The "Unexpected Pink Tea," given at the Opera House on Thursday evening, in aid of the Firemen's Benefit Association drew an immense audience, every seat being taken. The object was a worthy one and the patronage given the concert testified to the esteem and sense of obligation the citizens feel for the Fire Department. The vocal numbers by Madame Addington, Miss Eilleen Maguire and Mr. H. J. Cave were musical gems. The "Night Alarm" by the Firemen was realistic of a night alarm and response. The concert was repeated on Friday evening.

"How do you like the old maids—Miss Prissy and Tempy, I mean? Ain't they awful strict?"

"I don't know; I haven't been with 'em long enough to find out. They're mighty clean, ain't they?"

"Oh, dreadful! And they don't like a noise, and they don't like dogs, and they don't like me. They call me the 'dog girl;' I heard 'em. One time I went in there for granuma, and Tuesday and Peter followed me, and, first thing you know, they tracked mud all over the dinin' room. My, but wasn't Miss Prissy mad! But you just ought to have seen that floor," she chuckled.

Bradley thought of the spotless oilcloth and appreciated the situation. In the course of the conversation that followed he learned that Gus was an orphan, like himself, and that she lived there alone with her grandmother. Suddenly the girl snatched her steaming shoes out of the oven to run to the window.

"I thought I heard the gate shut," she exclaimed. "Yes, it's grandma. P'raps you'd better dodge out of the other door. She'll ask questions and find out about my feet if you don't. Goodby. P'raps I'll see you at school tomorrow."

Bradley picked up his bundle—he had brought it in with him—and slipped out of the side door, presenting himself a moment later in the glory of his new clothes to the critical gaze of the old maids.

When Bradley started for school the next day his head was ringing with instructions from the old maids concerning his behavior and attention to his studies.

"Now, be a good boy, Bradley," said Miss Prissy.

"Yes, Bradley," said Miss Tempy. "Remember, we expect a great deal of you. All our people have been smart scholars."

"Just as he turned into the main road he heard some one calling and turned to see his acquaintance of yesterday, the girl next door, running to catch up, her hood slipped back from her hair and a dented tin pail in her hand. Being a girl, Gus carried her noon luncheon during the winter months instead of coming home to eat it.

On the way to school they met another girl, whom Gus introduced as Clara Hopkins, a chum of hers. "She's tiptop. I sit with her. She's got most as many checks as I have," was her recommendation.

Upstairs at the schoolhouse was a large room, with rows of double desks on each side and a wide aisle in the center. One side of the aisle was the girls' side, and the other was for the boys. Mr. Daniels stiffly shook hands with the new scholar, asked him some questions concerning his progress in his studies and showed him where he should sit. The more advanced pupils occupied the desks at the rear of the room, and the younger ones—Bradley among them—sat in front. Bradley's seat mate was an older boy than he, rather good looking, with curly hair. His name, so he whispered before school began, was Sam Hammond.

At recess Bradley went out on the playground for a little while, but he felt rather lonesome among so many strangers and so returned to the schoolroom. It was empty, the teacher taking his customary "constitutional" in the yard. After a few minutes Gus came bounding in.

"Why, Brad," she exclaimed, "where've you been? I've been lookin' for you. Why didn't you come on out?"

"Oh, I don't know," replied the boy. "I don't know any of the fellers yet."

"Well, you're goin' to know 'em. Oh, my goodness! Winfield!"

The stub tailed dog sat panting at her feet, three inches of red tongue hanging from its mouth.

"You naughty, naughty dog!" cried Gus almost in tears. "How dare you! Go home this minute!"

"Go home, Winfield!" commanded Bradley, coming to the rescue.

Winfield had gone home by the shed route already that morning and didn't propose to do it again. When his mistress tried to catch him he retreated to a safe distance and wagged his tail.

"Oh, what shall we do?" wailed Gus. "Recess is 'most over, and if Mr. Daniels finds him here I don't know what'll happen!"

Bradley made a dash at the dog, and the latter started on the run about the room. At length they drove him out the "boys' door" at the other side. Finally, being penned in with both doors shut and thoroughly frightened, he dashed into the closet which was between the doors, and hid behind the wood box.

"Now," said Gus exultantly, "you watch that he don't get out, and I'll crawl in after him. Oh, my goodness, there's Mr. Daniels comin' now!"

The cowhide boots of the teacher were heard on the stairs. Bradley, in desperation, shut the closet door upon the imprisoned Winfield. Mr. Daniels stepped to the rope in the entry and gave it a pull. The bell above responded with a single note, and the scholars began to pour up the stairs.

"We will come to order," commanded the teacher. Bradley, glancing across the aisle at Gus, saw that she was as white as the whitewashed wall.

"First class in arithmetic," said Mr. Daniels, and then from the closet came a long, dismal whine. The first class in arithmetic stopped in its tracks and looked aghast. The whole school, with two exceptions, picked up its ears. The exceptions trembled.

"Ow-wow-wow!" came from the closet. Mr. Daniels strode across the floor and opened the door.

"Whose dog is this?" he demanded sternly.

No one answered.

"Come out of that!" commanded the teacher savagely. He reached behind the wood box and, seizing the cowering Winfield by the scruff of the neck, tossed him into the room. "Whose dog is this?" he repeated.

Most of the scholars knew whose dog it was, but none of them told.

"I asked a question!" thundered the master. "Who put that—that creature in the closet?"

Bradley looked at his fellow conspirator. Then he held up his hand. "I did," he said.

Mr. Daniels' mouth opened in surprise. New pupils did not usually begin in this way.

"You did?" he gasped.

"Yes, sir. He fol— I mean he came into the room when 'twas recess, and we—I tried to put him out, and he wouldn't go."

"So you shut him in the closet. Brilliant youth! As this is your first day here, I suppose I must stretch a point and believe it was not done on purpose. If it had been any other of the scholars I should have made an example of 'em. I am surprised that you should treat your little brother" (appreciative titter from the school) "in such a manner. You may put him out."

It was easy enough to command, but not so easy to do. The dog, frightened at the crowd, backed away when Bradley approached.

"Come here, Winfield," said the boy, his face a bright crimson. The school giggled at the name.

"Winfield?" repeated Mr. Daniels. "Why that name, if you please?"

"I—I don't know, sir."

"You don't know?"

"No, sir." And then the boy had a happy thought. "He's named after Gen'ral Hancock, I guess."

General Winfield Scott Hancock, in his role of statesman, was very much in the public eye just at this time.

Mr. Daniels hesitated. He more than suspected the dog's real namesake, but he wasn't sure and, being a weak man, was afraid of making a mistake.

"Well, put the creature out!" he snarled, and then, losing his temper and aiming a kick at the dog, he commanded, "Git out, you brute!"

That kick was a mistake. Winfield wasn't used to kicks, and this one scattered his doggish senses completely. He started on a panicky, yelping flight, hotly pursued by Bradley. Down the aisle by the "boys' side," across the back of the room among the feet of the "first class in arithmetic" and up the aisle by the "girls' side" ped the chase. At the end of the second lap the entire school was in an uproar. Mr. Daniels white with rage, took a hand in the pursuit, and his efforts and those of two or three more volunteers only made matters worse.

At length the dog, hemmed in on both sides, hesitated in the middle of the broad aisle. Suddenly he darted toward the closet once more. Mr. Daniels leaped to intercept him, tripped, struck the stool upon which the bucket of drinking water was placed and sprawled upon the floor in the center of a miniature flood, while Winfield, leaping over him, darted through the entry and down the stairs, a shrieking maniac.

The dripping Mr. Daniels was physically cool, but mentally very warm indeed. "Checks" were distributed with liberality and two boys were "ferruled" before 12 o'clock came. One of these sufferers was Bradley's seat mate, Sam Hammond.

Bradley went home alone. When the old maids asked him innumerable questions concerning how he "got along" at school he simply answered, "All right" and gave no details. Miss Tempy was somewhat worried at his silence and confided to her sister the fear that he had been "studyin' too hard." "All our people have been dreadful keen students," she said.

It was nearly 1 o'clock when the boy re-entered the school yard. As he did so a shout went up from a group near the fence.

"Here he is!" yelled one of the older boys. "Here's your beau, Gus. He won't let 'em plague his girl, you bet!"

"No," shouted Sam Hammond, "Gusty's all right now, ain't she? He'll take care of her.

"Gusty had a little dog;
Its fleece was black's a crow"—

"You shut up!" screamed Gus, breaking from the circle and stamping her foot savagely. Her face was red, and there were tears in her eyes.

"It followed her to school one day," continued the tormentor.

"What's the matter, Gus?" asked Bradley, coming up.

"Haw, haw!" laughed Sam gleefully. "I told you so. Bradley 'll take care of her.

"Bradley Nickerson, so they say,
Goes a-courtin' night and day;
Sword and pistol by his side,
And Gusty Baker 'll be his bride.

"What's the matter, Gus?" he added mockingly.

"What is the matter?" repeated Bradley.

"None of your bus'ness!" snapped Gus, who was in no mood to be friendly with any one. "You jest wait, Sam Hammond! I'll fix you! Got whipped in school! Ha, ha! Cry baby!" And she gave an exaggerated imitation of her enemy's facial contortions during the "feruling" that morning.

"Come on, Gus," interposed Clara Hopkins. "He isn't worth talkin' to. Come on, I've got somethin' to show you."

(To Be Continued)

A Hopeless Case.

A Scottish paper tells a story of an old Scottish woman who was "unco' drouthie," without the money to buy "a drappie." "Lassie," she said to her little granddaughter, "gang round to Donald McCallum and bring me a gill. Tell him I'll pay him i' the morning."

Back came the child with a refusal. Donald declined to part with his whisky without the cash. Eager and irritated, the old woman cast about for some means of "raising the wind," and her eye fell upon the family Bible. "Here, lassie," she said, "gie him this and tell him to keep it until I bring him the siller." Off went the little girl, but she soon returned, still carrying the Bible. Donald was obdurate.

"He says he maun hae the baubees first, granny."

In anger the disappointed grandmother threw up her hands and exclaimed: "Losh, did onybody ever hear the like o' that! The man will neither tak my word nor the word o' God for a gill o' whusky!"

A Canine Shirker.

Rex, a thoroughbred Spitz, must perform the painful duty of escorting a certain neighbor home when she has been calling at our house. However, it is not without a show of reluctance that he does it. Recently our friend missed her escort, and no amount of whistling proved equal to recalling him. This occurred several times and it was always in about the same place that Rex disappeared. One night our friend determined to discover Rex's little game. After whistling and calling she made a pretense of going on. She stopped in a deep shadow. Around the corner of the nearest house appeared a slinking figure. Stealthily quitting the shadows Rex crept out and peered long and anxiously up the street, whither, as he well knew, he should have continued to conduct the lady. After this he turned shamelessly around and lit out for home.

Baby's Share of Blame.

She had been fitted for two gowns, the total cost of which was nearly $600.

"Now," she said to the saleswoman, "I want you to do me a favor."

"Certainly," was the prompt response.

The customer colored deeply. "I want you to make out the bill partly for gowns for me and partly for baby dresses and a baby's cloak."

The saleswoman was used to the whims of fashionable women, but this was something she was a little slow in comprehending. The customer explained.

"You see," she said, "my husband is very fond of our baby, and if he sees that the bill is partly for dresses for her—well, he won't mind so much."—Exchange.

Takes His Own Medicine.

In Baluchistan when the physician gives a dose he is expected to partake of a similar one himself as a guarantee of his good faith. Should the patient die under his hands the relatives, though they rarely exercise it, have the right of putting him to death unless a special agreement has been made freeing him from all responsibility as to consequences, while if they should decide upon immolating him he is fully expected to yield to his fate like a man.

INDIAN MASQUERADERS.

Dancing Masks and Blankets Used In the Northwest.

Here are some strange figures from the great Northwest. They represent the dancing masks and blankets used by the Tsinshean Indians of British Columbia in their medicine and sun dances.

Many an Indian has fainted from the exertion of wearing the heavy wooden masks and working the wires that hold the jaw. It is impossible to buy one of these masks.

Dealers in Indian curios have smaller ones made for tourists, but they are never like the originals which can only be found among the Indians, who jealously guard them, or in the Sheldon Jackson Museum, at Sitka. The Chilkat blankets on the images are kept in the secret recesses of the Indian huts and only brought out on state occasions.

INDIAN MASQUERADERS.

Each design on them means a story, and the few people who were fortunate enough to get Chilkat blankets in the early days of British Columbia and Alaska paid from $200 to $300 for them.

No Indian blanket is as rare or prized as highly. It is a queer thing that though the Indians live in the dirtiest of huts their blankets and masks always come out fresh when they wish to wear them for some orgy or celebration. The masks in this picture are owned by one family, and this accounts for the similarity in shape and design. The colors on them are dull reds, blues and black.

PRINCE LEADS QUIET LIFE.

Heir to British Throne Has As Peaceable Days As Commoner.

Never in the history of England has there been such a contrast between a King and the heir to his throne as at present. The father, "weighted with the crown," rushes up and down the land in motor cars and special trains, attending christenings race meetings, receptions, garden parties, semi-state and state functions, morning, noon and night. The son, whose only trouble seems to be the riddle of killing time, sits in his room at Marlborough House pasting stamps into an album or reading a book. He does absolutely nothing, and does it with such a masterly inactivity as to rouse one almost to enthusiasm at the idea of how successfully this proud prince manages to while away his golden days.

The prince, the princess and the rest of the family are up betimes, which means about 8 o'clock in the morning. There is the ordinary breakfast of a well-to-do English family, and the head of it beguiles the intervals between bacon and eggs with the morning papers. After breakfast there are charity letters to dictate to a secretary, for even the Prince of Wales is not exempt from the incessant stream of begging letters and appeals from charitable institutions which weigh down the postman's bag at every delivery.

Having completed this, the heaviest task of the day, the prince goes for a walk in St. James' Park or Hyde Park accompanied by one of his equerries who live in Marlborough House, and when this constitutional is over it is time to go back and prepare for luncheon. Sometimes there is a guest, but more often the meal is taken only in the company of one of the equerries and a lady of the princess' household. Luncheon over, there must be some stamps to sort (the prince's stamp collection is the finest in the world, and is said to be worth more than £100,000.)

Then comes another walk in the park, and then a book to read until tea time, when there are generally one or two visitors. Dinner, at 8.30 p. m., is quite informal, with a guest or two only here and there. If the royal couple go to the theatre, dinner is set for 7, but as they do not often go to the theatre the evening is spent quietly at home, the prince reading a book and the princess doing some fancywork with the needle. Bed at 10.30 p. m.

Fond of Crab.

A jolly old boy from the Midlands entered into one of the hotels at the seaside and, seeing on the slab on the right a crab dressed on the shell with legs, claws and parsley ranged round, said to the landlord:

"What d'ye call that?"

"Crab," was the answer.

"Looks good. I'll have un, and gie us a pint of ale."

Bread and butter was added and the diner left to his dinner. In about an hour the genial landlord entered the dining saloon to see if his guest was getting on all right. He found him chawing up the last claw, the chawer red in the face, but beaming.

"Like the crab, sir?"

"Yes. He was capital. I never tasted one afore, but I think you baked un a little too long. The crust was hard. Let's have another pint."

He had eaten the lot—shell, claws and all complete.—London Tit-Bits.

LAUNDRY HINTS.

It Is Best to Examine Clothes Going to Wash.

Accumulations in pockets should be looked for. Tobacco allowed to remain in a man's waistcoat pocket may cause a stain in the process of washing which irretrievably damages the waistcoat.

All pins should be carefully removed before clothes are sent to the laundry. Failure to do this may quite easily bring about blood poisoning, from which fatal consequences are not infrequent.

Hooks should always be rust proof, or the blouse or other article upon which they are sewed is quite likely to be spoiled.

Many delicately tinted and daintily trimmed blouses, usually sent to a cleaner, can be laundered to perfection, but it behooves the customer to understand that in such cases the ironers who take this difficult and tedious work in hand require proper compensation.

If stains caused by tea and coffee, wine, etc., are to be removed, it is always best to mention this fact in the book, for no self respecting laundry uses chemicals unless specially asked to do so. The needful process will be undertaken at the customer's own risk only.

Lace curtains ought never to be kept up till very dirty. If sent after long exposure to strong sunlight, it is quite likely that they will almost fall to pieces when starched.

Nor should needful mending be forgotten, for it is inconsiderate to send a tattered garment to the laundry and expect it to be returned in no worse condition.

One of the sorter's principal duties is to note with a line of colored cotton every tear and hole, but after a little thought it is obvious that this task can only be superficially carried out in the press of business. It follows, therefore, that a vast amount of mending is undertaken at the laundry which in reality should be done at home, and, however agreeable a method this may prove to customers, it makes the labors of the laundry mending unduly onerous.

Provide your own hamper, which will insure its exclusive use, and if it is scrubbed now and again at home with water absolute cleanliness will be assured.

POST CARD HOLDER.

A Useful Contrivance Easily Made by the Amateur.

This little holder is ornamental as well as useful and is quite easily made by the amateur. You require a frame, and very possibly there may be one lying about somewhere which is not required for a picture, which would do admirably for the purpose. If not, simple and pretty frames can be bought for a trifling sum.

Take the wooden panel which fits at the back of the frame. If you have to get one, cut one of the exact size or, failing this, use stiff cardboard. Cover this with wadding cut the exact size of the wood and lay it upon it, securing it with a touch of gum here and there to prevent its slipping.

Next choose a pretty piece of brocade or silk and lay this over the wadding, fixing it in the same way. Set it to dry under a pile of books.

Now lay some strips of firm ribbon or braid across the panel to hold the letters or cards, arranging them as in the sketch or in any other way you prefer. This is not an important detail. Carry the ends of the straps over to the wrong side and secure them here and fasten them together where they cross by a stitch of firm silk.

Now slip the panel into the frame and fasten in the same way as you would a picture. Paste some brown or fancy paper on the back to make neat and tie a loop of ribbon through the rings at the back to hang it by, and the post card holder is complete.

A Champion Traveler

President J. T. Hanrahan, of the Illinois Central railway, is to be credited with being the world's chief traveler. Averaging 150 miles a day for fifteen years, a total of 821,250 miles, and an average of 200 miles a day for twenty years, the grand total for thirty-five years reaches the colossal figure of 2,281,250 miles. It is a remarkable circumstance that in all his travels by rail over the United States he has been in only one accident, and that was an insignificant affair.

Beware of Ointments for Catarrh that Contain Mercury, as mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surfaces. Such articles should never be used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is ten fold to the good you can possibly derive from them. "Man Is Filled With Misery."—This is not true of all men. The well, sound of lung, clear of eye, alert, and buoyant with health, are not miserable, whatever may be their social condition. To be well is to be happy, and we can all be well by getting and keeping our bodies in a healthful state. Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil will help all to do this.

Does Not Color Hair

Ayer's Hair Vigor, as now made from our new improved formula, does not stain or color the hair even to the slightest degree. Gray hair, white hair, blonde hair is not made a shade darker. But it certainly does stop falling hair. No question about that.

Does not change the color of the hair.

Formula with each bottle

Ayer's

Show it to your doctor

Ask him about it, then do as he says

Indeed, we believe it will stop every case of falling hair unless there is some very unusual complication, something greatly affecting the general health. Then you should consult your physician. Also ask him about the new Ayer's Hair Vigor.

The Grace Spoiled

A deaf old gentleman dined with a family where grace was always said. When the guests were seated the host bowed his head and began to repeat the accustomed verse in a subdued, reverent tone.

"Eh? What's that?" demanded the deaf old gentleman who sat beside him.

The host smiled patiently and began again, in a louder, more deprecatory voice.

"Speak a little louder, I don't catch what you say," the old gentleman persisted.

A low ripple of laughter went round the table. The host, his face crimson with embarrassment, raised his voice and repeated the verse. The deaf old gentleman did his best to hear, but failed. He placed his hand upon his host's arm.

"What did you say?" he demanded irascibly.

"D——n it, I'm saying grace," he snapped.—Harper's Weekly.

They Are a Powerful Nervine—Dyspepsia causes derangement of the nervous system, and nervous debility once engendered is difficult to deal with. There are many testimonials as to the efficacy of Parmelee's Vegetable Pills in treating this disorder, showing that they never fail to produce good results. By giving proper tone to the digestive organs, they restore equilibrium to the nerve centres.

Slowly, imperceptibly, almost sneakingly, as the lights were turned down and the play began he slid his hand along the back of the seat in which she sat.

Then he leaned toward her and whispered:—

"Laura," he said, between his set teeth, "I'll button up that gap in the back of your waist this time, but when you want anything of this kind done again you'll ask me to do it before we leave home, or, by ginger, you'll reach round and button it yourself."

Whereat Mrs. Ferguson merely glared at her husband and said nothing.—Chicago Tribune.

Chinese Ancestor Worship

First and last, the tablets of the ancestors and the ceremonies performed before them have worried the Christian missionaries in China not a little. At the recent centennial missionary conference a Chinese gentleman of rank and intellectual epuipment told them it was a mistake to call those ceremonies idolatrous. An Englishman of distinction told them the same thing years ago. After deliberation they adopted the following minute: "While the worship of ancestors is incompatible with an enlightened and spiritual conception of the Christian church, yet we should be careful to encourage in all Christian converts the feeling of reverence for the memory of the departed which this custom seeks to express, and to impress upon the Chinese in general the fact that Christians attach great importance to filial piety."—Hartford Courant.

POLAR DAYS AND NIGHTS.

Life In the Regions of Ice and Snow as Described by Explorers.

During a Polar winter the average thickness of ice on the ocean when no storms or strong tides interfere reaches six feet or more. Nansen found a thickness of over eight feet. There is really no warm season. Even during the long summer days snow still falls frequently. Clean spells are relatively warm, but, especially in the Antarctic, fogs and cloud are frequent, while winds bring low temperatures. Nevertheless, the summer near the margins of the Arctic zone is described in the "Journal of Geography" as having clean, pure, crisp air, free from dust and with little precipitation.

The monotony and darkness of the Polar night are decreased a good deal by the long twilight, due to the high degree of refraction at low temperatures. The sun actually appears and disappears some days before and after the times which are geometrically set for the change. Light from moon and stars, and from the aurora, also relieves the darkness. Optical phenomena of great variety, beauty, and complexity are common. Solar and lunar haloes, and coronae, and mock suns and moons are often seen.

Auroras seem to be less common and less brilliant in the Antarctic than in the Arctic. Sunset and sunrise colors within the Polar zones are described as being extraordinarily brilliant and impressive. Thus the North Polar summer, in spite of its drawbacks, is in some respects a pleasant and healthful season.

But the Polar night is monotonous, depressing, repelling. An everlastingly uniform snow covering, monotony, lifelessness, silence — except for the howl of the gale or the cracking of the ice. Small wonder that the Polar night has sometimes unbalanced men's minds. The first effects are often a strong desire for sleep, and indifference. Later effects have been sleeplessness and nervousness, tending in extreme cases to insanity, anaemia, digestive troubles.

Extraordinary low winter temperatures are easily borne if the air is dry and still. Nansen notes "not very cold" at a temperature of—22 degrees, when the air was still. Another Arctic explorer, at 9 degrees, says "it is too warm to skate." Zero weather seems pleasantly refreshing if clear and calm. But high relative humidity and wind—even a light breeze—give the same degree of cold a penetrating feeling of chill which may be unbearable. Thus the damper air of spring and summer usually seems much colder than the drier air of winter, although the temperatures may be the same. When exposed directly to the air the skin burns and blisters; the lips swell and crack. Thirst has been much complained of by Polar explorers, and is surely due to the active evaporation from the warm body into the dry, relatively cold air. There is no doubt that Polar air is singularly free from micro-organisms—a fact which is due chiefly to lack of communication with other parts of the world. Hence diseases which are common in temperate zones, "colds" among them, are rare.

The Wrong Shoe.

He was only a plain American panhandler, says the New York Globe, but he ordered his "schooner" of Bowery beer with the sang froid of a plain American plutocrat. Midway in its consumption he sidled to the free lunch counter and reduced the pile of big sausages by one.

Two more gulps of beer and a second and third large sausage disappeared. Washing these down, he concluded that he needed a sausage and got it; then for the door.

"Here, Bill," the genial barkeeper called familiarly. "Come back a minute."

The panhandler returned expectantly.

"Say, Bill," the barkeeper continued in a confidential way, "the next time you want a glass of beer you go to a butcher shop, see?"

Shock to the Waiter.

There was a terrible commotion in the kitchen of the cafe. They could see it through the swinging doors. Some one went to investigate.

"What is it?" they asked when he had returned.

"A waiter fainted," he answered as he took his seat. "They are slapping him with wet towels, trying to bring him to. Did you see that woman who just left? She was the cause. She gave him a quarter tip."

A Royal Friend to Authors

Queen Alexandra's private library is one of the most remarkable in the kingdom. Her kindness to budding and full-blown authors is as well known and genuine as her love of good works, and consequently few days pass unmarked by the arrival of a number of sumptuously bound and beautifully printed books and magazines, accompanied by requests for her majesty's gracious acceptance. Her majesty always accepts, and always sees that a civilly-worded note of thanks is despatched to the aspiring author by return.

MOTHER'S ANXIETY

The summer months are a time of anxiety for mothers because they are the most dangerous months in the year for babies and young children. Stomach and bowel troubles come quickly during the hot weather, and almost before the mother realizes that there is danger the little one may be beyond aid. Baby's Own Tablets will prevent summer complaints if given occasionally because they keep the stomach and bowels free from offending matter. And the Tablets will cure these troubles if they come suddenly. The wise mother should keep these Tablets always at hand and give them occasionally to her children. The Tablets can be given with equal success to the newborn babe or the well-grown child. They always do good—they cannot possibly do harm, and the mother has the guarantee of a government analyst that this medicine does not contain one particle of opiate or harmful drug. Sold by all medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Yukon Prices

High prices prevailing in Yukon territory continue to prevent many tourists from visiting that country. American Vice-Consul Woodward, of Dawson, writes: "In one instance a party of some two dozen tourists from the Eastern States arrived here in the morning, and after a hasty trip up the creeks, left on the steamer the same evening. A visitor from the outside, particularly from the extreme east of the United States, is astonished to find that the smallest coin in circulation is 25 cents, that the article which costs 5 cents at home will cost from over two to five times that much, and that 25 cents is paid for a five-cent cigar or an ordinary local newspaper, that a charge of $1 to $2.50 is made for delivering a single piece of baggage to the hotel, a distance of two or three blocks, and everything else in proportion."

A Cure for Rheumatism—The intrusion of uric acid into the blood vessels is a fruitful cause of rheumatic pains. This irregularity is owing to a deranged and unhealthy condition of the liver. The late James McNeil Whistler was standing bareheaded in a nat shop, the clerk having taken his hat to another part of the shop for comparison. A man rushed in with his hat in his hand, and, supposing Whistler to be a clerk, angrily confronted him.

"See here," he said, 'this hat doesn't fit."

Whistler eyed the stranger critically from head to foot, and then drawled out:

"Well, neither does your coat. What's more, if you'll pardon my saying so, I'll be hanged if I care much for the color of your trousers."—Everybody's Magazine.

Wild Plums

Prunus Americana is the botanical name of the native wild plum of the Northern States, and the many named varieties of this plum now in cultivation have been worked out by selection, cultivation and the breeding of new varieties. The wild plnm of Manitoba, though given a different name by botanists, is closely related to prunus Americana, and is no doubt quite as susceptible to improvement. Our hope for the future in growing plums lies in the improvement of our native species, as few of the cultivated plums of other countries are of any value here. With a view to the improvement of our native plum, the Buchanan Nursery Co. of St. Charles, Man., offers a prize of $5 for the best sample of native wild plums sent them this season. Anyone who wishes to compete for this prize should send about a pint of the fruit to the company, by mail, with their name and address.

Important News Items of the Week.

Sept. 28.

Shanghai—An outbreak of Boxerism has occurred at Nankahgsin, in the northern part of the Province of Kiangsi.

Chicago—According to figures sent out by Chairman E. E. MacLeod of the Western Passenger Association, many thousand Americans annually are obeying the call of the wilds of Western Canada. In a circular issued to-day of all the lines which are members of the association, it is stated that during the twelve months ended June 30, 41,869 emigrants, representing a population of 105,420, took up homesteads in Western Canada. Of this number, 13,188, representing a population of 31,500, were from the United States.

Sept. 29.

London—A dispatch to a news agency from Stockholm, published to-day, says that the Swedish Yacht Club has forwarded a challenge to the New York Club for a series of races for the America's cup.

London—Reports have been appearing in the London newspapers rom Canadian sources that the British Admiralty intended to re-establish a naval base at Esquimalt. Replying to an inquiry to-day officials of the Admiralty said there was no foundation for the rumors, adding that there was no intention either of resuming control of the fortifications at Esquimalt, which were taken over by the Canadian Government, or of increasing the strength of the British fleet in Pacific waters.

Sept. 30.

Ottawa—Sir Wilfrid Laurier has informed Dr. Munro that any attempt to limit incoming Japanese to those provided with passports specifically directed to Ottawa would be a violation of Canada's treaty with Japan.

Ottawa—During August 26 trade disputes were reported in Canada, affecting 200 establishments and 6,144 employes. The loss of time involved was equivalent to 99,860 working days.

October 1.

Ottawa, Ont.—Chairman Killam, of the Railway Commission, who has just returned from Eastern Canada, is satisfied there will be no recurrence this winter of the tie-up of traffic which led to much severe suffering last year in the Prairie Provinces. Railways have made large additions to their rolling stock, he says.

Oct. 3d.

Pekin, China—There has been a complete deadlock betwen China and Japan over Manchurian affairs since June 30 last, and the action of the United States toward Japan has now become a feature of the situation. The administration at Mukden and Pekin welcome what the officials call a "revival of America's spirit," in sending the battleship fleet to the Pacific after apparent indifference to the Far East situation and as a result the Chinese officials are resisting the demands of the Japanese. After four months of fruitless negotiations the Viceroy of Manchuria, Hu Shih Chang, has arrived in Pekin to explain the state of affairs in his jurisdiction.

Oct. 4th.

Ottawa.—It is somewhat significant that Japanese, or at any rate a large percentage of them in Canada, are qualifying to become Canadian citizens and take an interest in political affairs Up to July last no less than 3,536 Japanese have taken the oath of allegiance to the British Columbia.

Ottawa.—Minister of Labor, Adolphe Lemieux will acompany Japanese Consul-General Nosse to Japan on the 20th, to meet the Mikado's Government and endeavor to settle the trouble over the invasion to British Columbia by Japanese.

Elder—Rolston.

A very pretty wedding was solemnized on Thursday Oct 3d, at 10 a. m., at the home of the bride's parents Mr. and Mrs. R. W. Rolston, 27 Fourteenth avenue, their eldest daughter Miss Ethel Rolston and Mr William Wallace Elder of "Ingleside," Port Stewart, County Antrim, Ireland, were married Rev. Herbert W Piercy performing the ceremony. The bride, who was given away by her father, looked beautiful in her bridal gown of white silk mull over white taffeta and carried a boquet of white carnations and chrysanthemums. Miss Jessie Rolston in white organdie made a pretty bridesmaid and carried a boquet of pink carnations. Mr. Thos. McHattie supported the groom. The groom's present to the bride was a sunburst of pearls, to the bridesmaid a gold necklace. Many handsome presents were received by the young couple. Mr. and Mrs. Elder left on the Victoria boat for a short honeymoon trip.

Club Opening.

The formal opening of the rooms of the Young Men's Club of Mount Pleasant Methodist church was the occasion of a large gathering and splendid concert on Tuesday evening in the Sunday school rooms. The programme was a treat, every number being entertaining and uplifting, being either humorous or of inspiring sentiment. A splendid and instructive address was given by Rev. R. Milliken, B. D., of Wesley church on "The Gospel of Play," its theme being the necessity of recreation or play in order to maintain the strenuousness of modern commercial life. Some form of enjoyment and relaxation being necessary to all in order to achieve and enjoy, thus giving one a recreative ability; the theme was vividly illustrated with serious and humorous anecdotes. Two solos of sentiment and delightfully given were "Island of Dreams" by Prof. G. P. Hicks, and "Love Me and the World is Mine" by Mr. R. Sparling. The programme was bubbling over with humorous selections, the gems being given by Rev. H. W. Piercy, "The Man Who Whistled," and Artemus Ward's experience with fourteen Mormon widows. Mrs. Wm. Moore, the well known comic vocalist and cornet imitator, kept the audience in roars of laughter. Master Percy Lee, a clever young pianist, gave several selections with spirit, and "Valse Chromatique" was well rendered by Mr. H. Fremlin. The programme was as follows: piano solo, Percy Lee; male quartette; recitation, W. Johnson; solo, Wm. Moore; piano, "Valse Chromatique" (Godard), H. Fremlin; solo, R. Sparling; reading, Rev. H. J. Miller; solo, "Sail-Ho," T. Phillips; recitation, Rev. H. W. Piercy; address, "Gospel of Play," Rev. R. Milliken, B. D.; solo, J. Graham; solo, "Island of Dreams," Prof. G. P. Hicks; male quartette; solo, Wm. Moore; orchestra selection.

At the close of the programme Rev. A. E. Hetherington, who was discovered in the audience, was called upon to come forward and address his former congregation. Rev. Mr. Hetherington received a hearty welcome and made an address partly reminiscent of his pastorate and descriptive of his experiences of the past few months.

Refreshments were served in the large dining hall and the large gathering inspected the rooms provided for the young men. The rooms number two and are situated in the southeast corner of the lower floor of the church. The rooms have been carpeted with handsome carpeting of a dark blue color; the wainscotting of the walls are in oak finish and above this the walls and ceiling are painted white, the effect being rather attractive. Tables, comfortable chairs, games and reading matter are amply provided. The club is open to all young men of good repute, no matter of what denomination, and young men will find the club quarters a home-like place to spend their evenings. The aim is to develop the social, physical, literary and moral side of its members. Membership fee is $2. The officers are: Rev. J. P. Westman, Hon. President; G. E. Copeland, President; C. E. Proud, Vice-President; Rowland Bell, Secretary; R. H. Duke, Treasurer.

The Function of an Advertisement is first to draw attention and to leave a favorable and as far as possible a lasting impression.

The first and principal object of a very great deal of advertising is not directly that of selling goods, but of establishing a worthy fame—a recognized reputation—to make the goods and the house known. Customers must come with some idea of the goods they seek, the more knowledge the better. With confidence inspired by effective advertising, it is then up to the salesman to do the rest—to make good by courtesy and a skillful presentation of the wares which should be up to all that has been advertised.

THE ADVOCATE is the best advertising medium for reaching Mt. Pleasant People—to gain their favorable attention to your goods and store. Advertising rates reasonable—not in the Publishers' Association high rate combine.

STORM FIEND AT WORK

ENGLAND VISITED BY SEVERE AND DEVASTATING STORM.

Sudden Change From Spring Back to Winter—Land and Sea Casualties —Due to Gale and Snow — Coast Strewn With Wrecks—Entire Kingdom Swept From End to End—The Worst For Years.

From bright sunny and springlike weather, with the parks and gardens gay with snowdrops and crocuses, England has this week been plunged back to the depths of winter with one of the worst and most devastating storms ever experienced throughout the United Kingdom.

Widespread havoc has been caused on the land, with a considerable number of casualties, while all round these islands the coast is strewn with wrecked and disabled vessels. Lifeboats everywhere have had a busy time.

The storm has been accompanied by heavy rains in some parts and by blinding snow in others. Even London has witnessed another heavy snowfall, though not quite so bad as the last, when traffic was so seriously interfered with.

The wind at one time reached a velocity estimated at from eighty to one hundred miles an hour, stripping the roofs and tossing the chimney pots about in all directions. The entire roof of one building, carrying with it a mass of brick coping, was thrown into Fleet street and some people were hurt. It is marvellous how many escaped with only a fright; still more marvellous nobody was killed.

The bank of the Barclay company had to be guarded by the police, owing to fear that the building would totally collapse so badly was it damaged by the storm. The roof had crashed through the first floor with tremendous force and two sides of the building are a total wreck, all the furniture being smashed.

Advertisement boardings were treated like sheets of cardboard, plate glass windows were blown inside the shops with, of course, serious effects upon the goods.

A remarkable feature of the storm is that it has not touched one part of the country merely, but has swept the entire United Kingdom north, south, east and west. If the damage could be reckoned up, it would be enormous; almost as bad as if an earthquake had been at work.

KILLS A LARGE WILDCAT.

Hunter Wins Desperate Encounter, But Is Badly Scratched.

Frank Tuller, employed on the Edgewood estate of F. S. Pierson, is a lucky man. But his two dogs did not bear charmed lives. They are victims of a fifty-pound wildcat, while Tuller is nursing several scratches received in an encounter with the brute.

Now, Tuller did not think there was anythings in the state that could tackle these dogs and get away with it. But he had reckoned without his host. A plain, common, ordinary, every day wildcat would have been killed, but this was not one of the garden variety. This was a "beaut." He weighed 50 pounds, and every ounce spelled fight.

Thus the dogs had attempted to bite off more than they could chew, and before Tuller could spell "Jack Robinson" or any other old name his pets were in the "has-beens" class.

Then it was up to Tuller. He had his gun with him, and at first it looked an easy matter to carry out the general plan of the dogs. But Mr. Wildcat did not give his adversary time to shoot.

With one pounce he was on his man. Then began the fight for life. Mr. Tuller has seen these on the stage, and the hero always came off victorious. It was this knowledge of the sequence of events that kept his courage screwed to the sticking point. For the wildcat was doing all sorts of things with his clothes and his skin. Now and then the paws would get a little deeper than the cuticle and there would come with them a bit of flesh.

After many minutes, each of which seemed an hour, the hunter backed off clear, aimed, and fired. Then he took the dead cat to his home.

She Was Wise.

"And you say this is the first time you have ever loved?"

"Yes."

"Do you know what I think you are?"

"Well, what?"

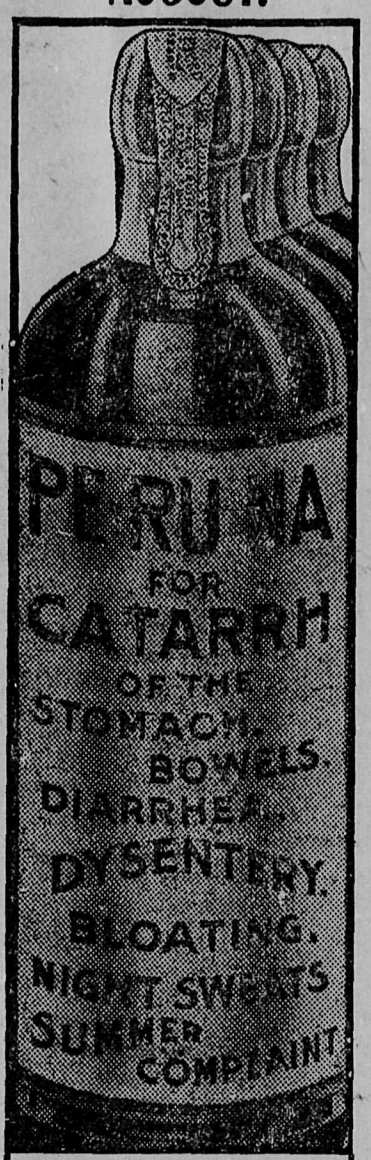
"No," he said; "I have never been able to keep a dog."

"And why not?" It was his sympathetic next door neighbor who inquired.

The man turned away to hide a tear.

"Our cook doesn't like dogs," he brokenly murmured.—Houston Post.

HEALTH NOTES FOR AUGUST.



August is the month of internal catarrh. The mucous membranes, especially of the bowels, are very liable to congestion, causing summer complaint, and catarrh of the bowels and other internal organs. Pe-ru-na is an excellent remedy for all these conditions.

Unhappy Speech

"That speech was ill-advised," said a legislator, referring to a colleague's too outspoken address. "It reminds me of a speech that a widow made to her new husband on the honeymoon.

"'Oh,' she sighed, throwing herself into the man's arms, 'how happy poor, dear James would be if he could only know by what an agreeable gentleman he has been replaced.'"—Philadelphia Inquirer.

Very many persons die annually from cholera and kindred summer complaints, who might have been saved if proper remedies had been used. If attacked do not delay in getting a bottle of Dr. J. D. Kellogg's Dysentery Cordial, the medicine that never fails to effect a cure. Those who have used it say it acts promptly, and thoroughly subdues the pain and disease.

DEAD HERO HONORED.

Tablet Unveiled to John Macdonnell, Brock's Gallant Aide-de-Camp.

The unveiling of a bronze memorial tablet to the memory of Lieut.-Col. L. John Macdonnell of Glengarry, Gen. Brock's gallant aide-de-camp, at the site of the old redan battery on the face of Queenston Heights, was an event which made the visit of the 41st Regiment, Brockville Rifles, to Niagara Falls, Ont., ever remembered. The regiment arrived on a recent Saturday morning and marched to Queenston Park for breakfast. They afterwards took cars on the International Railway for Queenston Heights Park. There, on the site of the old battery which played such an important part in the famous battle, the Lundy's Lane Historical Society had erected a memorial to the brave Macdonnell, but it had never been unveiled. This ceremonial was conducted by Mrs. Cruikshank, wife of Lieut.-Col. and Brigadier Cruikshank, in the presence of the visiting regiment, representatives of the Lundy's Lane Historical Society, officers of other military camps and many spectators. When the veil was drawn aside Mrs. Fished, wife of the Lieut.-Col. commanding the 41st Regiment, marched forward and on behalf of the Brockville Chapter, Daughters of the Empire, placed a wreath of ivy and immortells upon it. The silver band of the 41st Regiment played the British and Canadian national anthems, and Lieut.-Col. Cruikshank on behalf of the Lundy's Lane Historical Society presented the tablet to the public. The inscription on the memorial reads as follows:

"Site of Redan Battery. Near this spot Lieut.-Col. John Macdonnell, Attorney-General of Upper Canada, was mortally wounded 12th of October, 1812."

The wreath which was laid upon the memorial was subsequently removed to Macdonnell's Brockville monument, where it will be preserved.

They Listened to the Story.

After these ceremonies the visiting troops assembled in front of the Brock monument and listened to a talk on the battle of Queenston Heights by Lieut.-Col. Cruikshank, who undoubtedly knows more of the history of the war on the frontier than any other living man.

In the afternoon the officers of the 41st visited the battlefield of Lundy's Lane, where Lieut.-Col. Cruikshank delivered another of his accurate and entertaining historical military features. In connection with this visit it was recalled that it was the light company of the 41st Regiment of the line, commanded by Capt. Clew, which led the final charge up the hill of blood and fire and wrested victory from defeat on the night of July 25, 1814. The battlefield of Chippewa and many other points of historical interest were also visited by the Brockville soldiers.

REVENUE IS GOING UP.

Finance Returns Show Increase of Million Dollars a Month.

That the revenue of the Dominion is going up at the rate of about a million dollars a month is shown by the latest return of the Finance Department.

The new fiscal year is still troublesome. The old year ended with June 30, but this was changed to March 31, so that the year which closed on that date of 1907 is a nine months year.

For the fiscal year ending March 31 last the total revenue was $67,969,326, compiled as follows:

Customs	$39,760,172
Excise	11,805,413
Postoffice	5,061,728
Public works, including railways	6,839,585
Miscellaneous	4,502,428

The revenue during April, May and June has been $23,233,298 and for purposes of comparison, by adding this to the short fiscal year, the revenue for the year ending June 30 would be $91,202,606.

For the year ending June 30, 1906, the revenue was about $80,000,000, so that during the past twelve months there has been an increase of over eleven million dollars.

The expenditure for the nine months is $65,776,786, of which $51,542,161 is on current revenue and $14,234,625 on capital account, leaving a total surplus of $2,192,540. Adding a total expenditure of $10,102,016 for April, May and June, there would be a consolidated fund expenditure of $59,138,485 and capital account of $16,740,416, or a total disbursement for the twelve months of $75,878,901. This leaves a surplus of over $15,000,000.

Of the $23,000,000 receipts for the past three months, nearly $15,000,000 is credited to customs, while during the twelve months customs contributed almost $55,000,000. This is just about double the total revenue raised by taxation ten years ago.

The public debt stands at $250,666,312 on June 30 last, which is a decrease since May 31 last of $2,233,248.

A Montreal Freak.

Montreal possesses one of the most curious freaks of nature ever heard of. It is a colt fourteen months old, which has a growth on its right fore foot, just above the hoof, which is hardly explainable. The growth has the appearance of branches of trees, and already three sprays have come out, one of which is fourteen inches long, and several others are sprouting. The queerest part of the whole thing is that the colt does not seem embarrassed by it at all, and moves about quite as freely as any other of his species.

PUT THE BLOOD IN CONDITION

By the Restorative Blood Forming Properties of

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

It is weakness that causes most of our sufferings—weakness of the heart, weakness of the stomach, weakness of the liver, kidneys and bowels.

The result is feelings of languor and depression, and impaired action of the vital organs, headaches, indigestion, spells of dizziness and weakness, sleeplessness, irritability, and a general rundown condition of the system.

Put the blood in good condition by the use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and you have a foundation for health to build on. Weakness and disease will give way to new strength and vigor, and langour and discouragement will yield to new hope and happiness.

Mr. Fergus Conn, Lily Oak, Ont., writes:—"As a result of the severe winter and an atack of la grippe. I was all run down this spring. I soon improved very much by using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. My appetite is better than it has been for years, and though sixty years of age I am able to do a man's work on the farm following a team. I believe that I owe my good health to the use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food."

Mrs Geo. Beattie, Carr's Brook, Colchester Co., N. S., writes:—"Last spring I was very much run down, felt tired all the time and did not seem to have life or energy enough to do my work. Three boxes of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food did me a world of good and made work a pleasure to me. I have not had occasion to use any medicine since, and have recommended Dr. Chase's Nerve Food to all my friends.

"We always keep Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills in the house to be used for constipation, pains in the back and stomach troubles."

By means of good blood only can Nature make weak people strong, and Dr. Chase's Nerve Food is composed of the most powerful blood-forming elements known to medical science. Every dose is bound to be of some benefit to you; 50 cents a box, at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Toronto.

Bananas

The highest known authority on bananas, the golden treasure of the tropics, is Edward W. Perry. Said he: "Bananas pay their producer nearly three times as much money as potatoes are worth an acre; bring the grower profits which are three times the farm value of the chief food crops of the United States, and have paid gains equal to 5 per cent per annum on $1,138 an acre for the last twenty-five years. The crop is sold years ahead of production at prices ensuring good profits." Mr. Perry adds: "Bananas are by millions of people eaten green or ripe, raw or cooked; are served in all ways in which apples, grains and potatoes are used, and are palatable, healthful and nutritious in every way in which they are prepared. They make excellent bread, cakes and pies, puddings, confectionery and coffee substitutes; yield brandy, beer, vinegar, sugar, oil and fibres. They are bought as a luxury by millions who may use them as a staple food. Yet they may be grown profitably in a small area only; therefore banana culture affords a perfectly safe and gainful use of time and money."—New York Press.

Ether a Festive Drink in Russia

The habit of ether drinking is extremely prevalent in some parts of Russia, as of East Prussia, and all the efforts of the authorities to combat the evil have hitherto been almost fruitless.

An idea of the extent to which the habit prevails may be gathered from reports given in the Russian newspapers of a recent accident which occurred at a place called Trossno. Ether is drunk by farmers on festive occasions, when it appears to be consumed in pailfuls. A farmer celebrating his son's wedding in the fulness of his hospitality got in two pails of ether. During the process of decanting the ether into bottles a violent explosion took place, by which six children were killed and one adult was dangerously and fourteen others more or less severely injured.—Family Doctor.

"George, the cook has gone."

"Let her go. I never liked her."

"But she took all my currant jelly and both my best tablecloths."

"Oh, let her go."

"And she carried off the recipe for waffles you like so well."

"What's that! Which way did she go? Why didn't you call the police?"—Cleveland Plaindealer.

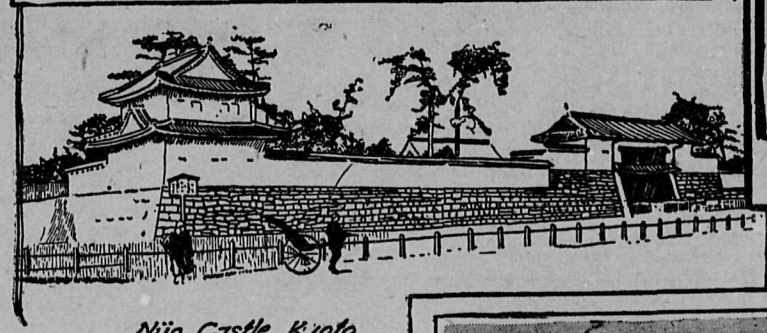
Polly Evans and Jacky Visit Japan's Ancient Capitals

Nara deer on avenue approaching the Temple.

Grave of man stoned for deer killing.



Nijo Castle, Kyoto.

Rice cleaning after harvesting.

Dear Boys and Girls:

OF COURSE, you know that the capital city of Japan is Tokio. But just as Philadelphia and New York in turn were the capital cities of the United States before the city of Washington was built, so Japan had two capital cities before Tokio attained the distinction she now enjoys. One was Kioto, and the other and more ancient capital was Nara.

Jacky and his auntie saved these interesting cities for the last of their programme, and by the time they were ready to take the trip the autumn weather had become a trifle sharp. So they took care to have steamer rugs and heavy wraps with them on the night train from Tokio. They might have tried the sleeping compartment car, but they decided to cast in their lot with the people who slept on their seats in the ordinary carriages.

This plan appeared to suit Jacky most excellently; he rolled himself up in a rug and started at once on a ten-hour excursion to the land of Nod. But his auntie more than once regretted that she had not made different arrangements. To one side of her was a Japanese man afflicted with a terrible cough. To the other was a Japanese who filled the carriage with snorts and snores!

QUEER BUSINESS SIGNS

Still, Polly Evans managed to get through the night with some degree of comfort. For she had at least one great consolation—the hot-water boys at all the stations. Ah, if only America had them! Past your window came boys laden with trays, some provided with Japanese bet-to (rice lunch); others with sandwiches a la American; and still others with cunning earthen teapots filled with weak tea or boiling hot water. You may have a whole teapot filled with tea or water, or a cup to drink out of, all for the huge sum of 3 cents! The train moves on, and you drink your hot water at your leisure. If you wish to take your teapot and cup home as souvenirs, very well. Or you may leave them under your seat for the "boy" to remove when he cleans the carriage.

Arrived in Kioto, Jacky and his auntie chose a 'rickshaw and went to their hotel by a route which took them through a number of interesting streets.

"See, Jacky," cried his auntie, "here's a good sign for you to write down."

Jacky looked, and this is what he saw:

"Head Shop for Unpasteurized Sapporo Beer."

One long, zigzag street followed the course of a long, zigzag canal, and at various points the latter was crossed by means of queer footbridges, with steps up and down—reminding one very much of a Dutch city.

Out of the many, many places of interest which are to be seen in Kioto, Jacky and his auntie selected about a dozen which they were particularly anxious to see. First, the castle of the ancient Tokugawa Shoguns, who for so many centuries usurped the real power of the Emperor—Nijo Castle.

Our special permit, obtained through the courtesy of the American Minister, was presented at the ancient and interesting gateway, and an old man, with a very dignified but courteous manner, took us in tow and conducted us first through the grounds, then through the castle itself, at the entrance to which we tarried to remove our shoes and put on soft slippers.

Oh, the magnificence of the apartments through which our guide led the way! Every square inch of wall and ceiling was literally covered with rare old paintings and carvings—the work of hundreds, perhaps thousands, of men, for no one knows how many, many years.

Coming into one large apartment Jacky caught sight of a piece of furniture! (Otherwise the apartments were all bare of furniture.) It has a large bronze stork resting on a raised platform. Polly Evans remembered, then, the story she had heard.

"You haven't forgotten, have you, Jacky," she asked, "what I read you about these Tokugawa Shoguns—how for the safe keeping of their rich treasure they devised a stork made of heavy bronze, but all hollow inside, and in it they stored their valuables? Don't you see how no one would suspect that a bronze work of art like that would be used for such a purpose?"

"That's so; I wouldn't ever dream such a thing," said Jacky.

From Nijo Castle the next visit was to the Empress Dowager's beautiful garden, which happened to be open to visitors for the first time in fifteen or twenty years, so it promised to be a rare treat, and it indeed proved to be very well worth a visit, with its charming lake, cobble-paved banks and picturesque bridges, charming paths and ancient forest trees.

A couple of days were spent visiting the makers of Satsuma ware, Cloisonne ware and Damascene ware.

COURTESY EVERYWHERE

Our cards of introduction immediately brought us the most courteous attention everywhere that we went. First we were conducted out of the rear entrance to the display rooms and through the usual charming Japanese garden—pine trees overhanging a pond in which one catches glimpses of a gently playing fountain, of many rocks scattered here and there and hundreds of well-fed carp lazily enjoying the shady spots—to the workrooms, where we were permitted to see the men and women actually at work producing the beginning of a wonderful Satsuma vase or Cloisonne teapot or Damascene watchcase.

Everything was so wonderful that Jacky's eyes were like saucers those days!

But we must leave Kioto, for there is very little space left to tell of the trip from Kioto to Nara, taking us through beautiful tea plantations and fine rice farms. It was rice harvesting time and for miles and miles we saw nothing scarcely but long rows of poles from which hung sheaves of rice to dry in the sun.

At last we arrived in Nara—the city of memories!—once with a population of 250,000, now only a tenth of that size; once the seat of Nippon's imperial family, now the abiding place of Buddhist priests and ancient idols and sacred deer!

Scarcely a square from the station, in the heart of the business section of the city, what should come trotting calmly up to us but two handsome deer!

"Look, look, auntie!" called Jacky, "Did you ever see anything to beat this?"

WORHIP AT THE GRAVE

We bought half a cent's worth of bean cakes, which the deer ate greedily out of our hands. This was our first experience with the deer of Nara. Later, when we found the hills, the paths and the Temple grounds fairly swarming with them; when we had all we could do to keep the sacred animals from robbing us of anything eatable which we might happen to be carrying, we decided that they were not quite so delightful after all.

"In fact," confessed Jacky, "I've seen all the deer I want to see."

"Then," said the friend who was showing us around, "perhaps you will sympathize with the poor fellow whose grave I shall now show you.

"This poor man one day sat down under this tree to rest from his morning's work and eat the luncheon he had brought with him. But no sooner did the deer catch sight of it than they began to crowd around him and try to get a nibble at it. You know how hard they can push and how they must have annoyed this hungry man. Well, presently he lost patience, and picking up a small stone he threw it at one of the deer and unfortunately killed it. Alas! for the poor man, for the deer were held sacred, and to kill one meant death for the murderer.

"So the people stoned the man then and there, and here under this pile of stones he lies. But the people later quite changed their minds about the poor fellow, and they set up a stone in front of the grave, and here they come to worship for the good of his soul."

"H'm! he paid dearly for that deer," commented Jacky.

Billy's Sunday Walk

LITTLE BILLY was lost.

Nurse thought mother was reading Bible stories to him, as she did every Sunday afternoon; while mother, who was lying down, fancied her 3-year-old son was in the kitchen helping cook get dinner.

It was not until nurse Mary called Billy to dress him for the evening, and he did not answer, that any one really began to worry.

Now, Billy was a very mischievous little fellow, and at first nurse thought he was only up to some of his pranks. She ran to the balcony where a few days before he had been found trying to climb down the grape arbor, but Billy was not there. Nor was he to be found in the play room, nor tearing out the Christmas toys in the attic closet.

Indeed, it soon was evident that Billy was not in the house or yard.

Nor had any of the neighbors seen him.

His chum, next door, who was Billy's companion in keeping the neighborhood stirred up, was sitting on the step in all the misery of his Sunday clothes and good behavior.

"No," Ted said, "Bill ain't here. The last time I saw him he was goin' in to get a peach for him and me, but he ain't come back. Maybe he's lost! Maybe the gypsies have stolen him." And Ted grinned in pleasurable excitement.

"Oh, Ted, how can you suggest such dreadful things?" said Mrs. Taylor, Billy's mother. "He can't be lost! Why, he was here only an hour ago."

But Billy was lost, as the family soon learned to their horror.

Such a scurrying time followed!

Father went up street and nurse down. Billy's sisters and brother flew from house to house, asking, "Have you seen Billy anywhere? He's lost!"

But no one had.

As for mother, who was too sick to join the search, she was so frightened she could only pray that nothing might happen to her little son.

For two long hours Billy could not be found.

At last, as father was walking down to the Mayor's office, to ask the police to help hunt, he heard a little voice call "Papa."

There was Billy carrying a big cane and holding the hand of one of Uncle Jack's friends.

Such a dirty Billy as he was; and, oh, how tired! His long light curls, which mother hated to cut, were a tangled mass; his Scotch cap had fallen down on his neck; his white kilt suit was torn and draggled. As for his face, it was so streaked and grimy one could scarcely tell there was a little white boy underneath.

"Why, Billy Taylor! where have you been?" cried papa. "You have worried your mother terribly."

"I was just takin' a walk," replied Billy, "and this gemplemun said he'd take one too, if I'd let him come along, so I said he might.

The gentleman laughed.

"Mr. Taylor, I saw this young man down at the railroad station about to climb a freight car to be a brakeman. As he seemed rather young for his job I investigated and recognized him from this cane of his Uncle Jack's. We are taking a stroll now to find some ice cream. Won't you join us?"

"No, I thank you, and I fear Billy must do without his ice cream, as his mother is terribly worried. Thank this kind friend, Billy, for bringing you home when you were lost."

"Why, Father Taylor, I wasn't lost a bit! I was just takin' a walk and then I went to see the cars."

"All right, Billy, only don't do it again. Your mother and I thought you were lost, even if you were not—and we cannot spare our boy just yet. Come, now, run along and tell mother you are found. Excuse me, you were not lost! Well, just fly home and shout, 'Here I am, mother!' She will think that the finest news she ever heard."

When Billy Was Found

Paper Tree

MANY girls enjoy making paper dolls' houses out of boxes, and today Polly Evans will tell you how to make cunning trees, to have your house in a nice shady grove.

Fold in two, lengthwise, a piece of green paper about four inches wide and fourteen inches long. Cut this paper very regularly through the fold as

Then roll the band between the thumb and finger as in figure 2 until the cut paper forms a large mass. When it is as tight as it will go, fasten together the tube part with a little paste, and make the paper puff out by running the finger between each strip or paper ring. Stick the tube in the end of a flat mustard cork in which a hole has been cut, or you can use a large spool.

Paint the tube brown for the trunk of the tree, and if you like, you can color the cork to make it look like one of the great standards in which evergreen trees are now often set.

By making the paper larger or smaller you can have big trees or tiny saplings.

A VERY GOOD REASON

GRACE'S sister had just told her the moon was made of green cheese.

Much excited, the little girl ran to her grandfather to discover the truth of this statement, for Sister Bess was a great tease.

"Grandfather," she asked, "is the moon really, truly made of green cheese?"

"My dear," replied grandfather, "look it up for yourself in the first chapter of Genesis, and then tell me what you think about it?"

Before long, Grace came rushing back.

"Of course, it isn't, grandfather. Bess was just telling a naughty story, because the cows weren't made till after the moon."

A YOUNG FINANCIER

FOUR-YEAR-OLD James was, unfortunately, very much of a coward.

He was afraid of his shadow, never liked to be alone in the dark, and really suffered when he had to go anywhere alone.

This trait of his little son so worried his father that he tried very hard to make the child overcome it.

One night Mr. Parsons said: "James, I will give you ten cents if you go up the front stairs and down the back by yourself."

At first James demurred, but finally started off on a run and in a very few minutes was in the library once again.

"No, no, James," said his father, "that will never do. Brave boys don't run from the dark. Suppose you try it again."

This time the child went more slowly, though evidently much frightened.

"Since father's boy was so brave," said Mr. Parsons, "here is a quarter for him."

Then, to test the child, he pulled out a nickel, saying: "Jim, perhaps you would rather have this money instead of the other."

"All right," replied James, willingly handing back his first reward.

"Why, James, dear," exclaimed his mother, "don't you know twenty-five cents is more than five?"

"Course I do," answered James, "but I can spend the five cents, and I'd have to put the quarter in my bank!"

A HIGHER OPINION

MOTHER, mayn't I have a dog?" pleaded 6-year-old Anna D——.

"No, dear, mother cannot let you have a dog. There is no room for one in a city."

"Then, mother, can't I have a pretty little kitten? Please say yes!"

"I'm afraid not, Anna, for kittens often bring disease to little girls."

The next day Anna's mother took her to the doctor's.

"Doctor," said the child, "my mother won't let me have a kittie. She says they are not healthy. Won't you let me have one?"

"Well, I would not have one, Anna, if I were you. Kittens breed disease. I have a little girl now sick with diphtheria, and her mamma thinks she got it from her kitten."

That evening when Anna, much disgusted, told her father of the doctor's opinion, she asked: "Father, do you think a specialist would say that?"

VERY LITERAL

ONE day in school Miss Margaret gave her pupils a cylinder to draw, setting it high above them, so they could get a lesson in perspective.

When the drawings were finished, Miss Margaret found on small Valentine's paper a neatly drawn cylinder, but beneath it a remarkable looking object of scratchy lines resembling a centipede.

"Why, Valentine," remonstrated his teacher, "how could you spoil that nice drawing by all those ugly marks?"

"Well, Miss Margaret," answered the child reproachfully, "you told me to draw the cylinder above the level of the eye—and that's the eye!"

Mary's Excuse.

Three-year-old Mary one morning at the table bent her little head over her glass of water to take a drink.

"Why, Mary, dear," said mother, "what are you doing? Don't you know polite little girls always lift their glasses to drink, and do not lap up the water like a bow-wow or pussy cat?"

"'Scuse me, mother, but I'm drinking the fulness out."

Better Than Fancy Work.

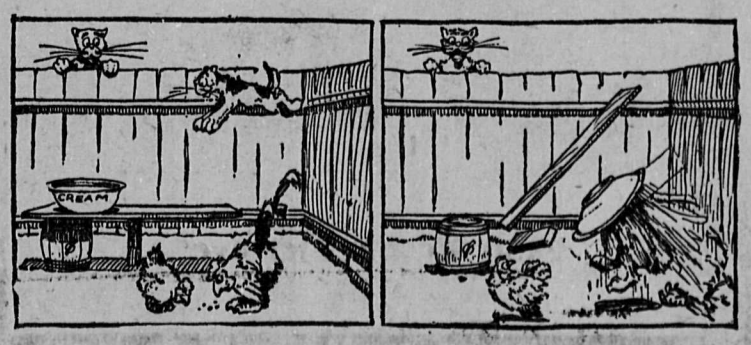
"Mother," said little Susanna, "can Mary and Sally and I go out in the boat and take a book to read?"

"Why, yes, dear," replied her mother, "but if I were you I'd take some fancy work."

"Mother, we are going to take some needles and take splinters out of our feet!"

Pussy's Surprise

"You old slow coach,"
Did Mistress Puss
To ancient Tabby cry.
"You think you'll get that nice cream first;
But Mistress Puss
Had yet to find
That there is many a slip
To make the fullest cup go dry
E'er it has reached the lip.



Ha! ha! I'm far too spry;
Now, as you watch me lap it up,
Don't fret your soul in strife;
Remember, to the young belong
The good things of this life."

"Ho! ho!" grinned ancient Tabby;
"My sputtering pussy, learn,
Though to the young should go life's cream,
The tables sometimes turn!"

To Apply Insertion

WE ARE beginning to make up our pretty summer goods, if we are wise, and probably we will be using a good deal of lace insertion. A quick, neat, easy way to apply it is as follows: Stitch the insertion to the material on both sides without cutting goods. When this is done, turn and slit the material down through the middle, being careful not to cut the lace. Turn back close to the stitching and press down tight, or baste, if necessary. Stitch again right over first stitching, and then trim away material close. Some very neat people hem down this material instead of cutting it away, but, when finished, the garment does not look nearly so neat as when cut close, and is no more secure.

Best Results From Whalebone

IN this day of many imitations genuine whalebone is by no means in common use. No substitute, however, is quite so durable or so satisfactory. To get the best results the bone should be cut into the required lengths and soaked for an hour before using. It will then be pliable and easily handled, and if the ends are shaved with a sharp knife they can be forced into the casing in a way to mean perfect smoothness, while the ends will show no ugly mark and can be quite easily sewed into position, as the needle will pass through the bone without resistance.

The October number of the "Canadian Pictorial" contains many high class illustrations of current events, and the reading matter is entertaining and informing. The terrible disaster near Quebec, in which more than three score and ten men lost their lives, is strikingly illustrated. The stirring events in Morocco have made specially interesting two pages illustrating the Sultan's army and navy. A page showing Britain's naval power as demonstrated in a review which brought out 85,000 officers and men who, with their vessels, made twenty miles of frowning might. The riots in Belfast, the great pageants in England, and other current events are depicted.
