LIBERAL-CONSERVATIVE MEETING.

The Executive of the Liberal-Conservative Association, met last night in the office of Fred C. Elliott.

It was decided to hold a public meeting in the near future, to discuss matters pertaining to roads and trails. All who are interested in this matter should now put on their "thinking caps" and attend the meeting, prepared to demonstrate their views on any necessary work which requires attention.

The committee are endeavouring—and will probably succeed—to have the newly elected member present at the meeting.

A RECORD YEAR.

1906 BEATS PREVIOUS YEARS BY NEARLY 4 MILLION DOLLARS.

GOVERNMENT MINERALOGIST ROBERTSON SPEAKS OF THE RETURNS.

We give the place of honor in the current issue to a record of the fact that the mines of British Columbia produced during the past year, the enormous sum of $26 390,000. These figures are, of course, at this date merely approximate, full returns from all sources not being yet to hand; but they are compiled by the Provincial Mineralogist, Mr. William Fleet Robertson, a gentleman who is probably the last man in the Province to make the mistake of exaggerating values for the sake of producing a favorable showing.

These gratifying returns were called on the 5th. inst. by the Department of Mines by the Hon. J. H. Turner, Agent-General in London for the Province of British Columbia; and no doubt the publication of these enormous figures and the astounding increase they show, nearly four millions of dollars, over the values of the ores produced in 1905—had much to do with causing the remarkable article in the London Financial News. Such figures as these, evidencing the unbounded wealth and growing prosperity of our Province, are well calculated to impress even the rich financiers of the world's greatest money market.

Compared with the official figures for 1905, Mr. Robertson's estimate is as follows:

Gold	$ 6,070,000	$ 5,902,402
Silver	2,200,000	1,971,818
Copper	8,690,000	5,876,222
Lead	2,690,000	2,390,022
Coal	4,590,000	4,152,936
Coke	1,050,000	1,358,925
Miscellaneous	1,100,000	800,000
Totals	$26,390,000	$22,461,325

Copper holds the best record for 1906, its value having increased practically 50 per cent.

Of the metals, lead comes next with 13 per cent; silver follows with 11.6 per cent, and gold with 3 per cent. Coal shows an increase of 10 per cent and miscellaneous products 37 1-2 per cent. The only mineral product in which there was a falling off and this was extremely slight, was coke. This was caused by the strike at Fernie, now settled' which tied up the Kootenay mines for a couple of months. Had this trouble not occurred the mineral output of the Province would have reached the $30,000,000 mark.

LAND SLIDE.

McBride Government Returned by Big Majority.

Kaslo Riding Returns Neil F. McKay.

Saturday broke clear and frosty, an ideal one for election.

At 8 o'clock, Geo. Yuill, Deputy Returning Officer, assisted by Poll Clerk—Dickie Macfarland, opened the ballot-box, to receive the verdict of the people at Trout Lake.

Frank Barber at Ferguson, and Charlie Copp at the Silver Cup also acted as deputies.

All day the workers kept at it and it was not until the clock pointed out that 7 p.m. had arrived, that their efforts were relaxed

In Trout Lake—where, in 1903 the Liberal candidate had a majority of two—Mr. McKay polled a majority of 29

In Ferguson—where, in the same fight the Conservative candidate polled his winning majority—the tables were turned and John Keen received a majority of 15.

The Silver Cup also gave Keen a majority of 2.

The vote was as follows:

	KEEN	McKAY.
Ferguson	25	10
Silvr. Cup	11	9
Trout Lake	14	43

leaving a majority for McKay of 12, in the north end of the Riding.

We were unable, at the time of going to press, to secure the details of the south end vote, owing to the wires being down. We can say, however, that the majority will be from 42 to 45.

The province—as a whole—gives the Conservatives 26 seats out of 42. This enables them to have a clean majority over all.

Commenting on these figures in conversation with a representative of the B. C. Mining Exchange, the Provincial Mineralogist laid considerable stress on the fact that the great increase in the values of the ore returns for 1906 over those of 1905 was by no means wholly due to the great advance in price which some of the metals, notably copper, have shown. On the contrary, said Mr. Robertson, the tonnage output of the various ores shows, with little exception, a notable increase; the exact figures for which will appear in the Report of the Minister of Mines for the year 1906 which will shortly make its appearance.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

The McBride government has been before the 'jury," and their acts during the past three years have been vindicated.

It must be particularly pleasing to the members of the late government, that the coast cities where the electors probably have a much better chance to become acquainted with facts, have returned a solid Conservative membership.

It has been a short, sharp and decisive battle, and now that the 'smoke' of battle is cleared off, let us all 'get down' to business and keep ever-most in our minds the fact that the Province—to have continued prosperity—must have all—Liberal and Conservative alike—pulling together, having for their motto:- "British Columbia first, last and always."

N. F. McKay is the member for Kaslo Riding. We are satisfied that the interests of all will be looked after, in an honest manner.

To make his work in the House effective. he must have an undivided support from his constituents.

He is the representative of the people and while he is- as far as party is concerned—Conservative, we know that all will receive the same kind of treatment.

When his term is up, elect another man, if you please; but while he is there, we ask for him a loyal support.

Who died, (politically)

February 2nd. 1907.

CHIEF MOURNER—J. A. MACDONALD.

R. Macbride, Undertaker.

Personally, we are glad to see J. A. Macdonald, of Rossland, still in the House, and he will, no doubt, still lead the Liberal forces. Macdonald is a good man. but he got on the wrong "tack."

He claims that the amendments offered by him during the past three sessions of the House, were indicative of his policy.

We believe in a good opposition, it is necessary to keep the government straight, and we trust—during the next four years—the amendments, suggestions or criticisms of the Opposition, will have less of personal attacks and negative resolutions and more along along the line of construction and progress.

The Masquerade Ball on the 31st. given by the ladies of Trout Lake, was an unqualfied success. A large number of visitors came n from Camborne, Beaton, Ferguson and Comaplix.

The costumes were original and displayed ingenuity and invention by the maskers, 4 prizes were donated—two to the ladies, which were won by the Misses Beaton and Wilson of Beaton and Mr. A. Cummins of Ferguson and Eli Edge of Beaton. A light supper was served at midnight in the grill room.

The music rendered by Messrs, Parisian and Griffith, left nothing to be desired in the way of harmony.

NOTICE.

Last Friday, Feb. 1st. between 2 and 3 p.m., a brown paper parcel was left for Miss Hoe on the door-handle of her house. It was removed by some mischeivious person shortly afterwards.

Will the said person or persons kindly return it to the place from whence they took it?

Wm. Baty is a Conservative to be proud of. All the way from Calgary, through storms and blizzards, came the redoubtable North nmbrian to cast his vote for Mac Kay.

Frank Holten, George Ross and Jack Atkinson of Revelstoke, were visitors on Election day.

Jim O'Donnell, Malcolm Mathieson, Robert Scott, Frank Abey-Frank Lanndriau and Pat Cant well of Camborne, overcame all obstacles between Camborne and here on Election day to get in and cast their votes.

The Beaton visitors were Bill Davis, Asa and Lance Hillman.

Of course, they voted for Keen, well, somebody did that came in on the Liberal stage. Who was it?

We learn from the "Slocan Mining Review" that a practice match was recently played at Sandon by the Hockey Club, with a view to selecting a team to play a series of matches with other teams, amongst others mentioned, Trout Lake.

Attention! "locals" the "alarm" has been sounded, so "get a move on quick."

Rev. Fr. Jeannotte has petitioned the bishop of the diocese to send in another priest to attend to the many stations throughout the Slocan and Kaslo divisions.

In the afternoon a hockey match was played between teams from Comaplix, Beaton, Ferguson and Trout Lake, resulting in a win by 2 goals to 1 for the home team.

CASE 113

By... Emile Gaboriau

but she would not be repulsed. Rushing up to Raoul, she threw her arms around him and said to her husband:

"Kill me, and me alone, for I am the guilty one!"

At these words M. Fauvel glared at the guilty pair and, deliberately taking aim, fired. Neither Raoul nor Mme. Fauvel moved. The banker fired a second time, then a third. He cocked the pistol for a fourth shot when a man rushed into the room, snatched the pistol from the banker's hand and ran to Mme. Fauvel. It was M. Verduret.

"Thank God," he cried, "she is unhurt! Do you know who that man is that you attempted to kill?"

"Her lover!"

"No; her son!"

The banker looked wildly from Raoul to M. Verduret, then, fastening his haggard eyes on his wife, exclaimed:

"It is false! You are all conspiring to deceive me! Proofs!"

"You shall have proofs," replied M. Verduret. "But first listen."

And rapidly, with his wonderful talent for exposition, he related the principal points of the plot he had discovered. The true state of the case was terribly distressing to M. Fauvel, but nothing compared with what he had suspected. His throbbing, yearning heart told him that he still loved his wife. Why should he punish a fault committed so many years ago and atoned for by twenty years of devotion and suffering? For some moments after M. Verduret had finished his explanation M. Fauvel remained silent. So many strange events had happened in the last few days, culminating in the scene which had just taken place, that M. Fauvel was incapable of thinking. If his heart counseled pardon and forgetfulness, wounded pride and self respect demanded vengeance. If Raoul, the baleful witness, the living proof of a faroff sin, were not in existence, M. Fauvel would not have hesitated—Gaston de Clameran was dead—he would have held out his arms to his wife and said:

"Come to my heart! Your sacrifices for my honor shall be your absolution. Let the sad past be forgotten."

But the sight of Raoul prevented.

"So this is your son," he said to his wife—"this man who has plundered you and robbed me!"

Mme. Fauvel was unable to utter a word in reply. Happily M. Verduret was there.

"Oh," he said, "madame will tell you that this young man is the son of Gaston de Clameran. She has never doubted it. But the truth is"—

"What?"

"In order to rob her he has perpetrated a gross imposture."

During the last few minutes Raoul had managed to approach the door hoping to escape while no one was thinking of him. But M. Verduret watching him out of the corner of one eye, stopped him just as he was about to leave.

"Not so fast, my pretty youth," he said, dragging him into the middle of the room. "Let us have a little conversation before parting. A little explanation will be edifying."

The jeering words and mocking manner of M. Verduret made Raoul turn deadly pale. He started back as if confronted by a phantom.

"The clown!" he gasped.

"The same, friend," said the fat man. "Ah, now that you recognize me, I confess that the clown and myself are one and the same. Yes, I am the jolly clown of the Jandidier ball. Here is the proof."

And, turning up his sleeve, he showed a deep cut on his arm. "If you are not sure, examine this scar," he continued. "I imagine you know the villain that gave me this little decoration that night I was walking along Bourdaloue street. That being the case, you know I have a slight claim upon you and shall expect you to relate to us your little story."

But Raoul was too terrified to utter a word.

M. Fauvel listened without understanding.

"Into what dark depths of shame have we fallen!" he groaned.

"Reassure yourself, monsieur," replied M. Verduret. "After what I have been constrained to tell you little remains. I will finish the story."

He then told how Louis Clameran had concocted his plot to palm off Raoul as Mme. Fauvel's son with a view to extort money from her.

"Can this be possible?" cried Mme Fauvel.

"Impossible!" cried the banker. "An infamous plot like this could not be executed in our midst."

"All this is false!" said Raoul boldly. "It is a lie!"

M. Verduret turned to Raoul and bowing with ironical respect, said:

"Monsieur desires proofs, does he? Monsieur shall certainly have convincing ones. I have just left a friend of mine, M. Palot, who brought me valuable information from London. Now, my young gentleman, I will tell you the little story he told me.

"In 1847 Lord Murray, a wealthy and generous nobleman, had a jockey named Spencer, of whom he was very fond. At the Epsom races this jockey was thrown from his horse and killed. Lord Murray grieved over the loss of his favorite and, having no children of his own, declared his intention of adopting Spencer's son, who was then but four years old.

"Thus James Spencer was brought up in affluence as heir to the immense wealth of the noble lord. He was a handsome, intelligent boy and gave satisfaction to his protector until he was sixteen years of age. Then he became intimate with a worthless set of people and turned out badly.

"Lord Murray, who was very indulgent, pardoned many grave faults, but one fine morning he discovered that his adopted son had been imitating his signature upon some checks. He indignantly dismissed him.

"James Spencer had been living in London about four years, managing to support himself by gambling and swindling, when he met Clameran, who offered him 25,000 francs to play a part in a little role which he had arranged."

"You are a detective!" interrupted Raoul.

The fat man smiled grimly.

"At present," he replied, "I am merely a friend of Prosper Bertomy. It depends entirely upon your behavior which character I appear in while settling up this little affair."

"What do you expect me to do?"

"Where are the 350,000 francs which you have stolen?"

The young rascal hesitated a moment.

"The money is in this room," he said.

"Very good. This frankness is creditable and will benefit you. I know that the money is in this room and also exactly where it is to be found. Look in the back of that cupboard."

Raoul saw that his game was lost. He tremblingly went to the cupboard and pulled out several bundles of bank notes and an enormous package of pawnbrokers' tickets.

"Very well done," said M. Verduret as he carefully examined the money and papers. "In this you have acted wisely."

Raoul had counted on this moment, when everybody's attention would be absorbed by the money, to make his escape. Softly he stole toward the door, opened it, slipped out and locked it on the outside. The key was still in the lock.

"He has escaped!" cried M. Fauvel.

"Naturally," replied M. Verduret without turning his head. "I thought he would have sense enough to do that."

"But"—

"Would you have this affair become public? Do you wish a case to be brought into the police court in which your wife is the victim?"

"Oh, monsieur!"

"Then let the rascal go free. Here are the 350,000 francs. Here are receipts for all the articles which he has pawned. We should consider ourselves fortunate. He has kept 50,000 francs. So much the better for you. This sum will enable him to go abroad, and we shall never see him again."

Like every one else, M. Fauvel submitted to the ascendency of M. Verduret. Gradually he had awakened to the true state of affairs. Prospective happiness was possible, and he felt that he was indebted to M. Verduret for more than life. He was not slow in expressing his gratitude. He seized M. Verduret's hand, as if to carry it to his lips, and said, with emotion:

"How can I ever find words to express my appreciation? How can I repay the great service you have rendered me?"

M. Verduret reflected a moment and then said:

"Since you feel under obligations to me I have a favor to ask of you."

"A favor of me? Speak, monsieur. You have but to name it. My fortune and life are at your disposal."

"Well, then, monsieur, I confess I am Prosper's friend and deeply interested in his future. Can you not exonerate him, restore him to his position? You can do more than this, monsieur. He loves Mlle. Madeleine."

"Madeleine shall be his wife, monsieur," interrupted the banker. "I give you my word, and I will so publicly exonerate him that no one shall reproach him with what has been my mistake."

The fat man quietly took up his hat and cane, which stood in a corner, as if he had been paying an ordinary morning call, and turned to leave the room.

"Monsieur," he said before going, "excuse my intruding any advice, but Mme. Fauvel"—

"Andre!" cried the poor woman. "Andre!"

The banker hesitated a moment, then, following the impulse of his heart, ran to his wife and, clasping her in his arms, said:

"No; I will not be so foolish as to struggle against my heart. I do not pardon, Valentine; I forget—I forget all!"

M. Verduret had nothing more to do at Vesinet. Therefore, without taking leave of the banker, he quietly left the room and, taking his cab, ordered the driver to return to Paris and drive to the Hotel du Louvre as rapidly as possible. His mind was filled with anxiety. He knew that Raoul would give him no more trouble. The young rogue was probably taking his passage for some foreign land at that very moment. But Clameran should not escape the punishment he deserved. But how was it possible to inflict this punishment without compromising Mme. Fauvel? M. Verduret thought over the various cases similar to this, but not one among his repertory of expedients could be applied to the present circumstances. After long thought he decided that an accusation of poisoning must come from Oloron. "I will go there and work upon public opinion, so that to satisfy the townspeople the authorities would order an inquest in Gaston's case. But this required time, and Clameran, being warned, would disappear.

It was almost dark when the carriage stopped in front of the Hotel du Louvre. M. Verduret noticed a crowd of people collected together in groups and heard the police crying "Move on!" The crowd would merely separate in one spot to join a more clamorous group a few yards off.

"What has happened?" demanded M. Verduret of a lounger near by.

"A strange thing," replied the man. "He first appeared at that seventh story window. He was only half dressed. Some persons tried to seize him; but, with the agility of a sleepwalker, he jumped out upon the roof, shrieking 'Murder! Murder!' The recklessness of his conduct led me to suppose"—

The gossip stopped short in his narrative, very much astonished. His questioner had vanished.

"Could it be Clameran?" thought M. Verduret.

He pushed through the crowded courtyard of the hotel.

At the foot of the staircase M. Fanferlot and three peculiar looking individuals were standing together.

"Well," cried M. Verduret, "what's the matter?"

"The matter is this," said Fanferlot dejectedly. "I have no luck. You see how it is. This is the only chance I ever had of working out a beautiful case, and, presto, my criminal breaks down!"

"Then it is Clameran who"—

"Of course it is. When the rascal saw me this morning, he scampered off like a hare. On reaching the Boulevard of Schools a sudden idea seemed to seize him, and he struck out for this hotel, probably to get his pile of money. When he arrives, what does he see? These three friends of mine. The sight of them had the effect of a sunstroke upon him. He went raving mad."

"Where is he now?"

"At the prefecture, I suppose. Some policemen handcuffed him and drove off with him in a cab."

"Come with me."

M. Verduret and Fanferlot found Clameran in one of the private cells reserved for dangerous prisoners.

He had on a straitjacket and was struggling violently against three men who were striving to hold him while a physican tried to force him to swallow a potion.

"Help!" he shrieked. "Do you not see him—my brother—coming after me? He wants to poison me!"

M. Verduret took the physician aside and questioned him about the maniac.

"He is in a hopeless state," replied the doctor. "This species of insanity is incurable. He thinks some one is trying to poison him, and nothing will persuade him to eat or drink anything, and as it is impossible to force anything down his throat he will die of starvation after having suffered all the tortures of poison."

M. Verduret, with a shudder, turned to leave the prefecture, saying to Fanferlot:

"Mme. Fauvel is saved. God has punished Clameran."

"That doesn't help me," grumbled Fanferlot. "All my trouble has been for nothing. What luck!"

"That is true," replied M. Verduret. "Case 113 will never leave the record office. But console yourself. I will send you as bearer of dispatches to a friend of mine, and what you have lost in fame will be gained in gold."

Later was celebrated at the Church of Notre Dame de Lorette the marriage of M. Prosper Bertomy and Mlle. Madeleine Fauvel.

The banking house is still in Province street, but as M. Fauvel has decided to retire from business and live in the country the name of the firm has been changed and is now Prosper Bertomy & Co.

THE END.

Cause and Effect.

Shakespeare saw life in large and wrote as he saw. He never "blamed it on to God." His pages are full of the inexorable sequence of cause and effect, and the swift march of deeds points the moral of individual responsibility. If things were "rotten in Denmark," it was because the fathers had eaten sour grapes and the children's teeth were set on edge; if Macbeth trembled at the knocking at the gate, it was because conscience doth make cowards of us all. The ghosts that haunted Bosworth field were of Richard's own creating, and Regan and Goneril, desperately dead, reap but their inevitable due. In short, Shakespeare's message is the message of a robust manhood and womanhood: Brace up, pay for what you have, do good if you wish to get good. Good or bad, shoulder the burden of your moral responsibility and never forget that cowardice is the most fatal and most futile crime in the calendar of crimes.

Cowards die many times before their deaths;
The valiant never taste of death but once.

A FATEFUL NECKLACE.

It Brought Misfortune to Each of Its Owners.

Mme. Andreef was the wife of a broker on the St. Petersburg bourse. She was killed by her husband in a St. Petersburg summer garden. The Novoe Vremya tells this story of a pearl necklace the woman was wearing when she met her death: "It is an old piece of work by one of the best Parisian jewelers. It had been sold first to the head of a well known French court family. In the excitement of the great French revolution nearly all the members of this family were guillotined, and only a few of them managed to escape to Brussels and so save their lives. But the flight cost a lot of money, and they were obliged to part with many fine jewels, among them the necklace in question. From the time that they got rid of this article they enjoyed good fortune.

"This cherished jewel, after changing hands about ten times, was bought by the St. Petersburg jeweler Butz for 40,000 rubles ($20,600) for Prince V——, who was at that time a leading man at court. The prince, who was a great lover of the ballet, gave the necklace to the well known ballerina Tzukki. For having done this he was exiled from St. Petersburg. Tzukki left the imperial ballet, and, finding her health failing, she went to her native countryside and abandoned the stage forever. But before doing so she sold the necklace.

"A subsequent owner, the antiquarian Linivitch, died suddenly at Monte Carlo, and a whole series of people afterward who came into possession of the fated necklace had most sinister experiences. One of these, a gambler at Monte Carlo, lost all his money, and only the sale of the necklace saved him from beggary.

"Finally it fell into the hands of M. Andreef. He paid the low price of 20,000 rubles ($10,300) for it, and his wife was wearing it when in a fit of anger he killed her, to whom he had but a short time ago presented the unlucky token. The necklace has now mysteriously disappeared."

HOPE FOR THE SICK

A VICTIM OF LA GRIPPE.

Mrs. Henrietta A. S. Marsh, 700 W. 10th St., Los Angeles, Cal., President Women's Benevolent Ass'n, writes:

"I suffered with la grippe for seven weeks, and nothing I could do or take helped me until I tried Peruna.

"I felt at once that I had at last secured the right medicine and I kept steadily improving. Within three weeks I was fully restored, and I am glad that I gave that truly great remedy a trial. I will never be without it again."

In a letter dated August 31, 1904, Mrs. Marsh says: "I have never yet heard the efficacy of Peruna questioned. We still use it. I travelled through Kentucky and Tennessee three years ago, where I found Peruna doing its good work. Much of it is being used here also."—Henrietta A. S. Marsh.

Adopting an Heir in Japan.

The custom of adoption is universal in Japan, where it is practiced to keep a family name from becoming extinct. Indeed, there is scarcely a family in which it has not at some time or other been observed. A person who has no male issue adopts a son and, if he has a daughter, often gives her to him in marriage. A youth or even a child, who may be the head of a family, occasionally adopts, on the point of dying, a son older than himself to succeed him.

Many inherit weak lungs, and as disease usually assails the weakest point, these persons are continually exposed to attacks of cold and pulmonary disturbances. The speedy use of Bickle's Anti Consumptive Syrup will be found a preventative and a protection, strengthening the organs so that they are not so liable to derangement from exposure or abrupt atmospheric changes. Bickle's Syrup is cheap and good.

The late dynamite explosion in St. Peter's was considered as anarchy's protest against religion. The Pope preserved his composure and said: "It was some madman's act. I will pray for the wretch."

The World's Debt to Flowers.

I have never known man or woman who has not improved in character by becoming devoted to the affairs of flowers, and I venture to say that the world at large is under the deepest obligation to pansies, violets, roses and lilies, to name but a few of the blossoms that silently help the good angel of mankind.

Fate of a Japanese Traitor.

Traitors among the Japanese officers are not treated pleasantly when their misconduct is discovered. Bennet Burleigh in his new book on Japan tells of an instance. Two Japanese transports laden with men, stores and heavy siege artillery had been suddenly attacked by the Russian Vladivostock squadron. One was sunk, and the other escaped with difficulty. Who had given the information of the sailing of these ships? "The Japanese made search to find out who had blabbed and ultimately traced it to a high official in Tokio, one holding sea rank and engaged in the admiralty. A Russian check for a large sum was traced into his hands. He was confronted with it and his receipt signature thereon. Then he was led into a secluded room, where a number of his fellow officers had gathered. They stripped him naked, spat upon him and kicked him to death."

PREPARING FOR WINTER.

Some Timely Hints to Guide the Prudent Farmer.

October.—Sow cover crops, rye and buckwheat, on ground that would otherwise be bare during winter. Late in the month harvest roots and store in pits or root cellar. Finish harvesting and storing apples, pears and grapes. Leave only hardy vegetables, such as parsnips, Jerusalem artichokes and horseradish in the field. These may be dug as needed through the winter or in early spring. Fill cold frames with lettuce, radish and onion sets for winter use. Sow spinach for spring cutting. Transplant all flowers for house use before frost. Dig and start in a dry place dahlias, cannas, gladioli and similar bulbs and roots. When the temperature goes below 50 degrees at night start a fire in the greenhouses. Plant last settings of strawberries in pots early in the month. Celery must have a final earthing up. Asparagus and rhubarb for forcing must be dug and allowed to freeze before removal to the cellar.

November.—Final harvesting of cabbage, celery, roots, etc., and final planting of spinach. Make cuttings and scions of grapes, currants, gooseberries and tree fruits, tie in bundles and bury butt end upward. Stratify seeds of peaches, plums and other stone fruits and store where they will not freeze. Spread mulches on bulb beds, around shrubs, upon herbaceous borders and, when the ground is frozen hard, upon strawberry beds. Prune grapevines and other trees. Plow or dig heavy soil and leave in loose condition to freeze. Cover cold frames with straw mats or shutters on cold nights. Tidy up the place for winter. Review the season's practice and improve plans for next year.

RAPE AS A STOCK FOOD.

Its Value as a Catch Crop For Forage and Green Manure.

At the Kansas experiment station last year a very good crop of rape was grown in wheat stubble by simply seeding with a disk drill directly behind the binder as the wheat was being harvested.

Rape may be grown in the cornfields, being seeded at the time of the last cultivation or afterward, but it has not been so successful when grown this way, as the corn takes the moisture needed by the rape.

Professor Burnett of Nebraska recommends sowing rape in the spring with some grain crop, such as wheat or oats, allowing the rape to take possession of the field when the grain crop is cut. He states that "in Minnesota and the Dakotas with a good stand of rape in the stubble sheep can be turned in about three weeks after cutting the grain. Such a field will support ten or fifteen sheep per acre and keep them growing six weeks."

Professor Hitchcock says that "each year finds the area in which rape is grown extended until it now includes much of the spring wheat region of the northwest, where it is grown chiefly as a catch crop."

The above experiments indicate that rape can be made a profitable catch crop in Kansas, especially for the farmer who is raising sheep and hogs.

As a green manuring crop rape, owing to its containing a large amount of water, does not produce a very large amount of vegetable matter, but what there is decays readily when plowed under, and when the crop is pastured there is generally a considerable amount trampled down, which when turned under adds materially to the productiveness of the soil.

Restoring Prairie Soil.

All who have taken up prairie farms will recognize the truth of the following statement of Professor Ten Eyck of Kansas in regard to them:

When the wild prairie is first broken the soil is mellow, moist and rich, producing abundant crops. After a few years of continuous grain cropping and cultivation the physical condition of the soil changes—the soil grains become finer, the soil becomes more compact and heavier to handle, it dries out quicker than it used to and often turns over in hard clods and lumps when plowed. The perfect tilth and freedom from clods, so characteristic of virgin soils, is always more or less completely restored whenever land has been laid down to grass for a sufficient length of time.

An Effective Wagon Jack.

The wagon jack herewith shown is reproduced from Farm Progress. It is simple in construction and effective in use. A is of oak 2 by 4 by 33 inches, B is 2 by 4 by 14 inches, C is 12 inches long, and lever D is 5 feet long, the short end being one foot. The drawing explains itself.

Chemical Weed Killer.

A chemical weed killer has been developed or tested by the Wisconsin experiment station in attempts to kill wild mustard, cocklebur, yellow dock, etc. The peculiar thing claimed for this poison is that when sprayed on a growing grain crop infested by weeds it kills the weeds without injury to the cultivated crop. The solution used consists of 100 pounds of iron sulphate dissolved in fifty-four gallons of water, which amount will spray an acre.

Walnuts In France.

In some parts of France walnuts form a regular article of diet. The peasants eat them with bread that has oftentimes been rubbed with garlic. The hygienic effects are considered good, replacing meat to a large extent. These nuts are also used to make oil. It is much cheaper and similar in taste to that pressed from olives and is employed to adulterate the latter. The prisoners in certain prisons are engaged in cracking walnuts and picking out the kernels, which are pressed into oil.

Information For the Young.

"Pa, what do they call babies where there's three of them at a time—I mean the same as twins?"

"Triplets."

"Oh, yes. I couldn't think what it was. And what is it when there's four of them?"

"A calamity. Now, put that pup out of the house and keep him out or I'll send for the dog catcher!"

DISEASE BORN OF CARELESSNESS

Because Poisonous Impurities are Left in the Blood Which Can be Removed by the Use of

DR. CHASE'S KIDNEY-LIVER PILLS.

Disease results in most cases from the presence of poisonous waste matter in the body, and may, therefore, be said to arise from ignorance or carelessness.

Bilious spells, sick headache, attacks of indigestion, kidney pains and backache—such are the indications of failure on the part of the liver to remove the poisonous waste matter as rapidly as it accumulates.

By the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills the situation is promptly relieved, because liver, kidney and bowels are set in vigorous action and the filtering and excretory system thoroughly cleansed and strengthened.

Neglect to afford assistance at such a time is to invite the attack of such ailments as Bright's disease, dropsy, rheumatism or appendicitis.

Mr. Wm. Cook, Moosomin, N.W.T., writes: "I have been taking Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills and must say they have done me a lot of good. I have been a great sufferer from diabetes and I can say to all who are afflicted with this disease that Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills will do them good. I cannot say that I am entirely cured but I have been greatly benefited by this medicine."

Mr. John Wilson, 918 Logan avenue, Montreal, Que., writes: "In February I was taken sick and had to have the doctor, who said my ailment was a disordered liver. A few weeks after completing the treatment I began to notice symptoms of kidney disease. The urine became a reddish appearance and continued to get worse until there were sediment deposits, and then I knew the kidneys were seriously affected and that I was threatened with Bright's disease.

"I obtained some of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills and as a result of this treatment was completely cured. My water became a natural color and is still so. The cure was thorough and lasting."

By using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, one pill a dose at bedtime as often as is necessary to keep the bowels in regular healthful action you insure yourself against kidney disease and the subsequent suffering from Bright's disease, dropsy, apoplexy or other equally dreadful ailments. Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, 25 cents a box, at all dealers or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Toronto.

A Modern Desdemona.

The London papers are printing the story of an English girl, Clara Casey, who married a Moorish acrobat, Mohammed Ben Bulkhassen, and who now in far off Tangier sighs for her Albion home as follows:

"I wish I were in England again. I am quite miserable and lonely here, and it makes me feel it more when I see how Mr. Abdullah treats his wife and the way Mohammed treats me.

"There is a great difference. He is always hitting me, and he laughs at me now he has got me here and tells me I will never see you again, that I shall live and die here.

"Dear mother, I hope and trust to God I will soon be able to return to England again. What a fool I have been to give myself to this man!"

So far the intervention of the British vice consul has led to nothing, for Miss Casey had previously become a convert to Islam, and she stated that she had the approval of her parents.

Turtles as Gardeners.

The peddlers with carts who supply the occupants of villas in the environs of Paris with cherries and other small fruits frequently carry for sale a few small turtles. They are purchased by the inhabitants of the villas to be placed in their gardens, where they are believed to serve as very effective aids to the gardener by preventing the ravages of the insects and other small creatures which are accustomed to do much damage to the flower beds and borders.

Street Car Rules of Rio.

There are first and second class street cars, writes Albert Hale in the Reader, and I, with a package in my arms, had taken a first class bond, as a street car is called in Rio de Janeiro. Scarcely had I done so when the conductor requested me to transfer to a second class car whenever it might come along, because no one is allowed to carry anything greater than a lap satchel first class. So I humbly descended and had either to mix with market women and sweaty laborers or to take a tilbury. A tilbury, named after the English maker who years ago introduced it, is a curious two wheeled, light springed cab, like an old fashioned gig, and resembles a hansom without the attachment for the driver. He sits inside the tilbury. A person without a necktie is no more allowed first class on the street cars than was I with my parcel. They are decidedly particular in Brazil and inherit many fastidious ways from the time of the empire, when dress and manners were the mark separating the aristocracy from the working classes.

At a recent inquest in a Pennsylvania town one of the jurors, after the swearing in, arose and with dignity protested against serving, alleging that he was the general manager of an important concern and wasting valuable time by sitting as juror at an inquest. The coroner, turning to his clerk, said: "Mr. M. kindly hand me 'Jervis' (the authority on juries)." Then, after consulting the book, the coroner observed to the willing juror:

"Upon reference to 'Jervis' I find that no persons are exempt from jury service as jurors except idiots, infants and lunatics. Now, under which of these do you claim exemption?"

At that he tore the envelope open. As he read a smile settled on his face, and, pulling a dollar from his pocket, he handed it to the boy.

"It's all right," he said.

Then he threw the message on the counter. "Read it!" he said to C. I. Newton, the clerk. The message read:

WASHINGTON'S DEATH.

There Was Not Very Much of a "Mystery" About It.

Clement K. Shorter, an English writer of more or less distinction, surprised everybody recently by printing in a London newspaper an article in which he asserted there was a mystery surrounding the death of General George Washington about which Americans hesitated to talk. If there be a mystery we should like to know what it is.

George Washington caught cold when riding over his plantation at Mount Vernon on the afternoon of Dec. 12, 1799. Forty-eight hours later he died.

He was attended by three of the best physicians of that part of the country. He was bled no less than three times to relieve a sore throat, and he was dosed with calomel enough to deprive a healthy man of his life. But what is the mystery?

Enlightened physicians frequently assert that General Washington was killed—that he was bled to death and poisoned with calomel. Tobias Lear, his secretary, says that after the doctor had bled him to the extent of half a pint Washington interrupted with the remark: "The gash is not big enough. Make it wider." And the highly trained professional idiot proceeded to do so. "Does your throat feel any better?" asked the learned leech. "It's very sore," murmured Washington. When the second physician arrived Mrs. Washington tried to stay his murderous hand by protesting that "the general was too old a man to stand much bleeding." "Yes, yes," said the mighty doctor No. 2. "I'll be cautious in blood letting."

And then he proceeded straight to rob his country's father of a full pint of life's most precious fluid. When the third physician had come he rolled his eyes solemnly and said, "I will bleed him." "We both tried that," said the other doctors. "Yes, I know," announced the consulting sage, "but if blood letting does not relieve him I must increase the dose of calomel." After the third bleeding—in which we are not surprised to learn that Washington's arm yielded its life fluid more slowly than it had before—the sore throat continued in spite of the last consulting doctor, and when his wearied body failed to respond to a heroic overdose of calomel the two consulting physicians retired and left Washington to die. Is there any mystery in his death?—Utica Observer.

Peculiarities of Napoleon.

Napoleon's father was a toper, a man utterly lacking in moral sensibility, and his sisters were immodest and hysterical. According to Dr. Cabanas, Pauline was particularly so. Napoleon himself was exceedingly sensitive to atmospheric changes, was headachey and had auditory illusions. He had twitchings of the arms, the shoulders and the lips. He was at times the most irritable of men, often being unapproachable. His mania for destruction was such that he whittled pieces of furniture, broke articles presented to him, pinched babies while pretending to caress them and took keen delight in shooting Josephine's rarest birds. The slightest opposition threw him into a paroxysm of rage. But in a campaign all weaknesses vanished. His pulse ranged ordinarily between thirty and thirty-five beats a minute and never went above fifty-five. The usual pulse rate is about seventy-two a minute.

The Eyes of the Eagle.

That the eagle has a most wonderful power of vision is shown from the fact that it flies in almost a straight line for any object which it desires to secure. Baby eagles also possess this farsightedness. Long before human eyes can discern them their gaze is fixed on distance, and their cries of welcome to their parents are shrill and continuous. The structure of their eyes makes them peculiarly strong. The brightest glare of sunlight does not affect them. Eagles do not fly as high in the air as some other birds, but their flight is very long and steady. A peculiarity about eagles is that they are constant to their mates, not changing every season, as most birds do. Sometimes the same pair of eagles will return to the same nest year after year. They seem to become acquainted with the locality, and if they are not disturbed are regular tenants.

Caste In the Churches.

There was often too great a separation between the rich and the poor in our churches, said the Rev. Principal Henderson, of Bristol, at the Baptist Union's Conference at Huddersfield. Was it justifiable, he asked, to reserve all the time and energy of the most attractive servants of Christ to certain congregations? Was it quite certain that wealth should command what were presumed to be the choicest ministries? Material resources, also, should be applied where there was most need for them. With reference to the multiplication of rigidly separated sects, he said that if any apostolic letter were in these days to be addressed to the "Church of God in Huddersfield," he feared it would be returned as "insufficiently addressed."

At the concluding meeting Dr. Clifford, after referring to the remarkable speech of the Bishop of Birmingham at the Church Congress, he said, "Let all destroy the castle spirit in the churches. The temper of our time is essentially a temper of freedom, resistant of everything in the shape of tyranny over the intellect or the life of men."

Royalty Made No Difference.

King Haakon when he first joined the Danish navy was treated exactly like any other boy. The chief purser issued his mess gear, consisting of an iron knife and fork, a tin spoon, two tin plates and a zinc mug. On his way back to quarters the lad stumbled while going up a ladder, and all these things went flying over the deck, waking the chief gunner from a nap and bringing down on himself a volley of abuse. He then acted as mess boy for the other apprentices and had to fetch their soup, wash the plates and clean up generally.—Philadelphia Record.

Peculiar Accident to an Engineer.

Edward Spencer, chief engineer of the S.S. "Glide," of Montreal, was working around his engine when a hot bolt flew out and burned his arm terribly. It was as if a red-hot spit had been thrust into it! A supply of Zam-Buk balm was speedily obtained and first aid rendered. The famous herbal balm alleviated the pain, and to the surprise of Spencer and all his friends, at the end of a week the wound was completely healed. This is only one of several cases reported recently in which Zam-Buk has been proved a wonderful healer of burns, cuts, bruises, and abrasions. It is equally effective for ulcers, sores, poisoning, no matter how long these have persisted. Mrs. W. H. Taylor, of North Bay, Ont., says: "I had a scaly spot about as big as a ten-cent piece on my face. I had it for four years, and hardly a night during that time went by but what I applied cold cream or some ointment or other, but it would always be there, and the warmer the weather the worse it got. I recently applied Zam-Buk, and in about a week's time the spot had disappeared completely."

One of the world's greatest analysts says the healing power of Zam-Buk is due to the rare herbal essences of which it is entirely composed. For rheumatism and sciatica it is also a speedy cure. Its healing influence on the skin is unequalled, and it is so pure that the delicate skin of babes benefits from its application. It cures rashes and eruptions as well as more serious ailments, etc. Indeed, as a household balm it is working wonderful cures all over the Dominion. Druggists and stores sell it at fifty cents a box. A sample will be sent by the Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, to all our readers who mail this article with a one cent stamp to pay return postage. Write the name and date of this paper across the article before mailing.

The Bishop Apologized.

Dr. Temple was wont to rule the diocese of Exeter with an iron hand, and a tale is told of a deanery meeting at which he presided, when the subject for discussion was "The Hindrances to the Spiritual Life of the Diocese." After the discussion had proceeded for some time a vicar electrified his audience by declaring that the greatest hindrance to the full spiritual life was none other than the bishop himself. "I repeat it," said the speaker calmly, "our right reverend father in God is very far from being a father to any of us. Your manner toward us," he continued, turning to the bishop, "is harsh in the extreme, while your method of rule is this: You treat us all, old and young, as if we were a set of schoolboys." This bold statement drew from the bishop an apology, and he explained that beneath his brusqueness of manner was a very genuine sympathy with the work of all the clergy. This impeachment created the more sensation in the meeting because it came from a son of Dr. Temple's predecessor, the famous Henry of Exeter.—Westminster Gazette.

Out of Office and In.

A well known radical member coined this happy phrase: "It is a pity that the government has not as much courage in office as it had conscience in opposition."—London Truth.

A Veteran's Story.—George Lewis, of Shamokin, Pa., writes: "I am eighty years of age. I have been troubled with Catarrh for fifty years, and in my time have used a great many catarrh cures, but never had any relief until I used Dr. Agnew's Catarrhal Powder. One box cured me completely." 50 cents.—25.

The Ram's Horn says that "there is no cheap way of saving souls," and "it is slow work fattening souls on solos."

Minard's Liniment Cures Distemper.

The choir of a large metropolitan church had sung a Te Deum of a very ornate description, the end of which was not only complicated, but required the exertions of the full lung power of the choristers. While the echoes of the last notes were still faintly sounding, the minister arose and in a clear but semi-reproachful tone began to read the twentieth chapter of the Acts of the Apostles, of which the first words are: "And after the uproar was ceased."—The Musician.

Dr. Paul Whitehead has been reelected secretary of the Virginia Methodist conference fifty-one times, and is perhaps the oldest ecclesiastical scribe in the world.

Minard's Liniment Cures Diphtheria.

The Episcopal diocesan convention of New York shelved a resolution to take up aggressive missionary work among the Jews.

A Pleasant Medicine.—There are some pills which have no other purpose evidently than to beget painful internal disturbances in the patient, adding to to his troubles and perplexities rather than diminishing them. One might as well swallow some corrosive material. Parmelee's Vegetable Pills have not this disagreeable and injurious property. They are easy to take, are not unpleasant to the taste, and their action is mild and soothing. A trial of them will prove this. They offer peace to the dyspeptic.

Rev. Henry A. Buchnel, a Methodist minister who has been elected governor of Colorado, says he accepted the nomination with the understanding that he would continue to serve as president at the University of Denver.

Her Heart Like a Polluted Spring.—Mrs. James Srigley, Pelee Island, Ont., says: "I was for five years afflicted with dyspepsia, constipation, heart disease and nervous prostration. I cured the heart trouble with Dr. Agnew's Cure for the Heart, and the other ailments vanished like mist. Had relief in half an hour after the first dose."—27.

In 1619, only twelve years after its settlement, and one year before the Pilgrims landed at Plymouth, the legislative body of Virginia enacted a Sabbath observance law.

Why go limping and whining about your corns when a 25 cent bottle of Holloway's Corn Cure will remove them? Give it a trial and you will not regret it.

To Cheer Him.

The wife of his bosom was going to leave him for a fortnight, and Fitz-Tomkins was trying his very best to look sad.

"My dear," he said, choking back a chuckle with his handkerchief and wiping his eyes, "I hardly like to think how I shall miss you. The evenings will be so long and lonely without you. I shall have no one to talk to."

"George," said Mrs. Fitz, surveying him with a marble eye, "I have provided for your comfort in this as in every other way. When you return home you will find dear mother there. She will remain till I come back and keep you company in the evenings, George."

And as the train slowly glided out of the station the guard wondered why Fitz-Tomkins nearly bit him when he insinuated a tip.—London Telegraph.

London's New Mayor.

Sir William Purdie Treloar, the new Lord Mayor of London, is a man of many parts and is most popular with the members of the City Corporation. On election day when his name was proposed it was received with tremendous applause. To all other names the crowd shouted "next," meaning that they were to be set aside until next year. The Lord Mayor is a Cornishman, 63 years of age. He has been a member of the Corporation of the City of London since 1881 and an alderman since 1892. From 1899 to 1900 he was one of the sheriffs of the city and has been a Justice of the Peace in Kent, Surrey and London. He is deeply interested in Egyptian matters, being a director and trustee of T. Cook & Sons, Limited, and is besides an author of some note.

One Kitchen to a Block.

A co-operative kitchen in the middle of every block to serve all the residents of that block is the latest solution offered for the eternal problem that faces every housekeeper. The plan seems feasible in view of the fact that the new Art club studios have a kitchen in common for the use of a small army of students who occupy bachelor apartments. It has been suggested by economists that a large kitchen be established in every block and that the place be under the direction of a chef, with several assistants. The housewife could take her food there to be cooked, thus saving the price of fuel and keeping the house free from the odor of cookery and besides in many cases dispensing with the cost of dyspepsia tablets and pepsin.—New York Cor. Pittsburg Dispatch.

State Should Make People Sick.

Greece is threatened with an odd strike. At a public meeting the physicians and druggists of Athens declared that their professions would soon be reduced to starvation. Many physicians of the city are actually in straits because of the ever-increasing clinics where patients receive free treatment. The disciples of Esculapius intend, therefore, to strike unless the government prevents the further establishment of clinics and permits them to increase their fees from two drachmas to three drachmas (a drachma is about 19 cents.) Although the motion to this effect was combatted by several physicians as unworthy of the medical profession, it was finally carried by a great majority, and the strike will probably go into effect soon.—New York Tribune.

Revenge.

"I'd like that tooth, please," said the small boy, after the dentist had extracted the small torment.

"Certainly, my little man; but why do you want it?" queried the dentist, handing it over.

"Well, sir," responded the gratified boy, "I'm going to take it home, and I'm going to stuff it full of sugar. Then I'm going to put it on a plate and (with a triumphant grin) watch it ache."—Pick-Me-Up.

Helpless as a Baby.—South American Rheumatic Cure strikes the root of the ailment and strikes it quick. R. W. Wright, 10 Daniel street, Brockville, Ont., for twelve years a great sufferer from rheumatism, couldn't wash himself, feed himself, or dress himself. After using six bottles was able to go to work, and says: "I think pain has left me forever."—26.

Governor Cobb of Maine, has been asked to remedy conditions in the Holy Ghost colony at Shiloh, which the county attorney says is a menace to the state.

'Tis a Marvelous thing.—When the cures effected by Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil are considered, the speedy and permanent relief it has brought to the suffering wherever it has been used, it must be regarded as a marvellous thing that so potent a medicine should result from the six simple ingredients which enter into its composition. A trial will convince the most skeptical of its healing virtues.

Exercising Dogs.

Never take your dog out for a run directly after he has had a meal. If the exercise is at all hard the food will remain undigested for hours. It is best not to allow a dog to play even directly after he has swallowed his dinner. In a little time he can do so, but do not encourage him to romp about.

Got Him Mixed.

Miss Backbay—What I like about Henry James is the clarity of his style, his reserve force and his absolute mastery in the field of epigram and antithesis. Mr. Cahokia—Y-yes, but when it comes to the fast ball, you know, I think Walsh has got him skinned to death.

Knew the Measure.

"When you get your groceries today," said the butcher to his wife, "don't go to that little grocer next door to my shop."

"Why not?" she demanded.

"Because he sent in yesterday and borrowed an old pair of scales."

No Sinecures In China.

Everybody in China works hard, even those who have reached the highest positions. It is related of a member of the Chinese cabinet that he left home every morning at 2 o'clock, as he was on duty at the palace from 3 to 6. As a member of the privy council he was engaged from 6 to 9. From 9 until 11 he was at the war department, of which he was president. As the member of the board of punishment he was in attendance from 12 till 2, and as a minister of the foreign office he spent every day from 2 till 5 or 6 there. In addition he frequently served on special boards of commissions.

The English of England.

The London Daily Chronicle gives these eccentric pronunciations of a few of the curious place names that dot the map of England: Rhudbaxton is Ribson, Woodmancote is Uddenmuckat, Sawbridgeworth is Sapser, Churchdown is Chosen, Sandiacre is Senjiker, Little Urswick is Lilosik, Aspatria is Spethry, St. Osith is Toosy, Chaddenwyche is Charnage, Happisburgh is Hazeboro, Salt Fleetby is Sollaby, Almondesbury is Amesbury, Conugresbury is Coomsbury.

Your Doctor

Can cure your Cough or Cold, no question about that, but—why go to all the trouble and inconvenience of looking him up, and then of having his prescription filled, when you can step into any drug store in Canada and obtain a bottle of SHILOH'S CURE for a quarter.

Why pay two to five dollars when a twenty-five cent bottle of SHILOH will cure you as quickly?

Why not do as hundreds of thousands of Canadians have done for the past thirty-four years: let SHILOH be your doctor whenever a Cough or Cold appears.

SHILOH will cure you, and all druggists back up this statement with a positive guarantee.

"THE BATTLE OF THE AGE."

Rev. J. L. Gordon Reads Five Prophecies In Signs of the Times.

In Massey Hall, Toronto, on a recent Sunday Rev. J. L. Gordon of Winnipeg, taking as his subject "The Battle of the Age," delivered an eloquent address on the progress of the temperance movement and the outlook for a glorious future. That the triumph of truth and right was assured, a scan over the past two thousand years would convince the most skeptical. It was 1,400 years since Rome had fallen. Human slavery had disappeared, as also the degradation of womanhood. In view of these facts, the speaker entertained a profound conviction that, under the guidance of the Holy Bible, the battle for truth and right would go on to a glorious victory.

He would predict five great achievements for the future. He could read the signs of the times that great and marvelous things would happen.

There would be a universal language—that of Shakespeare and the Holy Bible.

The removal of tariff walls and universal peace would cement the federation of the world.

He believed the time was soon coming when would exist the great political equality of men and women.

There would be an equal distribution of the wealth of the world according to ability and skill.

The cardinal prediction would be the restriction of the liquor traffic, so as to guarantee universal sobriety.

The speaker touched on the great possibilities of the Dominion of Canada for the development of a magnificent manhood. The world would yet see the greatest men in mental mould and moral might spring from this land, which would be the stamping ground for the noblest ideals in the interests of humanity.

"If we can save the 500 cities of this country," he continued, "we can save the country. The saloons in the cities of this land, placed side by side, would reach from New York to the Golden Gate, and every saloon is the banqueting hall of death, the lighted corridors leading down to ruin.

"I come from a city that is growing nearer the day when the rum traffic will not rule. There is a bright and brilliant hope out yonder, and the temperance people are doing a noble work. This is a serious conflict, and we are battling for the life of the home. On our side we have God, the church, conscience and the Bible, and there is no other side. We are making inroads into the camp of the enemy.

"The saloonkeeper has more respect for the temperance man now than he ever had before. But we must not stop at this, although we see the evidence that the fight is going our way. There is more advertising done by the liquor interests selling their wares in the last five years than ever before, which is a sure evidence that the work of the temperance league and the W. C. T. U. and other temperance organizations is telling against the forces of the wicked'

Objects to Pessimism.

Over in England the shareholders in Canadian enterprises believe that these are the growing times, and when Sir Charles Rivers Wilson, the president of the Grand Trunk, at the annual meeting of the shareholders, spoke rather dolefully upon some points, took as he often does a very pessimistic view of the situation, he displeased his hearers. One of these, Mr. Charles E. Morrison writes to The London Financial News that "we might almost have been attending the obsequies of a railway company; instead of a paean of triumph, it was a positive dirge of despair. He comes back imbued with what? With the paucity of labor! Could pessimism further go? Of course, the country wants labor; this is resultant on its prosperity. And what about the thousands that are literally pouring into the country? The president speaks of the moral obligations of the Canadian Government. I hope the directors will not forget the moral obligations they are under to their shareholders. He tells us of the generally-improved position of affairs; but it is Canada we have to thank for this. Canada is on the flood-tide of prosperity, and we are simply going with the tide. The president talks lugubriously of possible lean years; but not even Grand Trunk directors can put back the clock in Canada. Had he not, at the finish of his speech, talked of an increased dividend to the third preference holders, some hard things would undoubtedly have been said. If we do not get our full 4 per cent, this present year, I trust that we shall band ourselves together and put an end to this burning grievance."

The Satisfactory Part.

Jamie having come into the possession of considerable wealth through the death of relatives was thus addressed by one of his neighbors:

"Aye, Jamie, it was a guid thing for you that your rich freens waur born afore ye."

"Weel," said Jamie, "I'm nae sae sure aboot that, but it was a guid thing that they deed afore me."—Dundee Advertiser.

Adapting Aims to Ends.

He—I think a woman's club, to be successful, should aim at something far removed from female suffrage. She—I don't agree with you. That should be its sole aim. He—Yes, but if it aims at something else it is more likely to hit that.

A Faroe Reformer.

The people of the Faroe islands cling to their old customs and see little good in change, says the author of "The Faroes and Iceland," but now and then one of them becomes a conservative reformer. Such was an old man of Stromo who, in his youth, had learned cabinetmaking in Copenhagen, then had been a blacksmith in New South Wales and later a marine in the Danish navy during the Sleswick-Holstein war. Having thus traveled far beyond the wildest dreams of his countrymen, he returned while still a comparatively young man to Stromo and invested his savings in a home. Conservative though he appeared to outlanders, to the islanders he was a reckless innovator. He roofed his house with slate instead of with the traditional turf, but could find none to follow his example. They shook their heads in doubt. He argued vainly with them against the habit of throwing fish cleanings into the brook and getting drinking water lower down. The only advice they would accept from him—and that after long hesitation—was to boil their fish oil outdoors instead of in the living room. But when this terrible innovator heard from a visitor that women rode bicycles in England he was so astonished that he asserted confidently that the world could not last much longer.

CURED HIS WIFE of LA GRIPPE

Quebec Man tells how the Great Consumptive Preventative was an all-round Benefit

"My wife took La Grippe when she was in Ottawa," says R. N. Dafoe of Northfield Farm, Que., in an interview. "She got a bottle of Psychine and after using it for a few days she was quite well. I took a cold and am using it and am getting all right. I think Psychine is one of the best tonics on the market to-day."

There you have the whole matter in a nutshell. La Grippe and colds are among the forerunners of consumption.

This man had one, his wife had the other. Psychine not only cured both but it built them up so that their bodies are strong enough to resist disease. All seeds of consumption are killed by

TROUT LAKE CITY

THERE have been fortunes made by judicious investment in Real Estate, and more fortunes will be made than ever the next two or three years. The one who reaps the harvest is the original investor, for he has his money on a certainty.

Now let us point out to you that there is no better spot on the Continent to buy Real Estate than TROUT LAKE.

Trout Lake is the prettiest spot in the Kootenays; as a pleasure resort it has no equal. Boating and fishing may be indulged in the year round; while big game in abundance is to the found on the hills. Its climate is superb, there being no great extremes, it being mild in winter and cool in summer. It can boast of some of the finest hotels and residences in British Columbia. Its streets are well laid out and graded. There are two excellent general stores, and a glance at the advertisements in this journal will show that all trades are fairly well represented. Write with confidence to Agents.

IT has never had a "boom"—its growth has been steady. It is the head of navigation, and the terminal of the Lardo branch of the C.P.R. All roads (in the Lardeau) lead to Trout Lake. It is the commercial centre of the richest mineral district on the continent, and has banking facilities provided by the Imperial Bank of Canada; first class school accommodation under the direction of S. Shannon, B.A.; a good water system; government offices; County Court sittings; Methodist Episcopal and Anglican churches and cottage hospital.

There are valuable ranch lands on the outskirts awaiting settlers. Its lumber resources are magnificent, and a band saw mill with a capacity of 60,000 ft. per day is at the head of the lake. The mines tributary are proving out bigger producers every year, with new prospects opening up rich bodies of ore.

There will be a big rush this year, so if you would know more, write at once to either of the agents at the addresses below.
