken the 'Golden Medical Discovery' and 'Pleasant Pellets,' and have used five bottles of Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy. I am now able to do my work and walk with pleasure. I feel like a new woman. I enjoy everything around me and thank God for letting me live long enough to find something that made me well again."

NEW POTATO SACKS
For Sale By
Cranbrook Jobbers, Ltd

Activity at Prince Rupert

Victoria, B.C., Aug. 23—Upon the insistent urging of the civic authorities of Prince Rupert, the British Columbia Government has decided upon the immediate erection there of Provincial buildings of metropolitan standard (provision for which will be made in the estimates at the next session of the legislature) and upon the offering by auction on the 28th and 29th instant of approximately three hundred choice lots contained in the government's reserved blocks in sections 1, 5, 6, 7 and 8. The erection of the new Provincial buildings will most probably synchronize with the provision of federal buildings of equal high-class and adequate to the requirements of a city of 100,000 population, which Prince Rupert will become in a few years, having both the Government and the Grand Trunk Pacific as guarantees of its future. Simultaneously, too, the provision of the railway terminals and hotel, the dry dock and the immense Doughty fisheries and cold storage plants assure the expenditure of millions and exceptional activity during the ensuing few years with permanent business and civic prosperity based thereon. In connection with the forthcoming government sale, the terms of payment have been decided upon as: One quarter cash and the balance in three equal annual instalments with interest at six per cent; ten per cent of the purchase money to be paid at the fall of the hammer and the remainder of the first instalment by August 31st. The title of the property is indefeasible. Articles of agreement will be furnished free and Crown grants at $10 each. Corners and the lots adjoining will be apportioned by the agent. When erecting buildings purchasers must adhere to the grades fixed by the engineers. All payments are to be made in cash, certified checks or bills of exchange payable at par at Prince Rupert. The sale has been arranged for Wednesday afternoon, the 28th instant, in order to meet the convenience of parties wishing to attend. These may leave Vancouver on the regular C.P.R. or Union Ss. Co., steamers on Saturday night, August 24, arriving in Prince Rupert at 10 a.m. on the Wednesday morning, ample time being thus allowed for inspection of the listed properties. G.T.P. steamers, returning, leave Prince Rupert on the morning of the 30th and arrive in Vancouver on the evening of the 31st C.P.R. and Union Ss Co. steamers leave respectively on August 31st and September 1st. The fare, Vancouver to Prince Rupert, including meals and berths is $18 each way.

Spokane Interstate Fair

Strong recognition of the fact that the Canadian keeps a good dog if he keeps one at all is made by the Spokane Kennel Club which will hold its annual bench show in connection wit the Spokane Inter-State Fair on October 2, 3, 4and 5. The British Columbia dog fanciers have always won a goodly portion of the prizes at the Interstate fair and during the bench shows of the kennel club and added trophies and prizes this year come as a result of former winnings.

This year will be the first that the Interstate fair and the Spokane kennel club have offered a prize for Canada only. The Glen Tana farm of of Spokane has put up a solid silver cup called the Maple Leaf trophy for the "the best dog or bitch", any breed, exhibited from Canada. The district classification, however, in no way affects the entries into the other classes of which there are some 27 different ones, all calling for either costly trophies or cash prizes.

Another class in which the Canadian fanciers are expected to make a strong showing is one for the best dog or bitch, any breed, brought the longest distance to the fair grounds. The prize is offered by Mrs. Robert H. Cosgrove, of Spokane. Vancouver and Calgary have in former years been the points of major distance and they stand an excellent show this year to take this prize.

In its premium list which has been distributed broadcast over British Columbia and Alberta, the Interstate fair has given special attention to Canadian exhibitors, giving them the fullest instructions concerning the best manner of getting their dogs to Spokane. The Interstate has made arrangements with George S. Bush & Co., 261 Colman dack, Seattle, to take care of all dogs sent from Victoria and Vancouver and that section. Special attention will also be given to the canines that will be sent to the show through Kingsgate, Rykerts, Northport and other customs offices. The dogs coming through the other points should be shipped to Bailey and Brown, Custom house brokers, Symons block, Spokane. The dog fanciers are urged to give an average valuation of $50 per dog and to bill as many dogs as possible on an invoice in order to save themselves expense. The fanciers are also urged to send an advance list of the dogs to the brokers giving breed, sex, name age and color of each dog in advance to preclude any possibility of their being lost.

Information concerning entries and classes or methods to be used in shipping the dogs may be obtained by writing to the offices of the Interstate fair, 503 Chamber of Commerce building, Spokane.

Strawberry Hints

The following taken from a valued exchange is unique to say the least, and is certainly worth trying: "That strawberry growers have at last discovered a remedy for the elimination of weeds and grass from their patches without a gang of men, now seems certain. The remedy is simple. Two geese fenced in a five-acre berry patch, it is claimed, will destroy every weed and piece of grass that grows. The fowls do not relish berry vines and consequently do not destroy them. They have a mania for the young and tender weeds and to see the geese pluck weeds and grass from the vines is worth while. Geese are inclined to be lazy, and too much corn will cause them to set around, when they should be at work pulling weeds.

Swat Those Flies

Much can be done in every household to suppress the fly and to cleanse the premises in the best way possible to safeguard against the annoying, dangerous and ofttimes deadly pest. The necessity of screening against the fly is now pretty generally understoo fly is now pretty generally understood but there are many people in the world who look upon flies as a nuisance rather than a menace. In disease an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure; so in guarding against the house fly, prevention is the best antidote—the surest prescription. Keep the premises clean that he may "die a-borning," for like the good Indian, the fly is best when he is "good and dead."

Flies breed and hatch in horse manure and other filth. They walk in filth and then walk in human food and rest their feet upon it. They carry disease germs. They are not merely an inconvenient pest, but are an enemy to human health and life. It is not a fad to swat the fly, but a decision of science that it is the question of whether man will kill the fly, or the fly will poison his child, or himself. In this day of fly screens it is inexcusable that flies or mosquitoes ever get into the house and onto human flesh and touch human food.

Reading Defined

Congressman Burnett of Alabama recently met an aged colored man who had in his old age learned to read.

"It is a great thing for you to read, isn't it?" said the congressman. "You find pleasant companionship in books and papers, don't you?"

Yes, sah," was the reply. "Reading am a great thing. Reading," said the old man, undertaking to define it, "am de power ob hearing with de eyes."—New York Times.
