MEETING OF COUNCIL.

CITY DADS TRANSACT CONSIDERABLE BUSINESS.

Proposed Civic Loan Raised to $800—Clerk Granted Two Weeks More to Return Assessment Roll—Sunday Law to be Strictly Enforced.

City Council held its regular meeting on Monday evening, Ald. Nichol alone being absent. Ald. Barber presented his certificate of qualification and took his seat at the board.

Before the minutes of the last meeting were signed, Ald. Barber protested against collecting licenses from ranchers for selling wood in the city, and wanted to give notice of amendment.

Ald. McCallum said it was a question of merely carrying out the bylaw.

The minutes were then signed.

Ald. Robertson adverted to the license question again and said it was not so much the bylaw as it was the interpretation of it.

Sundry other remarks were made and the subject dropped.

Evening World, Rossland, wanted draft of voucher register before submitting price. Nelson Tribune had the remains of the one ordered and cancelled by the old council and would put it into shape for $24. Matter left over for a week, till further answers were received from other parties written to.

Royal Bank, Nelson, wrote, accepting the proposed civic loan of $500, at 8 per cent interest per year and running three months, upon condition that the city council pass the necessary bylaw to authorize same; also that the mayor and aldermen individually and collectively sign a note therefor. The city would be required to pay the lawyer's costs in the matter.

Ald. Smith moved the letter be received and filed.

Ald. McCallum would refuse to sign the note as an individual, and the bank was exacting too much.

The mayor said if the council so desired he would arrange to get the note financed after the bylaw passed. The expenses and interest, as asked for by the bank, would be a heavy charge on the loan.

Motion seconded by Ald. Barber and carried.

The committee appointed at last meeting to meet the board of the local hospital and arrange prices for treating indigent cases, reported a price of $15 per week for general cases and $25 for confinements. The communication was signed by D. B. O'Neil, as secretary of the board.

Ald. McCallum said Dr. Forin would attend outside cases for the city for $1 a day. The prices given were about 25 per cent discount from regular prices.

Ald. Robertson moved that the report and prices be accepted. Seconded by Ald. Smith, and carried.

The Bureau of Provincial Information, Victoria, wrote, seeking information for the use of the government for statistical purposes. Clerk Foley said he was attending to the matter and the letter was ordered filed.

Bills presented: Bennett & Co., goods for a curtain, $3.15; Mrs. Tutcher board to indigent, $4; H. Guest, stationery, $4.25. Ordered referred to finance committee.

Mayor Bradshaw reported regarding the poor family being looked after by the city. The husband had returned and would provide for his family in future.

The question of the proposed city loan was again taken up, Clerk Foley reading a copy of the required bylaw.

His worship did not think $500 would be sufficient to cover the probable expenses of the city, in which Ald. McCallum concurred, the latter holding that $800 would be none too much. He then moved, seconded by Ald. Smith, that the council do borrow $800 for three months, instead of $500 as proposed at last meeting. Carried.

Ald. Barber and Robertson moved the first reading of the loan bylaw. Carried.

It was agreed to hold special meetings each following evening, so as to pass the bylaw through.

Ald. Worden's notice of motion to amend the pound bylaw, changing date of advertising, was taken up. Ald. Nichol as seconder not being present, Ald. Barber and Robertson fathered the amendment, which was adopted.

His worship brought forward the question of appointing a police magistrate. Geo. Nichol and Ald. Robertson had been nominated as appointees to the police commissionership. It was the intention to enforce the Sunday closing law to the letter and the city wanted a police magistrate.

Ald. McCallum, as a stranger among them, not knowing what the previous council had done in the matter, wanted to know if it was the intention to pay the magistrate out of city funds as an extra salary. If the office could not be made to pay, he would oppose any extra salaries. If the office could be made pay it would be different.

Ald. Barber explained what the old council had done about the police magistrateship.

His worship was not acting without giving the matter due thought. The magistrate would not be a drag on the city. There would be no extra expense, as the office would be attached to the city clerkship, which was originally proposed. Mr. Foley was willing to accept the office at his present salary.

Ald. McCallum had raised the point merely for information.

The other aldermen interlarded a few remarks, and his worship picking up the strain said he could get a man to do police duty for $25 per month, which would be a saving to the city over the present arrangement of $50 per month.

Ald. McCallum thought it strange no answer was received from the government to the letters sent about the police magistrate. Something certainly was wrong, and it was discourteous in the department, to say the least.

His worship said no reply had been received to either of the two letters sent, and even the sitting member had made no move in the matter. There had been much talk of late about enforcing the Sunday closing law. One of the hotelkeepers had come to him and asked that the law be strictly enforced on all.

Ald. Smith wanted to know if the city had a magistrate whether they would have to pay the keep of prisoners sent to Nelson. He wanted to know also if the city would have to pay for the two prisoners sent down a fortnight ago.

The clerk held the city was not responsible for the keep of the prisoners. On the suggestion of the council, the clerk would write to the attorney general for advice.

Ald. McCallum wanted to know whether it was necessary to re-affirm the various city officials to their position by the new council. The statutes were read and it was shown that it was not necessary to re-affirm the officials in power.

The validity of the clerk's bond was called into question, Ald. Robertson being one of the sureties. He was requested, on motion, to bring forward the document at next meeting.

Clerk Foley asked for two weeks' extension for completion of assessment roll. Granted, on motion of Ald. Barber and Worden.

Ald. Worden brought up the question of appointing a regular auditor, his remarks being supported by Ald. McCallum. The council agreed on the subject, but nothing was done.

Ald. Worden said the chief of police was in difficulties over the collection of the dog tax, because of the mix-up by the old council. There was dog talk of all descriptions for half an hour or so. Then the clerk was instructed to order the chief of police to bring in all the debatable receipts.

Ald. Worden wanted to know when the finance committee would meet. Chairman Robertson said Ald Nichol would be up in a few days and the committee could then meet before the 15th.

Ald. McCallum did not agree with such proceedings, and his worship ordered that in future, all committees must report at meeting following the date the business was referred to them.

Council adjourned till following night, when the loan bylaw was advanced a stage.

Anniversary Services.

The anniversary services at the Methodist church Sunday were well attended and successfully conducted. Rev. J. H. White, of Nelson, was the preacher on both occasions and his discourses were most hopeful and inspiring. On Monday evening an entertainment was held in the church, every seat in the building being occupied. The following programme was given: Song, Miss Bennett; anthem, the choir; song, Miss Purdy, of New Denver; address, "Some moulding forces of 20th Century Civilization," Rev. Mr. White; cornet solo, Lorne York; song, Mrs. Barber; quartette, Messrs. Moir, Linnell, Hobbs and Fair; song, Mrs. McKee; address, Rev. Mr. McKee; song, Miss Purdy; address, Rev. J. S. Pye, of Sandon. Rev. A. E. Roberts presided at the entertainment and gave a persuasive money-producing talk, obtaining numerous subscriptions to the building fund. All told the combined services netted $141.25 towards paying off the debt on the church.

Ottawa Makes a Shipment.

A seven ton shipment of ore was made by the Ottawa on Monday, the ore going to the Nelson smelter. T. Mulvey and F. Johnson, two of the lessees, accompanied the shipment to oversee its sampling. It is expected the returns will be high, judging from the sack assays of the owners. No work is being done on the property at present, as it has been tied up on a 30-day option to Pittsburg capital. Those holding the option state they will lift the agreement and prosecute active development within a month.

AMERICAN BOY MINE.

Prosperous Condition of the Company's Holdings.

W. D. Wrighter (of the Iron Horse mine, Ten Mile), W. O. Jones, and M. C. Dunne, of Spokane; W. J. Wilson, of Nelson, and Thomas McGuigan, of Sandon, were elected trustees of the American Boy Mining Company, at the annual meeting of the shareholders held in Spokane last week. There were 1,166,204 shares represented at the meeting out of the 1,286,000 shares issued.

A resolution was introduced by A. W. Siegel that no officer of the company shall receive any salary during the coming year, except the manager at the mine and the secretary, and that a report of the condition of the mine and financial standing of the company be printed and sent to the stockholders quarterly. The resolution was adopted.

The report of Manager Thomas McGuigan shows 1738 feet of tunneling and drifting, 1360 feet of raise, and 5422 cubic yards of stoping. The mine shipped 1743 tons of ore, netting the company $45,962.28, or a net profit after paying all expenses at the mine of $5887. Mr. McGuigan said:

"I estimate that the ore in transit to the smelters will clear all of the indebtedness at the mine. Aside from this the company has an indebtedness of but $1600. With the splendid showing in the mine there is every reason to believe the property can be made a dividend payer within the next few months.

"There is between $50,000 and $60,000 worth of ore in sight, and steps are to be taken at once to drive tunnel No. 4, which we estimate will strike the same ore chute in which we are working in tunnel No. 3. The tunnel to the ore chute will not exceed 120 feet in length. The paystreak in No. 3 averages two and a half feet wide and assays from 75 to 81 per cent lead and 150 ounces of silver. We have already followed the paystreak in No. 3 a distance of 35 feet

"The company now has employed at the mine a force of 22 men. Of this number 22 are practical miners, all of whom are taking out ore."

AFTERMATH OF ELECTION.

EDITOR DRILL:

Sir,—I see by last week's DRILL that the foreman from the Transfer called at your office and stated he did not discharge myself and partner for coming down to vote at the late municipal election, but because we stayed down too long. For the benefit of the public, I wish to say that we left the Transfer after two o'clock on the afternoon of election day to vote. The foreman left the mine the following morning and was in town before noon, coming a distance of eight or nine miles to give us our time.

C. E. BARBER

Slocan, Feb. 3, 1902.

Lively Hockey Match.

A pretty swift game of hockey was played here on Friday evening between a combination team from New Denver and Silverton and the local club. The game was witnessed by a large number of spectators, who whooped and yelled to their heart's content. It was a lively time and ended in a victory for the visitors by a score of 9 goals to 7, about the same as in the Sandon-Slocan match. Following were the players: J. Byrnes, R. Thompson, W. Thompson, C. D McCrae, New Denver; J. Bowes, J. Jackson, W. Thompson, Silverton; R. Barber, J. York, L. York, J. Pinchbeck, H. Perkins, Wm. Hicks, J. Doiron, Slocan.

A Fast Service.

From ocean to ocean in three days is the time the Canadian Pacific expects to make early in the spring. Equipment for the new service will cost the system $1,000,000 and will be supplied by builders in the United States. This service will be in addition to that formerly operated, and the new train will be triweekly. The Canadian Pacific will cut 24 hours from the running time, making a 72 hour schedule between Montreal and Vancouver. The average running time will be 40.3 miles an hour. The train will make no local stops whatever.

Last year's business and receipts at the local railway depot were the largest on record. January saw no diminution in business.

OUR ORE SHIPMENTS

SUBSTANTIAL SHOWING MADE BY THIS DIVISION.

Last Year's Shipments Were 6514 Tons—A Healthy Evidence of the Life and Wealth of the Camp—Arlington the Biggest Shipper.

A new shipper for the division has been added to the list this week in the Ottawa, which sent out 7 tons. The only other shipment was from the Arlington, amounting to 60 tons, making 67 tons in all for the camp. No ore was sent down by the Enterprise. They have laid off the ore sorters at the mine and are passing all the ledge matter through the mill which, if run to full capacity, will handle 50 tons a day. Ore from the Neepawa is coming down freely, there being 15 tons now at the landing. It will go forward next week.

For 1900 the exports from this division amounted to 2847 tons, made up from 10 properties. Last year the exports totalled 6529 tons, from 14 properties. Following is a full list of the shipments this year to date:

MINE.	WEEK.	TOTAL.
Arlington	60	500
Enterprise		60
Ottawa	7	7
	67	567

MINES AND MINING.

Copper continues to strengthen in price.

The Besun mine expects to ship 16 cars of ore this month.

The Ivanhoe shipped 190 tons of concentrates last month.

Ore commenced coming down from the Neepawa on Thursday.

The mines in the Sandon camp shipped out 737 tons of ore in January.

There were no mining records of any description registered in the local office last week.

A cave in occurred at the Last Chance mine last Wednesday and Alex. Fraser was killed.

Jas. Tattersall fell down the shaft at the Myrtle a few days ago and bruised himself considerably.

Sam Bierce, formerly of this place, was seriously hurt at the Whitewater mine a few days ago, by falling rock.

An upraise of 70 feet is being driven on the Duplex. A fine streak of ore is being followed all the way up.

The ore sorters at the Enterprise have been let out, as practically all the vein filling is now being run through the concentrator.

The Slocan took up eight cars of copper bullion the other morning, being the heaviest barge load yet moved. There was upwards of 240 tons in the consignment.

Geo. Aylwin was down from Ten Mile on Wednesday. He stated the Neepawa was in great shape, with plenty of ore in sight. About 15 tons of it was at the landing ready for shipment.

Judge Forin held court in chambers at Nelson on Monday. In the case of Bremner vs Arlington Mines, S. S. Taylor for the plaintiff obtained an order attaching money to the credit of the defendant.

CULLINGS.

Lent commences on Wednesday next.

Provincial legislature is summoned to meet on the 20th.

The big Grit convention is now in full swing at Vancouver.

The Cosgrove Merrymakers are again touring the country.

J. Shupe and family are packing up preparatory to removing to the coast.

Died.—In Slocan, on Feb. 5th, the infant son of J. Harper. The funeral took place yesterday.

E. J. Coyle, assistant general passenger agent of the C.P.R., has gone to Winnipeg to be married.

J. Frank Collom, managing director of the Arlington, arrived in Nelson Wednesday from Oakland, Cal.

Alex. Rogers will have the carpenters at work next week on the building he recently purchased on Delaney ave. It will be fixed up for a residence.

W. D. McGregor will address the Socialists next Sunday afternoon on "Chronic Objections to Socialism." Strangers are welcome and objectors are specially invited to take part in the discussion. 3 o'clock sharp.

AN HUMBLE HERO

BY THOMAS P. MONTFORT

Copyright, 1901 by Thomas P. Montfort

"Waal, if you got your mind made up to anything, Pap Sampson, jest speak it out," Jason said.

"I have got my mind made up to somethin, Jason Roberts—me an Jake both has—an if you'll jest listen you can hear what it is."

"I'm a-listenin with all my ears."

"Waal, me an Jake has agreed that the proper thing to do is to arrest that feller at once, an accordin we figger that Sam best jest go over thar to Turner's tomorry an take him."

Sam gave an uneasy glance around.

"Yes, best jest nail him while we can," Hicks added. "He mought hang round here a long time yit, an he mought skin out tomorry; no tellin."

"But," Sam remarked, "you all ain't figgerin that I ort to go over by myself to take that thar feller?"

"Lord 'a-massy, Sam, you ain't a-gwine to be afeard of him, are you?" Pap asked.

"No-o, I ain't afeard of him," Sam replied slowly, "but I 'low I'd ruther have somebody go 'long of me. That man's killed one feller, an I have a notion he wouldn't hang back much to drap another if he thought the safety of his neck demanded it."

"Waal, you want to keep your eye peeled an look out that he don't git a chance to drap you."

"That's all right, Pap, but you want to bear in mind that he'll be keepin his eyes peeled too. Feller like that, all the time spectin somethin to happen, ain't to be kotched settin round nappin. Not much he ain't."

"Mebby that's all so, Sam, but I want to tell you that if I could jest call back 'bout 20 years I wouldn't be afeard to try to take him single handed an alone. You can jest bet your hide on that. Lord, I wouldn't hang back much to take my foot in my hand an put out right over thar after him now."

"Mebby you wouldn't, Pap, but for all that I'd a heap ruther have somebody 'long of me."

"Waal, have somebody, then, Sam. I reckon Jason can go as well as not."

"I dunno," Jason replied hastily. "I reckon I'm goin to have a right smart to do tomorry."

"I wouldn't be surprised you'd have a right smart to do, Jason, if you go after that feller. More'n likely he'll manage to keep you uns busy for awhile."

"I ain't afeard of that feller, an it ain't that makes me hold back, Pap Sampson. Thar's a heap of things I'd laid off to do tomorry, an I can't figger out no way to fix it so's I can git to go."

"That won't do, Jason; it won't nigh do. We all know you ain't never so crowded with work as all that. You jest go 'long of Sam, now, an don't say nary 'nother word 'bout it. Nobody but a coward 'u'd refuse to go, an we all know you ain't no coward."

After a little humming and hawing Jason finally consented to go, and it was arranged that he and Sam should meet at the store and start from there. Neither of them was very enthusiastic over the undertaking, and as they walked home that night they both felt in their hearts that they would be glad if that circular had never come. However, they were in for it, and neither of them had a thought of backing out.

So the next morning they were astir early, making preparations to go. They knew Melvin made a practice of spending a good part of each day wandering about the country, and they wanted to get to Turner's before he left. But in Sam's case there was an interruption that caused him a few minutes' delay. He was just in the act of mounting his horse to start when Sim Banks walked up.

"Howdy, Sim?" Sam said.

"Howdy, Sam?" Sim returned. "Fixin to go some place?"

"Jest goin out in the country a little piece. Fine mornin, ain't it?"

"Yes. You in much of a hurry?"

"Right smart. Why?"

"I jest wanted to ask you somethin."

"Waal, I got time to listen, I guess. What is it?"

Sim hesitated for an instant. Then he spoke slowly, his voice faltering and his eyes fixed eagerly on the other's face.

"I b'lieve it's a lie," he began, "ever' word of it a plumb p'int blank lie, but Mary Mann swears it's so, an she says you'll say the same. She says you seen Loueesy meet that Melvin out in my timber."

Sim paused and looked at Sam for a reply, but the latter stood with his eyes fixed on the ground and remained silent. This was not a good sign, and Sim realized it. Trembling from head to foot, he drew a little nearer to Sam and in a hoarse whisper said:

"Tell me, Sam, is it so?"

Sam looked slowly up and after an instant's pause said heartily:

"Curse Mary Mann!"

"Yes, but tell me," Sim pleaded, "is it so?"

Sam glanced uneasily around.

"Sim," he said, "I wish you wouldn't ask me that."

Sim's whole form drooped as though a deadly blight had passed over him. In heart wrung tones he cried:

"My God, Sam, you're killin me! Can't you tell me that it is not so?"

Sam slowly shook his head.

"I'd give the world, Sim," he replied, "if I could, but thar'd be no use in tellin you a lie."

"Then all them words Mary Mann spoke are true?"

"I don't know 'bout that. I don't know what words she spoke."

"She said you seen Loueesy meet that man in the woods?"

"Yes, that's true."

"An that you heard her tell him she loved him?"

"Yes, that's true, too," Sam admitted reluctantly. Then he added more hopefully, "But she wouldn't let him tech her, Sim, an she told him he must go 'way an that they mustn't never see each other no more."

"But she loves him," Sim cried, "an she told him so! Oh, my Lord!"

"But she's true to you, Sim, for all of that. I'd sw'ar she's as true to you as ever any woman was to her husband."

"I b'lieve that," Sim replied, "an I'd kill any man that dared to say she wa'n't. Yes, Loueesy's true. No truer woman ever lived. But she loves that man. She"—

Sim's voice choked with emotion, and he could say no more. Sam came to him and placed his hand on his shoulder.

"Sim," he said kindly, "you just be patient. Loueesy is not to blame, for people can't help their feelin's. You jest wait, an that Melvin will soon be out of the way, an Loueesy's eyes'll be opened to somethin she don't dream of now. Then she'll see her mistake, an she'll turn to you. Just you be patient, an you'll see I'm right."

In uttering these words Sam Morgan proved himself more of a prophet than he knew, and Sim Banks would have saved himself a world of suffering if he had heeded them.

"You mean well, Sam," Sim said, "but I know my duty. I see it all plain now, an I'll do it, no matter what the cost. I won't keep you no longer, Sam. Goodby."

"Goodby, Sim."

"I thank you, Sam, for your kindness," Sim added. "I see how you've tried to spare me an above all how you've tried to shield Loueesy. I won't never forgit it."

He turned and walked away. Sam stood still, looking after him, and presently he called to him. Sim stopped and turned his head wearily around. Sam said uneasily:

"For God's sake, Sim, don't do nothin rash!"

"I'll do my duty," Sim replied.

His duty—what did that mean? Sam Morgan thought of those words often in the long, weary days that followed.

CHAPTER XVI.

AT JONATHAN TURNER'S.

Jonathan Turner and his wife were hoeing in the garden. Jonathan, straightening up to rest his back "a spell," saw two men approaching along the path that followed the field fence. He watched them for a little while in silence, then exclaimed:

"Waal, I'll be dad burned!"

Mrs. Turner looked up in surprise.

"What's the matter, Jonathan?" she asked.

"Thar's two fellers a-comin down thar," he answered, "an I'll be switched if one of 'em ain't Sam Morgan!"

Mrs. Turner arose and looked also.

"Waal, I'd say't!" she exclaimed. "Wonder what in the world them men are a-comin yere for? But mebbe they ain't a-comin yere. Mebby they're jest a-passin."

"They're a-comin yere," Jonathan said emphatically.

"La! What you reckon they're a-comin for, then?"

"I dunno 'less Sam Morgan's a-gwine to git me to sarve on a jury. Humph! I bet that's jest what he's up to."

"Lord, Jonathan, do you reckon so?"

"Howdy, Sim?" Sam said.

Batrachian.

"You say," said the city editor, pointing out the word in the manuscript, "'She sang with a "warty" voice.' What do you mean by that?"

"That ought to be plain enough for anybody," replied the sporting editor, who had been detailed in the absence of the musical editor to write up a concert. "She had a frog in her throat."—Chicago Tribune.

Praying and Prinking.

Sam Jones, the revivalist, was once taking women to task for spending more time in prinking than in praying. "If there's a woman here," he screamed finally, "who prays more than she prinks, let her stand up."

One poor old faded specimen of femininity in the sorriest, shabbiest of clothes arose.

"You spend more time praying than prinking?" asked the preacher, taking her all in.

The poor old creature said she did—prayed all the time, prinked none at all.

"You go straight home," admonished Jones, "and put a little time on your prinking."

ALMOST A MIRACLE.

WROUGHT IN THE CASE OF A CHARLOTTETOWN LADY.

Her Doctor Said She Was in Consumption and Held Out No Hope of Recovery—Today She is Well, Strong and Active.

From the Islander, Charlottetown, P. E. I.

Statistics published from time to time show the number of deaths occurring throughout the country from consumption to be as great as the number caused by all other preventible diseases combined. It is no wonder, therefore, that the medical fraternity has at last awakened to the fact that the most urgent means must be taken to prevent its further spread and to teach the public that while the disease is readily communicated from one person to another, it is not necessarily inherited, though the tendency to it may be. It is therefore of the utmost importance that people with weak lungs should take the greatest care of themselves to prevent consumption taking a hold upon them. Pure, out-of-door air, lots of sunshine, wholesome food and a good tonic medicine to keep the blood rich, red and pure, will enable anyone to resist the inroads of the disease. As a blood forming tonic, there is no medicine the equal of Dr Williams' Pink Pills. Those pills where freely and fairly used, will strengthen the weakest constitution, and have cured many cases of consumption when taken in its early stages. Proof of this is given in the case of Mrs. Abram Henry, of Charlottetown, P. E. I. To a reporter of the Islander who called upon her, Mrs. Henry said: "A few years ago I found myself growing weak and pale and emaciated. I took various medicines on the advice of friends, but none of them appeared to do me any good, and two years ago my condition became so much worse that I was obliged to take to my bed and call in a doctor, who said that my lungs were affected, and that I was going into consumption, and he told my mother, who was mostly in attendance upon me, that my recovery was very doubtful. I grew gradually weaker and weaker. I could not sit up for five minutes; my lungs pained me; I coughed severely, lost almost all desire for food, and when I did eat I found it difficult to retain food on my stomach. I fell away in weight from 148 pounds to 100 pounds, and I do not think any of my friends expected to see me get better. But some of them urged me to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and I decided to do so. I began by taking one pill a day, for my stomach was very weak, but I was soon able to increase this to three pills a day, and finally as my strength was increasing under their use, I took nine pills a day. The change which came with the use of the pills was little short of miraculous, and so marked and rapid that inside of two months after I began their use, I was able to leave my bed and move about the house, and soon after I was able to walk about in the open air and make short visits to my friends. On one of these occasions I met the doctor who had attended me, and he asked me what I had been taking that had made such an improvement. I replied that I had been taking Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and he said 'all right, continue them; they won't hurt you anyway.' Well, I continued taking them until I had used seventeen boxes, with the result that I never felt better than I do now—not even in my girlhood days. It is more than a year since I stopped taking the pills, and you can see for yourself what they did for me. I may say, too, that my weight has increased to 137 pounds. I am not anxious for publicity, but when I think of what the pills did for me, I believe I ought to sacrifice my own feelings for the benefit of some other poor sufferer."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have produced such remarkable cures as the above because they are wholly unlike ordinary medicines, which only act upon the symptoms. These pills go direct to the root of the trouble, making new, rich blood, and giving increased strength with every dose. In this way they cure consumption in its early stages, also such diseases as paralysis, rheumatism, St. Vitus' dance, heart trouble, neuralgia, dyspepsia, chronic erysipelas, and all the functional troubles that makes the lives of so many women miserable. The genuine pills are sold only in boxes bearing the full name "Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People." If you do not find them at your dealers, they will be sent postpaid at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 by addressing the Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Their Ruling Passion.

"Have you read the American newspapers this morning?" inquired the king.

"Yes, your majesty," replied the obsequious secretary.

"And what is my latest fatal malady?"

"I think they have exhausted both the medical dictionary and their imaginations, your majesty. They say your highness was never better."

"They can't help exaggerating," sighed the king as he reached for his morning tonic and then motioned for the medical man and the masseurs to advance.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

DEATH IN CLOTHING

MAN'S ATTIRE A VALUABLE AID TO THE GRIM REAPER.

How the Various Articles of Masculine Dress Labor Against Good Health—The Collar Button, Perhaps, May Be an Exception.

Clothes may not make the man, according to the old maxim, but according to a well known Chicago physician they may unmake him with a facility that ought to turn the fool killer green with envy.

"Go into the big, modern furnishing house," said he, "and you can scarcely put your finger upon an article of wearing apparel that isn't either murderously menacing or insistently detrimental to health. In fact, you might arraign all clothing with a good deal of common sense and consistency.

"In the first place, we breathe through our bodies just as truly as we breathe through our nostrils. You may prove this by varnishing a man's body. Not all the work his lungs can do will keep him from smothering to death. Then, just to the extent that clothing interferes with the functions of the skin, to that extent it is detrimental.

"Among all the murderous forms of dress underclothing takes the lead, and of this cotton and linen garments are the chief offenders. The cotton shirt especially is a vicious thing. When it has become damp from perspiration, it is virtually airtight, and a draft striking it converts it into a cold storage lining, which could not be better designed for pneumonia. A garment of genuine wool takes up this perspiration and the warmth of the body under it evaporates the moisture.

"'Flannelette' in this category of underwear is especially vicious. There may be no thread of wool in it, and the careful combing out of the inner cotton fibers of the garment makes only a still further receptacle for clammy moisture from the body. Chronic colds, sore throats and even consumption may result from the continuance of this kind of undergarment.

"The ordinary vest, worn by all male kind, is one of the most insidious of murderous garments. The vest of a winter suit is especially heavy in front and is made of wool; at the back it is cotton, 'farmer's satin' or perhaps thin satin. Such a combination could not better further all lung troubles. Under the shoulder blades a man's lungs are much nearer to the surface than they are in front and much more likely to be attacked by congestions that follow cold. If men had a proper regard for health, they would insist that their tailors make their vests of the same material all the way around.

"The ordinary silk muffler is a particularly vicious thing. It may keep one's collar clean, but likewise it may send one to a place where collars are not needed. Muffling the throat at best is certain to advance the possibility of throat and lung affections. The muffler is something that is easily forgotten, and for a man who is used to it to go out without it between Nov. 1 and April 1 is to invite an almost certain inflammatory attack in the throat or lungs. Indeed, no matter how carefully one may seek to drop the thing in the spring, it nearly always gives him at least a parting cold.

"Footwear always has been detrimental to the general health. No portion of the body is more exacting in the matter of free pores than the feet, yet they are covered often in cheap stockings, colored with poisonous dyes, and then covered into tight, pointed toed shoes that squeeze them out of all semblance to a natural foot. The inside line of the feet, which should be perfectly straight, becomes crooked around an enlarged joint, the big toe is turned in, and half of the natural functions of the feet are strangled. Then when a rubber sandal—or, worse, an arctic overshoe—is drawn on the foot the work is complete.

"Garters as worn by both men and women are bad. By compressing the veins of the leg above or below the knee they hinder the return of the blood to the heart and lungs, and at times this congestion is such as to congeal the blood in the limbs, with fatal results. Such garters at the best are conducive to varicose veins, and at all times they tend to cold feet. The wise person who would hold up his stockings uses the suspender garter, hanging from the waist.

"The ordinary suspender, on the face of things, should be quite harmless, but it isn't. If the braces are narrow and of inferior rubber, they often induce deformities in the back and shoulders of the young. They may prevent a free expansion of the chest, and if one's back is weak they tend to bring about spinal curvatures. You may get a suggestion of the hampering effect of suspenders in general by attempting some active out of door exercise. You have to throw your suspenders off your shoulders for the necessary freedom.

"Even the stiff hat has a hard reputation; by compressing the blood vessels supplying nutriment to the hair this blood supply is cut off and baldness is one of the results.

"To a man working at a desk a high collar may affect the eyesight or bring about stooped shoulders. If the man insists upon sitting up straight at his work, he has to look down at the pen or book at such an angle as to strain his eyes; if he stoops over, his spinal column may be bent permanently out of shape. In any case, too, the collar interferes with the supply of blood to the brain.

"The ordinary shirt cuff is one of the most murderous of all man's apparel. Our grandmothers knew something when they knitted the yarn wristers of fifty years ago. A pair of them was worth more than an overcoat pulled on over starched cuffs. The wrist is the most susceptible part of the body to cold, and the flaring cuff invites every blast of winter, chilling all the blood in the body in a few minutes. The cuff is a good thing in hot weather, but a menace to health in winter.

"The glove in cold weather, too, is a vicious interferer in the circulatory system. A man's fingers will freeze in a glove twice as quick as they will uncovered, all because the pressure prevents circulation. For warmth a kid mitten, fleece lined, is the only sensible hand covering.

"What is the one article of dress that can be recommended?" he repeated. "I really don't know—the collar button perhaps!"

SINGULAR MAXIMS.

Old Time Rules For the Table by the German Poet Von Zirkler.

That our ancestors were not so well managed as we are is evident from the following rules, which were laid down by Tommasin von Zirkler, a German poet, in regard to the conduct of a host and his guest at a dinner party. These singular maxims were recently unearthed and have now been reprinted:

"Every host should take care that his guests have enough to eat and that they are not served with dishes that they do not want. In return the guests should behave properly and should be satisfied with whatever is placed before them.

"A guest should not eat all his bread before the first dishes are served, neither should he eat with both hands nor drink nor talk when his mouth is full.

"It is not polite to turn toward one's neighbor and to offer him a winecup from which one is still drinking.

"One should not eat greedily and hastily, as though the dinner had been paid for, neither should one take any food from his neighbor's plate. In a word, each person should accept what is offered and ask for nothing else.

"When there is some one on the right hand, it is permissible to eat with the left hand.

"While one is drinking the eyes should be steadily fixed on the winecup.

"It is improper to place one's hand in a dish while another person is taking some food from it.

"One should always have the hands clean and the nails cut short, as otherwise those persons who are eating from the same dish are likely to become disgusted.

"A guest should never put his elbows on the table, neither should he chatter all the time nor clean his teeth with a knife."

FLOWER AND TREE.

Tobacco water will destroy bugs and worms on rosebushes.

Only well rotted manure should be allowed to come in contact with the roots of trees.

Don't try to transplant a cyclamen after the bulb has begun to throw up green leaves. If you do, you will lose your bulb.

Vines may be set in the spring and also in the fall. It is said the clematis does best if set in the latter season, while the wistaria, honeysuckle and Japan ivy are by preference to be planted in the spring.

One reason why plants often do not succeed in window culture is the want of moisture in the air. Anything that tends to supply this lack is so much gained. On this account plants often do best in the kitchen window.

The petals of a single flower fall sooner than do those of a double one for the reason that the inner petals are transformed more slowly and retain the power of adherence they need when performing their original function.

There Was a Tale to It.

The girl at the music counter has some funny experiences. For instance, the other day a well dressed woman bustled up to the music department of a great store and said in a loud voice:

"Have you got a piece of music called 'The Crocodile's Tail?'"

"No, madam," answered the clerk. "We have one called"—

"But you had it here last week. I saw it," she interrupted. "It is from 'The Burgomaster,' and I want it today."

"Are you sure that is the name of it?" asked the clerk.

"Yes, that's the name. I remember it distinctly. Are you sure you haven't got it?"

"We have one called 'The Tale of the Kangaroo,' from 'The Burgomaster,'" volunteered the clerk, and after some hesitation on the part of the customer "The Tale of the Kangaroo" was sold.

The Rival Gorillas.

Once upon a time a gorilla was in love, and while he delayed his proposal a rival appeared on the scene, gained the affections of the one he loved, proposed, was accepted and soon married her.

A year passed, and the disappointed lover called on his successful rival while he was swinging on a hickory limb, with a crying baby in his arms, and silently listened to his wife scolding him for some fancied breach of household regulations.

"That was a narrow escape," he said as he turned quickly in his tracks and hurried away.

HIS SUIT BALKED.

She Was Willing to Be a Daughter-in-law, but Not His Wife.

He was past fifty and thought he was in love with a girl of twenty. He should have known better, but somehow some men of that age don't know anything better than a girl of twenty. He was old enough to be her father, for his own son was five years older than the girl. The man had been a widower for only two years and was just beginning to take notice, which may have accounted for his youthful taste.

She was not in love with him a little bit and had no idea that he was loving her until he sprung it on her in the most unexpected fashion, as elderly men are liable to do in their love affairs. Widows are likely to be that way, too, so that it may be said to be a characteristic common to either sex after a certain age.

The incident was almost tragic.

"My dear Margaret," he said to her one afternoon when he had met her by chance down town and walked home with her, "I have known you since you were a little girl and have always liked you. Since you have grown to womanhood, and I have talked to you on several occasions, for I think you do not dislike me, I have more than liked you. Indeed I love you, Margaret, and I want you to be my wife."

"W-w-why, Mr. Blank," stuttered the girl, utterly routed by the sudden and unexpected attack, "I—I never thought of such a thing. I have the greatest respect for you, but I do not love you and cannot marry you. I would"—

"I don't know what you are going to say," he interrupted, "but for heaven's sake don't say you'll be a sister to me."

The girl laughed. She was recovering from the first shock.

"I won't, Mr. Blank," she said, "but I do want to be a daughter-in-law to you. Your son asked me to marry him a week ago, and I said 'Yes.' I think he is perfectly dear, don't you?"

"Oh, of course," assented the father, but he wasn't as happy as she was.—Detroit Free Press.

What's in a Name?

Voltaire under a fictitious name offered to the Comedie Francaise a play entitled "Le Droit du Seigneur." It was promptly rejected as badly written and poor in rhyme, but when he offered the same manuscript a second time under the title of "L'Ecueil du Sage" and signed with his own name it was accepted with enthusiasm and universally declared admirable.

A Neighbor's Grief.

IS YOUR CHILD IN DANGER?

Croup, Bronchitis, Whooping Cough and Severe Chest Colds are Threatening.

It is the old story of wet feet, exposure to cold and dampness and chilled bodies. Towards night the hoarseness comes and the hollow, croupy or tight chest cough. Then mother's anxiety, for she knows the danger and the suddenness with which the little ones are sometimes snatched away. When you think of the thousands of times that Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine has saved the lives of the little ones it is scarcely to be wondered at that mothers look upon it with confidence and satisfaction.

DR. CHASE'S SYRUP OF LINSEED AND TURPENTINE

It is an ideal medicine for children because it is remarkably pleasant to take and is perfectly free from Morphia. It is one of the few remedies for diseases of the throat and lungs which thoroughly cures the cold as well as the cough. There are other preparations of linseed. Be sure you get Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine, with portrait and signature of Dr. A. W. Chase on the bottle. Price, 25 cents; family size, three times as much, 60 cents. All dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Toronto.

THE DRILL.

SLOCAN, BRITISH COLUMBIA.

His Snuff Spoon.

Some old snuff takers still employ a small horn spoon to convey the pungent particles to their nostrils. At a banquet in Edinburgh not many years ago the attention of the chairman was drawn to a gentleman of the ancient school who had a remarkable snuffbox with one of these spoons. The box was handed round and much admired, and several members of the company put the spoon to its primitive use with a pleasant sense of keeping up old customs. Presently the owner challenged them to guess what the spoon was made of. Vainly they tried fish and fowl the tusk of the elephant, the horn of the mountain goat and were not a little startled when the old gentleman told them, with a pleasant smile, that the spoon was made from the wristbone of a notorious murderer who had been hanged about forty years before.

The Formalities.

"What would you say, my little man, if I were to give you a piece of candy?"

The small boy straightened his spectacles with his thumb and forefinger and replied:

"I am compelled to remind you, sir, that the postprandial oration cannot properly precede the repast."—Washington Star.

Old Names in London.

If London street names are not always what they seem, the names of the great parishes usually are. Take Lambeth, for instance. That vast district has retained its name practically unaltered since the days of Edward the Confessor, who granted a charter in which it is styled Lambehith. Some illiterate scribe, who helped in the making of "Domesday," did, indeed, make an effort to obliterate its real name by calling it Lanchei, but his efforts were, fortunately, in vain. William Rufus in another charter named it Lambeth, since when it has kept its title unsullied.

In the old days Lambehith (from hithe, a haven) was the great river port whence agricultural produce was ferried across the Thames to the more populous country opposite. There are still many "hithes" left us, such as Queenhithe and Retherhithe, and, although their original functions have gone, there still remains a shadow to remind us of their departed glory.—London Chronicle.

MRS MAXWELL TELLS HOW MUCH PAIN AND SUFFERING MAY BE REMEDIED.

A Very Interesting Statement by an Elora Lady—She Has Found a Panacea for all Female Weakness and Wants Every Woman in Canada to Know of it.

Elora, Ont., Jan. 13.—(Special)—Mrs. Maxwell of this place has written for publication a very strong letter in which she claims that Dodd's Kidney Pills have cured her of Female Weakness after she had tried almost everything else.

This good lady, according to her statement, suffered for a long time with kidney trouble, enduring the greatest pain, with a dizziness and headaches that made her very ill. She was passing through what is always a critical period in every woman's life, and her troubles were considerably increased by this. Indeed, her life was for a time in great danger.

She says she used Dodd's Kidney Pills with the most remarkable results, being almost instantly relieved and in a very short time completely restored to good health.

She is very grateful, and in her letter she says: "I cannot find words to express my gratitude to God for my marvellous cure. Dodd's Kidney Pills are the greatest medicine in the world, especially for those of my age.

"I could scarcely move hand or foot I was so dizzy, and voilent pains would shoot through my whole system, but now, thanks to Dodd's Kidney Pills I feel well and smart."

This case and its cure has created quite a sensation and Mrs. Maxwell's full and frank statement of the matter has been the subject of a great deal of comment.

Dodd's Kidney Pills seem to be an infallible cure for Diseases of Women as well as for Rheumatism, Diabetes, Bright's Disease and all Kidney disorders

Saving His Face.

She—Mr. Jones, look at that impudent man on the other side of the street. He has been following us for the last ten minutes.

Jones—Why didn't you tell me before? I'll teach that impudent puppy a lesson.

Walking boldly across the street, Jones said to the man:

"Look here, Snip, I am very sorry I've not got the money to pay you for that last suit, but you ought not to follow me up and dun me when I'm trying to capture the girl. She has got lots of cash, and if I succeed you will not only get your money, but also an order for a wedding outfit."

Snip goes off satisfied.

Returning to the young lady, Jones said:

"I am glad you called my attention to that cowardly scoundrel. I don't think he will ever stare at you again. I had great difficulty in restraining myself."

Mere Opinion.

"Faint heart never won fair lady," but it undoubtedly has often saved itself a lot of trouble.

There are only two classes of people in this world—the envied and the envious.

The world is full of people who would do wonderful things if they could only get started.

Some people are so lucky that if they fell into the sewer they would come up with their hands full of pearls.

A Desperate Chance.

A Russian exile relates how he once saved himself by a desperate artifice. A police official searched his house for compromising papers. There was in his possession a document the discovery of which meant serious danger to himself and his friends.

Wherever he might hide it, it seemed certain that it would be found. He coolly handed the document to the official, who scarcely glanced at it and handed it back.

After the most careful search the official, his nose blackened with soot and his hair decorated with feathers, for he had even examined the stovepipes and the bedding, departed empty handed.

How the Sections Say It.

The woman from New England buys a "table spread," while her sister from the south buys a "tablecloth." The woman from Nova Scotia orders the servant to "lay the table," while with most of us natives of the United States the command is to "set the table." In the country the hostess says to her guests, "Sit by," when it is time to eat; in town it is "Please sit down." In the city among swells there is no further invitation than the announcement of the servant that "dinner is served."—Mobile (Ala.) Register.

Creoles.

Originally a creole was a child born in this country of French or Spanish parents, the word coming from the Spanish creare, to create. At present the word is restricted in use to those of Spanish and French descent, who are born in the states that were French and Spanish colonies, especially Louisiana.

TEETHING BABIES.

A Trying Time For Mothers When Great Care and Watchfulness is Necessary.

There is scarcely any period in baby's early life requiring greater watchfulness on the part of the mother than when baby is teething. Almost invariably the little one suffers much pain, is cross, restless day and night, requiring so much care that the mother is worn out looking after it. But there are other real dangers frequently accompanying this period that threatens baby's life itself. Among these are diarrhoea, indigestion, colic, constipation and convulsions. The prudent mother will anticipate and prevent these troubles by keeping baby's stomach and bowels in a natural and healthy condition by the use of Baby's Own Tablets, a medicine readily taken by all children and which, dissolved in water, may be given with perfect safety to even a new-born infant. In every home where these tablets are used baby is bright and healthy and the mother has real comfort with it, and does not hesitate to tell her neighbors. Mrs. C. J. Delaney, Brockville, says: "I have been giving my fifteen-months' old baby Baby's Own Tablets whenever necessary, for some months past. She was teething and was cross and restless. Her gums were hard and inflamed. After using the tablets she grew quiet, the inflammation of the gums was reduced and her teeth did not seem to bother her any more. An improvement in baby's condition was noticeable almost at once, and I think there is no better medicine for teething babies." Baby's Own Tablets can be procured from druggists or will be sent post paid at 25 cents a box by addressing the Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

A GUARANTEE—"I hereby certify that I have made a careful chemical analysis of Baby's Own Tablets, which I personally purchases in a drug store in Montreal. My analysis has proved that the Tablets contain absolutely no opiate or narcotic; that they can be given with perfect safety to the youngest infant that they are a safe and efficient medicine for the troubles they are indicated to relieve and cure."

GEMS FROM THE POETS.

A day, an hour, of virtuous liberty,
Is worth a whole eternity of bondage. —Addison.

Oh, what authority and show of truth
Can cunning sin cover itself withal! —Shakespeare.

In person grafted in a serious trust,
Negligence is a crime. —Shakespeare.

Your words are like the notes of dying swans,
Too sweet to last. —Dryden

There never was, and never will be, a universal panacea, in one remedy, for all ills to which flesh is heir—the very nature of many curatives being such that were the germs of other and differently seated diseases rooted in the system of the patient—what would relieve one ill in turn would aggravate the other. We have, however, in Quinine Wine, when obtainable in a sound, unadulterated state, a remedy for many and grievous ills. By its gradual and judicious use the frailest systems are led into convalescence and strength by the influence which Quinine exerts on nature's own restoratives. It relieves the drooping spirits of those with whom a chronic state of morbid despondency and lack of interest in life is a disease, and, by tranquilizing the nerves, disposes to sound and refreshing sleep—imparts vigor to the action of the blood, which, being stimulated, courses throughout the veins, strengthening the healthy animal functions of the system, thereby making activity a necessary result, strengthening the frame, and giving life to the digestive organs, which naturally demand increased substance—result, improved appetite. Northrop & Lyman of Toronto have given to the public their superior Quinine Wine at the usual rate, and judged by the opinion of scientists, this wine approaches nearest perfection of any in the market. All druggists sell it.

An infant prodigy at 4 may be a fool at 40.

SOZODONT TOOTH POWDER 25c

Many a well bred girl discovers that her first cake is dough.

There are cases of consumption so far advanced that Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup will not cure; but none so bad that it will not give relief. For coughs, colds, and all affections of the throat, lungs, and chest, it is a specific which has never been known to fail. It promotes a free and easy expectoration, thereby removing the phlegm, and gives the diseased parts a chance to heal.

SALZER'S SEEDS

Beardless Barley is prodigally prolific, yielding in 1901 for Mr. Wells, Orleans Co., New York, 103 bushels per acre. Does well everywhere. That pays.

20th Century Oats. The oat marvel, producing from 200 to 300 bus. per acre. Salzer's Oats are warranted to produce great yields. The U. S. Ag. Dept. calls them the very best. That pays.

Three Eared Corn. 200 to 250 bus. per acre, is extremely profitable at present prices of corn. Salzer's seeds produce everywhere.

Marvel Wheat yielded in 30 States last year over 40 bus. per acre. We also have the celebrated Macaroni Wheat, which yielded on our farms 63 bus. per acre. That pays.

Speltz Greatest cereal food on earth—80 bus. grain and 4 tons magnificent hay per acre. That pays.

Victoria Rape makes it possible to grow hogs, sheep and cattle at a cost of but 1c a lb. Marvelously prolific, does well everywhere. That pays.

Bromus Inermis. Most wonderful grass of the century. Produces 6 tons of hay and lots and lots of pasturage besides per acre. Grows wherever soil is found. Salzer's seed is warranted. That pays.

$10.00 for 15c. We wish you to try our great farm seeds, hence offer to send 10 farm seed samples, containing Thousand Headed Kale, Teosinte, Rape, Alfalfa, Speltz, etc. (fully worth $10.00 to get a start) together with our great catalog, for 15c postage.

Tell the Deaf.—Mr. J. F. Kellock, druggist, Perth, writes: "A customer of mine having been cured of deafness by the use of Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil, wrote to Ireland, telling his friends there of the cure. In consequence I received an order to send half a dozen by express to Wexford, Ireland, this week."

The Common Chord.

James Buckham, one of our minor poets, put into beautiful verse an incident which occurred during the civil war. He calls it "The Common Chord." The incident was this: Two great armies, one wearing the blue and one the gray, were drawn up in preparation for battle. As the evening fell the bands began to play. "Dixie" by the southerners was followed by "Yankee Doodle" by the northerners, and "Maryland, My Maryland," drew out "Hail Columbia." "Beautiful Girl of the South" was answered by "Just Before the Battle, Mother." Each side mocked and jeered the other's music and cheered their own until the stars came out and silence fell.

Then, sweet and low, a band far up the line began to play "Home, Sweet Home." Another and another joined until all the bands on both sides were playing in unison, and, stronger and more beautiful still, the men on both sides were singing the words. The common chord had been struck, and the thousands of combatants were at one with the sentiment, "There's no place like home."

EDITORIAL CROPPINGS.

Premier Dunsmuir has accepted an invitation to attend the King's coronation in June. Sir James Dunsmuir will look nice on a visiting card.

Last week THE DRILL received no less than eight letters from as many different parties in the United States, all bearing upon mining in the dry ore belt. Several of the writers sought certain information with a view to investing, while all bore testimony to the good name the camp bore on the outside. Indications point to greater developments next season than generally anticipated.

Every child attending the public school means just $20 a year bonus from the provincial government. The city has none too much "dough" in sight to meet the demands of the local emporium of knowledge, and parents should use every effort to keep the juveniles at school. They are sure to learn something and financially the city will be benefitted, which is a fact not to be sneezed at.

Senator Elkins, who was secretary of war in President Harrison's cabinet, is quietly working up a sentiment in the American senate to bring about commercial reciprocity with Canada rather than with Cuba. Times have changed mightily, for the custom once was for Canucks to do all the courting and receive all the snubbing. Canada, however, is in a position now to do a little dictating.

That eminent English fathead, W. T. Stead, says the ultimate destiny of Canada is complete absorption by the United States. Froth-spouters of the Stead kidney have been saying that for years, but there is no sign of the absorption taking place. If there is any such business to be done, it will be by the Canucks taking the States into fold. Johnny Canuck once took hold of the Michigan peninsula and a large portion of the New England states, but had to relinquish them for Imperial reasons. It will be different next time.

Coast labor organizations are at last learning wisdom and are refusing to amalgamate with either of the old parties, preferring to cleave a line unto themselves. That is right. Up-country organizations have been doing it from the first, and the Foley campaign fully justified their action. Labor men throughout the province now realize their power, and the quiet but persistent efforts of the past six months have cemented all the organizations under the banner of the Independent Labor party. In their support, also, the growing power and influence of the Socialists is to be exercised, making a combination of voting strength that politicians view with feelings akin to alarm. Renewed life is pervading the Independent ranks, because of the certainty of an early provincial election, the outcome of which will surely give the Labor men representation of respectable dimensions in the house. They have nothing to fear from the contest, and a fair redistribution measure will but increase their representation. Politicians who are next to the situation say that a just redistribution measure to the Kootenays and Yale will result in at least eight Labor men being elected to the legislature. That is no mere haphazard guess, but a careful summing up of the political situation. The closer a politician can lay to the Labor vote, the greater his chances of election.
