Best Hockey Game For Years.

But the Mining Men Beat the Ranchers On Their Own Ice.

The miners from the Silver City chartered a special train for the hockey team and a large contingent of rooters to take New Denver by storm on Wednesday night, and New Denverites rolled around to the rink to witness the game in strong numbers. Sandon has a team this season that is distinctly above the mediocre, and the blood of the old-timers tingled at the semblance of dash that awoke memories of great battles when Sandon was Sandon and the big "it" of British Columbia hockey. Of the old championship septette that brought trophies and fame to the Silver City there was not one in action in Wednesday's game, but there were men who would have been given a place in Sandon's team of palmy days. Stanley Langille, Fred Charbonneau and H. C. McDougall are players who would be snapped up by the management of hockey clubs in many large cities. The great surprise of the game was that the Ranchers held them down so well. New Denver has a team this year that is far above the aggregation of previous years, and they greatly flattered their supporters accordingly. It was a lightning, gentlemanly exposition of Canada's great winter game, not a single player being sent to the fence or needing caution. Russ Thompson made a most capable referee, the Sandon players expressing their appreciation of his efforts, which is gratifying to the home fans. The umpires were, R. Turner (Sandon) and A Jacobson (New Denver).

The line up was as follows:

New Denver		Sandon
M. Kennedy	goal	W. Tattrie
H. J. Byrnes	point	F. McDonell
J. Jost	cover point	S. Langille
A. St.Brindle	rover	H.C. McDougall
C. McDonald	forwards	G. Hope
F. D. Kelly	,,	F. Charbonneau
R. Blumenauer	,,	C. Isenor.

There was a big crowd present when the teams took to the ice, which owing to the mild spell was rather on the soft side. The home team defended the portal goal. Sandon at once pressed and a scrimmage in front of the home net was cleverly relieved by Jost. The puck was then worked to the miners end but Langille got away, and coming through in meteoric fashion drove a shot at the Rancher's goalie, who saved and cleared brilliantly. The Denver bunch by good combination again worried the visitor's defence, and Langille again broke up the science, and coming away he looked a sure scorer when Jud Byrnes pulled him up. Away to the other end icochetted the elusive disc, and to the accompanying yells from the Sandon rooters of "Stanley! Stanley!" that bag o' tricks was coursing through the bunch again, looping the loop and heading for goal. Kennedy saved fine, and then Barnes ran through the Sandon string, but his clever flash was futile. Hope was pulled up offside at the mouth of the home goal, and then Denver was conspicious for pretty combined work, and as the outcome the Sandon citadel fell at the hands of McDonald amid the wildest enthusiasm.

The din was terrific as the puck was again started. "Sandon, Sandon, come on Sandon. Show these farmers. Put it all over these ranchers! Stay with them Denver! Wotcher lying down for? Whoo-oo-o! Like stealing candy from a sick kid! There they go; there they go! Waugh, waugh, waugh! Sock it to 'em! Stanley—Kenora's—Good old Sandon—wallopers—parsons—fishermen—waugh, waugh—booze fighters—fruit growers," roared the crowd, and then a mighty yell went up as Stan. Langille banged a beauty in the net from centre ice for Sandon and levened up.

Two minutes later Bluemenauer put Denver in the lead again, and the home bunch continued to press. The Sandon forwards put in good work, and this enabled Langille to break through and score for the miners again. Three minutes later Charbonneau added yet another, and half-time found the score standing 3 to 2 in favor of Sandon.

After recess the game opened swift and in five minutes Fred Kelly evened up for Denver amid deafening applause. Play quieted down, both sides showing the effects of the swift play. Then McDougall livened things up by scoring for Sandon, and Denver for a time looked certain to score, but their luck was out. Before the call of time Sandon was two to the good, the last being scored by F. McDonell.

Local and General.

A party of land seekers came in from Saskatchewan last Saturday to locate a large block of land for a Mennonite colony. They were piloted through a part of this end of the district by a representative of the Nelson and New Denver firm of S. M. Brydges. To our representative they spoke of the pleasures of the trip, and their admiration of all they had seen. The earliness of their visit precluded a possibility of looking more extensively around, but they will return at the end of April.

A drummer told us this week that New Denver was a great coat warmer than any town in the Kootenays.

It costs ten dollars for a meal ticket at Three Forks these days, but the fare includes such luxuries as turkey, mountain trout, porcupine liver and fresh eggs:

We are authoritatively informed that the Reco Hotel, Sandon, will remain open for business. All will be glad to learn this, as the Reco is second to none in the district and a haven of rest for the travelling public.

Jack Barbour (Paddy) and George Black left this morning for the coast en route for New Zealand, where they are about to try their luck. Last night they were entertained to a recherche supper and smoking concert at the Newmarket hotel by a number of their friends in the district who originally hailed from the iron belt around Cleator Moor, Cumberland, England. These included W. P. Simpson, Bob Crellin, W. S. Barrie, Harry Dawson (Cockermouth) Jim Burns Wathbrow), Jack Holden (Workington), and Tom Barbour.

Protective Clause Asked For.

Ottawa Will See A Further Petition Touching Lead Bounty.

Great interest is being taken in the district regarding the memorial to extend the lead bounty which expires on June 30th next, and there are many of the opinion that the lead bounty as now controlled is working no material or immediate advantage to the ore producers of the district. To secure the best results to the Slocan in the event of the bounty being renewed, a meeting of lead mine owners held at New Denver recently decided to advise a protective clause in a further memorial to the Dominion government as follows:

Whereas a memorial requesting an extension of the operation of the Lead Bounty for a period of five years from the 30th day of June, 1908 was hurriedly circulated among lead mine owners, and signed by many; and

Whereas the Consolidated Mining and Smelting Company is at present practically the sole purchaser and smelter of lead ores in Canada, and controls large lead mines capable of supplying the Canadian markets; and

Whereas the undersigned lead mine owners and operators believe that smelting rates and charges, with method of settlement, should be fixed by the Government of Canada before an extension of the operation of the Lead bounty is granted; and

Whereas it is believed that fair smelting, refining, and marketing charges should be based on actual cost rather than the excessive charges made by trusts abroad:

We, the undersigned lead mine owners and operaters respectfully request as follows:

(1) That, in extending the operation of the Lead Bounty, all charges or deductions for treatment of ore be fixed by agreement with the Consolidated Mining and Smelting Company, or other purchasers and smelters of lead ore in Canada, after full investigation by the officers of the geological survey of Canada, and that the purchase of ore offerred be made compulsory.

(2) In event of the Consolidated Mining and Smelting company refusing to enter into a satisfactory agreement, that the balance of the sum voted for Lead Bounty, but unexpended on June 30th, 1908, be set apart by the government of Canada, and used in building complete works for the treatment of ores.

And that such works be operated by the Government of Canada on a commercial basis, a part of the profits being retained to cover interest on investment and depreciation of plant. Any remaining profits to be distributed yearly among ore producers in proportion to the amount of ore treated for each producer.

Ottawa. February 1.—During the twelve years that the iron and steel bounties have been in existence the Dominion has paid a sum of $5,108,223 as bounty on pig-iron; $4,459,515 for steel ingots, and $1,241,473 on articles manufactured from steel. The bounty on lead amounts to $472,843. During the past four years there has been paid out on crude petroleum $1,204,135.

ANSWERS TO CORRE PONDENTS.

Quo Vadis.—Money talks—Thaw was bughouse when he pulled the trigger, but he is sane now.

Snowball. Nelson.—We can't say, barometers vary. Consult your daily city papers, add ten and then New Denver skins you.

Fruit Lands, Saskatchewan.—You are entirely wrong. New Denver has not experienced zero weather this winter

Fighting Frog, Standard Mine.—Surely you are not in earnest. Crowe's best performance was when he beat the monkey in the dust hole.

Decent, Slocan.—Your name is Dennis. We have as good a hand as you.

Electricity, New Denver.—Lights nothing. Your suggestion makes us laugh. It would perhaps be rather expensive to concurrently strike matches, but the accrued result would suit you better.

Lights out, City.—Yes, it is vexatious, but the remedy is yours, and if you fail to act you must take your own medicine.

Letters to The Editor.

[It must always be distinctly understood that the Editor is not responsible for the opinions of correspondents, nor does he always agree with them.]

Editor, Slocan Mining Review.

Dear Sir,—How long are the townspeople going to stand for the rotten electric light? What is the limit of their endurance do you think? I know in a small community its a pretty cultus thing to point the finger of scorn at one thing all the time, but the service is getting intolerable, and I have concluded that we are being played for a lot of suckers. If I buy a can of coal oil and its half water I won't pay for it. If I buy eggs and they are rotten I take them back. If I pay for 100 candle power light and I get 5 I'm a sucker. If you pay for more than me, you're a bigger one. Who is to blame? Why you yourself. This hole and corner indignation meetings is no good. We have got to get right out in the open and tell the light outfit where they are going to get off at. What are town improvement societies for? What are they scared of? I know. Its because Campbell's on the committee and they got cold feet. I'm not scared to write my name, but as I am only a miner and a small consumer, please write me down

A CHUBBER.

New Denver, Sunday, 2nd Feb.

We perforce must agree with our correspondent as to the genuinness of the town's burden in the matter of electric light, and we feel assured that sentiment alone on the part of the people deters them from openly expressing themselves. Now, we have in these columns hitherto declared ourselves, and with a hope that a better understanding and good result will accrue, we will go a step further and ask all those who are interested in a public duty to attend a public meeting at the Bosun Hall, this Saturday evening at eight o'clock. If this is not responded to heartily we shall conclude that the absentees are perfectly satisfied with existing conditions.

Slasher Harris Was Counted Out.

Terrible Crowe Too Clever At the Game for His Plucky Opponent.

"Slasher" Harris's sun set at the same moment when "Terrible" Crowe got home on him a right hook to neck and a soothing jolt to jaw, add to which a parting poke in the pantry, a thud, a groan, and then stillness. Harris entered the ring a 7 to 4 favorite but there was money coming all the time for Crowe. The contest was limited to ten rounds, but Harris had joined the down-and-out club before the fourth was through. It was a hot melee while it lasted, but Crowe was too clever at every stage for his doughty opponent, who fought valiantly and doggedly an uphill fight. His backers had every confidence that he would win out with his in-fighting qualities, but they were badly left, for whenever the men mixed the Slasher was slashed and the Crowe crowed. Harvey Fife, of Slocan, was the referee, and Dunc. McHandle was timekeeper. The winner was seconded by Jim French and the loser by J. H. Pinchback. The match was for $100 a side, winner take all. There was not a large crowd present, the gate receipts totalling $40.00.

Round 1.—Both sparred cautiously at the opening. Slasher tried a left jab to face at long range. They mix. This was a tame round.

Round 2.—Both men rushed to finish each other off. Blow for blow is struck. Harris's lack ginger. Crowe with a right hook to jaw lifted his man off his feet and he fell in a heap in the corner. Crowe allows him to get square on feet, then drives him to ropes and gives him medicine. Harris got in a lightning left which rocked the cockney's thinker. Both smile with assurance. They clinch. Harris crouched for a body blow, Crowe receives it and uppercuts before the Slasher could get away. Harris in trouble. Crowe went for a knock out, and got in one on the nose and one in the bellows. Harris goes down like a wet blanket. Fife calls up to eight and Harris gets up frayed at the mouth, his steering gear awry, and his wind reserve petered out—but game as a bantam. Crowe rushed, and Harris eluded a vicious jab to jaw by clever footwork. Harris lands left and right to body, and Crowe emitted a grunt. Harris driven to ropes, but call of "time" saved him from going to slumberland. Loud applause was heard as the men went to their corners. They had been going some.

Round 3.—They met and exchanged light blows. Harris was the aggressor but Crowe was too clever with his footwork. Crowe did some pretty work with his head, and Harris was puzzled. Crowe toyed with the Slasher for a minute, and then he went in for the final clean-up. Harris staved off the onslaught for a few seconds, but he was knocked clear out of the ring. Crowe generously gave him quarter and they mixed for gore. In the infighting Crowe was the better. The latter then forced the game and with a swinging jolt from right dropped his man. The referee counted to nine and Harris staggered to his feet. Crowe rushes to finish him off, but the call of "time" saved the Slasher from passing in his checks.

Round 4—Crowe jumped to the centre as fresh as ever. Harris slightly refreshed concentrated his efforts to wave off defeat and play for lucky knock out. Crowe smiled at his puerile attempts and then suddenly swooped down on him. A terrific jolt on the neck and a hard drive to the jaw did the trick. At the call of ten Harris rose to his elbow, glared at his adversary, and then sunk limp to the stage. Crowe went to his assistance and carried him to his corner, where the defeated man rallied in five minutes.

The breakfast bell had rung twice while Guy was holding that interview with Agnes, and at last Mrs. Noah came up herself to learn the cause of the delay; standing in the hall, she heard a part of what was transpiring in the parlor. Mrs. Noah was proud and jealous of her master's dignity, and once or twice the thought had crossed her mind that perhaps when he came home Maddy would be treated more as some governesses were treated by their employers, but to have Agnes take the matter up was quite a different thing, and Mrs. Noah smiled with grim satisfaction, as she heard Guy issuing orders as to how Miss Clyde should be treated. Standing back to let Agnes pass, she waited a moment, and then, as if she had just come up, presented herself before Guy, asking if he were ready for breakfast.

"Yes, call Miss Clyde; tell her I sent for her," was Guy's answer, and forthwith Mrs. Noah repaired to Maddy's room, finding her still sobbing bitterly.

"I cannot go down," she said; "my face is all stains, and it's so dreadful, happening on Sunday, too. What would grandpa say?"

"You can wash off the stains. Come," Mrs. Noah said, pouring water into the bowl, and bidding Maddy hurry, "as Mr. Guy was waiting breakfast for her."

"But I am not to eat with them," Maddy began, when Mrs. Noah stopped her by explaining how Guy ruled that house, and Agnes had been completely routed.

This did not quiet Maddy particularly, and her heart beat painfully as she descended to the parlor, where Guy was still walking up and down.

"Come, Miss Clyde, Jessie is nearly famished," he said pleasantly, as Maddy appeared, and without the slightest reference to what had passed he drew Maddy's arm within his own, and giving a hand to Jessie, who had just come in, he went to the breakfast room, where Maddy was told to preside.

Guy watched her closely without seeming to do so, mentally deciding that she was neither vulgar nor awkward. On the contrary, he thought her very pretty, and very graceful for one so unaccustomed to society. Nothing was said of Agnes, who kept her room the entire day, and did not join the family until evening, when Guy sat upon the piazza with Jessie in his lap, while Maddy was not very far away. At first there was much constraint between Agnes and Maddy, but with Guy to manage, it soon wore away, and Agnes felt herself exceedingly amiable when she reflected how gracious she had been to her rival.

But Maddy could not so soon forget. All through the day the conviction had been settling upon her that she could not stay at Aikenside, and so on the following morning, just after breakfast was over, she summoned courage to ask Mr. Guy if she might talk with him. Leading the way to the library, he bade her sit down, while he took the chair opposite, and then waited for her to commence.

Maddy was afraid of Guy. He did not seem quite like Dr. Holbrook. He was haughtier in his appearance, while his rather elaborate style of dress and polished manners gave him, in her estimation, a kind of superiority over all the men she had ever met. Besides that, she remembered how his dark eyes had flashed when she told him what she did the previous day, and also that she had said to his face that she hated him. She could not bear to leave a bad impression on his mind, so the first words she said to him were:

'Mr. Remington, I can't stay here after all that has happened. It would not be pleasant for me or Mrs. Agnes, so I am going home, but I want you to forget what I said about hating you yesterday. I did not then know who you were. I don't hate you. I like you, and I want you to like me."

She did not look at him, for her eyelids were cast down, and her lashes were wet with tears she could scarcely keep from shedding. Guy had never known much about girls of Maddy's age, and there was something extremely fascinating in the artless simplicity of this half child, half woman, sitting there before him, and asking him so demurely to like her. She was very pretty, he thought and with proper culture would make a beautiful woman. Then, as he remembered his avowed intention of urging the doctor to make her his wife some day, the idea flashed upon him that it would be very generous, very magnanimous in him to educate that young girl expressly for the doctor, and though he hardly seemed to wait at all ere replying to Maddy, he had in the brief interval formed a skeleton plan, and seen it in all its bearings and triumphal result.

"I am much obliged for your liking me," he said, a little mischievously. "You surely have not much reason so to do when you recall the incidents of our first interview. Maddy—Miss Clyde—I have come to the conclusion that I knew less than you did, and I beg your pardon for annoying you so terribly."

Then, briefly, Guy explained to her how it all happened, blaming himself far more than he did the doctor, who, he said, had repented bitterly.

"Had you died, Miss Clyde, when you were so sick, I half believe he would have felt it his duty to die also. He likes you very much; more indeed than any patient I ever knew him to have," and Guy's eyes glanced curiously at Maddy to witness the effect his words might have upon her. But Maddy merely answered:

"Yes, I think he does like me, and I know I like him."

Mentally chiding himself for trying to find in Maddy's head an idea which evidently never was there, he began to speak of her proposition to leave, saying he should not suffer it, Jessie needed her and she must stay. She was not to mind the disagreeable things Mrs. Remington had said. She was tired and nervous, and so gave way to some very preposterous notions, which she had picked up somewhere. She would treat Maddy better hereafter, and she must stay. It was pleasanter for Jessie to have a companion so near her own age. Then, as he saw signs of yielding in Maddy's face, he continued:

"How would you like to turn scholar for a short time each day, I being your teacher? Time often hangs heavily upon my hands, and I fancy the novelty of the thing would suit me. I have books. I will appoint your lessons and the hour for recitation."

Guy's face was scarlet by the time he had finished speaking, for suddenly he remembered to have heard or read of a similar instance which resulted in the marriage of the teacher and pupil; besides that, it would subject him to so much remark, when it was known that he, the fashionable and fastidious Guy, was teaching a pretty, attractive girl like Maddy Clyde, and he sincerely hoped she would decline. But Maddy had no such intention. With her beautiful eyes full of tears, which shone like diamonds, as she lifted them to Guy's face, she said:

"Oh, I thank you so much. You could not make me happier, and I'll try so hard to learn. They don't teach such things at the district school; and when there was a high school in Honedale I could not go, for it was three dollars a quarter, and grandpa had no three dollars for me. Uncle Joseph needed help, and so I stayed at home. It's dreadful to be poor, but, perhaps I shall some time be competent to teach in a seminary, and won't that be grand? When may I begin?"

Guy had never met with so much frankness and simplicity in anyone, unless it were Lucy Atherstone, of whom Maddy reminded him somewhat, except that the latter was more practical, more—he hardly knew what—only there was a difference, and a thought crossed his mind that if Maddy had all Lucy's advantages, and was as old, she would be what the world calls smarter. There was no disparagement to Lucy in his thoughts, only a compliment to Maddy who was waiting for him to answer her question. There was no retracting now; he had offered his services; she had accepted; and with a mental comment "I dread doc's fun the most, so I'll explain to him how I am educating her for the future Mrs. Dr. Holbrook," he replied:

"As soon as I am rested from my journey, or sooner, if you like; and now tell me, please, who is this Uncle Joseph of whom you speak?"

He remembered what the doctor had said of a crazy uncle, but wishing to hear Maddy's version of it, put to her the question he did.

"Uncle Joseph is grandma's youngest brother," Maddy answered, "and he has been in the lunatic asylum for years. As long as his little property lasted, his bills were paid, but now they keep him from charity, only grandpa helps all he can, and buys some little nice things which he wants so badly, and sometimes cries for, they say. I picked berries all last summer, and sold them to buy him a thin coat and pants. We should have more to spend than we do, if it were not for Uncle Joseph," and Maddy's face wore a thoughtful expression as she recalled all the shifts and turns she'd seen made at home that the poor maniac might be more comfortable.

"What made him crazy?" Guy asked, and after a moment's hesitancy Maddy replied:

"I don't believe grandma would mind telling you, though she don't talk about it much. I only knew it a little while ago. He was disappointed once. He loved a girl very much, and she made him think that she loved him. She was many years younger than Uncle Joseph—about my age at first—and when she grew up she said she was sick of him because he was so much older. He wouldn't have felt so badly, if she had not gone straight off and married a rich man who was a great deal older than even Uncle Joseph; that was the hardest part, and he grew crazy at once. It has been so long that he never can be helped, and sometimes grandma talks of bringing him home, as he is perfectly harmless. I suppose it's wicked, but I must hope she won't, for it would be terrible to live with a crazy man," and a chill crept over Maddy, as if there had fallen upon her a foreshadowing of what might yet be. "Mr. Remington," she continued suddenly, "if you teach me, I can't, of course, expect three dollars a week. It would not be right."

"Perfectly right," he answered. "Your services to Jessie will be worth just as much as ever, so give yourself no trouble on that score."

He was the best man that ever lived, Maddy thought, and so she told the doctor that afternoon when, as he rode up to Aikenside, she met him out on the lawn before he reached the house.

It did strike the doctor a little comically that one of Guy's habits should offer to turn school-teacher, but Maddy was so glad that he was glad too, and doubly glad that across the sea there was a Lucy Atherstone. How he wished that she was there now as Mrs. Guy, and he must tell Guy so that very day. Seated in Guy's library, the opportunity soon occurred, Guy approaching the subject himself by saying:

"Guess, Hal, what crazy project I have just embarked in."

"I know without guessing; Maddy told me," and the doctor's eyebrows were elevated just a little, as he crossed his feet upon the window sill and moved his chair so as to have a better view of Maddy and Jessie romping in the grass.

"And so you don't approve?" was Guy's next remark, to which the doctor replied:

"Why, yes; it's a grand thing for her, providing you know enough to teach her; but, Guy, this is a confounded gossiping neighborhood, and folks will talk, I'm afraid."

"Talk about what!" and Guy bridled up as his independent spirit began to rise. "What harm is there in my doing a generous act to a poor girl like Maddy Clyde? Isn't she graceful as a kitten, though?" and Guy nodded toward the spot where she was playing.

It annoyed the doctor to have Guy praise Maddy, but he would not show it, and answered:

"It's all right in you, but just because the poor girl is Maddy Clyde, folks will talk. She is too handsome, Guy for Madam Grundy to let alone. If Lucy were only here, it would be different. Why, in the name of wonder, are you two not married, if you are ever going to be?"

"Jealous, as I live!" and Guy's hand came down playfully on the doctor's shoulder. "I did not suppose you had got as far as that. You are afraid of the effect it may have on me teaching a sweet-faced little girl how to conjugate amo; and to cover up your own interest, you bring Lucy forward as an argument. Eh, Hal, have I not probed the secret?"

The doctor was in no mood for joking, and only smiled gloomily, while Guy continued:

"Honestly, doctor, I am doing it for you. I imagine you fancy her, as well you may. She'll make a splendid woman, but she needs educating, of course, and I am going to do it. You ought to thank me, instead of looking so like a thundercloud," and Guy laughed merrily.

The doctor was ashamed of his mood, and could not tell what prompted him to answer:

"I am obliged to you, Guy; but, as far as I am concerned, you may spare yourself the trouble. If my wife needs educating, I can do it myself."

Guy was puzzled. Could it be that, after all, he was deceived, and the doctor did not care for Maddy? It might be, and he hastened to change the conversation to another topic than Maddy Clyde. The doctor stayed to dinner, and as Guy watched him closely, he made up his mind that he did care for Maddy Clyde, and this confirmed him in his plan of educating her for him.

Magnanimous Guy! He felt himself very good, very generous, very condescending, and very forgiving, the early portion of the afternoon; but later in the day he began to view Guy Remington in the light of a martyr, said martyrdom consisting in the scornful toss of the head with which Agnes had listened to his plan, and the open opposition of Mrs. Noah.

"Was he beside himself, or what?" this worthy asked. "She liked Maddy Clyde, to be sure, but it wasn't for him to demean himself by turning her schoolmaster. Folks would talk awfully, and she couldn't blame 'em; besides, what would Lucy say to his bein' alone in a room with a girl as pretty as Maddy? It was a duty he owed her at any rate, to tell her about it, and if she said 'twas right, why, go it."

This was the drift of Mrs. Noah's remarks, and as Guy depended much on her judgment, he decided to write to Lucy to see if she had the slightest objections to his teaching Maddy Clyde. Accordingly, he wrote that very night, telling her frankly all he knew concerning Maddy Clyde, and narrating the circumstances under which he first had met her, being careful also to repeat what he know would have weight with an English girl like Lucy, to wit, that though poor, Maddy's father and grandfather Clyde had been gentlemen, the one a clergyman, the other a sea captain. Then he told of her desire for learning, and his plan to teach her himself, of what the doctor and Mrs. Noah had said about it, and his final determination to cousult her. Then he described Maddy herself feeling a strange thrill as he told how pure, how innocent, how artless and beautiful she was, and asked if Lucy feared aught from his association with her.

"If you do," he wrote, "you have but to say so, and though I am committed, I will extricate myself in some way, rather than wound you in the slightest degree."

It would be some time ere an answer to this letter could be received, and until such time Guy could not honorably hear Maddy's lessons as he had agreed to do. But Maddy was not suspicious, and accepting his trivial excuse, waited patiently, while he, too, waited for the letter, wondering what it would contain.

A SWORDFISH DUEL.

Two of the Monsters in a Vicious and Deadly Battle.

The big swordfish had reached the blue waters of the ocean when without warning a blue backed torpedo-like body shot out of the depths, coming at it like an arrow.

The swordfish tipped intuitively, and a sword grazed its head as a big, thickset member of its own family swept through the waters above it.

The two fish turned and came at each other like mad bulls. Again by some miracle they missed, just grazing one another, to whirl about and begin the circling play for time and opportunity.

Then, like flashes of light, they turned and came on with a strange whistling sound and a compact that tossed the white churned spume high in the air—came together as only bodies weighing 200 or 300 pounds can when impelled by animate vibrant engines of unknown power—came together and remained there, whirling, tossing tails in air, rolling over and over. The long slender fish had pierced the other, and the terrific efforts on the part of the fish were to unsheath the sword, which was only accomplished after a struggle for several minutes.

Then both fishes shot away, then again came together, giving mighty side blows, and then out of the red stained water one broke and fled.

The writer found the largest of these fishes a few days later on the sand, where it had been washed or thrown by the waves. Four or five deep wounds marked the body.

In one rush the sword had entered the eye, coming out at the gills; another cut a furrow along the top of the head, another still had entered slightly from below, but the real cause for defeat was evident in its sword, which was splintered and broken against its enemy.—Recreation.

SAYS HOME-MADE TREATMENT CURES RHEUMATISM

Shake the Ingredients Well in the Bottle and Take a Teaspoonful Dose After Meals

When an eminent authority announced in a leading Montreal daily that he had found a new way to treat that dread American disease, Rheumatism, with just common, every-day drugs found in any drug store, the physicians were slow indeed to attach much importance to his claims. This was only a few months ago. To-day nearly every newspaper in the country, even the metropolitan dailies, is announcing it and the splendid results achieved. It is so simple that any one can prepare it at home at small cost. It is made up as follows: Get from any good prescription pharmacy Fluid Extract Dandelion, one-half ounce; Compound Kargon, one ounce; Compound Syrup Sarsaparilla, three ounces. Mix by shaking in a bottle and take in teaspoonful doses after each meal and at bedtime. These are all simple ingredients, making an absolutely harmless home remedy at little cost.

Rheumatism, as everyone knows, is a symptom of deranged kidneys. It is a condition produced by the failure of the kidneys to properly filter or strain from the blood the uric acid and other matter, which, if not eradicated, either in the urine or through the skin pores, remains in the blood, decomposes and forms about the joints and muscles, causing the untold suffering and deformity of rheumatism.

This prescription is said to be a splendid healing, cleansing and invigorating tonic to the kidneys, and gives almost immediate relief in all forms of bladder and urinary troubles and backache. He also warns people in a leading Toronto paper against the discriminate use of many patent medicines.

"What did your wife say when you arrived home last night?" "She did not say anything; simply pelted me with flowers." "How singular!" "Singular, did you say? Oh, the pots came with them, you know."

"The country is very prosperous nowadays."

"Yes," answered Mr. Cumrox, "so many people are getting money that there isn't a great deal of satisfaction in being rich."

Do Not Delay.—Do not let a cold or cough fasten upon you as it will do if neglected. Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil will break up a cold and cure a cough, and should be resorted to at once when the first symptoms appear. It can be disguised so that any unpleasant taste it may have will be imperceptible to the delicate. Try it and be convinced.

WILL PRESENT THE BONNIE BRIER BUSH

Greatest of Scottish Plays Will Tour Western Canada—Famous Songstress a Special Feature

Mr. C. P. Walker, owner and manager of Winnipeg's new $300,000 theatre, the Walker, has just completed arrangements for a tour across Western Canada of "The Bonnie Brier Bush," one of the greatest plays in the history of the drama.

The tour will begin at Fort William, Wednesday, December 4th, and will close at Nelson, B.C., about January 10th. After one day at Kenora, a week will be devoted to Winnipeg, where this famous drama has previously been given for four long engagements. One-night engagements will follow in the following named towns of Western Canada:

Portage la Prairie, Brandon, Regina, Moose Jaw, Medicine Hat, Calgary, Didsbury, Lacombe, Red Deer, Wetaskiwin, Edmonton, Macleod, Lethbridge, Pincher Creek, Blairmore, Fernie, Cranbrook, Phoenix, Greenwood, Grand Forks, Rossland and Nelson.

The company which will present "The Bonnie Brier Bush" on this tour numbers thirty people, and is composed of players of prominence, among whom are J. Palmer Collins, Walter Scott Weeks, Ward E. Renselier, Robert Ireland, late Pipe Major of the 48th Highlanders of Toronto, Kenneth McKenzie, Marion McDonald, Ann Caird, Adelaide Matthews, Wm. J. Casey, the Bennet children and many others of note.

Scene from "The Bonnie Brier Bush"

The entire New York scenic production and electrical equipment is carried, a special large baggage car being required for its transportation.

A decided feature will be the special engagement for this tour, of the Australian nightingale, Miss Maggie McCann, the sweetest singer of Scottish songs that ever visited Canada.

"The Bonnie Brier Bush," the play of all plays dear to the hearts of the Canadian people, is a dramatization by James MacArthur, of the late Ian Maclaren's story of the same name, and it depicts life in the land whose lochs and heathery hills inspired the great song poet, Robert Burns. If in his not very long but useful life, Ian Maclaren, or the Rev. John Watson, which was his real name, had given the world nothing but "The Bonnie Brier Bush," his life would not have been lived in vain. To those who follow the stage closely the play stands out like a light house in the sea of uninteresting stage stories. It is distinctly a play of heart interest, while the comedy is abundant, wholesome and natural.

The enterprise of Manager Walker in securing "The Bonnie Brier Bush" for a Western Canada tour will be appreciated by all lovers of the best in drama.

CHRISTMAS RATES EAST VIA NORTH-WESTERN LINE

Commencing Dec. 1st, and continuing to Dec 31st, excursion tickets will be on sale to many points in Eastern Canada, west of Montreal, at $40.00 for the round trip, good for return three months from date of sale. Be sure to specify the North-Western Line between Minneapolis, St. Paul and Chicago.

Royal Statues Sold.

It is curious to think that the finest London statue—that of Charles I. at Charing Cross—was once sold by the Puritans to John Rivet for old metal. The worthy brazier, says T.P.'s Weekly, drove a brisk trade in brass-handled knives and forks, which he sold to Cavaliers and Roundheads alike as being made of the broken-up statue, which meanwhile was safely hidden in his back yard. At the Restoration it was exhumed and erected on its present site, its pedestal having been designed by Grinling Gibbons. The next Stuart statue set up in London was imported from abroad by Robert Viner, a London goldsmith, who in the rapture of having been paid a debt owed him by Charles II., resolved to do his Majesty this honor—cheap. He commissioned one of his foreign correspondents to buy a statue of anyone that was going cheap, and as that of John Sobieski, King of Poland, was then in the market, it was procured and despatched. Sobieski, in white marble, was represented—in commemoration of his victory over the Turks—on horseback and trampling on a prostrate Musselman. A few touches of the chisel changed the Polish king into an unrecognizable likeness of the English monarch, while the prostrate Mussulman was similarly transfigured to represent Cromwell—in a turban!

Fined For Smuggling Chinese.

The infliction of a stiff fine on the captain of the Colorus, who brought over the 18 smuggled Chinamen from Newfoundland to Sydney, C. B., probably will deter other enterprising smuggling skippers from following his example. The penalty provided by law for such an offence is not less than $500 and not more than $1,000 for each Chinaman brought into the Dominion contrary to the act regulating the admission of Chinamen. As to the men themselves, they can be kept in prison for evasion of the law for a full year, and before the expiration of the period a special act will, if necessary, be passed by the Dominion Parliament providing for their deportation, the present law, while imposing a year's imprisonment, giving no authority to send them out of the country after the term is up.

The Canadian Pacific Railway are issuing during December low rate excursion tickets to Eastern Canada from all points in the North West.

WHAT JOY TO BE FREED FROM PILES

There is Scarcely a Sufferer in this Broad Land But Can Be Cured By

Dr. Chase's Ointment

The utter misery and despair of the sufferer from a severe case of piles or hemorrhoids cannot be described in words.

It is not only the intense itching and stinging, which in themselves are bad enough, not only the dread of a surgical operation, with its pain, expense and danger, but the whole system seems to be undermined, and as the ailment drags on from day to day and year to year, one becomes discouraged, despondent, and in despair gives up all hope of cure.

The joy which cured ones experience on being freed from itching, bleeding and protuding piles is told in the thousands of letters which we have received from time to time.

You need not tell the writers of these letters that there is a case which Dr. Chase's Ointment will not cure, for they will not believe it. They alone know how they suffered, and also know that Dr. Chase's Ointment cured them. In many cases the cures were almost like miracles, so little ointment was used. In others, while relief came quickly, cure was only effected by the persistent use of several boxes of the ointmnt.

Mr. John Johnson, Cowley, Alta., writes:—

"Three years ago I was cured of blind, itching piles of 27 years' standing by using Dr. Chase's Ointment. I used to think that death would be the only relief I would ever get from the terrible misery of piles. Often I was laid up for three days at a time and at other times worked when I should have been in bed.

"Dr. Chase's Ointment is worth sixty dollars a box instead of sixty cents. I am a different man since using it. I am farming all the time and never miss a day. Words fail to express my gratitude for the cure this ointment made for me. I cannot tell half as much about it as it deserves. Anyone doubting this can write direct to me."

It matters not how long you have suffered, if you have itching, bleeding or protuding piles, Dr. Chase's Ointment will relieve and cure you, and it is the only positive and guaranteed cure for every form of piles. 60 cents a box, at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Toronto.

A Woman Director

Miss Mary E. Orr, assistant treasurer and director of the Remington Typewriter Company, is the first woman ever to enter the directorate of a great American corporation. The fact that she has done so simply by her own efforts is also a wonderful phase of her life story. Beginning with a salary of six dollars a week, with no influence, no "pull," no relatives to advance her, she has placed herself with the few remarkable business women of the world.—Success Magazine.

A Magic Pill.—Dyspepsia is a foe which men are constantly grappling but do not exterminate. Subdued, and to all appearances vanquished in one, it makes its appearance in another direction. In many cases the digestive apparatus is as delicate as the mechanism of a watch or scientific instrument in which even a breath of air will make a variation. With such persons disorders of the stomach ensue from the most trivial causes and cause much suffering. To these Parmelee's Vegetable Pills are recommended as mild and sure.

"I haven't got any case," said the client, "but I have money."

"How much?" asked the lawyer.

"Ten thousand pounds," was the reply.

"Phew! You have the best case I ever heard of. I'll see that you never go to prison with that sum," said the lawyer, cheerfully.

And he didn't—he went there "broke.'"—Tit-Bits

Gloves of Gold

The latest novelty in the line of the goldsmith's art, says the Technical World Magazine, is a golden glove covered with precious stones, which is put on the left hand by its fortunate owner. The possessor of such a glove can be seen in the international fashionable watering places and also in the elegant sections of Paris. The expense involved in the making of such a glove is estimated as being from $1,000 to $2,400. A necktie made of silver threads, the invention of a Wiesbaden jeweler, is less expensive than the glove just described. These neckties are considered very pretty, especially by those who can afford to spend the necessary amount thereon. They cost $350.00.

King Alphonso's doctors have cut down his daily allowance of cigarettes by one half. This may give him strength enough to cut off the other half.

Cost of Translation

It may astonish many people to know that the bible is now translated and read in 400 different tongues. W. G. Fitzgerald relates in Harper's how the vast undertaking has been accomplished. It has cost many lives and many millions of dollars. In addition to the first cost of translating there is the expense of revising. The last revise of the Madagascar Bible cost $15,000, and $150,000 was paid to Dr. William Carey and his staff for the Selampore version of the Bible in Hindustani. There are 2,000 linguists continually employed by the British and American Bible Societies which have this work in charge.

They Never Knew Failure.—Careful observation of the effects of Parmelee's Vegetable Pills has shown that they act immediately on the diseased organs of the system and stimulate them to healthy action. There may be cases in which the disease has been long seated and does not easily yield to medicine, but even in such cases these Pills have been known to bring relief when all other so-called remedies have failed. These assertions can be substantiated by many who have used the Pills, and medical men speak highly of their qualities.

IT DOES NOT PAY TO DIE NOW

Doctors to Charge Five Dollars in Future for Issuing Burial Certificates

Five dollars for a burial certificate has been announced as a part of the programme for an all-round increase of doctors' fees as proposed by the Ontario Medical Council. Thousands of people have found it a very heavy tax on their resources to pay their doctors' bills at the old rate. The increase would be a very serious matter to many people were it not for the fact there is within the reach of all that wonderful remedy that, after being put to the utmost test, under the most severe conditions, has proven that for all forms of run-down systems from almost any disease or cause, especially from those diseases affecting the throat, lungs or stomach, Psychine is a safer, surer, and more dependable deliverance than the untried and experimental prescriptions of nine out of ten of the present-day doctors. Psychine, in addition to being concentrated life work of several of the world's most eminent medical specialists, has a sixty years' record of unparalleled and unapproachable triumphs over disease and death that has brought light and joy to tens of thousands of homes every year. And it is steadily going on to still greater triumphs. It does not pay to die now. Take Psychine and live and enjoy life. It is a great system-builder. Fifty cents and $1 per bottle at your druggist's, or at Dr. T. A. Slocum's, 179 King Street west, Toronto.

"Go on, my little man," said the missionary encouragingly. "You want to help in the good work?"

"Not exactly, sir," said the boy, "What I want to know, is, have you any foreign stamps you don't want?"

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. PRODUCE NEW WHEAT.

Pronounced More Hardy Than Manitoba Product—Easy to Raise.

A discovery that may ultimately revolutionize farming is announced by a group of Cambridge scientists. Careful experiments have been made during the last eight years in testing and crossing the qualities both of plants and animals. The immediate result of the Cambridge experiments has been to create varieties of wheat and barley which will surpass the quality even of Manitoba hard grain and increase the value of English grain by 10 per cent. or more.

Prof. Middleton, Prof. Wood, and Mr. R. H. Biffen during the last eight years have been conducting the experiments at the Cambridge University experimental farm at Impington. All the known varieties of wheat throughout the world were collected together and grown on a small scale. As was only to be expected, the majority absolutely refused to be acclimatized, but a few showed a disposition to be kinder. Eventually a few hopeful varieties were selected for such characteristics as resistance to the attacks of rust, good cropping capacity, fine milling quality, stiff straw, and such like, and were crossed with British wheats with the idea of combining all these good qualities in one variety. By the careful application of the recently discovered Mendelian laws a number of new varieties have been produced and have been "fixed." Passing through various trials, they were eventually submitted to the tests of milling and baking, with the most satisfactory results.

The department is meeting with similar success in an attempt to breed wheats which shall be resistant to the attacks of the deadly yellow rust, and barleys which shall be a great improvement on those at present grown in this country.

Possibly the most fascinating of the experiments is at present in its infancy. It is being tried upon sheep, the object being the improvement of the wool and carcase, or other characteristics with a monetary value. The experiments so far go to establish that Mendel's laws apply to animals as well as plants, and that similar results may be expected from similar experiments.

RIVAL TOMBSTONES.

Public Protest Against Execution of Man Who Shot Gamekeeper.

The greatest indignation prevails in the parish of North Baddesley, England, and the surrounding Hampshire districts on account of a scandalous development which has taken place in connection with the tombstone erected in memory of Charles Smith, who was hanged in 1822 for "attempted murder."

The fate of Smith, who, with the object of escaping arrest, shot at and wounded in the leg, but did not kill, a gamekeeper, deeply moved the public, and a tombstone recording the circumstances of his martyrdom to the game laws was subscribed for and erected in North Baddesley churchyard. The late Lord Viscount Palmerston, whose gamekeeper Smith had wounded, was greatly nettled at this, and did his utmost to have the stone removed, but failed. Since then it has remained a permanent record of the stigma he incurred, for although at that time Prime Minister of England, and professing to be in favor of abolishing capital punishment, he declined to raise his voice against the execution of Smith.

Now an astounding attempt to vindicate him has occurred. Alongside the tombstone erected by public subscription to Smith, another has just been placed.

It bears an inscription, the object of which is to alienate the sympathy which the original tombstone is bound to create. The greatest resentment has been aroused in the locality, and much surprise felt that it should be possible for the consecrated ground of a parish churchyard to be used for such a purpose. A petition has been framed with the object of having the new tombstone removed.

Significance is attached to the initials "E.A.," which appear on the new stone. Broadlands Park, the seat of the late Lord Viscount Palmerston, is now held by his descendant, Right Hon. Evelyn Ashley.

A Drop in the Ocean.

Talking of forgeries, in the days long ago, Mr. Henry Labouchere, M. P., although born of financial stock, managed his banking affairs on peculiar principles. In the first place he never kept any record of what balance he had at the bank, and in the second, he invariably refused to use official check forms; "thereby," he pointed out, "practicing strict economy. If my creditor wants his money, let him put a penny stamp on my piece of paper; if he doesn't, let him put it in the fire."

Well, one day it was discovered that forged checks purporting to be signed by "Labby" had been honored by the bank to the tune of over $100,000. At first the bank tried to make out that their customer was liable because their authorized check forms had not been used, but this theory the member for Northampton laughed to scorn. However, at the earnest request of the manager, he agreed to look again very carefully through the pile of forged documents. At the conclusion of the inspection the manager asked anxiously: "Are you certain that you did not sign any of those checks?"

"No," replied Labby, "I could not take my oath on that point with regard to all."

The manager's face brightened. Thousands of pounds were at stake; many of the forgeries were for large amounts.

"Which," he asked, "are you uncertain about?"

Labby paused for a moment, and then abstracting two checks, one for $10 and the other for $7.50, he added calmly:

"I should not like to swear that these were not my signatures." The manager nearly fainted.

MISS HARRINGTON OF DETROIT SAYS:

MISS CELIA HARRINGTON.

MISS CELIA HARRINGTON, 303 Second Ave., Detroit, Mich., writes: "Weakness has filled many months of my life with suffering.

"Through carelessness I caught a severe cold two years ago which settled in catarrh and seriously interfered with the regular functions of the body and made me nervous and irritable.

"I began taking Peruna and found in it a faithful helper, as it enriched my blood and invigorated the whole system.

"I have no pains now, and am always well.

"I heartily recommend Peruna as a reliable medicine."

Health and Strength Restored

Mrs. A. E. Stouffer, Capioma, Kansas, writes:

"Peruna has given me health and strength; it is the best medicine that was ever made for women. My friends say they never saw such a change in a woman. I talk to every one about Peruna. I cannot say too much for it."

Peruna in Tablet Form.—For two years Dr. Hartman and his assistants have incessantly labored to create Peruna in tablet form, and their strenuous labors have just been crowned with success. People who object to liquid medicines can now secure Peruna Tablets, which represent the medicinal ingredients of Peruna. Each tablet is equivalent to one average dose of Peruna.

For Years an Invalid

Mrs. Chas. Gros Louis, Indian Lorette, Quebec, Canada, writes:

"For years I suffered from a disease that the doctors did not understand.

"One day I read in the paper about your excellent remedy, Peruna. I procured a bottle of it and took it according to directions. It was not long until I observed a change for the better.

"I can say that Peruna has cured me. I could not take any nourishment except milk.

"I will at all times say a good word for Peruna. I hold it in the highest esteem."

Catarrh of Head and Throat

Mrs. William H. Hinchliffe, 20 Myrtle St., Beverly, Mass., writes that Peruna has done her a great deal of good for catarrh of head and throat.

Fear Kills Efficiency

Some people are always suffering from this peculiar phase of fear. They are apprehensive that some great misfortune is coming to them, that they are going to lose their money or their position; or they are afraid of accident, or that some fatal disease is developing in them. If their children are away they see them in all sorts of catastrophes—railroad wrecks, burning cars, or shipwrecks. They are always picturing the worst. "You can never tell what will happen," they say, "and it is better to prepare for the worst."

The man who lives under this terrible shadow of impending danger, with this dread that something is going to happen to his business, his family, or himself, is in no condition to ward off the evil before which he cowers. His mental attitude lowers his vitality, lessens his powers of resistance, vitiates his efficiency, and ruins his resourcefulness. — Orison Swett Marden in Success Magazine.

DOCTORS THOUGHT BABY WAS CONSUMPTIVE

A letter to anxious mothers is written by Mrs. F. W. Kittle, of Kirkdale, P.Q., who says: "My little 4-year-old boy suffered since he was 18 months old from a bad leg. I tried many salves and had doctors attend him, but none did him any good. The doctors told me it was in the blood, and he was in consumption. I only wish now I had had more faith in Zam-Buk, for it immediately healed the boy's leg. He is now nearly 4 years old and looks far from being consumptive. He is now a strong, healthy boy, thanks to Zam-Buk. I hope this letter will help a good many anxious mothers."

Mothers Take Heart. Don't be discouraged because everything has failed to heal your child until you have tried Zam-Buk. Zam-Buk is Nature's Healing Balm, and quickly overcomes and removes all skin diseases. It is equally good for young and old.

Disappointed.

A diffident looking man from one of the suburbs stepped up to the ticket office in one of the railway stations in Chicago and asked the man inside in a hesitating way if he sold round trip tickets to the Jamestown exposition.

"Yes, sir," answered the ticket seller

"Give reduced rates?"

"Yes, sir."

"I suppose there will be special days now and then?"

"Undoubtedly."

"Going to be a Pocahontas day?"

"I guess so."

"Well, what I want to know is this," said the stranger, clearing his throat "Will there be a John Smith day?"

"I don't know as to that," gravely rejoined the ticket seller, "but I am inclined to think not. Hotel accommodations in the neighborhood of the exposition are limited."—Youth's Companion.

An Emperor Who Must Die Standing

The Emperor of Austria during his illness has insisted on transacting State business as usual. As soon as he left the nursery he began a course of training to fit himself for the high position he was to fill. At sixteen he was an accomplished linguist and a scientific expert of no mean degree. He could ride and hunt with the tireless energy of a hardy sportsman, and his studies in literature and jurisprudence were conducted under the most celebrated scholars of Continental Europe. That such a course of training did not react upon his health is doubtless due to his remarkable memory, which even now is said to enable him to recall the face of the humblest of his subjects no matter how long the lapse of time. It is a tradition of the Austrian royal house that no Emperor must die lying down. He must stand up to receive the last dread messenger.—Tit-Bits.

MAROONED IN FAR NORTH.

Crew of Fishing Schooner Rescued Just In Time.

The John Currier, a wooden, full-rigged ship of 3,000 tons, was built on the Atlantic coast about twenty years ago. She frequently called at Honolulu, and was one of the best wind-jammers flying the American flag. On one occasion she made the run between Newcastle, New South Wales, Australia and Honolulu in the remarkably fast time of thirty days, which is the record for sailing vessels, about double the time taken by steamers. On Aug. 9 this year the John Currier went ashore on a desolate and barren coast of the Behring Sea. She was commanded by Capt. P. S. Murchison of Point Prim, Prince Edward Island, and his wife and five children were with him at the time. The vessel was owned by a California shipping company, and was chartered for the fishing season by the Alaska Fishermen Packing Co. She left Bristol Bay Aug. 5, after a successful fishing season, bound for Astoria, having on board besides the captain and his family 240 white and Chinese fishermen. The ship went to pieces in Nelson's lagoon, near the Aleutian Islands, and while all on board were saved, the supply of provisions obtained from the wreck promised to last only until Oct. 1.

This report was brought by two of the survivors, who, with Indian guides, made a perilous trip over the mountains to Valdez, a distance of 700 miles. At first it was believed that the revenue cutter Manning had gone to the assistance of the Currier, but later it was found that she had not done so. Then it was announced that the underwriters, M. C. Harrison & Co. of San Francisco, had sent a steamer north. Later the underwriters received a telegram stating that the steamer had reached the lagoon, but making no reference to rescuing the passengers and crew of the Currier.

Finally Mrs. A. W. Doyle of San Francisco appealed to President Roosevelt to send help to her sister, the wife of Capt. Murchison, and also a native of Prince Edward Island. She urged the President to despatch a revenue cutter to Nelson's lagoon at once and bring the shipwrecked party out before navigation closed on account of the ice. Simultaneously with Mrs. Doyle's request for help Senator Perkins telegraphed the Secretary of the Treasury, asking that a revenue cutter be sent to the relief of the shipwrecked people.

In response to these appeals Capt. Munger, commander of the Behring Sea fleet of revenue cutters, was ordered by the Secretary of the Navy Department to send aid at once. He accordingly despatched the cutter McCulloch, which took off the marooned people and transferred them to the cutter Thetis, which landed the party in Seattle. They were rescued just in the "nick of time," as the food supply of the Currier was very low, and the barren region on which they were stranded afforded practically no sustenance

MOUNTAIN RANGE CHANGED.

Transformation to Island of Bogoslof Result of Volcanic Action.

The remarkable transformation that has occurred in the topography of Bogoslof Island, Alaska, as the result of volcanic disturbances, is described in a report received at the Treasury Department from Lieut. H. B. Gamden, commanding the revenue cutter McCulloch. Regarding the subsidence of McCulloch peak, the report says that the peak had entirely disappeared, and that astonishing changes occurred in the profiles in the neighboring peaks, whose outlines "had been softened to a general symmetry by a padding of lava dust that almost disguised them beyond recognition, while the sand-spit connecting the peaks had attained a height varying from 20 to 100 feet.

"Incalculable tons of material, hundreds of feet in depth, had been deposited over the entire island. Fire Island and Perry Peak now towered into the air with a gentle incline rising from the beach several hundred yards distant to their summits."

Lieut. Camden says McCulloch Peak blew up a few hours before the fall of lava dust at Alaska, Sept. 1 last, about the origin of which there has been much discussion. He adds there is little doubt that the deposit of lava dust which has covered Mount Makush and surrounding mountains, believed from Bogoslof Island, when the McCulloch Peak explosion occurred.

Dr. Harry Crane Perrin, who has been appointed Professor of Music to the McGill University of Montreal, and Director of the Affiliated Conservatoire of the same city, has long been organist and choir-master at Canterbury Cathedral. Educated at Wellingborough Grammar School, Dr. Perrin studied music under Sir Robert Stewart, and took his degree of Doctor of Music and his F.R.C.O. at Trinity College, Dublin. He was organist of St. Colomba's College in that city some twenty years ago, and since then has served Lowestoft, Coventry and Canterbury in a similar capacity. Dr. Perrin has published several cantatas and songs, and he is still a young man, with a big musical future before him.

Pensions For Teachers.

The St. John School Teachers' Association recently adopted a pension scheme to submit to the Provincial Government. They suggest a pension of $400 for males and $250 for females, who have reached sixty years of age, and have taught thirty years. Those who have taught twenty years or more and are then incapacitated, may prove their case before the Government and receive a pension of as many thirtieths of the full pension as they have years of service. Teachers of grammar, superiors and holders of first and second-class licenses only are to be entitled to the pension. The teachers of the province will be asked to co-operate in asking the Government to adopt the plan and establish and pay the pensions.

"The Devil Is Dead."

Two of the young friends of Bishop Wilberforce of Oxford, gave the authorities of the university so much trouble that they won the nicknames of Hophni and Phineas.

One day, says Mr. T. H. S. Escott, in "Society in the Country House," they were lounging about the hall at Cupdesdon Palace, singing the Lutheran refrain, "The devil is dead," when the bishop suddenly appeared.

He walked very gently up to them, and in his most caressing manner placing one hand on each head, said in a consolatory tone:

"Alas, poor orphans!"

The Growth of Trees in Manitoba

Some figures compiled by the Forestry Branch of the Department of the Interior gives some interesting information as to the growth which may be expected from hardwood, or broad-leaved forests in Southern Manitoba. In an article by Mr. Roland D. Craig, F. E., Inspector of Forest Reserves, published in the Canadian Forestry Journal, a table is given showing the average height and average diameter at breast height (i. e., at four and a half feet above the ground) of trees in the Turtle Mountain Forest Reserve. The figures run as follows:

At age of
10 yrs,	diameter	1¼ in.,	height	13¼ ft
20 yrs,	"	3 1-5 in.,	"	28 ft
30 yrs,	"	4 7-10 in.,	"	38 ft
40 yrs,	"	6 in.,	"	40½ ft
50 yrs,	"	7 1-5 in.,	"	51 ft
60 yrs,	"	8 7-10 in.,	"	54 ft
70 yrs,	"	10 1-10 in.,	"	56¼ ft
80 yrs,	"	11 1-10 in.,	"	58 ft

The table quoted above also gives the amount of wood which may be expected to have been formed on these trees at the end of the same periods as above. The figures follow:

At age of
10 yrs,	4 cords wood per acre per year
20 yrs,	22 cords wood per acre per year
30 yrs,	32 cords wood per acre per year
40 yrs,	41 cords wood per acre per year
50 yrs,	47 cords wood per acre per year
60 yrs,	52 cords wood per acre per year
70 yrs,	55 cords wood per acre per year
80 yrs,	58 cords wood per acre per year

From a coonsideration of the above figures it is obvious that the best period to cut the timber would be at the age of forty to fifty years, when cordwood of good size would have been produced, and before the yield would have fallen off, as it subsequently does. Thus the reserve would produce an average of a cord of wood per acre per year; and one dollar per cord on the stump does not, at present prices, seem an excessive price to ask for the timber. Thus the 55,000 acres of forest on the reserve would produce an annual revenue of $55,000 per year.

Encouraging the Lawyer

A North Carolina lawyer says that when Judge Buxton of that State, made his first appearance at the Bar as a young lawyer he was given charge, by the State's solicitor, of the prosecution of a man charged with misdemeanor.

It soon appeared that there was no evidence against the man, but Buxton did his best, and was surprised when the jury brought in a verdict of "guilty."

After the trial one of the jurors tapped the young attorney on the shoulder. "Buxton," said he, "we didn't think the feller was guilty, but, at the same time, did not like to discourage a young lawyer by acquitting him."—Lippincott's.
