Insurance men bemoan federal tax measures

ALDERGROVE - Four local insurance agents have sent a letter to federal finance minister Allan MacEachen in which they state their "concern about another most serious and savage blow to middle and lower income people who provide the framework of our democratic society."

Wayne Wald, Dwayne Bennett, Dale Wald and Colin Cohoe of the Protectors Insurance Inc. say the insurance industry deals with "the very heart and soul of Canadian lives (as) we see daily the love expressed in a father planning for his family's future in providing shelter, food, clothing and dignity based on self reliance and pride.

"To encourage further potential dependence on government welfare rolls and accentuate the plight of hundreds of thousands of people trying to avoid poverty by preplanning against the disastrous effects of the breadwinner's premature death, disability or inability to save for retirement is abhorent and disgraceful and contrary to the right of freedom we have to plan our futures."

The letter urges MacEachen to "withdraw these ill-planned, harsh and unreasonable budget proposals as they apply to the ordinary Canadian and the future of Canada."

Snow fell heavily in the lower mainland area Sunday. It was great for the kids, but less appreciative were motorists who had to adjust to the new driving conditions. Between Aldergrove and the Port Mann area many cars hit the ditches less than half an hour after the storm began.

B.C. debt to increase

VICTORIA - The British Columbia debt of nearly $8-billion will double within the next five years, government figures show.

A prospectus filed by the government-owned B.C. Hydro and Power Authority with the United States Securities and Exchange Commission shows that, as of March 31, B.C. had a debt of $7.9-billion.

It also shows that the province will borrow a further $9.59-billion, or about $3,600 per capita, by the fiscal 1985-86.

And, testimony by Hydro in its application for an energy project certificate for the Peace Site C dam project shows that the utility alone will have to borrow $14.7-billion between 1985-86 and 1990-1991 and will have a total debt of $25-billion.

Opposition leader Dave Barrett says the provincial debt already has almost doubled since the Social Credit government took office in 1975.

He also notes that one of Premier Bill Bennett's favorite sayings is that his government "would never put the future in debt."

Former finance minister Dave Stupich said recently he is not against borrowing for the future, particularly in Hydro's case because the crown corporation is building for the future.

However, he said he is concerned about the government pretending to be operating on a break-even basis "when we're borrowing $25-billion for one crown corporation alone."

"So it's ridiculous, we're not operating on a pay-as-you-go basis, we're borrowing for many of the things we're doing. And they've created several new crown corporations to take some of the borrowing out of the budget and they're talking about more."

The prospectus shows that Hydro plans to borrow $1.7-billion next year. Other borrowings will include $51-million for the Urban Transit Authority, B.C. Place and Transpo 86, $343-million for health and education and $176-million for other crown corporations such as B.C. Railway, for a total for the year of $1.6-billion.

Finance minister Hugh Curtis in his March budget speech noted that B.C. had on Dec. 31 a guaranteed debt of $7.8-billion. This included $5.4-billion for Hydro, $662-million for BCR, $21.5-million for B.C. Cellulose, $782-million for schools, $104-million for colleges, $439-million for hospitals, $167-million for the B.C. Development Corp., $43-million for B.C. Place, $20-million for transit and $19-million for municipalities.

Langley to re-assert opposition to dump

MURRAYVILLE - Langley district residents do not want a giant garbage dump just outside Fort Langley, and local politicians do not want it either.

Greater Vancouver regional district officials, however, seem to be of a different opinion, and although very low-key on the issue they are nevertheless still pushing for that great landfill site at Derby which was intended to serve all of metropolitan Vancouver.

Last week district council here voted unanimously to send a letter to GVRD engineer Doug MacKay in which they would point out that the regional board might as well forget about the Langley site.

"It is a protective measure," said mayor Bill Blair.

Council will also inquire of the GVRD whether or not Langley district would be expected to contribute towards drainage schemes on the Nicomekl and Serpentine rivers in Surrey if they were to join the Greater Vancouver sewerage and drainage district.

A WORLD OF HARMONY

By BOB WENMAN

Soon 1981 will be over, ending a year of great difficulty for many Canadians.

We have had to endure record high interest rates, high inflation and unemployment, a long and unnecessary postal strike, a constitutional debate which threatened to tear this country apart. We have been presented with a budget which is totally inadequate for our current economic situation and the specter of separation, both in Quebec and the West hangs over our country like a grey cloud.

Internationally we have seen dangerous Soviet intervention in Afghanistan and Poland; the Middle East is threatening to explode; we witnessed the assassination of a courageous man of peace, Anwar Sadat; people are dying of hunger everyday in Africa and atrocities are being committed everyday in Central America.

Socially, divorce is at epidemic proportions, families are breaking up, crime rates are up and suicide is the second leading cause of death among our young people.

All of this causes me to pause and reflect on where our country is going. What type of society are we leaving for our children and grandchildren? I look at my children and wonder, will they be able to live comfortable and secure lives, or will they be forced to pick up the pieces of a fractured country and culture where every person views his neighbor with distrust and the simple pleasures of the past will no longer exist.

When I reflect on these problems, my initial reaction is that the problems are too great, too long ignored for them to be solved. However, on further reflection, I look at the obstacles our forefathers have overcome in the past. Seemingly insurmountable barriers have been broken down and I sincerely believe we can continue to do so. I have great confidence in the inner fabric and moral tenacity of all Canadians.

Our country has problems, the world has problems. But by working together and cooperating, we can overcome these problems and leave our children a world of peace, prosperity and harmony. We must allow common sense and reason to prevail.

When everything is said and done, Canada is still a beautiful place to live and I believe with hard work and dedication, it will be an even better place to live in the future.

Mr. Wenman is Progressive Conservative member of Parliament for Fraser Valley West.

FOR COMMON GOOD

By CAM MUNRO

As we approach the New Year, the present economic situation is not very positive nor do I read where the experts are forecasting a very bright picture for 1982. This together with the high interest rates, people being laid off from their employment, and the increase in the cost of living, is placing a heavy burden on all of us as citizens of this community.

I believe that in such times one can expect an increase in property and person crimes, and while we as your local police will continue to do our jobs in a professional and efficient way, I again stress the importance of the citizens and the police working together on a daily basis to ensure that the community in which we live is a safe one.

We at the Langley detachment of the RCMP thank you, the citizens, for your support in 1981 and look forward to working closely with you in 1982.

Inspector Munro is officer in charge of the Langley RCMP detachment.

1982, GOD'S YEAR

By H. PAUL SCHMIDT

The year 1982! To leave an old year behind and enter into a new year is a gift. We have new time, new opportunities and new space. We can bring the things of last year into the new year or we can make new beginnings.

There are some givens. We are the same people tomorrow in 1982 as we were a few days ago in 1981. The world situation still moves from crisis to crisis. Certainly we are concerned about the economic future of Aldergrove and vicinity.

But we can enter 1982 with hope and expectation. Yes, hopes and expectations, even as we tighten our belts and as we share the trouble in the world. The reason is that God is in control of history. It is not the toy of mere chance, or of stellar formations, or of numerical combinations. God is in control of 1982!

God is actively involved in the day-to-day, the second-to-second, activity of his world. In 1982 no bird shall die, no hair fall from one's head (for some of us that's fairly often) without him being fully aware of what is happening. God is a God of history. Every part of it! He showed this in a very special way when he sent his son, Jesus, the Christ, to be born into this world in which you and I live. As we have celebrated his birth just a few days ago on Christmas, the songs and sermons and decorations of this season told also of his cross and crucifixion. God was so involved in history that he experienced the death we all face. But his good news is that even when one experiences the final act of death, it is not the end, but a beginning of a new life with the arisen Jesus Christ.

To say that God is in control of history sounds terrible when we see the pain, problems and suffering all around us. Does he cause this? No, in fact he is the God who assures us that these evils, or even death, are not the final word. He is the one who sees us through the trouble, helps us and enters into our history to change evil into good.

The new year, 1982! It is my hope and prayer that in the midst of belt-tightening, of world crisis, and of personal stress, that the people of our community will look deeper into the meaning of their lives in 1982. May you see the caring and guiding hand of God in all that you experience. And may your life show forth the glory of the God who loves you and made you to exist.

Quaker makes rare comment on new constitution

By GARY CHAMBERS

ALDERGROVE - A local Quaker has relayed to The Star a few of his misgivings about Canada's proposed new constitution.

To understand the gravity of this occurrence, one must first learn a little bit about Quakers.

The religious movement was founded in the mid 1600's in England by a man named George Fox, and fought almost impossible odds to survive and grow. The religion is based on the idea that there is "that of God in every man", and therefore, by following this inner light or divine spirit one can discover true belief and righteous conduct without the help of clergymen.

The earliest Quakers met with much persecution because their belief prevented them from paying tithes to churches, removing their hats before royalty or endulging in the extravagent fashions of the time. Many were imprisoned, but even under those circumstances the religion continued to grow.

When they fled to North America in search of a place to practice their passive lifestyles, they met with even more persecution. Quakers were beaten, hanged, jailed and chased from town to town, until they finally found some refuge in Rhode Island and Pennsylvania.

Once settled, the Quakers began to earn the respect of their fellow North Americans. They were early opponents of slavery, providing cover for escaping slaves before the American civil war.

In later years they were often the subject of controversy during periods of war. Most Quakers refuse to have anything to do with war, and those who do participate generally serve only in support roles such as the medical corps. In fact, the man who relayed his constitutional remarks to The Star came to Canada during the Viet Nam war, because Quakers even to this day are not granted conscientious objector status in the U.S.A.

The Quakers are probably one of the lowest profile religions in the entire Christian spectrum. They shun devices such as telephones and television sets and avoid taking stands on matters of politics. They feel that it is up to God to direct the affairs of Earth, and they see their duty as simply looking for peace and contentment from within.

It is almost unheard of for a Quaker to make a statement to a newspaper, since this is seen as an infringement on the realm of God. By the same token, however, Quakers generally feel a deep responsibility to the social well being of their fellow man and will, therefore, sometimes offer their thoughts on request.

The Star made contact with the local Quaker through a third party. His comments came to us second hand, and therefore, are not direct quotations. He gave his name but requested that it be left out of the story.

Our third party contact, a local beef rancher, said he has known the man for some years now. He is about thirty years old and his family stretches back through 12 generations of Quaker belief.

Our contact describes the man as very quiet spoken, passive and extremely well read.

"I value his views and insights on these matters," said the rancher before relaying the man's remarks.

The Quaker said that one of his main concerns is the ambiguity of the new constitution were certain rights or liberties are concerned. One case in point is the fact that the new document fails to give Canadians the legal right to hold land. It leaves land ownership up to provincial legislatures.

It is natural that he would find this disturbing. Quakers enjoy a close relationship with the land. When threatened or driven from their farms, many Quakers have refused to fight, but have stood their ground and often taken beatings while watching their homes reduced to ashes.

The Quaker pointed out that land ownership is firmly ingrained in the American constitution, which he sees as one of its few strong points.

He is also concerned over the fact that the new Canadian charter of rights is full of ambiguity. The charter permits provincial governments to do anything they please, regardless of the constitution. The same is true of the passages that deal with resource management. The Quaker interprets the constitution to mean that any federal legislation on resource matters can be overruled by provincial acts.

He cautions, however, that he has not had a chance to study all of the amendments as they now stand.

By way of clarification, we would offer that the amendments do give the federal government the upper hand in resource management conflict, but the day-to-day management of the nation's resources is in the hands of the provinces, true enough.

Overall, the Quaker feels that the ambiguities and exemptions to the civil liberties and resource management sections of the constitution actually serve to replace the BNA Act with a "Non-constitution".

He feels strongly that a bill of rights should entrench and protect our civil rights under the law, and he feels the new constitution fails to do this.

Finally, he has formed the view that the new document serves to alienate the western provinces even more than the BNA Act did.

As we have said, Quakers seldom offer their opinions publicly on any subject, so it is unlikely you will hear or read any further comment from this man. In view of that we consider it a privilege to print his views here, and out of respect of his beliefs, we urge readers not to take his word or ours for gospel, but to write their MP and ask for a full copy of the new Canadian constitution so that they can read it for themselves.

Where has all the money gone?

By JOHN GORMAN

It's time for a little quiz to see if we can figure out what happened to all the money.

In the weeks since September 1, the federal government has reached agreement with the governments of Alberta, British Columbia and Saskatchewan on natural and crude oil pricing for the next five years.

By the terms of the agreements, the Canadians will pay more and more for gasoline at the pump and more and more for home heating fuels.

What is happening to the money?

A good question. And the answer? It is being creamed off by governments in taxes and royalties.

The people of Canada were told that if they paid higher prices for crude oil and refined products, more money would be available to the oil industry to continue its search in Canada for additional supplies of crude oil, and that eventually self-sufficiency would be achieved.

But what happened to the money?

It has not wound up in the hands of the oil industry - in fact, in many cases the oil industry is getting less revenue now than it was before the pricing agreements were struck.

Federal and provincial governments said, after the agreements were signed, that the oil industry would receive about $10-billion in additional revenues over the five-year life of the agreement.

What happened to the $10-billion?

Oil company economists, accountants and other interested parties have searched everywhere in the system for that money, and so far have come up empty.

Should the people of Canada be concerned about what happened to the additional money they are being asked to pay for crude oil and refined products?

It appears to be a reasonable concern, since they were told it would be used for one purpose and it is being used for something entirely different.

Do Canadians feel that the self-sufficient goal is important enough to permit changes to the agreements which have been reached since September 1, and to provisions of the National Energy Program (NEP) which precede them? They should.

The National Energy Board estimates that the NEP would have created a crude oil shortage of about 600,000 barrels per day in 1990, the year in which the NEP had predicted self-sufficiency.

The federal-provincial pricing agreements have done nothing to improve the situation and in some cases have made it worse.

Another way to look at it is to remind you that 1981 field activity has taken a giant step backward to the levels of 1977 when there were about 6,000 wells drilled in Canada.

What we have been given is a crude-oil pricing schedule which is adequate to meet investment requirements to achieve self-sufficiency and to influence the companion goals of conservation and alternate fuels substitution.

But the money has been diverted to other purposes, and one way or another the federal government has perpetuated its commitment to paying out at least $15-million a day to subsidize the cost of imported crude oil from the Middle East and other oil producing regions of the world.

The people of Canada ought to be concerned. They are paying for one thing and they're getting something else. And they've been shortchanged in the process.

Paper price up $40 a tonne

VANCOUVER - The price of newsprint will increase sharply by $40 per tonne effective December 1, 1981, according to a release from McMillan Bloedel Limited, largest producers in B.C.

This is the third increase this year and brings the price to $556 per tonne - up a full $100 per tonne since last December.

The firm cites "an exchange rate adjustment" as reason for the increase noting the recent weakening in the Canadian dollar and the fact that newsprint is sold world wide with the exception of Canada in U.S. dollars.

"Even with this adjustment, net mill returns on Canadian sales will remain significantly lower than those derived from the world price," says the release.

The newsprint producers were hit by a costly strike this summer.

Edwards had a vision

By LLOYD PHILLIPS

An old saying has it that prophets are not honored in their own lands and, in the light of developments in Canada over the past few years, the prophecies of an early day journalist may be of interest.

The early day journalist was none other than Bob Edwards, publisher of several newspapers in Alberta, the most renowned of which was the "Calgary Eye-opener," through which Edwards became at once hated and liked.

In or about 1908, he published an item which has proven somewhat prophetic and which is published below, with our comments in brackets:

"Mustapha Sweeney Bey, the prophet of Hootch, Alberta, sends in the following weird stuff: 'Take heed that you be not deceived, for many shall come in the name of democracy and say the time of liberty draweth near.

"Go ye not therefore after them.

"Faction shall rise against faction, and province against province, and great riots shall be in the land, and famines and floods. (Quebec?)

"Food shall be stored by men in high places and doled out to the hungry at huge profits. (The coffee cartel?)

"Pestilence shall flow in the wake of famine; but be ye content, for your peers of yesterday are today robed in purple and fine linen. (Senators?)

"But before all these things, they shall lay hands on you and persecute you.

"They shall protect the wealthy and him that is of high degree that he may increase, and shall take from him that hath little even all that he hath. (The enormous bank profits vs those losing their homes?)

"Railways shall be granted permission to augment their tolls beyond equity and delay cars without reason, but the poor must treble his tax for demurrage. (The B.C. rail rates and shortage of grain hoppers?)

"Be not disturbed, for when all this is away from you taken, the grafters shall cease their robbing.

"You shall be taken before kings and judges, and, if your offence be trivial, your punishment shall be the greater, but rulers and knights shall be exempted and those who have seized your resources shall by the sovereign be honored. (Gerald Bouey gets medal for raising interest rates.)

"And you shall be betrayed, both by parents and brethren and kinsfolk and friends, and they shall turn thy land to traitors on promise of spoils to be shared. (Removal of farm land from the ALR in B.C.?)

"Ye shall be hated by all men for your independence, but there shall not a hair of your head perish. (Editors, take note)

"In your patience, possess ye your souls. And when ye shall see Ottawa compassed with looters, then ye know that the desolation thereof is nigh. (The airport shop scandal?)

"Then let them that are in Canada not flee to the mountains and let them that are in the midst of it not depart out. (West Fed?)

"For these be the days of vengeance, and all wrongs shall be righted. (The Ottawa-Alberta oil deal?)

"But woe unto them that are sick these days, for there shall be great distress in the land, for profiteers shall rise in all quarters, and extort to the utmost farthing. (Doctors threaten service refusal, and the rentalsman is busy)

"There shall be signs in the sun, and upon the earth, distress of nations, with perplexity. Men's hearts failing for fear and for looking after those things which are coming on earth. (Nuclear war?)

"Then shall they see Liberty, coming with power and great glory.

"But be ye steadfast for your country; spare not to drive the enemy from your gates, knowing well that when he shall be destroyed, ye shall have time to put your house in order. (President Reagan's creed?)

"And when these things have come to pass, then look up and lift your heads for your redemption draweth nigh."

Now is the season

By JEANE BLEEKER

If ever you and I needed faith
Now is the season for believing
Christ the Child came just for us
We poor dejecteds accept as true
Faith shall free us yet
If ever you and I needed hope
Now is the season for much light
Joyful tidings bear humble renewal
Mankind the world over is worthy
Of promises that Jesus made
If ever you and I needed trust
Now is the season for alms-giving
Some silver coins fill empty bowls
Blessed are the kind and beneficent
To trust that Jesus too gives
If ever you and I needed peace
Now is the season for such wisdom
Christ the Child came just in time
With deeds of love and hope for joy
Peace shall be with us.

A rose by any other name

By BRUCE PEPPER

It was the immortal bard who said that 'a rose by any other name would smell as sweet'. Now maybe it would - but who would even want to get close if its name were skunkwort?

What something is called often indicates an opinion behind the name. We are reminded of this when reading the latest federal budget. We see some of the basic philosophy of the government peeking through once again.

Behind the obvious - and well-documented - intention to even out some disparities in the tax structure there lies a deeper and more subtle motive.

It could be argued that the taxing of some employee benefits is justified and that the 'perks' of business life often go to those who can best afford to pay for them. In fact, these 'perks' are an addition to the salary and most people, though not happy, are not objecting to them becoming taxable.

But is the budget truly fair and non-discriminatory? A company car - a taxable benefit, yes? An interest free or low interest loan for housing - a benefit? Or is it in many locations, an absolute necessity to attract and maintain the workforce? Discounted travel fares as a taxable benefit? Maybe! What about the daily bottle of beer for the brewery workers? A daily newspaper for the pressmen? Where does it stop? Can we really believe that the budget was painstakingly written to end all discrimination or is 1984 approaching faster than we think? Are we being faced with the reality of that Orwell classic when "All pigs are equal but some pigs are more equal than others"?

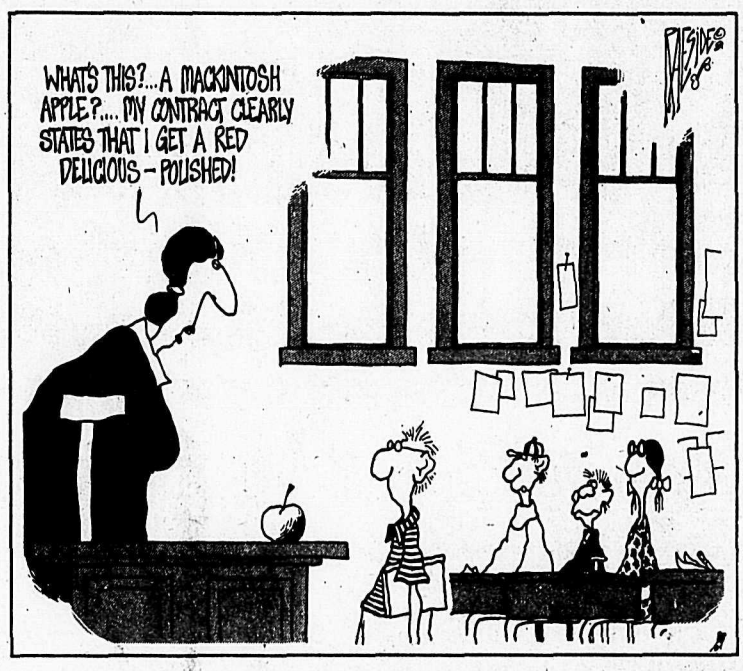
The question of discriminatory practices is bothersome but it is not the principal point. Far more disturbing is the government's new dictum which prevents many of the costs of investment money from being deductible for tax purposes. The effect of this will stem the flow of funds needed to develop Canadian natural resources and industries - and that flow was barely adequate to start.

Must we believe that this government, pretending to favor the entrepreneurial spirit, wants to deter Canadians from investments which are needed both in the industrial sector of the economy and in housing? Must we believe that this government, declaring itself in favor of Canadianization of its industry, now proposes to stop Canadians from doing exactly that? In fact, in many cases, forcing sell-out by Canadians to foreign investors?

We find this move much more disturbing than the smaller discriminations which, in this imperfect world, are bound to exist. What makes us so sure that this investment curb is not an accidental byproduct of an imperfect budget is the minister of finance's use of the word 'loophole'. This was applied, in one case, to government legislation in place and designed to encourage housing development through the use of MURBS. The name does count, Mr. MacEachen; your true colors are showing. You seem to regard tax deferral and planning of any kind as wicked and you are out to save our souls.

We're sorry, we are unrepentant sinners. We entered into investment under legal rules and regulations. You may force us to liquidate at bargain basement prices but in doing so you will stop the very developments which this country so badly needs.

There is another way. For instance, MURBS could be reinstated, beyond a transitional period, but who will run the risk of investing again and then, possibly, facing cut-offs at the next federal budget? If spending for investment in one's own economy is made unprofitable and apparently immoral, may we suggest to MacEachen that he set an example and curb the spending habits of the federal government? A little less government might be good for us all - we have more than we can afford now.



The taxman cometh

By ROGER WORTH

Even though a few changes have been made, fallout from finance minister Allan MacEachen's devastating budget continues to wend its way across the country like a plague.

While the effect of the budget's 163 technical provisions was bad enough, Revenue Canada has now decided to up the ante, attempting to tax individuals for every conceivable benefit they receive from employers. This crackdown has little to do with the budget measures, but it's going to create havoc for businesses large and small.

The reason: employers will be forced to handle the reams of additional supervision, paperwork and accounting as they try to please the tax department.

To add insult to injury, the tax collectors still haven't defined what is, and isn't, a taxable employee benefit.

For example: Should employees who received a Christmas turkey pay personal income tax on the value of the bird? Should an individual who works in an air conditioned office - something many workers don't have - be charged tax on the "luxury?"

While employee discounts on goods produced or sold by many companies has become a national tradition, the tax collectors now want to tax these benefits. But at what value? And who still do the bookwork?

The value of subsidized meals at company cafeterias are also on the hit list. But who will keep track of whether an employee uses the service two days a week, five days a week, or not at all? This one could become an administrative nightmare for employers.

The list goes on and on, and has the potential to dramatically change healthy employer-employee relationships.

What the tax collectors don't mention in their far reaching measures is the additional paperburden cost to business, and the number of new RevCan civil servants that will be required to police the system. That, of course, is a price we will all pay.

The lower the morale, the harder to cure

By CLAUDE BRUNEAU

TROIS RIVIERS, QUE. - The media are reporting daily on the deterioration of Canada's economy. And nowhere do we see signs of a real capacity on the part of governments - particularly the federal government, whose main responsibility it is - to take control of the situation.

No matter how inhuman the organization of the economy, it can be likened to a sick person: The lower the morale, the harder it is to cure the illness. A person needs some kind of hope to function well. The government has given our economy no such hope, as demonstrated by finance minister Allan MacEachen's latest budget. A kind of fatalism has begun to pervade the scene.

Last week, Statistics Canada published its third-quarter figures for 1981. The gross national product had dropped abruptly during July, August and September. It was down one percentage point, the sharpest drop in 30 years.

The Conference Board of Canada, meanwhile, has predicted that 1982 will be bleak indeed. Canadians will continue to live with high interest rates. Energy costs will climb by about 20 percent. Unemployment will increase...

Another report published last week outlines the increase in bankruptcies in Quebec...A pretty drastic deterioration in just three months.

At this stage of the proceedings it is traditional to loudly call upon the government to remedy the situation as quickly as possible.

But what's the use? If the government knows how to solve our problems, we fail to see why it doesn't do so. And if the government has no idea how to solve our problems, we doubt that it would ever admit it.

Hutterite colony has flourished

By BRAD ZIEMER

FORT SASKATCHEWAN, Alta. - From a distance, the farm is not unlike the many others that dot the fertile prairie northeast of Edmonton.

A cluster of large and small buildings can be seen, men on tractors work the fields and range cattle feed off the vast grassland.

Only on closer inspection does it become evident that this farm is different.

Women in dark, ankle-length dresses, their heads covered by kerchiefs, sweep sidewalks and hang laundry. Bearded men in conservative black clothing work on a drainage ditch with the aid of a backhoe.

Apart from the modern machinery, these people appear to be from another century. In a way, they are.

This is the Hutterian Brethern Church of Scotford, 102 men, women and children who have farmed 3,250 hectares near Fort Saskatchewan since 1953.

Like all of Alberta's estimated 7,200 Hutterites, the Scotford colony live and work on their farm, only leaving to buy supplies or visit a doctor or dentist.

GROW OWN FOOD

"All we have to buy is sugar, coffee, salt and pepper," says Rev. John Hofer, the colony's religious leader. "we grow all the rest, so there's no need to leave. We are the separate people of the world."

Hofer, now 78 and nearly blind, immigrated to Canada in 1918 and lived on a colony in southern Alberta before establishing Scotford. In the years since, he has seen the Hutterites, a pacifist, communalist, Christian sect, with about 30,000 members, mostly in North America, slowly become accepted by the rest of the population.

"When we came to Canada 95 percent of the people were against us," he says. "Now 95 percent are for us."

Hofer says he thinks his people have finally found a home in Canada, after centuries of religious persecution since the 400-year-old nonconformist Protestant sect was established in Germany.

"Things are better now. We are happy. We can get along with anyone."

REJECT BAPTISM

The Hutterites, like the Mennonites, the Old Order Amish and the Swiss Anabaptists arose from the Protestant Reformation. Their doctrines reject traditional infant baptism and embraces the idea of voluntary church groups.

While the colony's residents live in simple but neat row houses and dress the same way they did when the sect was established, the farm itself is furnished with the most modern equipment.

The colony's 100 dairy cows are milked in a fully automatic dairy barn, the 10,000 chickens are housed in a sophisticated barn and several expensive combines and tractors are used to farm the land, 2,000 hectares of which the colony owns.

Hofer says up-to-date machinery is a necessity because only 26 men work full-time farming the land. Much of the winter is spent overhauling the machinery, helping keep the colony's overhead costs down.

The Scotford residents eat in a communal dining hall, men at one table, women at another, seated in order of age. The children dine at another table. Only the elderly take their meals in their homes.

The children are raised by their parents, but at the age of three they begin to spend most of the day with a teacher who instructs them in a German dialect used only by the Hutterites.

ENGLISH COMES LATER

At age six, the children start public school in a one-room school house on the colony where they begin to learn English.

Although Hofer doesn't like to discuss it, some young men defect to try life on the outside. But most return.

"A lot of guys leave but they come back with very few exceptions," says Chuck Hobart, a University of Alberta sociology professor.

Hobart says most return because "it's a cold, cruel world out there."

"On the colony you know everyone and you have no worries. They soon discover it's not like that on the outside."

When a defector returns, he has to make a "public confession of what he did in the sinful world," and is shunned by the rest of the colony for a short period.

"But once that's over, it's forgive and forget," Hobart says. "The fact he went off isn't held against him."

Members don't marry until they are accepted as church members, usually at 21 or 22, and are advised by their parents on possible spouses.

DON'T MAKE DATES

"They don't run around, they don't make dates," says Hofer. "They stay home at night. Children are your dearest possession. You owe it to them."

The Hutterites' religion is simple, strictly following Christ's commands as set down in the Bible. Jacob Hutter, founder of the sect, argued that true Christianity could only be practised in separation, protecting members from worldly temptations.

Services are held each evening in the building that serves as a schoolhouse during the day.

What little spare time colony members have is usually spent on crafts and hobbies.

"They also like music," says Hobart, "Sometimes they will get a country and western tune and put different words to it so it becomes acceptable to their religion."

Reading is usually confined to the Bible and religious publications. Alcohol and tobacco are frowned upon.

SEEKS NO CONVERTS

The Hutterites do not accept such privileges as welfare, government allowances, pensions, unemployment insurance. They refuse to vote. Unlike many religious sects, they don't actively seek converts.

Hofer says they just want to be left alone to carry on their way of life, although they seem to welcome strangers.

"We are like a city on a hill," says Hofer. "If you want to come and ask, we will talk to you. But it's an individual decision."

Hofer says the colony has little to do with its rural neighbors although it sells them vegetables and dairy products at "good prices."

He says the colony has encountered no trouble with nearby residents, who seem to have accepted their silent neighbors.

"They are good farmers," said one local resident. "They keep to themselves and they don't bother anyone."

LETTER

Thanks for Xmas lights

Editor, The Star, Sir,

I would like to thank and congratulate the Aldergrove chamber of commerce for the Christmas lights and decorations they have bought and put up around town. It is a wonderful display, better than they have in many larger places. Standing on the main corner of 272 Street and Fraser Highway and looking in all directions you see Christmas lights. Thanks again, and may the chamber continue to grow.

Grove senior girls team ranks top in province

ALDERGROVE - The latest polls have the Aldergrove Totems senior girls ranked number one in the province ahead of Vanderhoof (2) and Mountain (3). The girls have a perfect 15-0 record with wins over double A and single A competitors.

The girls began the season with the Abbotsford senior girls team which has been a powerful double A school in the Fraser Valley for years. Aldergrove had never beaten Abbotsford before, but this year's exhibition at Aldergrove completely dominated Abbotsford, winning 53-31.

Chilliwack provided the competition for the next game.

Chilliwack is always a power in the Fraser Valley double A league and provided stiff competition for Aldergrove. The local girls put up a hard fight and came out with a 44-40 win.

What a tremendous way to begin the season; two wins over powerful double A competition and two wins which were a first for Aldergrove secondary over these teams.

From here the girls have played tremendous defense and exciting fast break basketball to win another 13 games. They have won the Aldergrove Keg classic (sponsored by the Langley Keg in the Country) and the Keg invitational at Mountain secondary school. In the process of winning at Mountain the girls beat the double A number two ranked New Westminster Hyacks 57-38.

The girls are presently riding a 15-game unbeaten streak with their undefeated record put on the line Tuesday, Jan. 5 at Aldergrove (7:30) against highly touted Mountain secondary. Mountain is Aldergrove's chief rival in the Fraser Valley single A league and the game should be quite exciting.

IN EMERGENCIES, the ability to retain body heat can mean the difference between life and death. Huddling together in the fetal position is one of the better ways to prevent heat loss.

Motor oil can lengthen your car's life

By PAUL JACOT

Motorists seldom give much thought to motor oil. Yet, motor oil performs functions vital to the life and performance of your car. It also possesses a number of remarkable characteristics.

First of all, it is a lubricant which reduces friction and prevents wear at operating temperatures. Oil dissipates heat and makes parts run cooler. It prevents rust and corrosion of metal surfaces, acts as a seal for pistons, rings, cylinder walls, and helps reduce engine noise. And it works with the oil filter to keep engine parts clean.

In Canada, cold morning starts require a thin oil to reduce engine friction, while high-speed driving demands a thick oil to lubricate vital engine parts at temperatures up to 125 degrees Celsius. Through the use of special additives, multigrade oils combine easy starting at cold temperatures with engine protection at highway speeds.

With such a vital role to play, it is surprising that many motorists pay little attention to their oil by overlooking scheduled changes or neglecting to "top up". It can be a costly mistake. When an engine is inadequately lubricated, severe wear of the engine can occur. While the oil itself does not wear out, it does become contaminated and its performance additives are used up.

How often, then, is an oil change necessary? Under ideal driving conditions most car manufacturers recommend oil changes every 12,000 km (7,500 miles) or every 12 months.

Remember, though, that very little driving is done under ideal conditions. Indeed, Shell research indicates that 90 percent of all driving is for short trips of 15 miles or less. Under these severe driving conditions, oil should be changed at least every 4,800 km (3,000 miles) or every three months.

The proper use of good quality engine oil can mean longer engine (and car) life, as well as fuel efficiency. Check your car manual for the proper oil viscosity grade and performance level for your particular car, and discuss with your mechanic or service station manager the type of driving you do and the conditions and temperatures.

It all adds up to extra miles and keeping your present car on the road for as long as possible.

Aldergrove Invitational; a prelude to the B.C. provincial championships

ALDERGROVE - The second annual Aldergrove invitational will be held on Friday and Saturday, January 8 and 9 beginning each day at 10:00 a.m. This year's tournament will feature five of the top 10 single A schools in the province - (Aldergrove (1) Vanderhoof (2) coming to the tournament undefeated), Mountain (3), Stelly's (4) of Vancouver Island, Revelstoke (5), and local single A powers in Delta, Agassiz, and the always dangerous Little Flower Academy of Vancouver.

The tournament opens with Delta vs Agassiz (10:00 Friday), Little Flower vs Revelstoke (11:45), Aldergrove vs Stelly's (1:30), and the powerful Vanderhoof team vs Mountain (3:15). This fourth game could be the best of the opening round as they have played before this year with Mountain losing by only three points.

This tournament will feature two of the best teams in single A basketball in Vanderhoof and Aldergrove. Both coaches are hoping to meet in the final to decide the early number one position in the province. Vanderhoof features one of the finest guards in the province in Susan Ewanik. This young lady shot for over 1000 points last year and is doing more of the same this year. Mountain is always consistant and play their best games in tournament play and especially against top competition. They are led by Jennifer MacKinnon and Loretta Issac, their young point guard. Stelly's has a tradition of holding down the opposition and always manage to keep things close till they can put it away. Watch for their defense. Revelstoke is another well coached team. George Lord does an outstanding job in this small interior community and they are always a force to reckon with. Delta is always competitive and capable of winning at any time. They are just beginning as most of the girls were representing the Fraser Valley in the volleyball championships. However, they are a power and have a couple of outstanding forwards who are capable of filling it up at any time. Agassiz is moving up the ranks to respectability and are a young team with talent that will become better and better with each game. Watch for an upset here! We round out the competition with LFA - a team with a touch of class. They have always been a power in single A basketball and to have them participating always adds to the character of a top tournament. They are well coached, by Dan Paxton, and although young this year could provide some surprises.

This tournament brings together a mixture of the top basketball areas in the province and there should be a lot of excitement and great basketball played. The Aldergrove girls have a tough road ahead of them if they are to repeat as winners in this top flight event.

Aldergrove will be in action on Friday, Jan. 8 at 1:30 vs Stelly's and if they win at 10:00 Saturday morning with the final going at 7:00 the same night.

These girls have worked extremely hard and are entertaining to watch. It is well worth it to come out and support the local team as their number one provincial ranking is on the line.

We are sure everyone will play to their capabilities and make this tournament a good one.

CORE hunting training is a must for exam

SURREY - For those interested in taking the B.C. government hunting license exam, CORE hunting training is a must. It will properly prepare the student for the outdoor experience; knowledge of the habitat will include study of B.C. mammals and B.C. birds, equal time will be spent on survival in the wilderness, firearm safety, hunting regulations and outdoor ethics.

All of the above are prerequisites to take the exam. In addition, two optional subjects, field dressing and ecology will be covered.

The 16-session course starts February 5 at the Surrey campus of Kwantlen College. Pre-registration is required. For further information contact Continuing Education, Kwantlen College, 588.4411.

Raffle winners

ALDERGROVE - The local figure skating club held a raffle on Friday, December 18 and the winners were: 1st prize, black and white TV - L. Fenner. 2nd prize , $50 gift certificate from Aldergrove Sports Shop - K. Marinello. 3rd prize; handmade afghan - D. MacFarlane.

The club would like to thank all those who purchased tickets, and the Aldergrove Sports Shop who donated $25 towards the gift certificate. Congratulations to the lucky winners.

Cold can kill!

Cold water survival is a science now and the Canadian Red Cross remind everyone that studies have shown that with the proper skills, a person can survive up to three hours in 10 degree Celsius temperature, before hypothermia occurs.

Body temperatures to 32 degrees Celsius cause unconsciousness and below 30 degrees Celsius heart failure and death.

Research also demonstrates that three times as much body heat is retained when a person holds still and does not swim in cold water.

The head, sides of the chest and the groin region are areas which lose heat most rapidly. That's why the Canadian Red Cross Society recommends the HELP position (Heat Escape Lessening Posture) which involves holding the arms tight against the sides of the chest, pressing the thighs together and raising them to protect the groin region.

New picnic tables

ALDERGROVE - The GVRD has approved $10,000 for the purchase and installation of 20 new picnic tables at Aldergrove Lake regional park.

1982 forecast as a disaster year

The 190th anniversary edition of the Old Farmer's Almanac has arrived from the publishers who point out that it is America's oldest continuously published periodical.

Always of interest in The Almanac are the weather forecasts, which over the years have proven to be extremely accurate.

For Southern British Columbia the forecast is: Late fall and winter (November through March) will see frequent cold waves balanced by mild periods, more sunny days than normal in the early and late parts of the period, and a large number of intense storms.

Precipitation will be above normal by 30 to 75mm., and mountain snows will be 400mm. above normal.

January will be mild and wet, with heavy snowfall in the mountains and greater than normal rainfall along the southern coast. Monthly mean temperatures in the north will be as much as 6C. above average.

An extended cold wave will dominate the first half of February, causing below-average monthly mean temperatures. Snowfall will be twice the normal amount, although total precipitation in south-coastal areas may be below normal.

March will have cold waves during the second and third weeks; otherwise, mild weather will prevail. Rain and snow will be frequent but light.

There is a special Canadian edition of the Almanac which can be purchased locally for $1.75 which makes it one of the best book bargains around.

Among some of the Canadian facts listed are the following: The coastline touches three oceans and Hudson Bay, a total of 60,000 miles.

Canada is the first in the world in production of nickel, asbestos, platinum, and zinc.

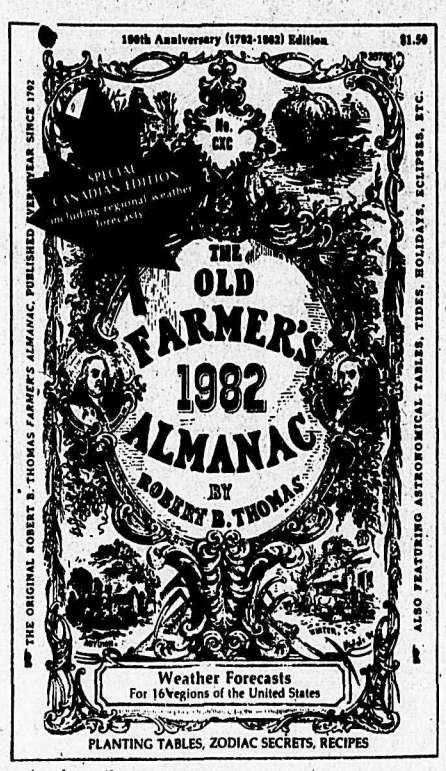
The highest waterfall in Canada is Takkaw Falls (Daly Glacier) B.C., 1,650 feet while the rainiest spot in the country is Henderson Lake, Vancouver Island with an average of 262 inches per year.

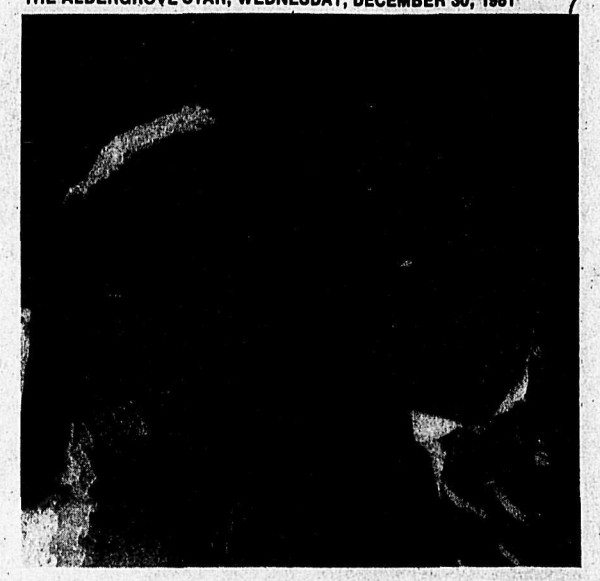
In addition to Canadian facts the Almanac includes astronomical and earth-bound events of the year 1982, recorded, described and predicted - from eclipses and the movements of planets to daily tides and the best times for planting broccoli.

The publishers say that "We hope we have provided something for everyone in this edition of the Almanac. If you're not interested in what Queen Elizabeth drinks every day or how to construct a simple fish smoker perhaps you'll turn instead to our chart on gardening according to the phases of the moon, the winning recipes for fried chicken or an article on the pros and cons of keeping a pet cricket.

Traditional astronomical information, the backbone of the Almanac, is included, along with our popular, if mind stretching mathematical puzzles, mouth-watering pancake recipes and a survey of cures for the common cold that may give you some new options the next time you get the sniffles.

Ending on a not so happy tone the Almanac says that, "The year 1982 is forecast as a year of disasters; of earthquakes and volcanoes, of storms and floods, of wars and bad luck."





Mayer and Braun wed at Trinity

ALDERGROVE - Victoria (Vicky) Jane Braun was dressed in a beautiful Victorian style gown when she walked to the alter on the arm of her father to become the bride of Jeffrey (Jeff) Mayer on Saturday night, November 28.

Trinity Memorial United Church in Abbotsford was the scene of the double ring ceremony, and Rev. W. Dormer officiated.

Vicky looked lovely in her wedding gown which featured Swiss applique on the bodice and skirt with a satin skirt and train. The full chiffon sleeves were gathered at the wrists into Swiss laced bands and at the neck a stand up Swiss lace neckline. Chiffon veil as well was edged with Swiss lace.

The bridal bouquet consisted of beautiful silk roses and orchids in burgundy and white colors.

Matron of honor was Joyce Becher, and bridesmaids Bianca Mayer and Naomi Moews, all dressed in burgundy gowns featuring pleated skirts and sheer lace shawls fastened at the neck with a silk rose. Their flowers were silk burgundy roses and pink carnations.

Dresses of candlelighters and flower girl were made by the sister of the bride, Dorothy Heinricks.

Randy Paquette acted as the groom's best man, and groomsmen were Ed Mayer and Henry Mayer. Ushers were Neil Heinrichs and Stan Wiebe.

Dorothy Heinrichs was the church pianist; solist was Theresa Janzen who sang Anne Murray's 'You needed me' and 'Time for Joy!'.

Wedding reception was held at the Bradner community hall where the three tiered wedding cake with wineglass tiers and burgundy flowers topped with a beautiful silk flower arrangement dominated the head table.

Master of ceremonies was Ed Friesen, a brother-in-law of the bride's and proposing the toast to the bride was another brother-in-law, John Becher. The response was made by the groom.

For her going away costume, the newlywed Mrs. Mayer had chosen a grey A-line skirt with a short jacket, complemented by a burgundy satin blouse fashioned by her sister.

Wedding trip took the young couple to Harrison Hot Springs. They have now returned and have taken up residence at 33989 Essendene Avenue in Abbotsford.

Bride is the daughter of Albert and Martha Braun of 28187 Haverman Road in Bradner; groom is the son of Anton and Anny Mayer of 62 Avenue in Aldergrove.

Drowning sorrows

With all this doom and gloom, people may be wanting to drown their sorrows even more this holiday season.

If that's the case, we'll try once again to get the message across about the dangers of drinking and driving. Each year, more than once, there is some editorial urging people to leave their cars alone if they've imbibed a few too many.

The attorney general's department sends out reams of literature about how long it takes for one ounce of alcohol to be absorbed by a person weighing 100, 200 or 300 lbs. The department cites horrendous costs in property damage, processing impaired charges through the courts and in awards to families who have lost someone because of a drinking driver.

Despite all this, there are still too many drinking drivers on the road. Why? It may boil down to the fact that the kind of people who are receiving one or more impaired charges during their driving careers have a much deeper problem than the habit of climbing behind the wheel of a car after overdoing in at the local pub.

And the people who receive impaired charges generally are not the ones reading editorials or paying attention to messages from the attorney general's department.

The solution may be at the cause of the problem, but other than another bout with prohibition which would be punishing the majority who are careful drinkers and create additional crime problems, there doesn't seem to be too many ideal solutions.

People can take matters into their own hands by reporting a drinking driver. While large fines and licence suspensions do not seem to be a deterrent to those with multiple charges to their discredit, reporting a drinking driver will at least get the driver off the road, for that night and possibly prevent a more serious accident later in which innocent people will suffer.

Report is in contention

LANGLEY - Regular meeting of the Langley and district ministerial association will be held at noon on Wednesday, January 13, at the Belmont Baptist church, 4035 - 207 Street. Host pastor Leroy King will present the devotional message.

There will be a general discussion on the proposed presentation compiled by a local medical practitioner on human sexuality for the promotion of meaningful sex education in local schools.

"In Langley many of the local doctors offered their services and time regarding planning and teaching sex education courses free of charge;" said the report.

"They were turned down," exclaimed the medical expert.

The community health education committee is not necessarily in full agreement with this report according to an observer.

The February meeting of the ministerial will be held at noon, February 10, at the Northwest Langley Baptist church, with pastor Gordon Phillips as host.

The third regular meeting of the New Year will be held at noon, on Wednesday, March 10, at the Langley Church of the Nazarene, 19991 - 49 Avenue. Nazarene pastor S. Roy Hall will be the host.

Local ministerial president Mun Hope will be chairman at the regular monthly meetings.

The neighborhood block plan featuring world thrust will be held at the Langley Evangelical Free Church, 20719 - 48 Avenue, on February 5 and 6, commencing 7:30 p.m. on Friday, February 5. A five-screen media presentation will be made.

The annual week of prayer for lower mainland churches will open with a prayer rally at 3 p.m. Sunday, January 17, in St. John's United Church, 1401 Comox St., Vancouver. The theme for 1982 is 'At home in the family of God.'

December meeting of the ministerial association was held at the Fort Langley Emmanuel Tabernacle with paster Jim Cornock as host. Speaker Bill Goetz distributed copies of his book on biblical prophecy and announced the construction of the new church building with a seating capacity of 2,500.

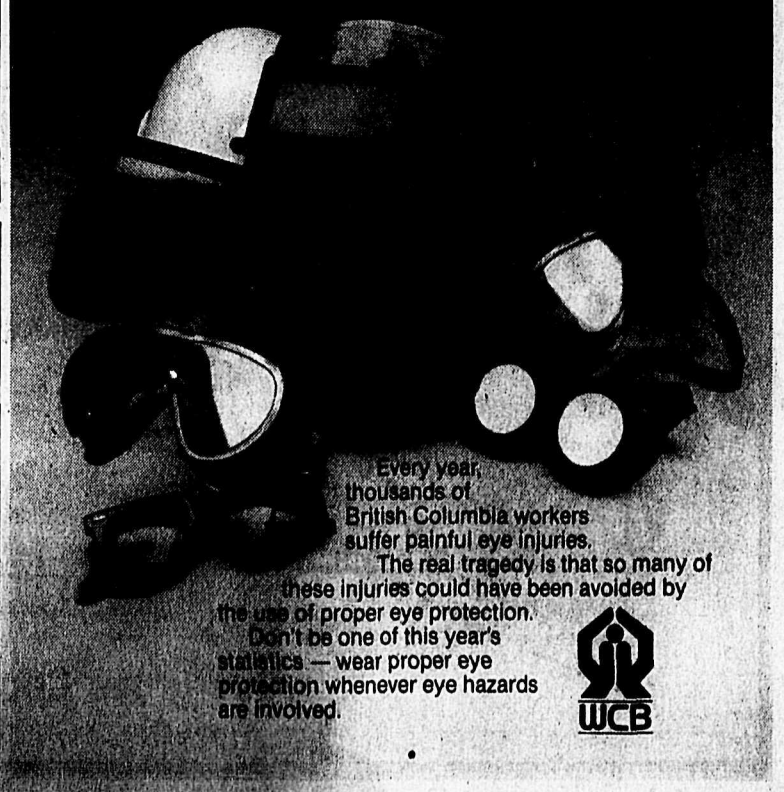
YOUR FUTURE'S IN SIGHT... PROTECT IT.



Every year, thousands of British Columbia workers suffer painful eye injuries.
The real tragedy is that so many of these injuries could have been avoided by the use of proper eye protection.
Don't be one of this year's statistics — wear proper eye protection whenever eye hazards are involved.

GARDENING IN THE VALLEY

By DON ANSON

So ends another year and it certainly wasn't one of the best years as far as gardening was involved.

We are blessed with four seasons in British Columbia but they seem to be changing dramatically. This makes it very difficult for the gardener. Most plants in 1981 showed signs of the extraordinary weather we had early in the year and even now there are things happening in my garden which shouldn't happen.

One can expect to see a few polyanthus and primroses out at this time of the year but this is the first time I have ever seen delphiniums in flower at this time Also in flower outside this Christmas were Siberian wallflowers and candytuft.

This is all very well but it makes planning difficult. Most people lost their plants and seed through sowing and planting at the regular time earlier this year.

Who would have thought we could get so much rainfall for such a long period? Vegetable gardens were particularly hard hit. Those who sowed their seed in April and early May suffered many disappointments.

I hope seasons don't get so mixed up in 1982. Down in San Diego where I have spent the last month they are crying out for rain. It is a beautiful city with some wonderful gardens but they have no season at all. It is very nearly the same all the year round and nothing will grow without irrigation. They have plenty of water for this now but it seems to me that one day they will run short of it. Immense increases in population and huge irrigation projects may well prove too much for even the Colorado River one day.

Many of the gardeners I spoke to down there really envy our weather and are invariably impressed by the greenness of everything and the variety of flowers that we grow. So I suppose we shouldn't grumble too much about our excessive rainfall but should just hope that it keeps to its proper season.

Gardening has no exact rules and those who keep to a rigid timetable suffer frequently. Timetables are dangerous. We are easily fooled by the weather.

There is nothing wrong in preparing a gardening timetable but on the question of sowing dates, the best advice is to use your discretion. Good tilth and good sowing conditions count before anything.

There are often opportunities in January to get out in the open and do some good work in the garden. If your garden is anything like mine, there is still a large amount of clearing up to do and this should all be finished before those busy days in early spring.

Any tender plants in the garden should be protected by brushwood being placed on top of them. Snow does this effectively but you never know, we may not get any snow.

Tender shrubs should be protected against severe winds by being covered with burlap. Pyramidical evergreens should be tied to prevent possible snow damage.

All shrubs and small trees should be liberally mulched. This makes a world of difference to their well-being. Give a good top dressing of compost or rotted manure to all soft fruits.

Burn any diseased wood from fruit trees and shrubs and cut back the old fruiting raspberry canes if you haven't done it already. Shorten tall new canes to five feet.

This is a good time of the year to layer certain shrubs such as rhododendrons, azaleas, hydrangeas and forsythia. Chose a low, outward-growing branch that will easily reach the ground. Make a hole about six inches deep and then bend the branch so that the part of it that is about a foot from the tip can be inserted in the hole.

Make a cut where the branch is bent and insert a small pebble or stick in the nick. Place the nicked branch at the bottom of the hole and cover firmly with soil. Then peg the branch down firmly or weight it with a stone.

Choose young shoots to layer and the bend in the hole should be at a sharp angle to check the flow of sap and to encourage rooting.

At the end of the growing season you will probably have a new shrub or bush and the branch can be separated from the parent shrub and planted in its new position.

The author will endeavor to answer any questions on the subject of outdoor gardening. Please enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope to: "Gardens", care of The Star, Box 220, Aldergrove, V0X 1A0. All letters will be answered personally, but some may be answered in this column.

New super

AGASSIZ - The board of school trustees for district no. 76, Aggasiz-Harrison, announced the appointment this month of a new superintendent of schools.

Richard Welch, 43, principal of H.D. Stafford junior secondary school in Langley, will start in early January.

He is the first locally appointed superintendent for the district. Previously the ministry of education selected superintendents.

New shake roof

LANGLEY - Approval has been given by the GVRD for a new cedar shake roof on the historic Rowlatt farmhouse at its Campbell Valley regional park in south Langley.

The farmhouse was built in the 1880s and some restoration work was carried out five years ago. The present cedar shake roof is in poor condition and leaking.

Western farmers are suffering

DAWSON CREEK - Though only a small group of nine appeared for a West Fed meeting held here recently, what is noteworthy about the attendance at the speech on Western separatism, is that all had rural backgrounds.

Most were farmers. Why the farmer? Because the western farmer is suffering under crippling economic conditions.

John Farrow, department head of the Animal Sciences Institute at Northern Lights College said western farmers do have problems.

"Freight rates, the wheat board, cattle prices, high interest rates, bigger debt loads, beef and hog bankruptcy, fantastic increases in herbicides, and fertilizer costs...it is no wonder that every farmer in the west is in one way or the other, disillusioned with federal policy." said Farrow.

"A mandate for cheap food has been established for years and that policy is not going to turn an abrupt aboutface now. High inputs and low returns are plaguing the farmer. Interest rates add severity to the problem.

"It is very close to impossible to start up a farm now under current conditions. For a family to set up a viable farming operation, pulling in a full-time living, a family has to be prepared to make sacrifices. And it takes a great degree of internal fortitude."

Asked if the number of farming operations folding is on the increase in the locality, Farrow's response was not very encouraging.

"Rarely does a farmer file for bankruptcy and in many cases the government is not aware of the severity of the problem because it doesn't show up on paper. Farmers are usually forced out, they try and salvage what they can. With the inflated prices of land values when a farming operation folds the farmer is usually left with enough equity that he rarely files bankruptcy, but he may leave the farming life with regret.

"Farming as a life-style is an occupation of choice. With high inputs and low returns farming as a way of life is in jeopardy.

"There is a strong air of frustration at the college as young farmers become discouraged. They are no longer as sure that they want to follow in their father's footsteps."

Flower power

(IDRC) - A chrysanthemum that produces a safe, effective pesticide is aiding one of Africa's poorest countries.

Pyrethrum flowers in Rwanda, a small, densely populated country in central Africa, are the basis of a new industry that is expected to provide jobs for more than 20,000 people.

The white daisy-like pyrethrum is a source of an insecticidal extract that is more effective than DDT. Pyrethrin insecticides also have a low toxicity for humans, other mammals, or plants, and degrade rapidly and harmlessly once exposed to the sunlight and air.

The compound is in demand for use in knock-down sprays, mosquito coils and other forms of pesticides that can be used safely in homes, livestock operations, hospitals, etc.

More than 8,000 peasant families are now involved in growing and harvesting pyrethrum flowers in Rwanda for a recently opened refinery. More jobs and income will be generated as operations are expanded to include product manufacturing.

WEEKLY LISTINGS

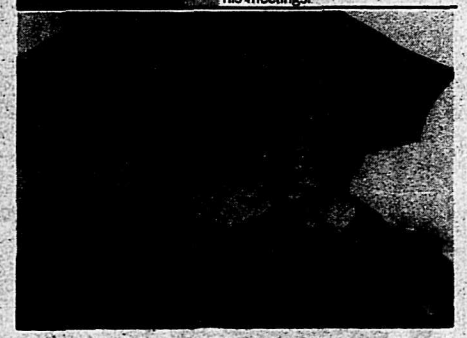
WEEK OF Dec. 31 to Jan. 6

Philip Anglim portrays a horribly deformed person in THE ELEPHANT MAN, as he recreates his original Broadway role in the premiere presentation of the "ABC Theatre of the Month," airing Monday, January 4. "The Elephant Man" was a long-running Tony Award-winning stage hit.

Sunday

Gregory Peck stars as an escaped Nazi scientist, Dr. Josef Mengele, living in South America who masterminds a plot to fulfill Hitler's dream of creating a master race in THE BOYS FROM BRAZIL, a suspense thriller on "NBC Sunday Night at the Movies," January 3.

Mengele is continuing a project to re-establish the Nazi empire through a genetic process enabling him to create clones with the same characteristics as Hitler. Working from a jungle lab, he is on the verge of organizing the final phase of his plan when Barry Kohler (Steven Guttenberg) stumbles upon one of his meetings.



Michael Caine (left) stars as a financial wheeler-dealer who meets an impoverished Italian prince (Louis Jourdan) in Switzerland and conspires with him to corner the world silver market in SILVER BEARS, a light-hearted adventure on "NBC Movie of the Week," Thursday, December 31.

Jane Wyman sets the tone on "Falcon Crest"

"I'm a Today Lady!"

So says Academy Award winner Jane Wyman as she makes an easy transition back before the cameras after a 15-year hiatus because of her stressless attitude toward life that frees her from insecurities.

Currently, she portrays a wealthy, powerful wine baroness on "Falcon Crest," a new dramatic series broadcast Fridays on CBS-TV.

The regal and attractive actress is as confident in front of the cameras as the day she won an Academy Award for playing a deaf mute in the film "Johnny Belinda." Her fellow actors on "Falcon Crest" admit that she sets the calm tone on the set, despite the frantic schedule changes caused by shooting exterior shots for as many as seven shows on location in Napa, California.

"I don't worry anymore," says Miss Wyman. "If a person is hung up in problems, he is hung up with himself. You must take problems from where they start and go from there. Some things are tough, such as illness, but getting depressed isn't going to help them. There are always going to be problems."

Miss Wyman stopped acting for 15 years because, she says succinctly, "There were no roles that I wanted to play." Her time was occupied by serving as the National Chairman of the Arthritis Foundation, as a result of a friend's affliction.

Philip Anglim reprises his original title role in THE ELEPHANT MAN, the premiere presentation of the "ABC Theatre of the Month," based on the Tony Award-winning Broadway production and airing Monday, January 4.

In this television adaptation of the long-running play, Anglim plays the Elephant Man without grotesque makeup, distorting his voice and contorting his physique to create the disturbing illusion of the horribly deformed John Merrick, an Englishman in late 19th century, about whom "The Elephant Man" was inspired.

Bill Bixby and Leslie-Anne Down (pictured) star, with Olivia de Havilland and Helen Hayes as special guest stars, in Agatha Christie's MURDER IS EASY, an adaptation of the Christie novel, to be broadcast on "The CBS Saturday Night Movies," January 2.

On a train bound for London, English country lady Lavinia Fullerton (Miss Hayes) tells fellow traveler Luke Williams (Bixby), a vacationing American, that murder is easy—as long as one wasn't suspected. Miss Fullerton further reveals that she is enroute to Scotland Yard to report the name of the murderer of at least three victims in her village of Wychwood.

CHEVROLET CHEVETTE ... features a wide selection of engine and transmission combinations for 1982. A high fuel economy 1.8 litre diesel is now available. The standard 1.6 litre gasoline engine has a new swirl-port cylinder head designed for increased fuel mixture velocity and improved combustion. A five-speed, manual transmission is available with either engine. The optional three-speed automatic transmission has a new torque-converter clutch. There are two- and four-door hatchback models. The low-priced Scooter model is available for the first time as a four-door hatchback.

Chevette expands line-up

Chevette begins its seventh year with its widest selection yet of engine-transmission combinations. A 1.8 litre diesel is offered in 1982.

The standard 1.6 litre four-cylinder gasoline engine receives a swirl-port cylinder head, which is designed to increase fuel mixture velocity and improve combustion. Compression ratio goes from 8.6:1 to 9.2:1.

Five-speed manual transmissions are available with both diesel and gasoline engines.

A four-speed manual remains standard (except diesel). The optional three-speed automatic receives a hydraulic torque-converter clutch.

Standard axle ratios for both manual and automatic transmissions are 3.36:1. A 3.62:1 ratio with automatics is available.

1982 Chevettes also feature:
- High-pressure (35 psi.) tires.
- Fine-pitch gears for muted axle sound.
- Score-and-fold foam headlining and a centre-mounted dome lamp.
- Semi-metallic front inner brake linings and a larger-capacity master cylinder.

Chevette is available in four passenger, two-door and four-door hatchback models.

The Scooter, Chevette's lowest-price model, is available for the first time as a four-door, but without the diesel engine.

Effective sign cleans out garden

By ROBERT SKOGLUND

This fall I had the same problem I had last year.

I was stuck with a big garden full of vegetables that I was unable to use or give away.

This is how I got on the big garden habit. Several years ago I wanted to get married so bad I could taste it.

Every spring I'd plant two acres of garden, thinking that by fall, that year for sure, I'd have a thrifty wife who would help me fill the 500 canning jars in the cellar. But by fall there wouldn't even be a likely candidate on hand and I'd plow all the vegetables back into the ground.

As the years passed I got used to foraging food at Gramp Wiley's or at my brother's place until I finally had to admit that I was a professional hermit who really didn't need to get married at all.

But the habit of planting a big garden had been established and every fall I wondered what to do with tons of food. I told Gramp Wiley I couldn't give it away.

"Of course you can't," he snorted. "People are too proud to have food given to them."

Gramp is the country's greatest authority on everything. I knew when he'd exhausted the philosophical end of the problem, he'd give me some practical advice on what to do, so I listened.

"How can you expect a family that only gets $17,000 a year in welfare benefits to find time to cart off your dirty squash? That would be work, and it would mess up the floor carpets in their new car."

Gramp is an old fashioned conservative who thinks it's a crime for healthy young men to drink beer in front of the TV seven days a week while their wives shop with food stamps. He calls the casual approach to work "laziness." I said nothing.

"Every time I buy groceries the clerk look at me as if I had a green beard because I pay cash. Gardens went out when food stamps came in."

Gramp spoke in a voice that could have changed the decision at the Scopes trial.

"You're too young to understand people," he continued. "Just leave the vegetables to me."

I figured I had nothing to lose so I went in the house and thought profound thoughts. At bedtime I turned the electric blanket up to three and snuggled in with an article full of innocuous terms like "trying to find myself." "meaningful relationship" and "wondering who I am."

When I drifted off to sleep I had a nightmare that the six-inch pile of papers scattered on all of my tables and chairs had turned into food stamps, and although I could hear Gramp Wiley walking across my porch I couldn't get up to hide them.

When I got up the next morning I noticed that my garden had been cleaned out during the night. Even the old brown corn stalks had been taken for Hallowe'en decorations. I rushed over to Gramp's trailer to find out how he'd managed it.

"You could have done it yourself if you knew anything about people," he shouted. "All I did was put a sign out in front of your house that said:

"No trespassing
Keep Out of Garden!"

Metric conversion in nation's grocery stores is about to begin

TORONTO - The full conversion to the metric system in food stores will get started across Canada early in January.

Metric Commission Canada has announced that the changeover starts simultaneously in 21 areas across Canada in January and will cover the rest of the country progressively during a two-year period.

Frank Dugal of the commission admitted at a news conference that there has been some grumbling in areas where metric weights were used on a trial basis.

"There was very little grumbling in Kamloops, B.C. and a little in Sherbrooke, Que., but there were complaints in Peterborough, Ont.," he said, adding that polls taken by the commission show that over 50 percent of Canadians are in favor of the metric conversion which has already cost $35-million since it was first introduced in 1970.

The conversion of scales in stores is the first big move in the direction of grams and kilograms. Tax relief will be given to merchants who buy new scales and to those who convert old scales.

For two years, stores will be allowed to advertise in imperial and metric weights as long as the metric is most prominent. After two years only metric advertising will be allowed although Dugal could not say exactly what would happen to merchants who continue to advertise in pounds and ounces.

He pointed out that shoppers have bought prepackaged foods in metric units for several years, often without recognizing the change.

"But now, in the last stage of conversion to world-standard metric measures of all kinds, items that are individually weighed in the store will also be purchased on a metric basis," Dugal said.

BRITONS REVERSE TREND

Cities losing population

LONDON - Although the reasons are not entirely clear, Britons are leaving their cities by the droves, reversing a trend to urbanization that began with the industrial revolution 200 years ago.

And, despite the admonition of 18th century writer Samuel Johnson that "when a man is tired of London he is tired of life," even the historic British capital is not immune. Preliminary figures from the 1981 census show the population of Greater London at 6.7 million, the first time the city has fallen below seven million this century.

Still, the demographic shift in Britain has so far not shown itself to be a worldwide trend. This week, for instance, overcrowded Athens won the dubious honor of surpassing Los Angeles as the world's second most polluted city after Tokyo.

Even in Africa, the population explosion in such centres as Kinshasa, Zaire - to an estimated 2.5-million today from 400,000 in 1960 - has severely strained the urban infrastructure.

MONTREAL THIRD?

Among other things, the growth of the West African city has meant that it has apparently outstripped Montreal as the second-largest French-speaking city in the world behind Paris, as the French newspaper Le Monde recently pointed out.

Athens and Kinshasa testify to the continuing drawing power, if not, appeal, of cities.

Britain, where the census shows the rural population has grown by 9.7 percent in the last 10 years, is a different matter.

Besides London, other large British centres are suffering population declines as well.

FOLLOWS TREND

In the last 20 years the population of Birmingham, Britain's second-largest city, has fallen to 920,000 from 1,110,000, leaving London as the country's only city with more than one million inhabitants. The population of Liverpool, Britain's third-largest city, has been halved in the last 20 years to 510,000.

Some observers blame the trend on Britain's declining economy, a theory at least partially borne out by census figures which show that not all Britons are settling for a place in the country.

Many, the census shows, have left Britain altogether. Figures for 1980 show that 55,000 more persons emigrated from Britain than immigrated to the country.

Much as industrialization led the British to flock to their towns and cities in centuries past, the decline of industry has played its part in driving them out to where the grass is greener, whether that be Land's End or the ends of the Earth.

Of the Fort Seafood House

DOODILIN PIE CRUST

3 cups of fat
½ cup margarine
6 cups flour
2 Tbls. baking powder
3 eggs beaten
1 1-3 cup 7-Up
2 soup spoons vinegar salt

Mix the above ingredients well, and form into a workable dough. Once you have done that, then you can roll out the dough, to be put into your 9 inch pie pan. Wondering what to do with your leftover turkey, ham, etc.? Well, add to your leftovers some vegetables, such as potatoes, turnips or whatever you like and to that after you have put it, in your pie crust, why not add some gravy to it. Put it into the oven at 350. When the crust turns to a nice brown color, then it should be done.

An academy for excitement

By DONNA PION

For the creative and innovative, Helen Romero's Academy of Dramatic Art in Surrey will surely send ripples of excitement right down through your soul.

Helen, who is an accomplished actress, opened her studio to the general public over two years ago. Here you can take a twelve week course pertaining to all the aspects of television commercials and touch on dramatic art. Her classes are funny, informative, light, and thoroughly appealing. Her knowledge in the field portrays in everything she talks about and if nothing else her sense of humor will keep you smiling long after the classes are over.

Whether you're six or sixty there's a place for you; and you know what's the most fun - seeing yourself as others see you, on TV. Hmmmm, maybe I'll be an actress after all....

ALR lands "not needed for housing"

VANCOUVER - Following a meeting between representatives of the B.C. Federation of Agriculture and the B.C. chapter of the Housing and Urban Development Association of Canada, the two organizations have agreed to continue discussions on shared concerns about agricultural land and housing, according to a news release from the BCFA.

Don Knoerr, president of the BCFA, says, "we were pleased to find that we shared a number of basic priorities about land use planning as well as common concerns about the existing planning process in this province. We will be meeting again in the near future with the view of developing a joint presentation to the government."

At the initial meeting the BCFA and HUDAC agreed on five essential points. Representatives concluded an adequate supply of housing in B.C. does not require removal of land from the agricultural land reserve. Instead with a proper planning process in place housing can be developed with minimal impact on other resource uses.

Once land suitable for development has been identified, mechanisms should be put in place to facilitate the servicing of it. Knoerr explained, "incentives for development in those areas of limited impact on resource users must exist to prevent housing and urban development on good farmland."

The news release says there was agreement that population densities must be allowed to rise on parcels approved for housing development, minimizing servicing costs and maximizing benefits of the land use designation.

Finally, both the BCFA and HUDAC believe any refinements in agricultural land reserve boundaries should be based on sound analyses of land capability and efforts should be made to remove political decision-making from the appeal process.

Knoerr concluded, "we will be meeting again and in the meantime we are extending an invitation to the Associate of Professional Foresters so that all three major users, housing, forestry and agriculture are involved."

I like to remember the love and laughter of Christmas

By DONNA PION

ALDERGROVE - Another Christmas went rolling by and stockings were filled, gifts were opened and good wishes shared. Carrots and notes left by the fireplace for Jolly Old Saint Nick, and egg nog being sipped as Christmas tunes kept playing on the radio.

Every Christmas the same but yet so different for everyone. For some it's rituals of grandparents for dinner, gift-opening in the morning by nine, or reading "The Night Before Christmas" by the fire on Christmas eve.

Is Christmas getting too commercialized? Is the true meaning of Christmas being forgotten, or is Christmas really Christmas anymore? To some Christmas is holidays, presents, and lots of fun, friends and good food. I like to reflect on my Christmas's as a child - trudging through fields of snow for that perfect tree, dressing up for the annual school Christmas concert, skating Christmas day on our freshly cleared pond, opening one special gift that meant so much, eating one too many japanese oranges, and sipping on my parents sweet berry wine.

I like to remember those times; I like to remember the laughter, the love, the sharing, caring, and the prayers; and today, although Christmas has become gifts, cards, and good times, I like to remember my family, my God and His son, and be thankful for that; on Christmas day.

ENERGY WISE HINTS FOR THE HANDYMAN

Spring and summer are ideal seasons for home maintenance, repairs and renovations. If you have extra time off work, take some time to cut your energy costs and increase the comfort and value of your home with any of this month's energy-wise projects for the handyman.

Home heating accounts for most of the home energy consumed — don't let a brief respite from cold weather distract you from important energy-wise improvements.

Check for a sooty build-up in your oil furnace — it's a sure sign that a cleaning is in order. Filters should be inspected monthly and cleaned or replaced, as required. Exposed duct work in the basement should be insulated and registers should be fitted with plastic deflectors. In the case of hot water heating, radiators will be more effective if painted with a matte or satin, rather than a metallic finish.

REINSULATING INSIDE & OUT

If you have already done all you can to ensure efficient heat production and distribution, perhaps you should concentrate your efforts on keeping the heat in. You can retrofit (reinsulate) existing walls by pouring or blowing various loose fills into the wall. Fiberglass batts or blankets may be used in the case of major renovations or between old and new siding.

Of course, the walls are only part of the job. The ceiling requires even more insulation than the walls — usually a minimum R value (resistance to heat) of 12 as opposed to 8. The basement should be damp-proofed by painting the concrete. Storm doors and double-windows cut the heat loss in these areas by one-half. Weather stripping around windows and doors is essential, as are properly fitted mail, milk and pet doors.

While you're at the insulating stage don't forget that you'll be wanting plenty of hot water for a shower after the day's work is done. Dramatic savings on your hot water bill can be realized by going to work with some of that left over insulation. Insulating a 10-foot length of hot water pipe, for example, can save enough hot water for three full loads in a dishwasher and an insulating jacket can effect an 80 per cent reduction of heat loss from the hot water tank.

ENERGY-WISE LIGHTING

For a visual improvement to your now comfortable home, you can provide lighting that is not only more efficient but also more effective. Cleaning light fixtures makes lights brighter and reduces the number of lights that need to be on at one time. A dimmer switch allows a softer light, appropriate for dining. If any painting or recarpeting is to be done, choose light colours — they are more reflective than dark colours and reduce the need for extra lamps.

In all of your activities, finally, remember that indiscriminate use of power tools entirely defeats the cause of energy conservation. Why not try doing some things manually and get some good exercise to boot? If you must use power equipment, try renting or sharing with a neighbour. You'll help cut down on superfluous equipment — one more way to be energy-wise.

DRIVING QUIZ

1. When does your car get its worst mileage?
   a) After many hours on the highway
   b) Climbing hills
   c) In city traffic
   d) The first few miles in the morning
2. When should you check your tire pressure?
   a) When your tires are cold
   b) At each fill-up
   c) After you've driven 15 kilometres
   d) After you've taken a long trip
3. How much energy loss is caused by one fouled spark plug?
   a) No appreciable loss
   b) 3-5% loss
   c) 7-10% loss
   d) 25% loss
4. To save gas when leaving a stop sign, you should:
   a) Accelerate as fast as the car will go
   b) Accelerate very slowly
   c) Get to cruising speed as soon as safely possible
   d) Motion speedier motorists to pass
5. You'll incease fuel efficiency 20% by:
   a) Slowing from 88 kilometres per hour to 80
   b) Slowing from 112 kilometres per hour to 88
   c) Driving normally at 30 kilometres per hour
   d) Coasting down inclines
6. How much gasoline does the average American driver use per year?
   a) 856 litres
   b) 6,420 litres
   c) 3,424 litres
   d) 8,560 litres
7. Which of the following costs you gas mileage?
   a) Permanent roof racks
   b) Underinflated tires
   c) Accelerating slowly and gradually
   d) All of the above

ANSWERS

1.(d) According to the Fuel Efficient Driving System used The Drive for Conservation, you get your absolute worst mileage in a car with a cold engine. So for the first few miles in the morning, your car may only get two or three miles from a gallon of gasoline. In fact, the U.S. Environment Protection Agency says that American cars accumulate 15 per cent of their mileage on trips of 5 miles or less — but these trips use a full 30 per cent of the nation's gasoline.

2.(a) Check tire pressure in the morning or when you haven't been driving the car for several hours. Heat from road friction will make the air inside expand, giving you a higher reading. You should keep your tires inflated to their highest recommended pressure. You can lose 5 per cent of your gas mileage if your tires are only ten pounds underinflated.

3.(c) Research used for The Drive for Conservation states that one plug in a V-8 engine misfiring only half the time at 55 miles per hour reduces gas mileage by 7 per cent (as much as two and a half miles per gallon). And two plugs doing this could cut mileage by at least 20 per cent.

4.(c) Tests with miles-per-gallon gauges used in Drive for Conservation Caravans show that your car runs less efficiently in its acceleration mode than when you're cruising. So one gas-saving strategy is to get through acceleration as soon as you can, rather than speeding up slowly and gradually.

5.(b) The most efficient cruising speed varies from car to car according to design but it's usually somewhere between 65 to 75 kilometres per hour. But in any car, you can save as much as 20 percent by slowing down from 112 kilometres per hour to 88.

6.(c) Department of Energy figures show that the average U.S. motorist uses 3,424 litres of gasoline per year. Think how much gasoline could be saved nation-wide if each of us used only five gallons less each week.

7.(d) All of the above cost you gas mileage. Permanent roof racks create aerodynamic drag which slows you down and makes the engine work harder. And, as explained earlier, underinflated tires and long-drawn-out accelerations also lower mileage.

Barkerville to come alive on Langley stage

The Barkerville Minstrel Show, which consists of Gillian Campbell, or "Klondike Lil", singer and dancer with piano and drums for accompaniment, John Murdoch (Angus McWhistle) who is outstanding in his comedy and pantomime sketches, Ruth Dewhurst, banjoist, and Ernie Prentice, vocalist, plus a large array of dancers - is coming to Langley Senior Secondary School, 21405 - 56 Avenue, on January 2, 1982. The performance, sponsored by the Langley Arts Council with co-operation with the Township of Langley Park and Recreation Department, will commence at 8:00 p.m., and promises to bring laughter, delight and an evening of solid entertainment for the entire family.

Gillian Campbell, otherwise known as "Klondike Lil", is a true Canadian ragtime singer with a repertoire of songs ranging from such "Gay Nineties" favourites as "I'm only a bird in a Gilded Cage", to the modern hits of Burt Bacharach or Neil Sedaka. Her style of performing has been likened to that of famed British Music Hall star Gracie Fields, and to the bold outspoken speak-easy entertainer, Texas Guinan. But whatever she does, she plays it for laughs and within minutes she has the audience in the palm of her hands. More and more critics agree that Gillian is likened to Klondike Kate, the dance hall singer who became a legend after the Klondike Gold Rush. The main reason is that since 1967 she has entertained more people in the Yukon, Alaska and other parts of the North than any other entertainer, alive or dead. When Gillian walks out onto the stage, the auditorium becomes charged with her personal magnetism and there isn't an audience anywhere that won't respond to her slightly naughty humour or vocalizing in the tradition of an Ethel Merman or Sophie Tucker.

John Murdoch, a novelty "navel" whistler, has been performing his famed Angus McWhistle character for almost twenty-five funfilled years. He's an extraordinary entertainer who can put the magic, wonder and laughter back into your life - standup comedy at it's best - ethnic humour with a Scottish flair and you'll know entertainment at it's climax! John has been a popular addition in many appearances including the Rolf Harris Show, Doug and the Slugs, The World Surprise Show, and the Don Ho Show in Honolulu, besides many touring engagements in the major cities across Canada, Britain, Tokyo, Hong Kong, and Taiwan.

Tickets, selling for $6.00 are available at the Langley Municipal Hall, 4914 - 221 Street, Warkentin's Jewellery in Aldergrove Centre, Langley Centennial Museum & N.E.C. (corner of Mavis and King Streets in Fort Langley) and also at the L.A.C. office, 5202 - 204 Street. For a "one night only" high quality and excellent entertainment, treat yourself and your friends or family to this gala event.

Further information can be obtained by phoning the L.A.C. office at 534-0781.

Gillian Campbell, a.k.a. 'Klondike Lil' is one of the star performers of the Barkerville Minstrel Revue coming to Langley this Saturday, January 2.

Theatre report card '81

By JAMES ROSS

Christmas time may mean jollity to the world, and all that sort of guff, but for others it is also the time when unwelcome letters arrive in the mail. Yes, that revered tradition of bringing calamitous ruin upon the hopes and aspirations of millions of grade-school children...Report Cards.

Seeing as it is Christmas, I will begin by handing out the prizes:

The Best Supporting Property: The Toasters in Tamahnous Theatre's production of True West.

The Best Property: Puntilla's Car, also by Tamahnous in their production of Mr. Puntilla...Created by Barbara Clayden and Phillip Tidd.

Best Scenery: The parlour of the Stag & Hunt Inn, Maiden Blotten in the Arts Club Production of A Cuckoo in the Nest.... Created by Marsha Sibthorpe.

Best Set Design: The set for The Hunchback of Notre Dame, designed by David Fischer and executed by the staff of the Playhouse Theatre.

Best Lighting Design: Wings, at the Playhouse, designed by Jeffrey Dallas.

Many of the best performances go on backstage, and I feel that it is a mark of the growing maturity of the local theatre scene that negative comments about set design, lights and costumes no longer appear in the reviews. I will not single out a play for costumes, but make a collective pat available to the superb staff on the third floor at the Playhouse space on Beatty Street. They are consistantly the best at their trade in this city.

Best Supporting Actors: Henry Woolf and Susan Williamson as Laurence and Susan in the City Stage production of Abigail's Party.

Best Performer in a Musical: Grant Cowan in the Arts Club production of Tom Foolery.

Best Actors: Frances Hyland as Emily Stilson in the Playhouse production of Wings. Ben Tone as Dodge in the Westcoast Actor's production of Buried Child. Honourable mention to Susan Chappole in Whose Life is it Anyway? and to Edward Duke in Jeeves Takes Charge.

Best Play: The Man Himself, by Alan Drury, produced by Touchstone Theatre.

Best Director: Guy Sprung for Wings at the Vancouver playhouse.

So much for the Santa routine! Now down to the individual report cards, starting with the company that is one of only a few regional theatre companies across the country, the Playhouse Theatre Company of BC. They get only a C+ and do so only on the basis of some charitable brownie points. Their technical staff bale them out on numerous occasions with superb sets and costumes. The ensemble acting is likewise better than the direction and the scripts that they have had to work with. Unless the last two productions are real winners, the Playhouse will have a hard time renewing season ticket subscriptions next year.

Roger Hodgman has still to prove that he has made a successful transition from acting coach, both at the small and relatively minor school in London (East 15), and the Playhouse. Not one of his productions has yet caught fire in the three years he has been with the company, and he is not getting an irrisistable groundswell of support with the public-at-large.

The Arts Club get a B- on the basis of better programming. Much of their acting and some of the direction are still suspect, but their technical crews are solid and their desire to give customer satisfaction is evidenced by a comfortable lounge that also serves as a jazz club. I doubt that I will ever be tempted to go much higher with the Arts Club because I have never seen any desire on their part to put excellence before all else.

City Stage has been a very positive influence on the cultural scene over the past few years. They have taken some bold initiatives and brought in plays that few others would think of touching. I would love to see Ray Michal win a lottery and be given a real chance to extend his wings with a more practical space, better sets and costumes and actor security. It is fitting that Touchstone should have put on what I felt to be an absolutely stunning piece of theatre, at the City Stage space..The Man Himself.

The Waterfront Theatre is still an uncomfortable space to have to sit in, but the three companies that operate out of it try hard. Carousel get a B- for a strong Dream Castles and a weaker Scrooge, and also a highly successful Shakespeare-in-the-Schools program. Westcoast Actors are now deeply troubled by having mounted too many costume dramas - too costly, but their Buried Child was one of the highlights of the season to date. The New Play Centre also gets a B- on the basis of the invaluable service and a couple of interesting shows - the very successful (though poor, in my estimation) Talking Dirty, and Jennie's Story.

Tamahnous have been rather insipid so far this season, so they only get a C+ thanks largely to Stephen Miller and Puntilla's car. Touchstone get a B+for The Man Himself - marred by a less than perfect performance by Tom McBeath: Crossroads a strong C for effort in trying to mount Athol Fugard's very powerful, but difficult, Boesman and Lena: MTC, an amateur group, win special plaudits for their very lively production of Grease; and Tom Wood, Nicola Cavendish and Bob Baker get a B for a very funny review that they wrote and acted-directed called North Shore Live.

Rock-O for rockhounds

By ROBERT F. ARNOLD

ALDERGROVE - The Fraser Valley Rock & Gem club completed a busy season at its final meeting for 1981, combined with the annual Christmas banquet at the pensioners' hall.

There were numerous raffle prizes, also a door prize. Almost everyone acquired attractive raw gem material for their workshop hobbies in the coming year.

There followed an election of officers with expressions of appreciation to those whose terms of service had been fulfilled. The new officers selected are: vice-president Bob Morgan, secretary Louise Mill, and treasurer Jerry Kitson, all to commence duties in the new year.

The evening program revealed few speeches but a new number game fittingly called "Rock-O"; generous gem prizes were offered for the lucky winners. Members contributed goodies for the banquet and also enough for a final late snack before Christmas greetings and home travel.

Teachers of lapidary were busy with applicants for the courses scheduled for January.

Between The Lines

BY ELI HENDRIKS–WITMER

Joan Armatrading has released her eighth L.P. on the A. & M. label entitled Walking Under Ladders. Of her seven previous efforts four of them went gold in Canada and there is every reason to expect this new album will follow suit. Armatrading, who was born in St. Kitts in the West Indies and brought up in Birmingham, England started writing her own songs at the age of 14. The new album was co-produced by Steve Lillywhite and recorded at The Townhouse in London, England. Joan has come a far piece since her first release in 1974 when the critics referred to her as "promising".

The sound track of 20th Century Fox's latest fright flick Southern Comfort is worth the price of admission alone. Ry Cooder, an exceptionally talented guitarist and composer is the same artist responsible for the music behind The Long Riders a year ago. And Singer and song-writer Joan Armatrading will perform in Vancouver in January [see "What's On..."].

he has outdone himself this time with his interpretation of the authentic Cajun music as well as some brand new material. It is, however, Cooder's own guitar picking on the track that sends chills up the spines of unsuspecting audiences and I for one am waiting anxiously for the release of the album.

Burton Cummings joins the growing volume of singers becoming movie stars in Simcom Limited's production Melanie which is scheduled for release by Twentieth Century Fox in February of 1982. Cummings also wrote the music for the film which also stars Glynnis O'Connor of Ode To Billy Joe fame and features Italian Canadian singing sensation Lisa Dal Bello.

Glen Campbell's new amour is 23 year old dancer Kim Woolen. Glen says she's a Christian who carries her bible with her and thinks and talks as he does. Now that was likely the problem in his stormy relationship with Tanya Tucker - she didn't think and talk like him. Gee! Good for her!

Soap opera favorite Rick Springfield, who is also a big star in the rock world with his hit album, Working Class Dog, has tested for the lead in Paramount's Grease II. No word yet as to whether he will be given the chance to be John Travolta.

Tids and Bits...Elton John collects Rolls Royce automobiles as a hobby - and some of us collect stamps...Sting will appear in the new motion picture, Brimstone and Treacle. The original sound track featuring The Police will be distributed by A. and M. Records...Kenny Rogers donated the proceeds of a recent concert, an estimated $100,000, to the family of the late singer/songwriter Harry Chapin. ...Bob Geldof of Boomtown Rats fame has been signed to play the lead role in the film interpretation of Pink Floyd's The Wall...Alice Cooper says his worst fear is being the last man on earth - and finding out the last woman is Patti Smith!! ...one of Larry Gatlin's favorite pastimes is frog hunting after dark - seriously!

Romeo and Juliet; Shakespeare's classic love story comes to Playhouse

The Vancouver Playhouse production of William Shakespeare's Romeo & Juliet opens on Saturday January 9th at 8:00 p.m. at the Queen Elizabeth Playhouse. Sponsored by Shell Canada Ltd., Romeo & Juliet is part of the continuing Shell Shakespeare Series.

Romeo & Juliet is one of the best known love stories in the world. Shakespeare's tale about the passions and energy of youth, romance and relationships is directed by Bob Baker. Most recently he directed North Shore Live, staring Tom Wood and Nicola Cavendish at Presentation House. This summer, he directed John Gray's 18 Wheels for Summer Theatre Whiterock, and, for the Playhouse, Back to Beulah, Why Hanna's Skirt Won't Stay Down, and Dreaming and Duelling. As well, Mr. Baker directed The Owl and the Pussycat for the Arts Club Theatre. Mr. Baker has also been a dancer with Les Feux Follets.

Romeo will be played by Stephen Ouimette, who made his first appearance with the Playhouse in The Hunchback of Notre Dame. Mr. Ouimette graduated from the acting programme at the University of Windsor, and has worked extensively with Theatre London, and with the Stratford and Shaw Festivals.

Martha Burns appears as Juliet. A graduate of the Playhouse Acting School, Ms. Burns has performed frequently with the Playhouse - in such shows as Love for Love, The Notebook of Trigorin, The Curse of the Werewolf and is also the co-ordinator of the "Explorations Plus" program at the Playhouse; a school programme that is unique to North America. She was a member of the Shaw Festival company in 1980, and appeared in A Flea In Her Ear.

Also appearing in Romeo & Juliet are Tom Wood, Susan Williamson, Barney O'Sullivan, Guy Bannerman, Derek Boyes, Jim Gainor, Ron Halder, Tabitha Herrington, Peter Haworth, David Ley, Robert McClure, Allen MacInnis, Jim Mezon and Pamela Rabe.

Set and costume design is by Cameron Porteous, lighting by Jeffrey Dallas, with original music by David MacIntyre. Performances are Monday - Saturday at 8:00 p.m. with Saturday matinees at 2:30 p.m. until February 6. Tickets are available through the Vancouver Ticket Centre (687-4444, Info. or 687-1818, Buyline), Eaton's stores, and all V.T.C.outlets.

Pacific Blue seeks local jazz players

The Pacific Blue Jazz Ensemble has begun its weekly rehearsals and invites all interested musicians to come down and take a look at what they have to offer. Performance is the name of the game and the Pacific Blue jazz Ensemble will be traveling all along the west coast to play. Tentative performances in March through July include the New West Jazz Festival; San Jose, California; WA State Jazz Contest; and the Music Workshop in California.

Call 585-7245 for additional information or attend a Sunday rehearsal in the bandroom of William Beagle Jr. School at 9160-128 Street in Surrey from 1:00 to 4:00.

'Dylan lives' despite sour reaction to his beliefs

By Peter Goddard
(Toronto Star)

BOSTON — From the back of the cab, as it twists along the Back Bay highway heading downtown, I can make out the sign spray-painted on a warehouse wall. It says, "Dylan lives."

It's just 3 o'clock in the afternoon, some 4½ hours before Bob Dylan will walk on stage at the Orpheum, the old, cozy rock hall here. This is about halfway through his recent 24-city North American tour.

Boston has not exactly declared a civic holiday. There's only one mention of the performance in any of the papers and that's a measly paragraph in the music listings section of the Boston Phoenix, the Village Voice-like weekly. The only advertisement I see promises a second concert that he isn't giving. In fact, one might wonder, "Dylan who?"

For the record, Shot Of Love, his 24th album, has been released and he has just completed a recent five-week European tour that has left him thinner, his hair longer and generally looking funkier at 40 than he was starting out in Greenwich Village 20 years ago. If anything, he looks more Dylan-esque than ever. And despite the widespread and unsympathetic reaction to his new-found religious beliefs, it would still be safe to say that the raspy, nasal whine of his voice may be one of the better-known human sounds in the Western world.

Severed relations

From all the conversations I'd had before coming here with his friends, ex-friends and various people who'd worked with him, the main impression was that he'd severed relations with much of his past. I figure it's best to take notes:

- 3:40 p.m. The deejay on the car radio is enthused about a "golden oldie" being in town soon — a man from the folk era, he says, "who galvinated a generation." Galvinated? Maybe that mysterious sign painter has been found. "And there are still some tickets left for the Orpheum show," he rattles on. "You shouldn't miss this chance.

But Dylan is around a lot these days, although the result has been to lose for himself the very thing the public has always wanted most — his mystique, not his music. (And to think fans once called him "the Mystery Tramp" or "the Napoleon in rags" and thought they knew what they meant by it.)

He says touring is like "being in limbo" and he has avoided it for long periods of time. (After his 1966 motorcycle accident in Woodstock, he stayed out of the public eye for eight years.) But touring is also a form of therapy it would seem.

Three years ago, on the eve of the religious "vision" that led him to his new-found Christianity, it was suggested he take a three-month Bible college study course. Three months? He thought there was no way he could spend that much time away from his audiences. "I've always been on the road in one way or another," I remember him telling me back then. "I've been on the road since I was 10." He knew the Bible but only as a literary work, not as a foundation of faith. The three months of study changed all that — and his life.

- 5:20 p.m. The crew, the band and the star have arrived and it looks like they're walking into an emergency ward of a hospital. Along both sides of the tiny street leading to the Orpheum's front doors are young people in tarched white uniforms. Nurses and interns? Another bad sign — across the street is the famous Granary Burial Ground of 1660 where are laid the victims of the May 5, 1770, Boston Massacre.

"Have you heard we're that bad?," one worker jokes. The band was nervous at the beginning of the tour because it was set up so quickly, but here they're beginning to relax. However the people in white only look puzzled.

"I've heard of careers dying but this is ridiculous," says another. It turns out these are would-be beauticians and make-up artists from a beauty school on the same narrow street. I ask if they're waiting for Dylan and one explains that, no, they're just between classes.

- 7 p.m. A tall, lanky soft-spoken man is in the crowd crushing at the front door. Everyone has a friend or a friend of a friend who promised a ticket. But for the most part everyone is mistaken. Tickets are scarce. The tall man turns out to be a pianist named Andy Pratt whose Ballad Of Avenging Annie was a modest hit for The Who's Roger Daltry. He also had five albums in his career. All this makes him a minor star — some time ago.

He can't get in either. "You know how it is," says Bob Meyer, the road manager. "Bob's got a lot of friends in this town."

Anxious crowd

- 7:30 p.m. Inside. The crowd is anxious. Maybe his recent albums have been "no shows", as one critic here described them. But this series of concerts, down-playing the recent gospel pieces and songs from the '60s, has reportedly been excellent. At least that's the rumor the crowd of about 2,600 people are content with. Two girls, neither older than 16, slump low in their seats to my right, looking capital-A alienated. Directly in front of me are a couple, both in their mid-'30s with their obnoxiously effervescent child seated between them. The kid knows this is an important occasion. Behind his curly head, the parents clutch each other's arms.

Rolling Stone

At 40, singer Bob Dylan's looking funkier than ever

Suddenly, the important occasion begins, although not in the way they'd anticipated. Rumor had had it that Clydie King, Madelyn Quebec and Regina McCrary, the gospel girls in the group, would be on stage the first hour. Wrong. There's Dylan, enormously shaggy and sexy, a pair of black glasses threatening to slip off his nose, in a dark, form-fitting jacket hugging his shoulders. Everyone in the band is smiling, having a good time. And there, to stage right, is Al Kooper, the veteran keyboard player who played on his original records.

Thump! They swing into Gotta Serve Somebody, then I Believe In You, two gospel pieces that everyone expected, which in turn are followed by — and the crowd can't seem to believe it — Like A Rolling Stone. And we start going back.

- 9:15 p.m. This has been such a Meaningful Experience for the couple in front of me. They've had a dandy fight. No wonder. Dylan's tapping old emotions with this concert. Like A Rolling Stone, Maggie's Farm, All Along The Watchtower, The Times They Are A-Changin', Ballad Of A Thin Man — he has included just about every one of his best-known pieces and simultaneously altered them along the way. He has picked up new vocal tricks along the way and this leads him to re-vamp each old melody. Without the words, Hey Mr. Tambourine Man might be unrecognizable to anyone who didn't know it well.

- 9:50. "I hear there's a critic out there," says Dylan. "Well I want to say this is the most religious song so far." It's Heart Of Mine. The '60s couple are still clutching and fighting, but the two girls have lost the edge to their alienation. In fact, they seem completely engrossed.

- 10:25 p.m. The concert's over. Tommy Maher's bar is conveniently only a few yards away from the Orpheum, and it's there I head to sort things out, such as they are. The cocktail pianist plays Don't Think Twice It's Alright. In some ways, as Steve Morse, Boson Globe critic points out the next morning, Dylan is "positively main street".

- 7:35 a.m. The tone of the radio newsman's voice is grim as he reports the violent shoot-out the night before between New York state police and an apparently forgotten cell of the Weather Underground. Another voice comes on to explain its background in the '60s. "The name comes from the Weathermen, another radical group from back then."

He's wrong. The name comes from a Bob Dylan song, which has the line: "You don't need a weatherman to know which way the wind blows."

It's not Dylan alone who's reminding us that what was started in the '60s is not yet over.

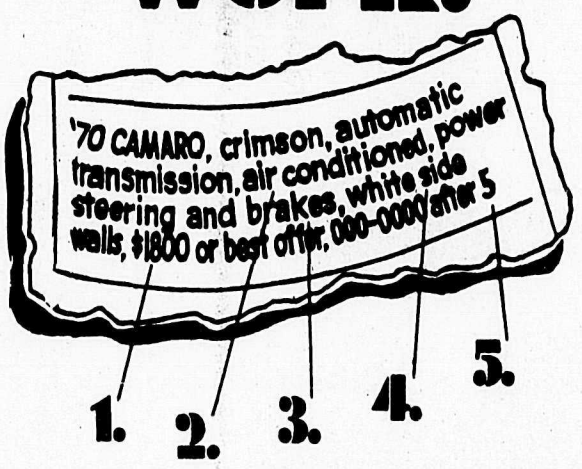
Make your Want Ad work!



No one wants to place a want ad that won't work for them. So take your time, study these five steps, and construct an effective ad. If you don't want to write your own ad, one of the friendly classified staff members will help you. Ads are easy to place—just dial

856-8303/5212

1. INCLUDE THE PRICE
Advertising the price in an ad practically insures greater response. Surveys show that a high per cent of readers won't answer an ad unless the price is given. If you're willing to go lower than your asking price say so. Your customer will have even more information to go on.

2. GIVE ENOUGH INFORMATION
Don't damage the selling power of your ad by trying to squeeze it into two lines to save money. You'll lose money in the long run. Give your reader enough information to distinguish your ad from others in the same category. Using a brand name has drawing power and saves you words of description.

3. AVOID USELESS PHRASES
Don't use a long phrase when a shorter one will do. "Power steering and brakes" says the same thing as "smooth glide steering system with power assisted braking assembly," but it's simpler and cheaper. Also avoid phrases like "the price is right" that tell your reader something he can figure out for himself.

4. DON'T OVERDO ABBREVIATIONS
Don't turn off your reader with too many abbreviations. AT, AC, PB, PS, WSW may be perfectly clear to you but will all your customers understand? Surveys show that a surprisingly high percentage of readers fail to understand certain abbreviations. 42% of classified readers didn't know the meaning of "WSW tires" in one study.

5. MAKE SURE YOU CAN BE REACHED
Be there when your ad is running. If you're home all the time, including just a phone number in your ad is enough. But if you can't be there all day specify when you can be reached. Some people never call back.
