Protestors move to save park from motos

By FRANZ LANGMANN

ALDERGROVE - The preserve Aldergrove Lake Regional Park Committee is in full swing to meet their objective of quashing the proposed 300-acre multi-motor sport complex proposed for Aldergrove Lake park, and are determined to ride it to the end.

According to committee member Daniel Peterson, their presentation of concerns to the various government factions including the provincial government have been acknowledged and well received.

On Thursday, August 18 at 7:30 p.m., the committee shall appear before the Central Fraser Valley regional district at their regular board meeting to present a more detailed brief on their philosophies and objectives. It was felt by the PALRP committee that the initial presentation made to the councils of Matsqui and Langley late in June was not in-depth enough, due to the time element involved. Now they have put more time into research to come forth with a more comprehensive, wider-scoped study into the concern.

According to the PALRP secretary, Patricia Lawrence, it was felt that their concerns were in fact reasonable, as they are not saying there should be no facility for motorsports, only that the park is not the optimum area.

In their research they feel they have come up with alternate sites that would better lend themselves to the cause. Mission Raceway was thought to be ideal as it is in an industrial area bordered by the river, railway and highway. It was added that there seem to be no complaints or problems with noise presently, and in fact the race track seems to be welcomed by the people.

Lawrence said there seemed to be a great need for a motorsport complex of this magnitude, as there are a vast amount of people interested, be they spectators or participants, the committee's only wish is that the location in question is an unreasonable proposal. It was added that the alternate sites suggested more or less evolved through the committee's investigation, and was more a favor to the Specialty Vehicle Association of B.C. than anything.

In September the committee are designated for a hearing before the Greater Vancouver regional district to oppose the track at Aldergrove Lake.

BURNING AND SHOOTING

Police nab arsonist

MURRAYVILLE - A 25-year-old Langley man is in police custody here following a series of bizarre events which took place last Thursday evening.

Shortly after 9 o'clock Langley RCMP received a telephone call from a man who identified himself as Ross William Bradford and told the officer in charge that he had just riddled a neighbor's house with several blasts from a shotgun before setting the building on fire.

When police rushed to the Bradford residence at 20080 - 64 Avenue they were met by the occupant who threatened to shoot his wife and himself unless they agreed to leave again. After three hours of negotiations the man surrendered himself to police.

Bradford has now been charged with arson, mischief, and the dangerous use of a firearm. He has been remanded in custody for psychiatric assessment until September 9.

Blood needed

ALDERGROVE - A Red Cross blood donor clinic will be held here next Thursday, August 25 in the OAP hall at 273 Street and 30 Avenue.

Clinic will be open from 2 to 8 p.m.

As summer holidays begin to wind down, young Corrie Lundstrom takes advantage of the restful time to prepare for the upcoming school term.

EXTENSIVE CHANGES

Budget program will alter B.C.

VICTORIA - While split on the merits of British Columbia's abrupt turn to the right, most political observers agree that no previous government in Canada, left or right, has tried to do so much in one fell swoop.

"This is quite unprecedented," says Tommy Shoyama, a former federal deputy finance minister who teaches at the University of Victoria. "It's very much a great ideological swing to the right."

Here's what will happen if the program, unveiled last month in a budget and 26 companion bills, is passed unchanged:

Job security will end for government employees. While the government has backed off its most inflammatory proposal, to fire workers "without cause", it will still get broad powers to lay off civil servants by saying there is not enough work for them, by changing or cutting programs, or by saying there is not enough money to maintain existing staff levels. Some previously negotiated provisions will be wiped out and public service unions will no longer be allowed to bargain many issues.

Wage controls will be extended indefinitely and wages could be cut by up to five percent.

The government wants to get rid of a quarter of its 40,000 direct employees by September, 1984, and empower other public employers - from school boards, universities and hospitals to crown corporations and municipalities - to do the same.

More than 1,500 workers have been told the axe will fall, even though their contracts haven't expired and the government is still working on regulations to govern layoffs and compensation packages.

Victoria also wants the power to set salaries for senior managers and punish employers ho violate the guides. If, for example, Vancouver city council voted to give its city manager more than prescribed, each council member could be fined $2,000.

The government says arbitrary layoffs are necessary because government could not be cut quickly enough by attrition. John Fryer, president of the national union of provincial government employees, said the moves "fly in the face of 50 years of North American labor legislation."

Members of the human rights commission and the human rights branch have already been fired. They will be replaced by a five-member council more tightly controlled by cabinet. There is no provision for staff. Rules on what discrimination cases will be heard, how complaints are handled and compensation for victims will also be changed.

Critics say human rights legislation will be watered down in several ways:

Through the removal of a "reasonable cause" provision that threatens protection against sexual orientation, language ability and other grounds which are not spelled out in the law.

Though intentional discrimination will be covered, policies with a discriminatory effect, such as height and weight restrictions, could not be challenged as easily.

Also a ban on discriminatory advertising would be lifted so newspapers could carry advertisements such as "white males only need apply."

Defenders of the changes say the former human rights administration spent too much time on "frivolous complaints" such as men-only hours at a golf club and a Ukrainian who named his restaurant Hunky Bill's.

But the B.C. Civil Liberties Association concludes that "the bill is desitned to make it much more difficult to bring a human rights complaint and to strictly limit the function of human rights agencies."

Members named to B.C. press council

VANCOUVER - Four members of the public have been appointed to the newly-formed British Columbia Press Council, according to chairman Ian Greenwood of Kelowna.

They are Joanne G. Leslie, of West Vancouver, freelance writer; Joe Morris of Victoria, retired president of the Canadian Labor Congress; Jean Turnbull of Trail, former chairman of the Academic Council of B.C.; and Laurie Wallace, former deputy minister to premier Bill Bennett, deputy provincial secretary and B.C. agent general in London.

They join four representatives from the newspaper industry previously announced as members.

The council, established in June, is to consider complaints from the public about the press and from the press about individuals and institutions. It will report publicly on its findings.

Greenwood said the first meeting is expected to be held in September.

Also announced was the appointment of Gordon Purver as executive secretary. He recently retired from the editorial department of the Vancouver Province.

AN ENGINEERING PROBLEM

Strawberry fields forever

ALDERGROVE - What do submarines and strawberries have in common?

According to John Dickinson, chairman of Simon Fraser University's department of kinesiology, they have a great deal in common: both involve engineering problems for humans.

"One of the projects we're working on is a strawberry picking machine," Dickinson says. "We're approaching it as a people moving machine, a device that will let the picker sit comfortably, reach down to pick at an easy height, have room enough to hold picking flats and move along the rows without difficulty."

Strawberry growers in some parts of North America are having to plow their fields under and go out of business because they can't get pickers any longer. Many farmers planting low growing, ground level crops are finding pickers are no longer willing to put in the long, back-breaking hours required to harvest those crops.

"You could possibly change the crops by genetic engineering perhaps developing strawberry plants that would grow waist high like a vine and be easier to harvest." But that seems very far off to Dickinson.

"What we're trying to do is examine the human body, find out the easiest way for it to move and then provide a vehicle that permits it to move that way. It must be inexpensive enough for farmers to afford and safe, easy and comfortable enough for pickers to use."

And what does all that have to do with a submarine?

Dickinson laughs. "I have a favorite story about one of the little submersibles down in Vancouver harbor. Engineers had developed it and the engineering on it was beautiful. Efficient, effective, a lovely piece of work.

"The only hitch was, the person who was inside had to kneel over a porthole in the floor in order to see where he was going and to steer the vessel.

Can you imagine what it would be like to spend long periods of time kneeling over a porthole in the floor of a submarine? It was a prime example of adapting people to fit the machines. Until recently, that has been typical in industry and engineering.

"We're attempting to reverse the process and adapt the machie to fit the people who will use it."

RCMP veterans urge execution vote

VANCOUVER - The RCMP Veterans' Association of Canada, Vancouver division, is circulating a petition for public support to allow for a national referendum for reinstatement of the death penalty for capital murder.

Wally Maguire, a former RCMP detachment head at Langley, now retired and working as a security investigator, says, "We feel that something has to be changed. Hardened, vicious criminals are filling the jails and they don't hesitate to kill somebody, whether inside or when they're back on the street, as they have nothing to lose."

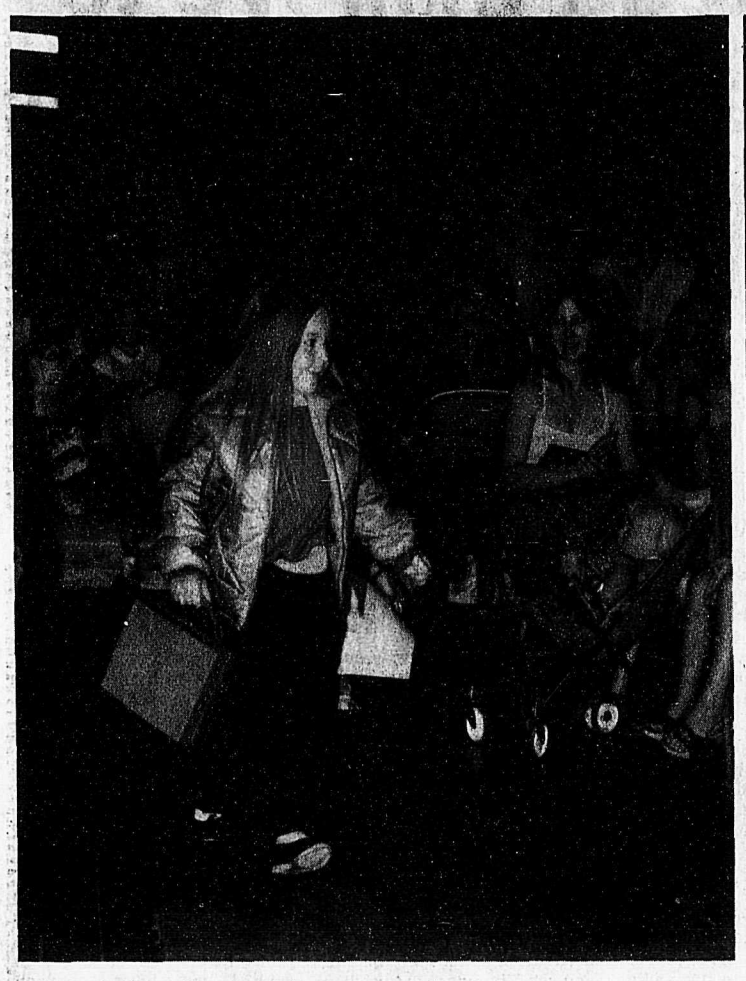
Maguire, who is on the executive of the 500-member association, said the incidence of murder in Canada is increasing and concerned citizens should be allowed to petition the federal government for a national referendum.

A free vote of parliament on the subject of the death penalty was held in Canada on July 14, 1976, but it was defeated.

Maguire said the citizens of Canada have never had the opportunity to express their wishes on the reinstatement of the death penalty for capital murder.

Win a house, but no girl: Miss PNE, Aldergrove's Sandi Friesen, stands on the front porch of the 1983 Pacific National Exhibition's prize home. The home, plus a fully-serviced corner lot in Surrey and furnishings of the lucky winner's choice, is the grand prize in the PNE's prize program lottery. Seventeen GM cars, pickups and customized vans will also be given away. The PNE's annual fair runs August 20 to September 5.

Entertainment draws crowds to local mall



Even fashions for the little tykes were offered at the Aldergrove Centre Mall and Amorette Erikson proudly showed the crowd her back to school outfit.

B.C. budget

renter tax credit are gone. The rentalsman's office, which handled landlord-tenant disputes, will be phased out by Sept. 30, 1984. Landlords will be allowed to evict tenants without cause with 88 days notice.

Complaint bureaus and grants to outside consumer groups will be scrapped, leaving consumers to take problems to Better Business Bureaus or lawyers. Ombudsman Karl Friedmann says budget cuts mean his office will handle fewer complaints against government agencies.

The provincial sales tax has been raised to seven percent from six percent and now applies to long distance telephone calls and restaurant meals worth more than $7.

It will cost more to go to the hospital, despite an election-campaign denial of impending increases. The biggest hike lifts the cost of an emergency visit to $10 from $4.

Doctors say changes to the medical services act open the way for completely changed medical care in the province and government intrusion. Victoria could control where doctors live and work by denying medicare billing numbers in "overdoctored areas" such as Vancouver, Victoria and the Okanagan.

There is also uncertainty about the creation of several classes of medical coverage and the possibility doctors will begin to opt out of medicare.

The government plans to take almost total control over school boards, telling them what to teach and what to spend. Pupil teacher ratio will rise to 19-to-one from 17-to-one, a move teachers say will cost 3,000 jobs.

University and college budgets have been cut and student aid has been slashed. Victoria will have a greater say in post-secondary education. University spokesmen say the end of tenure for university professors will make it tougher to attract top talent.

A dozen programs, mainly counselling, have already been cut. Welfare payments are frozen. A $50-a-month payment to welfare recipients, most of them handicapped, for volunteer community work was axed.

Official regional plans will be torn up, giving individual municipalities more power over such matters as real estate developments.

The Alcohol and Drug Commission, the B.C. Harbors Board the Employment Standards Board and mandatory vehicle inspections have been or will be axed as will be a legislative committee which watched over crown corporations.

Two ski facilities, a bus line and a tourism magazine will be sold to the private sector.

Legal aid still at work in Abbotsford

The 1983 provincial budget is bringing severe cutbacks in legal aid services available in the Fraser Valley. However, Matsqui, Abbotsford Community Legal Services is working to keep a core of basic legal aid services going.

The province has axed all of British Columbia's consumer advocates. Under this program, Matsqui, Abbotsford Community Services had employed a paralegal to give advice and legal assistance to customers faced with a variety of problems, including debt, repossession of goods, and complaints against manufacturers and merchants.

The cut in the legal aid budget has also led to the loss of a paralegal under the legal services program of community services. This means that staffing is reduced to one lawyer, one paralegal, two secretaries and a secretary-receptionist. In addition, legal services has a special "farmworkers legal services" program which does not depend on the province for its funding.

What all of this will mean is substantial reductions in legal services provided to this community. The situation is particularly difficult, in view of other cuts brought down by the B.C. Legal Services Society, resulting in fewer situations where legal aid will pay private lawyers to represent members of the public.

There is now virtually no legal aid coverage for people facing family law problems. The only exceptions will involve situations of extreme urgency, where the party is facing imminent imprisonment, or where the family court does not have the power to deal with the problem.

New legal aid guidelines for coverage of criminal law problems clearly violate the legal services society act, the Canada Assistance act, and probably the charter of rights. From now on, legal aid will only generally be available in situations where an accused person faces a probability of being imprisoned if convicted. However, people charged with drinking and driving offences will not be covered even if jail is a dead certainty.

The legal services department of Matsqui, Abbotsford Community Services will no longer cover consumer problems, tax problems, or the majority of civil disputes. However, legal services will attempt to provide at least brief advice, or referral to other agencies, to all members of the public faced with legal problems who cannot afford a lawyer.

Legal Services will maintain full service including court representation in many cases, where necessary, in a number of fields. This will include problems involving welfare, unemployment insurance, and workers' compensation. Other areas that will continue to receive a full level of service will include human rights problems, immigration problems, landlord-tenant, foreclosure, and unpaid wages.

Matsqui, Abbotsford Community Legal Services assures all members of the public that everything possible is being done to maintain essentail services. Nonetheless, it is inevitable that these cutbacks will bring severe hardship to many individuals.

Privatization halves costs

By HERBERT G. GRUBEL

Privatization in one form involves the contracting out of work that previously had been performed by government employees.

Studies have shown that through this policy the cost of government services on average falls by 50 percent.

This form of privatization has been undertaken with municipal garbage collection, janitorial and laundry services in hospitals and grounds maintenance of public property. When private firms bid for the right to perform these services, the contracts specify precisely what needs to be done.

The quality of required work is outlined in detail. Nonperformance leads to penalties and can lead to a shifting of the contract to another firm. Surveys of customers normally show that the quality of services largely has remained the same but often was improved by privatization.

It is not easy to document why privatization leads to lower costs of providing unchanged quantity and quality of services. Unionization and accompanying higher wages, featherbedding practices and lack of motivation of workers may provide a part of the answer. But costs drop also if the private firms are unionized. Better quality and motivation of private firm managers may be another cause of lower costs.

However, for the decision whether or not to privatize in the end, the causes of lower costs are not important. Decisive is the empirical finding which show the savings from privatization almost always to average 50 percent.

The limit of privatization is not known. In some places in the United States traditional government services such as fire and police protection have been contracted out successfully. There is in principle no need to have the mails shipped in post-office trucks and delivered by mail carriers paid by Canada Post. We have only begun to probe the frontiers of the privatization opportunities in Canada.

A second form of privatization involves the sale of entire business entities previously owned and operated by the government.

Some of these entities were started originally by government because there was a perceived public need which the private sector did not meet. After an initial investment or some nonprofitable pampering, many of these enterprises have become profitable on a continuous basis. For this reason, the Cypress Bowl ski resort and the Beautiful British Columbia magazine concept and subscriber list can be sold to private operators by sealed bids, as the B.C. government announced recently.

The same forces that lead to savings under contracting out are probably also present in the privatization of entire firms. If this is so, the private profits will be greater than those the government had earned. This excess will be reflected in the sale price and means a net increase in government wealth.

Some government operations, such as the B.C. Ferries and railroads may never be profitable to operate for private entrepreneurs. This is so because often they are required to provide certain services below cost in the "public interest." Even such firms could be privatized profitably. All we need is competitive bidding for the right to operate these enterprises. The winner would be the one operating the system at the lowest cash subsidy. The same forces that make contracting out so advantageous would make these subsidies smaller than the ones needed under direct government operation.

Privatization in all its forms is a government policy whose time has come. What are we waiting for? (The writer is a professor of economics at Simon Fraser University.)

Time to tame the UI monster

The government in West Germany has tightened regulations on the program that provides benefits to the unemployed. So has the socialist government in France that has nationalized most of the country's banks.

In the United States, the national average of benefits to the unemployed has been held to about $15 per week.

Many countries, it seems, are either tightening up on unemployment payouts, or at least holding the line. But that's not so in Canada.

Here, the maximum weekly payout under unemployment insurance rules is $231 per week, and the average payment is $145 per week, about $20 higher than that in the U.S.

The point, of course, is that with weakened economies and the number of jobless at high levels (in Canada the unemployment rate is more than 12 percent of the work force), other countries are tightening the rules to ensure that only those who really need support get it.

In Canada, on the other hand, life at the Unemployment Insurance Commission seems to go on much as before, even though payouts are phenomenally higher.

In 1981, for instance, our unemployment insurance system cost employees, employers and the federal treasury about $4.8-billion.

The total 1982 outlay was $8.6-billion, and in 1983, unemployment insurance is expected to cost a staggering $11.6-billion. That's a whopping $100 per month for every working Canadian.

While there is a very real requirement to remain compassionate to the unemployed, particularly in troubled times, the rocketing costs of the system have gotten out of hand. Contributions by employers and employees, for example, were increased by 50 percent in January, and another large hike is expected at year-end.

These facts, among others, were stressed by John Bulloch, president of the Canadian Federation of Independent Business, at a recent meeting with finance minister Marc Lalonde. The organization is spearheading a drive to convince Ottawa to omit the anticipated year-end increase in contributions.

For smaller firms, such payroll tax increases are a near disaster because they must be paid, no matter if the firm is making or losing money.

There is a very real disincentive to expand and create new jobs, and, in fact, Ottawa seems to be pushing entrepreneurs to lay off employees to save payroll costs, as well as the taxes involved.

Few argue that the unemployment insurance rules are loose, for benefits are based on previous work experience and wages, rather than on whether or not the individual really needs the money. Under the present system, an unemployed person qualifies, even if he or she has just won a million dollar lottery prize!

What's needed is a complete overhaul of the system. Regulations should be tightened, thus saving cash for employees and employers, as well as other taxpayers.

As it stands, another major increase in contributions by employers will have a dampening effect on the ability of the job creators, particularly those in the small business sector, to provide the employment we so badly need.

Older workers face layoffs better

By LYDIA PAWLENKO

Losing a job is probably more of a blow to younger workers than older workers, according to a University of Guelph aging expert.

Older people are likely to have less trouble adjusting to being unemployed than young people, because they're usually in a more stable social and financial position, says gerontologist Dr. Joe Tindale.

There's a good chance that people who lost their jobs in later life will be unemployed for a longer period than younger workers, not be retrained for other work and retire prematurely. But they are likely to be rooted in communities where they own homes and have accumulated social support from their families, friends and neighbors, community and social service agencies and unions.

Younger unemployed people are more likely to move from the communities where they were last employed, so as to be closer to their families. Financially they're apt to be in worse shape than older unemployed workers because they don't have as much money saved, don't own homes and are not making pension contributions for later life.

Tindale is launching a study of the consequences of unemployment on families. His research will focus on finding differences in the impact on the families of younger and older workers. About 60 jobless people will be interviewed in Guelph, Cambridge and Brantford, which have high levels of unemployment.

As part of the study, Tindale will examine the role of spouses as social support mechanisms for unemployed persons.

This study is one of the research projects being conducted at the Gerontology Research Centre, founded by six faculty members from the University of Guelph, which will officially open at the university this fall. The centre specializes in the study of aging in relation to the family and environment.

Researchers at the centre already are examining such topics as the difference between aging in an urban and in a rural society, social competence in later life, adjustment to retirement, and housing and aging.

Good, but tough

It's a tough budget.

Cuts in services, increases in taxes and an unprecedented scene in which Socreds plan for a deficit.

We think it's harsh medicine in harsh times, and we admit it responds to the mandate given to the Socreds, but there are some things that bother us.

The most serious, of course, is the hike in sales tax. This will dampen the economy, and right now a lot of B.C.'s eggs are in the recovery basket.

Why eliminate the rentalsman? Sure the vacancy rate will take care of the amounts charged for rent, but won't we still need somebody to referee landlord-tenant disputes?

Why wasn't liquor hit with the same tax boost as cigarettes?

Combining the human rights branch and commission into the new council of human rights makes sense, but letting the council reject cases that seem "trivial, frivolous, vexatious or made in bad faith" is a mistake.

Doing away with regional district planning is another because crucial decisions will be made in Victoria by people less familiar with local conditions.

It's a good budget because it tackles the issue - restraint - but there are a lot of mistakes in it.

I love to listen to Pierre Trudeau. He has a marvelous way with words; his tongue alternately cuts like a knife or drips honey. But I don't necessarily believe anything he says. If he says there is a light at the end of a long tunnel, I wouldn't be surprised to find it was the headlight on a locomotive coming this way fast! -Clearwater Times

THE CANADIANIZATION OF CURRICULUM CONTENT

BURNABY - Children in Canada's schools are learning much more about their own country than they were just one and a half years ago, says an expert on media and communications.

Dr. Rowland Lorimer, associate professor of communications at Simon Fraser University, says his comparative studies show that as a result of pressure on educators by politicians and parents, Canadian content in language arts and social studies curriculums has increased greatly.

For example, he says, in B.C. in 1979, only two to three grades emphasized Canadian content in social studies curriculum; now, all but one grade has Canadianized what it teaches students.

As a result, concludes Lorimer, "we'll see a generation of Canadians more aware of and concerned with out own country."

A response to Canada Post

By ROGER WORTH

Canada Post president Michael Warren and his fellow executives were not amused by an earlier column that took the postal monopoly to task for unfairly competing with community newspapers.

Indeed, in a response that was printed in some papers, Canada Post claimed my column was "factually incorrect." Now that's a serious allegation against me personally, particularly considering the column is sent to about 500 community newspaper users across the country.

Even after follow-up discussions with Canada Post officials, there is but one reply: I stand by each and every fact in the earlier column.

The main point of that column deserves to be reiterated. Canada Post is using postmasters, postmistresses, and other staff to help develop a market for local advertising flyers, which are then delivered by the posties. These flyers effectively draw advertising dollars away from hard-pressed community papers, and particularly the smallest papers that are such an integral part of community life.

The problem: Canada Post, and by extension its employees, are subsidized by taxpayers to the tune of hundreds of millions of dollars per year. By using subsidized staff to compete in this market, Canada Post is creating unfair competition.,

Having said that, lets consider just one point made in Canada Post's reply.

The crown corporation takes great delight in emphasizing that more than one half the nations's community papers get free delivery of 2,500 copies per week, compliments of Canada Post. That would indeed be a feather in postal caps, if it were true. To borrow a phrase, Canada Post is "factually incorrect."

As part of a long-standing tradition, the federal government's department of communications actually pays Canada Post (now a crown corporation acting independently on its own) for subsidized delivery of magazines and newpapers, both dailies and weeklies.

The policy is a good one. Our forefathers (and mothers) understodd the necessity and crucial importance of information and communications to a growing country as large and diverse as Canada. So they created the publications subsidy that has worked so well to ensure a free press in Canada.

"We estimate Canada Post received about $13-million from the department of communicatons to cover the cost of free delivery of community papers last year," says Jim Dill, executive director of the Canadian Community Newspaper Association.

With its huge deficit, there is no question Canada Post could use extra revenue derived from such operations as Admail, the postal enterprise that promotes the use of flyers, sales pieces, and other gimmicks delivered through the mails.

But when heavily subsidized postal staff are involved in creating direct competition for smaller fringe papers, many of them fighting for survival, something is amiss.

In the earlier column, I said Michael Warren and Canada Post should be ashamed of themselves, and suggested they state categorically that their employees will no longer participate in such unfair ventures. I stand by that statement.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Since I'm still free

Editor, The Star, Sir:

They have no right to speak for me
The ones called
Solidarity
They speak at rallies on the news
They say my government's Confused
They say they speak for all B.C.
But that's not so
They don't for me
They're not the ones for whom I vote
They're not the ones
Who steer my boat
Please don't assume they speak for me
When with their stand
I don't agree
I cast my vote for government
With their reform
I am content
I did not vote for union chiefs
Concerned with voicing
All their beefs
Their rally at the stadium
Was just for them
A podium
A day off work seemed more the aim
Of those who joined
The grumbling game
And uniforms out on parade
Please tell me who
For them has paid
I've heard them, too, on radio
On "paid for" ads
I'm not that slow
I've heard them say repression's here
That all of us
Should feel some fear
But understand that if that's so
They'd never reach
My radio
Our human rights are not denied
It's just that now
We won't be spied
They're charted now by Canada
Complaints should go
To Ottawa
And as for jobs they say are lost
What's wrong with being
Our own boss
No business man can sue himself
When there's no cash
Upon his shelf
And rent controls that are repealed
Mean honest people
Do not steal
There is no need of government
To tell us we
Should pay more rent
Evictions, too, can work both ways
It's now the court
That says who pays
What's wrong with rights now heard in court
Where one the other
Can't extort
I do not feel some agency
Has right to judge
My home for me
I know quite well some luxuries
Have disappeared
To meet the freeze
For instance, there's a magazine
That says B.C.
Is pure and clean
But that just tells about the land
And not the ones
Who make demand
This publishing by government
Should not be how
Their time is spent
There's many things not said for me
By this group
Solidarity
At least my premier had some sense
And stayed at work
He's not that dense
The rights that last are self-controlled
And not by parliament
Patrolled
Our honesty and decency
Cannot be forced
By some decree
We all do right because we care
And not because
Some law is there
Now government will leave us be
To live our lives
Because we're free
The only ones who make complaints
Are those who still Need more restraints
The problem's Solidarity
Who can't accept
Their parity
For years they wanted parity
With private people
Just like me
But now they think it's poverty
They can't accept
Equality
I cast my vote for government
And I, for one
Do not repent
My vote's responsibility
And not for
Solidarity
They have no right to speak for me
That right is mine
Since I'm still free.

Sincerely yours,

M.L.A. REPORT

Health care remains a Socred priority

By BOB McCLELLAND, MLA

British Columbians benefit from one of the finest health care systems on this continent. I am proud that our government is committed to further improvement, even during these tough economic times.

Ours is a basic two-part insurance program. The government some thirty years ago decided that hospital insurance should be a top priority for all British Columbians. The only qualification should be residence. Medical services insurance, on the other hand, would be better provided on a voluntary basis. Each individual would make up his or her mind whether to enter the program in return for a reasonable premium. The benefits of the two different formats are simple. Hospital costs make up the portentially back-breaking part of major health-care payments. By comparison, medical service expenses, the fees charged by doctors and surgeons, are smaller and easier to handle.

When we hear horror stories of individuals in the U.S. being forced into bankruptcy by enormous medical bills, it is hospital costs, which are the cause. In British Columbia today, the average 24-hour hospital stay costs $300. In some hospitals, the price can be as high as $600. Multiplied by the number of days of treatment, such a bill can quickly sky-rocket -- often at the most difficult of times. It is our government's firm commitment that no British Columbia resident shall be faced with such ruinous charges.

Our hospital insurance is a co-insurance program. The cost is shared by the provincial treasury and the patient. There is no premium. Rather there is a minimal co-insurance charge for each day of hospital service. As would seem reasonable, it is government which bears the major brunt of the co-insurance costs. Next month the co-insurance will rise, by a nominal one-dollar in most cases. The exception will be hospital emergency service, where there will be a six-dollar increase. It has been obvious for some time that emergency service has been subject to abuse, with more serious cases having to wait because of patients seeking treatment for minor problems that could be better handled by their private doctors.

It is worth noting that none of the increases, with the exception of emergency service, comes close to keeping pace with inflation. And 97 percent of all hospital insurance costs come directly out of the provincial budget, and only three percent from patients' co-insurance payments.

Since 1968 our medical services plan has proved to be an unqualified success, paying doctors' fees on behalf of its subscribers. This is the program for which we pay premiums, which actually cover only forty percent of its operating costs. As I said, this is a purely voluntary program. The fact that there is hardly a person in this province who has chosen not to use it clearly demonstrates its effectiveness. And premium assistance is always available to those on limited incomes.

We have medical services of which we can be truly proud. We have more first-class medical expertise per capita than any province. People come from around the world to study and copy our provincial ambulance system. Our air ambulances make the finest medical care available to residents of even the most remote regions. Such fine new facilities as Vancouver's Children's and Grace hospitals draw the most skilled teachers and researchers, and offer the very best of care to all the people of this province.

Ministry of health programs now cost more than $6-million every single day. It accounts for thirty percent of the total provincial budget. And that doesn't include other ministries' health-related costs, such as human resources' $74 million Pharmacare program. Over the past five years the ministry of health expenditures have jumped by 140 percent, compared with an overall provincial budget increase of only 97 percent. This dramatic jump has been partly due to increased costs of labor and doctors' fees. But, even more so, it has been because of the introduction of new and better services.

British Columbia has long been a Canadian leader in the fields of medical insurance and medical care. We are still in the lead. Where there is real financial hardship, our government will continue to ensure that none need do without. For those that can affort is, surely a one-dollar increase on the co-insurance charge is a tiny price to pay.

ASK ANNABELLE

Dear Annabelle,

My daughter, aged 14, fell a few weeks ago and broke her two front teeth. She was playing tennis at the time. She now refuses to go out with her friends and I am heartsick. She does not want to go back to school in September either. What can I do? I would take her to a plastic surgeon if you recommend it. She is such a pretty girl.

Signed: Broken-hearted mother.

Dear Broken-hearted,

Who runs things around your house, you or your daughter? For goodness sake take her to your family dentist. This is what he has spent years at school learning to do. He will recommend an orthodontist who will have this young person looking like her old self in no time. If your house is burning you would call the fire department, wouldn't you?

Dear Annabelle,

I have this problem with my left big toe. Everywhere I go I always wind up stubbing it. How can this be? My toes are hardly long enough to catch on anything, but it never fails. Is there a cure for this?

Signed: At a loss, Toe Throb.

Dear Toe Throb,

That's it, I think I have now heard it all...maybe you are one of those incredibly unfortunate people who have been born with two left feet. Try taking higher steps. If that doesn't work get yourself a pair of steel-toed work boots. Of course you will have to buy two pairs to get two left ones. The cost is great, but the relief is wonderful.

Slimmer earth has shorter days

The earth has been losing its equatorial "spare tire" and is now sporting a trimmer figure. But this slimmer earth has shorter days, says a researcher from the University of Toronto.

Actually, the planet has been slimming down ever since the last ice age ended. Fifty thousand years ago, when the ice age was at its peak, the earth bulged out at the equator. The enormous mass of ice that pressed down on Antarctica and the northern continents caused the land under the ice to sink and the equator to expand. (The ice that covered North America alone had a mass of 20 billion-billion kilograms.)

But ever since the ice melted, the northern continents have been rising and the equatorial bulge has been shrinking.

A geophysicist at the University of Toronto, Dr. Richard Peltier, theorizes that the shrinkage of the earth's waisline is causing earth's days to become shorter.

Peltier uses the analogy of a spinning figure skater to explain why this is happening. A spinning skater draws in her arms to speed up; in a similar manner, the earth's shrinking waistline is causing the planet's rotation to speed up and faster rotation means a shorter day.

Manor now at full occupancy

By ERNEST CLUETT

ALDERGROVE - The annual meeting of the Jackman Manor complex took place Thursday, August 11, in the activity room in the intermediate care centre. Brian McMillan was in the chair and Vicki Cebula acted as secretary. The rental complex is fully occupied and the goal of making it a retirement place for seniors has been accomplished.

The 75-bed intermediate care centre opened December 1, 1982 and most of the problems that gave concern have now been rectified. The smoke detectors are being fixed at a cost of $58 per hour plus travel time from Richmond. Fire regulations are in force and the staff have begun regular fire drills.

Harry Lawn, the administrator gave an account of progress so far and praised the staff for their efforts on behalf of the residents. There were 104 admissions, 26 discharges and three deaths in the nine months of operation.

A slate of officers were elected to the Aldergrove senior housing society, five directors for the Lions Grove Estates and nine for Jackman Manor.

It was brought out at the OAPO convention last June that we have 110,255 (65 - 69 years of age, 142,216 (70 - 79 years) and 11,443 (90 or over). We have 250 seniors over 100 years of age, for a total as of March 31, 1983 of 321,457 which total increases at the rate of 1,000 each month. As of March 31, 1983 the pension total was one billion, 928 million, 742 thousand dollars per year.

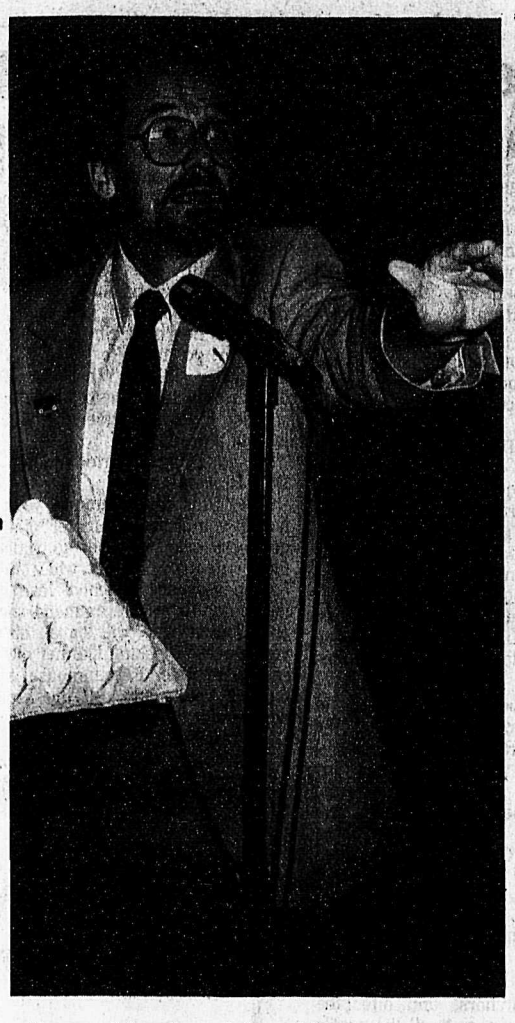
We are 28 percent of the voting public. In another eight years we will outnumber the 18-to-35 year group. The facts of life that worries me is that in eight years with old age pensions of over $2½-billions per year the prime target, for protected unions with guaranteed tenure of jobs and private pension funds to look after their old age, will be the large annual amount paid to our people.

I have no faith in the generosity of our labor leaders towards those of us on the minimum pension and the joining of labor and the elected government of that year in an effort to trim the public scheme to benefit the private plans will certainly take place if we do not solidly support our OAP organizations to fight on our behalf.

For every three dollars collected in taxes, one dollar goes for interest on debt. In eight years at our borrowing rate to run the country the rate could reach two dollars out of three. Don't forget that all debt has to be repaid, otherwise default is followed always by anarchy.

In B.C. there are more federal employees than there are B.C. civil servants and the many accounts of the finding of misspending of our money by the audit department of the government has been covered in most of the press. In the last two years Ottawa has accumulated over $50-billons of debts, and interest charges alone add another $18-billion to the amount. Where can it end?

Doris says a woman who talks all day deserves a husband who snores all night.



Harvey Schroeder, B.C. minister of agriculture, auctioned off a tray of eggs last year for $1,200 at the PNE. Schroeder will return this year to help with the auction during the fair, August 20 to Sept. 5. Proceeds from the auction go to the B.C. Lions society for crippled children.

How to spot an ailing car

By PAUL JACOT

Car repairs these days can be expensive. We have all had the shock of being presented with a repair bill that represents a good chunk of a weekly salary.

It makes good sense then to keep an eye on trouble areas of your car and monitor them before they turn into expensive repair bills. Here are a few helpful hints which can save you a lot of money in the long run.

Motor oil - low levels can mean that oil and filter changes may have been put off. It can also mean a leak, which is more serious.

Alignment - if the car pulls to one side when stopping it could mean that your wheel alignment is off.

Tires - tread wear indicators showing across two or more ot the grooves mean the tire should be replaced.

Steering - excessive play in the steering wheel can mean a worn or faulty steering box, or worn or faulty steering ball joints.

Battery - if the battery levels are maintained, you will get longer life from your battery.

Car vibrations - if your vehicle shakes at 80-100 kilometers per hour, then you probably have defective tires or your wheel balance is off.

Exhaust system - leaks in the exhaust system are dangerous. Carbon monoxide poisoning happens too frequently.

Signals - signal lights which don't work usually mean a burned out bulb or a defective flasher.

Gala exhibit at museum

LANGLEY - Over 30 artists and craftspeople have been invited to participate in a gala exhibition of their talents to be held in the Langley Centennial museum in Fort Langley, from September 4 until October 9.

A well known designer, Evelyn Kingston of Fort Langley, will assist the volunteer committee of the Langley arts council, with the planning of the displays for exhibiting.

Included in this month long event will be paintings in oils, acrylics, and watercolors, pottery, wood crafts, fibre arts, and sculpture -- each created for this display. The Langley artists will also feature many of their choice works for sale to the visiting public.

A "meet the artists" reception will take place on Sunday, September 4, in the museum.

Thanks from Alder CATS

ALDERGROVE - The Alder CATS would like to thank everyone for the support of the coffee break, which was very successful. The raffle prize, a clock from Warkentin's Jewellers, was won by Sheryl (Dimples) Kroeken. Five door prizes were also given out. A special thanks to the owners and staff of the Faithful Restaurant who served the crowd of over 80 people.

Future coffee breaks, their dates, times, and location will be announced in this paper. We invite all those interested in the club and its community services to come and have coffee with us.

Othello next in line at Shakespeare festival in park

Perhaps the most interesting production of the Vancouver Shakespeare Festival's inaugural season is still to come. It is one thing to whip the bloomers off dear old Will in the comedies, "but what", you may well ask, "are they going to do with the real thing (assuming that tragedies and histories are somehow more worthwhile)?"

Come and see! You will get a chance on Friday, August 19 at the festival tent in Vanier Park at 8 p.m. when the curtain goes up on Othello.

"Othello is a simple play. It is in essence a melodrama - a battle to the death between the representatives of good and evil. Iago and Othello are both brilliant men; the difference lies in the direction in which they use their talents," says Eric Epstein, the director of this production.

It is the first of Shakespeare's great tragedies and as such has its limitations. It is grand, the characters are extreme in their virtues or vices, and the subplots are virtually non-existent. This leaves little room for error. One of the strengths of the festival to this point is its ability to make the text clear to the audiences, and if they succeed this time then the future is assured.

William Taylor, a relatively unknown Vancouver actor, has won the role of Othello on the basis of many favourable aspects, not the least of which was a stunning audition. He is best remembered for his performance in Athol Fugard's The Island with Westcoast Actors. Sharon Anderson faces the toughest challenge in her young career in the role of Desdemona, and Charles Martin Smith comes out of the forest to tackle the role of Iago. Susan Williamson and John Moffat complete the major roles as Emilia, Iago's brutalized wife, and Cassio.

The court of Venice is made up of William Samples, Perry Long, Duncan Fraser and Christopher Gaze as the Duke, Brabantio, Gratiano and Lodovico respectively. Duncan Fraser is assisting Eric Epstein as assistant director.

Completing the cast are Gillian Barber (Bianca), Barbara Stepkowsko (Herald), Richard Sali (Clown), Keigh Gordey (Montano), Todd Duckworth (Roderigo) and Bruce Dinsmore (Messenger).

It should be noted that the festival has now changed over to a semi-repertory format with As You Like It being performed on Wednesday and Thursday until the opening of Othello. During the week of August 22 to 27 it will be possible to see all three plays on consecutive nights, and on August 28 all three plays will be presented on the same day, at 11 a.m., 3 p.m., and 8 p.m.

Performances of A Midsummer Night's Dream have been sell-outs since the first preview, and there is a possibility of a hold-over at another location.

"El Grande" still going strong

El Grande De Coca Cola Arts Club Theatre's hilarious pull-out-the-stops parody of an international cabaret revue is now in its fourth hit month at the Revue Theatre on Granville Island. Showtimes are Monday at 8:30 p.m. (2 for 1 at door), Tuesday through Thursday at 8:30, Fridays at 5:30 (½ price at door) and 8:30 p.m., and Saturdays at 6:30 and 9:30 p.m., until September 3.

Papa Pepe Hernandez, a third rate impresario, has boasted that an internationally famous cabaret revue will be headlining at the Hernandez family's rundown nightclub in Trujillo, Honduras. Pepe's uncle, the local Coca Cola bottler, has agreed to bankroll the show in exchange for free advertising, and it's showtime for Papa Pepe's "Parada de Estrellas". We all know that the "all star, international revue" doesn't exist, at least not in Honduras, so it's up to Pape Pepe and his "no-talent" family to carry on with their own manic parody of a nightmare talent revue, all in a fractured Spanish that must be heard to be believed.

Mario Crudo, the director, has added El Grande De Coca Cola a string of hits that includes Reflections on Crooked Walking, Nurse Jane Goes to Hawaii, and most recently, the Arts Club Theatre's remount production of last season's runaway hit comedy, Talking Dirty.

THE HEADPINS

Part-time band climb to the top in Canada

Headpins have made a lot of noise in their short history. In one recording year, their status changed from a part-time 'fun' band to one of Canada's premier rock attractions. With the release of Turn It Loud in July 1982, Headpins took the country by storm, racing up the charts to challenge veteran superstars for no. 1 positioning, and with sales well surpassing double platinum rivalling previous standards for sales of a Canadian debut album. On tour, they jousted with headliners for media attention and audience fervency, and by the end of the year, had amassed irrefutable credibility with awards and nominations in the national arena.

The explanation for such comprehensive impact is simple; attitude. Headpins work hard and play hard, projecting a rock and roll attitude that is intense, insistent and intelligent.

Their story begins with controversy. In late 1979, Brian MacLeod and Ab Bryant as members of Chilliwack, were prevented from performing by record company litigation. Both essentially 'live' players, they found themselves in need of a creative outlet, as well as a means to return to the intimacy of a live audience. Together with Matt Frenette (Loverboy) and Denise McCann (R & B Allstars), they formed Headpins - a temporary club act that toured the Vancouver circuit.

Sooner than they had anticipated, Headpins generated a local hard core following. Their audience expanded quickly into standing - room - only crowds, and netted them the B.C. Caras award for "Best Club Act" in 1981. In the meantime, Matt had left Headpins to resume touring commitments with Loverboy, and was replaced by Bernie Aubin - also a Loverboy drummer, and co-writer of "The Kid Is Hot Tonight." Denise McCann bowed out to Darby Mills, then touring with a nine piece rhythm and blues showband. Her decision to join Headpins was not an easy one. She was well aware of the temporary nature of the project, but the opportunity to perform with established artists such as Brian and Ab overrode any second thoughts.

Darby Mills proved to be the catalyst in the Headpins chemistry. She was later described in the Toronto Sun as "...visually and vocally, Mills is a natural wonder. If hard rock hadn't existed, her voice would have necessitated its invention." She became Headpins' counterpin, and while critics searched for superlatives, comparing her voice to Joplin and Plant, Darby developed her own unique, charasmatic vocal signature.

In the summer of 1981, Headpins were included on Vancouver Seeds Two - a compilation of local talent produced and distributed by CFOX FM. The live version of "Breakin' Down" became the no. 1 most requested song in Vancouver and brought Headpins straight to record company attention.

Headpins went into the studio to record for Solid Gold Records under the production direction of Brian MacLeod. By the end of the recording project, Chilliwack's legal hassles had been solved, and Brian and Ab were obliged to redirect their energy to Chilliwack. In July 1982, while Chilliwack was in the studio recording Opus X, Turn It Loud was released. Although Brian and Ab were writers, musicians and creators of Turn It Loud, they were listed only in the production credits. To the rest of the country (outside B.C.) Headpins was Darby Mills.

DARBY MILLS

Supported by two hired Vancouver musicians, Darby embarked on a 40 date cross country tour with label mates, Toronto. The tour augmented Turn It Loud's already impressive sales and airplay but more importantly, it gave Darby a feel for the larger stage. She teamed her androgynous vocal dynamics with an athletic mastery of the stage, (long practised through her 12 years as a figure skater) and dominated performance after performance. By the time the tour had reached its end Turn It Loud had achieved platinum sales status, Darby Mills was labelled an 'unbridled rockstress', and Headpins were heralded as "Vancouver's Next Big Success Story."

Three prairie dates with Billy Squire affirmed Headpins' mass appeal when they not only accounted for the majority of ticket sales, but stole audiences and headlines. A subsequent tour with Kiss and one nighter supports with Pat Travers and Streetheart fully established Headpins as headliners in their own right. In the spring of 1983, Headpins toured Canada on their own strength.

In the meantime, Headpins founders, Brian MacLeod and Ab Bryant were touring with Chilliwack, following the release of Opus X.

Award season in Canada found both bands highly honoured. At the Tribute to West Coast Music Award, Chilliwack swept the categories, but it was no secret that the honours bestowed MacLeod, Bryant and Henderson for guitarist, keyboardist, producer and bassist were in part due to their participation on Turn It Loud. In the Shure Rock Music Awards, Darby Mills was voted as the Country's Top Female Vocalist, and Headpins won Top New Group. Juno nominations followed for Headpins in the Album of the Year and Most Promising Group categories, and MacLeod-Henderson took the award for Producer of the Year.

One week after the Junos, it was announced that Brian and Ab were now official Headpins members. Their decision to leave Chilliwack was both amicable and inevitable. Both Brian and Ab had found their musical preferences to be leaning ever closer to Headpins - loud, aggressive and commanding rock and roll.

Headpins entered the studio in the summer of 1983 strong in the knowledge that their future as a creative unit was finally guaranteed. Now, with the release of Line of Fire, their second album for Solid Gold Records, they can proudly proclaim to the rest of the world just who and what Headpins really are.

Their second album, produced by Brian MacLeod and assisted by Ab Bryant is a product of timeless feel and intensity, saturated with a rock and roll attitude that is powerful enough to drive straight through any current trend and hang in there for decades.

GARDENING IN THE VALLEY

Readers share recipes

By DON ANSON

This week's garden column will mostly be a cookery column because numerous people have sent in recipes since I asked for them a few weeks ago.

Mrs. Shirley Politano from 666 Folsom St., Coquitlam sends in the following and they really sound good.

Deep fried zucchini

10 slices (medium) zucchini
¼ c. vegetable oil
1 egg (beaten)
¾ c. all-purpose flour
1-1½ c. fine, dry breadcrumbs
¼ c. Romano cheese (grated)
salt, pepper to taste

Heat oil in electric frypan set at 380 deg. F. While oil is heating, combine breadcrumbs and cheese in one flat, shallow pan. Combine flour, salt and pepper in another flat pan and egg in a flat pan. Dip zucchini slices into flour, then into beaten egg, then into crumb mixture. Fry 4-5 slices, turn and fry other sides until golden. Remove to a cookie sheet and keep hot in 350 deg. oven. Now do the other slices as directed. Serve immediately for four people...

Italian zucchini slices

12 slices zucchini (thin)
½ c. sliced onion
½ tsp. salt
¼ tsp. pepper
1 tbsp. chopped parsley
¼ c. vegetable oil
½ tsp. crushed oregano
pinch of sugar
7½ oz. canned tomato sauce
Romano cheese (grated - ¼ cup

Heat oil in electric frypan set at 360 deg. F. While oil is heating, slice zucchini and onions. When pan is preheated, add zucchini and saute until light golden. Now add onion slices and saute until light in color. Sprinkle salt and pepper and oregano over top. Then add tomato sauce and pinch of sugar, stir lightly. Put lid on pan and bring temperature down to simmer. Do this for 20-30 minutes. Sprinkle cheese on top and serve for four people. This is a great sidedish with most meats.

ITALIAN DANDELION SALAD

Pick young, tender dandelion leaves before bloom arrives

2-3 boiled, cold potatoes (chopped)
2 hard cooked sliced eggs
fresh garlic
1 tsp. salt
½ tsp. pepper
6 tbsp. olive oil
4 tbsp. wine vinegar

Cut dandelion leaves close to the roots and soak in plenty of fresh water. Dry on large towel. Rub wooden bowl with garlic clove. Add lots of dandelion leaves, eggs, potatoes and sprinkle with salt and pepper. Put in oil and toss then sprinkle with wine vinegar and toss again. Serve after main course or with garlic toast.

Yet another zucchini recipe from Mrs. Joan Atchison of 19166-61A Ave., Surrey.

Zucchini pie

1 medium onion, thinly sliced
2 tbsp. margarine
1 tbsp. flour
1 pound zucchini, thinly sliced
2 medium tomatoes, diced
½ tsp. salt
¼ tsp. black pepper
½ tsp. basil, crumbled
½ tsp. marjoram
¾ cup wheat germ
6 oz. sharp Cheddar cheese

Use your own recipe for pastry for a two crust, nine inch pie. Add quarter cup wheat germ into dry ingredients for pastry. Add more water if necessary. Roll out half pastry to fit 9 inch plate. Sprinkle with half cup wheat germ. Spoon in half of vegetable filling. Layer with Cheddar cheese. Top with remaining vegetables. Roll out remaining pastry to fit top. Crimp edges and prick air holes. Bake in preheated oven at 400 degrees for 25-30 minutes or until golden. This makes servings for six.

All zucchinis, squash and marrows need plenty of moisture at all times if they are to perform well and produce meaningful crops.

FORT LANGLEY - Pictured above are some of the Langley Cenennial Museum and National Exhibition Centre's volunteer crew. These women devote three to four hours of their time, each week, to assisting with the operation of the museum. The volunteers contribute in a variety of ways.

Some act as program guides in workshops and tours for school classes. Others help install art, science and histroy exhibits and assist with office work.

The volunteers take part in a training program of lectures and field trips throughout the year. Their first meeting for the coming season will take place on Thursday, September 15 at 10 a.m. All those interested in becoming a museum volunteer are invited to attend.

The museum and exhibition centre is open from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m., Tuesday to Saturday, and from 1 to 5 p.m. on Sunday. It is located on the corner of Mavis and King Streets.

Labor minister calls on employers to improve human rights records

VICTORIA - In a recent speech to employer groups, labor minister Bob McClelland called for co-operation in reducing the incidence of employment discrimination.

"The new human rights act does not mean a holiday from human rights in British Columbia," he said. It will be anything but, as far as the government is concerned. A lot will depend on how you, the people here today, representing British Columbia's business and industrial communities, landlords groups and public sector employers, react to the new legislation."

McClelland told the audience that more than two-thirds of the human rights complaints received in 1982 dealt with workplace problems. He challenged the employer group representatives to take the initiative to prevent workplace discrimination by creating an advisory bureau on human rights to help educate all employers on their rights and responsibilities.

Lake community hides loot from B.C.'s biggest robbery

Bizarre crimes and strange thefts were not uncommon in the rough-and-tumble days which saw a railway punched through the Canadian Rockies into British Columbia. But one stands out as the strangest theft of them all.

It was not just the thieves' cunning, or the complicity of railway and steamboat officials, or even the final dramatic double-cross, that makes this heist so remarkable. It is what they got away with -- the whole of Saint Peter's Anglican Church!

Today, St. Peter's stands exactly where the thieves left it, tucked away in the lakeside community of Windermere, in eastern British Columbia's Columbia River Valley. The thieves had a good eye for location: the church perches atop a knoll with a view of the Purcell Mountains and Lake Windermere on one side, and the Rocky Mountains on the other.

But back in 1887, St. Peter's began life in the railway town of Donald, 209 kilometres (130 miles) away. Ten years later, the Canadian Pacific Railway altered the church's destiny by moving its operations 104 kilommetres (65 miles) westward. Donald emptied as most of its inhabitants trundled off, down the tracks, to the burgeoning town of Revelstoke.

But two of the townsfolk had different plans. Rufus and Celina Kimpton were moving to Windermere and they wanted their new community to have a church. Ignoring the fact that St. Peter's had been promised to Revelstoke, the Kimptons dismantled the church and loaded it onto a railway flatcar.

While most of Donald was moving west, the church hopped a freight train, heading east. From the railway yards at Golden, the church was spirited onto a waiting steamboat, and shipped down the Columbia River to its new home. Only then did the Kimptons discover that they had been double-crossed. The church's 270 kilogram (600 pound) bell had disappeared en route!

Cries of "foul" and other un-ecclesiastical exclamations were heard from one end of the province to the other, when the citizens of Revelstoke discovered their church in Windermere, and those of Windermere discovered their bell - hanging in a church steeple - in Golden.

In that era, possession was more than nine points of the law, and the protests had no effect. So today, you can still find St. Peter's bell calling worshippers to St. Paul's, in Golden and Donald's stolen church welcoming visitors to Windermere.
