Dean Lysyk)
Dr. MacDougall) That the proposals concerning voting and non-voting members in the Faculty of Law be approved.

In reply to a query Dean Lysyk stated that the Faculty felt it was not appropriate that students participate in meetings dealing with the adjudication of marks of other students.

In reply to a further query concerning the status of the original motion passed by Senate that student representation in Faculties would be between 5% and 25% of the number of teaching staff eligible to vote at Faculty meetings, the Chairman replied that this had been rescinded at the April 20, 1977 meeting of Senate and that in accordance with Section 40 (b) of the Universities Act it was now up to the Faculties to provide for student representation in the meetings and proceedings of the Faculties. Dr. Bourne pointed out that the matter was not solely in the hands of the Faculties since Senate approval was required.

The motion was put and carried.

Prizes, Scholarships and Bursaries

Dean Webber)
Dr. Elder) That the new awards (listed in Appendix 'A') be accepted subject to the approval of the Board of Governors and that letters of thanks be sent to the donors.

Curriculum Committee (See Appendix 'B')

Faculty of Arts

Dr. Wisenthal presented the report on the proposal from the Faculty of Arts to offer a Master of Archival Studies degree program.

As reported at the January meeting the proposal had been referred back to the proposers for reconsideration of the name of the degree. The majority of the committee did not believe that in the light of existing criteria available at U.B.C. the Master's designation was justified. They felt that there was no firm basis on which to recommend the Master's credential and in particular felt that the program did not build sufficiently on undergraduate preparation to justify calling it a Master's degree rather than a diploma or bachelor's degree.

Reports of Committees of Senate

Curriculum Committee

Dr. Wisenthal stated that the committee had not been concerned with the question of jurisdiction of Master's degrees in that the proposal was from the Faculty of Arts rather than the Faculty of Graduate Studies. The committee's concern was not which Faculty should have control over the degree but whether the degree should be offered. As far as the desirability of archival studies at U.B.C. was concerned the proposers had made a very good case for the need and appropriateness.

Dr. Wisenthal went on to explain that the committee were very clear in their view that a University should indeed worry about what it called its degrees; titles should not be used loosely since they were the University's currency and should be carefully protected.

In comparing the proposed M.A.S. with existing Master's degrees the committee felt it was not comparable. The courses in the program were not really graduate courses since they did not build on previous work.

In conclusion the majority of the committee felt that in the absence of policy at U.B.C. there was no sufficient reason to call the courses graduate courses or to call the degree a Master's degree. The committee therefore made two recommendations, one that the proposal be rejected at this time and the other that a committee be established to recommend criteria for the selection of credentials for future post-baccalaureate professional programs.

Dr. Wisenthal)
Dr. Richards) That the Master of Archival Studies program as proposed be rejected at this time.

In speaking against the motion Dr. Elder stated that whether the program met the requirements of Graduate Studies was not a relevant question. The most important questions were whether the program met the requirements which would parallel the Master of Library Science which was administered by the Faculty of Arts, whether there was a need for archivists in Canada and whether this was the program that would in fact provide the archivists.

Reports of Committees of Senate

Curriculum Committee

Material had been circulated at the meeting showing a selection of Master's programs which were already offered at the University. Dean Will stated that these degrees were all of a professional nature. While he agreed that the establishment of some policy was perhaps desirable he felt that there were enough precedents to show an implicit policy at the University that professional degrees could in fact be called Master's if there were compelling reasons.

Dean Larkin stated that on the matter of jurisdiction if there were no bachelor's degrees in the same subjects then the jurisdiction of a Master's degree may be in a Faculty other than Graduate Studies. In his opinion the appropriate comparison in this case was the Master of Library Science.

Professor Stokes, Director of the School of Librarianship, was invited to speak. He noted that the committee had no problems regarding an acceptance of the necessity of a program in Archival Studies. Referring to Dr. Wisenthal's statement that the courses in the program were not really graduate courses, Professor Stokes stated that he himself found it difficult to look at course descriptions and make the major judgement whether they were graduate courses or not from the flexible wording in which course descriptions were written. He also stated that the argument that the program did not build sufficiently on undergraduate preparation to justify a Master's degree neglected one factor on which the whole program was based and that was that the entry requirement would be an honours degree in History from a recognized university which would have provided some basic awareness of the needs for Archival Studies. Certain flexibility had been allowed because there could be other areas such as Political Science or Economic History which could equally well provide a suitable background for those going to work in Archival Studies with perhaps a particular accent on Canadian Studies. Professor Stokes concluded by stating that the very nature of a professional program meant that one had two forces to reckon with; the entirely academic program and the acceptance by the profession for which the graduates were being prepared. Not to have gained acceptance by the practising archivists in what was a new and growing profession in Canada would have made the University vulnerable to the charge that it was doing nothing but educating expensively for unemployment.

After further discussion the motion to reject the proposal was put and lost.

Dean Will) Dr. Elder)	That the proposal of the Faculty of Arts to offer a Master of Archival Studies (M.A.S.) degree program be approved.

In reply to a query it was confirmed that admission requirements for post-baccalaureate programs did not go through the Senate Admissions Committee.

Admissions Committee

School of Architecture

The following proposed revisions to admission requirements were referred to the Admissions Committee at the December 13, 1978 meeting:

The Admissions Committee of the School of Architecture requires that students entering the program should demonstrate interest and potential in the broad field of the creative arts and architecture. Prior instruction and experience in the arts, crafts, or other design oriented activities, with emphasis on visual communication in various media, is extremely valuable. Similarly the selection of university courses covering a broad range of studies in the Arts, Humanities and Social Sciences on the one hand and the Physical and Applied Sciences on the other, offers a desirable breadth and mix of academic experience. Irrespective of specific degree requirements within various faculties or universities, the School of Architecture considers it desirable that entering students possess both Mathematics (including introductory Calculus) and English (Literature and Composition) at the level of first year university.

For students seeking general information and guidance in preparation for entry to the School a note entitled "Information for Prospective Students" is available on request at the School office. Prospective students are encouraged to establish contact with the School during their pre–architecture years by arranging for interviews and counselling with faculty, by attendance at public presentations of student work, and by informal contact with students and recent graduates and participation in student–sponsored activities.

Application for admission to the School of Architecture as a candidate for the degree of Bachelor of Architecture must be made through the Office of the Registrar on the appropriate form. All applications must be accompanied by official transcripts in duplicate showing the applicant's complete academic record including evidence of an appropriate degree. Applicants who have not completed degree requirements in time to satisfy application deadlines established herein, or who may be currently enrolled in university courses, must postpone their application until the following or a later academic year.

The academic requirements for admission to the School of Architecture are:

1. Completion of a baccalaureate degree at The University of British Columbia, or at another recognized college or university, following a broadly based program of studies in:

   (a) the Arts, Social Sciences, Humanities, and/or
   (b) the Physical and Applied Sciences.

OR 2. Successful completion of at least three years of an approved program of study at a School of Architecture in Canada or at a School of Architecture listed in one of the following accreditation lists of recent date:

   (a) Schools of Architecture recognized by the Commonwealth Association of Architects (C.A.A.),

   (b) Schools of Architecture recognized by the Royal Institute of British Architects (R.I.B.A.) in the United Kingdom and in European Common Market countries,

Reports of Committees of Senate

Admissions Committee

(c) Schools of Architecture listed by the National Architecture Accrediting Board (N.A.A.B.) in the United States.

OR 3. Completion of an approved diploma course in Building Technology of at least two years duration at the post secondary level, plus not less than three years of study at the college or university level as outlined in (1) above.

An average of not less than 65% or its equivalent is required in the courses comprising the final two years of study leading to the degree.

All final academic transcripts must be submitted to the Registrar in duplicate as early as possible and not later than June 30th. If transcripts are not received by this date applicants will not be considered for the forthcoming session.

Applicants not meeting the specific academic requirements given in (1), (2) or (3) above but who possess extensive experience in design–related activities, or who consider that their background is of equal merit, may apply to the Registrar for a review of their academic standing so that their application may be considered by the Admissions Committee of the School. Applicants in this category must specify this intention in their application and must demonstrate that their experience and accomplishments relevant to architecture will compensate for any deficiencies in their academic record.

The University reserves the right to reject applicants for admission on the basis of their overall academic records even if they technically meet entrance requirements and to limit enrolment if its facilities and resources are inadequate.

The applicant's complete submission to the School of Architecture must include the following elements and must be submitted not later than April 30th (with the single exception of Item 2 as noted):

1. Application form.
2. Academic transcripts in duplicate, including evidence of degree, submitted to the Registrar's Office as early as possible and not later than June 30th.
3. A portfolio containing evidence of creative work consisting of original sketches, drawings, paintings, sculpture, crafts, photography, or other similar works. Additional information and instructions pertaining to the content and presentation of this portfolio is given in the "Information for Prospective Students" bulletin issued by the School.
4. Statement of Interest outlining the reasons why the applicant wishes to study architecture and why he or she has chosen the School of Architecture at The University of British Columbia.
5. Testimonials. Two letters of reference from persons familiar with the applicant's experience, interests, and abilities relevant to the study of architecture.

Applications not meeting the above-noted minimum requirements and deadlines will not be considered by the Admissions Committee.

All applicants to the School should note the Workshop Course which is mandatory for entering students. This course is an integral part of the design program in First Year. It is normally of two weeks duration and commences about mid-August each year. Dates and other particulars concerning the Workshop Course are normally issued together with the Notice of Admission mailed to successful applicants. Students accepted into the first year class who are unable to attend the full Workshop Course, or who fail to remit the course fee by the prescribed time, will have their admission cancelled.

Students notified of admission to the School who subsequently find that they are unable to attend, are advised that they must re-apply as new applicants for the following or a later session, including any appropriate revision or extension to their application materials. A student whose application is rejected may seek the advice of the Admissions Committee prior to submitting a new application to the School. An early request for such advice is encouraged in order to facilitate possible enrolment in further academic studies, or to acquire relevant experience.

RE-ADMISSION

Students previously registered in the School who were not enrolled in the immediately preceding winter session must make application for re-registration through the Registrar's Office, not later than June 15th, or by December 1st for the second term.
