VANCOUVER'S BIG STRIKE WAS ENDED YESTERDAY

KILLED IN THE DARK HANDCAR MET ENGINE

Tom Yilcarka Paid Heavy Penalty for a Hurried Trip to Rupert Taken Without Permission From Section Gang Camp at Mile 21

Brought into the city badly injured about the head soon after midnight Tom Yilcarka, 40 years of age, died in the General Hospital this morning at dawn. His injuries were caused in tragic manner in the gathering darkness last night, when a balast train coming into Rupert crashed into the hand car on which Yilcarka and two companions were hurrying out to their section camp at Mile 21.

Stole Trip to Town

Without permission the little party of men had planned to make a trip into the city from the camp where the sec ion gang was at work. They took the hand car, and hurried into Rupert after Close on midnight they started out on the return journey propelling the car as hard as possible in order to make good time back to camp. Last night was darker than usual at this time of year owing to a haze over the sky, and either because of this, or because they were not paying proper attention, the men failed to see or hear the approach of the ballast train. The train was not travelling particularly fast, but the hand car hard driven, met the engine full tilt.

Party Flung Headlong

With the crash the handcar was shattered and the party was flung headlong to the track. By a sheer miracle only Yilcarka was injured. He was struck heavily upon the head, his skull being fractured. Hurried at top seped into the city, he was admitted to the General Hospital at 12.40 a.m. Dr. Eggert was in attendance, and everything possible was done for him, but he died at 3.45 a.m. Messrs. Hayner Bros. inquest will be opened at 7.30 p.m. in the police court room by Government Agent McMullin.

GEO. LEEK ARRIVES TODAY

Expected by the S.S. Princess May this Afternoon. Wireless Message Made Certain He was on Board.

Fresh from his great experiences at the Coronation of King George V. George Leek will return to Prince Rupert this afternoon by the Princess May. Enquiries sent by wireless from his office in the city where business awaits him, made it certain that he is amongst the May's passengers. George did not make any statement regarding the Coronation, or the appearance of the Royal sharer of his historical first name, by the medium of the Marconigram, and his coming will be eagerly awaited by those "anxious to know."

WORK TO START AT ONCE ON THE MORSE CREEK DAM

City Council's Inspection of the Sources of Water Supply Took Place Yesterday---All the Aldermen but Douglas and Kerr Stayed Away---Faithful Douglas Stayed With the Job from Start to Finish---Work Will be Rushed on a Ten Million Gallon Dam

If downright toilsome exertion under the broiling sun means anything, then the Mayor and at least two members of the city council mean business in the matter of the proposed augmentation of the present city water supply from the dams at Morse Creek. With the City Engineer yesterday the Mayor, Alderman Kerr and Alderman Douglas made an inspection trip from the Morse Creek dams round the whole drainage area tapped by Morse Creek, and thereby Hays Creek along the base of Mr. Oldfield to the Hays Creek dam and pumping station. A representative of each of the city newspapers accompanied the party on the invitation of the Mayor.

Cases of Cold Feet

All the members of the city council who could come were invited to join the party. The City Engineer was particularly anxious that Alderman Newton should be with them as Alderman Newton's expressions of opinion sometimes betray the fact that he gets his information at second-hand and therefore less accurately. The Mayor was particularly anxious that Alderman Hilditch should come, and indeed that all the aldermen in town should make the trip. But when the roll was called in the City Hall sad gaps were evident in the ranks.

The Delinquents

Alderman Newton sent word that he could not come, but sent a minion with a notebook; Alderman Clayton was unable to come, other aldermen are absent from town, and as for Alderman Hilditch, he reached the muster place at the City Hall all right but on hearing the direction and extent of the trip flatly refused to have anything to do with it in such hot weather. His was a bad case of cold feet.

Martyrs to Duty

The Mayor, the City Engineer, Alderman Douglas, staunch and sturdy Sancho Panza of the council, and the newspapermen only set out from the City Hall, but on Third avenue at Seventh street the stalwart form of Alderman Kerr was seen on Borden street and in answer to a stentorian hail from Alderman Douglas he descended the steep and joined the excursion.

Visited the Dams

Straight out to the Morse Creek dams the City Engineer led the party. After tramping the ties on the Morse Railway Loop, and clambering over numerous stumps, the Mayor and his two trusties reached the point just opposite the end of Second avenue where the City Engineer proposes to place the pumping station. Here only a very short length of extra pipe is required to carry the water into the city mains. Next the party visited the first dam. The City Engineer showed the party how with small outlay the dam can be put in shape to hold back ten million gallons of water. When in use before, this dam stored as much easily, and the creek was never known to go dry. A steady flow of water is coming in now in spite of the drought, and tasted by all members of the party, it was found cool and sweet.

Hard Travelling

Arduous travelling now became necessary. The City Engineer led the way to the upper dam, which may not require to be used, as the power one can be made to hold so much water. Here again the water was found good and plentiful. Right on now over muskeg, stumps, little ravines, and fallen logs went the party, outlining the whole drainage area, and heading for another abundantly flowing creek which can be turned into the dam. The party made heavy going of it now under the broiling sun. Now the Mayor would mount a huge stump and leap energetically to the next. Next the whole party would be doing a tight rope stunt along a log. Magnificently, Alderman Douglas stuck to the trail. He mounted mighty logs, and toboganned down the other side of them. He balanced himself on airy pinnacles of pine roots, and floated in butterfly fashion from them to the soft grass patches below. The Mayor made the first tumble, but his little acrobatic turn was less spectacular than that of Alderman Douglas a moment afterwards. For an instant the redoubtable Douglas loomed chubbily on the horizon. In a second only his feet frantically gesticulating, broke the skyline. It was the Mayor who sprang to his rescue, and set him again on his way rejoicing. Alderman Kerr is husky, and in training for the bush any way. He made good time all the way.

Well Parched Party

Many a well loaded blueberry sprig tempted the mayoral procession to loiter by the way. But on pressed the party growing thirstier and thirstier till the City Engineer led them to the shadiest and coolest creek of all, right over below the far end of Park avenue, near the cemetery site which was located with interest by the Mayor. The parched party slaked its sevenfold thirst with ice cold, and ice clear water here, and the City Engineer explained to the Mayor that this creek which flows abundantly, may by an inexpensive dam be diverted either into the Hays Creek or the Morse Creek dam. This creek is fed by the melting snows on Mt. Oldfield, and at present outflows near Fairview.

On to Hays Creek

Still making his steady pace the City Engineer strode on leading the party by the corner of Omineca and Kootenay avenues along the banks of Hays Creek, over the huge log strewn flats where Summer and Winter streets are to be some day, and so towards the Hays Creek dam in the woods behind Comox avenue, from which the present pumped water supply for the city is drawn. The heaviest travelling of all was experienced here. The City Engineer led on unconcernedly. The rest followed to the best of their ability, Alderman Douglas finding the twiningly affectionate atten-

PICNIC PARTY HAD GOOD TIME AT METLAKATLA BAR

Three Launch Loads of Young People Travelled Across the Harbor Last Night and Had Supper on the Beach—Rambled in the Bush and Arrived Home by Early Morning

Nearly a hundred young people went in three launches last night for a picnic party with the Presbyterian Young Peoples' Society to Metlakatla bar, and had a very good time. The advance guard, composed of the more active spirits among the ladies, left the wharf at 4.30. By the time the main party arrived, a couple of hours behind, the tea was cooking on the camp fire, and arrangements completed for supper on the beach.

After supper, when everybody had the requisite smile, photographs were taken of the party. In groups—groups of two for the most part—the young people set off for a scramble through the woods to visit the flowers and quietude of Metlakatla. They descended on the quiet reserve with yells and shouts like a band of Indians. Many of the ladies bore away trophies in the form of floral bouquest.

One belated group of half a dozen people, missed their boat at the wharf and spent from ten till eleven o'clock in scrambling through the bush in the near-darkness to reach the last launch at the picnic grounds. The moon was rising above the mountains early this morning, just as the last launch arrived back at the wharf. The outing over the harbor in the cool evening was a thoroughly enjoyable one.

APPOINT WATER MAN

Duties. to Attend to Gates During Fire Outbreaks and Sewer Sluicing.

City Engineer Davis has approached the Mayor and council to have a man appointed during the drought to attend to the working of the sluice gates affecting the water supply in case of fire. Colonel Davis recommends James Parks for the position. He proposes to have this attendant stationed at the fire hall, and to use him for a couple of days during the week to look after sewer flushing, etc. The city council through the Mayor and fire and water committees have put this recommendation into effect today.

Messrs. Strange and Dagrall who have been for a long time well known and efficient contractors in this city are leaving tomorrow on an important two years' job at Victoria. They are not vacating the city altogether but will return occasionally to attend to their affairs here probably about Christmas for the first occasion.

'OLD MAID' MAKES RECORD CATCH

Largest Haul of Fine Halibut Ever Brought into Rupert by a Vessel Her Size.

This morning the staunch little gasoline schooner "Old Maid" familiar as the craft which weathered very heavy seas not so long ago through masterly seamanship, has arrived in Prince Rupert with a new record to her credit.

She stole quietly into harbor loaded down to the limit of seaworthiness with magnificent halibut, the largest and luckiest catch ever yet made on the Prince Rupert halibut banks, for a boat of the "Old Maid's" size. The catch was made by the well aimed exertions of the schooner's crew under Captain Dan Ross master of the vessel, and was helped to its success by the splendid weather conditions.

News of this kind augurs well for the prospects of Prince Rupert as a fishing centre, and seaport. The wealth of the halibut banks is yet to be fully realised by the citizens, and means a tremendous lot to Prince Rupert.

Almost a Comic Opera Battle at Montreal—German Officer Criticised the Canadian Cruiser Niobe—Took a Full Set of Admirals, Consuls and Diplomats to Avenge the Slight

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Montreal, July 20.—Canada has narrowly e caped being engaged in a grave national cause celebre, owing to the audacious and offensive criticisms which the sub commander of the German cruiser Bremen has passed upon the Canadian cruiser Niobe.

The Bremen is at present visiting at Montreal, and the sub commander passed public criticism upon the Canadian Navy, and jeered at the Niobe saying she was unfit for war.

Ottawa was at once notified of the affront, and Admiral Kingsmill issued a statement. It is said that war was threatened until the German consul expressed his regret in writing at the grave breach of etiquette of the German sub-commander.

Admiral Kingsmill in another statement has stated that the Niobe was not intended for use as a warship, but as a training ship to train Canadian boys for service in the Canadian navy which Canada will build up.

SMALL FIRES WERE QUENCHED

City had Good Luck Yesterday Afternoon—Citizens Warned Again to be Extra Careful.

Prince Rupert's good fortune in respect to outbreaks of fire this dry spell continues. Yesterday afternoon two small outbreaks were checked by prompt action. The first was in a hotel on Fraser street beyond Seventh. Here an oil lamp fell over, and the alarm was given the brigade. But almost in the same moment the residents managed to get the fire out.

The other fire was a stump blaze that got out of control opposite to the Knox Hotel. This was quelled by the Fire Department after some hard work. Water was scarce there, and in the turn out to the scene the automobile was delayed by an unfinished street corner. The poor red devil came a cropper and got scratched, to the great annoyance of the Fire Chief and chauffeur. Fortunately for Prince Rupert's business section, the city's good luck, and the citizens' prompt energy prevented either of yesterday's outbreaks from spreading.

Again, however, must be emphatically sounded the warning to all to be extra careful of fire risks during the hot spell. It is unnecessary to enrlage upon the situation. We all know it.

DAILY EDITION. THURSDAY, JULY 20

AN ENGINEERING VIEW OF THE RECIPROCITY AGREEMENT

The Engineering News, one of the leading engineering journals in the United States has an interesting editorial in its issue of July 13th, on the proposed reciprocity agreement from an engineering standpoint. As the headquarters for immense engineering development in the future, Prince Rupert should be much interested in the opinions of an engineering authority upon the subject. The article in part says:

"Engineering News is not a forum for the discussion of questions purely political in character. The question of reciprocal trade relations between Canada and the United States, however, is one of economics, of engineering, of transportation and of manufacturing industry more than it is (or rather should be) a question of politics.

"In all the discussion concerning reciprocity which has taken place, nothing has been said concerning the geographical and topographical conditions which make trade between the different parts of Canada and the parts of the United States adjacent to them particularly easy and advantageous and trade of the different parts of Canada with each other exceedingly costly.

"Few people in the United States realize the extent to which topographical conditions divide the Canadian nation into separate parts, remote from each other, each of which finds its natural commercial relations with the part of the United States immediately south of it, rather than with other portions of the Dominion."

After pointing out the geographical divisions between the Maritime Provinces and the Middle Provinces, and the geographical links between the Maritime Provinces and New England, and the middle provinces and the middle states, the writer goes on to say:

"Crossing over to the Pacific Coast, there is a narrow belt of territory lying to the west of the Rocky Mountains which is separated from the Plains district by nearly 1,500 miles. Its natural trade is with the districts of Washington and Oregon, lying only a short distance to the south.

"If natural economic laws had been allowed to work unhindered, and if no higher tariff walls had been erected between Canada and the United States than those which existed at the middle of the last century, an enormous trade, vastly profitable to both countries, would have grown up between each of these various sections of Canada and that section of the United States immediately adjacent. To a considerable extent this natural growth has been prevented by the tariff policy which the United States has adhered to ever since the Civil War.

"With these natural trade channels thus obstructed by tariff walls, the Canadians have bravely made the best of the situation and have undertaken the creation of great national highways, both by rail and by water between the East and West. The Canadian policy of government sudsidies to railways and great expenditure upon waterways has been practically forced upon the country through the artificial barriers erected across the natural channels of trade.

"Great credit is due to the Canadian Government and to Canadian engineers for the work they have done in overcoming these natural obstacles; but no skill of the engineer, and no amount of investment by capitalists or by the government can make an artificial trade route the equal of a natural one. The development of Canada, commercial, industrial and agricultural, can be fostered in no other way so much as by opening the natural channels of trade and allowing commerce to flow in them without restriction.

"It is true that the present reciprocity treaty does not give complete freedom of trade between the two countries; but it is a long step in that direction, and with public experience of the benefits of such commercial exchange, there is little doubt that popular sentiment will in no long time favor the tearing away of the rest of the tariff barriers.

"There is no more reason to doubt that the United States as well as Canada would benefit by such an extension of the field of trade than there is to doubt that it is a benefit to have no tariff barrier to obstruct trade between New England and the Middle States, or between Illinois and Iowa, or between the cotton growers of the South and the textile mills of the North.

"In the long run manufactures will develop in Canada to a vast extent, even if absolute free trade is established with the United States. Under modern conditions, manufacturing industry goes where a cheap and reliable labor supply is obtainable, where climatic conditions are favorable, where raw materials are convenient of access, where transportation facilities are good. Canada's enormous water power, its advantages of water transportation by the Great Lakes and the St. Lawrence River, its wealth of natural resources in forests, minerals and agricultural products, and its supply of intelligent labor ensure a great future for the Canadian manufacturing industry, regardless of United States competition.

A REMINISCENCE OF SHERLOCK HOLMES

THE ADVENTURE OF THE DEVIL'S FOOT

BY ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE

Copyright, 1911, by the Century Syndicate

Synopsis

Brenda Tregennis is found dead in her chair at her home in Cornwall, stricken dead with horror. Her two brothers, Owen and George are found insane from horror. What has caused it? The remaining brother Mortimer Tregennis calls in Sherlock Holmes to investigate "the Cornish Horror?' Holmes questions Mortimer Tregennis closely about the details of the affair, but gets little help. So, in compnny with Dr. Watson he proceeds to the scene of tragedy.

"It won't do, Watson!" said he, with a laugh. "Let us walk along the cliffs togther and search for flint arrows. We are more likely to find them than clues to this problem. To let the brain work within sufficient material is like racing an engine. It racks itself to pieces. The sea air, sunshine, and patience, Watson—all else will come.

"Now, let us calmly define our position, Watson," he continued, as we skirted the cliffs together. "Let us get a firm grip of the very little which we do know, so that when fresh facts arise we may be ready to fit them into their places. I take it, in the first place, that neither of us is prepared to admit diabolical intrusions into the affairs of men. Let us begin by ruling that entirely out of our minds. Very good. There remain three persons who have been grievously stricken by some conscious or unconscious human agency. That is firm ground. Now, when did this occur? Evidently, assuming his narrative to be true, it was immediately after Mr. Mortimer Tregennis had left the room. That is a very important point. The presumption is that it was within a few minutes afterwards. The cards still lay upon the table. It was already past their usual hour for bed. Yet they had not changed their position. I repeat, then, that the occurrence was immediately after his departure, and not later than eleven o'clock last night.

"Our next obvious step is to check, so far as we can, the movements of Mortimer Tregennis after he left the room. In this there is no difficulty, and they seem to be above suspicion. Knowing my methods as you do, you were, of course, conscious of the somewhat clumsy waterpot expedient by which I obtained a clearer impress of his foot than might otherwise have been possible. The wet, sandy path took it admirably. Last night was also wet, you will remember, and it was not difficult—having obtained a sample print—to pick out his track among others and to follow his movements. He appears to have walked away swiftly in the direction of the vicarage.

"If then, Mortimer Tregennis disappeared from the scene, and yet some outside person affected the card-players, how can we reconstruct that person, and how was such an impression of horror conveyed? Mrs. Porter may be eliminated. She is evidently harmless. Is there any evidence that someone crept up to the garden window and in some manner produced so terrific an effect that he drove those who saw it out of their senses? The only suggestion in this direction comes from Mortimer Tregennis himself, who says that his brother spoke about some movement in the garden. That is certainly remarkable, as the night was rainy, cloudy, and dark. Anyone who had the design to alarm these people would be compelled to place his very face against the glass before he could be seen. There is a three-foot flower border outside this window, but no indication of a footmark. It is difficult to imagine, then, how an outsider could have made so terrible an impression upon the company, nor have we found any motive for so strange and elaborate at attempt. You perceive our difficulties, Wat on?"

"They are only too clear," I answered, with conviction.

"And yet, with a little more material, we may prove that they are not insurmountable," said Holmes. "I fancy that among your extensive archives, Watson, you may find some which were nearly as obscure. Meanwhile, we shall put the case aside until more accurate data are available, and devote the morning to the pursuit of neolithic man."

AN OLD-TIME MARRIAGE RHYME

January
Marry when the year is new,
Always loving, kind and true.
February
When February birds do mate,
You may wed, nor dread your fate.
March
If you marry when March winds blow,
Joy and sorrow both you'll know.
April
Marry in April when you can,
Joy for maiden and for man.
May
Marry in the month of May,
You will surely rue the day.
June
Marry when the June roses blow,
Over land and sea you'll go.
July
They who in July do wed,
Must labor always for their bed.
August
All who wed in August be
Many a change are sure to see.
September
Marry in September's shine,
Your living will be rich and fine.
October
If in October you do marry,
Love will come, but riches tarry.
November
If you wed in bleak November
Only joy will come, remember.
December
When December's snows fall fast,
If you marry, love will last.

From far-off Buenos Ayres comes the rumor that chess fans in that town have raised a purse—"fund" they call it—of $9000 to bring Dr. Emanuel Lasker and J. R. Capablanca together for the chess championship of the world. Tex Rickard, the premier promoter of mining securities and prize fights, is now in the Argentine Republic, and some believe that he is managing the proposed chess match.

DEVOTED PRINCIPALLY TO THE INTERESTS OF WOMEN

This is a little section of the paper, which from day to day will be devoted to subjects of special interest to women. Any and all of the ladies of Prince Rupert are invited to contribute to its columns, and to take part in its discussions. Suggestions and criticisms are invited by the editor. The hope is expressed that "The Cosy Corner" will fill a social need.

WHY DID SHE JILT HIM?

Lady Constance Folljambe Provides London with a Real Sensation.

Lady Constance Folljambe, daughter of the first Earl of Liverpool and half-sister of the present earl, who is comptroller of King George's household, has given England a real sensation.

She jilted a middle-aged preacher as he waited for her at the altar, while a big and fashionable crowd gathered in the church for the wedding. Rev. H. A. Hawkins, the would-be-bridegroom, is a fashionable clergyman of the Church of England. Lady Constance is 26 and Mr. Hawkins is 20 years her senior. Where Lady Constance now is only her relatives know. She has flown. It is believed she fled to the continent, when she left the Earl of Liverpool's house. Rev. Mr. Hawkins, who was deeply humiliated, hurried away from London.

A big crowd of society people filled St. Peter's church, Eaton Square, the fashionable marriage church of London, for the ceremony. On account of her brother's position near the King, as well as her own popularity in society, Lady Constance's wedding was to have been one of the events of the season. The organist played a voluntary and then waited. Twelve o'clock passed; at 12.12 society people began looking back toward the doors. At 12.20 they murmured and wondered and questions passed from pew to pew, but the bridegroom that was not to be felt no anxiety. He knew brides take a long time to dress.

The real scene of excitement at this time was in the home of the bride-elect at 44 Grosvenor Gardens, overlooking the grounds of Buckingham Palace. Bridesmaids and pages had arrived, and the dowager countess was dressed. Carriages waited in the street. Lady Susan Liverpool, hysterical with surprise and distress, called all the servants and questioned them.

When one o'clock came with no bride, the Earl of Liverpool could bear the annoyance no longer and quietly sent to enquire the cause of the delay. Lady Susan Liverpool had just learned all that was known. In broken gasps the mother told the news that had been given her by her daughter's maid.

"Lady Constance went out just before 10 o'clock, saying she had forgotten to buy something and she has not yet returned."

The Earl of Liverpool, pale and agitated, went to the vestry to break the news to the distressed bridegroom and, leading him out by the vestry entrance drove away with him to Grosvenor Gardens. Mr. Hawkins had to be carried to the carriage.

The King was represented at the church and it was to his Majesty's representative that the earl hastily communicated what the others. Later the earl received a telegram from Lady Constance saying: "I am quite safe. I changed my mind and do not wish to be married. I left London by train at noon."

Rev. Mr. Hawkins has gone into retirement and denies himself to interviewers. The home of the Earl of Liverpool, near Buckingham Palace, is the object of much interest to throngs of shop girls and others, who amuse themselves by singing "Waiting at the Church" in front of the place.

Here's a story of how Jim Delahanty, Detroit's second baseman, was cured of umpire baiting. After Del had had several run-ins with the officials President Johnson called the Detroit man on the carpet. "Mr. Delahanty," said Ban, "the time is not far off, I'm afraid, when you and the American League will have to part company. I'm not going to spend much time arguing with you, but I want to tell you one thing. The next time you have any trouble with any of my umpires you will have played your last game on this circuit. You'll be wise to pay close attention to this. I mean what I say." Jimmy has been very quiet ever since, and perhaps will continue to remain so.

At the baseball tournament at New Liskeard on Dominion Day Archie Burton, the Barrie twirler, again demonstrated the fact that he is the best pitcher that has ever appeared in Temiskaming. New Liskeard played Cobalt in the morning, the Cobalt team getting three runs off the local pitcher, who was then removed to make room for Burton. The latter commenced a series of strike-outs, which soon subdued the Cobalters, they not being able to secure another run, and during the remaining six innings of the game Burton struck out eleven players. New Liskeard batters succeeded in making six runs during the game, winning by 6 to 3.

Next day New Liskeard had to line up against Haileybury, who had an imported battery from the Midland League. Burton again pitched for New Liskeard, and during the game fanned out sixteen Hailebury batters, New Liskeard again winning by 3 to 1. During the two games, sixteen innings in all, only one run was made off Burton's delivery, while he fanned twenty-seven batters. Surely this stamps Archie Burton as one of the very best pitchers in the Ontario leagues. Big league scouts should see Burton perform of they are looking for promising material for their respective teams.

The President has known Cobb for several years and always remembered that he hails from Augusta, Ga., where Mr. Taft has spent many weeks in vacation time.

"Hello, Ty," said the President. "How's my fellow citizen?"

"Fine and dandy, Bill!" replied Cobb, extending his hand.

Both laughed heartily.

PRINCE RUPERT ASK UNCLE JERRY OPPORTUNITIES

RUPERT NOW HAS LIVE BRANCH OF THE R.S.P.C.A.

President, Office Bearers and Executive Committee Appointed at Meeting Last Night—Objects of Society Explained by H. A. Robinson

Prince Rupert's own branch of the R. S. P. C. A. has been established in renewed activity. At the meeting in the police court room held last night, the Mayor presided, and was elected Honorary President. Dr. Reddie was elected president, and W. H. Vickers vice president. Mr. Neil McKay, occupies the position of secretary, and an executive committee consisting of the following members was appointed: Messrs. W. E. Fisher, M. Wells, Captain Hamar, Frank Kelly W. W. Lawson, C. C. Perry and J. S. Dade.

Protection Not Prosecution

Mr. H. A. Robinson, Inspector of the Society for the whole Province, was present and spoke of the objects of the organisation. The idea is chiefly to protect the dumb animals, rather than to convict persons guilty of cruelty to them. Mr. Robinson suggested that a prize might be offered at school for essays relating to kindness to animals to instil the principles of the society into the children's minds.

Choose Advisory Board

The committee will choose an advisory board on the lines of the Vancouver organisation, and the rules and constitution of the Vancouver society branch will apply to Prince Rupert for the most part. All members of the society are invested with powers as peace officers, and all constables of the city polcie force are similarly peace officers for the purposes of the society by virtue of their office.

Next Wednesday the committee will meet to attend to the rest of the details of organisation, and a general meeting of the society will be held on the third Tuesday of each month. Last night's attendance was a very good one all things considered.

BUILDING BIG NEW STEAMER

Ramona is Back on Seattle, Rupert and Alaska Run, but is Too Small for Increasing Traffic.

Today the well known Pacific Coas Company S.S. Ramona is discharging mixed frieght at the wharf including a latge number of lengths of sewer pipe. The Ramona is quite a popular boat, and in the early Rupert days did a brisk business. She is still doing as much as her accommodation can comfortably undertake, and is no mean steamer, but the rapid increase in the passenger traffic to Alaska is so great that the company have now made arrangements to build a powerful new steamer specially for this run. The name of the boat has not yet been fixed, but it is known that she w ll be a large as the State of Cal fornia, and equipped in the finest modern style for comfort, speed and safety. The S.S. Delhi is taking a sha e of the Ramona's work now but is keeping the outside route not touching Ruper .

ENDED IN SMOKE

But was Very Nearly a Nasty Accident. Case of Powder and Steel.

Steel was used very riskily by a powderman in the employ of Messrs. McInnis and Kelly yesterday with the result that about one and a half boxes of dynamite went off prematurely in the shot hole, and the reckless powderman was very nearly wiped off the face of the earth. He had the most extraordinary luck, however, for though smothered with smoke, dazed with the shock, and spattered with small stones and gravel, he picked himself up and after a drink of brandy neat, was able to get back to work again. Mr. McInnis by good fortune, too, had just taken the gang of men off the neighborhood of the sho hole, to alter track some distance away. He severely reprimanded the powderman who was as black as the ac of spades and smelt as sulphurous as the Earl of —— well, you know where. All's well that ends well, especially if it's a case of monkeying with powder. (Hence the term powder monkey—what?)

A Rocky Road Ahead for Poor Printing

Every bit of good printing done for your competitor makes the poor printing - or the ordinary printing—which you are "using" because you have it, more certainly and inevitably harmful to your business.

For this is the day and the hour and the vogue of distinctive, good printing.—And it does, usually, cost somewhat more of course—in "first cost." After that it doesn't "cost"—it "pays." : :

tions of the thorny creepers there rather conducive to profanity in a man who has come out lightly clad below the belt. But the Hays Creek dam was reached without mishap, and here the party again imbibed freely. Alderman Douglas seemed likely to drink in the whole municipal water supply, but just when the Mayor was about to interfere in the interests of the citizens, the thirsty alderman raised his head and the water level in the dam ceased to sink.

Visited Pumping Station

With a visit to the pumping station the trip concluded. On the way there along the pipe line, just at the point where the bush trail gives place to a certain plank pathway, Alderman Douglas mysteriously disappeared. Half way to the pumping station he was missed by the Mayor, and the hue and cry was at once raised to discover him. Shouts loud and long at length resulted in a far heard haloo in the familiar Douglas accent, from the deepest recesses of the bush. Presently the indefatigable alderman appeared and in answer to the earnest enquiries of the Mayor, explained for the benefit of press and public that he had kept to the line of the creek for coolness' sake, and had not gone out into the open where the afternoon sun broiled down. He was forgiven, and piloted to the pumping station where in limpid pipe-drawn Hays Creek water the party celebrated the finish of the most strenuous bit of work in municipal interests which has yet been undertaken by Mayor or any councillors.

Will Rush the Work

Orders have been given for the dam to be repaired at Morse Creek without delay, and the storage of ten million gallons of water will be effected if not in time to nullify the effects of the present drought, at least in time to help the city through the water shortage due to frost in mid winter.
