Daily British Columbian

Saturday Evening, April 6, 1889.

The directors of the provincial agricultural society, it is expected, will meet in this city next week, and fix the date for the holding of the annual exhibition next fall, and transact other business pertaining to the approaching fair. We cannot say just what date will be agreed upon, but it is safe to say that not more than six months can elapse before the exhibition will be upon us, which is a short enough period in which to complete arrangements for a successful provincial show this fall. Such a show all must desire to see, and, recognizing the fact that now there is not a moment to lose, we would urge upon all who have any idea of contributing to the grand success of the exhibition to declare their intentions immediately, if not sooner. The necessity for this haste must be obvious when once it is pointed out. Those who are responsible for all the varied preparations required for the success of the exhibition cannot longer, without prejudice to this much desired success, delay taking energetic measures in its behalf. The scale upon which preparations can be made, depends altogether, it is unnecessary to state, upon the extent of available funds for the purpose of the exhibition. The necessity will thus appear of having the largest possible amount guaranteed in the shortest possible time. The Exposition Fund in these columns offers an excellent opportunity for those desiring to assist this most worthy and reproductive object to pledge themselves for any amount within their means and inclination, and thus establish a fund upon which the directors, the park committee, etc., can count in making preparations for the show. Quite a number of our citizens and several district subscribers have done nobly so far. We would invite others to emulate their example, and to remember that in this instance, pre-eminently, "he who gives promptly gives twice." The success of the show can be furthered very materially by an increase in the membership of the provincial agricultural association. The cost to become an annual member is only $3. Let as many as possible, the farmers especially, send in their names, with the membership fee, to the secretary or treasurer of the association—T. R. Pearson, or J. S. Clute, of this city. Westminster, city and district, should heartily co-operate in making the coming exposition a grand success.

The letter received in London the other day, from Stanley, written in September of last year in the depths of Africa, (a summary of which will be found elsewhere in this paper), has all the thrilling interest of the wildest romance, with the merit of being the mere outline of a true recital of adventure and hardship in the African wilds, the full particulars of which, when eventually published, as all will hope may be soon, must throw romance forever into the shade. Stanley has written not a little about the "Dark Continent," but the coming book, judging of the advance sheets thrown out in this letter, will prove more intensely interesting than any previous account of the great explorer's mid-African adventures. Rider Haggard even must pale before the "truth stranger than fiction" of Stanley's experience inspired pen. The two things that present themselves most forcibly to the reader's imagination on perusing Stanley's letter, as given on another page, are the vastness and the wildness of the African continent, and the indomitable courage of the intrepid explorer himself. The one man power, the force of individuality, is strikingly illustrated in the way he preserved the integrity of his little force, of untrained natives principally, amid hardships, toils, fears, dangers, and deaths, and through the gloomy forest march of 160 days days, at the end of which the expedition, that left Yambunga 369 strong, was reduced to 173 from the inroads of starvation, desertion, and hostile tribes. The ultimate arrival at Lake Nyanza, the meeting with Emin, and the subsequent return down the Congo to Bunalya, to find the rear column demoralized and dispersed, Major Bartellot murdered, Stanley himself accounted dead, and his personal kit of medicines, etc., sent still further down the Congo, are all deeply interesting incidents of a thrilling story, the sequel of which has not yet transpired. The despatches of the last few days report both Stanley and Emin Bey to be marching from the interior to the coast, with millions worth of ivory, but there are circumstances which prevent this report from being implicitly accepted. All will hope that both heroes, so long the objects of solicitude, and at times of well-founded apprehension, may soon emerge in safety from the African fastnesses that have so long hid them from sight and sound of their kindred, and relieve the anxiety and gratify the curiosity of the civilized world, ere they take another plunge into the mysterious and howling wilderness.

Following immediately on the passage of the bill to incorporate the Canadian Western Railway Company, a bill has been introduced in the local house, and passed its third reading yesterday, to grant a land subsidy to the projected railway. The bill provides that, upon the company filing with the chief commissioner of lands and works a map or plan, to the satisfaction of the lieutenant-governor in council, showing the course and direction of the proposed railway, and the lands intended to be traversed, there shall be reserved from pre-emption and sale a tract of land extending thirty-two miles on each side of the line of railway, to be afterwards conveyed to the company, pursuant to the act; provided, that the work of actual construction of the proposed railway shall begin within six months from the time of the filing of the said map or plan, and shall be continuously prosecuted to completion with reasonable diligence; otherwise the said reservation of public lands to be void and of no effect. It is further provided that the government shall, before conveying all or any portion of the lands intended to be granted to the company, take satisfactory security from the company for the proper completion of the road, and that the grants of land to be made shall in no wise exceed twenty thousand acres for each and every mile of railway constructed; in other words, an aggregate respectable land subsidy of between 10,000,000 and 12,000,000 acres. It is also provided that the lands granted under the act must be taken by the company in alternate blocks on each side of the line of railway, each block of land to have a frontage on the railway of twenty miles, and so that the land granted to the company on one side of the line of railway shall be opposite to a like twenty miles of land retained by the province on the opposite side. The expenses of the survey are to borne by the company. The grant is not to include any lands held by grant, lease, agreement for sale, or other alienation by the crown, nor shall it include Indian reserves or settlements, nor military or naval reserves, that may happen to lie in the line of the railway, but in lieu of any land thus excepted an equal amount shall be made good to the company from public lands contiguous. It is provided that the rights of free miners to search for and mine the precious metals shall not be prejudiced by the grant of land to the company. The lands acquired by the company shall not be subject to taxation, provincial or municipal, until the expiration of ten years from the completion of the railway. The actual work of construction, it is provided, shall commence within two years of the 1st of November next, the road to be completed within ten years thereafter. The legislature has certainly not erred on the side of niggardliness in its encouragement of this railway enterprise. The Canadian Western is a large undertaking, however, and if energetically pushed and carried to completion, a vast tract of the province will be opened up and made valuable that without a railway must remain a comparative wildnerness for some time to come.

Job printing of all kinds neatly done at the COLUMBIAN office. Prices will be found as low as at any other office in the province.—Adv.

SCOTLAND'S CROWN.

It Was Once Worn by a Lady Now Living in Pittsburgh.

Romantic Story of Mrs. Duncan, Daughter of the "Keeper of the Crown"—Born in the Castle Where Queen Mary Was Once a Prisoner.

A crown and a scepter lie in a small room up in the Castle of Edinburgh, but no brow wears the diadem and no hand lifts the rod. There is a palace at the foot of the Canongate, but it has become only a hotel for her Majesty en route for Balmoral. There has, however, been from time immemorial a "Keeper of the Crown." A Pittsburgh home, says the Commercial Gazette of that city, furnishes a bit of Scotch history in a way connected with one of these "keepers." There has been living in this vicinity for the past half century a dear old Scotch lady, Mrs. Duncan, of Wilkinsburg, mother of A. C. Duncan, a well-known business man, who was the daughter of Colonel Dingwalt, keeper of the crown.

Colonel Dingwalt was a soldier of distinction, and after the battle of Waterloo, where he won promotion, he was appointed "Keeper of the Crown of Scotland." From the time of that appointment he took up his residence in the grand old Castle of Edinburgh, and here just seventy-two years ago was born the little daughter who still preserves the intense love of native land so characteristic of every true child of Scotland.

She was born in the very wing of the old castle where more than a century and a half before the ill-fated James VI. of Scotland and James I. of England saw the light, and where afterward his mother, the beautiful, but unfortunate Mary, Queen of Scots, was held a prisoner in her own castle. The window from the room where she was born looked down over the steep precipice where, during the bitter strife between the Scotch Lords, the infant King was lowered in a basket and carried off by his enemies. During her whole life in Scotland this "lassie" never knew any other home than the old castle, around whose walls clung so many historic associations. Her playground was its stone-paved courts and its lofty battlements; her lullabies were ballads of brave knights and fair ladies who had made it famous. The fairy tales of her childhood were the thousands of legends which cling around its lofty embattled towers.

When Colonel Dingwalt's daughter was but fifteen years old Captain Duncan, of the Royal Scots, returning from seven years' active service in India, was quartered in Edinburgh Castle with his regiment, he saw the fair "Maid of the Castle" at church, and although he had already arrived at the staid age of five-and-thirty he immediately fell in love. But many difficulties stood in the way. The father was a stern man, proud and unapproachable, and he regarded his little maid as yet in the nursery. But "love laughs at locksmiths," and the nurse proved a faithful letter-carrier. The very first letter that she brought to the bonnie Scotch lassie was a proposal of marriage, which she still keeps among her dearest treasures, and which only the most favored friends are permitted to see.

One evening when the gray walls of the castle cast their shadow over the beautiful Princess street gardens, and when the stern walls looked out over the city as from another world in all their quiet peacefulness, she stole out from the castle, and in the shadow of the old crags met the handsome Captain. A good old Scotch minister soon finished the work, and the daughter of the "Keeper of the Crown" had become the Captain's wife.

After her marriage she traveled for some years with her husband in Spain, Italy and Southern Europe. Captain Duncan was quite wealthy, and soon retired from the army. A little over fifty years ago, at the earnest solicitation of his brothers, who were living with his mother in Pittsburgh, he came to make them a visit. So loath was his mother to part with him that, although he once got as far as New York on his way back to his home, he turned again and until his death a few years ago lived in this city.

The Maid of the Castle has now become a white-haired, sweet-faced old lady of seventy-two years. Her five sons have grown to manhood about her, and she at the present time lives with one of them, Mr. A. C. Duncan, on Franklin street, Wilkinsburg. One of her sons, J. H. Duncan, is a prosperous business man of Cincinnati. She has also one daughter, Clara, living. She has still many mementoes of the past, the uniform that her father wore and his sword-knot. Pleasant as her life has been with her husband and family, she loves dearly to recall the old days in the castle. Of her father she speaks with the greatest reverence and admiration. She describes him as a man of wonderful presence, being over six feet in height and magnificently proportioned. He was stern and cold, as all Scotch parents are.

The crown-room was at the top of the castle, and Mrs. Duncan loves to tell how one day her father placed the crown, with its diamonds and precious stones, which had rested upon so many royal brows, upon her head. How she did love Edinburgh; and to hear her tell of the beautiful city one can almost see how in the spring time the gray walls of the castle, and the steep, rocky cliff brighten in color, and the trees and grassy slopes doff their dingy olive tints for the brightest emerald. She tells how she gazed from the walls down over the city and the Princess street gardens, where the children played in the cool shadow of the rocks, or looked from St. Andrew street and saw the mound across the valley bearing the white academy buildings, and the castle lifts its weather-beaten towers and fortifications serenely above, and the bright standards waving from the Half-Moon Battery. To hear the stories told by this dear old lady calls up all the grand old historic tales connected with the Canongate, where the ghosts of Kings and Queens walk.

Whence Came the Fish.

California papers report that a farmer of Sierra County last July sank an artesian well, which at the depth of 300 feet threw up hot water at the rate of 200 gallons a minute. The water, which is hot enough to cook an egg, flows for half a mile over the sandy desert, then forms a pond several feet in depth and sinks into the sand. The other day one of the farmer's children told him that the pond was full of fish. Her father laughed, but the child was right. The pond contains hundreds of Mountain trout from one to three inches long. Where they came from is a problem. All the water that flows into the pond is hot, there is no spring anywhere near the pond, and no one has stocked its waters with small fry.

THE wages of 80 per cent. of the employes of the Chicago & Alton railroad have been increased 5 per cent. Twenty per cent. of the engineers have been reduced. The increase will make the wages of the passenger engineer $3.50 per 100 miles, the freight engineer $4 per 100, with the addition of 50 cents on way freights and coal branches. The firemen are to receive 53 per cent. of the engineer's pay on passenger trains and 55 per cent. on freight trains.

DENVER (Col.) Knights have discovered that the boss over the trackmen was in league with an employment agency which procured positions under him for $2 a head. The men were discharged after working a few days. The superintendent of the company has put a stop to this at the request of the Knights. The boss was paid $1 for each man by the employment agency as his share of the "divy."

OMAHA brick-layers say that they will not work until their demand for an eight-hour day at $4.50 a day shall have been granted. The brick contractors reply that they will not employ the men unless they shall agree to work a nine-hour day at $4.50 a day; and eight hours on Saturday with eight hours' pay. In 1886 the brick-layers worked ten hours for $4. They struck last spring for $4.50 for a ten-hour day and won. Last year they were granted a nine-hour day and $4.50 a day, with a full day's pay for an eight-hour Saturday.

STRANGE AND PITIFUL.

The Remarkable History and Wanderings of a Union Veteran.

The strange case of Hugh Thompson has just passed through the Pension Office, says the Chicago Tribune. It is a remarkable story. Thompson left home a boy of eighteen to march with the Union forces. At the battle of Chickamauga he was wounded in the head, and from that time until 1872 his life is a blank to him and his friends. The army record shows that he was at the battle of Chickamauga. After that he was reported missing, and until a few months ago his family mourned him as dead. Under this impression his father applied for a pension in 1875, but was refused because he was not dependent at the time of the supposed death of his son. From the battle of Chickamauga until he was restored to his friends Hugh Thompson did not know his own name. Until 1872 he had no consciousness whatever. Where he spent the interval he does not know. In that year he was walking near the little town of Cleveland, in Illinois, when the memories of the war returned. He did not know his name. He was clad in old soldier clothes, with a blue soldier overcoat. He dimly recalled a great battle in which his comrades were hard pressed, and that was all. To his mind the battle was just over. From that time until last year he was a ceaseless wanderer. He had intelligence enough to care for horses and do odd chores, but his name, his family and his regiment were all a blank. In his wanderings he made his home in Michigan, Illinois, Wisconsin, Iowa and Kansas, picking up three wives, all of whom are dead. His misfortunes appealed to the old soldiers. They cared for him, and made many efforts to learn his history. Among them he was known as "Shorty," "Old Reliable" and the "Nameless Soldier." In a little Testament to which he clung through all his misfortunes was written the name of Thompson, and this was supposed to be his name. Some time last year he was at a soldiers' meeting in Michigan. His story was printed in a local paper. This found its way to Van Wert County, O., where the older Thompson lived. Hope was revived in the old man, who had mourned his son as dead for twenty-five years. He began a search for his son, and finally found him in Kansas and brought him back to the scenes of his childhood. Many things which had baffled memory were recalled. He had been engaged in youth to a girl whom he remembered as "heavy set," and although a quarter of a century had passed there was some peculiarity about her that led him to recognize her at sight. One day he was taken to an uncle's where many hours of his youth were passed. As he came to the barn a flash of intelligence came to his face and he said that was the barn he had so often tried to recall. His own people only identified him through the Testament which his cousin had given him, and which he had preserved together with some verses she had written. The Pension Commissioner is satisfied of his identity and a pension will be issued to the poor wanderer.

PERILS OF THE SEA.

The Vision That Lured a Young Sailor to His Destruction.

Captain Young, of the lost steamer Lizzie Perry, tells the following story of the loss of the ship Alfred Watts to the Newark News. He rescued two survivors of the Watts before his own ship went down. "When the Alfred Watts was off the Bahamas she encountered a terrible hurricane. In the height of the gale the ship was thrown on her beam ends. The deck was so almost perpendicular. The men were washed down into the lee scuppers, which were completely submerged. But they managed to crawl up again and cling to the deck, when a mighty sea suddenly swept over the vessel and washed every man overboard. When they came to the surface the wreck was away to the windward, but six of them contrived to scramble upon a portion of the forecastle, which had also come adrift. This piece of wreck was, however, no better than a raft, and how the men managed to cling to it is something that even the survivors hardly know. But they did so through a long, terrible night. By dawn the weather had moderated, and on the rising of the sun the hull of the vessel was to be seen at some distance away. Some fragments of wreckage were also floating about, and from these they picked a few small spars with which to row their unwieldy craft. They continued to row for thirty-six hours without a drop of water or any fragment of food or other nourishment or stimulant. Then one of them turned toward the others and called out joyfully that he saw land and meant to walk to it. It was a young man from Philadelphia named Oakford. Before his shipmates could check him he had stepped into the water and floated out of reach. He seemed to be swimming for some time, heading, perhaps, in the direction of the vision that had lured him to his destruction. But all at once he disappeared, vanishing in a posture and with a swiftness that left no room to doubt that he had been seized and pulled down by a shark."

TOOK IT COOLLY.

How Postmaster-General Dickinson Was Snubbed by a Doorkeeper.

The story of the little boy who picked up a pin in front of the wealthy merchant and was rewarded for his industry by a twelve-hundred-dollar clerkship is now rather eclipsed by a recent incident in Postmaster-General Dickinson's career, writes the Washington correspondent of the New York Tribune. It happened after he had been appointed by the President and before he had been confirmed by the Senate, during which period his status at the Post-Office Department was rather doubtful. One afternoon late, he was about to step into the side entrance when the zealous doorkeeper interposed:

"Too late."

"But, my man, I have important business inside."

"Are you a member of Congress?"

"No."

"Have you an order from a member?"

"No."

"Can't get in, then; too late."

"Well, when can I get in?"

"Dunno."

"Who can tell—"

"Dunno. Move on, now."

It was then that Mr. Dickinson retired and entered the building by another door. The doorkeeper in the meantime pursued the even tenor of his ways, satisfied that he had done the right thing and vindicated the authority of the Postmaster-General. Not long afterward he was astonished, however, to receive an order to call on the new Postmaster-General, who had in the meantime been confirmed by the Senate. His astonishment may be better imagined than described when he confronted in Mr. Dickinson the stranger whom he had treated so ungraciously. His new chief, though, proved magnanimous.

"I didn't care any thing for your discourtesy to me," he said, "but it might have hurt the feelings of a third-class postmaster. Answer questions after this. That's what you're paid for."

Two Little Grasshoppers.

Once, at a White House public reception, when the crowd was immense, Sir Edward Thornton and Lord George Montague, the last a son of the Duke of Manchester, tried to make their way into the Blue Room along with the general crowd. The policeman on duty waved them back. "Do you know, sir," said Sir Edward, in his most important manner, "that I am Sir Edward Thornton!" "And I," said Lord George, who was a meek, inoffensive little fellow, "I am Lord George Montague." "Go 'way," responded the policeman; "don't tell me two such little grasshoppers as you are Sir Edward Thornton and Lord George Montague."

Evidences of Genius.

The impression that the man who wears long hair is unusually profound is probably a mistaken one. While there are men of genius who wear long hair, there are also patent medicine fakers and gentlemen who sell soap of marvelous properties which will remove grease from clothing, and while men of great erudition are seldom found in that kind of business, they always wear flowing tresses. There are a great many discriminating people who consider baldness a greater evidence of genius than locks a foot long.

A band of cattle which arrived from the interior last night, consigned to Goodacre, of Victoria, were the finest that have been landed at Westminster since Christmas No one would think from their appearance that they had been on the range all winter.

After Oolachans.

The demand for oolachans is something marvellous. W. H. Vianen received several telegraph and half a dozen letter orders yesterday, telling him to send any quantity of these fish. The local demand has also been unusually large and it has been found impossible to supply half the demand. The oolachans are uncommonly large and fine flavored this season.

The Choral Union.

Extra interest is attached to the concert, advertised in our columns for Tuesday next, it being the twenty-fifth since the formation of the union, on the 14th November, 1881. Formed for the purpose of the promotion of a taste for high class music, the programmes of twenty-four concerts show that the society has catered well for the public, during the last eight years. The music offered on next Tuesday is quite in keeping with the past, although it introduces what is probably a new composer to most residents of this city, Spohr, along with the favorite Mendelssohn. The self-devoted labors of the right reverend conductor, and the painstaking attempts of the members, the majority of whom are of the fair sex, certainly deserve the popular tribute of a crowded house, which we earnestly hope they will receive.

Children Cry for Pitcher's Castoria

Extending Business.

The Brunette Sawmills Company, it is stated on the best of authority, will shortly add to their establishment a full plant for the manufacture of sash and doors. The plant, which will be equal to anything of the kind in the province, has already been ordered through F. G. Strickland & Co., the well-known dealers in milling and other machinery, and, it is expected, will be here in about two months.

Supreme Court.

In the Supreme court yesterday the case of Robinson vs Steves was heard before Mr. Justice McCreight. This case arose out the sale of a farm which was under lease, and the plaintiff claimed $2,000 damages. It was proved that plaintiff knew of the lease at the time of sale and the council for defendant asked for non-suit. His Lordship reserved judgment. Mr. Jenns for plaintiff and Messrs. Eckstein & Gaynor for defendant.

A Fine Fish Lost.

W. H. Vianen bewails the loss of the largest sturgeon caught on the Fraser river this year. He was towing the monster, which weighed 640 pounds, to the str. Princess Louise, and in attempting to haul it on board the weight of the fish broke the rope and it sank to the bottom Mr Vianen was sending the sturgeon to Plumpers Pass to be dried and smoked, and had looked forward to supplying the market with a very dainty morsel.

Chicken Stealing.

Chinese chicken stealers are again on the war-path, and it is strictly in order to load the shot gun and turn the watch dogs loose at night. On Thursday night Edward Fitzgerald's chicken house, on the North Arm road, near Fortesque street, was visited, and 24 plump hens carried off, leaving only one of the flock behind, probably as a basis from which to make up the loss. From traces left behind it is almost certain the thieves were Chinamen.

A Tale with a Moral.

In connection with the proposed expropriation of a lot, at present vacant, lying between Front and Columbia sts., for the purpose of extending Mackenzie street to the water front, it is interesting to note that, about fifteen years ago, this paper, then under a different name and management, urged the council of that time to take action looking to the same end. It goes without saying that private property could have been much more cheaply expropriated for street purposes then than now. Moral: always heed the advice of the patriotic and intelligent press.

Burnt Cork at the Standard.

Unquestionably the best minstrel performance given in St. Louis for years, was presented at the Standard Theatre last night, upon which occasion Goodyear, Cook & Dillion's refined minstrels gave their initial performance. The magnificent parade at noon attracted marked attention from all beholders, for 26 finer, manlier men never marched to music. And the immense audience who witnessed the performance last night testified by almost continual applause that the grand parade indicated the glorious entertainment that followed. Not a chestnut was sprung. The singing of the sextette was exquisite. The specialities were rendered in a refined and artistic manner, and take it in its entirety, it was conceded by scores in our immediate vicinity that it was the cleanest, most enjoyable minstrel performance ever witnessed in our city. The company do a large business during the week.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat. At Herring's Opera House, April 10th.

Another Pioneer Gone.

Another of our earliest pioneers, in the person of Capt. Alexander McLean, of Pitt Meadows, has crossed the "big divide" and passed into the unknown world beyond. His death occurred last night at 9 o'clock, after an illness of two weeks; and he passed away peacefully and quietly, and with every hope of the blessed ressurection. Capt. McLean had a stirring life up till his 50th year, and if all he has seen and taken part in were written up it would make a large volume which would surpass some of the most wonderful works of fiction in variety and sensation.

He was born in Glasgow, Scotland, in the year 1809, and when only a lad took to the sea and made a voyage to the South Sea Islands. The ship on which he sailed was boarded by a party of cannibals, who murdered and ate the entire crew with the exception of Mr. McLean and another boy, who were kept prisoners. The boy died but McLean lived and was a slave to the natives for seven years, when he managed to escape. During this time he passed through some stirring incidents, and often got a better insight to savage life than was altogether pleasant. He finally settled down in New Zealand long before that country was under British rule. The Maoris were not unfriendly and he spent 14 years among them, though not with great profit.

During the latter part of his stay in New Zealand he built a small schooner, and in 1848 he set sail for San Francisco with a large number of passengers, who were anxious to reach the California gold fields. He had no compass on board and navigated entirely by the stars, which was not a sure way of striking within a thousand miles of the point of destination, especially as he was sailing in unknown waters. The voyage was long and most eventful. Food and water were scarce and the passengers were almost continually in a state of mutiny, and in fact would have taken possession of the vessel and made the captain "walk the plank" but for their inability to navigate. The vessel touched at the Sandwich Islands and Capt. McLean managed by a skilful ruse to leave a large number of his most mutinous passengers behind. He invited them to dine on shore, and when the feast was at its height slipped quietly away, reached the vessel and making sail left the mutineers to shift for themselves.

When San Francisco was reached (1849) the present glories of that city were unthought of. There was scarcely a building erected at that time, but a sea of white tents covering hundreds of acres gave one the impression of a huge military camp. And it was military in a way, for no martial law was ever more strictly enforced than the common code adopted by the miners. While in San Francisco Capt. McLean married, and got for his wife the second white woman who reached the Pacific coast. After a few years' residence in the golden state he sailed up the coast and finally reached Bellingham Bay, where he settled on the site of the present city of Whatcom. To Capt. McLean belongs the honor of opening and developing the first coal mine on the Pacific coast. This mine he discovered close to the land on which he settled at Whatcom.

After a four years' stay on Bellingham Bay he loaded all his effects on his good schooner and sailed with his family for the Fraser River, up which he continued till Pitt River was reached, and there he cast anchor for the last time. This was in 1859. Capt. McLean did not catch the gold fever, but remained on his farm and enjoyed life quietly in his own way. He was one of the first half dozen persons to take up land on the Fraser River. About a year ago he came to Westminster for a few weeks and was converted by the Salvation Army, of which he remained a staunch and enthusiastic member till the day of his death. His health was always robust, and until two weeks ago he was never under a doctor's care. He was elected an honorary member of the 49-ers Pioneer Society a few years ago. He died at the residence of Mr. George Munday, at Sapperton, from where the funeral will take place to-morrow afternoon at 3 o'clock.

STANLEY'S LETTER.

[From First Page.]

we sighted the Nyanza, with Kavalli, the objective point of the expedition, six miles off. I had told the men to prepare to see Nyanz. They murmured and doubted. When they saw Nyanza below them many came to kiss my hands. We were now 5200 feet above the sea level, 2900 feet above the Albert Nyanza. After a short halt to enjoy the prospect, we commenced the rugged and stony descent. Before the rear guar had descended a hundred feet the natives from the plateau poured after them, keeping the rear guard busy until within a few hundred feet of the Nyanza plains.

NO NEWS OF EMIN.

We afterwards approached the village of Kakango, situated at the southwest corner of Albert lake. Three hours were spent by us in attempting to make friends, but they signally failed. They would not exchange the blood of brotherhood, because they had never heard of good people coming from the west side of the lake. They would not accept any present from us, because they did not know who we were, but they would give us water to drink and show us the way up to Nyamsassic. From these singular people we learned that they had heard there was a white man at Unyoro, but they had never heard of any white man being on the west side, nor had they seen any steamers on the lake. We were shown the path.

NO BOAT TO CROSS THE LAKE.

We camped about half a mile from the lake and then began to consider our position. My couriers from Zanzibar had evidently not arrived, or Emin Pasha with his two steamers would have paid the southern end of the lake a visit, to prepare the natives for our coming. My boat was at Kilinga-Longa, 190 miles distant, and there were no canoes obtainable; there was no plan feasible except to retreat to Ibwiri, build a fort, send a party back to Kilinga-Longa for a boat, store up every load in the fort not conveyable, leave a garrison to hold it, march back to Albert lake and send the boat in search of Emin Pasha. This was the plan which, after a lengthly discussion with the officers, I resolved upon. On January 7th we were in Ibwiri once again. After a few days rest, Lieut. Stairs, with 100 men, was sent to Kilinga-Longa to bring the boat and goods. On the return of Stairs with the boat and goods, he was sent to Uyarrava. He was to bring up the convalescents. Soon after his departure I was attacked by gastritis and an abscess on the arm. After a month's careful nursing I recovered and set out again for Albert Nyanza on April 2nd, accompanied by Josephson and Parke. A garrison was left at Fort Bodo.

THE NYANZA NATIVES FRIENDLY.

"On April 26th we arrived at Mozambini's country again. This time, after some hesitation, Mozambini decided to make the blood of brotherhood with me. His example was followed by all the other chiefs as far as the Nyanza Every difficulty seemed now to be removed. Food was supplied gratis.

EMIN PASHA HEARD FROM.

"When one day's march from Nyanza, natives came from Kavali and said a white man named Malejja had given their chief a packet to give to me, his son. They remained with us that night, telling us wonderful stories about big ships, etc., which left no doubt upon our mind that the white man was Emin Pasha. The next day's march brought us to Chief Kavali. He handed me a note from Emin Pasha to the effect that there had been a native rumor that a white man had been seen at the south end of the lake. He had gone in a steamer to make enquiries, but had been unable to obtain reliable information. He begged me to remain where I was until he could communicate with me. The next day, April 23, Josephson was dispatched with a strong force to take the boat to the Nyanza. On April 29th we once again reached the bivouac ground occupied by us December 16, and at 5 p. m., of that day I saw the steamer Khedive about 7 miles away.

THE MEETING WITH EMIN.

"Soon after 7 o'clock Emin Pasha, Signor Casati and Mr. Josephson arrived at our camp, where they were heartily welcomed by all of us. We were together until May 25, when I left him, leaving Josephson, three Soudanese and two Zanzibari in his care. Seven days later I was at Fort Bodo. At the fort were Capt. Nelson, and Lieutenant Stairs. The latter had returned from Nyarrava, 22 days after I had set out for the lake, bringing with him, alas! only 16 men out of 56. All the rest were dead.

BACK TO THE CONGO.

"On June 16 I left Fort Bodo with all Zanzibari's and 101 of Emin's people, leaving all my officers at the fort. On June 24 we reached Killinga-Longa, and on July 19 Nyarrava. The latter station was deserted. Passing on down the river as fast as we could go, daily expecting to meet the couriers I had sent to Maj. Barttelot, we indulged ourselves in pleasing anticipations as we neared the gaol. August 10 we overtook Uyarrova with a flotilla of 57 canoes and our couriers, reduced to 17, who related an awful story of hairbreadth escapes and tragic scenes. Three had been slain, two were still feeble from wounds, and all except five bore on their bodies scars of arrow wounds.

A week later Stanley met the rear column of the expedition at Bunalva and found Mr. Bonney. From the latter Stanley learned, greatly to his sorrow, of the shooting of Major Barttleot by a native a month before. Jamison had gone to Stanley Falls to try to get more men from Tippo Tib. Ward was at Bangala and Bonney was the only white man at Bunalya. After describing what a wreck he found the rear column to be, Stanley complains of the officers at Yambunga having too rapidly accepted the deserters' reports of his death and sending his personal kit of medicines, etc., down the Congo, leaving him naked of necessities for his return to Emin.

AN ENORMOUS FOREST.

The letter then summarizes what had been accomplished. The expedition was 100 days in one continuous, unbroken, compact forest. The grass land was traversed in eight days. How far west beyond the Congo the forest reaches Stanley does not know. The superficial extent of the tracts described above, totally covered by forest, is 246,000 square miles. North of the Congo, between Upsoto and and Aruwhimi, the forest embraces another 20,000 square miles. Between Yambunga and Nyanza Stanley came across five distinct languages.

At a distance of 50 miles from the camp on the Nyanza they saw a mountain probably 17,000 or 18,000 feet in height above the sea. It is covered with snow. It is called Reuveuzori, and will prove a rival to Kelimarrio. Three natives who had seen the lake to the south agree that it is large, but not so large as the Albert Nyanza.

EMIN PASHA'S SITUATION.

Emin Pasha has two battalions of regulars, the first consisting of 750 rifles and the second of 640. Besides these he has a respectable force of irregulars. In conversation with Stanely Emin said if he consented to go away from there they would have nearly 10,000 people with them. Emin was much worried to know how all the women and children, numbering over 2,000, could be brought away. He and Stanley discussed the matter at great length, but reached no conclusion.

Emin said the Egyptians, of whom he had 100 men, besides their woman and children, would be very willing to leave, and he would be glad to be rid of them, as they undermine his authority and nullify his endeavors to retreat, When he informed them that Khartoum had fallen and Gordon Pasha was slain, they told the Nubians that it was a concocted story, and some day the steamers would ascend the river to their relief. Emin proposed after Stanley's departure to visit Fort Bodo.

Stanley says in conclusion that he instructed the officers at the fort to destroy it and accompany Emin to the Nyanza. He hopes to meet them all there, as he intended making a short cut to the Nyanza along a new route.

Local Improvements Bylaw

A Bylaw to Provide for the Assessment of Property Benefitted by Local Improvements.

WHEREAS, BY VIRTUE OF AN ACT passed by the Legislature of the Province of British Columbia in the year A. D. 1888, entitled the "New Westminster Act, 1888," the Municipal Council of the City of New Westminster is empowered to provide the means of ascertaining and and determining what property will be immediately benefitted by local improvements, and the proportion in which assessments are to made on the various portions of the real estate in the City of New Westminster so benefitted, and to regulate the time or times and manner in which the said assessments are to be paid:

THEREFORE, the Municipal Council of the said City of New Westminster enacts as follows:

1. All petitions for local improvements to be made under the provisions of this Bylaw, if received by the Council and referred to the Board of Works, shall be examined by the City Clerk, whose duty it shall be to ascertain and finally determine whether the same are signed by the two-thirds of the owners, representing at least one-half of the value, of the real property to be directly benefitted thereby; and for this purpose the values entered in the last revised assessment roll may be taken as the values respectively of the properties so benefitted; and such petitions, where found to be correct as aforesaid shall be numbered by the said clerk, in the order in which they are received, and be entered at length in a book to be kept for that purpose, to be called the "Local Improvements Book," and the clerk shall endorse upon such petitions his certificate of the correctness thereof, and of the value of the whole of the real property rateable under the bylaw and of the whole number of the owners of such property, as well as of the number of the petitioners, and shall forthwith transmit the same to the Board of Works.

2. It shall be the duty of the Clerk, as soon as said Board of Works shall have reported to the Council in favor of the prayer of any such petition, and their report thereon shall have been adopted by the Council, to cause a copy of said petition to be forwarded without delay to the City Engineer.

3. It shall be the duty of the City Engineer for the time being, upon receipt of a copy of any such petition from the Clerk, to proceed at once to ascertain and determine what real property will be immediately benefitted by the proposed improvements and to ascertain and determine the proportion in which the assessment to defray the cost thereof is to be made on the various portions of the real estate so benefitted and to report the same to the Council as soon as practicable, which report, when approved, shall be entered in the said "Local Improvements Book."

4. The said Clerk, so soon as the report of the City Engineer is entered in the "Local Improvements Book," as provided by the third section of this Bylaw, shall cause a notice to be left at the place of abode, or deposited in the post-office in an envelope aderessed to his last known place of abode, of all parties to be assessed for such improvement, that the said assessment has been made, and the amount thereof, and that a bylaw in accordance therewith will be passed by the Council unless the same be appealed from, within eleven days after the delivery of such notice, in manner provided by the said "New Westminster Act, 1888."

5. All assessments to be levied at any time under any local improvements bylaw upon the real property immediately benefitted thereby shall be payable at the time or times and at the place and in the manner in which the ordinary city taxes are payable.

6. This Bylaw may be cited as the Local Improvements Bylaw, 1889.

Done and passed in open Council the 1st day of April, A. D. 1889.
