The first standing of candidates in the "Prospector's" voting contest brings to light a number of active contestants. There are other names on the list representing candidates of quality and the fact that the mere 1000 votes given with each nomination has not been added to, does not mean that progress has not been made. Votes are not issued until subscriptions have been entered upon tha contest records. It is safe to presume that all candidates are anxious to display their strength, and for that reason the vote appearing today is a fair representation of the progress made to date. But the contest is very young, and no one has a start that cannot be equalled by any candidate who is in earnest. A newly entered candidate could attain a commanding position with four or five subscriptions. Look at the vote schedule and figure it out for yourself.

MISS ROBERTS LEADING

Miss Roberts has captured the honors of the contest to the present date and today's publication will show her friends and supporters that she is in top position. Miss Roberts has a host of friends who will support her throughout the campaign and doubtless, she will be one of the strongest contenders for the capital prize.

Robert Pye, the youngest candidate recently proved himself to be a vote-getter of unusual ability, and he has many friends who feel he can do the same thing over again. He is in second place today and only a short distance behind the leader. Watch his votes grow.

A splendid measure of success has attended the efforts of Mrs. P. F. Patrick during the first week of the contest.

Other contestants who are securing good results are Messrs. McKay and Bartlett. Both these gentlemen are reported to be "getting the votes." J. B. Henderson is also in the race and rumors are to the effect that he is meeting with splendid support.

And there are other candidates too, but so far away they have not turned in any votes. However that does not mean that they havn't got them. Doubtless they will make a big showing next week. Votes will be published in every issue of the paper. The first period closes one week from Wednesday and after that date the second period schedule will be in effect. The second period schedule is twenty per cent lower than the first The schedules will positively not be altered at any time so the wise contestants will do their best work before the close of the present period. The contest is all over six weeks from tonight. The candidate who wins the capital prize will be paid at the rate of $150 a week for the time they are engaged in the contest. Do not this seem like pretty fair pay for your spare time.

INTEREST INCREASES

The public interest in the contest is increasing every day and many of the candidates are doing the best they can to pile up a big number of votes before the first period closes. Everybody is talking about the contest and everybody will have a favorite before the race is won. Many subscribers have called at the office during the last week and have paid their subscriptions. When a subscriber calls in this way, he is asked to nam the candidate for whom he wishes to vote, and the votes are credited as indicated by him. Many contestants have received votes in this way during the last week.

NOT TOO LATE

We are being asked by many who are interested in the great contest whether or not it is too late to enter. IT CERTAINLY IS NOT TOO LATE TO ENTER. In fact, there has been such a small vote polled so far that a person starting now is under an handicap worthy of mention. But NOW is the time to enter andto get in your big work while the subscriptions count the most. Impress this upon your friends make it plain to them that you cannot win these prizes without their assistance; let them subscribe through you—and remember, you are not asking a favor in the true sense of the word. You are giving value for what you receive.

Johnson Still Champion

Police Stop Contest After Nine Rounds Milling—Johnson Never Extended Himself

RINGSIDE, East Las Vegas, July, 4th—Jack Johnson is still the heavyweight champion pugilist of the world In his battle with Jim Flynn, he was given the decision in the minth round. The police stopped the fight.

Johnson easily demonstrated his superiority over Flynn. The dusky champion handled the white man as a school boy handles a play toy and never at any stage of the game had the "white hope" a chance to win. The black champian surprised the fan with his showing. After being out of the ring for about two years he came back and proved the fact that all his old time cleverness, his quickness and beautiful footwork was still with him He won as he pleased and practically toyed with his opponent. From present indications there is not a single aspiraot for the heavyweight honor who has the slightest chance to defeat Johnson.

Johnson wagered $10,000 to $3,000 that he would win. Considerable money was placed on the fight with odds at 10 to 4 and 10 to 5.

The champion received a certified checkfor $31,100 from Promoter Curley two hours before the yght began. $1,100 of this amount was for training expenses.

THE FIGHT BY ROUNDS

The following is a detailed report of the fight by rounds:—

ROUND ONE—"Will you shake hands, Jgck?" queried Flynn, as ne opened the battle by rushing into a clinch. "No" retorted the black. Flynn kept in close, but Johnson easily avoided his attempts and flung a stiff left to the ear. The champion pushed his man across the ring, and hooked his left to the ear, and a moment later flung a hard, short arm jolt to the jaw. Johoson smiled constantly, anh fought with great care. Flynn backed the negro against the ropes and the champion rewarded him with a right that cut a deep gash dnder his left eye. Round all Johnsons

ROUND TWO—As Flynn rushed Johnson simply grabbed him about the shoulder and held him at bay all the while grinning like an ape. The champion poked at the fireman's face with light leads. They clinched, Johnson upper-cutting twice heavily with rights to the jaw. The champion toyed with Flynn twice more shooting right undercut to jgw, one of which sent the fireman's head bobbing. The champion wgs careful all the time. Flynn's mouth bled as he took his seat. Johnson's round.

ROUND THREE—Flynn cut short a remarv af Johnson by twice hooking his right to the jaw. This nettled the blacv and he cut loose with short uppercuts. Johnson bled slightly from the mouth as he emerged out of a mid-ring mix-up but Flynn spat blood in a stream as the champioo cut his mouth with a volley of right and lefts. Flynn rushed in close and was met with the customary rain of right and left upuercuts to the face. At that it seemed as if the champion washolding himself in check. He shook Flynn with a few stomach taps scarcely trying to protect his body from Flynn's attacks. Johnson constantly shoved his stomach and invited him to blaze away which convulsed the spectators. Flynn caused a great cheer when he rushed the black to the ropes and planted a solid lift to the jaw. The round ?nded with Flynn's face covered with blood.

ROUND FOUR—Johnson turnea his head to the spectors and hardly noticed his white antagonist. Flynn banged away at the stomach but this time Johnson covered up and shot 4 lefts to the face in quick succession varying it with a left uppercut to the jaw. Flynn at close range put half a dozen punches on the stomach qut Johnson smiled and made no attempt to protect his mid-section. Johnson aroused the crowd to merriment by releasing Flynn's hold and clapping his own gloves together like a happy school girl.

I can't fight while he's holding me, shouted Flynn.

ROUND FIVE—Flynn butted with his head three times and complained that Johnson made it justifiable by holding him. Flynn wgs scarcely reprimaoded for deliberately butting the champion. Flynn tried to find a loop-hole to stem the beating given him. Johnson rushed the yreman with his speed, landing left and right to the jaw. "He's holding me," was Flynn's cry. Johnson, maddened, landed a volley of straight left and right punches to the face, fairly blinding Flynn. Then he stopped himself apparently with a view to prolonging the contest. Flynn's seconds also warned him to cease butting when he sat down.

ROUND SIX—Johnson landed fully a dozen rapid fire rights and lefts to the fireman's face and at the same time placed himself in a position to withstand Flynn's best butting facilities. "'Wait a minute," cried the champion, to a spectator who had shouted for him to end it. Flynn bled profusedly from the nose as Johnson beat him with left and right to the jaw. Flynn failed to land a glove on the champion, the black's defense proving impregnable. Johnson made the blood fairly spurt as he rained blow after blow on his opponent.

There was not a drop of blood on the champion as he took his seat.

ROUND SEVEN—Flynn again tried to butt and was thrice warned. Flynn was helpless in the champion's hands and for the tenth time in this round, was warned by the referree, saying, "One more and I'll disqualify you."

ROUND EIGHT—Flynn kept up his butting tactics to save himself from the champions slaughter. He was warned repeatedly. The black kept ripping Flynn with uppercuts, the round ending all Johnson.

ROUND NINE—Johnson held the fireman at arms length in an attempt to guard himself against the fireman' constant butting. Finally he got in close, jumped a foot in the air and landed with the top of his head against the negro's jaw. Captain Pollack, realizing that, seemed loath to end the contest on a foul, jumped into the ring and brought the battle to an end. Referee Smith thereupon gave the decision to Johns . John son was given a terrific cheer.

Wolgast-Rivers Fight

LOS ANGELES, Cal., July 4th.—Ad. Wolgast, light-weight champion of the world, was given the decision here today in his battle with Joe Rivers. Both men were knocked out in the thirteenth round but the referee gave the decision to the champion. Rivers claims a foul but the referee ignored the claim while the mob of excited fans flocked into the ring. In the thirteenth round there came a blow which landed low and in an instant both boys were sprawling on the floor writhing in agony. Wolgast is credited with having landed the low blow and at the same instant Rivers shot a hard right to the champion's jaw. The referee's decision was very unpopular and he made his escape from the arena as quickly as possible.

Rivers was clearly the winner in the opinion of the majority of the fans. He outclassed Wolgast in nearly every round. In footwork, blocking and judgement of distance he was easily Wolgast's superior.

Overseas' Meeting

Organizer Wrench Visits Cranbrook and is given a Rousing Welcome

A highly successful meeting of the Cranbrook branch of the Overseas club was held in the Auditorium on last Thursday night. The object of the gathering being to welcome Mr. E. Wrench, the honorary organizer of the movement.

The Overseas club is not two years old yet, having been founded in August 1910, and during that period it has become the most powerful patriotic society in the British Empire. Its members consist of British subjects, no matter in what part of the world they were born. Canadians, Australians, South Africans, New Zealanders and people born in the Old Country.

At present the Overseas club has a world membership of 91,000 all of them residing the British Isles, while the Canadian membership is over 30,000. In Canada the Overseas club number 75 organized branches stretching from the Province of Quebec to Vancouver Island. The object of Mr. Wrench trip is to visit as many as possible of the clubs in the Dominion.

The primary object of the Overseas club, which owes its inception to an idea of Mr. Cecil Rhodes, is as follows:

"Believing the British Empire stands for justice, freedom, order and good government, we pledge ourselves as citizens of the greatest Empire in the world to maintain the heritage handed down to us by our fathers."

Mr. Wrench, who was introduced by Mr. N. A. Wallinger, president of the Cranbrook branch of Overseas club, which numbers some 150 members, drew attention to the fact that the great success of the movement was to the fact that it was non-party, non sectarian, and recognized no class distinctions. their extraordinary progress was particularly due to two individuals, Earl Grey, late governor general of Canada, president of the Canadian section of the Overseas club, who were largely instrumental in interesting prominent Canadians in the movement was to give first place to Lord Northcliffe, the proprietor of the London Daily Mail.

Lord Northcliffe has taken the liviest interest in the movement since its inception and by placing the columns of the overseas daily Mail at the disposal of the Overseas has made the press the best means of establishing its efforts wherever British subjects are gathered together in any part of the globe.

Mr. Wrench complimented the Cranbrook branch of the Overseas club in the splendid manner in which they celebrated Empire Day,(May 24th), by making it a childrens day. He expressed the hope that every branch of the Overseas club in Canada would follow Cranbrook's example. The vital problem in Western Canada to day was how to accommodate the ever increasing number of foreign immigrants who are pouring into the prairie provinces from all parts of the world. Mr. Wrench related, how during his frequent visits to Western Canada he had spoken in many occasions to foreigners in Sakatchewan and Alberta who did not know what the union fair was. He hoped that the Overseas club would would follow the example of the United States educational authorities and insist in the necessity of instilling patriotism into the minds of the school children throughout the Dominion. Much was already being done in that direction but there was great need for further action.

Moyie Celebration

Crowds Enjoy the Mining Town's Hospitality

On Monday, July 1st, Dominion Day, Moyie celebrated, and a long programme was arranged. A large number of Cranbrookites were in attendance. Following were the winners in the several events.

First money in the high jump was taken by Sid Elmer of Cranbrook, with C. E. Howard of Creston a close second.

Sid Elmer was also first in the hop, skip and jump, with Chas Nordman second.

A special race in which five Hindus participated, caused a lot of fun and after the race the winners gathered their friends and proceeded to hold a pink tea after the fashion in their native land..

Sid Elmer captured first money in the 100 yard foot race with J. T. Browning second.

In the ladies race Miss Lillie Conrah was first, and Miss D. Blackburn second.

Sid Elmer was irrepressible and again captured first money in the broad jump, with C. Nordman second

In the single handed drilling contest H. Thompson drilled a seven and three-quarter inch hole and took first money, while Jim Colli was satisfied with second money having drilled six and a quarter inches.

C. E. Tatton won in the motor boat race. and J. Browning had the best decorated motor boat.

The Silver City has always celebrated Dominion Day, and while most of the events were for the children, yet the different attractions were in keeping with days past, and were very attractive to the crowd in attendance

Moyie has a big asset in the Lake which is one of the finest sheets of water in this province.

The pleasures of the day were closed by a dance in the evening. The music was excellent, the attendance large, and everybody went home perfectly satisfied with their outing at Moyie.

Reproductions of Art

We have just received a series of reproductions in panaJl form, of oil paintings by Carl Weimer and O. E. Berninghaus. These are titled—

A fight for the Overland Mail
Attack on an Imigrant train.
The Relief Train.
Westward Ho!
The Fathers of Waters.

These are being distributed by th Anhadser-Busch Brewing Association of St Louis. Mo. U.S.A. If properly framed these panels will be a credit to any living room or den, and friends and patrons of the "Prospector" can procure copies af them by remitting to the Anheuser Advertising Department the small sum of 25c to cover postage.

Carl Weimar spent most of his life among the Indians during the middle of the past century and his reputation as an artist is recognised everywhere; Mr. Berninghaus is probably the best of the present day Indian or Western scene artists.

Any of our readers wishing to see a copy of these beautiful paintings can do so by calling at our office.

These paintings are really attractive and certainly reflect credit upon the publishers.

Farm Dairying

I.—The Dairy Farm

Copyright, 1911, by A. C. McClurg & Co.

By LAURA ROSE,
Demonstrator and Lecturer In Dairying at the Ontario Agricultural College, Guelph, Canada.

The first farmer was the first man, and all historic nobility rests on possession and use of land.

IN the selection of land for a dairy farm some essential points must be considered. If a choice of soil is to be had a rich clay loam, easily drained, is the most preferable. Rough, cheap land is often used to advantage for pasture purposes, but more and more is intensive farming becoming popular, even to the extent of having a cow to each acre of land.

There must be a plentiful supply of good water all the year, and it should be convenient.

Another necessary consideration is a good market near at hand or convenient transportation facilities. The importance of good roads is no small consideration.

To be a successful dairyman a man must first be a successful farmer. He must understand soil conditions and the growing of crops. In other words, he must have a good farm well farmed, as well as a good herd well cared for.

A HUMANE AND MUCH APPROVED OF COW TIE.

Rundown Farms Made Profitable.

Every crop grown on the farm has a value as a fertilizer and when sold permanently removes that amount of fertilizing matter from the farm. Very often an intelligent, industrious man makes a profitable investment by buying a rundown farm at a low figure and stocking it with dairy cattle. By returning the manure in good condition to the land he makes the exhausted soil become rich and raise good crops in a few years.

A study of the following table explains why poor, run-out farms are built up by dairying. The figures show the amount of money received for the products sold and the value of the fertilizing constituents removed from the farm, based on nitrogen being worth 22 cents per pound, phosphoric acid 4½ cents and potash 4½ cents.

		Manurial value.
One ton mixed hay	$12.00	$6.80
One ton wheat at $1 per bushel	33.33	6.05
One ton live cattle at 6 cents per pound	120.00	7.68
One ton whole milk at $1.25 per 100 pounds	25.00	1.60
One ton butter at 30 cents per pound	600.00	.36

I heard an old Scotchman, who proved it true, say many times there were only two things for which a farmer should mortgage his farm—first, to drain the land properly so as to raise good crops, for prosperity cannot rise from wet, cold soil—the land must be drained; second, to build good barns in which to house the stock and crops. These two conditions, rightly managed, will erect a fine home and make a comfortable bank account.

"Let There Be Light."

I wish space permitted a lengthy discussion on the construction of the cow stable. It does seem to me that the health of the cows and the purity of the milk depend greatly on the stable. Four things are of prime importance—sunlight, pure air, tight, dry floors and the comfort of the animals.

The first recorded utterance of God is, "Let there be light," and further it is stated, "God saw the light that it was good." The Creator of all things knew that light was good. We know it is good. Then why shut it out of our cow stables? Did you ever see a stable without a window? I have seen many.

Fifteen minutes of direct sunshine bring death to most of the disease germs. When we have such a powerful disinfectant free let us use it abundantly. Have plenty of windows in the stable. Let the sunlight get directly in on all sides if possible. Many have the windows hinged on the lower side and have them open inward from the top. This prevents a direct draft on the cows. Keep the windows free from cobwebs and wash them off occasionally.

It is easier to regulate the light than it is to ventilate properly. If we wish animals to remain healthy they must have pure air to breathe. This means that the foul air from the lungs and odors from food and excretions must escape and be replaced by fresh air. Thousands of animals are yearly becoming affected with tuberculosis, due to insanitary conditions. Effective ventilation is of infinitely greater value than tuberculin. The first prevents the disease; the other only reveals its presence. There should be at least 500 cubic feet of air space for each cow.

Means of letting the air into the stable at or near the ceiling will usually prove best. The air taken in will, by reason of being cold, tend to fall to the floor and thus produce air movements which will keep the air within the stable stirred and uniform. The outlet flues or ventilators must extend to the top of the roof. Up to the present time the King system of ventilation or a modification of it is perhaps one of the best. Details of it may be had from any agricultural college.

It is probably not advisable to allow the temperature of the stable to fall much below 40 degrees in the coldest weather, but in no case should a high temperature be maintained at the expense of ventilation. If the air of the stable is dry cattle can stand quite a low temperature without discomfort. Too warm and badly ventilated quarters are largely responsible for the prevalence of tuberculosis. On the other hand, a low enough temperature to cause the cows to chill will quickly be shown in a decreased milk flow. Cows exposed to extreme cold require more grain food and give a smaller yield of milk.

Cement Floor the Best.

The best floor is made of cement. It is sanitary, durable and easily kept clean. If bedding is scarce and the floor very cold it is advisable to have a plank platform for the cows to lie on, otherwise rheumatism may develop. This wooden floor must be taken up occasionally and the stalls well cleaned. Many a valuable cow is lost by allowing her to lie on a damp, cold floor with probably a draft on her hind quarters. Inflammation of the udder is the result.

There are many contrivances for fastening the cows in the stall. Do not be cruel enough to have the rigid stanchion. The swinging stanchion is being installed in many stables and is greatly liked. The upright iron bar with the sliding ring and chain is, in the opinion of many, the easiest and best kind of tie. A later form of chain tie which is an improvement on the old style calls for a bar on each side of the stall and a ring on each bar, with a chain on each ring. These two chains are joined in the center by a ring to which is attached the chain which goes around the cow's neck. The bars are short and should be placed with their lower end about eighteen inches from the floor. The side chains should be slack enough so that when not attached to the cow the center will hang eight or ten inches from the floor. This tie gives more liberty than the stanchion and does not interfere with the cow when rising.

The basement stable is losing favor, as it is hard to build one and avoid dampness and darkness—two enemies to health.

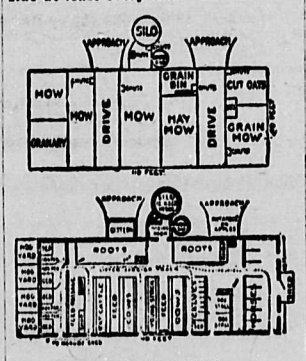
The Ideal Stable.

The ideal cow stable is one without storage loft or cellar and where no other animals are housed. Such a building is expensive and involves more labor in caring for the stock.

In building a new stable every contrivance to save labor that can be afforded should be installed. Spend time and money in visiting new barns and studying plans. A wise planning means less hired help and more satisfaction in doing the work. Have doors and passages arranged to save steps.

A convenient way of bringing the water into the stable and watering the cows, a wide feed passage, a good gutter, mangers easy to keep clean, modern litter carriers, manure shed with cement floor, silo, feed bins and root cellar handy are points to note.

A stable should be whitewashed inside at least every fall. The lime dis-



MODEL BARN PLAN.

infects and sweetens and brightens every corner and adds to the self respect of the farmer. Whitewash well strained is quickly applied with a small force spray pump or may be put on with a broom.

Whitewash For Outside of Building.

Slake in boiling water half a bushel of lime. Strain so as to remove all sediment. Add two pounds of sulphate of zinc, a pound of common salt and half a pound of whiting thoroughly dissolved. Mix to proper consistency with skimmilk and apply hot.

This is much cheaper than paint and gives the buildings and fences a very attractive appearance.

Disinfectants For Stalls, Gutters, Etc.

No. 1.—Four pounds powdered bluestone (sulphate of copper), four pounds of fresh lime, forty gallons of water. Use as a spray.

No. 2.—Whitewash walls, ceilings, etc., with an ordinary lime wash to which has been added a quarter of a pound of chloride of lime to the gallon.

A Slighting Term.

In the provinces down by the Atlantic, the people take their politics seriously — at least several of the newspapers are not at all backward in criticizing the editorial remarks of papers on the other side of the political fence. The words used in referring to opposing papers are often terms of belittlement. Probably the limit was reached when the Sackville, N.B., Tribune recently referred to the Conservative paper as an "organette."

"Wogglebat must have made garden before."

"Goes about it in an intelligent manner, does he?"

"Yes; he isn't promising his friends any early vegetables."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

COINS AND THE MINT.

Metal Money That Uncle Sam's Officials Buy and Sell.

The mint does not buy old coins or paper money, except certain rare colonial coins in fine condition, desired for the mint's cabinet. Mutilated or uncurrent United States gold and silver coin is purchased as bullion. The mint has no pattern pieces for sale, and the government pays no premium for the return of any of its coins or paper money.

New coins cannot be struck in this country in the absence of authorization by congress. The mint supplies United States coins only and not of any past date. The fifty dollar gold piece and the half dollar and quarter dollar pieces in gold were struck by private parties on the Pacific coast during the '49 period and not by the federal government.

The coinage of the following coins ceased in the years named: The half cent, copper, in 1857; one cent, nickel, 1864; half dime and three cent, silver, and two cent, bronze, in 1873; twenty cent, silver, 1878; trade dollars, 1883; one dollar and three dollar, gold, and three cent nickel, 1889. The Columbian half dollar was coined in 1892 and the Isabella quarter in 1893. The Lafayette dollar was struck in 1899, the date on the coin (1900) being that of the unveiling of the memorial.

Certain markings, indicating the place of coinage, are to be seen on our coins. Those struck at the Philadelphia mint have no mint mark, but those struck at all other mints are distinguished by a small letter on the reverse, near the bottom. These letters are "C" for Charlotte, N. C., discontinued in 1861; "CC" for Carson City, Nev., discontinued in 1893; "D" for Dahlonega, Ga., discontinued in 1861; "O" for New Orleans, and "S" for San Francisco.

The coins of the United States now authorized by law are: In gold, double eagle, eagle, half eagle, quarter eagle; in silver, dollar, half dollar, quarter dollar and dime; minor, five cent, nickel and one cent, bronze.

Proof sets of both gold and silver coins are to be had by purchase from the mint. When business there is slack medals may be struck from dies furnished by individuals, public institutions and incorporated societies at a charge sufficient to cover the cost of the operation and the value of the metal.—Scientific American.

Why Wild Beasts Left Missouri.

No elk have been seen in central Missouri since 1836. Prior to that time they were reasonably plenty. They were attracted by the prevalence of the salt licks. Nathaniel Walker, or "Uncle Natty," as he was familiarly called, a famous pioneer hunter, claims to have counted fifty elk in a drove on the knoll near the present Saline county courthouse. The bear disappeared about the year 1840, though occasionally animals of the bear tribe were afterward seen. Old time Democrats said that the Whigs scared the bear, deer, elk and almost every other kind of game out of the country in 1840 by their yelling, anvil firing and torchlight parades in honor of General Benjamin Harrison, their successful candidate for president.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Fire Insurance Policies.

There are not many real estate brokers who know how to write a fire insurance policy. Many, however, think they are experts about such matters until a client of theirs learns after his property has been damaged by fire that he was only partly insured. "If buildings are to be insured," says R. O. Haubold, "care should be taken to issue the policy in the name of the persons in whom title is vested; that provision is made that should the building stand upon ground held in any other way than fee simple the policy will not be voided by that fact. If the premises be or become vacant for a period of more than ten days the contingency must be met."—New York Tribune.

Old Glory.

I have seen the glories of art and architecture and of river and mountain. I have seen the sunset on the Jungfrau and the moon rise over Mont Blanc. But the fairest vision on which these eyes ever rested was the flag of my country in a foreign port. Beautiful as a flower to those who love it, terrible as a meteor to those who hate it, it is the symbol of the power and the glory and the honor of fifty millions of Americans.—George F. Hoar.

A Sigh From the Author.

"Proofreading is Greek to me, even after having several books published," Miss Alice Louise Lee recently wrote to her publishers. "But what worries me is this psychological question. Will my corrections be as unintelligible to the printer as all his marks are to me? It seems to me very confusing. In the face of proofreading I feel like the farmer who before the rhinoceros' cage declared, 'There ain't no such beast!'"

His Honor at Stake.

"Young man, how do you expect to marry my daughter if you are in debt?"

"Why, sir, in my opinion it's the only square thing to do. The longer I am engaged to her the worse off I will be."—Life.

The Servant Problem.

"I, sir," said the demonstrative candidate, "am a servant of the people."

"Gosh!" replied Farmer Corntossel. "Ain't this servant problem gettin' to be awful?"—Washington Star.

Heaven will be inhabited by every man who has heaven in his soul.—Beecher.

Money in It Anyway.

"Let's get up a revolution."

"What's the use? Even if we grab the government there's no money in the treasury."

"Well, can't we make money out of the moving picture rights?"—Louisville Courier-Journal.

In the Spring.

In the spring the young man's fancy hose begin to reappear;
In the spring the women's bonnets get a little bit more queer.

MABEL'S CHITCHAT

When Teacup Washing Becomes a Ceremony of Importance.

CHINAWARE TO BE BOILED.

Hints For the Summer Bungalow. Save Your Silk Pieces and Have Them Made Up Into Handsome Rugs. Phonograph In Kindergarten.

My Dear Elsa—I was having tea the other afternoon with a charming lady of my acquaintance.

"I never tasted such delicious tea in my life," I said, passing my cup for a second supply. "Is it because you make it yourself or because you warm the cups?"

"It's the cups themselves," she said confidentially. "They add a glory to the tea. That's just it and all about it."

I looked at my cup critically—creamy white with the lovely smooth surface of a polished pearl. A border of tiniest roses in dull pinky brown bordered the top, and the burnished edge showed no sign of chip or crack.

"Used every day for twenty years, dearie," she said gayly, "but always washed by myself."

"Does the tea ever stain them?" I asked, thinking of my own pretty egg-shell set.

"Why, of course. A little common salt applied with the fingers quickly removes any stain from fine china, and a tiny brush used ocasionally will keep the handles and the grooves at the bottom of the cups beautifully clean.

"My set is so fragile I am almost afraid to touch them," I said.

"They are sweet," my dear old friend was good enough to say. You know the set, don't you, Elsa, dear, the old Spode that belonged to Aunt Eliza, which she bequeathed to me with much fear and trembling?

"Well," my old friend continued, "I've been longing to ask whether you boiled them before you took them into everyday use."

"Boiled!" I gasped. "Boiled them!"

"Yes, surely, boiled. It was one of my mother's little ways, and I always carry it out. Delicate china isn't half so likely to crack or chip after it has been boiled."

So I asked for all information instanter, and here it is:

"Wrap the separate pieces in soft old cloths, set them carefully in a shallow pan—a deep saucepan does nicely—cover with cold water and let the water come slowly to a boil and let them boil for ten minutes and they are done," said my friend triumphantly.

"Do you use soap or soda in your washing up water?" I asked.

"A very little flaked soap," was the reply. Then she continued, "I am most particular about the drying and polishing, and I keep soft old damask cloths for the purpose."

"Your china washing is quite a ceremony," I said, thinking wistfully of the good old days when women really had time to attend to the washing of their best china. Now one is off attending a club meeting, a suffragette talk or a bridge game, and the family china is being smashed by whatever maid one is fortunate enough to keep for a day or so.

Still, it really does take only a few minutes for this teacup ceremony, and it pays when one has valuable china, which I know you possess in distracting quantities.

Save Your Silk Pieces.

I have recently found out, too, that it is a wise rule never to throw away old silk pieces, no matter how disreputable in appearance, so long as there is any hold together to the fabric. I don't mean good sized pieces of new materials which can be utilized in many ways for fancy work and dress accessories, but to discarded silk flounces, old sleeves, badly worn silk waists that are far past any renovating. Perhaps you don't know it, but ancient ribbons that have been cleaned if too soiled for use make fine material for woven rugs.

In a certain summer bungalow, the charm of which lingers with every one who has the good fortune to share its broad and hospitable shelter, there are plenty of pretty and artistic rugs woven by a little German woman living in the neighborhood from material furnished her by the girls of this particular family, who have actual old fashioned "carpet rag parties" during the winter evenings with a view to the decking of their beloved "candle cottage." But over the banister rail and on the broad couches and window seats are lighter and richer looking rugs, and one handsome rug lies across the big center table, where all gather to read on stormy nights.

These were made out of old silk scraps cut into strips, sewed together and wound into balls by these same ingenious girls and woven by the same little Deutsche frau into thoroughly desirable rugs, than which nothing could harmonize more perfectly with the genuine old antique fireirons, all of which were rummaged out of a veritable old "family attic," where they had lain unused since the grandmother of these same girls was young herself. No oriental fabrics could have half the harmonious effect in combination with the old furnishings, which are genuinely American. It is easy to think out a color scheme for summer furnishings before the balls of silk are wound.

Any weaver of ordinary rag rugs is able to turn out the prettier silk ones and can tell exactly how much silk by weight it will take to weave a rug of any desired size, and the results are durable, handsome and well worth the trouble of saving, cutting and sewing the strips of silk and winding the balls.

Here is a suggestion, Elsa, dear, that I would like to have you pass on to that chum of yours who directs the kindergarten in your town. You have often told me how hard it is for her to find an assistant who could properly interpret the songs and marches for the children. A director of a kindergarten here in New York has solved the problem by using a phonograph. Now, the music is played in perfect time. The children love it, and the teacher is able to direct the work and have music, too, without the expense of an assistant. At the "rest period" the children are allowed to choose any piece of music in the repertory of the instrument, and, instead of boisterously romping, they sit quietly about, listening to the music, each eager for his turn to choose the record he likes best to hear. It's a great idea, isn't it? Devotedly yours, MABEL.

New York.

THE BEST WAY.

In Which to Overcome Many Little Household Hindrances.

To boil an egg that has a cracked shell rub the crack gently with moistened salt, allowing time for it to penetrate before putting it into the water. It will then boil without coming out of the cracked portion.

To mend hard substances like metal or glass there is nothing better than melted alum. Melt the alum over an intense heat and apply it hot. It is an excellent thing to fasten loosened ivory handles to knives.

To serve toast daintily and save crumbs cut it in strips when preparing it. It is more tempting and nicer to handle.

To keep cream sweet heat it almost to the boiling point and then put it in a glass bottle or earthen vessel, cover it and set it aside to cool. Thus treated it will keep fresh several days in moderate weather and over the second day in warm weather.

To economize on soap either put the broken pieces in a small cloth bag and use for washing dishes and in scrubbing or chip them fine and melt in a little water on the stove. In the latter case by allowing the soft soap to come to a decided boil and adding a little borax you can fashion a solid cake of soap by pouring it into an old cup or dish to cool.

To keep feather dusters in good condition push them, handle first, into the leg of an old stocking. When wanted for use pull it out of the cover by the handle, grasping the stocking in the other hand. This not only saves space when the dusters are not in use, but lengthens their life and serviceableness.

As a substitute for a hot water bottle heat an old magazine in the oven. It will retain the heat for a very long time and will lie well against large surfaces.

Cap Made In Half an Hour.

A circle of net one-half yard in diameter, thin silk the same size, two yards of lace and two yards of ribbon matching the silk are all that is required to make this dainty boudoir cap.

PRETTY BOUDOIR CAP.

The silk and net are shirred and then sewed on a band of ribbon. The lace is then sewed on to this same band and the wide ribbon laid softly around the cap. A large double pump bow in the front adds a pretty finish.

An Early Acquired Habit.

It saves time and eyesight to do as little basting as possible for machine sewing. In making up supplies of clothes such as underwear, school dresses, etc., it is worth while to baste and fit accurately one of each thing, then rip it apart and trim all the rest to its exact proportions.

Begin sewing on the straight seams, so as to accustom yourself to simply hold your work together. It is no trick at all once you catch the hang of it. Fold down hems and crease tucks, keeping them flat and smooth under the presser foot as you sew. Gather on the machine and regulate the fullness properly and you can sew the gathers the same as a plain seam. Even sleeves can be held in as they are sewed, but this is after one is expert. At first it is best to baste them. Cultivate likewise the habit of running off one seam on to another. With light stuff hold a strip of paper underneath while sewing and tear it off afterward. Wherever possible use the English bag seam. It is neat and strong and lends itself beautifully to no basting.

Where Romance Failed.

"I saw a curious item about that famous author of fairy tales who died a few days ago."

"Yes, I saw that he was dead—a man of extraordinary powers of invention."

"Why, you would think so, of course."

"What was the item?"

"Why, it stated that when he happened to be out late with the boys he would go home and stammer and falter and get confused and mixed up and end by telling his wife the whole story just as it happened!"—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Lesson For Lovers.

Two violets bloomed in a garden
When the bluff March breezes blew,
And they loved each other fondly,
As violets often do,
But shyness kept them from speaking
Till death had torn them apart,
And neither knew that the other
Had died of a broken heart.

Take warning, you who are lovers,
By the violets' hapless fate,
Don't wait till you're dead and buried,
For then it may be too late,
Don't foolishly let your passion
Remain locked up in your breast,
But speak to your loved one boldly
And so get it off your chest.

STORIES OF PIUS IX.

The Lady Who Told the Pontiff She Wished He Were Dead.

Lady Paget in the Nineteenth Century has a chapter of recollections dealing with life in Rome during the first years of completely united Italy, when Lady Paget's husband was British ambassador to the Quirinal. Among her stories are some of Pope Pius IX., which show that pontiff in a most amiable light. Though the pope had twice excommunicated the king, they really loved each other, says Lady Paget, "for they were made of the same kind of stuff, and both belonged emphatically to the days that are past and gone. Impulsive in action, primesautier and generous in temperament, they allowed themselves the luxury of sometimes letting their feelings deviate from what others might consider the stern path of duty."

When King Victor Emmanuel died his chaplain, against all rules, gave him absolution for everything, though he was under the major excommunication. The pope sent for the priest, inquired most feelingly about the king's last moments, and when the chaplain confessed Pius IX., with tears in his eyes, cried: "Hai fatto bene! Hai fatto bene!" ("You have done well! You have done well!")

Another story illustrates Pius IX.'s sense of humor. It concerns Mme. de Corcelles, the wife of the ambassador to the Vatican, a delightful old lady, who often visited Lady Paget, in spite of prohibitions. "For," she declared, "I am the granddaughter of Lafayette, and I do what I please." She never addressed the cardinals as eminence, but hailed them in cheery tones as her "dear cardinals." When one day she visited Pius IX. he asked her whether she had seen all the sights of Rome. "Yes, holy father," she replied, "but I should dearly like to see a conclave."

This story was told by the pontiff himself.

PORT SAID GAMBLERS.

Traps They Have Ready Baited to Fleece Unwary Tourists.

Picturesque Port Said, at the entrance to the Suez canal, is given an unsavory reputation by I. Johnston Abraham in his book, "The Surgeon's Log." Ugly stories are told about the town, the writer says, and his description of a gambling house fitted on purpose to fleece the unwary traveler bears out his assertion:

Suddenly as we drew near one house the strains of music came echoing into the empty sandy street. As if at a signal the decrepit chariot stood still, my guide got down and suggested I should go in. I thought rapidly and then followed him. It was queer, and I wanted to know. He led the way upstairs into a large room, where several men were playing roulette. None took any notice of me, but apparently the bank was having a very bad time of it. Every one was winning. The music from the automatic piano was deafening. I looked on silently for some time and then made a move for the door. An oily looking Greek intercepted me.

"Won't you try your luck?" he said.

"I'm not drunk enough," I answered.

He shrugged his shoulders, and I passed on. On the stairs I paused and then stole quietly back. The music had ceased, and all the confederates who had been playing so feverishly and winning so much had ceased also and were preparing to resume the siesta my advent had so fruitlessly interrupted.

Free Drinks.

In the French chamber of deputies each speaker has to mount a tribune near the president's chair. On a deputy coming forward to address the assembly an usher invariably brings a glass of some beverage and places it at his side. Under the empire orators were allowed only a glass of sweetened water, and nowadays when a new speaker advances the usher, to be on the right side, gives him a glass of sweetened water, but among the veteran speakers water alone is not very high in favor. Cold soup, coffee, wine, spirits and lemonade are among the favorite beverages.

Perpetual Motion.

Perpetual motion machine? Suppose that man could finally perfect a machine that would run itself. It would not deliver a trace of power. The entire force would be employed in the running. It would have to be free from friction, not nearly, but absolutely. This man cannot accomplish. But the machine would of necessity have to start itself, an impossibility. Only creative mind is able to do this.—New York American.

No Excuse.

"We shall never have her in another club we get up."

"What's the matter?"

"Her mother died last week, and she resigned on that account."

"I don't see how you can blame her for that. It seems to me that she did the proper thing."

"I knew you'd think that. But it was her turn to entertain next."—Detroit Free Press.

Reasonable Anxiety.

"Captain," said the pilot anxiously, "I fear the vessel is ashore."

"Humph," ejaculated the captain as the steamer's nose went further into the mud, "your fears seem to be, like the vessel, well grounded!"—Baltimore American.

Not Lost.

"Sam Johnson, you've been fightin' ag'in. Youse lost two of yo' front teeth."

"No, I ain't, mammy, honest. I's got 'em in me pocket."—Life.

The Boyhood Aspiration.

"I hate to see any one change his mind or sacrifice his first ideals," said the uncompromising person.

"And yet," replied Senator Sorghum, "if none of us had changed our minds or sacrificed our first ideals most of us would be circus clowns."—Washington Star.

Mean Man.

To old Bachelor Frewlew,
And he, mean man, said, quite composed,
"I'll be a brother to you."

CHIC MILLINERY.

Dainty Bonnet For the Little Maid.

OF FANCY BLUE STRAW.

This handmade hat of fancy blue straw is in the ever popular becoming bonnet shape. A band of dark blue velvet ends in a pump bow at the side, and another band starting at the front is brought over the left side to the center of the back, thus forming a unique trimming.

Little silk grapes in natural coloring are placed in groups of three on this band of velvet.

"DON'TS" FOR HUSBANDS.

Rockefeller Pastor Offers Ten as a Solution of the Divorce Evil.

Dr. W. W. Bustard, pastor of John D. Rockefeller's Euclid Avenue Baptist church in Cleveland, O., recently gave these ten "don'ts" for husbands as a solution of the divorce evil:

Don't forget your wife wants to be loved as much after marriage as before.

Don't arrange for your second marriage before your first wife is either dead or divorced.

Don't compel your wife to ask for a cent every time she needs one.

Don't expect your wife to work fourteen hours a day when you work only eight.

Don't carry all your religion in your wife's name.

Don't let your neighbors pity your children because you were their father.

Don't gossip. Men should not encroach on a woman's privilege.

Don't try to run a forty horsepower automobile on a four horsepower salary.

Don't live beyond your means or according to your meanness.

Don't forget the best legacy you can leave your family is the memory of a good husband and a kind father.

"All the honeymooning of life ought not to end with the honeymoon," said Mr. Bustard, supplementing his several "don'ts." "A man should always remember it is no sin to kiss his own wife. Love is not for courtship alone, but for life."

Useful Kitchen Hint.

Practical and useful is this new vegetable and noodle shredder which the shops are showing. It has seven sharp cutters in form of wheels which fit into a steel plate. This plate makes smooth the dough when noodles are made, and it is easily manipulated by pushing up and down over the vegetable or food to be cut into even strips.

Attics and Closets.

Most women dread housecleaning, and it is little wonder, if one could see into their attics and closets, says the Woman's Home Companion. They have the "saving mania" and have indulged it all their lives, and many a one, especially she who has stayed in the old home, has not only her own but the accumulations of generations of women before her.

How can any sensible woman be so selfish and so self abusive at the same time as to keep what benefits her in no possible way and yet makes her so much extra work every year? Why not dispose of things to the best possible advantage as they become useless and save half the work of the spring overhauling as well as do a great deal of good?

Health Hints.

People cultivate nerves to a large extent and do not apply simple rules to cure them. Healthy work, particularly out of doors, is an excellent antidote to nerves.

Onions are a very good tonic for nervous people.

Cranberries are good for sufferers from inactive liver.

What She Wanted.

The four-year-old daughter of a popular New Hampshire clergyman was ailing one night and was put to bed early. She said, "Mamma, I want to see papa." Her mother replied: "No, dear. Your papa must not be disturbed." Pretty soon she said again, "I want to see my papa." The mother replied as before, "No; your papa must not be disturbed." It was not long before she uttered this clincher: "Mamma, I am sick, and I want to see my pastor."—Christian Herald.

With the living expenses so outrageously high it is difficult to make both ends meet. As a rule and by compulsion, we make one end oatmeal and the other end fried potatoes and in the middle we are sometimes lucky to have smoked sausage.

There is more joy in a printing office over one sinner that pays in advance and abuses the editor on every possible occasion than there is over ninety and nine who borrow the paper and sing its praises without contributing a cent to keep it out of the poor house.

• • • •

There is ample room in this vicinity for several hundred more industrious and progressive farmers. Good land can be obtained at a reasonable price and a hearty welcome awaits the immigrant who comes to make his home in this country.

Good roads make it easier for country children to attend school and enable to do so with greater regularity Nothing so much concerns the life of the people in the rural districts as the means of communication between communities, towns and railway stations. Good highways make it possible to centralize schools and churches When a doctor is needed he is needed quickly and sometimes often. If this unfortunate necessity arises what a boon it is to have good roads and what distress bad roads may cause.

White Labor for Fruit Growers

As a result of an inquiry conducted by the British Columbia Fruit Growers' Association throughout the various fruit districts of the province asking what labor would be required for the current year, it is of interest to note that the fruit districts are much more thoroughly supplied with labor than was the case two years ago, when the last general inquiry was instituted. At that time fruit growers made application for 1450 men; as a result of the present inquiry they have asked for only 308.

Wages in the fruit districts have advanced slightly in two years and the conditions of the working men have also improved in that fruit growers are more generally supplying comfortable lodgings and suitable board.

From the enquiry it was learned that on Vancouver Island and in the Lower Mainland suitable help can be secured with little difficulty without any special effort on the part of organizations for the purpole. It is true, however, that in these districts the Chinese and Japanese to some extent receive the preference over the white men.

That New Land District

The creation of a new land district in South-East Kootenay came as a surprise to the residents of Cranbrooy district who really have oo abjections to the formation of two districts, but have a decided objection to curtailing Cranbrook District to the betterment of the Fernie District.

This matter has been brought to the attention of the Executive of the Cranbrook Conservative Association, and is being taken up with the Land Department at Victoria.

The attention of the public was drawn to the matter by the advertisement that appeared in the Prospector, which came as a surprise or rather a bolt from the blue, without warning, or without consulting those most interested, "the people of the Cranbrook District."

Mr. T. T. McVittie, P.L.S., and president of the Cranbrook District Association has informed the Prospector that if the boundaries as prepared were adopted, there would be a general mixup, and result in many conflicts between the proposed districts."

For instance the ranches of A. Gilz, Roger Moore, G. Arnold, Wm. Carlin and S. Catterbury would be divided, one half in Cranbrook, the other half in Fernie district.

Mr. McVittie said further, that if it is necessary to re-establish the boundaries, there is only one reasonable way to do it, to follow natural boundaries, Mountain divided and streams

Mr. McVittie clearly showed on the map what he considered was a proper boundary, and which landmarks is strongly recommended by the Cranbrook District Conservative Association, which is described as follows:—

"Beginning at a point on the north "west corner of the district, shown "as Wells Pass, thence down Toby "Creek east to Windermere, thence "south through Windermere, Colum "bia Lakes and Kootenay River to "the International Boundary line, "thence west to where this line in"tersects the boundary line be"tween East and West Kootenay, "following this line back to point "of commencement."

The Cranbrook District, being the oldest and containing the largest amount of agricultural lands should be given the preference. However we don't ask for any favors, neither do we wish to lose a large portion of Cranbrook District, that of Gold Creek, which rightfully belong to this district and which is not separated from Cranbrook district by any natural boundary.

If the above boundaries cannot be adopted, the people of Cranbrook are quite satisfied with the electoral boundary, and for the land district to be the same.

The Secretary of the Cranbrook Conservative Association has wired Hon. Richard McBride and W. R. Ross, Minister of Lands, strongly protesting against the proposed boundary of the Cranbrook Land District.

Perry Creek Notes

Mr. West and family and Miss Olsen were registered at the Perry Creek Hotel last Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. C. Stevens and children also Mr. and Mrs. Walker, motored to Perry Creek on Sunday last.

Wild fruit of all kinds in great abundance this year on Perry Creek, and their is prospects of a large crop of Hucklebberries.

Messrs. Carr and Theis have struck still richer diggings, and are expecting some capitalists from Chicago here in a few days to install machinery. A road is being built from the Steam Shovel, to their property.

Fishing is getting good at Perry Creek now that the water is getting lower.

Plot Death of Kitchener

London, July 2.—A special despatch to the Daily Mail from Cairo states that the British adviser to the ministry of the interior, the public prosecutor and the commandant of the Cairo police conferred with Lord Kitchener this morniog and it is understood that the conference was connected with the alleged discovery of a conspiracy to assassinate Mohammed Pasha Said, president of the council, Lord Kitchener and the Khedive. Four persons have been arrested in London as suspects and the investigation is continuing.

Investments

How often the most dangerous form of speculation are dignified by the name of "investment" among the most prominent of these is real-estate propositions, where the field of operations is in some boom town or subdivision property situated beyond the limits of some well known city.

Some of these cannot be placed in the catagory of investments even by the wildest stretch of the imagination, as they are nothing but what is aptly termed "wild-cat schemes." We hope our readers will thoroughly investigate before placing their money in these dubious places.

Apart from this there is a broad and growing field in this district for safe, legitimate investments. Close-in property is ridiculously low here at present, and don't forget it will not always be that way. A year from now you may not be able to buy it at all, and then you will have the privilege of telling your friends of the many chances you had to make big money in Cranbrook. Immense satisfaction, is'nt it?

July Number, Cranbrook Review

Price of Money

The past decade has been a great change in the attitude of investors, particularly in Canada. Ten years ago any investor who considered himself careful bought municipal and Government bonds returning from 3.85 per cent to 4½ per cent, or mortgages usually returning but little more. Now the careful investor can average about 5 per cent to 5½ per cent on his capital without misgivings. The safety of these investments is practically unaltered, the marketability is greater, the yield is improved, and there is probably greater stability of market price.

According to investment theory such harmonious improvement in all the qualities of an investment is paradoxical. Usually an increase in the rate of income means also a decline in some other quality, usually that of safety or marketability. Yet in Canada such an increase has taken place apparently not only without any deterioration in the other qualities but with even a substantial improvement in some respects.

Several causes are assigned for this change. The cost of living is a popular theory, but the necessity for a higher return on invested money would scarcely account for an increase in the marketability of practically all grades of bonds. Nor would Mr. James J. Hill's epigrammatic inversion of this theory—"It is not the high cost of living but the cost of high living"—explain it any more satisfactory. No doubt the cost of high living as well as the high cost of living has resulted in the demand for securities yielding a higher return than formerly. Many investors who found an annual income of three or four thousand dollars sufficient in 1900 find themselves pinched on six thousand today. That would account for a decline in the demand for high-grade, low-earning bonds. But there is a large increase in the number of independently wealthy men and of institutions to whom, as investors, safety is of prime importance. In a measure, too, the necessity for a greater return has influenced the price of bonds, but not to the degree many people think. The principal reason is deeper than that. The vast increase in the natural production of gold and the available supply thereof is, in part, the reason for the high cost of living. One would think this would make money cheap. But it does not. Despite, yet in part because of, the increase in the gold supply, the price of money has increased.

The result? Ten years ago Toronto when it wanted money, could get it at 4 per cent, usually less. Toronto has grown materially. Since that date it has doubled in size, and yet its bonds are not easy to sell at better than on a 4.30 per cent basis. In the same ten years the price of money secured on sound mortgages has increased. The demand for money has grown very rapidly. As a result investors can now buy securities at prices to net considerably larger returns than even three or four years ago. It is a straight case of competition; the keen, general demand for money has increased its price, just as a keen competition between buyers on the Stock Exchange puts up the price of a certain stock. In the case of money there is only lacking the open market and the attendent excitement.

Dies in the Poor House

A Former Merchant Prince Passes Away on a Poor house Cot.

The people of Western Ontario were shocked a few days ago on reading in a comtemporary the announcement that a former "merchant prince" of K..... had died in the house of refuge, aged 77 years. In a short biographical sketch it was observed that he was the nephew of the late Senator ..... and about a quarter of a century ago was one of the big Dry Goods men of B..... That he should have passed away on a poor house cot is a sad but striking instance of the irony of fate. It was said that never being married, he was not ruined by the extravagance and ingratitude of his family, and that not being a drinker King Alcholo never played a part in his undoing. Never the less, the years came and he was relieved of his wealth, and wrecked in health and wrecked in fortune, he was obliged some two years ago to make the saddest of all trips "Over the hill to the Poor House."

What stronger example than the above could any man require or desire as to the desirability of a sale means of investment such as the Canadian Government's Annuity System, under which absolute sure provision may be made by every man, woman and child domiciled in Canada against want and old age and poverty? In his declining years, when his physical and mental powers may have failed, when in consequence he may be no longer able of earning a livelihood or of looking after his affairs, when perhaps all those near or dear to him have passed away, he will, if he has purchased a Government Annuity have the haunting fear of destitution in old age forever dispelled. That little messenger, his annuity cheque, will go to him every three months carrying with it comfort and happiness. It will be a sted fast friend. It will never desert him

CHAPTER IV.

As soon as she had turned the corner, Vera hailed a cabman and told him to drive to Little James street. All hesitation had left her, and as she tightly clutched the money in her hand, she was filled with wild exhilaration at the success which had so far come to her. She knew that the most difficult part had been accomplished, and she had no fear as to the future.

"Have you packed everything?" she said, as she eagerly entered the room.

"Yes," Hilda replied.

"We have just time to catch a train. Run down and look for a four-wheeler."

"But I must say good-bye to Seymour," Hilda answered protestingly.

"Isn't he in?"

"No."

"You must scribble a note. He can run down to see you. We aren't going to the end of the world.

Hilda did as she was bade, and Vera looked distastefully round the room.

It was not till they were driving to the station that Vera told her of their destination.

"I have decided to go to Bognor. We can stay at a hotel for a couple of days. I shall have to run up to town nearly every day, but you can hunt around for a cottage."

A sudden thought struck her.

"After all, we will wait for the next train," she cried.

She told the cabman to drive to a shop, where she took Hilda inside with her, and proceeded to order everything that they needed. For Hilda she bought a warm fur coat, that cost a goodly sum. In fact, she spent much more on her friend than she did on herself.

"You must not do it," Hilda said protestingly.

"If I can't buy you things I shall take no pleasure in my money," Vera answered firmly.

She succeeded in subduing Hilda's protests and during the journey she concocted the story as to how she had been left the money. She took quite a pride in its artistic touches, as she related the imaginary facts to her friend.

"Is it very much?" Hilda asked.

"More than I shall know how to spend, dear. But you will help me, won't you?"

"You are a generous darling; but I don't intend to impose upon you," Hilda said firmly.

Vera was torn by two desires—one to soothe her conscience by lavishing money upon the girl that she was deliberately robbing; while the other was to keep Hilda as much out of sight as possible. She hoped that she would find a cottage out of the beaten track, where she could bury her, so that there would be little chance of her coming into contact with anyone who knew her.

At Bognor they went to a small but comfortable hotel on the front, and both of them took a childish delight in donning their new purchases for dinner. The daintily cooked food, and the champagne which Vera insisted upon ordering, was such a pleasant change after the months of hardship which they had endured, that the meal became a merry one.

"I shall not go to town to-morrow, but shall stay here and look after you," Vera remarked as they went to their bedroom.

"I have ordered an open carriage," she continued as she warmed herself at the fire, "and we will go for a long drive."

The morning was perfect, and they were in the best of spirits when they took their seats in the landeau. They were thoroughly enjoying themselves when Hilda gave a sudden cry of admiration.

"Did you ever see anything so sweet?" she cried eagerly.

Vera told the coachman to stop, and they both alighted. They peeped over a rustic gate and away back from the road there lay a little cottage, a perfect picture with its thatched roof and small leaded windows.

"I believe it is empty," Hilda cried.

There was a paper in the window, and Vera approached to read it. They drove to the address given, and came back with the key.

"It might have been made for us, and only five shillings a week. Look at the fireplace, with its cosy-corner." Hilda said, and Vera smiled good-naturedly at her excitement.

A bargain was struck with the landlord, and when they returned to the hotel Hilda was the accepted tenant of Sunnycote.

"You will not be lonely," Vera remarked with a keen look.

"But you will be with me?"

"Not always. We will find some nice respectable woman to live with us. Then you will not have to waste time on housework. I believe you look better already."

"I feel better, dear. And it is you I have to thank."

Hilda took Vera's hand and squeezed it gently.

"There is nothing nicer than a real friend," she whispered tenderly.

"I must run up to town to-morrow. It will take them two or three days to get the cottage ready. Will you make out a list of the things which we shall want, and I will order them. We ought to be able to get into the cottage within a week."

"Just think of it. No worries—and the beautiful country to live in. It seems like a fairy story, for it is of what I have always dreamt."

"We shall be quite comfortable by Christmas; and we can burn real Christmas logs in that fireplace."

"Yes. And feed the birds. They shall have a Christmas-tree to themselves," Hilda said eagerly.

Vera caught an early train in the morning, first of all sending a wire to David Clay saying that she would call at the Hotel. The journey was a miserable one, for she had been so excited to think over the position, and it came as a sudden revelation, the enormity of her deception. She felt that she could not face the future and a wild desire seized her to go to David Clay and confess. But no. She would not give up, all this lay in her grasp, and she smothered her smouldering conscience.

Her first visit was to Little James Street for she wanted to arrange for the removal of the furniture, as she was anxious to obliterate all traces of their previous existence. She had just interviewed the landlady, when she saw Vaughan Seymour coming up the stairs.

"How is Hilda?" he asked eagerly.

"Better—much better. You must go down to see her," she replied pleasantly.

"I will and at once, for I have sold my book. Why shouldn't I take rooms somewhere near? The country is splendid for writing."

"The very thing. We will talk about it."

"By the bye—a gentleman called to see Hilda yesterday," he remarked casually.

"Who was it?" she demanded quickly.

"Here's his card."

She took it in her hand and mechanically read the name.

"Mr. Crawley Brann, Solicitor.

"What did he want?" she demanded fiercely, and Vaughan Seymour stared at her in surprise, as he noticed her unwonted agitation.

"He didn't tell me," he answered.

"Didn't he ask where I was?"

"It was Hilda that he wanted to see."

"Of course," she said hurriedly. "Did you say where she had gone?"

"No, for I didn't know then. What is the mystery?

Nothing—Nothing—It was probably the solicitor who has been threatening her with a summons. I naturally don't want her to be worried."

"I wish I had known. I would have kicked the brute down the stairs," he cried viciously.

"Didn't he ask any questions?" she insisted.

"He said it didn't matter," he answered.

She drew a quick breath of relief and the strained look left her eyes.

"I have taken a cottage near Bognor. We shall be settled there in a week," she said with a bright smile.

"Do you think I might take rooms near by?"

"I see no objection. Why don't you run down at once?" she suggested.

Vera was anxious to get him out of the way and she knew that he and Hilda would both be content as long as they were together.

"I will. You're a brick, Miss Stafford. You can't tell how pleased I am that you have come into this money. I am only glad it was not Hilda that was the fortunate one."

"Why?" she asked curiously.

"You don't think I am the sort of man that would marry a rich wife? No thank you."

"Is that a quotation of the sentiments of your latest hero?" It doesn't sound quite like real life," she said simply. "But there, I'm only teasing you. Pack up your traps, and go down at once. We are staying at the Pier Hotel but I don't think you had better go there. We must have a little respect for lay conveniences, even if we live in Bohemia."

With a cheerful nod she left him, and drove to the bank where she drew some money. From there she visited a fashionable dressmaker, and when she left even she was satisfied with the way she was dressed. She stopped at a jeweller's in Bond Street and proceeded to gratify her passion for glittering gems—rings, bracelets, and a small watch that was set with diamonds.

By one o'clock she had finished her shopping, and she strolled along Piccadilly to the Ritz Hotel where she asked for David Clay. She was evidently expected, for she was immediately conducted to his sitting-room.

GAME OF CHESS TYPIFIES LIFE

It is impossible to state just when and where chess was born. Back we may go in the ages, and we still find it existing. We see it painted on the Egyptian vases, and we find it in the Chinese books of wisdom. It has been ascribed to all sorts of birthplaces, its creator having been at times a man, at times a god. Nothing positive is known about it, yet the greatest probabilities seem to point to its having come from the East. It may be interesting to note just a few of the hypotheses surrounding its obscure birth.

John de Vigney assigned the invention to a Babylonian philosopher, Nerxes. Leneur attributes its origin to Chilo, the Spartan, one of the seven sages of Greece. Sir William Jones ascribes the invention of chess to Mars, and feels sure it originated from India. Gibbons says:—"To admonish kings that are strong only in the strength of their subjects, the same Indians invented the game of chess, which was likewise introduced into Persia during the reign of Nushirvan. An Indian philosopher thus describe chess:—"It is a representative contest, a bloodless combat, an image not only of actual military operation, but of that greater warfare which every son of the earth, from the cradle to the grave, is continually waging—the battle of life.' One sees clearly that, even going back to its birth, the parallelism between chess and men exists, for does anybody know just when, where and how the first man appeared on earth? Also, is it not a fact that man's attributes and natures have remained unchanged throughout centuries, and that chess was played much in the same way, each chessman moving in its allotted manner even 5,000 years ago?

According to Carrera, the principles of chess could be applied to the game of life. The board may be considered the field of life, chequered with good and evil on which man is to play his game and be rewarded according to his deserts. The pawns may be looked upon as representing those feelings which are first excited by circumstances and form barriers to those stronger passions which would be represented by the superior pieces. The castle, moving on the board in direct lines, represents that innate sense of justice pervading every human breast, which, however attacked when properly maintained cannot be conquered. The knight, eccentric in his movements, but regulated by fixed principles of action, portrays that feeling of honor which, deviating from the beaten course, seeks for adventures. By the walk of the bishop may be considered the relizious feeling which is continually crossed by the movements of ordinary life; as they never leave the color of the square they start from, they are typical of a firm faith. The queen typifies ambition, and the king, moving only one square at a time, while every direction is open to his choice, is highly characteristic of prudence. He seldom moves unless forced, shelters himself behind, and claims the succor of justice, honor, religion and ambition.

The Ex-May Queen.

"If the delegates seek me, mother,"
Said the lass with the keen blue eye,
"When the robin's song sounds sweet and strong
And the sun is in the sky
Don't bother to wake me, mother,
But send them along their way,
And make it quite plain, if they ask you again,
I don't care to be queen of the May.

"If they want me for sheriff, mother,
Or fireman or county clerk;
If the public choice bids me lift my voice
To help in convention work,
You may ring the bell for me, mother,
But otherwise simply say
To the friends I've known, but have quite outgrown
I don't care to be queen of the May."

"Yes, we cater to the tired business man."

But does the tired business man get all this consideration when he goes to the ball park? No, he sits on the hard benches and roots like the rest of us. The Tired Business Man is a myth.

CIPHER MESSAGES.

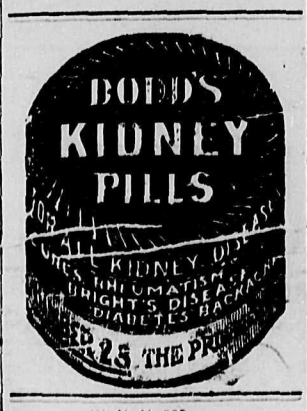
Rules That Will Help an Amateur to Read the Riddles.

Writing in cipher, where letters or figures or characters, grotesque or otherwise, are used to form the words, while it may look formidable to the uninitiated is really not difficult to solve if one will tackle it with care and patience.

The proper way to set about reading an unknown cipher is to find the letter or figure that occurs oftenest. This is sure to be "e," as "e" is by far the commonest letter in the language. The second commonest is "t," and if you find a three letter or three figure batch often of which the last is "e" and the first "t" the middle letter or figure is sure to stand for "h." Any letter or figure standing alone must, on clear reasoning, be "I" or "o" or "a."

The second commonest three letter word in a message of any length is sure to be "and," which gives you three more letters for addition to the alphabet.

Remembering that the commonest doubles are "ee," "oo" and "ff" (in the order given) and the commonest two letter words are "be," "by," "or," "as," "at" and "an" (in the order given), a person should be able to solve almost any cipher message.



Western Independence

When you hear that the west is growing independent or the east you can set it down as a fact," said the drummer who had come in from beyond the Mississippi.

"What's the yarn," was asked by the hotel clerk.

"Oh, not a long one. Just shows you that a Western man doesn't have to lean on the crowd for his bread and butter. In a Nebraska town I asked the innkeeper the way to a barber shop. He not only had one in the place, but he shaved me himself. Then I told him I thought of having some card photos taken. He took me up under the roof and worked the camera in first-class shape.

"Sure I wanted a license, and as Mayor, he issued it. I wanted a horse and buggy, and as a livery stable man he hired them to me. I had an old tooth, and as a dentist he yanked it out."

"But he stopped there?"

"Almost. He filled a pulpit Sunday, did some blacksmithing Monday, began painting the schoolhouse Tuesday, and when I left Wednesday he was holding court as justice of the peace. When you want to find independence, go west, young man."—St Louis Times.

"Good afternoon, doctor!" he began gushingly. "By the way, I know, a man who is suffering agonies from neuralgia. At times it is so bad he simply howls with the pain. What would you do in that case?"

"Well, I don't know," was the doctor's prompt reply; "I suppose I should howl with pain, too."

Longest Span Bridge

It is claimed for the new double-deck bridge which is now nearly completed across the Missouri river at Kansas City that it is the longest span riveted bridge as yet constructed, the length of the main span being 425 feet. The striking novelty of the structure is the fact that the lower platform can be raised against the floor by means of power-operated cables, drums and concrete counterweights. The vertical travel of the platform is 46 feet, and it is raised and lowered by two 250 horse-power motors.

Old Use and Worn

Gen. Marion Maus has a keen and delicate taste in literature, and at a recent dinner at Vancouver Barracks discussing a popular novel of little worth, Gen. Maus said:—

"The pathos of the book is really bathos. It reminds me of a private's widow. The good woman was about to sell her husband's furniture, her rugs, plated ware, and what not. As she was going over these articles her eyes filled with tears, a host of memories rose to her mind, and laying aside a half-dozen knives, she said:—"Oh, dear! I can't let these go! They've been in poor George's mouth too often!"

The Grasping Salt

"Capt. Salt once behaved with considerable heroism in a collision at sea, and his company wished to present him with a gold watch. Accordingly Salt was invited to a board meeting, and there, in a luxurious, room on the thirteenth story of a skyscraper, amid a throng of millionaires with white side whiskers, a superb gold watch was duly presented to the mariner in a neat speech.

"And how did Capt. Salt receive that beautiful watch? He took it in his big red hand, frowned, and said:

"Where's the chain that goes with it?"

REAL VALUE OF PLAY.

A Brief Period Snatched From the Regular Routine Aids Health.

Self improvement societies that have tried to find the best way to live have never discovered anything more valuable than play, says Collier's Weekly. A man may shake up a continent by his energy or build kingdoms by his brains, but so far as his personal life is concerned he has been a failure if he has not learned to play.

Play, of course, is not confined to games. It may be a walk in the woods, a row upon the river, a sail upon the lake. To some making a garden is play, as to others is chopping wood. To play is to follow the irresponsible inclination which gives the most pleasure with the least mental strain and bodily wear.

Ideal play is a brief period of care free living snatched from the regular routine. It is enjoying the pleasure of being alive; it is absorbing from the earth and air and sun without conscious effort. More and more we are trying to teach the children how to play, but we do not know how ourselves. Before us always is the bogy of wasting time, and the devil of disease, old age, misery and failure never invented a falser bogy. We send our children to the public playground and go on ourselves getting soggy and heavy and gloomy and nervous.

Like One of the Family

Tibble had been placed by her aunt in a situation as maid of all work in a family of three. At the end of the week the aunt "stepped along in" to see how Tibble was getting on.

"Do you like your work?" asked the aunt.

"'Tis fair," said the laconic Tibble.

"And are they making you feel at home?"

"Whiles the are, and whiles they aren't."

"Now, what do you be meaning by that?" asked the aunt, impatiently.

"Aweel," said Tibble, "they have na asked me to gang t' kirk wi' them yet, but last night they went on wi' a grand quarrel they were having, all the three o' them, wi' me takking the dishes off o' the table, jist as if I had been one o' the family."

Artificial Sponge

The manufacture of artificial sponge is based on the action of zinc chloride on pure celluloise, which has been mixed with pure rock salt. This mass is subjected to pressure by a press, provided with pins which serve to pierce through the mass, thus making tiny canals, looking very much like the pores of the natural sponge. It is mashed very thoroughly in a weak solution of alcohol to remove the excess of salts. This sponge swells up with water and hardens on drying just like the genuine article. It is especially adapted for filtering drinking water, but it can be used for all purposes to which the natural product is applied.

Baby's Own Tablets are as good as a doctor in the house. They never fail to relieve the little one from stomach and bowel troubles, to expel worms, make teething easy and promote healthful sleep. Concerning them, Mrs. J. H. Turner, Glenora, Ont., says: "I always recommend Baby's Own Tablets to my friends. I have used them for a long time, and find them without an equal. They relieved baby of the feverishness and have made her one of the most healthy babies there is. I always keep them in the house and consider them as good as a doctor.' Conditions in Japan

That the old customs of Japan are passing away and the empire is rapidly becoming civilized, and, more slowly, Christianized, is not borne out by the fact, for the dark side of Japan is turned aside by those who visit there. A writer in the Missionary Intelligences, of Cincinnati, long a resident in Fukushima says: "Idolatry still prevails. The tenacity with which they cling to the family gods in some homes supposed to be Christian shows that idolatrous customs have a strong hold on them. Here in Japan the divorce rate is three times as high as in America, and then not all the separations are counted. The people are woefully addicted to the use of liquor and tobacco. All the cars are smokers. When we ride in the train we are stifled by the tobacco smoke. A lot of women smoke as well as the men. There is much drunkenness. Japan also heads the list of nations in regard to the number of suicides."

Sleeping Sickness

A French doctor, M. A. Lafont, who has been studying the insects which are supposed to carry sleeping sickness, reports to the Biological Society of Paris that, whilst working in the British dependencies in the Indian British Mauritius and Reunion, his attention was called to the reduvidae bugs, especially a large bug which attacks man, and is called by the natives "Maupin" or 'Morpin.' The first of these was caught in a native bed, where it had just bitten a child. Afterwards the natives found him several specimens, and in the intestinal canals of almost all he found trypanosomes, the organisms that causes sleeping sickness. The Sleeping Sickness Bulletin for April states that this observation should be of special interest for India, especially Madras, for Dr. Donovan has there found an exactly similar form of organism in the same bug, which he has proved to feed on human blood.

His Handicap

"The greatest bandmaster I ever knew," says the man with the ashes on his vest, "was a little, slim, bald-headed, smooth-faced fellow named John Smith. As a band leader he made all these famous ones look like hopeless amateurs."

"I never heard of him," argues the man with the reversible tie.

"Of course you didn't. Nor did anybody else. Didn't I just say that he was a little, slim, balded-headed, smoth-faced fellow and that his name was John Smith?"

In London

"I fear you are losing interest in the cause."

"Why?"

"I see you constantly with a young man."

"No danger," declared the militant suffragette.

"Then he is not your beau?"

"No, he's a professional bondsman."

The Call

Wife—You know that Mrs. Newcomb moved in down the street Monday, so I called to-day.

Hub—Well, well! How like poker this "social game" is.

Wife—How do you mean?

Hub—Why, in poker you also call when you want to see what the other person has.

"We heiresses have many rivals for our hands." "Yes," replied Miss Cayenne, "you must feel as if the pathway of life were filled with pocketbook snatchers."—Washington Star.

A Parlor Diet

Mother Goose tells of the queen who sat in the parlor eating bread and honey. And no wonder, if butter was as high as it is now.—Milwaukee Free Press.

"Do you think Miss Chatter is an entertaining talker?" "Oh, my, yes. She can entertain herself for hours at a time."—Boston Transcript.
