Victoria as a Host.

The London Chronicle says the announcement that the King of Italy will be the guest of King Edward VII this year recalls the visit paid by his grandfather, Victor Emmanuel, when he was King of Sardinia, to Queen Victoria. The king used to tell his friends for many and many a year afterward little stories to illustrate Queen Victoria's friendly and homely spirit. When his leave taking of the Queen and Prince Consort was formally over and he was in his apartment on the point of departure, the Queen knocked on the door and ran in alone for a last handshake with her gruff but greatly delighted guest.

Encouraging.

George—All these articles about the danger of contagion from kissing are very charming, don't you think? Dora—M—yes; but we women greatly admire courage in a man!—Sketchy Bits.

KEY TO THE EMPIRE.

Canada Said to Be so by Prominent English Journal.

The Saturday Review, London, recently had an article under the caption of "Canada, the Key to the Empire," of which Public Opinion published the following condensation: "Canada presents all the difficulties of the Imperial problem, and all the aids to the solution, in an acute form. It is the only self-governing colony in which the interest of a foreign country has reached, under our happy-go-lucky system, enormous dimensions. . . . The growth of Canada in recent years is not due so much to British as to United States enterprise, and it must be obvious to all who study the problem that if we fail now (to consolidate the Empire) nothing can stop the separation of Canada from the United Kingdom and its ultimate absorption by the United States. If Canada goes, other colonies must follow, and the disintegration of the British Empire will be the distinguishing feature of the nineteenth century history. If we succeed, we shall not only solve the Canadian problem; the consolidation of the Empire presents no greater problem than that. It is not a time in which we can adopt the free trade text, 'Let us eat and drink free food, for tomorrow we die.' . . . An Imperial policy is based upon the fact that it is the interest of the Empire that it should be adopted; that the United Kingdom will secure a fresh lease of life for those economic energies which otherwise in no very distant future must decay; and that the colonies will achieve a more rapid development than is possible in isolation. English people, at any rate those who reject the free trade nostrums, should be the first to admit that the present arrangement with Canada, if made permanent, and unaccompanied with a change on our part, must be unsatisfactory from the Canadian point of view and incompatible with local aspirations. If we reciprocate by stimulating the wheat production of Canada, their manufacturers will find ample scope for all their energies in the increased economic activity which the influx of population and its demand for all kinds of commodities will insure, while at the same time there will be an ever-widening market for the more highly specialized industries of the United Kingdom. In this movement there can be no question of the surrender of their independence and freedom of action by any of the colonies. We are not going to revive the mercantile system. Nothing more is required at any stage of Imperial consolidation than an Imperial Council to aid and advise in the adjustment of the commercial relations of the Empire."

LOCAL

Mark Eagleson was down on business.

The equinoctial gale came pretty near being a tornado in Marble Canyon, blowing a number of large trees on the government wire.

Thanksgiving Day comes early this year, as Canadians have so much to be thankful for,— October 26th.

Henry Schwartz' hunting party brought in very fine specimens of mountain goat and bighorn.

Mrs. John Marshall left on Monday for a visit to her daughter in Vancouver, and will take in the Dominion Fair.

A tiny Testament found in a heap of debris in town, bears a written name and date 1854. The owner has now probably no further use for his guide book.

A force of men went up to the upper end of Seton Lake by Steamer to take salmon roe for Provincial Hatchery.

A traveller reports meeting an Indian riding a horse dripping with sweat caused by weakness from bleeding. The road was spattered with the poor animal's blood for three miles north from the Bridge.

Mr. Phair returned from a six-weeks trip in the northern part of the District, during which Mr. A. C. Minty has been in charge of the Government office.

H. L. Phair suffered an accident to a hand, while at Spence's Bridge, and went to Ashcroft for treatment.

Mr. and Mrs. A. McDonald and family said Good-bye to Lillooet to-day, and started for their future residence in Clinton. They will be very deeply missed indeed.

The Southard hydraulic outfit near Fountain will be offered for sale by the Deputy Sheriff on 7th October at Ashcroft.

Mr. Lochore of Rosebank is assisting in preparing an exhibit for the Fair. W. Abercrombie took with him a number of small contributions of large fruit.

Speaking of the Fair, the Ashcroft Journal says,—

T. Earl of Lytton, from whom assistance might have been expected to make a district exhibit, prefers to play a lone hand. He cannot be too severely condemned for this action because of his official connection with the fruit industry, holding some high office or other. He nullifies in a great measure any good he can do officially by the course he has taken, and in the opinion of this paper his usefulness as an official of the Fruit Growers' Association ended when he offended by breaking one of the cardinal principles of the association,— Co-operation.

James Haskins, a Cariboo pioneer, and of late a resident at Williams Lake, passed through here on his way to Kamloops. This is his first visit in 40 years.

Rev'd Father Conan of Stuart's Lake, was a passenger on Thursday's stage, for New Westminster.

H P Horan returned from a most successful hunt, securing 50 birds ;— 35 of them were ducks, and the rest grouse

Mrs. John, and Miss McMillan are visiting friends at the 70-mile house.

TRUTHFUL JAMES

V. W. & Y.

Mr. John Hendry, president of the V. W. & Y. stated to a World reporter that the financial arrangements for the northern extension of the line are at present in a most satisfactory condition. He says the construction now depends on the Provincial government. As far as it was possible to go, outside of the grant from the government, everything had been done, and he could report all in good shape.

JOE MARTIN RIGHT AGAIN

He says his 3rd party is not for B. C. alone, but for the whole Dominion. 'It is felt on all sides that the time is ripe for a new movement in the political world. If you talk privately with men of either party, you will find the Liberals are disgusted, and the Conservatives are disgusted.

'What are you to do, when both parties cease to be parties of principle? The present condition of affairs has created a false situation, and a false situation may last for a certain time, but it is bound to come to grief before long. When the two political parties were formed in Canada, they were formed on certain basic principles. The Liberal party sprang into being in opposition to the Family Compact, and Downing Street Rule. Those things ceased to exist and then the question of Free Trade versus a protective tariff divided them, but they are both practically the same on that today, and I cannot imagine why a man should go to the polls to place 12 or 15 men in power, rather than 12 or 15 other men, when the average voter cannot know anything of either set of men personally. This is not a condition of things to be tolerated, when there are serious questions affecting Canada, which require to be dealt with from the standpoint of principle.'

The following verses are part of the late Capt. Martley's ode to Peter O'Reilly, one of British Columbia's statesman of early days, who died recently.

In days when Douglas ruled the land,
With Begbie by his side,
One man was known as his right hand,
Foremost to quell the tide
Of lawlessness; and well the "Three,"
In council, camp and court,
Swayed Justice's sceptre sternly,
Through good and ill report.

† † † †

His record? Go, "Circumspice;"
On the lone mountain side,
In court, in camp, by torrent free,
By Georgia's icy tide;
'Tis writ on drear desert, fair valley,
On eternal Cascadian snows.
It rings in sweet morning's reveille,
It's whispered in evening's repose.

MAGGIE MINE.

The removal of the pumping plant and other machinery from the Maggie Mine is all the evidence needed, that M. K. Rodgers and his associates do not want the property. While no figures have been given out, it is probable the venture cost them in the neighborhood of $20.000 but that did not disclose the body of ore they hoped to find. It is a great pity for the country that Mr. Rodgers did not get results, for his manner of conducting business is highly satisfactory to those with whom he has dealings.

Some of the owners are said to have expressed dissatisfaction with the course followed, believing if work had been pushed in another direction, or the shaft, now down nearly 300 feet, had been sunk still lower,— results would have followed. They will probably make efforts to have work commenced again and have development proceed according to their own ideas.

COSTLY GAME OF WAR.

South African Contingent Cost Canada Almost $3,000,000 and 224 Men.

The sending of the Canadian division South African Constabulary, the 2nd, 3rd, 4th, 5th and 6th Canadian Mounted Rifles to South Africa and the 3rd R. C. R. to Halifax cost Canada $2,823,954. The total of all ranks was 8,372. Of these 7,368 reached South Africa, where there were 476 casualties, 224 deaths and 252 wounded. Those actually killed numbered 63; 31 died of wounds, 127 succumbed to disease, one was accidentally drowned, and two were reported missing and believed to be dead. Ninety-three per cent. of the deaths from disease were due to fever, Privates O. J. Weaver, C.M.R., and W. Winyard, Royal Canadian Dragoons, are missing.

In the supplementary report of the Militia Department, which contains these facts, there are also some appreciative comments by the Earl of Dundonald upon the soldierly qualities and valour of the 2nd Mounted Rifles, under Col. Evans, the splendid equipment and behaviour of the 10th Field Hospital, under Lieut.-Col. Worthington, and the patriotic spirit of the officers and men of the third, fourth, fifth and sixth regiments, who had no opportunity of being under fire. Lieut. R. H. Ryan tells of the surrender of Delarey and Kemp at Dornscomb, June 15, 1902. Only 12 men, one corporal and one officer of the Stadts Artillery, only 12 of the Yarks, formerly a magnificent regiment, and only one officer and six men of Delarey's signaling corps remained.

The Correct Quotation.

If you must quote, do quote correctly. Is the pen mightier than the sword? Thousands say or print: "The pen is mightier than the sword." It may be true, but if it is meant for a quotation it is not fairly give. The original lines in the play are:

"Beneath the rule of men entirely great,
The pen is mightier than the sword."

This error has been corrected over and over again. But those who misquote seldom read what they are pretending to quote, but quote from a man who quoted from another man who—and so on. In many books will be found long lists of these prevalent misquotations.

Sir Redvers Not Vindictive.

Sir Redvers Buller has had some hard knocks from the press, but apparently he does not harbor any animosity against journalists as a class. At the recent Devonian dinner, a young journalist wanted to get into a small gallery overlooking the scene, instead of sitting with his colleagues down below, the more particularly as he was suffering from dyspepsia, and the good things provided were forbidden him. But the door leading to the gallery was locked, and none of the officials would produce the key or even listen to his appeals. Presently Sir Redvers appeared on the scene, and the journalist, taking his courage in both hands, as the French say, went up to him and said: "Pardon me, Sir Redvers, but I am a poor, unfortunate journalist in a fix.

Every man owes it to himself and his family to master a trade or profession.

Read the display advertisement of the six Morse Schools of Telegraphy, in this issue and learn how easily a young man or lady may learn telegraphy and be assured a position.
