TURKEY NOW PREPARING FOR A LONG CAMPAIGN

TURKEY IS SENDING OUT TROOPS TO OCCUPY THE GREEK FRONTIER

Is Afraid That Her Old Enemy Will Take the Opportunity to Avenge the Turko-Greek War---Turks and Arabs Entrench Themselves Outside Tripoli and Prepare For a Big Land Battle With the Italians---Bombardment to Start on Wednesday

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Constantinople, Oct. 3 —The Turkish authorities are now taking measures which show that they intend to fight Italy to the finish. All the Turkish troops are being mobilized, while a fleet of four battleships and one cruiser with five destroyers is at anchor in the Dardanelles.

Afraid of Greece

Despite the pacific assurances of the Greek Government, a fear persists that if the war is prolonged, Greece will see to it that a frontier incident occurs that will enable her to declare war against Turkey and avenge the memories of the Turko-Grecian war.

People in Clamor

Telegrams received by the Porte from the outlying Turkish provinces say that feeling is running very high and that the people are clamoring for resistance to the Italian forces, and reprisals against the Italisan.

Frontier is Manned

The Government is despatching troops into Macedonia in order to man the Greek frontier in the event of troubles with Greece.

WELL DONE, GEO. TITE

New Ward at the General Hospital is a Generous and Creditable Gift.

The new ward at the General Hospital which Mr. George Tite generously undertook to furnish was completed yesterday evening, and thrown open to inspection by the matron who is very proud of it. The furnishing of the new ward is a credit to the good taste and good heart of the donor. The furniture is in dark oak, very restful in the effect of its plain lines and subdued color. A handsome carpet with a dark green effect was specially selected and made up to harmonise with the furniture. Even the various small mats and rugs were specially made. The George Tite ward will be a comfortable place to be ill in.

CITY SOLICITOR IS TO REPORT ON THE LICENSES

Quaint Action of the City Council Over the Bottle Bottle Licenses—Aldermen Indulge in Some More Childish Squabbles at the Council Board

The bottle license question, like Banquo's ghost will not down. Again last night it stalked through the council chamber, being raised this time by Alderman Clayton, who wanted the City Solicitor to make a report on the legal aspect to reassure the public mind. The fact that the City Solicitor was one of the solicitors in the case did not bother the council who decided to have his opinion in writing to satisfy the public as to the legality of the License Board's action.

One little spat occurred when Alderman Newton suggested that the City Solicitor be asked to submit a report on all three applications.

Alderman Hilditch with some impatience, said that it would be simply childish to ask the City Solicitor who has been the legal authority in all these cases to furnish a report upon the legality of the licences.

The suggestion of childishness brought Alderman Newton to his feet. He resented the frequent application of the term "childish" to the other members of council by Alderman Hilditch whenever things didn't suit him.

"You are worse than childish," interrupted Alderman Hilditch.

"People probably accuse you with more reason of what you accuse us of being," replied Alderman Newton. "You can go to your own preacher and hear what he has to say about you." (Laughter in council).

Alderman Newton went on to say that he believed G. Sutherland had not had a square deal because he believed that defects alleged in Sutherland's application also existed in the other applications.

I.W.W. PROTESTS AGAINST PRISON LABOR ON PARK

Secretary's Letter to Council Last Night says Members Will Not Stand for the Employment of a "Chain Gang" to Lay Out Recreation Park

The Industrial Workers of the World Prince Rupert branch have appealed to the Mayor and council against the system of employing prisoners serving sentence in the city jail to clear and level ground for a Recreation Park. The prisoners were referred to in the I. W. W. letter as "a chain gang" and their work was designated "convict labor." The I. W. W. branch declared that they would not stand for this sort of thing.

Alderman Kirkpatrick who is also one of the police commissioners explained that in order to comply with the terms of the sentences imposed on some prisoners it was necessary to give them hard labor—Chief Vickers had no form of hard labor for them about the police station and the proposal that they should be set to breaking stones was impracticable. Therefore, the idea that the prisoners should be employed on Summit Hill clearing the level space for a Recreation Park was proposed. There was no semblance to a "chain gang" about the arrangement. The prisoners were under guard but were much more healthily employed at work in the open air than under the alternative of being confined in the cells.

Alderman Douglas raised his voice against the scheme declaring that working men supporters of his in the city had strong objections to it.

Alderman Clayton declared the letter from the I. W. W. branch was couched in arrogant and dictatorial terms and should not be noticed at all by the council.

Alderman Newton said that the idea had got abroad that he had originated the idea of employing the prisoners. This he entirely disclaimed.

The I. W. W. letter was received and filed.

The committee have been waiting to make certain of a necessary sum of about $8000 required in addition to the fund granted them by the church in the east, but this sum is practically assured them now, and progress can be made at once with the new building. The Methodist Church will be one of the best church buildings in the city when completed.

SPRUCE FOR OARS

British Admiralty Place Large Orders with Queen Charlotte Firm.

The British Admiralty recently gave to the Moresby Island Lumber Company, of Queen Charlotte, an order for 200,000 feet of white spruce. The material will be used in the manufacture of oars for the row boats of the warships.

The superior quality of the white spruce grown in the Queen Charlotte group was discovered years ago by British naval officers on the North Pacific Station. This kind of lumber was found to be ideally adapted for making oars and it is now used for that purpose in His Majesty's vessels throughout the world.

The Cetriana left for the south today with mail, passengers, and cargo.

First Letter Sent by British Air Post Delivered at Digby Island.

Mr. S. Jennings, engineer in charge of the Digby Island Marine Station works, has been the recipient of an interesting communication from London, England. The missive is one of the first aerial post cards ever sent. It is a specially light card sold in London at sixpence (twelve cents) and bearing an ordinary penny stamp. Sent by aerial mail to Windsor it was transhipped to ordinary mail bags, and so forwarded to Rupert. Before very long actual aerial delivery may be seen effected in Canada across the Prairies.

SAVED JAIL FARM

Lack of Prison Labor Promptly Supplied to Order

Jailer George West, of the Middlesex County, Conn., prison at Haddam, has reason to believe that it pays to advertise. Recently it became known through the newspapers that there were not inmates enough at the prison to care for the prison farm and that there was danger of a part of the crops going to waste if they were not speedily cared for. Within a few days after this infromation was published nine squads of prisoners were committed on miror sentences and became immediately available for work on the farm. The crops have been saved.

Provincial District Assessor Arthur Cuthbert is exceptionally busy at present arranging for the completion of his assessment schedule by November 1st.

TO START UNIVERSITY CONSTRUCTION NEXT YEAR

Dr. Young Announces That the Sum of a Million Dollars is to be Appropriated—Will Try to Get King George to Lay the Foundation Stone

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Vancouver, Oct. 3.—At the opening of Latimer College last night Hon. Dr. Young, Minister of Education, stated that a sum of one million dollars would be set aside out of next year's revenue for the purpose of commencing the construction of the Provincial University at Point Grey.

He said it had been found necessary to add fifty more acres to the site in addition to the 177 to provide grounds for the professors' residences. The president of the University would be the best man that money could get.

He stated that an effort would be made to have King George lay the foundation stone, or in the event of that failing, a near relative, presumably the Duke of Connaught.

DAILY EDITION. TUESDAY, OCT. 3

WANTED—A CIVIC WELFARE LEAGUE

The time is ripe and rotten ripe for change in Prince Rupert. People are sick of petty strife and personal bickerings. For party government in national affairs, where strong leaders and conflicting doctrines fight for supremacy, there is in our present stage of transition, a place. But there is no place for such in municipal affairs in a city like Prince Rupert. Our problems are too large and our men too few, to permit of division and strife.

It is superfluous to look to those who profit by fomenting party divisions to lead in the work of consolidating the citizens. That is a work that will have to be done, and perhaps can only be done by the best men of all parties agreeing to rise above party, and press forward the welfare of the city. Such a body of men organised as a Civic Welfare League pledged to a programme of reforms and progressive measures, would wield a moral force over the city that no council nor external authority however corrupt, could hope to stand against.

In New York, the Bureau of Civic Research, in Boston the Committee of Twenty, in London the Fabian Society have accomplished wonders in municipal reform, even against the great handicaps of working against evils long entrenched, and in communities where they were largely isolated from the crowd.

There are a score of leading men on both sides that the News could designate quite capable of combining together and lifting Prince Rupert out of the slough of petty factionalism towards which she is fast heading. The recent election so far as Prince Rupert was concerned showed that it was quite possible for our citizens to rise above party influence and appeals to race-hatred, in the effort to advance the city's commercial prestige.

Though denied the advantages of reciprocity by the will of the people of the East and the South, Prince Rupert cannot be denied the advantages of reciprocity and good will between her own citizens, if her own citizens desire it.

There is no need for anyone to desert his political party or stultify his political conscience. What is needed is for strong and clean men to combine, and agree to ignore outside influences that may work harm to our city, and work together to force upon a willing or an unwilling council, progressive measures for the welfare of Prince Rupert. How many good citizens capable of rising above party calls have we in Prince Rupert?

A UNITED STATES VIEW OF THE ELECTION

The New York Herald speaking of the recent election says:

"The voters of Canada have spoken, and the result is as surprising as it is emphatic. This landslide means that, for the present at least, reciprocity between the United States and the Dominion is an impossibility. The large majority of the victors makes them independent of the Nationalist members, and will enable them to carry out any programme they may decide upon. And the chief article on any programme will be the rejection of the agreements for freer trade relations between the two nations.

"The result is a triumph for the protected interests of Canada, and is made possible by the failure of the agricultural element to rally to the cause that would have bettered their condition through opening the great markets of the United States to their products. The effect of the election on the future of Canada must be watched with interest.

"As for Sir Wilfrid Laurier, he may well feel that he met defeat fighting for the best interests of the Canada he has served so long and faithfully. To him, as to President Taft, the result must be disappointment. But time will vindicate his position. Canada needs our markets more than we need hers."

NOTES AND COMMENTS

Our good friend the Empire was much perturbed last night about a motto which decorates the wall of the News office, the leading daily newspaper. It reads "Don't believe it." Alas for our little friend. The motto refers to the copy of the Evening Empire upon which it is pasted.

There is no doubt about the goodness of Prince Rupert weather, despite the fables to the contrary. Every month the weather report of the Dominion Government meteorological observer proves it. The report for September is to hand. It shows that it was neither very hot nor very cold at any time, but a sensible mean temperature for the month of 54.2. There is nothing mean about 54.2 except the name.

The total precipitation for the month was 4.23 inches. Vancouver papers please copy.

A TENDERFOOT'S WOOING

By Clive Phillips Wolley

(AUTHOR OF GOLD, GOLD IN CARIBOO, ETC.)

Ever since Dan "broke that tree" the stalkers had been stalked without suspecting it.

When the volley was fired Dick Rolt had had his eye on the exact spot in which one of the red stars of light had burst. He had heard the bullet sing past him, and for a fraction of a second had seen the prone figure of the man who fired the shot. But he had not replied to it.

The brilliance of the momentary flash had accentuated the darkness for him, and taken away from him all idea of locality, so that to have replied would only have been to waste a shot and betray his own hiding-place.

He was lying now behind the dead horse waiting to snap at the next star which should appear or to meet the rush which might have followed had the attacking party consisted of white men.

He had no notion how close his fellows were. He could not hear them, nor see the outline even of the nearest bush. It was still pitch dark on the ground.

Suddenly a hand closed round his ankle, and a voice whispered.

"We've got to wriggle out of this. Don't lift your head, but just slew round on your belly and snake it after me. There's no hurry. I'll go slow."

"But the horses?" asked Rolt.

"Yours is dead, ain't it? If they want to shoot the others we can't stop 'em, blank them. Come," and Rolt who by this time had his head near old Al's heels, saw these draw quietly away from him.

Imitating his companion, Rolt squirmed on his belly through the bush which closed over him, so that it was only with the utmost difficulty and half by instinct that he managed to follow Al, of whose tortuous progress he could see but little, even when he was within arm's length of him.

He knew that he was going down hill, and that the ground under him was growing softer and softer, until at last he might almost as well have been swimming, but he could see nothing.

"We're all right now," Al stopped to whisper, just when Rolt was beginning to wonder whether he would not rather be shot than go on any farther.

"We're in the crik bottom."

"I could have guessed that."

Al gave a low chuckle.

"Pretty blanked cold, eh? Well, we'll cure that. We've got to move now like two-year-olds. Are you ready?" and he rose to a crouching position.

"Keep your head low till we're in the timber. Now come, and we'll beat them yet," and stooping as he ran the old frontiersman led his companion along the creek bottom under the shelter of its banks, into the heavy pine timber. There they threw themselves on the ground, soaked to the bone and panting heavily.

"What now? Are we going to fight them here?" asked Rolt at last, standing up to let some of the water drain out of him.

"Fight Injuns in timber? Not much. We've another five minutes before they'll miss us, but the light's coming. They're getting impatient. Hear that?"

"That" was another volley poured into the hollow.

"Hain't missed us yet, anyways. Are you good for another burst, Boss?"

"If it's not too far." Rolt's running days were over, and he was a heavy man, used to riding.

"No, it ain't far," and the old man began to run again as if he had been five and twenty, Toma and the other Indian loping along as easily as wolves, whilst Dan the big-footed, sobbed wearily far behind.

At last on the extreme edge of the pine belt, Al paused. Beyond the timber the open country rolled down towards the Fraser and the dawn had come.

"It's our only chance and a slim one. It's got to be that cherry patch," Al said, pointing out to the open. "There ain't another place in sight as would give us a show," and he set off running again at top speed for a little four-cornered patch of wild cherry bush, about a thousand yards from the timber.

It looked about as bad a place to hold against an enemy as you could imagine, lying as it did in a hollow and containing no timber big enough to serve as a shield against rifle bullets; but there was nothing better in sight, and it had just one thing in its favor.

For seven or eight hundred yards at least on one side, and for seven or eight miles on every other side, there was no cover of any kind larger than the thin bushes of sage brush and the patches of bunch grass. A coyote might have crawled through that unseen. It seemed impossible that anything else should.

Realizing that at any moment their enemies might reach the edge of the timber, Rolt and his companions raced over the space intervening between the pines and the cherry bush at headlong speed. When Rolt crashed into the edge of the cherry patch he had not another yard of running power left in him. With a feeling that he had not known since he had won the quarter at Rugby, he dropped where he was and lay still.

"Euchred them so far," panted Al, cheerfully, "and now I guess we'll take some killing. Out with your jack knives, boys, and I'll show you a trick as I learned of the Crees," and he began to hack down the boughs and young trees all round him, building with them a kind of "wicky up," or small circular bothy, such as Indians use for bath houses. Over the top of this he threw his blanket, which he had carried strapped to his back until then, and over that again he piled loose soil and soda, keeping a nervous eye all the time on the edge of the timber.

"Chuck your coat over your sticks if you haven't got a blanket," he said to Rolt, "and then fix it this way," and he went down on his knees and began to scratch with his knife like a dog who is going to bury a bone.

All the earth he took out he piled upon the blanket, throwing with it moss and leaves and small boughs, until when he had finished with it it looked like a great ant heap just sufficiently within the cover of the brush to save it from detection.

Then he lent Rolt a hand with his mound, ordering the boys to do the same at their respective corners, and "Shove boys; shove like hell, if you ever want to eat bull beef any more. They ain't here yet, but they can't be long now."

When men are working for their lives it is marvellous how much can be done in a minute, and these men, knowing how much depended upon their speed, had their shelters finished, when a low "hist" from Al sent them all into their holes like rabbits into their borrows.

There was no sign of Indians that Rolt could see, but as Al lay motionless he imitated him, and for a full fifteen minutes almost held his breath in his burrow.

At the end of that time he heard a voice behind him, and turning, saw Al lying at full length in the scrub, calmly whittling a pipeful of tobacco.

"They can't see me here," he said. "I'm too far back in the scrub. Have you got your bury good and deep. Keep a whittling of it out so as you can lie low and the bullets'll go over you. Savvy? I'm agoin' out now to take a passear and see if them fortifications look natural."

"Don't be such a fool," commanded the Boss.

"I ain't no fool, Boss. No Injun ever hit a man at a thousand yards, and I've got to know how our little show will strike the gallery. Likewise I'm anxious to know if we have a full house," and so saying, he struck a match and wandered out into the open.

In the most unconcerned way in the world the old fellow strolled along straight towards the timber, smoking as he went, and looking back occasionally at his handiwork, and for about three hundred yards he went unmolested.

Then a shot was fired, the dry earth was kicked up a hundred yards in front of him, and his hat fell on the ground whilst his rifle went to his shoulder, and his own shot was echoed by two more from the cherry patch, under the cover of which tiny volley he dashed back to his lair.

"All right," he said, as he crawled under his mound, "the seats is all took and the curtain's up. It's just three hundred yards to where I dropped my cap, and now I'm goin' to put in time diggin'. If I was you I'd do the same. It's goin' to be safer underground than up a tree by and by," and after that for a long time the Boss saw no more of Al.

CHAPTER XX.

The Chinook wind which had been blowing before midnight had dropped, and in the last hours of darkness had been succeeded by a crisp clear air with more than a suspicion of frost in it, so that when the dawn came, it spread through skies of such rare lucidity as are never seen except in high northern lands.

Along the horizon the light grew gradually, until in the east the heavens were of a pale lemon color, so clear, so utterly fine and transparent, that the gloom of the rigid barrier of pines hurt the eye with its contrast of stiff solidity.

Even the pine belt itself was not quite proof against the dawn. The tops of it were touched with a pale glory and, though the gloom of the black boughs swallowed up the light that struck them, a bole here and there was caught by it and brightened with a wash of tenderest golden grey.

But the prairie welcomed the dawn, which flooded its frost-touched sage brush, so that it rolled in sheets of sparkling silver, from the pines to the cherry patch and away beyond as far as the eye could see towards the still shadowy bed of the Fraser.

The dawn had made all things plain, had emphasized every outline: the peace of it called attention to every least sound which might break the holy stillness of the waking day, and yet Rolt, listening in his burrow, could not hear so much as the breaking of a twig, or see a sign of life in the direction from which he had fled.

Most of the events to which we look forward in life (and probably in death), either with desire or dread, are curiously unlike our forecasts of them. A battle upon either a large or small scale is no exception to this rule. Men laugh in the crisis of a life and death struggle, and in the last South African war a volunteer, told off as one of the escort of a big gun, remembers only of Spion Kop that it was fought on a "jolly" day, that the weather and the smooth grass slopes suggested pink parasols and picnic hampers; that there were funny little balloon-like puffs rising at intervals from the ridge opposite to that on which he lay; that the sun was warm and comforting, and that some confounded fellow woke him up with the toe of a service boot when the battle was over and it was time to take the gun home.

It was with Rolt as it was with that yeoman.

After Al's departure he worked feverishly at the making of his burrow, expecting every moment to hear the hum of bullets through the scrub over head, but no bullets came, and at last, even with his jack knife, he had managed to scrape out a hollow ample enough to contain his body.

Then he lay in it and watched, until the minutes grew into an hour, and the dawn into young day, without any sign of life showing itself upon the landscape, except a coyote, shadowy and utterly noiseless, who came stealing down from the hills, until he was nearly midway between the pines and the cherry patch.

There he checked sharply, his nose went up and his brush dropped, and wheeling in his tracks, he went back at a lope to the nearest rising ground, on which he stood awhile reconnoitring.

Something in the country displeased him, for after a prolonged survey he loped back the way he had come.

The coyote's behavior was suggestive of suspicion, but a little broad-winged hawk which poised in the clear air or swung noiselessly overhead with a keen eye for mice or beetles, contradicted the habitually suspicious vagabond.

Rolt found it impossible to remain strung up to concert pitch for ever in such an atmosphere of peaceful beauty, just as the half alarmed buck does, when pitted against the everlasting patience of his hunter, and was actually dozing when a voice behind him asked:

"Have you got your Holland along with you to-day, Boss?"

Rolt started, but though only half awake, had sense enough to lie still.

"Yes," he said, without turning.

"It's good for long shooting, ain't it?"

"It's sighted for five hundred yards."

"I guess that's good enough. Do you see that yallerish looking bunch of sage brush, the biggest in sight, away there to the right? Jest perforate it, will you?"

Rolt raised his rifle, and looked questioningly at old Al, whose head was now along-side his own.

The old man nodded, and Rolt adjusting his sights to the five hundred yards range, cuddled down on his rifle.

"High or low?" he asked.

"I guese it's most solid near the bottom," chuckled Al.

Then Rolt drew a long breath, for a moment there was absolute silence, and then a little puff of dust, fifty yards beyond the sage brush, recorded the fact that the foresight had been taken too full. A few sprigs of the yellow weed fell, but otherwise there was no sign from the bush.

"Sits stiller nor a fool hen," commented Al. "Try her lower still, Boss."

Rolt took the same bead again, but this time he took it upon the very base of his target. At his second shot the bush which he had watched for an hour became alive. A horrid scream followed the impact of his bullet and in place of the little fountain of golden dust, a man's body sprang high into the air and then pitched headlong on the near side of the bush writhing and tying itself into knots amongst the branches of the withered sage brush.

"Must be quite a holler ther; a'most as good as this one of ourn. I seed him coming from the time he started. Holy smoke!"

WHAT IS SPORT?

Marquis of Queensberry Gives the English Version—Urges Americans and Canadians to Distinguish Real Article from Imitation.

Since I have been in America nothing has struck me more forcibly than the misappliaction of the words sport and sportsman. To my mind this very misapplication is the key to the reason that the people have been deprived of their legitimate rights in the way of true sporting events, such as racing and boxing.

* * *

Where I come from a sportsman means a man who has all the highest qualities of honor, courage and endurance. It is even applied to other walks in life. For instance, when a man has met with great reverses in fortune and comes to the front battling bravely to preserve his honor and honesty we call him a good sportsman and love to give him a leg up. Sport also means all that is best in open competition, both in man and animal, where anything crooked, mean, or degrading is not entitled to the appelation.

* * *

A man is called a sport here who is a gambler, bar frequenter, and frequenter of certain places not blue, and who loves to come home with the milk wagons. My word for him would be a rake. No wonder the legislatures have tried to put down sport, if sport means what it appears to mean here. Mind you, I am not posing as a model. I am no better than the rest of them right now, and have made them hum in my time, but I never looked upon it as an addition to my sportsmanlike qualities, but rather a sowing of wild oats, which brought no bars to my escutcheon of sportsmanship.

* * *

Back to Old Meaning

I think a serious campaign should be started to go back to the old application of the word sportsman. Why Colonel Newcombe was a grand old sportsman, but I am quite sure Thackery never recorded that he ever "want on a tear" or "painted the town red." Can't we invent some new word for the high flier? I have nothing particularly against him, as long as he keeps within bounds and does not call himself a sport. If our readers will suggest some nomenclature we will try to start a cult of the true rendering of the word sport.

* * *

No doubt if it had not been for some of these so-called sports we might now be having a lovely race meeting, with women in their best dresses as spectators, and all the finest men of all classes who love a horse meeting enjoying the sport of kings. Might we not tonight be having a bout between two splendid boxers, who fight for honor and glory first and the purse as a necessary adjunct for their livelihood?

* * *

The authorities who have stopped racing and boxing must remember that they have stopped all the legitimate outlets for men to get the reasonable, natural and healthy excitement which all people crave for, especially English speaking peoples.

* * *

I feel sure that illegitimate forms of sport, perhaps sport of the kind above referred to of the blue order, will attack our vitals and make the authorities sorry that instead of closing up nearly all arenas of sport they did not drastically cleanse them. True sport is the finest thing on earth. It is the legitimate reward of good work. Ultimately the people will have it, and those who stand in the way of a regeneration of good sporting events are not true to the best interests of the people.

New York state athletic commission exonerated Referee Charles White of the charge that he should have stopped the Flynn-Morris contest before Morris was so badly beaten.

A McNamara Parade

Organized labor in Philadelphia has decided to hold a McNamara demonstration on October 12, the date on which the trial of John J. McNamara is expected to begin.

= THE COSY CORNER =

DEVOTED PRINCIPALLY TO THE INTERESTS OF WOMEN

This is a little section of the paper, which from day to day will be devoted to subjects of special interest to women. Any and all of the ladies of Prince Rupert are invited to contribute to its columns, and to take part in its discussions. Suggestions and criticisms are invited by the editor. The hope is expressed that "The Cosy Corner" will fill a social need.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS

To clean ivory, make a paste of chalk, olive oil and ammonia, equal parts, and rub well. Let it remain on until thoroughly dry, and then wash off.

* * *

When eggs are broken and cannot be used at once, they will keep better if the shells be removed and a quarter of a teaspoonful of salt beaten in for each egg.

* * *

To keep a gas stove from rusting when it is not in use for the winter, first clean carefully with pumice, dry carefully, and then rub over with oilve oil. It is best to do this while the stove is warm.

* * *

When carpets are not taken up, they can be greatly freshened by washing with water in which a tablespoonful of ammonia has been added to a pail of water. This should be done after a thorough sweeping.

* * *

When wallpaper is to be cleansed with medicated putties or crusts of bread, the room should first be made free of dirt. Work only in one direction. No paper will stand cleaning more than three times.

Jellied Chicken

Wipe a knuckle of veal, put in soup kettle, cover with three quarts of cold water, and bring gradually to the boiling point. Dress and clean a six-pound fowl, add to veal stock and cook until bird is tender. Remove fowl and cook stock until reduced to two cupfuls; then season with salt, pepper and onion juice and clear. Force 1 1-2 cupfuls of the lean veal through a meat chopper, add one cupful of the stock and season with salt, paprika and onion juice; then add one-half teaspoonful of celery seed, or one cupful of celery, cut in small pieces. Pour some of the remaining stock in bread pan, to the depth of one-third inch. Set the pan in larger pan of ice water and, when firm, garnish with hard-boiled eggs, pimentoes, cut in fancy shapes, and a few fresh mint leaves. Cover with remaining stock, adding it by spoonfuls, so as not to disturb decorations. When this is firm, add a layer of veal, cover with a layer of chicken meat (also forced through meat chopper); repeat. Spread evenly, cover with buttered paper, place a weight on top and let it stand in the ice box over night. Garnish with fresh watercress.

Improves Hair

To increase the growth of your hair, massage the scalp every day and brush the hair thoroughly. Twice a week rub a few drops of castor oil into the scalp.

Complexion Care

Bathing the skin in buttermilk every day will make it soft and smooth. It is very important that plenty of soap and water be used to cleanse the skin. It is also necessary to see that the bowels, kidneys and liver are in good order.

Chinese Eyelash Stain

Gum arabic.....1 dram
Indian ink.....1-2 dram
Rosewater.....4 ounces

Powder the ink and gum and triturate small quantities of the powder with the rosewater until you get a uniform black liquid in a powder, and then add the remainder.

Manicure Hint

The best way to complete the polishing of the nails is to bend the fingers on to the palm of the hard, berding the knuckles and first joint while keeping the last joint straight, and to rub briskly the nails on the palm of the other. This not only polishes the nails but also massages the skin at the root. so that the blood supply of the nails is improved and the growth of the nail is strengthened.

KING'S FAMILY TREE

Genealogy of George V. Dates Back to Troy

Amongst families which will main tain the dignity of long descent, there are, of course, few people who can boast so ancient a genealogy as our King and Queen, who trace their descent in unbroken line from the Saxon King Egbert, and through him back to the British kings, who in turn were reputed lineally descended from the survivors of the fall of Troy.

There are names among the nobles of the United Kingdom which take us back to "old, unhappy, far-off things, and battles long ago," and among them is conspicuous the name of de Ros. This title dates back to 1264, before the first English parliament, and the present holder of it is the twenty-fifth. The male line terminated with the 24th baron, on whose daughter, however, the barony devolved, and to her descendants it will, of course, pass on.

THE TROUBLES OF AVIATORS

The increasing number of aviators and the development of aeroplane flying have given opportunities for making some interesting observations on the physiological conditions incidental to this new method of progression, says the Lancet. Several factors have to be taken into consideration.

Like Sea-sickness

Rising to a great height in the air produces effects similar to those of mountain sickness, namely, giddiness, nausea and headache; but owing to the rapid transition form a low level to a high one, or conversely, the blood pressure, if it is altered, is not allowed sufficient time to become steady as it can do in mountain climbing; the conditions, in fact, have some resemblance to those of a balloon ascent or of an abrupt descent, and 3ven more resemblance to what is seen in the case of subaqueous workers who are quickly brought to the surface from a diving bell, although in aviation the pressures are very much less.

Affects the Blood

There are also great variations with different individuals, for attacks of mountain sickness and other discomforts due to change of pressure are experienced by some at a height of 1,500 metres, while others are not affected until they reach 2,000 metres. All the observations that have been made show that the blood pressure is increased, but only to a slight extent because it is counterbalanced by the free access of air which, according to the researches of Langlois, tends to reduce the blood pressure. Other factors to be considered are the duration of the flight and the encountering of difficulties. Nervous fatigue lowers the blood pressure and increases the pulse. The nervous tension brought about by the necessity for being continually on the alert in the presence of dangers has a special influence which varies according to the temperament of the individual.

No Chronic Troubles

The aviator, Beaumont, when he came down from his machine after having won the prize for the European circuit, was remarkably calm and his pulse rate scarcely reached 85, but he told me that the great natural composure and his long practice in making ascents did not prevent him from having sensations of emotion and cardiac palpitation in moments of danger. As a general result it may be said that aeroplane flying does not cause any special form of chronic illness.

GREAT SALT INLET IS A BOON TO GRAHAM ISLAND

News Correspondent in Second Article Says a Settler on the Inlet Has a Free Marine Railway at His Command Twice a Day—Lots of Game

(Special Correspondence)

Masset, Oct. 1.—Your correspondent made several extended trips, from one end of Graham Island to the other, looking over the wealth lying dormant both in the land and sea. The potentialities of the Island cannot be enumerated, in a short article; but the time is coming—and coming soon—when thousands will regret their lack of interest in the natural resources within their reach

The numerous small rivers, throughout the length and breadth of the Island, first engaged attention. Every few miles—it mattered not which way one went—rivers and streams flow to the ocean and down to the inlets.

I was particularly struck with Masset Inlet. Cutting into the island, for forty miles, this stretch of water is navigable for large vessels and is sheltered from one end to the other. Entering the channel, where the shores are one mile apart, a boat strikes the tide, running six miles an hour, in and out, twice each day.

Fifteen miles from the entrance, a large body of water is found, with a width of ten miles and about twenty miles in length. It is on the shores of this "salt lake" that the output of the coal mines, of the Yakoun River, will be shipped. It is no unusual thing for a settler to leave his home, twenty miles up the Inlet, and to reach Masset in a few hours. He returns home on the next tide, making the forty-mile journey with little effort.

The rivers are visited by the several species of salmon, found in our waters, and the lakes, at the head of the Yakoun and Ain rivers, are beautiful stretches, covering many miles. Trout fishing is indulged in by the followers of Isaac Walton; one man captured seventeen "beauties," of four varieties, in a few hours.

Geese and ducks are plentiful and the camping grounds ideal. The tourist will find a great deal to engage his time, when the Grand Trunk Pacific is completed, and the splendid scenery and sporting grounds of Queen Charlotte Islands are known.

S.S. BANNOCKBURN IS BACK AGAIN

Fine Tramp Steamer Which Made Her Maiden Voyage to Rupert with Steel Has Had Vicissitudes.

The British steamer Bannockburn, Captain E. A. Dent, reached Vancouver the other day from Antwerp and London via Pacific Coast ports with 5000 barrels of cement for Balfour, Guthrie & Co., and 125 tons of girders. The Bannockburn docked at the Evans-Coleman wharf. She has had an eventful voyage. Soon after leaving Antwerp for this coast she was in collision in the English Channel, and was beached at Dover. She was repaired temporarily and steamed to London, where permanent repairs were effected, and she then proceeded on her voyage. At San Francisco and San Pedro she discharged cargo and was libeled for consignees for damage to freight. Calls at Portland and Seattle were made before che came here. After discharging she will steam to Nanaimo to load a cargo of coal for San Francisco. She will then return to Portland to load lumber for Calcutta under charter to Hind, Rolph & Co.

NO COMPENSATION

For Lot Owners on Second Avenue After Alteration of Grade

The Board of Public Works has reported to the council that it does not recommend that any compensations be allowed to lot owners in consideration of the need for raising and lowering buildings on Second avenue to suit the change of grade. The City Engineer had reported in favor of compensation being granted, but after consideration the Board of Works regards the disadvantage to lot owners as small compared to the advantages gained by the change of grade.

GAVE FIREMAN A BLACK EYE

Second Engineer of the Vadso Fined $10 and Costs

For striking a fireman on the face Second Engineer J. Hogan, of the S.S. Vadso, was today fined $10 and costs. He admitted striking the blow but pleaded that discipline demanded it. Evidence revealed a most unruly state of affairs on the Vadso during September.

Fireman J. Gregg, of the Vadso, complained that Second Engineer John Hogan of the same boat had assaulted him doing actual physical harm. The case was a provincial police one Magistrate McMullin presiding.

Evidence was given by several witnesses to the effect that Gregg was hit at least twice while seated on the forward hatch, by the second enginner who said he had been sent by the chief on the call of the purser to stop Gregg from raising a row on deck.

The purser, Ivan Sparrow, gave evidence to the effect that the complainer had been blaspheming and that the ship's crew was in such a state of disaffection that the deckhands refuused to make the landing at Port Nelson and the quartermaster wouldn't take the wheel.

Accused admitted that he had hit complainer on the face twice at complainer's request. "Hit me," said complainer. "I've got witnesses." Accused hit him. "Hit me again," and accused hit him again. It was just like a game of Black Jack.

Hogan was fined ten dollars and costs the charge being reduced to one of common assault.

A New Fish Market

All the doctors are agreed that people do not eat enough fish. So the opening of a new fish market is of more than usual public interest. The newest fish market opened yesterday is the Dominion Fish Market at the corner of Fulton and Sixth streets, opposite the Rand Block. All kinds of fish ,game, poultry and oysters in season will be found there, as well as dairy products. Don't forget to look out for the new fish market.

FINE SHIP FOR KING'S VOYAGE

Ship Elaborately Fitted Up to Take King George to India for Durbar.

Despite the depressing outlook caused by drought in Northern India the preparations for the imperial durbar are proceeding actively and the Medina, the boat which is to convey the king emperor to his Oriental subjects, is being prepared for the voyage. The Medina will be the last word in ocean luxury. All the apartments selected for the use of the king and queen will be unusually large. There are to be two sets of saloons for the royal passengers, one at the bow for fine weather and the other amidships.

Besides these saloons a special room is to be reserved for the King's persoral use on one of the upper decks. This will contain the despatch boxes for the private and official papers to be dealt with during the voyage. Despatches will be received every day except one, as far as Suez, and during the stretch across the Indian Ocean to Bombay there will be a mass of work to do in preparing for the events ashore.

The suite in attendance will devote no little time to the discussion of their own part in the pageantry and in the necessary rehearsals of duties, which to many of them will be novel.

GOOD PRINTING

Is a Persistent "Influence" Exerted in Your Behalf!

Every bit of printing that goes out to serve you makes "Some Kind of an Impression." Poor printing will leave a poor impression of its user as surely as would poor clothes, or poor store or shop or office. "Good" printing will leave upon every mind an impression wholly favorable of its user.

Even if but one in a thousand of these "Impressions" really tips the scales for business, for orders, for you "Good Printing" will have thus paid for itself!

The Big Furniture Store

Partial List of our New Wares

In our Second Avenue store, which is one hundred feet deep, we carry Reed and Rattan goods, Arm Chairs, Rockers, Sanitary Couches, Davenports and Bed Lounges. On our shelves you will find an immense display of Hotel White Granite and Vitrified ware. In this department we have everything to set up the finest Dining Table. We carry a dozen or more stock patterns in French and English China, and sell them either by the piece or set. We have fancy Bric a Brac of all descriptions. We have twenty-five styles in Teapots from the individual hotel to the old fashioned Brown Betty, to hold a quart or more We buy almost exclusively from Cassedy—five times stronger than any other.

As we buy these goods and Bar Glasses in fifty dozen lots we are sure of getting right prices. We stock perhaps a hundred different Glasses.

We carry a large stock of Cutlery including "Rogers 47."

In stone ware we have bean pots, butter crocks, jugs, filters and foot warmers. Enamel ware and kitchen ware complete, baskets in many styles and sizes.

...OUR SIXTH STREET STORE...

In this store we show broken lines of decorated hotel ware, at very low prices to close, as we will not have any more like them. Also a few samples of stoves.

Here we also show Linoleums in a variety of more than twenty-five patterns. As this stock was bought far below the market value we are selling them at a great reduction—30 cents to $1.50 per yard. Here also you will find lamps in a variety too numerous to mention.

OUR SECOND FLOOR 50 x 100 ft.

This large space we have filled to the roof with furniture of all kinds at our usual low prices. Here also we carry our reserve stock of crockery, glassware, and stoves. You will find here an endless variety of carpets, tapestry, bedding, blankets, comforts, pillows, and perhaps more than $2000 worth of pictures, tapestry and lace curtains and all other curtain materials.

This, too, is the home of the famous Ostermoor mattress.

Chiffoniers, Dressers and all kinds of case goods in great quantities.

Iron and brass beds, fruit jars and flower pots.

Framed mirrors, all sizes, in French, British and German plate.

We also have a large stock of mirrorplate in British and German plate which we frame to order, in sizes from 36 x 48 down. Remember the reason we call this a complete furnishing store is because we show all this endless variety of goods at the Big Furniture Store—largest stock in the North.
