Brideshead Revisited

"Great Performances" over PBS, will air the eighth episode, "Brideshead Deserted," Monday, Aug. 29 on PBS.

Lord Brideshead (Simon Jones) commissions Charles Ryder (Jeremy Irons) to paint the Marchmain's London house before it is demolished to settle family debts. After completing the paintings, Charles travels through Mexico and Central America. He returns to New York and joins his wife, Celia (Jane Asher), who has come from England to meet him. Their first night together ends with Celia in tears.

On board ship on their return to England, the Ryders discover that Lady Julia (Diana Quick, pictured), now Mrs. Rex Mottram, is a fellow passenger. As the luxury ship heads into the Atlantic storm, Celia remains in the room and Charles finds himself again falling under the Marchmain spell.

James Bond (George Lazenby) is altar-bound, but matrimony is doubly dangerous for James and his bride (Diana Rigg) in ON HER MAJESTY'S SECRET SERVICE "The ABC Monday Night Movie," airing Monday, Aug. 29.

Racetrack just isn't wanted anywhere

By IAN CAMERON

ALDERGROVE - Residents living near the Aldergrove Lake regional park suggested as an alternative that a large-scale motorsport complex be established at Mission rather than in South Aldergrove, but this clearly did not please the chairman of the Central Fraser Valley regional district.

So the citizens committee to preserve the park decided on the spot to exclude any references to another possible racetrack location from a 12-page brief they had submitted to the regional board just a few minutes earlier.

"The raceway at Mission is not too pleasant," said Matsqui mayor Harry DeJong. It is situated right across the Fraser River from DeJong's dairy farm on Matsqui prairie.

In the brief prepared by Patricia Lawrence and read by committee chairman Patrick Boyle it was suggested that the Mission racetrack could be expanded to include the various aspects of motorsports which had been included in a proposal for a massive development at the south Aldergrove park. These included cars, bikes and ultra-light aircraft.

In return for Boyle's accommodating gesture, his committee won immediate official CFVRD support.

Boyle said the original brief had included references to Mission and also to the Boundary Bay airport site in order to make a show of fairness toward the 35 provincial motorsports organizations that would benefit from a facility at Aldergrove Lake now being proposed by the park owners, the Greater Vancouver regional district, and the provincial government's branch of industry and small business development.

Boyle also said that he could not envisage any other possible site than Mission.

Other board members said it would be wrong to suggest any other municipality or regional district as a possible site for "this undesirable type of operation."

They voted to receive and support the committee's revised brief and to congratulate Boyle on the presentation.

Directors also suggested the Aldergrove man take the presentation directly to the GVRD board at a future meeting in September or October.

Citizens committee was hastily formed in early June after the residents first got wind of the proposal.

At that time a spokesman for the motor enthusiasts suggested that it made small difference where his people would be looking for a racetrack facility. It would automatically be opposed no matter where the location, Ed Hudson told a township meeting in Murrayville where Boyle was present as well.

"Everywhere the attitude is; 'what a good idea'," Hudson said, " 'but we don't want it here'."

It seems he was right in this aspect.

"Where are the other, better sites?" he also asked. "I would like to know where."

A Langley alderman, who is also a director on the CFVRD board, had suggested that surely there were other, and better, sites.

Suggested sites withdrawn

By RUDY LANGMANN

ALDERGROVE - A multi-million-dollar racetrack facility on 300 acres of land inside the Aldergrove Lake regional park would be "incompatible with and destructive of the normally accepted functions of the park," was the main thrust of a brief presented to Central Fraser Valley regional district last week.

As a basic alternative the Preserve Aldergrove regional park committee suggested that if the Greater Vancouver regional district, the owners of the park, thought they had too much on their hands they should consider selling portions of the property back to the public, but strictly for agricultural purposes.

"It could revert to agricultural usage in private hands for the reasons we suggest," the brief stated, "and that may well constitute the preferred public policy, in our view."

As the "ideal site" to facilitate motorsports fans, the committee's brief suggested the north-shore community of Mission or the Boundary Bay airport in Delta, but these proposed sites were quickly scrapped after board members found the two suggestions either inconvenient or imprudent.

The provincial government and the GVRD are presently conducting an impact study into the location of a racetrack at Aldergrove Lake. Local citizens not involved in motorsports activities are obviously upset.

Government continues to spend more than it takes in OTTAWA - The government spent almost $2.9-billion more than it earned in April, up from the $2.7-billion deficit recorded in April, 1982.

Figures outlining the government's financial operations for the first month of the 1983-84 fiscal year show Ottawa spent $5.811 billion in April and took in $2.922 billion.

By comparison, government expenditures in April, 1982, totalled $5.304 billion, while revenues were $2.605 billion.

The government has projected a total deficit of $31.3-billion for the current fiscal year, but finance department officials say it is too early to say whether the forecast is on track.

Officials said they require four or five months worth of statistics before they can see a pattern developing because there are so many variations from month to month on both the spending and revenue sides.

Be a rare bird . . . visit Red Cross clinic

ALDERGROVE - The summer blood donor is a rare bird. Be one!" is the summer theme of the Red Cross donor clinics. Let it be yours when the Red Cross clinic comes to the OAP hall here (at 273 Street and 30 Ave.) tomorrow, Thursday, Aug. 25.

"The last clinic on May 19 was magnificent," says Wendy Kydd. "301 caring people came out to donate and we hope to see them all again and encourage each person to bring a friend."

The local organizer says that in the summer people tend to neglect giving blood because of holidays but their donations are needed more than ever. Also, because of fiscal cutbacks the Red Cross needs 25,000 new donors in the lower mainland this year to meet their quotas. Luckily, giving blood does not touch a donor's budget - only one half hour of his or her time.

The Aldergrove Kinsmen have donated a trophy for the school that gets out the most donors in their name. Teachers and pupils are urged to start off the new school year by helping win a trophy for their school.

If you can't donate blood but are able to donate a few hours of your time helping at a clinic, you should contact Kydd at 856-6591.

"We still serve the best coffee and donuts in town (free)," says Wendy. "Remember, giving blood is so easy, you can do it lying down. Feel good - save a life - give blood, tomorrow August 25."

Legion posts reward

ALDERGROVE - A $1,000 reward has been posted by branch 265 of the Royal Canadian Legion for information that could lead to the return of 8-year-old Teri Lynn Scalf.

Child is now missing for the fifth consecutive week.

Teri, who was last seen on Sunday, July 24 at 4 o'clock in the vicinity of her home at 71 - 27456 - 32 Avenue, was born Aug. 11, 1975.

She is described as being 3 feet 9 inches tall, weighing about 65 pounds, with blonde waist-length hair, blue eyes, and a front bottom tooth missing.

When she disappeared she was wearing a light orange tank top with blue and gold trim, "USA" on front and "14" on back. Her shorts were white with red trim. She was wearing no socks or shoes.

Police have no leads in the missings person case.

Merchants join hunt

ALDERGROVE - Several local businessmen have indicated that they would contribute funds to a reward which would be paid to the person or persons who could contribute information that would lead to the finding of 8-year-old Teri Lynn Scalf who disappeared last month without leaving a trace.

The local Legion has already posted a $1,000 reward and the merchants would like to add to this amount.

Indications are that the Aldergrove and district chamber of commerce would act as a clearing house that would coordinate such a community effort.

Local chamber president Kathy Thompson says the organization would arrange for donations to the fund to be placed in trust until such time as new information would lead to the return of the child.

Three conquer Baker

ALDERGROVE - A team of three Aldergrove men planted the Canadian colors at the summit of Mt. Baker Sunday morning.

Mark Langmann, Alan Major and Rudy Langmann scaled the 10,778-foot mountain from the Coleman glacier and arrived at the summit at 10:35 a.m. The weather was perfect and they reported the view from "the top" to be tremendous, with landmarks as far away as Vancouver Island and Oregon state being visible. To the north the Fraser Valley and the massive mountains of the British Columbia coastal range were clearly visible.

A REPORTER'S OPINION

Don't do away with Colony Farms

By LYNDA FRANZ

COQUITLAM - Should the government be allowed to manipulate agricultural land for the alleged purpose of free enterprise and restraint?

Colony Farms of 500 Lougheed Highway in Coquitlam is going to the legislature to see if the farm will be saved or turned over to private ownership.

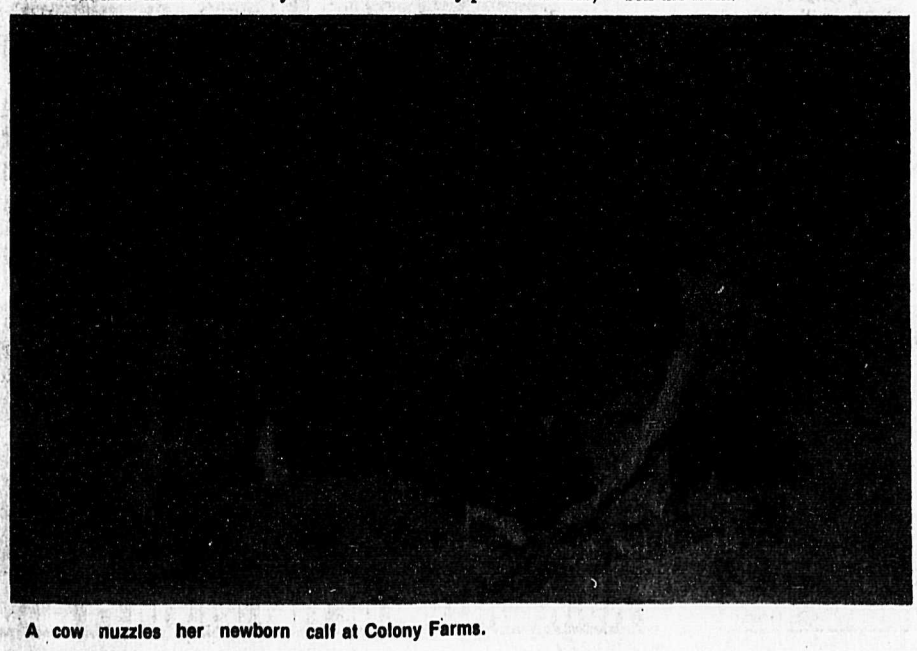
The major cry of the government is that they no longer want to use the taxpayers' money to pay the large deficits incurred by the farm. However, Walter Siemplekamp, the manager of Colony, has changed that. In the last three years a deficit of $1 million was added to the farm books. Now the farm is grossing $1-million and has a net deficit of only $30,000. It seems unlikely that the taxpayers will have to pay very much, if anything.

The 670-acre farm is of excellent soil quality. If it was sold, one source stated that some of the land would be worth $175,000 per acre. On the farm site is the forensic rehabiliation centre for the criminally insane. What would happen to the patients? To relocate and rebuild another site would cost millions of dollars. To keep them at the same location would mean more security to protect private citizens. Either way the expenses would be high.

Farm labor is used as therapy for both the forensic centre and for the nearby Riverview psychiatric hospital. With 500 head of Holstein dairy cattle, 100 head of breeding ewes and 100 Yorkshire sows, the patients are educated during their therapy. As well, the farm produces 700 tons of potatoes a year which are harvested and manufactured by the patients.

Research and demonstration on the farm are used as a training centre for students at UBC and at the B.C. Institute of Technology.

The Colony farm is one place that should be saved. It is not just a business that would be better handled by private owners, but it is agricultural land that provides therapy for patients. It is paying for itself so it would be both illogical and irresponsible to think that the land could be put to better use through some other type of development. On either economic or humanitarian grounds, it makes no sense to sell the farm.



A cow nuzzles her newborn calf at Colony Farms.

SCREAMING GOOD TIME - Sheri Biddle of Abbotsford lets out a scream as she hurtles down the track of Jet Star II during an afternoon at the Pacific National Exhibition's annual fair which opened Saturday. Sunny skies and a cooling breeze greeted fairgoers for the first weekend of the fair that runs to Labor Day.

A PASSING PHASE?

Adolescents and the police

BURNABY - Concern that negative attitudes young people have toward police lead to increased juvenile delinquency may well be unfounded, says an expert on juvenile crime.

Juveniles' violations of the law are likely to be petty offences which they outgrow as they mature, says Dr. Curt Griffiths, associate professor of criminology at Simon Fraser University. And, he continues, this misbehavior is probably independent of, and unaffected by, their views of police, outside of their concern for being apprehended.

In fact, says Griffiths, studies show adolescents' attitudes towards police are primarily positive ones. Instead, he suggests police attitudes towards youth may be at the root of police-youth conflicts. "There is evidence to suggest police have little understanding of, or empathy for, the world of adolescents," he says.

Garbage study approved

ALDERGROVE - For every problem there is a solution, says a director of the Central Fraser Valley regional board.

Directors were discussing the thorny issues connected with garbage disposal in the lower mainland last Thursday night.

"There is a solution somewhere, and I believe that," said Peter Dueck. "It may not be the best solution for all, but for the common good."

Lately Matsqui, Dueck's constituency, has been looking for ways and means of disposing of solid waste, domestic as well as industrial. Residents living near a proposed site in the Ross Road area have expressed their strong opposition to the new dump.

Board members approved of the expenditure of $250,000 to conduct a study into the dilemma.

Bodies register pollution

BURNABY - Despite the sophisticated environmental monitoring devices being developed by industry, the best indicator of exposure to pollution may be the behavioral changes of your body itself, according to Dr. Thomas Smith of Simon Fraser University's department of kinesiology.

Smith is working on developing sets of measures in behavioral toxicology. Before physiological defects begin to show up after exposure to pollution, there are apt to be behavioral defects.

The problem is, another result of the pollution may be that these subtle behavioral changes are not recognized.

That's why sets of measures are important - so an outside observer can apply a valid set of criteria or empirical evidence can reveal what your senses show but you do not interpret.

"For example," he says, "something like psychomotor performance may be affected. Your reaction time slows down a trifle. Some people might just attribute that to the aging process or may not even notice it if it happens gradually, but a physical test measuring those reaction times will clearly show when the first effects of pollution are being felt. At that point it may still be possible to either reverse the process or, by removing the person from that environment, to prevent further damage."

"Safety City" teaches children rules

LANGLEY - Safety City, a pedestrian safety program for children, ages 4 - 13, will be in operation at Willowbrook Mall on Wednesday, August 24 and run through to Saturday, September 3.

A mini city, complete with buildings, roads, street signs, traffic lights and crossing guard will introduce and reinforce good safety habits for the children entering and returning to school.

The children attending the back to school safety city will first view a 10 minute safety film, featuring Cannonball and Harvey. The film will demonstrate bicycle safety, how to cross streets safely, traffic signs and signals, school bus safety, playground safety and what to do if they become lost.

Once the safety film is completed, the children will be escorted through Safety City, by a crossing guard, where they may practice the rules they have just learned. There is then a slide presentation of "The Bear Facts" compliments of the Langley RCMP.

All children completing the Safety City tour will receive a Willowbrook package containing useful hints along with several coloring pictures, one of which may be entered in a contest. There are first, second and third place pizes for each of three age categories.

The Safety City program is sponsored by the merchants of Willowbrook mall. It is hoped that their efforts will enable students to enjoy a safe and pleasant school year.

Easy street for civil servants

Are civil servants really coddled, or is that just a myth perpetrated by people who don't really understand what our public sector is all about?

That question is now high on Canadian conversation lists following premier Bill Bennett's plan to dramatically change the fact of that province's civil service.

Yet the issue is decidedly a national one, directly affecting every taxpayer (and the amount of money paid in taxes).

Here are a few situations that may, or may not, have a bearing on what is rapidly becoming a full-fledged debate on our treatment of all civil servants - federal, provincial and municipal.

- Extremely few civil servants are ever fired. The losers are either promoted or shuffled to other departments. (In full accordance with Peter's Principle).

Former federal deputy finance minister, Ian Stewart, for example, had a major role in developing Allan MacEachen's disastrous 1981 budget, much of which had to be reversed or withdrawn. The follow-up? Stewart was recently made chairman of Ottawa's huge Canada Mortgage and Housing Corp., at a salary of about $100,000 per year.

- Even though business was off as a result of the recession, Ottawa managed to increase the number of federal civil servants to 222,582 last year. But that's only direct staff. By adding employees in defence, crown corporations and other agencies, the federal government now employs 583,752 people.
- Many private sector companies use the merit pay concept to reward a few employees who are really doing a good job. The Ontario government adopted the idea, deciding to pay its best employees a little extra. The result? A study indicated that 5,178 of 5,200 employees in one department received the bonus. Somehow, it is hard to believe than any group of workers, even in the private sector, could be that productive.
- According to the auditor general, a full 30 percent of 4,567 federal employees surveyed are not sure what they are supposed to do at work.
- Many civil servants are different from the rest of us. Ottawa, for example, buys hundreds of thousands of briefcases for employees every year, a policy unheard of in the private sector. What's more, a group of external affairs employees is entitled to three-piece sets of luggage.

The point, of course, is that government workers are well looked after, if not coddled. While they've been forced to live with wage increases of 5 and 6 percent, thousands of their private sector counterparts have received no raise at all, or have even taken pay cuts.

It is time, perhaps, that every government in the country - federal, provincial and municipal - really considered the money it spends on civil servants. It has been a one-way street, and the ordinary, hard-working taxpayers have come out on the short end.

Bennett bites the bullet

By ROGER WORTH

Finally, a Canadian political leader is talking reason and acting on his beliefs.

The issue? Something called "tenure" in public sector employment. For those of us who are not academics or civil servants, "tenure" essentially means that some people holding specified jobs can't be fired, laid off, or in practice, even demoted.

Think about it. Effective lifetime job security. No threat of layoffs. A pay raise that is as good or better than those received by other workers. In addition, the jobs offer a lucrative pension scheme.

Enter the wonderful, utopian world, yet unreal life that exists for most of Canada's public sector employees. For many, it's a dream come true.

In recent weeks, though, the system that coddles public sector employees has come under attack, and with good reason. British Columbia premier, William Bennett, has indicated in no uncertain terms that he is about to get rid of thousands of civil servants who are overpaid, underworked and many times less efficient than their counterparts in the private sector.

While Bennett is introducing legislation that will allow the province to dump the employees, the regulations will, more importantly perhaps, let B.C. retain hard workers, no matter their seniority, and fire those that are the least effective.

Naturally, Bennett has been under fire from labor leaders and various groups from British Columbia and across the nation. But he's also received wide public support.

Bennett's plan is "economically sensible, morally responsible and an act of leadership in an area where governments have been negligent for too long," says CFIB president John Bulloch. "This is an example which Ottawa and other governments, provincial as well as municipal, should follow."

Bulloch is right. Public sector employment has become so secure and lucrative that it is hard to dispute the reasoning behind the surge in application for civil service jobs.

A study by no less an authority than the federal government's Labour Canada, for example, found civil service office clerks, computer operators, systems analysts, telephone operators and even office boys and girls to be the highest paid in the country in their categories. And in a great many other categories, the government workers fared much higher than average in competition with their private sector counterparts.

The civil service game, of course, has gotten out of hand. Public sector unions have managed to force governments to lead the field in salary negotiations by threatening yet another strike that may hold up pension cheques or another government service that affects millions of people. And private sector companies are forced to meet government competition when it comes to setting wages.

Bennett deserves a great deal of praise for his action on tough, yet necessary, legislation on the public sector. As in other jurisdictions, the total civil service bill ends up in the hands of taxpayers, and we'be been paying much too much, for much too long, for a seemingly mediocre service.

There isn't any guarantee of work

Have you a guaranteed right to a job if you really want to work?

It's not written into the Constitution but, until the country's latest rough recession settled in more than two years ago a lot of people were ready to argue that yes, you did.

The depth of that recession, however, has proved that as Mark Twain noted nothing is certain except death and taxes.

So there isn't any guarantee of work, no matter how sincere you are.

The recession sent unemployment figures skyrocketing.

Although there's been some minute improvement during the last few months in overall figures, the fact is that during that last year one Canadian in eight who has been looking for a job hasn't been able to find one.

The actual figure is worse than even these government statistics reveal, because Ottawa doesn't count into its unemployment rolls those people who had been seeking work but simply gave up because they had become too discouraged.

And no one has predicted any significant improvement for at least a couple of years.

As a result of this dismal outlook, federal employment minister Lloyd Axworthy has suggested that those Canadians now lucky enough to be holding down jobs should perhaps be prepared to give up some of their time - and earnings - to share their goodies with those would-be workers hovering on the sidelines.

By cutting today's workers to a 20- or 25-hour week, the argument goes, new employees would have to be brought into plants and offices to complete the tasks normally covered during a 35 or 40-hour week.

The argument is unassailable. Such a program would certainly create more jobs.

The question is, first, whether it's worth it and, secondly, whether it is likely to be successful in the real world.

The answer to both is no.

But let's assume such a program were introduced in Canada. Existing workers would cut back their weekly hours, and their income, by about 25 percent.

They'd be that much less capable of contributing to the country's real wealth, because they'd have that much less to spend.

In theory, their slack should be taken up by the spending of the newly employed people who suddenly are working their additional hours.

Unfortunately, it doesn't work that way. What you'd end up with is two groups - the formerly fully employed workers and those who had been drawing reasonable unemployment insurance benefits - suddenly having less overall disposable income.

What of financial commitments the previously fully-employed workers had taken on in good faith, such as mortgages, or payments on a new car?

A lot wouldn't be able to meet them if their income was suddenly slashed by 25 percent.

How would they be compensated?

Secondly, while everyone sympathizes with those out of work, in practical terms Axworthy's proposal seems unlikely to be acceptable to most of the seven of eight Canadians who still have jobs.

They want to hold what they've got, because of such simple problems as meeting mortgage payments.

About 18 months ago, Axworthy's department started a program called work sharing. Basically, it offered federal assistance to firms planning layoffs because of the recession.

Under it, everyone in a plant threatened with layoffs would work shorter hours, but their wages would be brought up to 90 percent of original levels by contributions through the unemployment insurance fund.

It proved so successful that the original tentative funding of $10-million was tripled, and then increased again.

There's a big difference, however, between suggesting that workers accept a temporary 10-percent wage cut so you can help a co-worker over a rough time, and proposing a 25-percent drop in income indefinitely.

This isn't to suggest, of course, that nothing should be done to help Canada's horrendous unemployment total.

It must, and urgently.

But you can't do it by beggaring other people.

What's needed are programs to stimulate real growth across the country so everyone can benefit.

But where are those programs?

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Townspeople congratulated

Editor, The Star, Sir,

At this time, I would like to express to the citizens of the Aldergrove area, through the medium of the Aldergrove Star, appreciation for the support given to the C.F.V. Search & Rescue group during our recent assist to the Langley RCMP in the ongoing search for Teri Lynn Scalf.

We found Aldergrove to have a big heart in times of crisis. The Block Parents, the AlderCats CBers, residents who volunteered to help search; the offer of coffee from a senior citizens complex, food from Mac's Milk on 272 Street and the gentlemen who purchased pop and simply delivered it to the hot, thirsty searchers; the people who did not leave their name but nevertheless played their part. The community pulled together during this stressful time and we were comforted to have them with us in body and spirit.

Additional trained search and rescue teams were called in from Mission, Maple Ridge and Coquitlam and we thank these volunteers also for their speedy response and assistance.

Again, many thanks Aldergrove - it was a heartwarming experience to have such overwhelming support.

Improvement seen for business

VANCOUVER - For the first time in nearly a year and a half, business leaders in the province see improvement in the present business climate for British Columbia and Canada, says a survey released by the Employers' Council of British Columbia.

This biannual survey obtains information from chief executive officers of major BC companies on their views of present and future business conditions for the BC and Canadian economies.

Although more than 65 percent of businesses surveyed still rated the present climate in BC and Canada as poor, this is a significant improvement from the last survey in November of 1982 when 92 percent of respondents rated the business climate as poor.

Over the short-term, respondents generally showed a marked shift in their assessment of the provincial business environment in the months ahead. Only 26 percent felt that the business outlook was poor and 70 percent considered it fair, compared to 77 pecent in the past survey who judged the BC business outlook as poor and 23 percent, fair. The greatest change occurred in the primary sector where the percentage who projected a poor business climate in the six months ahead declined from 85 percent in the last survey to a present level of 28 percent.

The council survey found that primary, secondary and service sectors were much more optimistic about long-term business prospects in BC and Canada than six months ago. In this survey, 64 percent of respondents in primary industries indicated that the five-year outlook for BC was good compared to 30 percent who felt this way in the previous poll.

The secondary sector was the least optimistic in the long run with 38 percent of respondents indicating a good outlook for BC compared to 29 percent last year. For Canada, 39 percent indicated a positive outlook, up from 24 percent.

Among the items monitored in the survey are corporate expenditure intentions on plant expansion, new capital and repairs and modernization. In comparison to investment intentions in previous surveys over the last year and a half, a substantial number of respondents planned to increase investment in new plant and equipment in their operations across Canada, while a decreased number planned to raise investment levels in BC.

In total, respondents indicated that 55 percent of all intended capital expenditures in the next 12 months are scheduled for repairs and modernization. The remainder of intended spending will be divided between capital investment at 23 percent and expansion expenditure at 22 percent. Responses showed that funds for investment in productive capacity will continue to be primarily internally generated, ranking ahead of short-term borrowing and long-term debt.

Forecasting operating trend variables for the next six months, respondents saw continued improvement. Sales, expressed in dollar value, are expected to increase in 57 percent of businesses surveyed, with 73 percent of primary sector respondents predicting increases.

Declines in both raw materials and finished goods inventories provide encouraging signs of recovery. The number of respondents reporting inventory declines has increased from the last survey, with 52 and 46 percent citing drops in raw materials and finished goods inventories, respectively. Forecasts of increased sales combined with indications of little change in inventory levels simply increased production rather than a further drawdown of inventories.

The majority of respondents believed that labor-management relations in the province are not expected to change in the near future. The primary and secondary industries were the most optimistic for the second half of 1983, with 22 and 23 percent of respondents forecasting improved relations, respectively. Many cautioned that increased wage demands by unions have to be avoided in order to give recovery a chance to take hold in BC and in the rest of the country.

On the topic of exports, responses indicated optimism for the second half of 1983. Eighty-nine percent of respondents anticipated the volume of trade to stay the same or to improve. In terms of volume, the primary sector remained the most optimistic with 48 percent of respondents anticipating an increase in volume as opposed to only 17 percent in the last survey.

Vasko-Peterson wed

ALDERGROVE - The Baptist church in Abbotsford was the scene of a beautiful wedding on Saturday, August 6, when Teena Louise Vasko exchanged wedding vows with Thomas Lyall Peterson. Pastor Rudy Boshman officiated.

Dressed in an empire style gown of taffeta and chiffon, the bride was led to the altar by her parents. Bridal grown featured mutton sleeves, a bustle back with pearls and lace yoke. A crown of seed pearls held the finger tip length veil, and she carried a bouquet of pink roses and baby's breath.

Honor attendant Carrie Stephen wore a street length pink dress with a burgundy jacket and carried pink and burgundy silk flowers.

Tracey Neidig, Leah Vasko and Roberta Peterson were the bridesmaids. They were dressed in outfits matching that of the maid of honor.

In the church the candles were lit by the mothers of the bride and groom, Donna Vasko and Louise Peterson. The bride's mother wore a street length fuschia dress, while the mother of the groom had chosen a mauve street length outfit.

Acting as the groom's best man was Barry McLean. Ushers were Tim Peterson, Chris Felardeau, Dan Brien and Jim Hickson. Approximately 200 guests attended the wedding.

ASK ANNABELLE

Dear Annabelle,

I have a feeling that my neighbors are feeding my dog because in the past few months he has gained about 20 pounds. I have mentioned this to them but they say they only give him a cookie now and then. How can I explain to them that they are slowly killing "Tink" with their kindness. (They are very nice people and their own dog died a while ago, so I don't want to hurt their feelings.) Thank you for your advice.

Signed: Going from Tink to Tank.

Dear Going,

What is your dog doing at your neighbor's house. Your dog should be at your house. Do not let him out of your yard, build a fence, tie him up, keep him in your house and only let him out on a leash. If you don't do one or all of these things you have two choices. Both of which you don't want. A fat dog or a dead dog.

Dear Annabelle,

We have been engaged for six years, and now Mary (not her real name) and I are getting married. I want my two daughters, aged 4½ and 7 to be flower girls at our wedding but Mary is being stubborn. She says it's okay if the older girl (my daughter by another woman) is there, but not the younger one (my daughter by yet another woman) because Mary and I were engaged then. What do you think?

Signed: Put Off.

Dear Put Off,

Obviously you have never been put off before, why let a little thing like that stop you. What a busy little beaver you have been. Where was Mary when you had your last encounter? Seriously though, I don't think it would do the younger one any harm to be a flower girl, it may even make her think she was part of a normal family. I must say in closing, I sure hope Mary knows what she is doing.

Star readers are invited to mail in their questions or problems to ASK ANNABELLE. Use a nom de plume if you wish. The address is ASK ANNABELLE, c-o The Aldergrove Star, Box 220, Aldergrove, B.C., V0X 1A0.

Pensioners visit local fairs by bus

By ERNEST CLUETT

ALDERGROVE - An old time member, Lillian Kercher, while visiting her family at Dawson Creek, had to be rushed to the local hospital. We all wish her a speedy recovery and a complete return to health.

A bus load of the Lions complex residents left by bus Friday at 10 a.m. for a day at the Lynden fair.Due to one elderly gentleman managing to lose himself, the bus returned at 6:39 p.m.

A bus trip is planned for August 31 to the PNE in Vancouver. Fare will be $6.50 return. Phone Adeline at 859-8408 for details.

We are grateful to Charlie Reid, Andy Keay and Bob Coutts for the donation of a load of split wood now stored in the OAP shed ready for winter. Many thanks for the generous donation.

I read where the Ottawa government is refinancing two billion dollars of World War II debts. After paying interest for 40 years we, the taxpayers, will be paying more interest for another 40 years. I wonder if this is included in the $18-billion yearly interest we now pay to service the $50-billion debt the country owes. If the same rule is applied to the $50-billion in 40 years we shall pay out $720-billion in interest. No need to worry, it's only your money.

Although no mention has ever appeared in the daily press down through the years, a writer has now opened up some of the reasons for the government's so-called harsh measures. Your government has been trying to fire a large number of lead swingers without success, due to the security of tenure in their jobs guaranteed by contract. One civil servant who took an extra week's holiday with pay each month for 15 months was warned on two occasions to smarten up or else. Finally, as more members of his work pals, seeing his success in evading work started on the same spree, he was fired. Grievance procedures took two months before arbitration. The hearings took six weeks. Seven months after the person was fired the firing was upheld. But you and I paid, reading from the article, for both lawyers involved, the cost of approximately $1,100 per day per lawyer plus travel expenses, parking, etc. The cost to you and I of the UBC professor who pilfered the National Research Council grants who also had a secure tenure job, was a quarter of a million dollars. We had to pay the convicted professor $60,000 wages while his case was arbitrated, for you cannot even fire convicted people, without lawyers getting their share.

Visitors to the Saturday dance were Lawrence and Duane Scott of North Vancouver. The door prize was won by Agnes McDonald and the spot prize went to Otis Gamblin and Ina Wilton.

Doris says she bought a new pop up toaster, but now she finds it's an Indian model, It doesn't pop up. It sits on the counter and sends up smoke signals.

Ft. Langley riders tops at PNE

Brent Balisky, riding Noel, and Laura Tidball on Chako won the special hunter championships. Laura also won the regular working hunter championship on a chestnut gelding, Ragtime. Both are from Fort Langley.

Sunny skies greet fair-goers at PNE

VANCOUVER - Sunny skies and warm weather greeted thousands of people attending the opening weekend festivities of the Pacific National Exhibition's annual fair in Vancouver.

A record crowd, estimated at 300,000, lined the streets for the colorful PNE parade.

There were clowns and marching bands and flower-covered floats from Canada and the U.S. plus a bevy of 39 pretty young ladies from across B.C. competing for the crown of Miss PNE '83.

Bright sunshine and a pleasant breeze made it a perfect first day for the 69th annual fair.

The youngest visitor ever to come to the opening day of the fair was a Jersey heifer calf, born less than an hour after the first PNE fairgoers clocked through the turnstiles. Co-owners Lee Wallace and Lisa Atkinson of Victoria named the calf Peony in honor of the fair.

And Peony had some company 10 hours later when an Ayrshire calf owned by Oscar Nordman of Langley was born in the same barn. Several more livestock births are expected during the fair.

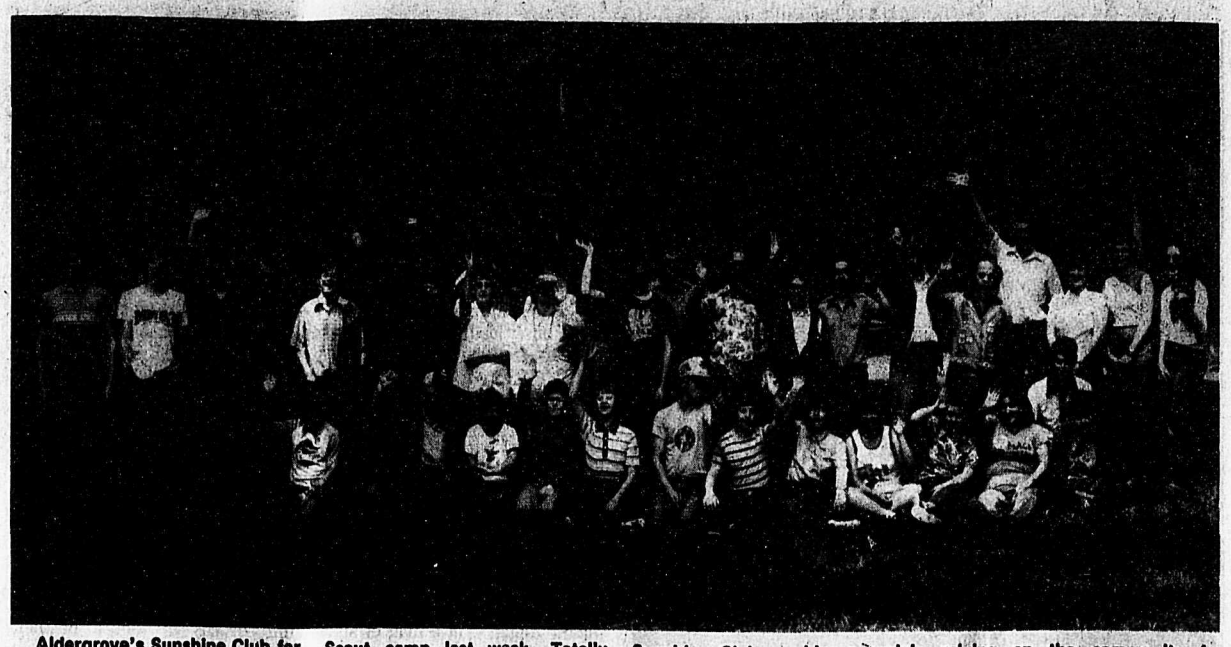
Dozens of other young animals delighted children at the Dairyland petting zoo. Located in the new kid's headquarters, the zoo remains one of the most popular spots on the PNE grounds.

In the Forum, the blaring trumpets of a Mexican mariachi band and graceful Thailand dancers in magnificent national costumes entertained the crowds who flooded the PNE '83 feature show, Pacific Rim Adventures. During the 17-day fair, almost a quarter of a million dollars worth of travel prizes will be given away.

The PNE's super trivia game kicked off with daily competitions in the Trivia Gardens and the Powder Blues Band drew an enthusiastic crowd to their free Rothman's mainstage performance.

Hundreds of people lined up all day long for a tour through the PNE prize home, while others toured the horticulture show under the canopies near the Agrodome.

There are hundreds of free attractions at the PNE for the $3 gate admission (children 6 - 12, $1) and this week senior citizens will get free admission Wednesday to enjoy the Mart Kenney golden agers dance and the carpet bowling tournament in the Coliseum.



Aldergrove's Sunshine Club for Special People held their fifth annual summer camp at McLean Scout camp last week. Totally funded by the community and service clubs of the area, the Sunshine Club provides a social learning atmosphere for the mentally handicapped and is relying on the community for their continued support for the upcoming year.

Space telescope finds solar system

PASADENA, Calif. - A telescope in space has found the first direct evidence of what may be another solar system - a vast and mysterious cloak of particles circling one of the brightest stars in the night sky, astronomers report.

Whatever the 24-billion-kilometre shell of debris around Vega turns out to be, nothing like it has ever been seen anywhere in the universe before, says Conway Snyder of the Jet Propulsion Laboratory.

"That's what makes it so exciting," he says.

Vega, 240 trillion kilometres from Earth in the constellation Lyra, "is a fairly ordinary type of star, basically the same as our sun," he says.

The shell of particles, which could include planets or cosmic debris that is building planets, was discovered by the international Infrared Astronomical Satellite, launched in January to map the heavens. It analyses the invisible infrared light of heat emissions. The Jet Propulsion Laboratory manages the U.S. phase of the satellite program.

Whether the Vega particles represent another solar system, perhaps one that's only now evolving as Earth and its eight neighboring worlds evolved 4½ billion years ago, "is very much conjecture," Snyder says.

The shell "has some of the characteristics of a solar system and it may be a solar system," he says.

"But our knowledge about how solar systems form is so incomplete that nobody can say."

Astronomers have been searching the heavens for decades for evidence of planets circling stars other than our sun. Some argue uncountable millions of planets must exist in the universe and some should harbor extraterrestrial life. None has been found so far.

Owning an Elmira Insert is one of the best investments you can make.

Sitting around the fireplace is a lot more comfortable when you know it's actually helping to heat your home. The Elmira fireplace Insert is easily installed into your fireplace opening and gives you airtight efficiency using 2/3 less wood than an open fireplace. Reduce your heating bills and enjoy the fire as the insert pumps 325 cubic feet of hot air per minute into your home.

It's nice to know that if the power goes off or the oil truck is late you can still keep your family warm and secure. Even cook up a meal on the Insert's large cooking surface.

ONLY ARTISTS WITH TWO CANADIAN MILLION SELLING ALBUMS

Supertramp come to B.C. Place

Ten years have passed since Supertramp played their first concert and created a worldwide phenomenon with the release of Crime of the Century in 1974. In that time, their music has sold tens of millions of records and concert tickets. With songs such as "Dreamer", "Bloody Well Right", "Give A Little Bit" and "The Logical Song", they have won a permanent place in the pop mosaic of their time. Unlike most of the handful of bands of their stature, Supertramp accomplished all of this without the flamboyance of a star personality to embody the group in the public mind. (Pink Floyd is another). They have always been resolute in presenting themselves as a single unit, the individuals submerging themselves in a group identity. Like the cover of their latest album, Famous Last Words, Supertramp is a balancing act in which it is absolutely crucial that no single element be allowed to dominate.

To acute observers and listeners, it is obvious that the songs of Supertramp are the work of two separate writers. In fact, Rick Davies and Roger Hodgson have not written together since the early seventies. But, their work is so complementary and so well balanced, and the group's sound so distinct and detailed, that it is easy to accept the implication of the writing credits which have always read "Davies-Hodgson".

One of the initially striking aspects of Famous Last Words, the band's first studio album since 1979's monumental Breakfast in America is that Rick and Roger's songs emerge as more distinctly their own than ever before. The latest album takes a turn toward leaner production, allowing the differences between their work to shine through in sharper relief.

Famous Last Words, from its first song, "Crazy" ("It's a Crazy Game-Who's To Blame-I'm a Little Curious"), is unmistakably the work of Supertramp. The sound is pristinely textured and recorded: few can rival them as masters of studio-as-instrument. The harmonies soar, seduce and caress the melodies of Hodgson and Davies. Together, they mine the same vocal-instrumental vein that first rewarded the Beach Boys and the Beatles. Heart's Ann and Nancy Wilson join them on "Put On Your Old Brown Shoes" and "C'est Le Bon". Throughout, there is an immaculate completeness to their arrangements and production, as if the very best possibilities available were extracted from any given idea. Perhaps it is this sorting of permutations that makes their album projects such arduous and lengthy tasks.

Emotionally, Famous Last Words is wide and varied in the tradition of their previous work. Hodgson continues his concern with identity and the complexities of modern life. He seems less overwhelmed by his observations than he did in, say "The Logical Song". His "C'est Le B Bon", in some ways, answers the former song's questions. In "Know Who You Are", he offers advice and solace in a gentle, ethereal hymn: "Weep If You Can-Let The Tears Fall Behind You". He takes his own advice in favor of direct, emotional truthfulness in the LP's closing cut, the raw and starkly urgent, "Don't Leave Me Now".

Davies is both more playful and more ominous than Hodgson. His meanings are more veiled and his piano figures more bluesy. "Bonnie" is a tart '80s answer to the song Garland sang to Gable's picture. "My Kind Of Lady" sways in a '50s style, with answer-and-response energy that culminates in a searing saxophone solo from Helliwell. The album's darkest song, the tension charged "Waiting So Long", debates the shortcomings of new music and offers a brooding gray-black sky that is eventually cut by the lightning of Hodgson's snarling guitar solo.

Supertramp is John Helliwell, Dougie Thomson, Bob Selbenberg, Rick Davies and Roger Hodgson.

The other three members of Supertramp weld and transform the differing visions of Roger and Rick into a unified whole.

Famous Last Words is Supertramp's eighth album and as with all Supertramp projects, the sound is dazzlingly clear, due in no little part to the efforts of Russel Pope and Peter Henderson. Pope has done the group's live sound for twelve years and always functions as their technical ombudsman.

In June, Supertramp took to the road on a 56-date world tour which will bring the group to Vancouver, September 3. Already highly respected for its elaborate concert production, Supertramp will utilize four projection screens for live and filmed footage this tour. It also marks the first time Supertramp will include session musicians in its performance. Veterans Scott Paige and Fred Mandel will allow the group to perform songs not usually possible to do live, including "Gone Hollywood" and "Nervous Wreck". This will enable the group to concentrate on the music rather than dashing from instrument to instrument, as they have been forced to do in the past.

The Famous Last Words tour is also another milestone of sorts--it'll be the final time Supertramp fans will see the band in this particular configuration. Roger Hodgson will leave the group at the end of the tour in order to pursue a solo career. This, however, does not signify the end of Supertramp. The band plans to re-enter the studio after the tour to record a new LP scheduled for an '84 release. In the meantime, Roger's solo album is near completion.

Album review: Quirky sound

By NOZ PARKER

Duck Rock
Malcolm McLaren
(Charisma)

A brief introduction to McLaren is in order: He was the mastermind behind the Sex Pistols, a public relations coup and record company scam that netted him a good sum of money and a reputation as the godfather of punk rock. Friends in England have told me that the best stories about the man have yet to be published; suffice to say he is a loon but a calculating and successful one.

His irreverence and distaste for slick program music, such as heard on North American radio have led him into other projects, such as Bow Wow Wow (who soon parted ways with him). In this respect Duck Rock comes as no surprise.

Still, who would have expected McLaren to travel around the globe, recording indigenous music out in the wilds of Africa and Appalachia, and then patching it together, over-dubbing and "scratching" (a random manual mixing of two or more recordings, now popular at New York discos), and putting out the results on a disc? It's hard to describe, but how does "Third World Concrete Music set to a disco beat" sound? Nuts, eh? Call it what you like, and call McLaren a dilettante, but his record is a lot of fun and the perfect antidote for the new Loverboy or Iron Maiden album.

Check out the traditional square dances, "Buffalo Gals," altered by McLaren and company (Thomas Dolby, Anne Dudley and Louis Jordan provide additional music) or "Duck For The Oyster" mixed with Pac-man sounds. You won't know whether you should be promenading or spinning on your head in a "break" dance.

There are similar mutations of folk music from Cuba, Dominica, Colombia but the highlight is a Zulu story-song called "Punk It Up." While In Kwayazululand, McLaren exchanged stories with the natives, and they thought the Sex Pistols story was hilarious. He says they made him tell the story, "at least a 100 times," and this song was the inevitable result.

This is not really a cultural landmark and it certainly isn't commercial, but it is first class entertainment. Quack, quack!

Aka Darbari Java: Magic Realism
Jon Hassell
(Editions EG)

Hassell, a trumpet player, has been experimenting with electronic music - "sound sculptures" - since the '60s. He studied under Karlheinz Stockhausen and has recorded with Terry Riley, LaMonte Young, Talking Heads and Brian Eno, and this is his fifth solo album.

The recording combines sounds from central Africa, India and Java (as well as '50s Hollywood orchestration), which have been manipulated by computer into fantasy-like sound textures. Over this, Hassell has laid a chorus of voice-like trumpets inspired by the classical Indian vocal style that he has studied for more than a decade. He describes his music as, "fourth world": a unified primitive-futuristic sound.

Hassell does intellectualize on the recording in his notes, and the recording is intensely cerebral, but listeners need not be deep thinkers to enjoy music as oddly lovely as this. The two-part "Darbari Extension" is particularly intriguing - the harmonic progression creates tension with sequences that are thoroughly modern, yet the overall effect is very calming and peaceful, supporting Hassell's "proposal for a coffee-colored classical music of the future."

W.R. theatre season extended

White Rock Summer Theatre's three main productions have been a box office and critical success this year, and artistic-managing director Pat Armstrong has extended the season to September 4.

All aspects, from choice of script to the performances and sets have been drawing praise for the professional theatre group.

Kim Woytowich, a senior ringette goalie.

Ringette is burgeoning

ALDERGROVE - If Marilyn Egan had her way, the sport of ringette in Abbotsford-Matsqui would equal, if not surpass, minor hockey in terms of popularity and the number of players enrolled.

Egan, of Abbotsford, is publicity director for the Aldergrove Ringette Association, which has so far secured two hours of ice time per week at the Clearbrook arena.

"If we can create interest in the sport in Abbotsford-Matsqui, only then will we become eligible for more ice time in Clearbrook," says Egan.

Ice time allotted to sports groups is proportional to the number of players registered with the group. The ARA currently operates for the most part our of the Aldergrove arena which is easily accessible to the majority of its players.

Egan says the nice thing about ringette is its low cost.

For under $70 a player (of any age or ringette level) registers for a season spanning from September to March.

Age groups are: Bunnies 5-7; petites 8-10; tweens 11-12; junior belles 13-14; belles 15-17; and debs 18 and over.

Fred Boyd, president of the ARA and other ARA executives live in the Abbotsford area.

Their ice-time plans for Clearbrook arena (6 a.m. to 7 a.m. Thursdays and 11:15 a.m. to 12:15 p.m. Sundays) have been thoroughly thought out.

The Thursday session is set aside for practices for all ringette age groups.

On Sundays, the ARA will try to host exhibition games between top local teams in each ringette division and similar squads from North Vancouver, Port Coquitlam and Langley.

An interlocking schedule between the ARA and other lower mainland and Fraser Valley teams exists for girls in petite and higher divisions.

"We'd prefer to have two-hour late-afternoon blocks of ice time," says Egan who knows the ARA has a considerable amount of work to do first.

Ringette is a Canadian team sport played on ice.

It was invented in Ontario in 1965 and in the early 1970s was first played in British Columbia in Langley.

Each team consists of 11-18 girls with only six players on the ice at one time: two forwards, one centre, two defence persons and a goalie.

Players wear skates, a helmet, mouthguard, gloves, tight-fitting slacks and a warm sweater.

No other protective equipment is necessary, but goal pads, elbow pads and shin pads may be worn.

A straight stick is used to pass, carry and shoot a hollow, round rubber ring into an opponent's net.

Defence sticks are colored red, forward sticks are blue and centre sticks are white. The goalie uses a hockey goalkeeper's stick.

No body contact is allowed.

Offside rules stipulate that a player cannot skate across the blue line while possessing the ring. It must be passed to a teammate across each blue line.

Forwards cannot enter their own defensive zone and defensive players cannot enter their own offensive zone. Centres may skate anywhere.

Rules require each player to participate in each of two 20-minute periods.

Two-minute penalties are given for violations.

ARA's schedule of events:

Display and film, Saturday, Sunday, Sept. 10-11 during Aldergrove fall fair in Aldergrove arena.

Ringette registration, skate and equipment swap, 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. Saturday, Sept. 17, Aldergrove Centre Mall. Information from Wendy Premack at 856-5389 or Judy Mutterat 856-4353.

Ringette school, all age groups, Monday to Friday, 3:30 p.m. to 6:45 p.m. each day. Sept. 19-23, Aldergrove arena.

Skate-a-thon, 5:30 p.m. to 7:30 p.m., Friday, Oct. 7, Aldergrove Arena.

BUTCHER - Passed away, suddenly, on Aug. 10, 1983, Roy Butcher of Aldergrove. Mr. Butcher was born in Saskatoon in 1913 and had been a resident of B.C. since 1937. He lived in Victoria for 20 years, and worked at various occupations, logging and farming and as a labor foreman at the VMD Shipyards during the second world war. Later he operated a self-built, self-owned corner grocery on the West Saanich Road for 10 years. Coming to the mainland in 1957 he lived and worked for five years in Langley and had resided and worked in and around Aldergrove for the past 20 years, 10 of which he owned and operated a second hand store at Ross Road and Fraser Highway.

GARDENING IN THE VALLEY

Some pruning tips

By DON ANSON

Mat-forming plants that grow close to the ground and usually have a great profusion of flowers should be cut hard back to near ground level when the first period of bloom is over.

This applies particularly to dwarf plants such as arabis and aubretias although many of the ground covers may be treated in the same way.

Not only does this cutting back with shears make the plants look more tidy, but the hard pruning very often means a second crop of flowers later on in the season.

If these low-growing plants are not cut back, they tend to become very straggly and any plant that gets straggly should always be pruned back. Pansies and violas get this way at the end of a season.

As long as you are very careful and don't prune too close to the ground, you can use weed-eaters instead of shears.

All your annual bedding plants should have their dead flower heads regularly removed. Many will give you two or even three more blooming periods if this is done. Snapdragons and other half-hardy plants will send out bushy second growth that will bear flowers right up to the first frosts.

If you want more flowers on a plant you must pinch out the terminal buds. These grow on the end of all branches. When the terminal bud is removed, growth ceases at that point and energy is transferred to lower buds. Thus, instead of getting long shoots pointing to the sky, all the buds below the cut will be forced to make growth and produce flowers. The difference this tipping or pinching makes to plants such as clarkias, snapdragons or petunias is quite astonishing but may people forget to do it.

Don't think you can kill a plant easily by pruning it. Plants have an amazing capacity to survive, bloom and produce seeds. However, when pinching out the tops of young plants, some leaves must always be left on the plant, otherwise it may die.

It is fashionable now to grow the hardy heathers. Every garden shop is filled with them and you can get varieties that will bloom at all seasons.

Heathers are very labor saving. Once established they cover the ground well, keep away weeds and need hardly any attention. They are evergreen and enjoy an acid soil although there are some varieties that will grow well on alkaline soils.

Those that you will buy here are the acid lovers and therefore should be kept away from any lime. Their great love is a soil filled with plenty of peat and they don't require a rich soil to do well.

After heathers have bloomed they should be lightly sheared back to keep them compact and to induce vigorous new growth. Generally they prefer an open, sunny situation but will do quite well in partial shade.

It is a very simple matter to make a low-lying hedge with these colorful plants which should be spaced between a foot and 18 inches apart.

In the winter, remove any leaves which may have blown up against the plants as this encourages rot. This, by the way, applies to nearly all plants except shrubs and trees.

Heathers are perfectly hardy and, once established, can remain undisturbed for a long time. They are easily propagated by cuttings taken from the lower parts of the plant that have not bloomed in the summer. Root divisions can also be made. Seeds may also be sown when ripe.

If you soil is too rich, this will stimulate leggy growth. What is needed most is a moist, sandy soil with plenty of peat moss added and an acid condition.

Heathers look most dramatic when planted in groups or clumps of the same selection. They don't mix in well with other plants. They have the great advantage of needing little care other than the light shearing and they are very resistant to pests and disease.

Size of blooms on your spring-flowering bulbs does not remain the same every year. If you notice the blooms are getting smaller and smaller each year,it means the clumps need dividing.

Do this dividing in October and replant the smaller bulbs. Very small bulblets will eventually provide flowers but do give them room to grow.
