A MINING PARTNERSHIP.

Atlin and Discovery People Go on Record.

A Development Syndicate Formed to Exploit Upper Pine Creek — Prospecting Work Has Commenced.

The success which has attended last winter's work on Gold Run is responsible for the organization of another prospecting syndicate, and a large tract of ground has been acquired on the south bank of Pine creek, above the Otter creek bridge, and extending up the creek some 3000 feet. It is presumed that the ground overlies the same auriferous channel which has been found on Gold Run, about a mile below.

To quote from the opinion of Mr. Charles Howard, one of the pioneers of this locality, and in fact the discoverer of the ancient auriferous channel, he says: "After examining the gravel on Nugget Point we saw at once that the gravel consisted of granitic rocks. We then set about to find, if possible, its source; this we found eight miles above the mouth of Surprise lake, where we found the contact between granite and talcose slates, which is identical with the gold-beaeing slates of California. It was then a mere matter of tracing the course of the gold channel at the present mouth of Surprise lake. We found the water flowing over bedrock, which was once the side of a canyon, the original channel having been filled in by the washing down of the morraines of two glaciers—these morraines can be distinctly seen yet—the glaciers likely had their origin in mountains, having an elevation of from 5000 to 7000 feet, east of Surprise lake. Gold Run is part of the original channel, deriving its gold from the same source as Boulder, Wright and Otter creeks. Moreover, the gold which has been found in Pine creek, Willow creek and their benches has all passed through Gold Run."

This opinion was given by Mr. Howard over a year ago, and the result of last winter's work on the Pine creek benches emphatically confirms the latter statement.

Mr. W. Bartrim is the organizor of the syndicate, which is formed under the provisions of Part V., of the Placer Mining Act, Section 60. The total membership is 35, and the complement was made up within a very limited time. Mr. Bartrim was appointed foreman and sinking operations have begun under his supervision. If equal success meets their efforts in development as in organization, we congratulate those who have taken the "flyer."

A BRICK FROM THE IMPERIAL.

The Monro Mountain Mine Makes a Showing.

Twenty-five Tons of Rock Put Through the Stamp Mill—The "Bondees" Very Sanguine.

It is known that development work has been going on for some time on the Imperial mine, on Munro mountain, under the superintendence of Mr. Pearse. From the result of this work twenty-five tons of ore were put through the stamp mill. This week a very substantial "brick" was deposited with the Bank of B. N. A. Unfortunately, as the value of this brick has not been made public yet we cannot hazzard an idea of its worth.

We have reason to believe that Mr. Pearse and his associates, who have a bond on the mine, are well satisfied with the outcome of this stage of their development on the property.

Should we be fortunate in obtaining the average yield per ton, after the brick has been refined, we shall be pleased to make it public.

Two deals of considerable importance have this week been consummated on Spruce creek, involving quite a little money. Both are in connection with hydraulic ground, and in each case it means considerably increased exploitation by the purchasers, whom we congratulate on their acquisitions. All the parties to the transactions are well known in camp, but for reasons best known to themselves do not court publicity.

A meeting of miners was held in Discovery on Wednesday evening of this week for the purpose of discussing the formation of a miners' union. Views were expressed, but no decisive steps taken, excepting that of personal canvas to ascertain how many miners would be disposed to join in the event of a union being formed.

But for the notices on the doors of both of the banks, no one would ever think this was Victoria Day. In all our existence we have never seen such a lack of festivity as this part of His Majesty's domains portrays.

Professor Barnes has this week been employed in the rather gruesome, but humane, task of searching for the remains of the unfortunate Andrew Wilkie, who was drowned last December.

Great preparations are being made for the Firemen's dance which will undoubtedly be a big success.

SATURDAY, MAY 24, 1902.

THE opening of navigation on Atlin lake as early as May 19th is an unprecedented event, and if the White Pass Company could take advantage of the fact and commence running their steamers before the first of June, a record would have been made, which we would consider of very material advantage to the camp and likewise of benefit to themselves.

For the last three years the first connection between Caribou and Atlin has not taken place until between the sixth and tenth of June. It is impossible to learn of the condition of the other lakes between Taku and Caribou, but, judging from a telegraphic inquiry as to the likelihood of making connection from here with the outgoing "Princess May" on 31st, Supt. Scharschmidt wires: "Ice still good on Tagish lake. We are no prophets!" it would seem as if Atlin lake had this season taken precedence over the other lakes.

From a record of the mail service obtaining at this season for the two previous years, we find that in 1900 the last incoming mail, by trail, was received on May 12th, and the first by boat (row-boat) on May 26th,—the Scotia did not make connections until June 8th;—in 1901, the last incoming mail was received on May 21st; and the next, by the Scotia, on June 8th. This year the last full mail was received the 9th, while it is only probable that we get another before the boats run.

WITH the early commencement of work throughout the district and the improbability of danger from high water, this ought to be a record season for the district. Already large quantities of gold have begun to come in. The banks have purchased, up to this date, an amount very greatly in excess of what they had bought last year. From the fact that all the companies have this year been enabled to commence operations fully a month earlier, and are, moreover, almost all starting their work on good ground, there is no reason why the results should not eclipse any previous season in the output. If friction between individuals is avoided, the district will have an opportunity of showing to the world that after all Atlin is a mining camp of no mean importance. Unfortunately there are still some busy bodies in camp seeking to stir up strife, but if miners will turn a deaf ear to these and mind their own affairs, we need look for nothing but the most beneficial results.

ORE IN SIGHT.

What it Means and How Often Abused.

J. D. Kendall Delivers His Views to the London Institute of Mining and Metallurgy.

Losses Resulting from Over-estimate.—Excessive estimates of ore in sight not only enable promoters to obtain exorbitant prices for their properties, but most probably induce the purchasers to erect expensive treatment plants, which soon become useless where they stand and often altogether valueless on account of the cost of removing them. Both these results cause unnecessary expenditure, which means avoidable loss, and therefore they are highly detrimental to honest mining. To put it on no higher plane, that it ought to be quite sufficient to induce engineers to keep their estimates within the bounds of fact.

Suggestions. — As a rule, statements as to the quantity of ore in sight, like many other statements in reports, are made so that there is no possible way of checking them without going on the ground. You have the simple statement that there are so many tons of ore in sight, and you are expected to accept it. This is not as it should be. Every statement of such quantity should be accompanied by an accurate plan and vertical section, on a working scale, which shall indicate the extent of ore to be estimated, and show clearly the ore which is known to exist, as distinguished from that which is only inferred. The width of the pay chute should be marked on the section at equal distances apart. Samples should also be taken at equal distances. The frequency of both will depend upon the character of the deposit. If variable in form, but fairly uniform in quality, the widths will need to be taken much more frequently than the samples. If the quality is variable the samples must be taken frequently. The width or length, area and weight which each sample represents should in every instance be stated. It is important, too, that the lines along which the samples are taken be shown on the plan. Ore deposits are frequently more or less banded, and often the values vary in the different bands. It is necessary, therefore, that in such deposits the samples be taken across the banding, and not lengthwise of it. If taken in the latter direction the latter may be wholly from a rich band, or wholly from a poor one, and therefore do not represent the average quality at that part of the deposit.

If these suggestions be followed, we shall hear much less than in the past of errors in estimating ore in sight, for anyone can then check the calculations, and see at a glance what has been observed and what assumed. Only by wilful misrepresentation could the facts then be concealed.

Some people, unfortunately, are incapable of recording facts accurately, either from lack of the necessary training, or because their observations are more or less vitiated by all sorts of ideas that are not paralleled by phenomena, so that what is becomes twisted into what, from their point of view, ought to be. Such men would be much more useful in the realms of fiction than in a mine.

Others, again, are more or less capable of making the observations suggested, but, from lack of experience in structural geology, are not in some cases, capable of forming a reliable opinion as to the quantity of ore in sight. The work of such men could be checked if their reports were prepared as recommended.

The careless and reckless who might airily write down a few figures in the usual omnibus sentence, as to the quantity of ore in sight—looking upon them probably as a mere matter of opinion—would doubtless feel themselves compelled to go into the matter thoroughly when the facts on which their opinion was based had to be set forth clearly in the manner suggested.

It is also necessary that a statement should be made as to who is responsible for the different data employed, as, for example: Who made the geological observations, who took the samples, who made the assays, who supplied the plans. The value to be attached in each part and to the whole can then be fixed with some degree of useful data supplied by one less able or less careful, the conclusions of the former may be of very little value. In conclusion, the writer wishes it to be clearly understood that this communication is not so much intended to set forth all the methods and precautions needed in estimating ore in sight, many of which can only be determined on the spot, as to urge the importance of having all the observations of fact relied on so set out in the report and accompanying plan that anyone competent to do so may check the results. The effect of such a course will probably be to induce greater care on the part of those responsible for the estimates, and at the same time increase the confidence of those for whom the estimates are made by affording a clear indication of what is meant by "ore in sight" in each particular case.
