HURCHILL AND HARCOURT ARE COMING TO CANADA

o of Britains Rising Statesmen Will Shortly Pay a Visit—Are Anxious to Study Canadian Questions During Next Parliamentary Recess

ondon, Oct. 7.—Rt. Hon. Wins- Churchill and Rt. Hon. Lewis court have announced their ntion to visit Canada after iament adjourns. These men two of the youngest and most resting members of the British ernment, and their visit will in fulfillment of a promise le by Premier Asquith to Pre- r Asquith to Premier Laurier

Rt. Hon. Winston Churchill

t hereafter it will be a practice his Cabinet Ministers to go road, between Parliamentary sions, and become acquainted h the various British dom- ons—something which has never en done before.

Mr. Harcourt is Secretary of ate for the Colonies, and is anxious to see and study the sister nations of the Empire whose relations with the motherland are his especial charge.

Mr. Churchill, who has been Under-Secretary for the Colonies, is now Home Secretary, and is looked upon as a future British Premier. He is a statesman between whom and the people of Canada and the other dominions there ought certainly to be a close acquaintanceship. For, come what may, if Churchill keeps his health, he is sure to be for many years one of the most conspicuous figures in British politics.

Mr. Lewis Harcourt is forty-eight years old, and is an admirable example of the Englishman of "the ruling caste." He bagan his public career when he became Secretary to his father, Sir William Harcourt. Afterwards he was made Commissioner of Works—not a very important post. But Asquith, recognizing his ability, admitted him to his Cabinet, although this increased its strength to the unusual number of twenty. Mr. Harcourt has been described as being "built like a poplar and looking all style and punctilious grooming." He is a fine type of the English patrician, immaculate, handsome, and anything but strenuous in appearance. He is also very modest and highly popular, socially and with both sides of the House.

ITIZENS' RAINBOW DANCE AND RECEPTION TONIGHT

ommander and Officers of Canadian Cruiser Will be Entertained in Kaien Island Club's Gymnasium—No Formal Invitations Issued—All Loyal Citizens Will be There

Tonight's reception and dance honor of the Canadian cruiser ainbow will be held in the aien Island Club's fine gym- sium which is to be decorated r the occasion. Proceedings be- n with a reception at which e commander and officers of the ainbow will meet all those of e citizens who are present. The ception will be held for the st hour of the evening between 30 and 9.30 p.m. The Mayor entioned specially today that o formal invitations are being sued for this reception and dance. ll citizens who wish to share ersonally in the welcome extended y Prince Rupert to the Rainbow, re invited to attend.

After the reception at about .30 p.m. there will be a dance o music by a specially augmented rchestra. Refreshments will be provided during the intervals in dancing, and also at the end of the reception for those who do not dance. Every effort is being made by the city to have the welcoming festivities in honor of the Rainbow as pleasant and cordial as Prince Rupert civic authorities and the citizens themselves can make them. There is no doubt whatever of the lively interest aroused in this dance and a bright and representative attendance is assured.

Citizens' Civilian Rifle Association Challenged Rainbow.—Cruiser's Team of Eight Picked Riflemen Accept.

As soon as it became known that the Rainbow would be in harbor for a day or two, members of Prince Rupert Citizens' Rifle Association arranged to send a challenge to the riflemen of the Rainbow to meet them at the ranges.

The challenge is accepted today, and a team of eight picked riflemen from the cruiser will meet the Citizens' Civilian Rifle Association at ranges Two, Five, and Six at one o'clock tomorrow afternoon. The match will be one of the keenest yet shot off on the ranges, and is arousing live interest in the city and on the cruiser.

RAINBOW OFFICERS WERE ENTERTAINED AT BANQUET

Representatives of the Militia, the Board of Trade and the City Tendered a Graceful Compliment to the Representatives of Canada's Navy

After the entertainment in the Empress Theatre last night, the officers of the Rainbow were entertained at a banquet in the Exchange Grill. The Mayor and most of the council were there, along with Messrs. George Tite, F. G. Dawson, Benson, Morris, McLeod, Stork and Beattie of the Entertainment Committee.

After the coffee had been served, a programme of toasts was brought on, the Mayor acting as toastmaster and honoring the first toast, that to the King. The toast to the Canadian Navy was responded to by Commander Hose; and several of his brother-officers; that to the Militia of Canada by Captain Fred Stork of Earl Grey's Rifles; that to the City of Prince Rupert by the Mayor and Aldermen Douglas, Hilditch, Newton, Clayton and Kerr.

The final toast, that to the Board of Trade was responded to by Messrs. A. J. Morris, F. G. Dawson, W. S. Benson and George Tite.

The compliment implied in the banquet was much appreciated by the guests of the evening.

JOLLY TARS FROM THE "RAINBOW" FIRED A BROADSIDE OF MIRTH

Captured the Hearts of Prince Rupert Audience in a Musical Engagement at the Empress Theatre Last Night—Scored Five Thousand Two Hundred Bull's Eye Hits in Less Than Four Hours—Proved That "Jack's the Boy" All Right

Commander Hose, the officers and men of H. M. C. S. Rainbow were entertained at a smoker by the Mayor and City of Prince Rupert in the Empress Theatre last night. Front rows of the theatre were crowded with blue-jackets, and on the stage with the Mayor and aldermen sat Commander Hose and the officers of the Rainbow. The magnificent entertainment provided almost entirely by the talent of the Rainbow's crew was certainly one of the finest displays of song, dance, and instrumental music ever seen in Rupert.

Rousing Cheers

No finer appreciation of their welcome to Rupert could have been given by the men than the thunderous British Cheer they gave on the call of their Commander after the citizen's cheering had subsided. The blue-jackets cheered with the precision of well trained fighting men, the big bass boom of their voices sounding out in instant unison.

It was the same with the singing of Rule Britannia by the whole audience. The sailor's voices led the patriotic lay with magnificent effect. There can be no doubt about the loyalty of Prince Rupert or the popularity here of the Canadian navy.

Brief Speeches

In a brief address the Mayor welcomed the Rainbow formally to Prince Rupert expressing the hope that Prince Rupert would become one of the important bases of the Canadian navy on the Pacific Coast. Commander Hose in reply thanked the citizens for the interest they showed in the arrival of the Rainbow, and expressed his confidence that Prince Rupert would rank in a few years with the greatest sea ports on this coast. For this reason he was glad that he and his men had seen the place early in its progress. Commander Hose made special mention of the cordial expression of goodwill shown the Rainbow in the columns of the local press. He praised the work of the young Canadians on board and regretted that he could expect few of the splendid young fellows he had seen in the city to join the navy. "You need them all here to help build Prince Rupert," he said amidst cheers as he concluded.

First Rate Concert

After some excellent moving pictures by the Empress biograph the musical part of the entertainment began. The men being liberally supplied with cigars and refreshment—not "on the water cart" plan—a thoroughly good time followed. As a matter of fact, it was the Rainbow which entertained Prince Rupert. Our youthful old-timer Mr.Russell led off with some new Scotch comic songs with a nautical turn in them, and was heartily cheered. Then the Rainbow talent began to scintillate in song, and recitation, in chorus, and in dance until the audience felt as if they'd somehow blown into a big London music hall with an All-Star bill on. It would be impossible to mention separately all the talent displayed for the programme lasted until morning and with repeated encores the Rainbow singers held the boards with success all the time. They gave instrumental music from a splendid string bard, songs grave and gay, humorous and patriotic, and a brilliant exhibition of the Sailor's Hornpipe by three splendid looking lads in the "midshipmite" stage. Excellent service as accompanist at the piano was rendered by Mr. Stephens manager of the theatre. Prince Rupert thoroughly enjoyed the programme at last night's smoker. The Rainbow will be more than welcome whenever in the future she drives her gray prow into the waters of Prince Rupert harbor.

Patriotic Mr. Woods

City Clerk Woods was responsible for the decoration of the Empress Theatre last night. He did well in the short time at his disposal with the Canadian flag and British Union Jack predominant in his scheme of bunting drapery. The regal splendor of the red ensign gave the stage a patriotic appearance much appreciated.

Two Convivialists

Only two cases came before the Magistrate this morning. These were two men who were accused of being drunk and disorderly, and paid the usual fine, five dollars and costs.

Mr. and Mrs. Martin O'Reilley were passengers north by the Prince George arriving in Rupert today.

George Early

This morning the G. T. P. S.S. Prince George arrived very early. She did not break any record on the way but passengers say she was so early that she had to wait around a bit outside till Prince Rupert had breakfast and could receive her. She arrived at 9 a.m. with about the usual complement of passengers first and second class, and a good cargo.

NEW WING NEEDED FOR THE GENERAL HOSPITAL

President of Board Yesterday Suggests Appointment of Committee to Consult With Architects on Additional Accommodation Required—Various Matters Dealt With at Meeting

A proposal that a new wing be added to the General Hospital to cope with the growing need for accommodation was made by President D. G. Stewart at the meeting of the Hospital Board yesterday afternoon. On several occasions recently brief delays have occured in the admission of patients owing to the wards being full. A committee is to be named shortly to look after the work.

The advice of various architects in the city will be taken regarding the work which will probably be made the subject of competitive plans. Messrs. Munro & Lailey who planned and superintended the present building arranged for the extension known to be necessary, and it will be a simple matter to add wings or pavilions linked with one another from time to time. The hospital has six lots of its own gifted by the G. T. P. on which other buildings may be erected.

Of the other business attended to yesterday afternoon, the principal items are the acknowledgment of receipt of $470 from the G. T. P. for patients fees, and of $50 as a donation from Duncan Ross. Several new nurses have applied for positions on the staff. Nurse Scott is leaving to be married. A subscription of $50 was acknowledged from E. L. Fisher.

The Board went on record as highly appreciative of Mr. George Tite's generous furnishing of the G. D. Tite Ward, and a tablet suitably inscribed will be placed in the ward in defiance of modest Mr. Tite's desire that no such thing be done.

DAILY EDITION. SATURDAY, OCT. 7

A TRIBUTE TO THE OLD BRIGADE

Now that the election is won and there is no further need for extreme and unjustifiable criticism of the Liberal leaders, the Conservative press is paying in some instances generous tributes to the defeated. The Ottawa Journal (Conservative), which led a very bitter campaign against the Government, now makes amends to Sir Wilfrid Laurier by saying editorially:

"No political leader ever went down to defeat more gallantly than Sir Wilfird Laurier did this month. At the age of seventy he made a campaign which for vigor, eloquence and courage was a marvel. That sometimes his good temper failed him, as it had never before done, was no wonder, in view of the peculiarly harassing nature of the contest to him. Subjected on the one hand to attack because of being insufficiently British in sympathy, he was assailed on the other by the charge that he was aiming to butcher French-Canadian youth in British wars; and both extremes joined to denounce him as aiming to risk Canadian autonomy by the reciprocity proposition. Human nature would need to be angelic to be free from restiveness under such mixed prodding as all that.

"Mistaken in his indifference to the British sentiment of Canada, incompetent in big business questions such as the Grand Trunk Pacific and the Quebec bridge, and deaf to criticisms of the management of Government departments, Sir Wilfrid Laurier nevertheless ranked and still ranks as a great Canadian and a great man. His grasp of constitutional principles, his breadth of mind, his eloquence, courage and kindliness, his personal honor and integrity, his political shrewdness and picturesqueness have justly made him a notable figure on the world's stage."

In regard to the defeated Ministers The Journal says: "A good thing for Canada it would be if the eight Liberal Cabinet Ministers who fell in Thursday's battle could be in this Parliament in place of lesser men of their party. The exceptional ability and the great Parliamentary experience of Mr. Fielding, Mr. Graham and Mr. Fisher were very valuable assets to Canadian public life. Sir Frederick Borden unquestionably possessed a valuable knowledge and keen interest in military affairs. Messrs. Paterson, Templeman, King and Bureau each had qualifications to be especially useful in Parliament. The new House is the worse of the absence of such experienced public men so long as a sufficient majority on the other side insures a new Executive regime on the hill.

"The absence of Mr. Fielding and Mr. Graham must be particularly deplored. Both were of the finest type of Canadian public men. We doubt if Mr. Graham was much in sympathy with the reciprocity idea. He said comparatively little about it. That his heart is in the right place was illustrated by his splendid saying at the banquet of the Ottawa Board of Trade this year: 'The Empire is my country; Canada is my home.' Mr. Graham in office showed himself unspoiled by power; he retained the confidence of the country in his honesty, fairness and ability, and he increased its liking for himself personally by his good temper and kindly humor.

"Mr. Fielding, similarly, leaves office with the absolute confidence in his integrity and personal clean ideals of the people of Canada. His political acumen was great; his first real mistake in fifteen years was the reciprocity proposition. To that we fancy he was predisposed by his long training in free trade ideas. We do not believe that prior to the opening of the debate in Parliament he ever dreamed that the reciprocity proposition could be supposed likely to seriously affect this country's political destiny. Mr. Fielding is a loyal Canadian."

PASSING COMMENT

A journalist in Paris who criticised the suffragette movement has been given his choice of swords or pistols by one of the suffragettes.

This while it removes the foolish old argument that women should not get votes because they were not able to fight, adds one more difficulty to the lot of the modern newspaper slave.

Oddly enough, a Canadian bishop some time ago preached a sermon to women in which he claimed that women were not entitled to vote because they could not be called upon to go to war.

For a bishop to put legalised murder as the test of citizenship was odd enough. But his reverence also appeared to forget that he himself was numbered among those who could not be called upon to go to war, and that the soldier class whose business it is to go to war, are among those who are deprived of the franchise.

This recalls Sir William Clarke's remark "an ignorant person, such as a bishop or a member of parliament," etc.

After being without a Gladstone in the British House for about a year, the historic name is once more added to its membership roll, William Glynn Charles Gladstone, son of the late W. H. Gladstone, M. P., and grandson of the great W. E. Gladstone having just been elected for Kilmarnock.

Genius is not always hereditary, but in addition to inheriting his illustrious grandsire's estate at Hawarden, the young man—he is just twenty-six—is said to have inherited a number of his rare gifts for leadership and debate. At college he was President of the famous Oxford Union, and since then he has been on the Vice Regal staff in Ireland as secretary to Lord Aberdeen, and on the Embassy staff at Washington under Mr. Bryce.

His career will be looked on with expectant interest.

As McCoy was leaving the ring Bob Fitzsimmons, once heavyweight champion of the world, scaled the ropes, seized the gloves from Elle's seconds, and invited McCoy back into the ring. LOVELY AT FORTY Spanish Danseuse Maintains Middle Age Surpasses Youth in Woman.

La Belle Otero, the world famous Spanish beauty who dances when she has nothing else on her mind, declares, and the discriminating section of New York agrees with her, that a woman does not touch the zenith of beauty until she is forty years of age. Incidentally, Otero, like every other siren sure of her charms, is not ashamed to tell her age, and frankly admits to forty-one.

"Every woman of middle age and ripened beauty," may choose between the "splendid forties" and the "terrible forties" according to the Spanish dancer. "Loveliness" she defines as "a living thing made of beauty, charm, grace, physical attractions—yes, and of the way to use them."

Here is the triumph of the woman. Why, the intuitions of the very young man are unerring in this matter. The youth of seventeen, says the Otero, begins with a grande passion for the woman of forty. Instinct tells him that she is the loveliest. Girls of twenty-five are still getting the sand out of their eyes, according to Otero.

At thirty they are still repeating to themselves, "I am a young thing." At thirty-five a woman has known no emotion save the satisfaction of ruling, and it is only at forty that she wakes completely to the puzzling life of things.

A TENDERFOOT'S WOOING

By Clive Phillips Wolley

(AUTHOR OF GOLD, GOLD IN CARIBOO, ETC.)

"Now get back, and don't pull up the barricade till I come."

As the others obeyed Jim went on his knees and laid a fire with more rapidity than he had ever laid one in his life.

Another man might have struck match after match and trusted to chance, but even then Jim was methodical, breaking the little twigs and laying them in closed packed bundles, so that when the small star of light appeared it grew steadily, and still the watchers could see Jim feeding his fire and making sure that the flames had made good their hold.

Then a shot was fired from the fog, the faggots rattled and flew in all directions, and Combe came running, almost on his hands and knees, to the barricade. But the fire had caught hold, and as soon as the men in the excrescence replaced the furniture and made good the gaps, great tongues of flame roared as they climbed upwards.

"We can't help that. They can see to shoot now as well as we can, but they won't come close whilst we have that light. Tell the women to keep away from the windows, and let each man watch from behind something solid. Don't spare the cartridges, Al?"

"I'm here."

"Get round to the back and watch out there. I guess you can see in the dark better than most. Where's the doctor?"

No one answered.

"Doc! Ho! Doc!" Jim cried, but there was no reply.

"Did any of you see him outside? We haven't left him out, have we?"

"He wasn't outside. Perhaps he knew enough to keep in out of the rain," sneered Fairclough, who detested the doctor, whose butt he had always been.

"He knows a good deal now, 'mongst other things, what a blanked fool you are! Poor old chap!"

There was a curious choking sound in Jim's savage voice, as he groped about in the dark and turned something over on the floor.

"Thank you, Anstruther. Will you take his feet? Here, Rolt, strike a light. We've got to chance their shooting."

Rolt struck one, and in the short gleam of it the others saw Jim and Anstruther lift the body from the floor and put it upon the table where the red fire had been.

"That's the first to go," muttered Jim. "Always wanted the lead and would have it. Shot through the head from behind. Some of the devils must have been behind when he lit his fire."

"I heard no shot."

"Not likely to with the noise we were making. What's wrong with your neck, Anstruther? Cut it?"

"Just touched, I fancy. I got it when they hit him. Shall we take him into the house?"

"Better not, and better say nothing about it to them upstairs. We can't do any more for him now, Boss," and Jim drew a large worked table-cover over the dead man's face and turned to see that the barricades were as strong as they could be made.

When he was at his post again he drew from his pocket that which the doctor had given him. It was a common playing-card and on it was written in pencil a London address. Beneath this the doctor had written in big letters which wandered uncertainly over the blank space: "So long, Jim. See you again some day."

"So he knew it was coming, did he?" mused Jim, "and he took it all back at the last, all his tall talk about science and annihilation of matter. Well, I guess the Handicapper knew the Doc's handicap, and will be the best judge of his running."

And then, as he looked out in the reddened gloom, whilst his eyes tried to pierce through the fog, his mind tried to peer into that Next Room where the doctor now was, and if he failed to place the doctor, he at least managed to place himself. He saw the triviality of the things which had so embittered him for the last few days, and even confessed to himself that when it came to fighting, his rival was not much of a muff after all. If that which had made the scratch on Anstruther's neck had been an inch or two to the left Jim Combe felt that his memory of the last few days would have been a load for him to carry all the rest of his life. But the first grey light of the morning brought Jim back from the Unknown to the present with a shock. As the mists rolled away the temporary absence of the Indians was explained. They had withdrawn to gather force for their real attack. Whatever answers to the fiery cross amongst the red men had been flying around the country in the last two days, and Jim Combe had never known until that moment how many Indians there were scattered through the timber of British Columbia.

The hog's back was dotted with their camp fires and tents; a line of them stretched across the big meadow; another body of them held the road to Soda Creek. The ranch was as regularly invested as if its foes had been European troops instead of mere redskins. With infinitely more cunning than even Combe had given them credit for, the Chilcotens had allowed the white men to return unmolested to their lair, only to find themselves in a trap from which there appeared to be no escape unless Toma or Fairclough had won through and could bring help.

Until this last morning Jim had felt certain that one or other would succeed in getting through; but now, seeing the methodical way in which the Indians had conducted the campaign, he not only doubted, he disbelieved it, and when he met Kitty a little later, her pretty face pale and troubled, a great wave of pity and remorse almost unmanned him.

In his anguish of mind he tried to speak to his little friend in the old way that had been so dear to both of them, but his tongue failed him, and she, not realizing that it was the old Jim, treated him with the coldness he had been at such trouble to teach her.

CHAPTER XXV.

You cannot hide death any more than you can escape it. There is a subtle influence which spreads from a dead man so that even the dumb beasts feel and acknowledge it, and this atmosphere of horror had spread through the ranch house in spite of the men's reticence.

The women knew, though they asked no questions. Their eyes counted the men as they gathered for their morning meal; but if they guessed they said nothing.

Indeed, scarcely a word passed between them until the men gathered in the long room after the meal, and even then for a while no one spoke. Though for the moment the besieged were unmolested, everyone knew that the ring which surrounded them was intact, and their destruction but a question of hours.

"The men had better sleep in watches during the day, Jim. We shall want all hands on guard to-night, if Toma does not bring help before then . Horsely and his posse could hardly get through by daylight if they came."

Jim made no reply.

"Don't you think that they will get here to-day?"

In spite of his courage there was a shake in Rolt's voice which he could not hide. For himself he cared little, but the thought of the sweet woman who was all the world to him broke the strong man's nerve.

"It's no good fooling ourselves, Rolt, any longer. No, I don't think any of our messengers are alive today."

The younger Fairclough turned very white, but he pulled himself together, and laughed bravely.

"You don't know my brother, Combe. There's no fear that any pack of niggers will wipe him out."

"I hope not. He is a good man and I daresay that you are right, in which case we shall have help before nightfall, but we must not calculate upon that. We've calculated too much on such things already. We've got to do somethings for ourselves now, right away."

"That's talking," assented Al, "and there's only one thing as we can do."

"What is that?"

"Shoot the women, and die fighting, or save them."

It was brutally said, but it had the advantage of bringing the issue plainly before every one.

"How can we save them?"

"There's only one way. The Indians are all here now. If a man could get through that ring he'd have a clear course to Sody. There's five horses in the kitchen."

"But we cain't leave the place unguarded."

"No, of course not. It's got to be one at a time till we do get thruogh, and if no one gets through—well, then, Boss, we'd most as well take a turn at praying."

For a moment there was silence, and then someone asked:

"Is it to be by day-light, or at night?"

"I guess it don't make no odds," replied Al. "We should have had a good show last night, but the fog has all gone. They won't do much attacking in broad daylight, our people shoot too straight, and the Injuns know it, but they'll do mighty little sleeping at night. I'd leave that to the man as goes. Kin I have that roan as Jim rode for a first shot, Boss?"

It was said so quietly, that no one ignorant of the circumstances, would have guessed that the rough and grizzled old rider was offering his life, but the color came to the Boss's eyes as he answered:

"The stakes are mine, Al, and I play them."

"Pardon, sir, I think you forget," said Anstruther, courteously, "the stakes are not all yours. Volunteers for a forlorn hope should be unmarried men. The captain's duty is to stay by his ship to the last. Al and Combe have had their turn. You will let me go."

"Nonsense, boy, you couldn't sit a horse now."

"Nor couldn't find his way if he did get through. See here, Rolt. It's Al or me for this job, and Al's wounded, so it's me," and Combe turned to leave the room.

But Anstruther caught him by the arm.

"No, by heaven, you don't, Combe! It is for Mr. Rolt to decide. You are not master here. What do you say, sir? Will you shame me? Is it not my right? Combe went for me. The whole trouble is my fault. I can never hold up my head again if you don't let me go."

There was such a genuine ring of entreaty in the young fellow's voice that Rolt, looking at him, wavered.

He understood that, to a man like Anstruther, there might be worse things than death.

"Couldn't we settle it by drawing lots? That's what they always do in books."

It was Fairclough who spoke, and in the impasse to which they had come the suggestion met with some favor.

"If I agree to Mr. Fairclough's suggestion," said Rolt, seeing that the feeling of the meeting was with the last speaker, "it will only be on the understanding that all draw. I will waive my right to go first if you will all agree to that. Otherwise I go."

For a few minutes Combe and Anstruther tried to argue with him, but though the easiest-going man in British Columbia as a rule, Rolt could be sufficiently resolute upon occasion.

"It ain't no use argufying," said Al, irritably. "Seems to me we had ought to know the Boss by now. He's that blanked contrary that if every one else was keeping Christmas, he'd put in the day hauling gravel. May as well cut for the deal if he says so."

This settled it, and Rolt, turning to Anstruther, asked him to get a pack of cards from Mrs. Rolt.

When Anstruther had gone to get the cards, Rolt turned to Combe:

"Is it any good keeping this from the ladies? They might prevent his going if the lot should fall to him. Nothing else will, and I don't believe that he could sit a horse for a mile. His ribs can't be knit yet."

"Don't you worry about that colt, Boss. He ain't used to our range yet, but he's a bit of good stuff and harder nor you think. Let him be and give him a fair show. It's five to one against his getting the deal anyway. But you kin tell the ladies. They aren't the sort to holler."

"Thank you, Al, old friend. I knew we might come in."

It was Mary Rolt herself who spoke, having come in quietly while the men were talking, with Kitty by her side, whose young beauty was woefully marred by the strain of the last few days.

If any one had had time to notice such things then, he might have been struck by the contract between the two women. A face is after all only the window which a soul looks through, so that whereas the pink and white had died from Kitty's soft cheek, the pretty curls lost their soft coquetry, the dimple become almost a hollow, and she herself a very worn and wistful shadow of the spoiled darling of the ranch; in the other woman the strain had only emphasized every brave line in her clear-cut face, made firmer the curve of her sweet lips, and given depth to her fearless eyes.

A Sailor's Idea of Woman Suffrage

AN OUTSPOKEN CRITIC FINISHES UP BY SAYING HE WILL VOTE FOR IT
(Reprinted from Coast Seaman's Journal)

The most interesting study of man is woman. 'Tis true she's a riddle which none of us have been able so far to solve. But, like the riddle of the universe, the sheer impossibility of its solution has a compelling fascination all its own which will effectually keep man guessing throughout all eternity.

Also, "the old order chargeth." The home-life of fifty years ago, in which woman was supreme, is now merely a sad memory with most of us, like "the pies that mother used to make." Hotels and lodging houses by the thousands shelter their quota of lonely bachelor maids and old-maidish bachelors, and the eternal feminine is chiefly conspicuous for her assiduity in showing how comfortably she can get along without the prosaic masculine. Unconsciously to most of them, men and women have now arrived at a stage of social development which, for the good of the race, will compel them to draw up a new covenant governing the relations of the sexes as altered by changed economic dconditions.

For these reasons the Suffrage amendment to the Constitution of the State of California, to be voted on next month, has a much deeper significance than it has generally been accredited with. Ostensibly the "votes for women" movement is one for the abolition of a long standing and admitted injustice to one half of mankind. In reality it will, if successful, alter the whole aspect of our civilization. In the past the State has been bottomed on the family as the unit, each family being represented by its male head. With women voting as well as men, who shall say that the State will not be bottomed on the individual as the unit, instead of, as heretofore, on the family? Personally, I am of the opinion that it will have that effect. Only one thing is certain, "votes for women" will eventually force a radical re-adjustment of the present relations between the sexes—and, if I do not miss my mark overmuch, women will be the first to insist on the new order.

I cheerfully concede the justice and logic of every argument advanced in favor of woman suffrage. I even concede the right of women to have a say in the making of the laws, though they are physically unable to enforce them. "There is a reason," said a horrid man to me the other day, while discussing this point. "Let who will write the Nation's laws, so that we may enforce them. But, and I say it with all due reverence for their sex, I do not think that women are by nature either constitutionally, temperamentally, or even intellectually, fitted for public life.

Why do I think so? Because womankind itself has so impressed me. When I walk along the street and behold the nightmares of form and color which you ladies are pleased to call "hats;" the paint and powder on your faces; the puffy sleeves and hideous hobble skirts with which you mar your lovely forms; the French heels and that mincing gait; the laughable affectation with which you carry your purses in your hands instead of stowing them away in your inside pockets—when I note these things I say to myself: "Is it possible that these people have brains enough to entitle them to share with men the responsibilities of government?" And invariably the answer comes back: "No; they have not."

Ladies, if you could only realize the amused indulgence with which men view your silly fashions in dress, and the conclusions they draw therefrom, you would understand why it's so hard to enlist the average man in the "votes for women" movement. He reasons that your feathers and ribbons, your powder and paint, your rainbow tinted and weird contraptions in the line of clothes, form in themselves a tacit admission on your part that you consider yourselves intellectually inferior to men. "For," argues simple-minded man, "if you were quite sure in your minds of being men's equals mentally you would never waste so much time in decorating(?) your persons for no apparent reason than to call attention to yourselves. Being on a par with men in the matter of mental equipment," says he, "and surpassing them greatly in personal pulchritude, there would surely be no need of all these crazy-quilt clothes and feathers with which you now seek to dazzle and subjugate us poor devils.

"But, what are the facts?" asks this prosaic-minded chap. "Take up any newspaper you like and read the accounts of functions where men and women congregate, and what do you find? Why, Mr. So-and-So said so and so, and that Mrs. or Miss So-and-So looked radiant in a stunning gown made of imported—etc., etc. Now, what does that prove? Just simply that what counts in this world about a man is what he says and does, and about a woman how she looks.

And—this is in the strictest confidence, ladies, as I do not want to be assassinated—nine-tenths of the men who are now shouting themselves hoarse in the cause of "votes for women" are, deep down in their hearts, of that opinion. Were it not for that mysterious sex atrtraction which makes you look lovely to us, no matter what you put on—or leave off—and that we men are no wiser than we should be, I am afraid that your little scheme for getting even with us would come to naught.

As it is I shall go to the poll on October 10th and vote "Yes" on amendment No. 8; first, because being a man, there is a soft spot in my heart for all women, so that I can not refuse them anything within reason; second, because I honestly believe that the best way to prove to women how unsuited are the functions of public life to their peculiar mental and physical make-ups, is to give them the ballot; third, because I am curious to know that they will do with the ballot when they get it; and, fourth, because I may as well get some little credit for having helped to push along an issue which can no more be dodged than death or taxes.

YOUNG FRENCH AVIATOR MAKES AEROPLANE SAFER

By System of Pilot Swinging Pendulum Chair Horizontal and Lateral Stability Problem is Declared Solved—Successful Trial Trips

An engineer named Albert Moreau has lately been experimenting at the village of Quincy, France, with a machine of his own invention for automatic balance, and has made some remarkable flights. He travelled over the villages of Diensaint, Combes-l-aVille, Varennes, Brie St. Robert, and back to his shed at Quincy. At Brie St. Robert he circled round the old church tower, and during the whole of the voyage did not touch any of the levers of the stabilizating planes, either in his straight flight or during the turns. If continued trials confirm the reliability of his invention it may be considered to have solved the problem of both horizontal and lateral automatic equilibrium, and thus to have gone much futrher than the invention of M. Doutre, which only guarantees the former.

Pilot as Pendulum

In M. Moreau's areoplane the result is obtained by the whole for mand principle of the machine, but principally by the novel disposition of the seat of the pilot. This is made into a species of pendulum, the pilot being the weight, and whatever change takes place in the position of the whole machine he remains always in a vertical chair. Yachtsmen are familiar with tables and lamps arranged on the same principle. In turns when one wing is generally higher than the other, a connection between the swinging chair or cradle of the pilot acts automatically upon the tail, giving it an angular movement corresponding to that of a longitudinal stabilizator, which immediately re-establishes the balance. The tail is really not a carrying plane at all, but a balancing appendage.

Inventor Obscure

The inventor is a struggling genius who for ten years past has been engaged upon aviation problems without any outside help or encouragement but at present all the roads leading to his flying ground are said to be black with visitors, and the mayor has addressed to him a letter of congratulation on the visible success that has at last crowned his efforts. It is probable that the military authorities will shortly be invited to witness further trials, which will then be able to be considered more thoroughly conclusive than those mentioned, which nevertheless were witnessed by expert journalists and crowds of qualified observers.

JIM, THE SHRIMPER, GETS SOME MIGHTY QUEER FISH

He Landed an Electric Eel in His Trawl a Few Days Ago, but That's an Old Friend Compared With Some

The monster shrimps you have seen at Shrubsall's Market and which find their way now and then into the toils of "Jim" Burgess' trawl nets shot from the Amy are not by any means the most curious creatures which he gets from the bottom of the sea. Sea urchin, star fish, queer spider legged crabs, and all kinds of finny and spiny fishes are entangled in the sweeping trawl net, and are thrown overboard as offal.

But Mr. Burgess doesn't always throw the queer creatures overboard. He has a standing commission from Professor Prince at Ottawa to preserve all unusual denizens of the deep, and send them for scientific investigation. Professor Prince has sent supplies of formaldehyde and wide mouthed bottles in which the creatures can be preserved for transportation east. They cannot be kept alive of course, but the formaldehyde keeps them in shape for examination.

Found Electric Eel

Only the other day "Jim" (whose real name is M. Burgess) got an electric eel in the trawl net. The wriggler was nearly four feet long. Under certain conditions this creature can administer a sharp electric shock to the person handling it. As a rule it inhabits warmer waters than are supposed to exist around these coasts. Curious growing things like flowers are found in the Amy's trawl sometimes. also fruit-like growths which very often prove stinging to the touch. These are found at moderate depths. From the underworld of the sea, where the pressure is two and one-half tons to the square inch, the trawls bring up curious fishes, with bodies constructed with special reference to this environment of weight. It is another interesting fact that no light penetrates these ocean abysses—all below 1,200 feet being total darkness—and this necessitates another adaptation of the deep-sea inhabitants. They carry lanterns. Many of these deep-sea fish have special organs upon their sides and heads that are known to possess a luminous quality.

Fiery Fish

One of the largest of these deep-sea torch bearers is a fish six feet long, with a tail dorsal fin extending nearly the entire length of the body. Along the sides of the body is a double row of luminous scales. One of the most ferocious of these deep-sea forms has a mouth full of teeth that protude in a most forbidding manner. The fins are all tipped with flaming spots, while along the dorsal surface extends a row of spots that appear like so many windows through which light is shining.

Regular Glow Lamps

The little fishes called Bombay ducks are luminous over their entire surface, and when numbers are collected together they present an astonishing spectacle. Another species has a jaw so arranged that it can seize fish twice its size and easily swallow them. Its stomach has the elastic quality of India rubber. It stretches to enormous proportions, and appears like a great transparent balloon hanging under the fish and containing its prey.

Since "Jim" has started fishing shrimps in Prince Rupert waters, and told of some of the strange things that come up in the trawl he has aroused a good deal of interest amongst the citizens, and quite a number of ladies have expressed the wish to go shrimping with him. In fact, he might make quite a good thing of a shrimping excursion at a regulation charge had the Amy passenger accommodation.

= THE COSY CORNER =

DEVOTED PRINCIPALLY TO HE INTERESTS OF WOMEN

This is a little section of the paper, which from day to day will be devoted to subjects of special interest to women. Any and all of the ladies of Prince Rupert are invited to contribute to its columns, and to take part in its discussions. Suggestions and criticisms are invited by the editor. The hope is expressed that "The Cosy Corner" will fill a social need.

PRINCESS LOUISE'S REGIMENT

Interesting Stories of the Daughter of the Great Kaiser.

"She sometimes forgets that her father is the emperor, but never that she is the emperor's daughter," is the way the ruler of Germany once spoke of his only daughter, Princess Victoria Louise, who is known in her own country as "The proudest lady in the land." But this is only recently, remarks the New Idea Women's Magazine. As for a great many years the young princess was thought lacking in "esprit" and of personality her people were perplexed to confess that she had none.

They nicknamed her "The Little Mouse-Princess," and sighed because the only daughter of the reigning family was not romantically endowed.

But now the "Little Mouse-Princess" has grown up and put away childish things. She has twisted her thick hair into a wonderfully becoming cioffure; the simple schoolgirl dress which the kaiserin insisted on, has been replaced by garments which befit a princess.

Nor is she gawky and shy any longer. And while neither forward nor aggressive, she does not forget that she is indeed the daughter of an emperor, as her father so aptly put it.

How is it possible for her to lose sight of that fact, even for a mement? None but a ruler's daughter would be given such splendid presents as were hers on her eighteenth birthday—the occasion, also, of her debut and confirmation.

Most girls, when they make their bow to the social world, receive merely flowers, fans, bonbons, or other trifles. But this little princess of all the Germans was presented with truly royal gifts.

There were cases of jewels worth fortures, toilet articles of gold and enamel set with precious stones, a stable of thoroughbred horses, and the finest automobile that Berlin could furnish.

But the two most wonderful gifts of all were a house of her own and a regiment of soldiers—not toy soldiers, by any means, but real ones in shining uniforms, who presented arms before her and saluted her as their colonel.

Now she rides at their head, and her people turn to look proudly at the smart figure she makes, mounted on her thoroughbred steed, clad in a smart frogged hussar jacket, and dolman richly trimmed with black astrakhan fur and silver lace.

On her smooth hair is set the great fur busby, bearing the insignia of her regiment—a grim skull-and-crossbones in silver.

Victoria Louise, Colonel of His Majesty's Death's Head Hussars! A strange title, indeed, for a young, pinkcheeked girl, to whom life is just beginning to show its smiling face.

Her brother, the Crown Prince of Germany, is in actual command of the regiment; but it is the body-guard of the princess, and she and the crown prince are more strongly united than ever in enthusiasm over their regiment.

To Pickle Gerkins

Wipe four quarts small unripe cucumbers. Put in a jar and add one cup salt dissolved in two quarts boiling water and let stand three days. Drain cucumbers from brine, bring brine to the boiling point, pour over cucumbers, cover and again let stand three days; repeat. Drain, wipe cucumbers, and pour over one gallon boiling water in which one tablespoon alum has been dissolved. Let stand six hours, then drain from alum water. Cook cucumbers ten minutes, a few at a time. In one-fourth the following mixture—strain the remaining three-fourths over the cucumbers, which have been put in a stone jar. For the mixture mix one gallon vinegar, four red peppers, two sticks cinnamon, two tablespoons of allspice, berries and two tablespoons cloves, bring to the boiling point and let simmer ten minutes.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS

An eiderdown quilt may be washed in a lather. Rinse it carefully, and then shake it well before hanging out in the wind. While drying, shake several times and it will be like new.

A small block of wood, covered with a piece of old carpet, is excellent to rub off the range when through using it, and also makes a very good polisher when blacking has been applied.

To clean white paint, rub well with a damp cloth dipped in oatmeal, wipe with a damp cloth and lastly with a dry duster. This is especially useful treatment for fingermarks on doors.

Ginger bonbons are readily made by taking oblong pieces of preserved ginger and inserting these in the hollows of fine large dates which have been stoned. Draw the date together and roll in powdered sugar.

Cooking in a double boiler is sometimes so slow—if sure—that cooks should know that adding a tablespoonful of salt to the water in the outer vessel will raise the temperature of the food more quickly.

To whiten wooden floors add two tablespoonfuls of paraffin to the hot, soapy water used for washing a floor. It will cleanse the boards and will also destroy any insects that may be lurking in the cracks of the wood.

DAVE WILLIAMS COMPANY CAPTURED VICTORIA

Theatrical Combination That is to Visit Prince Rupert Drew Big Crowds During Their Stay in the Capital—Warmly Praised by the Press

The Dave Williams Dramatic Company which is to open at the Empress Theatre on Wednesday has received the endorsement of the Victoria people. In a long article full of warm praises, the Victoria Times says, referring to the two month's engagement which the company filled in that city, before leaving for Prince Rupert:

"Most cities are compelled to hunger for histrionic talent until the calendar has swung round to the fall, but in the case of Victoria the general state of coma has not been allowed to exist.

"The dramatic organization which has thus rescued Victoria from the woes of an empty summer season is the Williams Stock Company The company opened last night in that old and much-favored piece "Friends," and when the curtain was raised last night upon the opening scene everyone of the large audience felt that the venture would meet with all the success it merited.

"All the members of the company proved to have a perfect mastery of their respective parts, and the ease and grace with which the production moved from start to finish,betokened not only a general understanding of a high character, but an individual histrionic ability not often found throughout a combination of players."

While in Prince Rupert the company will present several of the plays with which they scored such a success in the capital city.

WILL SET UP A REBELLION

Unionist Leaders in Ulster Planning a Rebel Government if Home Rule Passes.

Belfast, Oct. 6.—A conference of Unionist leaders was held today when resolutions were adopted declaring that the Unionists would not acknowledge the authority of home rule Government.

A committee was appointed to devise a provisional Government for Ulster, which should become operative on the day that the Irish Home Rule Bill was passed.

Sir Edward Carson, member of Parliament for Dublin University, was chosen for leader of the movement.

SKIPPERS MAY STRIKE

Sea Captains Talk of Following Their Sailors' Example

Portland, Ore., Oct. 6.—Convinced that something must be done in these times of rising values, the deep water ship captains at Portland are discussing the advisability of inaugurating a strike movement, world wide in its scope, unless the owners should decide to raise their salaries commensurate with the increased cost of living. The plan talked of is to arrange for calling out the captains of every merchant marine vessel afloat if the concession should not be granted.

C. P. R. Boats

The C. P. R. S.S. Princess Beatrice is expected tomorrow from the south. The C. P. R. fine big freighter Princess Ena also arrives tomorrow with heavy freight, and the Princess Royal goes south on Monday with passengers and mail.

Fine Fresh Halibut

With a load of some six thousand five hundred pounds of fine halibut the schooner Fish Maid reached Rupert last nigh.. Her catch finds a ready sale for shipment below.

Poser for the Preachers

Perhaps the preachers who take the coming of the Rainbow for their texts tomorrow will explain why the rain didn't stop with the coming of the Rainbow. We can't.

Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Sloan arrived by the Prince George this morning from the south.

Ladies' Neckwear—the latest things—new assortment at Wallace's. 2t

Bob Hanna's "Rainbow" is painted the same color as the Canadian Navy.

Mr. and Mrs. Conkey with their son Charles arrived by the Prince George this morning. They will proceed up river if the state of the water permits.

Only three more ballot boxes remain to be received by F. G. Dawson, Returning Officer for Comox Atlin. They are expected to arrive today.

Baptist Services

"The Life in Eternity" will be the subject of Rev. Warren H. McLeod's sermon at the Baptist service tomorrow evening at 7.30 p.m. Regular morning service at 11 a.m. Bible School and Brotherhood Baraca Class at 2.30 p.m. Mr. John E. Davey, organist and choirmaster. Strangers and visitors always welcome. All services held in McIntyre Hall on Third avenue near Sixth street.

It is said that fabulous sums of money are being made by boats taking freight up the Skeena now from the end of steel as the regular river steamers are not running owing to scarcity of water.

The Big Furniture Store

Partial List of our New Wares

In our Second Avenue store, which is one hundred feet deep, we carry Reed and Rattan goods, Arm Chairs, Rockers, Sanitary Couches, Davenports and Bed Lounges. On our shelves you will find an immense display of Hotel White Granite and Vitrified ware. In this department we have everything to set up the finest Dining Table. We carry a dozen or more stock patterns in French and English China, and sell them either by the piece or set. We have fancy Bric a Brac of all descriptions. We have twenty-five styles in Teapots from the individual hotel to the old fashioned Brown Betty. Fruit Jars and Flower Pots.

As we buy these goods and Bar Glasses in fifty dozen lots we are sure of getting right prices. We stock perhaps a hundred different styles of Glasses.

We carry a large stock of Cutlery including "Rogers 47."

In stone ware we have bean pots, butter crocks, jugs, filters and foot warmers. Enamel ware and kitchen ware complete. Baskets in many styles and sizes.

...OUR SIXTH STREET STORE...

In this store we show broken lines of decorated hotel ware, at very low prices to close, as we will not have any more like them. Also a few samples of stoves.

Here we also show Linoleums in a variety of more than twenty-five patterns. As this stock was bought far below the market value we are selling them at a great reduction—30 cents to $1.50 per yard. Here also you will find lamps in a variety too numerous to mention.

OUR SECOND FLOOR 50 x 100 ft.

This large space we have filled to the roof with furniture of all kinds at our usual low prices. Here also we carry our reserve stock of crockery, glassware, and stoves. You will find here an endless ariety of carpets, bedding, blankets, comforts, pillows, and perhaps more than $2000 worth of portiers, tapestry and lace curtains and all other curtain materials.

This, too, is the home of the famous Ostermoor mattress.

Chiffoniers, Dressers and all kinds of case goods in great quantities.

Iron and brass beds.

Framed mirrors, all sizes, in French, British and German plate.

We also have a large stock of mirrorplate in British and German plate which we frame to order, in sizes from 36 x 48 down. This is a complete house furnishing store—largest stock in the north
