W. C. T. U. Meets

On Wednesday September 13th, the Union met in the Methodist Church. The attendance was good. Two new members were received: the day and hour of meeting of last year were retained namely the second Wednesday in the month at 3 30 p.m. In future, the place of meeting will be at members homes, which were readily offered for this purpose. The next meeting will be at the home of Mrs S, A. Speers, on October 11th, when the subject 'Membership,' will be discussed in all its bearings. An entire plan of work for the year was not completed. but it was unanimously decided to hold at least two medal contests, one in November and one in March. Miss Daisy Klingensmith who is Superintendent of Medal contests, is now open to receive applications from would be competitors, and it is hoped a large number will avail themselves of this means of obtaining free but efficient elocutionary training. The children will be classified into groups of nearly similar age, and there will be held as many contests as are necessary to give all the applicants a chance to contest for the silver medal. Mrs Hall of Canyon City, was induced to undertake the work of Superintendent of Mothers Meetings, whilst Superintendent of Literature Mrs Knott has supplied with sample temperance literature' on which to report and advise the Union later. Six copies of the last Provincial Convention, were circulated among the members, to be read and passed on.

K. Johnson, left on Monday, for a business trip to Revelstoke and Calgary. He will return this week end.

To Those who Keep Bees

WHAT I HAVE LEARNED ABOUT BEES

Many who raise bees for commercial purposes seldom study the natural history of the insect and usually fail to learn the internal mechanism of the most nearly perfect commonwealth which exists. For some time I have made a specialty of the bee family, and realize that a colony of bees is the study almost of a lifetime in all its intricacies. Undoubtedly there is no other insect in the world as valuable to man, as the bee carries fertilizing pollen among the blossoms of the fruit trees to twenty times the amount of any other agent, besides supplying the markets of the world with the honey which in all times has been regarded as a delicacy. It has been asserted with truth, that bees came with man to the western continent. Before his advent there was no honey-bee to suck the nectar from the flowers. Honey was unknown to the red man. They called the honey bee "the white man's fly." Some suppose that a hive of bees was brought over in the Mayflower. This may be true, but but it is certain that the bee was early imported into the United States, and it was the German or black bee that came first. Not quite fifty years ago, S. P. Parsons brought the first colonies that were imported directly to America. From this small beginning, how extensive the development!

I have found that bees are most fond of those places where their favorite flowers are to be found, and consequently have encouraged the growth of such shrubs and flowers as are known to supply an abundance of honey and wax, In most situations bees do not fly far for food, and may be observed to return very quickly to their hives when a storm is approaching. Among the shrubs, trees and flowers most favorable for them may be mentioned the tulip-poplar, gooseberry, raspberry, apricot, and all other fruit trees; the locust, alder, mignonette, lemon thyme, buckwheat, white clover, wild thyme and, and winter savory. The best time to establish an apiary is about February.

Bees should not be nearer the highway than 100 feet, or to a house where there are small children. An apiary can extend up to a highway with safety provided there is a high board fence or hedge intervening This obstruction causes the bees to aim high in their flight, which takes them up out of mischief. It would be better for all bees on a farm to be in a high board enclosure, so that breachy animals would not be in danger by upsetting their hives. It is generally the result of carelessness when horses are killed by them.

The growth of the queen bee is complete in about seventeen days. It is sometimes said that the queen-bee is the management of the hive, but this is not so. The government is carried on entirely by the working bees. Some believe that the bees extract honey from the flowers. That which is taken from the blossoms is converted into honey by the bee. First it is nothing more than cane sugar. The bee makes honey and gives it the aroma which distinguishes the real article from the imitation. The material for the honey is gathered by the workers. These are of neuter-gender, but are really the undeveloped females. The life of these is about six weeks during the summer.

They gain their maturity in twenty-one days. They travel to and from the flowers at about the rate of sixty miles an hour and make from thirty to forty trips during a single hour. When it is remembered that there are many thousand bees constantly at work it will be seen what an infinitesimal quantity is carried by each bee each trip. The bee's knowledge of direction is remarkable. No time is lost in returning again to the flower upon which it has been working, though the distance may be three miles and the flower may be one in a great field.

The value of the bee lies in its tongue and feet, principally. As the usefulness of the tongue as a honey extractor is supposed to vary with its length efforts have been made in France to develop an improved, or long-tounged, race of bees. This member is measured by two methods. Some use a box having a cover of wire netting and a slightly inclined bottom, the bees which reach through the netting and suck sweets from the bottom farthest down the incline being those with the longest tongues. Another apparatus is a vessel of sweetened liquid, with a perforated tin plate cover which can be adjusted at any desired height above the liquid. Ordinary bees are found to have tongues about one-forth of an inch in length, while those of the black French bees reach nearly a third longer, and those of the best American have a maximum length of a few millimetres less. The hives whose bees extract syrup from the greatest depths are preserved as stock for reproduction.

The service which bees render to orchardists is extremely great. Reliable parties have known orchards which were entirely barren previous to the introduction of a few colonies of bees. The body of the bee is covered with hair, and the pollen dust adheres to its feet and body. When it reaches another flower some of the fertilizing material is left and enriches the blossom. Wild bees are valuable to render this service, but the domestic colonies are better.

It would take a single bee several years to manufacture a pound of honey which will fill about three thousand cells.

FALL FAIR

Arrangements have now been made for the Creston Fall Fruit Fair, which is to be held on the 8th November next.

An energetic committee consisting of Messrs J. Heath, Chairman, W. K. Brown, J. Compton, and D. S. Timmons, has been working on the matter for some weeks, and the result of their labors, in the shape of the complete programme and prize list, will shortly be available to the public.

Many valuable prizes, including two medals donated by the Canadian Bank of Commerce, a Silver Cup from Mr. J. B. Moran, two hundred fruit trees from Messrs Jackson and Compton, together with a cash prize list including $30 from the Government for the apple packing school competition, have been donated, and from present appearances, Creston's first Annual Fall Fruit and Produce Fair, promises to be a great success.

CRESTON BOARD OF TRADE

After a good deal of preliminary skirmishing, a quorom was secured and the Creston Board of Trade got down to business at 9 p. m. on Tuesday evening, with President Rodgers in the chair.

The minutes of the last meeting were adopted as read. Under the heading of correspondance several communications were considered and dealt with, the most important was a letter from the Attorneys General's Department re the appointment of a Magistrate or J. P's at Creston who would act, and the Secretary was instructed to reply to the facts and request a further reply.

Communications regarding the photos in connection with the Board of Trade Pamphlet, the Herd Law, and various minor matters were ordered answered or tyled.

On a motion, it was decided to equip Mr. Bevan with a letter of introduction, and a supply of phamplets, to be used in connection with his coming tour of the States for the purpose of assisting him to advertise this district.

Mr. R. M. Reid brought up the matter of the approaching exhibit for the Prairie, and in resigning from the Committee owing to his holiday in the East, gave some valuable information for the guidance of his successor on the committee. A motion was adopted for a committee of two, to interview and make arrangements for the person to take charge of the Exhibit to the prairie.

Messrs Wynn, Murdock and Gunn, were unanimously elected members of the Board.

A vote of thanks to Mr. R. S. Bevan, for his past services to the Board, was unanimously adopted.

The meeting adjourned at 10 p. m.

PLEASANT AT HOME

Last Friday afternoon at 2.30 p. m., Mrs John Hobden entertained in honor of Mrs R. S. Bevan, on the eve of Mrs Bevan leaving Creston.—In spite of the clouds and gentle showers, a large number of ladies gathered at the home of the hostess. The gloom outside was soon forgotton, when the congenial crowd began to unfold the language of flowers, which was given them to solve Miss Howarth was the fortunate one to capture the prize, which was a dainty, China Tea-cup. Last but not least of the afternoon pleasures, the Hostess and Mrs Croasthwaite served the ladies with a most delicious course of sandwiches, cakes, candy and tea, the most delicate epicure could have indulged freely, and all expressed the hope, to have a repetition in the near future; 6 o'clock came, and the guests bade their hostess goodbye, thanking her for a most enjoyable afternoon. Those present were: Mesdames R. S. Bevan E. Mallandaine, Geo Huscroft, Jno. Arrowsmith, Geo Young, W. K. Brown H. L. Croasthwait, W. S. Ryckman, O. P. Wisler, F. Putnam and Miss D. Howarth. Contributed.

We call attention to the unique arrangements entered into by the Presbyterian and Methodist congregations of Creston. During the absence of both pastors, the united congregations will be served by the Rev Dr. Eby, of Toronto. The arrangement itself shows the cordial relations of the two pastors and their congregations. It is possible that this may be extended after Mr. Sarkissians return, if it is still found wise to extend Mr. Eby's holiday.

Such arrangements relieve both pastors in Sunday work, and the co-operation gives them a more united backing in any work of a general reformatory or humanitarian charactor, in which all well wishers of the public good could unite. While it is unusual that two congregations should thus be united in the absence of both pastors under the preaching of a visitor, Dr. Eby has been here long enough to become well and favorably known as an eloquent and practical preacher.

No Ability to Digest Food

NERVOUS SYSTEM SO EXHAUSTED THAT VITAL ORGANS ARE FEEBLE IN ACTION

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food

The digestive system is a wonderful piece of machinery, but power is necessary to make it effective.

In this case the power is the nerve force contained in the body, and, if the nerve force is lacking the digestive system becomes crippled and there is suffering from indigestion, nervous headaches, neuralgic pains, dizzy spells, weakness and discouragement.

Strength cannot be regained from the food you eat so long as digestion is so imperfect, but you can be restored by Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, which contains in condensed pill form the very elements of nature which go to form new nerve force.

Overwork, worry, anxiety and excessive mental effort exhaust the nervous system at a tremendous rate, and repair must be made before some dreadful form of disease sets in. Dr. Chase's Nerve Food invigorates the nerves which control the digestive fluids, sharpens the appetite, is slightly laxative, so as to encourage the action of the bowels and strengthens every organ of the body.

You can use this treatment feeling certain that every dose is doing you at least some good, and can prove it by noting your increase in weight.

SCOTTISH ABSTINENCE.

Scottish Minister Protests Against Alfred Austin's Story.

An angry Scottish clergyman has written to the London Times in protest against a slander upon the Scotch nation incorporated by Mr. Alfred Austin in his Autobiography. Mr. Austin once went to Irvine to unveil a statue of Robert Burns. He writes:

On my arrival I spent the evening with the local authorities, and at the supper or early dinner to which they treated me as a guest, I fear they must have thought me a poor creature, unless they were familiar with Southern ways—for I drank sparingly, according to my custom, while they, to my amazement, tossed off glass after glass of whisky neat, remaining just as sober as when we sat down.

The minister of Irvine, as one of the few survivors of that memorable occasion, makes effective denial, and leaves little doubt as to who is the better literary craftsman of the two men. "Mr. Austin was entertained by the late Provost Breckenridge, not to 'supper or early dinner'—what a strange inversion! — but to dinner somewhat after eight o'clock.. I do not know what Mr. Austin drank. I was not so rude as to note, but I take his word. Will he take mine? It is not, and in my experience it never has been, the habit of the 'local authorities' to 'toss off glass after glass of whisky.' It certainly was not the case that night. Further, those hardy drinkers—according to Mr. Austin—would not have the hardihood to drink whisky 'neat.' There is one part of his story true—they were 'just as sober as before we sat down.' So they were, for an obvious reason: they happened to be well-bred men. Mr. Austin is, perhaps, as ignorant of Northern ways as he supposes us to be of Southern. Was he surprised that we were not all dressed in kilts? We have had evidently 'a chiel' amang us makin' — not takin' — notes, and now that he has printed them, they must, if they are all like this sample, be a monument of poetic inventive genius."

King's Sons Commoners.

The announcement that when the proper time comes it is the intention of the King to revive for his younger sons dukedoms, such as those of Kent, Sussex, and Gloucester, which are connected with the royal family, and that the Dukedom of Kent has, in fact, been chosen already for Prince Albert, brings home the fact that as the children of a peer have no special advantage so neither have the younger children of the King himself. The King's wife, his eldest son, his eldest daughter, and his eldest's son's wife all have special advantages by law. His other children have no special status unless their father thinks good to raise them to the peerage.

As the law of England knows no classes of men except peers and commoners, it follows that the younger children of the King — the eldest is, born Duke of Cornwall—are in strictness of speech commoners, unless they are personally raised to the peerage. There is nothing to hinder a King's son, not being a peer, from voting at an election, or from being elected to the House of Commons; and if he committed a crime he would be tried, not by the House of Peers or the Court of the High Lord Steward, but by a common jury.

Mere precedence and titles have nothing to do with the matter, though probably a good deal of confusion arises from the modern fashion of calling all the children of the King "Princes" or "Princesses."

A Trifling Incident.

An Irishman went into a barber shop, and the unsteady gait with which he approached the chair showed that he had been imbibing of the produce of the still. He wanted his hair cut, and while the barber was getting him ready went off into a sleep. His head kept bobbing from one side to the other, and at length the barber in making a snip cut off the lower part of his ear. The barber gasped, then jumped about and howled, and a crowd of neighbors rushed in. Finally the demonstration became so great that it began to attract the attention of the man in the chair, and he opened one eye and said, "Wh-wha-at's the matter wid yez?"

"Good Lord!" said the barber, "I've cut off the whole lower part of your ear."

"Have ye? Ah, thin, go on wid yer business. It was too long anyhow!"

Gave Him Satisfaction.

Once, while stopping at a country inn, Stephen Incledon, an eminent English tenor of other days, quarreled during the evening with an army officer. He imagined he had closed the controversy by going off to bed, but the officer, left downstairs to brood over his wrongs, thought otherwise. Making his way to Incledon's bedroom, he found the singer fast asleep. Waking him, the officer demanded satisfaction. "Satisfaction?" murmured Incledon, sleepily. "Well, you shall have it." Whereupon he sat up in bed and sang "Black-Eyed Susan" in his best style. "There," he said, lying down again, "my singing of that song has given satisfaction to thousands," and turned over and went to sleep again.

"Maggot Cure."

Following upon the many attempts to find a cure for consumption, the "maggot cure" is being experimented with at Shipton, and also, on a more ambitious scale, at Denholme. A wooden building at some distance from the town, owned by Messrs. Clark & Co., maggot breeders, is the scene of the trial. The view is that the patient must inhale the ammonia-like fumes given off by myriads of maggots. The "cure" is being tested by a couple of ladies.

Minard's Liniment cures garget in cows

Ordinary white chalk such as is used in the school room for blackboard work is invaluable as a household remedy for removing spots from white clothes and shoes.

Through indiscretion in eating green fruit in summer many children become subject to cholera morbis caused by irritating acids that act violently on the lining of the intestines. Pains and dangerous purgings ensue, and the delicate system of the child suffers under the drain. In such cases the safest and surest medicine is Dr. J. D. Kellogg's Dysentery Cordial. It will check the inflammation and save the child's life.

THE LIFE-LINE.

Work of the Rocket Brigade on British Coast.

There is little doubt that His Majesty's action in instituting a new medal to be awarded to members of Volunteer Life Saving Brigades for long service will be greatly appreciated throughout the kingdom.

The Royal National Lifeboat Institution can claim the saving of 49,394 lives from shipwrecks since the year 1824, an average of nearly 570 per annum, which speaks volumes for the work of the lifeboats round our coasts. But wrecks often take place in parts where it is impossible for a lifeboat to render aid on account of rocks, or the coast may be composed of a continuous line of cliffs, from which no boat could be launched.

In such cases a rocket brigade is requisitioned, and their method of life-saving is most interesting.

When the local coastguards—who usually direct the working of a rocket party—are apprised of a wreck, they call the brigade together—generally by the firing of a rocket—and they proceed to drag their apparatus overland on a small wagon to the point nearest the stranded vessel. To aid them in their work at night a "wreck-light," is provided. This is composed of a number of small boxes similar to condensed milk tins containing inflammable material, the boxes being lightly fastened to each other end to end. The whole is hung up and lighted from the bottom; each box burns away brilliantly, then ignites the one above it, and falls to the ground, so that the light is maintained, and does not become blurred by any carbonized or waste matter.

A rocket is placed on the tripod firing stand, a line being attached to the stick of the rocket. Each line is kept stowed carefully in a box "flaked" round a number of pins to prevent it becoming entangled in transit. When ready for firing, however, the lid of the box is taken off, and the pins withdrawn, leaving the line in a convenient form for running out.

The rocket is now carefully pointed towards the wreck, allowance being made for wind, distance, etc.; then a light is applied to the fuse, a shower of sparks springs from its tail, and it flies off on its errand of mercy, carrying the line.

If the rocket is well placed it will carry one end of the line across the deck of the stranded vessel, and, the other end being left on shore, a connection is established; but the difficulties of firing in a gale may necessitate the discharging of several rockets before this step is accomplished.

The people on the wreck haul the line in, and the rescuers will attach to their end a hawser—that is, a heavy rope, on which the "breeches-buoy" will be suspended, and an "endless whip," the latter being a long length of rope running through a block, the ends of the rope being joined together so as to form a large ring. A small tag attached to the hawser gives directions, in three languages, for the working of the apparatus.

When the rocket-line is hauled aboard the wreck, the crew of the latter, acting on the instructions on the tag, will fasten the hawser around the funnel, mast, or some superstructure on the vessel as high above the deck as possible, and attach the small tail on the block of the endless whip a little below the hawser.

The men on shore now make their end of the hawser fast, stretching it as tightly as possible, raising it above the level of the sea to prevent anyone being dragged through the surf. A large tripod is provided for beaches or low shores to raise the hawser about ten feet from the ground.

What is known as the "breeches-buoy" is an ordinary lifebelt with a pair of large canvas breeches attached. This is suspended from the hawser on a traveling wheel, and can now be pulled to and from the wreck by the endless whip.

If the people on the stranded ship appear to be exhausted or unable to understand what they should do, one of the rescue party will go out in the buoy to assist them.

For Health and Economy Eat more Bread

TEN cents will feed an ordinary family a day on first class bread. This does not mean ordinary bread. For there is an important difference between ordinary bread and first class bread.

It isn't a difference of looks or methods of making or baking. It is a difference of nutrition, food value, healthfulness. And this food value depends on the flour used. For there is a wide difference between flours.

If all flour were the best flour, then all bread, properly made, would be good bread. But all flour is not first class because all wheat is not first class. Wheat, you know, varies in quality almost as much as apples or potatoes; there are as many different grades of wheat as there are grades of butter—or wool.

And every difference in grade represents an actual difference in nourishing value, food elements, wholesomeness. Flour made from a low grade of wheat is by no means so healthful as flour made from high grade wheat. Now the wheat that goes into is of the very highest grade. It contains the highest possible percentage of nutritive value. The makers of "ROYAL HOUSEHOLD" maintain expensive laboratories and baking departments where skilled men scientifically analyse each day's milling. None but the very best Red Fife wheat—rich in nutrition and healthfulness—can pass. For this reason bread made from ROYAL HOUSEHOLD FLOUR contains the maximum of food value and furnishes the maximum of energy and strength. And for the same reason "ROYAL HOUSEHOLD" makes the finest pies, cakes, biscuits, muffins, rolls, and pastry of all kinds. It is the one flour that a housewife should use in order to have her household baking strictly first class.

"Ogilvie's Book for a Cook" with 125 pages of Recipes that have been tried and tested will be sent free to your address if you mention the name of your dealer. 133

FOR THE OUTDOOR PLAYROOM

Bubbles without toil and trouble

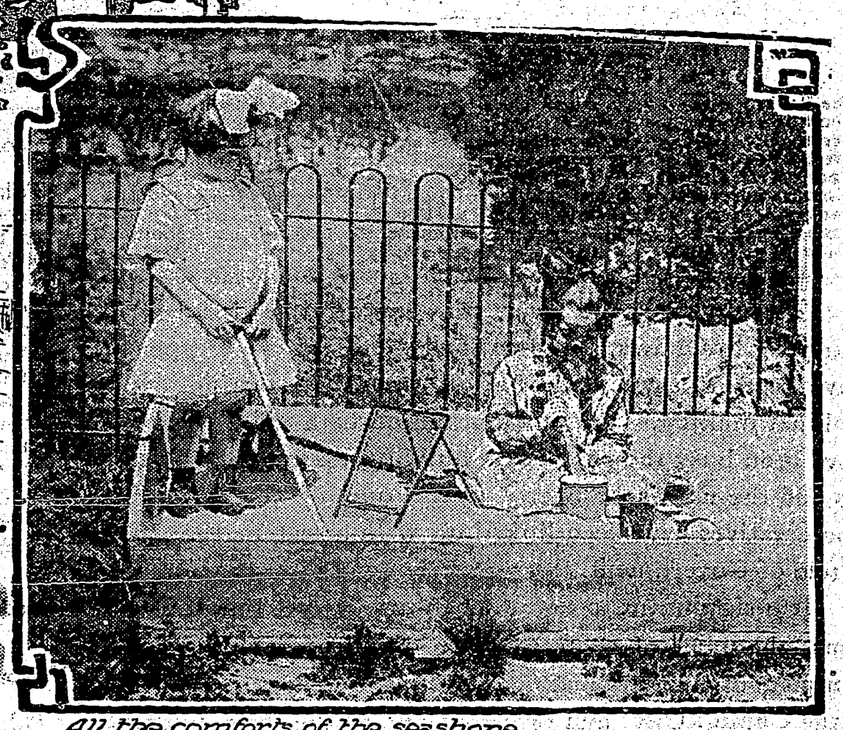
Kite flying for a change



All the comforts of the seashore

FRESH air and sunshine! Give them to the children, please! And while you are helping the little ones to store up health and strength, let there be happiness also. If children are to be kept out of doors, their playroom also should be moved there. Oh, it is not any trouble. If it is too much trouble to make your little boy or girl happy, you have no right to have one.

Not every family can spend a vacation at the seashore, but the seashore can be brought to the home. In every city or town sand is used for building purposes. Order a load of sand to be dumped in your yard. Do not have it on the ground, for the rain and the wind will make it disappear, but have father or brother or Uncle Dick build a sandbox. A floor of boards is surrounded by a fence one foot high. Into this box the sand can be put and kept. Equip this homemade seashore with shovels, buckets, tin plates for baking days, and let the kiddies play. There will be no need of mother fearing that the little one has strayed away. If you have noticed how children love to play for hours in the dirt, you will see the sensible side of a sand pile.

Without toil and trouble let there be bubble parties. Each child should have his own pipe and the bowls should be of the unbreakable kind, purchasable at any toy department. A few drops of glycerin added to the soapsuds will make the bubbles last longer. If the water be hard in your district, thereby refusing to grow soapy, soften it with a pinch of borax. Bubbles amuse children for hours. Never mind about their spilling the water over their dresses. It will not hurt. Besides amusing boys and girls, bubble blowing is an excellent developer for the lungs.

The swing on the ground is a safe and popular ornament for the outdoor playroom. It is inexpensive and lasts for years. It develops the arm and leg muscles, for the swing is moved by the feet and helped along by the arms. Put it in a shady spot, place your little one in it and let the old cat die as many times as it wishes. No broken bones will result. Just a hint for daddy: Keep the joints of this safe toy well oiled, and once a year give the swing a coat of paint.

If your yard be long, kite flying is recommended. The bird kites are attractive for little children. In fact, anything unusual will generally keep the youngster occupied. The running that is necessary is a natural activity for the child, and when he can run for a purpose it is doubly beneficial. This amusement is suggested for windy days. The children will have to be instructed as to the holding and raising of kites, but they are apt pupils. Do not draw any line between the play for girls and boys. There is no reason why little girls should not fly kites. Sex should be disregarded in choosing the children's play.

Did you ever wish to own a pony, a donkey or a goat? Of course you did. If possible, let your youngsters have a trusty steed. Falls are not ever frequent, and oh, the joy of riding horseback or driving one's own express wagon! Insist upon kindness and no overwork. The association with animals results in a humane treatment. This kindness can be encouraged by the parent in little talks. Any cruelty should be checked at once; continued cruelty should be punished by depriving the boy of his pet. He will soon develop a consideration that will be reflected in his treatment of persons.

The summer will pass all too quickly for the children and pleasantly for the mothers if the outdoor playroom be equipped with toys and amusements that reflect good sense. Do not buy an expensive toy automobile when you can give the toys that will not break, that do not become tiresome and that can be shared with others.

And watch your child at play! It is the REAL child that you see then. Any cruelty, selfishness, dishonesty comes to the surface when he is lost in play. It is then that the influence of the parent can be brought to shape the plastic mind and to direct forces of child-nature away from the evil and toward the good.

TO USE PRESSED FLOWERS

THE place card is one of the factors in luncheons and birthday parties with which we must reckon these days. The drawn varieties are always attractive, but in the season of flowers there is excellent opportunity to use the forms that nature has already colored for you. Why not make pressed flowers do the work of decorating place cards? It is an excellent idea, so easy that a little boy or girl can enjoy the work. The results speak for themselves in the suggestions before you.

There is the card with two clover blossoms forming semiconventional trees at the sides. The big purple clovers are picked, pressed and pasted on white or gray cards.

Colors

FROM the cochineal insect we gain not only scarlet, but also carmine, crimson and purple lakes.

Sepia comes from the cuttlefish, being the fluid it discharges to make the water around it opaque when it is attacked.

The camel gives Indian yellow, while ivory chips are the source of ivory black and bone black.

Prussian blue is made by fusing horses' hoofs with impure potassium carbonate. Prussic acid is formed in the process.

Blue-black is the charcoal of the vine stalk. Turkey red is made from the madder plant; gamboge, from the yellow sap of a tree in Siam; raw sienna is a natural earth found near Sienna and burnt umber is an earth from Umbria.

Ultramarine is made from lapis-lazuli and the real article is naturally very expensive. Chinese white is zinc, scarlet is iodine of mercury and vermilion is the quicksilver ore known as cinnabar.

The Fly

"WHERE on earth do those flies come from?" is a frequent and despairing question.

How do flies get into the house?

They may come down the chimneys, if the fireplaces have tipping dampers. These should be tightly closed in fly-time. An appreciable falling off in their number will be the result.

If the chimneys have not the tipping damper, a screen such as is used for a window can be fitted into the fireplace; or, easier still, a bundle of paper may be stuffed up the chimney.

Either method is successful, and no trouble is too great to get rid of these summer pests.

Down Pillows

THOSE who have been troubled by the sifting through of down in pillows will be glad to learn of the following:

Iron the muslin interlining on the wrong side with a hot iron which has been well rubbed in beeswax. The wax will act like varnish on the smooth surface, and thus prevent the down from sifting through.

To Clean Corduroy

HOW many mothers have worried over the problem of cleaning baby's white corduroy coat satisfactorily and without having recourse to the professional cleaners!

The garment may be cleaned as often as necessary if the following directions are carefully observed:

Shave very thinly a bar of some pure white soap; add, with two tablespoonfuls of kerosene, to about half a pail of water.

Boil this mixture until it is reduced one-quarter. Use a small portion of this and plenty of water to cleanse the garment. When sufficiently cleansed, hold the garment spread out as much as possible while you rinse it up and down in clear water repeatedly. Be careful to have the nap running up.

When the pile is raised, hang in the same position to dry. Be careful not to wring or otherwise touch the garment. It should be fastened to the line with ordinary clothespins.

If by some oversight the nap becomes flattened, wait until the piece is thoroughly dry, when a brisk rubbing with a hand broom will obviate the trouble.

Women Who Travel

ONLY one man in twenty and one woman in a hundred know how to pack a trunk neatly and compactly.

One would learn a good deal in watching a packer who travels with an actress. She knows all the best and newest wrinkles in the art and can get three times the amount of clothing into a given space that the ordinary woman does.

At the bottom of the trunk she places the dainty, delicate lingeries, folded as smoothly as is in the power of human hands, and held by two narrow bands of elastic. Stockings are not tied up in a knot and stuffed into the corners, but are folded once and laid between stiff cards, which are tied with tapes.

Boxes are eschewed entirely, and for them are substituted pairs of cards in all sizes, with tapes for tying.

Mountains of manilla tissue paper and huge piles of newspapers are used.

A layer of clothes is laid smoothly in the trunk. Next comes a sheet of clean linen and over this a newspaper. This is an important item. Newspaper is crisp and stiff enough to resist hard jolting. The sleeves of every gown are bunched out with tissue paper, as are all satin slippers.

All handsome gowns have their own linen slips.

On top of the packed trunk is spread a tray of newspapers.

Into the heart of the trunk just above the lingerie go all breakables after they have been securely corked—from blacking bottles to cold-cream jars. The soft stuff takes the jar of the jolts away, and liquids are, in consequence, perfectly secure.

A well-packed trunk is a joy not very well known to the average traveler, who arrives at her destination oftentimes with her most-cherished gowns in a bad condition, and sick at heart in consequence. The art is not hard to learn and is surely worth the effort.

Spots on Linen

WHEN your table linen or fine doilies become stained or spotted with anything that will not easily wash out, be sure to remove the spot before sending the linen to the laundry.

Berry and fruit stains can be removed very easily by holding the cloth tightly over the top of a bowl and pouring boiling water very slowly through the mark until it disappears.

Salt dampened with lemon juice laid on the spot and subjected to the hot sun will remove ink spots from linen.

One of the hardest stains to take out of fine linen is that made by the lead of an indelible pencil. Great care must be taken to clean this kind of a spot or your linen will be ruined. Under no circumstances touch water to such a spot.

Mix together 4 tablespoonfuls of peroxide of hydrogen and 4 tablespoonfuls of clear water. Lay the soiled spot on an old piece of linen folded to several thicknesses or over several thicknesses of white blotting paper and with a clean sponge or bit of clean linen sop the spot with the mixture and lay it in the direct rays of the sun.

Repeat this process until the spot disappears and allow it to remain in the sun until it has bleached a pure white.

WANT A SUMMED COAT?

HAVE you a long or three-quarter-length winter coat that has outlived its use as a cold-weather garment because of worn lining and rubbed edges?

And are you in need of a knockabout coat for cool summer evenings, rainy days or to take with you on your vacation trip?

If so, take heed to what I say, for with very little trouble and a few hours' time you can make the desired garment yourself.

First of all, brush and shake the garment thoroughly, ridding it of as much dust as possible; then carefully clean all spots with a nailbrush dipped in warm water to which a little ammonia has been added and in which some good white soap has been dissolved.

The best way to do this is to lay the soiled portion over a heavy towel folded to several thicknesses, so that it will absorb all the water, and scrub the cloth until the spots disappear.

Now with a sharp pair of pointed scissors rip out the lining, taking care not to snip or cut the cloth.

Next the interlining must be removed. This will not be at all difficult to do, as you will find it is only basted in and caught down tight at the shoulder and underarm seams.

It is now time to remove all basting threads. These you will find caught in the seams, around the armholes and the edges of the coat.

Should the seams be "whipped" with white or light-colored thread, take this out and trim the edges of the cloth evenly, leaving one inch on both sides of the seams.

Overcast the armholes with a strong thread the color of the cloth and catch the under edge of the collar down firmly.

Bind all the seams and raw edges with inch-wide taffeta seam binding or with strips of satin turned in at the edges and sewed with a neat over-and-over stitch. Face the back of the neck, where the collar joins the coat, with a bit of satin or a piece of cloth.

It will be necessary to use a wider binding for the armholes; and be sure to sew this with strong thread, so it will not easily rip out.

Place several small weights around the hem of the coat to prevent it from blowing open in a high wind, and also to hold it in shape.

Press well, using a damp cloth between the iron and the coat, and your old winter coat is converted into a lightweight summer garment that will be a joy to you on numerous occasions.

By the way, that old silk lining can be washed and ironed on the wrong side and laid aside for use as facings, hat linings and all sorts of odd things. The old interlining, too, can be utilized for padding. Covered with calico or gingham, it makes splendid holders for hot saucepans and irons.

The elections are over, the new Prime Minister is hurrying to Ottawa, and questions as to 'How it happened' have been thrown aside for the more interesting art of Cabinet making. Various journals on both sides of politics have been busy the past week, building up imaginary cabinets and the names of nearly every one of the Victorious Conservatives have been linked up with a seat in the Inner Circle of Government.

It is significant to note that in nearly all these predictions, the name of A. S. Goodeve M. P. for Kootenay, is conspicuously mentioned. The Ottawa Journal, published in the Capital City, and probably one of the best informed organs of the day, has made out an 'Advance Cabinet' in which Mr. Goodeve is slated for Minister of Marine and Fisheries. Coming from such a quarter, this is most significant. Mr. Borden has before him a difficult and delicate task, in chosing from such an array of talent as the election has placed in the House under his leadership.

If Mr Goodeve. by virtue of his mertorious and loyal support in opposition, as well as through his personal qualifications, should be among those selected to hold a a portfolio in the new Government, his appointment will be gratifying to the electors here. and a compliment to our member and to the Kootenays, at the same time benefiting the industries and interests of British Columbia as a whole, and strengthening the Conservative Cabinet, for the work of constructive legislation which is ahead of the new Government.

Such a catastrophe as the disaster to the Giant French Battleship 'La Liberte' when by an explosion of the magazines, eight million dollars and four hundred lives were cast to waste on the winds of heaven, brings serious reflections. For years, since the evolution of the 'Dreadnought' all big gun type of battleship, the cost and size of these colossal machines of war has risen, until today a single ship represents a capital value of 12 to 15 million dollars. Mean time, the conquest of sea and air has been continuing along independent lines, the sub-marine, torpedo and airship, small comparatively cheap, and capable of destroying the greatest battleship, have taken a place in the front fighting line of the world's great navies. When one considers the havoc which could be wrought by two or three reckless well trained men, from aireoplane or submarine, it almost seems as tho the piling up of these vast sums of capital into such machines of war, were the direct incentive which is urging on to triumph, the exponents of the new style of warfare. Like the huge animals of pre-glacial ages, the very cost in make and upkeep of the monstrous dreadnoughts will bring about their downfall; even now the day of the giant battleship is past, as the mammoth and giant sloths of pre historic times died out before the more economical, convenient and easier fed animals of our own day, so the giant battleship will go down and out, perhaps without even the test of actual battle, before the mosquito fleets of air and sea, which are the latest development of the machinery of war.

Mr. A. Masters, for some time past manager of the store at Canyon City, has resigned, and is leaving appletown shortly, for Spokane.

BEFORE TREATMENT

AFTER TREATMENT

No wonder surprised at how the sores healed—"I took your New Method Treatment for a serious blood disease with which I had been inflicted for twelve years. I had consulted a score of physicians taken all kinds of blood medicine, visited Hot Springs and other mineral water resorts, but only got temporary relief. They would help me for a time, but after discontinuing the medicine the symptoms would break out again—running sores, blotches, rheumatic pains, looseness of the hair, swellings of the glands, pains of the bones scaling, itchiness of the skin, dyspeptic stomach, etc. I had given up in despair when a friend advised me to consult you, as you had cured him of a similar disease 8 years ago. I had no hope, but took his advice. In three weeks' time the sores commenced to heal up and I became encouraged. I continued the New Method Treatment for four months and at the end of that time every symptom had disappeared. I was cured 7 years ago and no signs of any disease since. My boy, three years old, is sound and healthy. I certainly can recommend your treatment with all my heart. You can refer any person to me privately, but you can use this testimonial as you wish. W. PAID IN FULL

Novelized From Eugene Walter's Great Play

. . . By . . .

JOHN W. HARDING

Copyright, 1908, by G. W. Dillingham Co.

That "Paid In Full" is a story of absorbing interest has been proved by its phenomenal success in dramatic form. For two seasons there has been no diminution in the drawing power of this vital piece of realism. In its present form it is not less engrossing. The features which made it so powerful as a play are not less potent in the serial. It is the same keen exposition of human motives put into the simplest forms of expression. There is no waste of material, no attempt to moralize, no break in the continuity. The three men who are the central figures in the story stand out in admirable distinctness from the very first, and the one woman whose splendid rectitude illuminates it all lives from the moment of her appearance. Although it is certain to produce frequent thrills, the story is neither melodramatic nor sensational. Its power lies in its humanness.

CHAPTER I.

"NO; I'll not give 'em a raise of 3 cents an hour nor of a cent an hour; nary a raise, understand. And I don't want you to come here thinking you can bulldoze me, because you'll find mighty quick you're mistaken. If any man thinks he can do that I want to see him."

The words, uttered in a wrathful bellow, came through the closed door of the president's room and were heard by every employee and visitor in the main office of the Latin-American Steamship company, which occupied an entire floor of a big building in Bowling Green, New York city.

Some of the employees smiled and passed the remark that the boss "had 'em bad" that day, but the smiles were of the sickly, apprehensive order, for the fact that he was in execrable humor was perfectly well known to each and all, having been impressed upon them very forcibly at intervals from the minute the great man had made his appearance with his unvarying punctuality as the clock struck 9 a. m. Others scowled and kept their reflections to themselves.

The voices of the other parties to the conversation were not audible to the listeners, but that of the president, with its all penetrating roar, burst forth again:

"I don't give a tin whistle what you or your unions do, understand. Let 'em strike, strike and be d——d. But you tell 'em this from me—that any man who's fool enough to throw up his job does so for good and all. He'll never work again for the Latin-American Steamship company in this or any other port. I'll take care of that. I'll show 'em who and what I am if they don't know."

The door opened, and two white-faced, intimidated men emerged, cap in hand. They were rough looking men, evidently laborers inured to the hardest kind of work. They shuffled quickly past the neatly dressed clerks and did not breathe freely until they found themselves in the cross streams of hurrying passersby on the street. There, as they mopped their brows and looked around for a saloon, something of the arrogant insolence with which they had demanded audience of the head of the company and which had been speedily cowed out of them by that formidable and choleric personage returned to them.

Meanwhile at the open door of the room in which they had been through the ordeal of their interview Captain Amos Williams, president and general manager of the line, glared after his departing visitors and round the office. There was dead silence, and every employee, from the highest to the office boys, impudent and irrepressible there, as everywhere else, save when Captain Williams was nigh, became deeply engrossed in his work.

"Call up Mr. Smith and tell him I want to see him at once," he growled to no one in particular. Then he reentered his room and slammed the door.

In a few minutes, however, his bell rang, and a boy responded to it with an alacrity not customary in any other office in all New York.

"Tell Mr. Brooks to come here," was the order he received.

The boy hurried out and approached one of the men behind the brass lattice screens.

"Mr. Brooks, the captain wants you," he announced.

Mr. Brooks did not reply, but he got down leisurely and with bad grace from his stool and moved with equal deliberation to the president's room.

"Brooks, has Fernandez & Co., that Pernambuco firm, been heard from yet?" demanded his employer.

"Check came today," was the laconic reply.

"Full amount?"

EUGENE WALTER,
Author of "Paid In Full" and "The Easiest Way"

"Yes, four thousand eight hundred and seventy-five."

"All right. That's all."

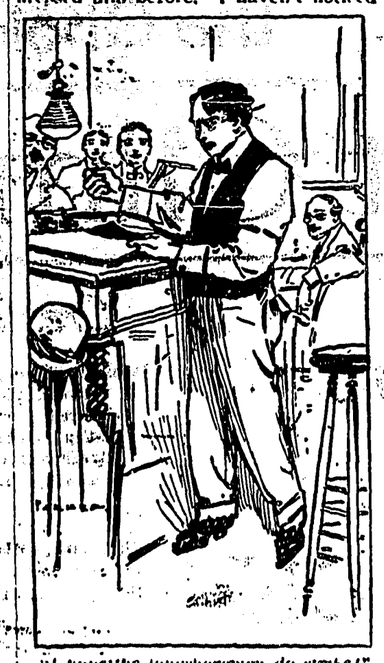
Brooks went out, closing the door behind him, and returned to his desk. He was in a bad temper himself and made no effort to conceal it, for a sullen scowl marred his handsome and usually genial face. Not only was Joseph Brooks handsome, but a rather distinguished looking young fellow, whose clothes sat well and becomingly upon him, albeit they were somewhat shiny from wear and from ironing by inexpert hands at home. And if his collars and cuffs also were just a trifle the worse for wear at least they were immaculately clean.

"Cheer up!" admonished one of his fellow clerks, noticing his ill humor. Brooks' moods were never taken seriously, for with him fits of despondency alternated with a contagious cordiality and an optimism that knew no limit. Of late, however, his spells of gloominess had become wearisomely frequent, and usually they were accompanied by a nervous irritability.

"Cheer up!" he answered with some heat. "I don't see any reason for cheering up, and I don't feel like cheering up. Did you hear how the brute received those delegates of the Longshoremen's union because they asked him to add a little to their starvation pay to help them keep skin and bone together? Why shouldn't he raise them? Why shouldn't he raise all of us? He's reeking with money, doesn't know what to do with it, yet, what does he do but grind us down—grind and grind and grind—grind us as a grain of wheat is ground to powder between the millstones—grind us with his heel, squeezing from us the very sap of brain and life that he may add to his pile."

The clerks near him had listened to this outbreak with amused surprise.

"Well," said the man who had addressed him before, "I haven't noticed



"I hope the longshoremen do strike!"

you sweating blood to any extent under the grinding process."

"Jenkins, you're a—a camel," retorted Brooks. "For a wisp of hay you'd let yourself be loaded till the last straw broke your back, and then you'd lick the hand that crushed you."

"Sure," said Jenkins enthusiastically. "Anybody can load me up that wants to."

"And I'll back his liquid capacity to equal that of any camel," chimed in another clerk, while every one within earshot grinned.

"Oh, you can laugh," grumbled Brooks, "but it doesn't alter the truth of what I say. It's men like him that have made our society today what it is, a soulless, heartless, oppressive civilization in which Croesuses walk roughshod over the men who are down and thrust them deeper into the slough with one foot as they climb higher and higher into the power that the possession of inconceivable wealth carries with it."

"I was ever thus!" sighed Jenkins. "But there is yet hope. Our Joseph hath received a call to uplift the downtrod."

"How did he get it? What is his record?" went on Brooks, ignoring the interruption. "Why, he started out as a waiter on a South Pacific trader, which in those days was the same as being a pirate, and you know and I know that his name was a terror to all hands from San Francisco to Australia. He made his first money by bullying and ill-treating other men and killing them, too, on occasion. It's a matter of common knowledge. And he's been a buccaneer ever since. Didn't he bulko and sandbag my father-in-law out of control of this company? And what has he done since then but act the brutal tyrant over everybody connected with it, bearing us down to the lowest wage a man can exist on that he may add to his dirty heap, running this office with fist, boot and rope end as though it were his lawless ship and we were his groveling Lascar crew. I hope the longshoremen do strike! They would be doing humanity a service if they'd fill him full of bullets."

"There's a lot of truth in what Brooks says," assented a youthful clerk in low tones, looking around cautiously as he did so.

"Well, after all, I don't see that you've got such a fierce kick coming," observed Jenkins to the disgruntled orator.

"You don't, eh?" sneered Brooks. "You think $20 a week is big pay for an accountant and collector who's handled half the money of the line for five years, eh?"

"No; I mean that you are at least solid with the boss and sure of your job, which is more than anybody else here is, and that you stand to become an officer high up in the company one of these days. Williams is a friend of your family, isn't he? You yourself have boasted often that he visits you and your wife."

"That's just it. The swine takes advantage of his relations with my wife's people to keep me down and rub it in. Other people get their salary raised, but I don't. Do you call that a square deal?"

"It hardly seems so, but perhaps there's a reason. He may have some object that will appear in due course, and you'll go up several numbers at one sweep. In the meantime," continued Jenkins, lowering his voice, "I wouldn't let on like you have this afternoon if I were you, Joe. It can't do any good and might do you a deal of harm. You don't know who might hear you, and the boss somehow knows everything that goes on in the office."

"I don't care," affirmed Brooks sulkily. "I'd just as lief tell him to his face what I think of him, and, by gum, I will one of these days, darn him!"

"All right," laughed Jenkins. "I hope I'll be around at the time so that I can perform for you the last sad rite of gathering up your scattered remains. Ah, here's Jimmy Smith!"

The Hague.

The word "The" in the name The Hague, the capital of the Netherlands, is simply the anglicized form of the Dutch word "S Gravenhaaz," or S Granvenhaze," either of which in the Dutch language means "the count's hedge" or "the count's grove," or "woods." Originally the location now occupied by the city of The Hague was the hunting grounds of the counts of Holland. About the year 1240 a palace was built in the grove. Presently a village sprang up around the palace—still it was called "The Count's Hedge"—and finally and lastly a large city which in the Dutch language has its original signification, but which in modern parlance has been developed into "The Hague."

Smuggling In Italy.

The Italian laws against smuggling are most severe. A peasant caught with only a pound of contraband tobacco is pretty sure to incur two years' imprisonment, besides paying a heavy fine. The customs officials, too, are authorized to shoot persons crossing the frontier who refuse to halt when challenged, and several lives are thus sacrificed every year. Still the profits of smuggling are so great that many brave these perils. A knapsack filled with tobacco or salt, safely landed, yields a small fortune to the smuggler, so heavy are the taxes upon these.—London Chronicle.

Where They Belonged.

"You can't always break the speed limit with impunity," declared a magneto expert. "A halt has to be called somewhere. St. Peter was standing by the gate when a ninety horsepower car came up with the speed of a comet and halted in a cloud of dust with such suddenness that the good guardian was greatly startled. He held up his hand and waved the party away.

"'Boys,' said he, 'if you want to scorch you'll have to go down below'."

A French Epitaph.

In a French churchyard is a monument having an epitaph of which the following is a translation: "Here lies Jean Pinto, the Spanish vocalist. When he reached heaven, he united his voice with the voices of the archangels. As soon as he heard him the Deity cried, 'Keep quiet, all you fellows, and let us hear alone the illustrious singer, Jean Pinto!'"

Labor's Protest.

A schoolteacher gave her pupils this sum for home work: "How long would it take eight men, working ten hours a day, to build a house fifty feet high if they built an inch an hour?"

The next morning one boy brought to the school, instead of a solution of the sum, this letter from his father, who was a carpenter:

"Madam—I refuse to let my son do that sum, as it looks to me to be a slur on the eight hour system. Any sum not more than eight hours a day he is welcome to do, but no more."

A Real Heroine.

"What is your idea of a heroine, John?" asked the wife of his bosom as she looked up from the novel she was reading.

"A heroine, my dear," answered John, "is a woman who could talk back, but doesn't."

WAS A GREAT GAMBLER

LATE DUCHESS OF DEVONSHIRE LOST FORTUNES AT CARDS.

English Noblewoman Who Died a Few Days Ago Was One of the Most Celebrated Society Belles of the Last Century and Her Affairs Were Matters of Current Gossip—Said to Have Lost $2,000,000 In Gaming.

The Dowager Duchess of Devonshire, whose death in London the other day was a result of the excessive heat, was a remarkable woman—such a woman as is more often found in romantic novels than in real life. She was 76 years old, but her photographs, by which she was known the world over, make her appear much younger. She was but a child when with her German father, Count d'Alton of Hanover, she came to England, largely because the Prince Consort, Albert, husband of Victoria, was a German. As Countess Louise d'Anhalt she was presented at court at the age of 17. She was then noted for her beauty and vivacity and was immediately surrounded by noble and princely suitors. From among them she chose Lord Mandeville, who three years later became Duke of Manchester. The duke was a rake, a gambler and a spendthrift and it was through him that the beautiful duchess became enamored of the gaming table.

She was only 18 years old when she became the mother of a son who, at 23, married Consuelo Lynaja, who later became Duchess of Manchester, and mother of the present duke. Her other children are Lord Charles Montagu, the widowed Duchess of Hamilton, the Countess of Gosford and Lady Alice Stanley, the wife of the eldest son of Lord Stanley, of Preston, at one time Governor-General of Canada.

Among the swarm of suitors for her hand when she was the Countess Louise was the young Marquis of Hartington. She looked on him with favor, but he was slow in proposing and Lord Mandeville, more impetuous, won her hand. But Hartington was so badly smitten that he remained single for many years and as time went by he kept so close to the hem of the duchess' gown that society marveled and gossiped. The two were rarely separated and their friendship was pointed to as the ideal platonic affection of the century. Hartington was a statesman and became famous as the right hand man of Gladstone.

In 1890, after a married life of nearly forty years, the Duke of Manchester died. The Duke of Devonshire passed away at about the same time and Hartington succeeded to the title and to the enormous fortune. Shortly after this the widowed Duchess of Manchester and the new Duke of Devonshire, whose wife had also passed away, were married. Thus were the middle-aged friends—lovers in youth—united and Louise became "the double duchess."

But the Duchess of Devonshire never abandoned the habits she had acquired as Duchess of Manchester. She could not conquer her passion for gambling. She was a master of bridge whist and it is said there was no better player in England, but she used to say she was 'as unlucky at cards as lucky in love." During the past decade it is fairly estimated she lost $2,000,000 in hard cash at cards and at the race track. Luckily, the fortune of the Duke of Devonshire was large enough to stand the strain.

Her full name and titles were: Her Grace the Right Hon. Louise Frederica Auguste d'Alton Cavendish, Duchess of Devonshire, Marchioness of Hartington, Countess of Devonshire, Countess of Burlington, Countess d'Anhalt of Hanover, Lady Cavendish of Hardwick, Lady Cavendish of Keighley, Lady of Grace of St. John of Jerusalem.

Gilbert and Sullivan.

Questions have often been asked as to the real cause of the difference between Gilbert and Sullivan at one time, and many erroneous statements have been made on the subject. The truth is very simple and commonplace. Gilbert objected to the proposal of Mr. O'Oyley Carte to include the sum of $7,500 for refurnishing the front of the Savoy Theatre in the preliminary expenses of the production of "The Gondoliers." Sullivan did not support him in the way he thought he should, and for a time a coolness between them resulted. It was, however, always a matter of the greatest satisfaction to Gilbert that he and Sullivan were the best of friends again before the latter died.—Westminster Gazette.

Newest Slot Machine.

The "trainometer" is the latest. If you are on a train and you are curious to know how fast you are going, you put a penny in the slot and the hand on a dial informs you. H. W. Prance, an Englishman, is the genius who thought of this idea.

LOCKED ROOMS.

Mysterious Chambers In Old English Noblemen's Homes.

Perhaps the most famous locked room in the world is at Glamis Castle, the old home of the Earls of Strathmore. In this rambling pile there is supposed to be a secret chamber, access to which is known only to the Earl of Strathmore, the heir-apparent, and the factor. That mysterious chamber is supposed to have been, centuries ago, the repository of a grim family scandal, the nature of which could only be whispered, even in those wild days.

There is in Poulton Old Hall a mysteriously locked room which has never been opened except by a representative of the Green family. The hall and its lands have sometimes been let, but the Green family have always retained possession of this mysterious room, which is supposed to contain several relics and other family treasures. It is said that the last tenant, a prominent Mersey shipowner, would have given them an increased rent for it if he could have had access to it or could have cleared away the mysterious contents, but the owners refused to give up possession, and so the tenant left.

There is a very similar tradition at Nether Hall, the Cumberland seat of the Senhouse family. Here, as at Glamis Castle, the position of the secret chamber is known only to the heir-at-law and the family solicitor. The room, it is understood, has no window, and up till now has not been located by anyone not in possession of the key to the mystery.

A tragic interest attaches to the ruins of Minster Lovel House, in Oxfordshire. While it was tenanted by a farmer, a concealed vault was discovered, and in it was the perfect skeleton of Lord Lovel, seated at a table on which was lying an open prayer-book. There were some jars and barrels which had contained food, sufficient, no doubt, to last some weeks, but, the mansion having fallen into the hands of King Henry VII., the prisoner was unable to regain his liberty. The discovery cleared up a mystery which had surrounded his fate for nearly two centuries.

Man and His Ways.

"The boldest grafter I ever knew," says a friend, "was a summer resort hotel man with whom I became involved last August. I spent three days at his joint and couldn't stand it any longer. When I called for my bill I said very severely:

"'I think you advertised magnificent scenery up here?'

"'Yes, sir, I did.'

"'With good fishing?'

"'Good fishing too.'

"'Pure air and no mosquitoes?'

"'That's the way my advertisement read, sir. You quote correctly.'

"'No mosquitoes, no malaria, airy rooms, unsurpassed table, etc.?'

"'Exactly. Is there anything wrong?'

"'Is there anything wrong? Where is the scenery?'

"'There isn't any.'

"'Where are the fish?'

"'I never knew of a fish being caught in these parts.'

"'The flies are fierce, and the mosquitoes are still worse, aren't they? And your rooms are stuffy, and your table is rotten.'

"'You're right.'

"'Then you admit you lied about the place?'

"'Oh, is that what you've been trying to get at? Why didn't you say so in the first place? Sure I lied. I'd have admitted that a half an hour ago if you'd mentioned it and saved you a lot of talk. I'm the biggest liar in these parts. Your bill for the three days will be $10.75. Come again next season'."

Too Personal.

Constable Casey had ordered a pair of shoes at Rosenbrig's store and was about to try one of them on when the clerk reached for it and deftly sprinkled some French chalk in it to ease the forthcoming strain. When he handed back the constable threw it on the floor, pulled on his own shoe and started out.

The proprietor had noted the scene. "What's the matter, Mr. Casey?" he panted as he caught up with him. "Was the clerk sassy or anything?"

For a moment Casey glared at him in almost speechless anger, then observed with icy dignity, "If I can't come into a place to thry on a pair uv shoes widout havin' chloride av lime put in thim beforehand I'll thrade somewhere ilse."

Fears of Children.

Dr. G. Stanley Hall has collected facts regarding the fears of children. These fears are generally created by parents or servants. He found that 1,701 children had 6,456 fears, the leading ones being the fear of lightning and thunder, reptiles, strangers, dark, death, domestic animals, disease, wild animals, mice, rats, robbers, high wind, etc. A few of these fears are rational. In one place children were found who dreaded the end of the world—a fear created by adult teaching.

A Jolt For Whistler.

When Whistler, the famous artist, dropped into an English country inn the landlord became very much interested in him. He felt that he had "a somebody" in his house. Whistler noted his host's concerned interest. "And who do you suppose I am?" he asked at length.

"Well, I can't exactly say, sir," was the reply, "but I should fancy you was from the music 'alls!"

The Widow's Chance.

"Why is it that a widow's chance to get married is always so much better than that of a girl who has never tasted matrimonial bliss?"

"A widow's chance isn't any better. She merely knows how to take advantage of it."

Oh, You Munchausen!

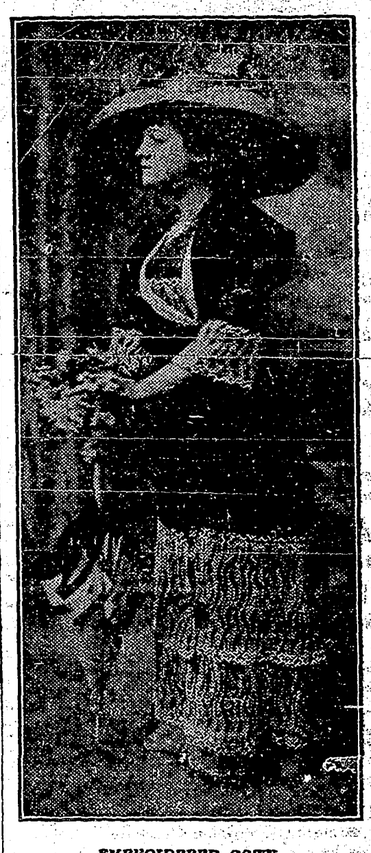
EMBROIDERED GOWN.

A Pretty Study In Blue and White For Afternoon Wear.



EMBROIDERED GOWN.

A handsome gown for afternoon wear is shown here. The tunic of chiffon opens like a coat over an underslip of gray chiffon over blue silk. The two deep bands below are embroidered, not beaded. The deep collar of soft, lustrous silk is fastened at the side with a smart rosette. The hat is of blue straw adorned with sprays of white hyacinth. The checked parasol of blue and white has a band of plain white with black velvet bands and black velvet dots.

CROSS STITCH.

Some Hints For Making This Simple Yet Effective Embroidery.

Cross stitching may be done on canvas of several different degrees of fineness of mesh, a fact which is full of meaning for the worker who wishes to lessen or increase a pattern without harming the symmetry of the design.

The stitches must, of course, be counted on the material itself and on the printed pattern, but by making due allowance for greater or less coarseness in the canvas the above effects can be obtained.

A blunt pointed rug needle and mercerized cotton, which can be doubled when the pattern demands it, are the best implements to employ.

Of course a great deal of the attractiveness of this work depends upon the color effects, due to the color of the canvas and the thread. In general quaint chintz-like shades are best—dull reds, blues and greens, such as those used for Bulgarian embroidery.

It is easy and charming work for a long summer afternoon on the porch or in the hammock under the trees.

CHIPPENDALE REVIVAL.

Popularity of Last Century Models at English Court Its Excuse.

Chippendale furniture is enjoying quite a revival of favor, together with many other artistic fads of the reign of the Georges. King George V. of England is keenly interested in anything that concerns his predecessors, and Windsor castle, which is the favorite residence of the royal couple, contains some fine specimens of the handiwork of the great craftsman.

CHIPPENDALE CHAIR.

The chair illustrated here is a handsome yet typical specimen of Chippendale style, showing the lightness and grace yet strength of the style. The framework is of mahogany. The square chair seat is upholstered in tapestry.

The reproductions of Chippendale workmanship are so accurate and painstaking that, although most of us cannot afford real old Chippendale furniture, these imitations, especially in the form of chairs, are not beyond the means of most.

WESTERN TOURIST TRAFFIC

Mountain Hotels Vastly Impoved To Meet Continued Increase

Year by year the traffic to the Canadian Rocky Mountains is increasing at such a great rate that the mountain hotels have some trouble in satisfying all the demand for accommodation during the season. The Canadian Pacific Railway is continuouly improving and adding to its chain of mountain hotels, but even with the extra facilities thus afforded the accommodations are taxed to the uttermost. Every train westward takes with it a new contingent of tourists, and it has become the fashionable thing to spend a week or ten days in the mountains before going on to the coast.

Banff, being in the centre of the Canadian National Park, is naturally one of the favorite stop-over points for travellers. It is situated in a district which is most advantageous for mountain climbing, fishing and other sports, and, as a result, the C. P. R.'s hotel at this point is well patronized. Recently the C. P. R. made several new improvements to the hotel, with the result that it is now more popular than ever. The improvements consisted of the addition of two new wings and a new swimming pool. The wings are built in the form of towers and contain sixty bedrooms. They are five storeys high, and, like the rest of the hotel, are of stone and mill construction. The ground floor of the new wing is given up to a spacious sun parlor while there is a driveway under the other wing. From now on this sun parlor will be a feature of the hotel accommodation. it is fifty feet square, and on three sides of it there is a raised dais reached by a series of steps, where the guests may rest while enjoying the view from the broad windows. Beyond the dais there is a conservatory where ffowers bloom in great profusion, and the whole parlor is surrounded by glass walls, giving the sunlight free access to the room. The parlor is beautifully finished with couches and easy chairs, and the British Columbia ceiling is supported by a series of arches and columns.

The swimming pool is situated north of the hotel and is protected by a number of awnings. It is 180 feet long and 60 feet wide, and is built entirely of concrete. There are sixty dressing rooms for guests wishing to use the pool, these being situated in a 180-foot building to the rear of the baths. The upper storey of this building is fitted up with Turkish baths, and there is underground connection with the hotel. In the centre of the large pool there is a small plunge bath where sulphur water is used. This smaller pool is 24 by 80 feet.

Both the sun parlor and the swimming pools were opened some time ago and they have been much praised by guests stopping at the hotel.

Always Serviceable.—Most pills lose their properties with age. Not so with Parmelee's Vegetable Pills. The pill mass is so compounded that their strength and effectiveness is preserved and the pills can be carried anywhere without fear of losing their potency. This is a quality that few pills possess. Some pills lose their power, but not so with Parmelee's. They will maintain their freshness and potency for a long time.

SEVEN YEARS PAIN FROM ACUTE NEURALGIA

CURED THROUGH THE USE OF DR. WILLIAMS' PINK PILLS

Neuralgia is not a disease—it is only a symptom. It is the surest sign that your blood is weak, watery and impure, and that your nerves are literally starving. Bad blood is the one cause—good, rich, red blood its only cure. There you have the real reason why Dr. Williams' Pink Pills cure neuralgia. They are the only medicine that contains, in correct proportions, the very elements needed to make new, rich, red blood. This alone reaches the root of the trouble, soothes the jangled nerves, and drives away the nagging, stabbing pain, and braces up your health in other ways. Mr. M. Brennan, an ex-sergeant of the 2nd Cheshire Regiment, now a resident of Winnipeg, Man., says: "While serving with my regiment in India, on a hill station, I contracted a severe cold which brought on acute neuralgia, at times lasting for three weeks. I was constantly suffering almost every month in the year for over seven years, the pain being sometimes so severe that I wished I was dead. On my return to England I seemed to get no better, though I spent large sums of money for medical advice and medicine. Then I came to Canada, and about a year ago saw the advertisement of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills in a Winnipeg paper. Although I had begun to think my complaint was incurable I told my wife that I intended giving the Pills a fair trial. I was suffering from terrible pains when I began taking the Pills, but before the second box was finished the pain began to disappear, and under a further use of the Pills it disappeared entirely, and I have not had a twinge of it during the past year. Only those who have been afflicted with the terrible pains of neuralgia can tell what a blessing Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have been to me, and you may be sure I shall constantly recommend them to other sufferers."

These Pills are sold by all medicine dealers or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

QUAKER "HOWLERS."

Funny Schoolboy Answers Chronicled by an English Journal.

"Past and Present," the Friends' School Magazine, publishes some amusing blunders which have been noted in examinations at the society's schools. An undergraduate, many will be interested to learn on the authority of staid young students, is (1) a person not up to the mark; (2) a lower class of board school. Other budding Dr. Johnsons have been equally original in the matter of definitions.

"A circle is the amount taken in by the line which goes all round."

"Parallel straight lines, even if produced to eternity, cannot expect to meet each other."

"A solid is that which hasn't any space under the circumference."

"An autobiography is the life of an animal written after it is dead—as a moral."

"An abstract noun is one that cannot be heard, seen, touched, or smelt"; or, to take the pessimistic view of another, it is "the name of something which has no existence, as goodness."

'An axis is an imaginary line on which the earth is supposed to take its daily routine."

"The Pharisees were people who like to show off their goodness by praying in synonyms."

The following illustrate history as remembered by the Quaker schoolboy:

"Joan of Arc was a peasant's daughter, dressed in a man's clothes, and went to fight the English and was slain, and her soldiers said don't you think you had better wait till to-morrow to besiege Rouen."

"The Wars of the Roses killed a lot of the important knights and they got another start."

"Elizabeth had a better claim to the throne than Mary, for she had possession nine-tenths of the throne by law."

"Far away on the deep the Spanish Armada saw the beacon fires twinkling in endless chain from St. Michael's Mount to the Yorkshire Moors, and knew that England was ready."

"Charles I. was going to be married to the Infanta of Spain; he went to see her and broke it off at once."

It is interesting to be informed, too, that "Every German goes to school at an early age, however old he is."

King George's Little Joke.

King George has always been fond of a joke, and he found a rare opportunity for one once. His ship was lying off Portsmouth, and coaling had been taking place. In this the prince, like everyone else on board had to take his share. When he had finished he looked a pretty picture, being coal-dust from the crown of his head to the soles of his boots. One of his messmates made the laughing remark that his grandmother, then staying at Osborne, would have something of a shock if she could see him at the moment. "By Jove," said his royal highness, "what a lark! I have a good mind to let her see me." His brother officers egged him on, and a boat was lowered away and off went the prince, as black as a nigger. By some means or other he managed to gain access to the grounds of Osborne, and presently the familiar donkey-chaise bearing the late Queen hove in sight. When it got close to him he stepped from where he had been concealed, and approached her majesty, who gazed at the weird apparition in amazement. Then she made a movement as though to call one of her attendents to throw him out of the place. "Oh, all right, I will go if you like," said his royal highness in assumed dudgeon, "but I must say that I don't think it is a very kind way to greet your loving grandson!" Even the grave old Queen was forced to break into a smile as she recognized the royal sailor, but, from all accounts, he received rather a severe "dressing down" from her majesty when he joined the royal party at dinner late in the day, over the "unseemliness" of his conduct.

A Gallant Soldier.

Major Harry N. Scholfield, V.C., formerly of the Royal Artillery, is now a member of the King's Bodyguard of the Honorable Corps of Gentlemen-at-Arms, in succession to Col. Charles Cooch, retired upon half-pay.

Major Scholfield, who is now in his 47th year, entered the Royal Artillery in 1884, and gained his Victoria Cross during the last South African War for heroic conduct at Colenso. He was one of the gallant band who went with other officers, including Lieut. the Hon. F. H. S. Roberts, son of Field Marshal Earl Roberts, to bring in the guns after the men of the battery had been shot down by the Boer shells. Major Scholfield got his team together, and was able to bring in one of the only two guns which were saved.

What It Is That Wins.

A countrywoman remarked to her neighbor during a conversation on their return from market, "How is it, Mary, that you have been married four times and I've never been married at all, and I'm much handsomer than you?"

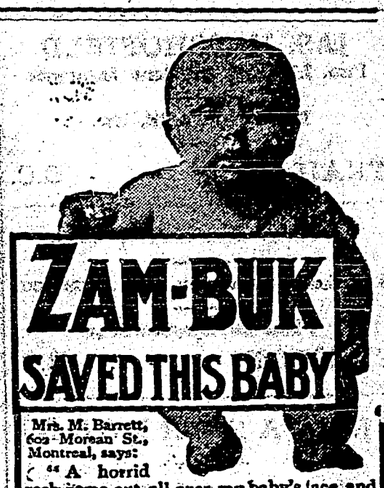
"Aye, to be sure," returned Mary, "but it ain't handsomeness that does it, Sarah. It's the 'come hither' in your eye."

Equine Suicide.

Can a horse commit suicide? This theory is brought forward through a singular affair at Brighouse. A horse fell into a pond in the vicinity of the Brighouse Cricket Field, and it was got out after two hours of strenuous exertion. A day or two later the horse found its way to the same pond, and this time met with its death. Brighouse people are asking if the horse went there purposely.

The Ambassador's Trousers.

Harry Vardon, the golf champion, told this story during one of his visits to the North Berwick links. "A gentleman was playing at Musselburgh," he said, "when a famous ambassador passed by. As the caddy saluted the ambassador respectfully, the gentleman said, 'You know the ambassador, do you?' 'Of course I do,' the lad replied. 'He's a great friend of mine. These are his trousers I've got on'."



ZAM-BUK SAVED THIS BABY

Mrs. M. Barrett, 602 Morean St., Montreal, says: "A horrid rash came out all over my baby's face and spread until it had totally covered his scalp. It was irritating and painful, and caused the little one hours of suffering. We tried soaps and powders and salves, but he got no better. He refused his food, got quite thin and worn, and was reduced to a very serious condition. I was advised to try Zam-Buk, and did so. It was wonderful how it seemed to cool and ease the child's burning, painful skin. Zam-Buk from the very commencement seemed to go right to the spot, and the pimples and sores and the irritation grew less and less. Within a few weeks my baby's skin was healed completely. He has now not a trace of rash, or eruption, or eczema, or burning sore. Not only so, but cured of the tormenting skin trouble, he has improved in general health."

Zam-Buk is sold at all stores and medicine vendors, 50c. a box, or post free from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, for price, 6 boxes for $2.50. A certain cure for all skin diseases, cuts, burns, etc., and for piles.

Andy Miller took first and second prises for Wealthy apples at the Cranbrook Fair, and R. M. Reid took several prizes for his poultry, at the same fair.

Mr W. Broten of Wyoming, arrived in town on Saturday last. He was in Creston for a day or two last July, and has come this time with a view to remaining all Winter, and seeing what the climate is like, with a view to purchasing fruit land in the Spring.

While travelling through Montana on Friday last, Mr Broten states that for hundreds of miles the train ran through country covered with snow 14 inches deep, which shrouded the wheat and other standing crops in a mantle of white.

R. Lamont, the Live Real Estate Man has let a contract to P. Mayone, to clear seven and a half acres of his fruit lands situated close to town. The timber is to be entirely cleared off the surface, and the contract includes the clean removal of all roots and stumps. Next Spring it is the intention of Mr. Lamont to plant this plot, in a first class apple orchard.

Mr. Primrose-Wells, eldest son of Dr. Primrose Wells left Creston for India Via England, on Monday last, where he will resume his duties with one of the Great Eastern Mercantile Houses.

A moving picture show, of the catch penny variety, visited Creston this week, but they did not gather up very much cash from Creston. That travelling show game is about worked out so far, as this town is concerned, it requires something more than a few hands bills, to draw the hard worked rancher's money from his pocket now-a-days, the public are at last getting wise.

Mr. Klauckman of the Continental Mine, was a visitor to Creston this week.

Mr. D. S. Jennings, one of the staff of the Dominion Conservation of Natural Resources Commission, is spending a few days in Creston.

At the special meeting of the Canyon City School Trustees held this week, it was decided to raise $700 for school purposes at Canyon City during the coming period. At this meeting Mr. A. D Pochin, of Canyon City, was appointed a delegate to proceed to Nelson to attend the sittings, and give evidence before the Royal commission on taxation, who will be in session at Nelson on Wednesday October 11th, 1911.

Mr. J. Cherrington of the Creston Mercantile Co., is confined at his home by serious illness.

At the request of his old customers, Mr. W. K. Brown the reliable Blacksmith, has again taken over the "Creston Smithy" and any one wantgood blacksmithing work done, will find Mr. Brown doing business at the old stand, behind the Mercantile Store.

CONFIRMATION AT CHRIST CHURCH

The Right Rev. The Lord Bishop, A M. de Pencier, of New Westminister at Christ Church last Sunday.

There was a large congregation at Christ Church on Sunday morning, to witness the solemn Rite of Confirmation The Bishop delivered a most impressive and pratical address to the candidates. His Lordship also preached a most excellent sermon, taking for his text. "Seek ye first the Kingdom of God and His righteousness and all these things shall be added unto you." Matt vi.33. The Bishop was the Celebrant at the Holy Communion, assisted by the Rev. Philip C. Hayman (Vicar.) Thirty people remained for the Sacrament. Much beautiful embroidery work has been been given this church by a lady in England, the latest of which we must mention, the white Frontals, adding supreme beauty to the appropriateness of the day Festival. The Altar rail is also a gift from our own Sunday School.

Bishop de Pencier was much pleased with the progress of the Church work in the Parish, and indeed his encouraging remarks during his visit will undoubtedly with God's blessing speed the work on to further advancement.

Special Harvest Thanksgiving Services will be held at Christ Church next Sunday Oct. 1st at 11 a. m. and 7 30 p m. Preacher, the Rev. W. M. Walton, Rector of Fernie.

Communications

The editor does not accept any responsibility for the opinions of his correspondents.

Editor Review:—

Sir permit me to say to the public through you columns that I appreciate very highly the opportunity of preaching to the United Congregations of the Presbyterian and Methodist churches of Creston for the coming three or four Sundays.

The Board of Trade has not made a mistake in giving this spot of beauty and of coming growth the name of "Glorious Creston." In a few years it will be an important centre of a flourishing population, in the midst of one of the most beatiful spots on earth.

I should like to leave a contribution towards making it morally as glorious as it is in the beauty of its scenary and in the unique richness of its soil in the production of flowers and fruit. For this the people must think the great thoughts of God for man; understand the great purpose of the Christ for all. here and now, and co-operate to bring in the practical results of the Kingdom of God "on earth as in heaven."

During the four weeks of my further stay in Creston I propose to pursue one connected line of thought for the morning addresses and another for the evenings, The morning will deal more with the inspiration and experience which go to mould the new man as factor in the moulding of the new earth. Paul's five different references to "the heavenlies" (or heavenly places) in the epistle to the Ephesians, will give the subjects: (1) Christ and the Heavenlies, (2) Man and the Heavenlies. (3) The Church and the Heavenlies. (4) The Conflict in the Heavenlies." The evening line of thot will be the Campaigns of the Kingdom of Christ on Earth. (1) The Triumph of the Kingdom. (2) The campaigns now on; Universal Peace. (3) The greatest struggle of all; Purity. (4) The Method for final Victory; Christion Citizenship

A cordial invitation is extended to all who can attend these services.

C. S Eby.

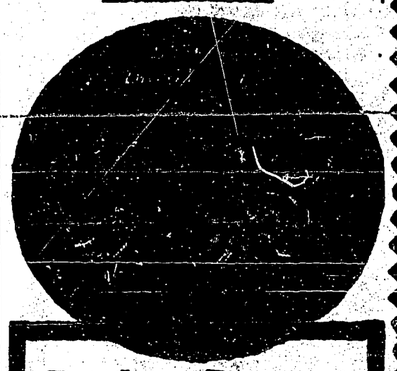
Victoria, Sept. 7th 1911.

The Editor,

Sir:—

I would ask you to kindly, through the medium of your paper, inform Potato Growers in your district that the Provincial Government has decided to make a display of Potatoes at the American Land and Irrigation Exposition to be held at Madison Square, New York, November 3rd-13th. Mr. Asahel Smith of Ladner has been appointed Commissioner to arrange for the collection and preparation of this exhibit, and will also accompany it to New York.

The preparation of the exhibit will be undertaken at New Westminster, from which place the exhibit will be shipped to New York. In order to allow latitude to Mr. Smith, who will have charge of the preparation of the exhibit, it will be necessary that he receive at least fifty pounds of each variety of carefully named and selected Potatoes, and these Potatoes must be chosen having reference to smoothness of skin, uniformity of size, and flushness of eye and absolute freedom from all scab or blemish, and all Potatoes must be received in New Westminster not later than October 14th.



Poultry Raising That Pays It All Back—And More

Many a dollar is invested in poultry raising and never comes back—for the simple reason that the necessary knowledge has not also been invested. The way to get your money back, and a lot more with it, is to know exactly what to do, and how to do it.

You cannot get this practical knowledge from a book. You have to get it from those who have made big money raising poultry through right methods. The help and guidance of such experts are given you in the Poultry Course of the International Correspondence Schools. Every phase of successful poultry raising is covered in a clear, concise, practical way. Here are several of the subjects: How to select most profitable breeds; feeding; marketing eggs and poultry for profit; natural and artificial brooding; natural and artificial incubation; laying hens; combination plant; poultry appliances; enemies of poultry; poultry houses and management; turkeys; water fowls; squabs; etc.

Besides all this, the I. C. S. is associated with the largest poultry farm in the world—the Rancocas Poultry Farm—where experiments of every kind are made for the benefit of those taking this Course.

You Cannot Learn Poultry-Raising From a Book

There is only one right way to learn how to raise poultry, and make it pay from the start, and that is to learn from experts who have been through it all.

This is exactly the kind of instruction the International Correspondence Schools offer you. This is NOT a book scheme, but a home Course of practical lessons, representing the lifelong experience of the most successful poultry raisers in the world.

The Course includes everything pertaining to successful poultry raising: How to select most profitable breeds; feeding; marketing eggs and poultry for profit; natural and artificial brooding; natural and artificial incubation; laying hens; combination plant; poultry appliances; enemies of poultry; diseases of poultry; poultry houses and management; turkeys; water fowls; squabs; etc., etc.

What makes the Course particularly valuable is the fact that the I. C. S. is associated with the largest poultry farm in the world—the celebrated Rancocas Farm, at Brown's Mills, In-the-Pines, N. J., famous for its fine Rancocas Leghorns and DAY-OLD-CHIX, and where 30,000 eggs are marketed every week.

The I. C. S. has spent thousands of dollars in preparing this Course—the only one of its kind—a Course that you can master and apply in your own home, whether you live in the city, suburbs, or country, and that equips you to handle a few hens or manage a large poultry farm. This Course will help you just as the many other I. C. S. Courses have helped thousands of men and women in other walks of life.

The attached coupon will bring you descriptive circular of this great Poultry-Raising Course. Fill it in and mail it today.
