OUR PRICES ARE RIGHT

Dentistry as we practice it is a serious profession, involving education, carefulness and skill. Therefore we can not compete in prices with the ignorant, the careless or the unskillful. Comparison will show, however, that we charge less than half as much as most private practioners.

But you ask, Is the work as good? We reply, it is better Indeed, no dentist who tries to practice all the different branches of dentistry can achieve such magnificent results as we do with our corps of skilled specialists

Linked by Fate

BY CHARLES GARVICE

Author of "The Verdict of the Heart," "A Heritage of Hate," "Nell of Shorne Mills," "Paid For," "A Modern Juliet," Etc.

"Ah, yes, but I do not!" he said, not in the tone with which such compliments are paid, but a little hoarsely, with a twitch of the thin lips, a restless movement of the white hands so near her gleaming shoulder. "I never forget, never lose the chance of being near you, you know."

"Hush!" she whispered with her voice of subtle music. "You must listen to the play—and let me do so."

There was a pause, during which he looked, not at the stage, but at her—looked with the passion smouldering in his eyes, beating in the sallow cheeks which had grown somewhat sunken, breathing from the set lips—and she, leaning back and feeling his gaze, seemed so serenely, exquisitely calm and emotionless that one would have said that no passion could have power to touch her even with the ends of its burning fingers.

But suddenly, though her eyes did not move, her bosom rose and fell quickly. She had heard a step in the corridor—Vane entered the box.

She did not turn her head, but despite herself, her marvelous power of self-control, the color dyed her face and her eyes shone.

Julian saw the momentary change, the flash of emotion that betrayed her, and his face went pallid, his lips grew straight and there flashed into his now sombre eyes a gleam of hate—the hate which, joined with jealousy, is of all kinds the most malignant, the most merciless.

Vane did not come forward, but, with a bow and a smile, dropped into a chair behind the curtain, so that he was unseen by Nina, whose eyes were still turned to the beautiful woman, now languidly fanning herself, with a new touch of color in her face, a new light in her eyes.

So they sat, in silence now, for Vane was one of those persons who, oddly enough, in these days when most well-bred people appear to regard the theatre as a place for conversation, did not talk while the curtain was up. He leant back and looked on at the play with at first an absent air, but presently an interest awakened in spite of himself. She listened—to Vane's regular breathing; and Julian sat with his arms folded, his lids lowered, his eyes fixed on the hem of the dress of the woman he had grown to love with a passion that absorbed, devoured him, and left him no rest for body or soul. And nothing about him moved but the tick, tick of the nerve in his hollow cheek.

As the play drew to an end the interest, the laughter of the audience increased, and when the curtain fell there was one of those outbursts of applause which managers, actors, authors, love to hear.

"The Betrothed" was a genuine, unmistakable success.

The applause seemed to deafen Nina. She watched the actors and actresses cross before the curtain, and she longed to clap her hands—for, oh, how grateful she was to them!—but she felt incapable of movement. Her heart beat so wildly that she did not at first hear the cries of "Author! Author! Author!" but as they grew louder and more insistent she began to tremble, and, clutching her opera-cloak round her, she rose and fled; so that when Mr. Harcourt came forward, with his hand on his heart, and announced that the author was not in the theatre, he, marvelous to relate, spoke the truth.

Vane moved forward and stood by Judith's chair.

"A pretty play," he said, "and a clever one. I am sorry I did not see it all."

She swept her magnificent dress from the chair beside her, but he did not accept the invitation. He glanced wearily, listlessly, round the house, then, as if he remembered why he had come to the box, he said:

"Julian and I go down to Lesborough to-morrow. There is to be a house party in a week, as you know. May I ask Sir Chandos to bring you? Lady Fanworthy plays chaperone. I hope you will come."

Her heart beat swiftly, but she looked straight before her, so that Julian, who was watching her from behind with a feverish eagerness, grew sick with suspense.

"Thanks, very much," she said at last, with an instant lifting of her eyes to Vane's face. "You know"—in a lower voice, one scarcely above a whisper—"that I should come!"

"I am glad," he said, gravely. Then he looked at his watch.

"Are you going?" she asked in the same tone.

"Yes, presently," he said. "Good-night. I will find Sir Chandos."

After he had gone she sat and looked straight before her. Julian moved and she turned to him, her eyes cold as ice, and glittering like the diamonds on her breast.

"Will you find my father and tell him I am going on to the Vandaleur's after the first act, Mr. Shore?"

Julian rose and left the box. But in the corridor he paused and pressed one burning white hand to his lips as if to still the quiver of hate and jealousy; then, with drooped lids and face set like a mask, he went on his errand.

Nina could not go back to the theatre, and she paced up and down the Strand, seeing nothing, hearing nothing, with the applause still deafening her, the lights of the theatre still blinding her.

Her play was a success. Oh, how happy, how glad she must be! A success! She had found her true work at last—no, so soon, so soon! The gods had been good to her beyond all measurement. A success—

Then suddenly she stopped and an inarticulate cry rose from her lips.

Judith! The woman he loved!

Back it all swopped on her, and her joy turned to misery.

She found her way to the stage-door. Polly came rushing out and caught her by the arm.

"Decima!" she gasped. "Decima! What a success! Oh, oh, oh! But what is the matter?" she broke off, aghast at the white face, the misery-haunted eyes. "You look as if you'd seen a ghost. You're not—ill?"

"No, no!" said poor Nina. "It is—is the suspense, the excitement."

Polly drew a breath of relief.

"I know. Here—a cab! Get in! Oh, let us get home! Never mind the supper! Let us get home!"

CHAPTER XVII.

It was not a large party at Lesborough, but it was a very pleasant one, and all were agreed that Vane made a splendid host. He did not make the mistake of attempting to amuse his guests; nowadays we refuse to be amused and are best left to ourselves; and what we like is a large house, run on the lines of a first-rate hotel, where we can do as we please—and have no bills to pay at the finish.

Breakfast at Lesborough was a movable feast, so also was lunch, and not seldom the guests met together for the first time in the day at the eight o'clock dinner; which was a meal that met with the approval even of Sir Chandos Orme, who was somewhat exacting in the matter of his food—and drink.

Most of the men were out all day with their guns or their rods—there are sea-trout in the Lesway that runs through the estate—and some of the women joined them at lunch or rode out with the tea-baskets. Vane had his gun and his fishing-rod standing each morning against the terrace ready for either sport, and did not seem to care which it was; indeed, he usually sat on the coping with his pipe in his mouth while the program was being settled, and took up either weapon with equal cheerfulness—and, alas! indifference.

The Letchfords, who were of course of the party, discussed him in the privacy of their own room.

"He seems very little better than he was on the night we found him," Sir Charles remarked, regretfully. "Whatever he had got on his mind is there still. He's behaving like—like a brick and keeping everything going here splendidly, but—"

"But he is not happy," finished Lady Letchford. "He tries to hide the trouble, whatever it is, and I dare say most of the people here think him the happiest and most fortunate of men; but you and I know better, don't we, Charlie? And there is someone else who knows it—Lady Fanworthy."

"Ah, she always was a clever one!" remarked Letchford.

"Yes; and she's fond of him," said his wife. "I see her looking at him every now and then with a curious and pained glance, as if she wondered what was the matter, and wishing she could help him."

"So do I," said Letchford, with a sigh. "I'm deuced fond of him, Blanche."

"It is not difficult—to be fond of him, I mean," responded Lady Blanche, comprehensively.

"Jolly good thing he's taken a fancy to his cousin Julian Shore. Good-looking chap, isn't he, and agreeable, too!"

Lady Letchford was silent for a moment.

"Yes," she said. "He is good-looking enough; but—"

Sir Charles laughed and yawned; he had been shooting all day.

"But you don't care for him eh? What fancies you women get! I should have thought he would have been just the sort of man you would have admired and liked; a fellow who sings like an opera chap and looks like—like an Adonis, and always says and does the right thing."

"Perfection, in short," said Lady Letchford. "But then we don't care for perfection in a man—that's why I like you, Charlie, I suppose—it's poaching on our preserves, you see. Do make haste or we shall be late for dinner, and it's the one thing dear old Lady Fanworthy sticks at. She almost frowned at Judith Orme when she came in late last night."

"Ah, yes; I see you and Judith have made it up, Blanche."

"You see nothing of the kind," retorted Lady Letchford from her dressing room. "Perhaps you mean that we are civil to each other—we couldn't quarrel or cut each other in another man's house."

"Oh, that's it, is it?" said Sir Charles. "By the way, do you notice how smitten Julian Shore is?"

"Of course I do," said Lady Letchford. "I am not blind. But I won't talk any more or you'll never be ready. I cannot understand why it should take a man so long to tie that ridiculous white tie. I'd do it in half a minute—"

"Better come and do it now."

"I shall do nothing of the kind. You're quite old—and ugly—enough to dress yourself. Oh, go away, Charlie! Here comes Louise! And shut the door or you will go on talking. I am sure we shall be late!"

They were in time for dinner after all. It was as usual a merry meal, for the men had had a good day, and the women were rejoiced to have them back. Vane alone was rather silent, as usual, but from his place at the bottom of the table, facing Lady Fanworthy, he smiled whenever the conversation required a smile from him, and he spoke now and again to Lady Lisle who, with her husband, was dining at the Hall that night, and who sat at his right. A little further down the table was Judith Orme, the most beautiful and the best dressed woman present. Lord Lisle was next her, and she seemed to be listening with interest to his detailed account of the day's sport; but every now and then her eyes wandered to the grave face at the bottom of the table; and every time they so wandered, Julian, who sat opposite her, noted the glance, though his soft voice never hesitated and his pleasant smile never faltered. He seemed scarcely to look at her, but not a movement, not a word of hers escaped him, though he appeared engrossed with the young girl whom he had taken in, and who was chatting with the volubility of nineteen.

LIFE WOULD HAVE MORE HAPPINESS

If The Liver Were Kept Active By The Use of

DR. CHASE'S KIDNEY-LIVER PILLS.

Most people realize that, if they could only avoid the sufferings of indigestion and keep the bowels regular and active, life would have for them much more of comfort and happiness.

We believe that these results are best accomplished by the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney Liver Pills, and let us tell you why:

It is the liver which, by filtering bile from the blood and passing it into the intestines, ensures good digestion and the natural, healthful action of the bowels. Keep the liver active, and you are sure of the proper working of the digestive and excretory systems.

Dr. Chases' Kidney-Liver Pills have a direct and specific action on the liver. By invigorating this great filtering organ they guarantee the collection of bile from the blood, where it is poison, and the passing of it to the intestines, where it is necessary for digestion and a proper action of the bowels.

It is not as a mere relief from indigestion and constipation that Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills are recommended, but as a thorough and lasting cure. Put them to the test. The dose is one pill at bedtime as often as is necessary to keep the bowels regular.

Mr. Duncan McPherson, Content, Alberta, writes:—"I was for many years troubled with indigestion and headache and derived no benefit from the many remedies I used. A friend advised the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills and after taking four boxes the result is that I am once more in the full enjoyment of the blessings of good health.

Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, 25 cents a box, at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Toronto. Portrait and signature of Dr. A. W. Chase, the famous receipt book author, on every box.

Franklin's Sawdust Pudding.

Franklin believed in fair competition, in freedom for others as well as himself and cared more for his personal independence in the conduct of his business than for the business itself. The story of the sawdust pudding should be known in every newspaper office in the country. When he first started the Gazette he made some free comments on certain public officials, and some of the influential patrons of the paper resented it and tried to stop it. He invited them to dinner. When they came they found nothing on the table but a pudding made of coarse meal and a jug of water. They sat down. Franklin filled their plates and then his own and proceeded to eat heartily, but his guests could not swallow the stuff. After a few moments Franklin rose and, looking at them, said quietly: "My friends, any man who can subsist on sawdust pudding, as I can, needs no man's patronage."

A Scheme and a Luncheon.

One of Balzac's wild schemes was a plan to combine Paris theaters. One morning in September, 1839—an early day to talk of monopoly—ten literary friends of the great novelist met by invitation at his house. Before luncheon Balzac told them of his scheme. His idea was to form a trust to buy up all the theaters as a sequel to a smaller preliminary trust for the supply of plays to every theater in Paris. The ten guests were to supply them. He estimated the profits of the first year at £120,000, and each year would, he thought, bring in more money. He expounded his scheme at length for over an hour, and finally one of the guests suggested that he might go on at table. The novelist started. "I forgot all about ordering anything to eat!" he cried, and late in the afternoon the members of the shadowy trust made a shadowy meal of bread and cheese and sour wine in a small country restaurant.

He Wore the Robe.

A story is told of the late Dr. Peddie, a Scotch minister, to whom his congregation had presented a pulpit robe. He had never worn a robe, and, after acknowledging the gift, he said he would wait in the vestry five minutes after service to hear any objectors to the innovation. Nobody appeared but one old lady, who, on being asked what her objections were, answered that she had read the epistles of St. Paul and could not find any reference to the apostle wearing a gown. "What epistle did you read?" asked the doctor. "From Romans to Hebrews," answered the old lady. "Well, Janet," said her minister, "I have read from Romans to Hebrew also, and I could never find any reference to the apostle wearing the breeks. What would you think if you saw me going into the pulpit without breeks?" Needless to say, the old lady departed satisfied with the explanation.

Life's Highest Achievement.

It has been said that success consists in getting that at which one aims, and being happy in it. Each one should have an ideal of what is to be the expression of his or her life. If this is attained in some degree such a life may be called successful. Hence, the successful man or woman is the one who has succeeded fairly well in shaping the actual life in accordance with the ideals of life. This requires a strength and persistence that call for continual struggle. It forms the highest achievement of life. Bulwer well says that the man who succeeds above his fellows is the one who early in life clearly discerns his object and toward that object habitually directs his powers.—From "Vital Questions," by Dr. Henry D. Chapin.

Old Greenwich Village.

Of that part of New York city known as Greenwich village, situated on the lower west side, the Four Track News says: Older as a village site than Fort Amsterdam itself is that of Greenwich village. Here, when Hudson steered the Half Moon through the narrows, was the Indian village of Sappokanican, on a high and healthy spot watered by Bestavar's kill, the same Minetta brook that until late in the last century ran above ground instead of below as now across Union and Washington squares and into the Hudson near Houston street.

Amendment Rejected.

"Laura," said Mr. Ferguson, hurriedly explaining matters in the kitchen, "I didn't want to bring the man home to dinner, but he kept staying and staying at the office, and I just had to ask him. You will have to put as good a face on it as you can."

"If you think I'm going to change my face on his account, George Ferguson," said his spouse, red and angry, "you'll have to think again! You may bring him out to dinner right now!"

A Remarkable Bridge.

Among the many odd nooks and corners and crannies of the auld Emerald Isle is Carrick-a-rede, on the Great Northern railroad of Ireland. It is an isolated rock, separated from the mainland by a chasm sixty feet wide and more than eighty feet deep, and it is at this place that the salmon are intercepted in their retreat to the rivers. A rude bridge of ropes is thrown across, which remains during the fishing season, and this bridge, which is protected by a single rope rail, swings about in the most uncomfortable manner, often rendering it a dangerous feat in stormy weather save to the natives, who cross it with the utmost indifference. The name is derived from "Carrig-a-ramhadh" (the rock in the road) on account of the intercepting of the salmon. Near by on the west side of the island is a cavern in which have been found the bones of horse, ox, deer, sheep, goat, badger, otter, water rat and of several kinds of birds.

THE ROAD TO HEALTH.

Lies Through the Rich, Red Blood Dr. Williams' Pink Pills Actually Make.

Common pills purge the bowels. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills make new, rich blood. Purging pills gallop through the bowels—tearing the tissues, irritating the organs and weakening the whole system. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills do not purge at all. They're tonic pills, soothing pills, strengthening pills, blood building pills. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills actually make new blood. That is why they are the only scientific cure for all blood diseases. That is why they cure headaches and backaches, kidney troubles, indigestion, neuralgia, rheumatism, heart troubles, and the special ailments of growing girls and mature women. Purging pills act only on the symptoms of disease; Dr. Williams' Pink Pills go straight to the root of the trouble in the blood—and cure. Mr. John Burke, Elmdale, P.E.I., says: "I think Dr. Williams' Pink Pills the best medicine in the world. I had an attack of pneumonia which was followed by extreme nervousness and rheumatism. I tried some of our best doctors but got nothing to help me until I began taking Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. After taking the pills some weeks I could actually feel the new blood they were making coursing my veins and in the course of a few weeks more I was completely restored to health." Remember that it is only Dr. Williams Pink Pills that can make this new, rich, health-giving blood. Imitations and the so-called "just as good" medicines never cured anyone. Insist on the genuine with the full name, "Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People,' on the wrapper on each box. Sold by all medicine dealers or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 by writing The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Poison in War.

The use of poison in war was once considered not only permissible, but commendable, and was defended by no less an authority than Wolff. There are reported instances of wells, springs, ponds and streams being poisoned as a military measure. Even in our time instances are numerous of the intentional defilement of drinking water supplies by throwing the bodies of animals into the stream or pond.

A Good Job.

The White Lotus.

The pure white lotus is the royal flower of Siam and is always borne before the king in state processions. For a subject to carry one or have one carried before him is high treason.

Animal Stomachs.

In general animals feeding on a vegetable diet have a complex stomach; those which use animal diet have simple stomachs. There are, however, notable exceptions to this rule. The dolphin has a multiple stomach and yet is carnivorous, while the horse has a simple stomach and yet feeds on the same diet as the cow.

Origin of Italics.

Italic letters were first used about the year 1500 by Aldus Manutius, a Venetian printer. He observed the many inconveniences resulting from the vast number of abbreviations which were then so frequent among the printers that a book was difficult to understand. A treatise was actually written on the art of reading a printed book and thus addressed to the learned. By introducing the italic letter he contrived an expedient by which these abbreviations might be entirely got rid of and yet books suffer little increase in bulk. He dedicated his invention to the Italian states; hence the name. It has also been distinguished by the name of the inventor and called the Aldine. The first book printed in italics was an edition of "Virgil" printed at Venice by Aldus in 1501.

The Poisoned Spring.—As in nature so in man, pollute the spring and disease and waste are bound to follow — the stomach and nerves out of kilter means poison in the spring. South American Nervine is a great purifier, cures Indigestion, Dyspepsia, and tones the nerves. The best evidence of its efficacy is the unsolicited testimony of thousands of cured ones.—76

It is a Liver Pill,—Many of the ailments that man has to contend with have their origin in a disordered liver which is a delicate organ, peculiarly susceptible to the disturbances that come from irregular habits or lack of care in eating and drinking. This accounts for the great many liver regulators now pressed on the attention of sufferers. Of these there are none superior to Parmelee's Vegetable Pills. Their operation though gentle is effective, and the most delicate can use them.

Druggists and Borrowing.

New York druggists are frequent borrowers. Only the most complete pharmacies are constantly supplied with all the drugs required in compounding medicines. When a druggist is asked to fill a short notice prescription calling for some drug that he does not happen to have on hand, he does not take time to telephone to a wholesale house for the missing ingredient, but sends around to the nearest drug store and tries to borrow it. It is a peculiar feature of the situation that druggists seldom buy anything outright from each other. They merely borrow, then, after having replenished their stock from the wholesale houses they pay back the loan.

"Weak Lungs"

—"PSYCHINE" has restored thousands of people to buoyant health and strength whose condition had been regarded as hopeless. It is at once a tonic and flesh builder, containing remarkable properties as a blood purifier and germicide. It will strengthen and heal the weak lungs, force out the phlegm, and drive away the cough, no matter of how long standing. "PSYCHINE" tones up the whole system and drives out disease, heals the decayed tissue and restores lost energy. Its use daily will prevent and ward off that most subtle disease consumption.

A Dog's Yawn.

Did you ever see a dog gape? For thoroughness and entire absence of affectation and mock shamefacedness there is nothing like it. When he gapes he doesn't screw his face into all sorts of unnatural shapes in an endeavor to keep his mouth shut with his jaws wide open. Neither does he put his paw up to his face in an apologetic way while gaping in ambush, as it were. No. When he gapes he is perfectly willing that the whole world shall come to the show. He braces himself firmly on his fore feet, stretches out his neck, depresses his head, and his jaws open with graceful moderation. At first it is but an exaggerated grin, but when the gape is apparently accomplished the dog turns out his elbows, opens his jaws another forty-five degrees, swallows an imaginary bone by a sudden and convulsive movement, curls up his tongue like the petal of a tiger lily and shuts his jaws together with a snap. Then he assumes a grave and contented visage, as is eminently becoming to one who has performed a duty successfully and conscientiously.

Antimacassars Were Ads.

"This is an antimacassar," said an antiquary. "It is a hundred years old and very valuable on account of the quaint designs of its embroidery. Some day I shall sell it to a millionaire. Yes, some day this antimacassar will adorn a millionaire's parlor, figuring there as an antique object of art, and that will be as though a spittoon of today should figure as an object of art in some aesthetic lady's drawing room in 3000."

He laid the antimacassar, a kind of tidy, in a sandalwood box. Then he went on:

"The word's derivation shows the thing's use—anti, against; macassar, hair oil. The antimacassar was spread on chair backs to protect them from the oil in people's hair. Everybody used Rowland's macassar oil on his locks in those days. The name given to the tidy, or chair shield, was a free advertisement for Rowland as excellent as it was unique."

W. GARLAND FOSTER.

Editor Review, Portage la Prairie.

Journalism is unique among all the professions for the rapidity with which reputations are made, and substantial recognition bestowed on the brilliant. It is the profession in which natural aptitudes count for as much, and more, as training. In law, or medicine, or divinity—or indeed, any other business or profession—years of application and study are necessary to fit any man for its exercise. And, after an arts course at a university, and a three or four years' additional course at a medical college, a law school, or a theological seminary, it often takes many other weary years of waiting before ability is recognized, a reputation firmly established, and the material rewards accruing therefrom are reached. For the many, this costly period of preparation is the precursor of a very moderate income. The same ability devoted to other directions would often prove a better financial investment.

Success in newspaper work, on the other hand, depends more on a native aptitude and insight than on training—though, of course, training is necessary to success in this, as in all other successful activities. But no amount of training can supersede aptitude. Newspaper success depends on brains, ability and brilliancy. These given, the training is not unnecessary, but unconscious. An ounce of tactful common sense is worth as much to the young beginner as a ton of "Thou shalts" and "Thou shalt nots." Tact and common sense won't do much to help a divinity student to grind up exercises, or a law student to absorb jurisprudence, or a medical student to pass in anatomy—that must be achieved by dogged "plugging" and hard work—but in the world of newspapers it is the supreme equipment, and the "cub" reporter may have, while the chief lacks it. If the "cub" reporter has these qualities, with a "nose for news", a good vocabulary, some touch of imagination ,and a pleasing address and presence, he has a first rate equipment for starting into journalism, and having only the most essential of these, it is likely that in good time all these other things shall be added unto him. If a newcomer possess this natural equipment, the newspaper beckons him, and his promotion will be sure. In a few weeks or months he will be tackling important assignments, be bearing heavy responsibilities, the efficient discharge of which will only ensure him harder work, but increased reward. Trained intelligence is the outstanding requirement of the newspaper man, and the intelligence given the training comes of itself.

Examples of the rapidity with which a youth with the necessary aptitudes and qualifications will forge to the front of the newpaper profession will readily occur to everyone with any knowledge of or experience therein. Cases have been known in which a young fellow, within five years of the time he set his foot on the lowest rung of the ladder, has climbed clear to the top, and attained the high position and heavy responsibility of a managing editorship on a big city paper. Such rapid advancement is of course rare, and are perhaps not to be found in Western Canada. But, there are nevertheless instances of phenomenally rapid promotions due to conspicuous talents, and one of these is undoubtedly that of Mr. William Garland Foster, until recently the managing editor of the Winnipeg Telegram, and now the editor of the Portage la Prairie News.

Mr. Foster had no hereditary predilections towards newspaper life or work. His boyhood career differed no whit from that of thousands of other young Canadians. He was born on a farm at Bell's corners, and in his early years went with other country lads of the district to the rural schools, of Carleton county, and later to the Ottawa collegiate institute. Though both his parents were Canadian born, they came of North of Ireland stock, and from them Mr. Foster inherited the business hardheadedness and shrewdness, and also the quick resourcefulness and saving sense of humor characteristic of the Ulster Irish. On leaving school Mr. Foster entered the lumber business in Ottawa, and stayed therein for two years, until 1896. But lumbering was not his sphere. In that year he decided to come west, and spent until December, 1897, at Portage la Prairie, the town in which he is now managing editor. He then returned east, and receiving an offer to join the staff of the Ottawa Free Press as a reporter, he accepted it, and at once found himself in an environment to his entire liking. He had orientated himself, and found a vocation in which his natural aptitudes would receive room for freest play and expansion. After three years' work on the Free Press, he again came west, this time to accept a position on the Winnipeg Telegram, and on this paper he made a brilliant record, filling in succession almost every position from fire and police reporter up to that of managing editor. He was by turns financial reporter, dramatic critic, special feature writer, telegraph and city editor, editorial writer and editor. Mr. Foster has a natural inclination for politics. It has sometimes been said that he is a Conservative by religion—at any rate his belief in the principles and the policy of the Conservative party is as firm and deep-seated as any belief can possibly be. When such devotion to a cause or party is coupled, as in Mr. Foster's case, with untiring industry and much more than average ability, it is small surprise that speedy recognition came from the heads of the party that profited by his services. Of all the journalists whose pens and brains are supporting the present local government of Manitoba, it is very questionable if there is one with such claims to party gratitude as Mr. Foster can advance, were he one of that numerous class that give service in direct proportion to benefits received. But Mr. Foster is neither time, nor a place-server, and the acknowledged service to the party he supports has been the result of personal conviction.

During his stay in Winnipeg Mr. Foster was one of the moving spirits of the Young Men's Conservative Club, in which institution he has held in succession almost every office in its gift. He has proved himself, too, an organizer of more than average ability, his influence in enlisting the young men to the support of the Conservative party having a marked and acknowledged effect in the success of the present provincial government in the three Winnipeg constituencies.

Personally, Mr. Foster is the incarnation of diffidence and modesty. He has none of the arts of the demagogue. Quiet efficiency and effectiveness are the keynotes of his character. He is as popular as he is unassuming, and has troops of friends, both without and within the circle of his political affiliations. On his leaving Winnipeg at the beginning of the present year, he received many testimonials of respect and esteem from his fellow-workers on the Telegram and the various political institutions with which he was connected. His last fortnight in the city was a nightly repetition of complimentary banquets and presentations.

The beginning of 1906 saw Mr. Foster assume the editorship of the Review, the oldest established Portage la Prairie newspaper, and his return to the town in which he first located in the west. The Review is one of the oldest newspapers in Manitoba, though for the past few years it has been known as the News. The transfer of Mr. Foster to the paper will mark a new era in its history being but one of the signs that the whole institution has undergone a complete re-organization. It is the intention of the new management to convert the Review, which is now a semi-weekly, into a daily, and as soon as the machinery now on order is installed, the change will be made. Associated with Mr. Foster in the control of the Review, as business manager, is Mr. E. L. Burns, one of the founders of the Portage la Prairie Graphic. Some two and a half years ago Mr. Burns and his partner, Mr. J. McPherson, disposed of the Graphic, and since that time has been engaged in other pursuits. Portagers will welcome him back to newspaperdom, and Manitoba journalism cannot but be benefitted by the return to its ranks of one of its most capable workers, aided by a confrere of such ability as his new associate editor. Together they will make a team that should ensure the success of their joint venture, and add another to the list of successful Manitoba dailies.

Connection With Past Canada In Chosen Name of Terminus.

What had the dashing young cavalry leader of the cavaliers nearly three hundred years ago to do with Canada? Prince Rupert was really the first British Canadian business magnate. He was a promoter of the Hudson Bay Co., and its first governor, in 1670. In that year Charles II. granted a charter to the prince and seventeen other noblemen and gentlemen, incorporating them as "The Governor and Company of Adventurers of England, trading into Hudson Bay," and securing to them "the sole trade and commerce of all those seas and straits, bays, rivers, lakes, creeks and sounds in whatever latitude they shall be, that lie within the entrance to the straits commonly called Hudson Straits, together with all the lands and territories upon the countries, coasts and confines of the seas, bays, etc., aforesaid, that were not already actually possessed by or granted to any of our subjects or possessed by the subjects of any other Christian prince or state." The first settlements of the country thus granted, which was to be known as Rupert's Land were made on James Bay and at Churchill and Hoyle's River.

Prince Rupert was born in 1619, the son of Frederick V., elector-palatine and Elizabeth, eldest daughter of James I. of England. He was a man of impetuous bravery, but at the same time showed lack of caution. When only 13 years old he took part in the siege of Rheimberg, and at the age of 18 commanded a regiment of cavalry in active service. At the beginning of the civil war in England he was placed at the head of a regiment of horse and took part in several battles. Notwithstanding a serious error at Marston Moor, he was soon appointed commander of all the royal troops. After the defeat of Naseby, on June 14, 1645, he retired to Bristol, but surrendered that city on Aug. 22. The King thereupon deprived him of his commission. In 1648 he was, for want of any competent man, appointed to command the fleet. He was blockaded by Blake in Kinsale Harbor, and in October, 1649, forced his way out and steered for Lisbon. Blake pursued him and he was only saved by assistance from the King of Portugal. He subsequently escaped to the West Indies, but after the restoration of Charles II. he was made a privy councillor, and served under the Duke of York against the Dutch. He was afterwards governor of Windsor Castle, where, during the last nine years of his life he devoted himself to scientific and artistic pursuits. He died Nov. 29, 1682.

HOW CANADA GETS ITS TIME.

Paper Read by Mr. R. M. Stewart Before Astronomical Society.

At a meeting of the Toronto Astronomical Society recently the paper for the evening was "The Time Service of the Dominion Observatory at Ottawa," by Mr. R. Meldrum Stewart, M. A., who is in charge of the service. Everyone, from the railway management to the man on the street, ultimately dependent on some observatory clock. The method of determining the time from the stars was explained and also the essentials of a good clock. The ultimate standard at the Observatory is one made by Riefler, of Munich. It has a nickel-steel pendulum, is sealed up in a glass case fastened to a pillar on its own pier in a basement room, automatically regulating its temperature, and it winds itself up electrically every half minute. It keeps time with the stars, and is called a sidereal clock. The chief meantime clock, which keeps ordinary time, was also made by Riefler, and is mounted like the other. Its time is checked daily by comparison with the sidereal clock. By electrical means this clock controls a clock in each of the Government buildings, and these again actuate dials placed in each of the rooms. Four insulated wires run from the Observatory to the city for this purpose. At present there are 42 dials in the Parliament building, 60 in the West Block and 48 in the Langevin Block. These with a few others make up a total of 214 dials.

Since the first of December last a timeball has been dropped every noon on Parliament Hill, controlled automatically from the Observatory, and since the New Year the time has been given daily to the G. N. W. Telegraph Co. The entire service is controlled from the Observatory. It is kept in a high state of efficiency.

Miss E. A. Dent gave the first of a series of lessons on "How to Find the Stars." Dr. Marsh of Hamilton, distributed a number of photographs of the eclipsed moon, taken by himself.

Increasing the Stock.

Some years ago a husband and wife ran a freak show in a certain Canadian town. Unfortunately they quarrelled, and the exhibits were equally divided between them.

The wife decided to continue business as an exhibitor at the old address, but the husband went on tour. After some years' wandering, the prodigal returned, and a reconciliation took place, as the result of which they became partners once more.

A few mornings afterwards the people of the neighborhood were sent into fits of laughter on reading the following notice in the papers: "By the return of my husband, my stock of freaks has been permanently increased."

GIVES TWO REAL GOOD REASONS

FOR BELIEVING DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS CURE ALL KIDNEY AILMENTS.

Cured His Backache of Twenty-Five Years' Standing and Satisfied Everyone He Recommended Them to.

Economy Point, N. S., March 19—(Special).—George S. McLaughlin, of his place, gives two splendid reasons or his belief that Dodd's Kidney Pills are the one remedy for Kidney ailments. Here are the two reasons in his own words:

"I was troubled with lame back for 25 years or more, sometimes so severe that I could not turn myself in bed. One box of Dodd's Kidney Pills cured me, and I have had no return of the trouble since.

"I have recommended Dodd's Kidney Pills to a number of persons who had Kidney trouble. All who have used them have been benefitted or cured."

Dodd's Kidney Pills not only relieve all Kidney Diseases, from Backache to Bright's Disease, but they absolutely cure them. But sometimes where one or two boxes relieve it takes more to make a complete cure.

Got Their Share.

An interesting and amusing story is told of the late President Kruger. It seems that some years ago he presented, on behalf of the Transvaal Republic, a piece of land amounting to an erf for the building of a Dutch Reformed Church. Some time afterwards he was approached by an influential Jew, who tendered a similar request on behalf of the Jewish congregation. The President promised to consider the request, and soon afterwards announced that he had granted it. A little while later, however, he was waited on by a Jewish friend, who complained that the piece of land they had received was only half the size of that given for the Dutch Reformed Church. "Well," retorted Kruger, "what fault have you to find? They believe the whole Bible, so they get an erf; you believe only half the Bible and you get half an erf."—Natal Mercury.

The Old Age Question.

An erect old gentleman, whose hair was fast turning silver, entered a crowded street car. He was obviously proud of his years and carried himself well. As he grasped a strap a fussy, fidgety woman immediately rose and offered the elderly gentleman her seat. He declined with the remark:

"No, I thank you. I couldn't think of accepting a seat from you."

"Oh, I always give up my seat to an old gentleman," said she.

"Madam," replied the man, without any effort to hide his flustration, "I very much doubt the disparity between our ages."

The woman left the car at Union street. The old gentleman remained standing.—Manchester Union.

Tested by Time.—In his justly celebrated Pills Dr. Parmelee has given to the world one of the most unique medicines offered to the public in late years. Prepared to meet the want or a pill which could be taken without nausea, and that would purge without pain, it has met all requirements in that direction, and it is in general use not only because of these two qualities, but because it is known to possess alterative and curative powers which place it in the front rank of medicines.

Pile Terrors Swept Away.—Dr. Agnew's Ointment stands at the head as a reliever, healer and sure cure for Piles in all forms. It relieves all itching and burning skin diseases in a day. 35 cents.—79

Another Tradition Gone.

The quiet manner in which the Mastership of the Buckhounds has faded out of the list of British Ministerial appointments would have considerably surprised those who a score of years ago commenced to agitate against its retention, says The Westminster Gazette. Yet the political antiquary cannot but heave a sigh as he thus sees passing from sight an office which as long ago as the reign of Henry VI. was described in a petition to the King by its then holder as "of olde tyme ordeyned for the pleasir and disporte of your noble progenitours and their successours." It would appear from the claim of this 'William Brocas, Squyer, Maister of your Highnesses Bukhounds," that the position had come to be regarded as hereditary, "forasmuche that he holdith of you, and all his Auncestres of tyme that no mynde is to have holden of your noble progenitours, the Manoir of Lityll Weldon in the Counte of Northton, by Graunte Sergeaunte, that is to witte, to be Maister of your Bukhounds, and to kepe xxiiii rennying houndes and vi grehoundes, and to fynde a yoman Veantrer and two yomen Berners." But this "meke Besecher" complained that the Sheriffs of Surrey and Sussex had suddenly ceased to pay the annual grant under the Privy Seal for the keep of the hounds which had been done from the time of Edward III.; and he sought redress from King and Parliament, which was promptly accorded. At what period this hereditary office passed into one to be changed with the Ministry is not clear.

Derivation of Fork.

The fork takes its name from the Latin furca, a yoke looking like an inverted V. From this come the Italian forca and forchetta (little fork). The latter word gives the French their fourchette, while the English go back to the former and retain the harder sounding "fork."

SHIPS THAT VANISH.

Tales of Vessels that Never Reach Their Destination.

There are few things which are so full of mystery or which make such a powerful appeal to the imagination as the stories of ships that sail gallantly out to sea and of which nothing is ever heard or seen after their masts have dipped below the horizon. At present the papers are full of the records of these marine tragedies. To-day it is the Claverdale, which left Hong Kong for Vladivostock, and of which no trace has beeen found; yesterday it was the Royalist, which cleared from Singapore to Hong Kong and never reached her destination; the day before it was the Idum, from Norway, which vanished from human view, and so on, through and disappeared.

What are the secrets of these mysterious vanishings of stately ships with their crews and cargoes? In nineteen cases out of twenty the secrets lie with the ships many fathoms deep, and will, perhaps, never come to light. To this day no one knows what became of the City of Glasgow, which set her sails so gallantly in the Mersey half a century ago, bound for Philadelphia, nor was she seen again after the hills of Wales were lost to view.

The Bervie Castle left England some years ago on a long voyage to Australia. She should have made a final call at Plymouth, but she never came within sight of the Hoe, nor has human eye ever seen her from the day she dropped down the channel. It was on May 10, 1854, that the Lady Nugent spread her sails at Madras with 367 of the Madras Light Infantry and other passengers aboard. Her destination was Rangoon, but half a century has gone and neither Rangoon nor any other port has sighted her.

Nearly two years later the Collins liner Pacific dropped down the Mersey with 180 souls aboard. She was accounted one of the stoutest and swiftest vessels of her time, and so, no doubt, she was. But she went the way the City of Glasgow had gone a couple of years earlier, and for forty-nine years has been lying at the bottom of the sea, but where none may know until all secrets are revealed. The trading vessel Atlanta started a quarter of a century ago for a short cruise in Bermudan waters, and from that day to this no one knows what became of her and the 250 souls she carried.

On January 20, 1870, the City of Boston sailed from Halifax for England with 191 souls on board. She was an Indian liner, a fine ship, splendidly equipped and handled, but she, too, was destined to vanish from the face of the waters.

The victim of another ocean mystery was expected at Liverpool in March, 1881. March passed, and Liverpool saw nothing of her. The long delay in her arrival caused great anxiety, and the wildest rumors began to be circulated. On April 13 news came that her engines and rudder had been disabled in heavy weather and that she had put into Madeira for repairs. There naturally followed a reaction from glooomy forebodings to transports of joy. The vessel was expected at Liverpool and her arrival was awaited by hundreds of people who had friends aboard, but she never came, and it was found that the story of her arrival at Madeira was a heartless hoax. All the time the ill-fated vessel was at the bottom of the sea.

On November 30, 1888, a large vessel was seen from the beach at Deal, sailing toward the Goodwin Sands. She was a fair picture to look on as she moved over the waters with her stately spread of sails. But as the eyes of the watchers followed her she was view. What caused this tragically sudden disappearance of a stately ship? That is another of the countless secrets which the ocean has in its jealous keeping.

Hanging By A Mere Hair.

Talking of the wit of the Princess Pauline Metternich, once the chief ornament of the third Napoleon's court, the Marquise de Fontenoy writes:

As an instance I may recall her delicate retort to old Mrs. John Jay's son-in-law, General Von Schweidnitz, when he was Ambassador to the Austrian Court. One night, when seated next to him at dinner, she vexed the general by her somewhat unkind comparison between French and German notions with regard to wit. "There is nothing," she declared "that the French are not able to turn into some graceful witticism."

"Take this, Princess," exclaimed the general, handing her a single white hair from his head; "I defy you to get your French friends to make any witty contrivance out of this."

Princess Metternich took the hair, and on the following day sent it off to Boucheron, the famous jeweller in Paris, with an explanatory note. Three weeeks later she invited the general to dinner, and he found on his plate a tiny velvet box. On opening it he found a pendant formed by the jewelled representation of the Prussian eagle, and between its talons was the single hair handed by the German Ambassador to the Princess. At each end of it was suspended a tiny plaque in enamel with the word "Alsace" on one and "Lorraine" on the other. Attached to the eagle's beak was a scroll bearing in diamonds the words, "Vous ne les tenez que par un cheven" ("you hold them by only a hair").

It retains old and Makes New Friends.—Time was when Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil had but a small field of distribution, but now its territory is widespread. Those who first recognized its curative qualities still value it as a specific, and while it retains its old friends it is ever making new. It is certain that whoever once uses it will not be without it.

Paper Handkerchiefs.

New York.—Several leading London physicians are now advocating the use of a handkerchief made of paper. This is not only with the idea of preventing the spread of consumption, but a myriad of other diseases. It is argued that a linen handkerchief which is carried in the pocket and becomes heated, is necessarily a disseminator of undesirable germs and with the aid of laundries, a constant circulation of deadly organisms is kept up.

It is customary in many English sanitariums to provide the patients with paper handkerchiefs, which, after use, are placed in receptacles where they are immediately cremated. Most of the handkerchiefs used in these sanitariums are of Japanese make as the English make has not come into favor on account of their being much harder in texture than the Japanese.

"A Grand Medicine" is the encomium often passed on Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup, and when the results from its use are considered, as borne out by many persons who have employed it in stopping coughs and eradicating colds, it is more than grand. Kept in the house it is always at hand and it has no equal as a ready remedy. If you have not tried it, do so at once.

How a Leak was Stopped.

To stop a leak in a steamer which struck a rock in the Straits of Magellen recourse was had to timber, ballast rock and Portland cement, which formed so effective a cork that the vessel was enabled to proceed on her voyage, and was finally taken to New-Port News for repairs. It was found that the filling was so solid that with ordinary appliances some six weeks would have been consumed in chopping it out. To overcome this difficulty small charges of dynamite were used, and after three days of blasting, without injury to the vessel or the dock, the mass of material was so completely loosened up as to permit of being removed.

Heart-Sick People.—Dr. Agnew's Cure for the Heart is a herat tonic that never fails to cure—is swift in its effects—goes closer to the "border land" and snatches from death's grip more sufferers that any other remedy for any family of diseases and ailments in the category of human sufferings. Snuff and Savagery.

The habit of snuff-taking has been confirmed among savage tribes for ages past. In South Africa it is used among Swazis, Basutos, and Matabeles. Every Zulu to-day, even in towns carries a little square box suspended around his neck by a piece of string or gut, and the snuff spoon (for they do not indulge in the homely "pinch"), carved out of sheep's bone, often ornamented with intricate geometrical designs, and for convenience carried hanging downwards through a slit in the lobe of the ear. The Zulu regards the lobe of his ear as a useful receptacle for various articles he meets with. The umfaan, or houseboy, universally met with in Natal, has a penchant for safety pins, which have to be carefully hidden from his sharp eyes; even then, after going through the rooms, he is usually to be seen with a string of these pins suspended from each ear until they reach his shoulders.

SOUTH VANCOUVER.

The Municipal Council of South Vancouver will meet this Saturday afternoon.

The new school in District Lot 472 was opened on Tuesday, the teacher in charge being Miss Gertrude M. Copeland of Mt. Pleasant. The new school is situated a short distance south of the Fairview Refuge Home, and is opened to accommodate the ever increasing number of families settling in that district. A large school building will be erected in the near future.

At a special meeting of the Municipal Council held on Monday evening, the petition signed by 270 Ratepayers asking that the suit against ex-Reeve Geo. Rae and that the Council pay all costs, was filed. The Electric Railway will be asked to reduce the fare on the Cemetery line and grant transfers at Sixteenth avenue. After confirming several by-laws and dealing with road matters the Council adjourned.

The general meeting of the Board of School Trustees for the Municipality was held at the Municipal Hall on Wednesday May 9th, at 7:30 p. m. Present, the chairman Trustee Hodgson and Trustees Wells, Neilson, Farr and Jones, and the Secretary. Minutes of previous meeting were confirmed.

A letter was read from Seperintendent of Education regarding grant from the Government for salaries of teachers, also a letter from the Superintendent regarding Westminster Avenue site and site in District Lot 472.

The Chairman reported he had arranged for a building in District Lot 472 for school purposes.

It was arranged that the Trustees should have charge of various schools as follows: Trustee Hodgson of East Vancouver (Collingwood), Trustee Jones of South Vancouver, Trustee Neilson of North Arm, Trustee Farr of Westminster Avenue, Trustee Wells of Eburne.

On motion of Trustees Wells and Neilson, it was decided that Trustees Trustees Hodgson should have charge of expenditures such as repairs, supplies, etcs., for District Lot 472, East Vancouver, South Vancouver and Wessminster Avenue schools, and Trustees Wells and Neilson of North Arm and Eburne schools.

Miss Gertrude M. Copeland was appointed Teacher for District Lot 472, at a salary of $50 per month.

The following were appointed Janitors for the various schools: Mr. Geo. Sibary at Eburne, Mr. Tait at South Vancouver, Mrs. W. Brown at East Vancouver, Mrs. Carr at North Arm.

The Board adjourned to meet the following evening.

On Thursday evening the adjourned meeting of the School Board was held in Westminster Avenue School House, all members being present.

After inspecting three sites the Board assembled at Secretary Walker's house, and discussed the several advantages of the respective sites. On motion of Trustees Wells and Jones, it was decided to purchase Block 8, Lot 634, Westminster avenue, about 2½ acres, for a school site. Chairman Hodgson and Wells were appointed a committee to close the purchase. The Chairman and Secretary were instructed to prepare advertizement, calling for tenders for clearing and grading the site

The Scretary was instructed to prepare list of teachers' salaries to end of April and request the Treasurer to remit cheques.

At the request of the Chairman a special meeting will be held May 23d. Meeting then adjourned.

They Stand Alone.

Standing out in bold relief, all alone, and as a conspicuous example of open, frank and honest dealing with the sick and afflicted, are Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription for weak, over-worked, debilitated, nervous, "run-down," pain-racked women, and Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, the famous remedy for weak stomach, indigestion, or dyspepsia, torpid liver, or biliousness, all catarrhal affections whether of the stomach, bowels, kidneys, bladder, nasal passages, throat, bronchia, or other mucous passages, also as an effective remedy for all diseases arising from thin, watery or impure blood, as scrofulous and skin affections.

Each bottle of the above medicines bears upon its wrapper a badge of honesty in the full list of ingredients composing it—printed in plain English. This frank and open publicity places these medicines in a class all by themselves, and is the best guaranty of their merits. They cannot be classed as patent nor secret medicines for they are neither —being of known composition.

Dr. Pierce feels that he can afford to take the afflicted into his full confidence and lay all the ingredients of his medicines freely before them because these ingredients are such as are endorsed and most strongly praised by scores of the most eminent medical writers as cures for the diseases for which these medicines are recommended. Therefore, the afflicted do not have to rely alone upon Dr. Pierce's recommendation as to the curative value of his medicines for certain easily recognized diseases.

A glance at the printed formula on each bottle will show that no alcohol and no harmful or habit-forming drugs enter into Dr. Pierce's medicines, they being wholly compounded of glyceric extracts of the roots of native, American forest plants. These are best and safest for the cure of most lingering, chronic diseases. Dr. R. V. Pierce can be consulted FREE, by addressing him at Buffalo, N. Y., and all communications are regarded as sacredly confidential.

It is as easy to be well as ill—and much more comfortable. Constipation is the cause of many forms of illness. Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets cure constipation. They are tiny, sugar-coated granules. One little "Pellet" is a gentle laxative, two a mild cathartic. All dealers in medicines sell them.

Death: A readjustment of life's forces.

Wisdom: A term Pride uses when talking of Necessity.

Pelygamy: An endeaver to get more out of life than there is in it.

We trust a woman with our hearts, but we draw the line at pocketbooks.

Seek first the kingdom of honesty and all the other graces acquire.

The saviors of the world are only those who have loved humanity more than all else.

Ideas grow senile and slumber and sleep: die and lie in their graves for Ages: and come again in the garb of Youth to slaughter and slay—and inspire and liberate. And this death and resurrection goes on Forever. In Time there is nothing new nor old: there is only the rising and falling of the Infinite Tide.
