MOOSEJAW NEWSPAPER MAKES ATTACK ON BANK

Our attention has been drawn to a press dispatch emanating from Moosejaw and referring to an attack on the Canadian Bank of Commerce by the Moosejaw Times in connection with the Bank's relations to the City of Moosejaw. We may say that this attack was most unwarranted as the Bank has done absolutely everything that the city has asked it to do, but exasperating as is the attack, it is not nearly as bad as the garbled press dispatch would indicate.

The following despatches speak for themselves:

Moose Jaw, Sask., July 29.--The City Council has passed a resolution unanimously condemning a local paper, The Evening Times, for its front page editorial on the financial condition of the city.

In part, the resolution reads as follows: "That this council desires to place on record its strong disapproval on the article published recently, owing to its gross misstatement of local conditions wherein the crecit of the city and its business men is impugned, and that a copy of this resolution be forwarded to the Board of Trade with the request that support be given this motion with a view to restoring confidence in the city which has been seriously impaired by the publication aforesaid."

Moose Jaw, Sask., July 29.—Mayor Pascoe emphatically denies the report publlsbed in a local paper announcing that the city's bankers have refused to accept cheques drawn by the city "Any inconvenience that has been experienced in connection with the city's financial arrangements has been caused by our inability to dispose of the city's debentures," said the Mayor.

The Review has gone to the trouble to interview some of our leading merchants and in every instance has heard words of commendation as to the treatment and policy of the Canadian Bank of Commerce, and we have every reason to believe that the public generally are far too wise to be influenced by the utterances of an ambitious sensational but misinformec evening paper, but will treat the whole matter as it deserves, with silent contempt.

CANADIAN FRUIT MARKS ACT AND IMPORTED FRUIT

The British Columbia Fruit Growers' Association

Victoria, B. C., July 1913

Re MARKING IMPORTED FRUIT

Under the Fruit Marks Act all Canadian Shippers of fruits have been compelled to comply with its requirements. This British Columbia growers have faithfully and cheerfully done, though imported fruit coming in direct competition with us was allowed to be sold without hindrance without in any way complying with the law. This situation created a condition of unfair competition which the Dominion Government recognized, and in 1912 endeavored on our representations, to remove; in this they were unsuccessful because the law did not apply to imported fruit, and even if it had, there was no adequate provision for its enforcement against foreign shippers

The B. C. Fruit Growers' Association, at its last annual meeting in January, passed a strong resolution citing the injustice and unfairness under which our industry was laboring and asking the Dominion Government to formulate regulations, making it incumbent on foreign shippers to comply with our Fruit Marks Act before the packages were allowed into Canada.

A committee composed of W. S. Eoggo. of Vernon and Thomas Abriel, of Nakusp, and the Secretary of the Association, proceeded to Ottawa in February to press this and other matters before the Dominion Government. The Hon. Martin Burrell, Minister of Agriculture, and Member for Yale-Cariboo, met them in a most helpful spirit and gave them all possible assistance; he fully recognized the injustice in the Fruit Marks Act and had legislation prepared to remedy it. The Bill secured precedence in the House over many others which were dropped, and despite the crowded and contentious character of the session and some opposition, the Bill was passed.

Under the Bill, as passed, the Governor in Council had power to make regulations and these were duly published, and so given the force of law, in the "Canada Gazette' of July 5th. They read as follows:

"His Excellency the Administrator in Council is pleased to order that the following Regulations shall be and the same are hereby made and established under the provisions of section 320 A of the Inspection and Sale Act :—

1. In these Regulations:
   (a) "Importer" means the person, firm or corporation in Canada to whom fruit from outside Canada is sold, shipped, consigned or delivered.
   (b) "fruit" means apples, crab apples, pears, plums and peaches when shipped in closed packages
   (c) "Inspector" means an inspector employed by the Department of Agriculture of Canada to enforce the provisions of Part IX of the Inspection and Sale Act, chapter 85, Revised Statutes of Canada, 1906, and the Regulations made thereunder.
2. No fruit shall be imported into Canada except as hereinafter provided.
3. Every importer of fruit, or his representative shall cause all grade marks found on closed packages containing imported fruit to be completely removed, erased or obliterated, when such grade marks are different to or inconsistent with the marking or branding required by sections 320 and 321 of the Inspection and Sale Act, or section 4 of these Regulations.
4. Every importer of fruit, or his representative, shall cause all closed

STEELITE

Since last December Mr. Everard Steele along with his son has been manufacturing an explosive known as Steelite in Silverton district. It has been used with great success at different mines.

Some of the chief advantages of the powder are : safety, entire absence of noxious fumes, not affected by heat or cold, and the fact, that although it is of the chlorate of potash type of explosives it can be used with high efficiency in wet mines.

Realising the advantages of such an explosive a number of Nelson business men acquired the Canadian rights and formed a company for its manufacture, called "Steelite Explosives (Canada) Limited", of which Mr. W.R .Mc Lean M. P. P. is president; the other directors are Everard Steele, Ernest W. Steele, Kenneth Campbell and P. G. Gallagher, the well-known lumber man.

The German Authorities have admitted this powder to railroad transportation as a safety explosive.

This explosive should prove of great advantage to miners and mine owners.

A RECORD FRUIT YIELD PROMISED

Elko, B. C., August 7—A fruit crop of even greater magnitude than last year's is now looked for in the East Kootenay district, says R.T. Hicks, manager of the Kootenay Fruit Growers union, who is in close touch with the whole district and finds all conditions indicating a record crop. It is also pointed out that transportation facilities for inland fruit growers will be decidedly better this year as compared with a year ago. Important interests are now being served by the newly opened section of the Kootenay Central line between Golden and Similkameen; and with the completion of the southern route of the C.P.R. between Hope and Penticton the entire East Kootenay country, as well as the Okanagan and Similkameen valleys, will be in direct touch with coast shipping points,

It's impossible anyone could suspect—she broke off helplessly.

She no longer thought of Aaron Roberts, his declaration of love. She no longer thought of her brother's theft or the dangers which confronted him. Jimmy Francks' life was threatened, and his life and honor were dearer to her than her own. Not because he was free now—that weighed with her not at all, it made no difference. She loved him, that was all. She would have loved him had he been as far removed from her as the stars in the sky.

And Aaron Roberts, the Jew, knew this. He rejoiced in it, too; though love might never be his to receive, it might be his to give.

Nobility and purity. All the wealth of the world was as dust and ashes in comparison.

The reporter of The Evening Echo got hold of one of the servants at the Savoy, Roberts continued. It has leaked out that just before she died Mrs. Francks accused her husband of killing her. Don't forget the broken bottle found in the fireplace; and then those papers—the ones I gave your brother. He took them straight down and gave them to Mr. Francks. Until Mr. Francks obtained those papers and destroyed them he was in Mr. Saintsbury's power. Whether his wife lived or died he was in no sense free. Do you follow me?

She nodded, her breath was coming quickly in short hard gasps. But who's to know anything about the papers?

The keys of my safe were missing and I telephoned down to Scotland Yard; you see I didn't suspect your brother then. They sent a man up here; the keys were found under the safe, where I suppose your brother pushed them after abstracting the papers. But Heriot will get hold of this man; they'll put two and two together, and Saintsbury will help them. It so happens they'll be able to weave an unbroken chain of evidence against Mr. Francks. Everything that happened just before and just after his wife's death points to the fact that he was anxious to get rid of her.

Oh, my God!

Iris buried her face in her hands, rocking herself to and fro. Roberts watched her, his face softened, the firm lines about his mouth relaxed. He longed to take her in his arms, to comfort her, and by sheer brute force crush and destroy her fear and sorrow.

Miss de Fontaigne, I've seen Mr. Francks once or twice, I've followed his career carefully. In my own mind, in spite of the overwhelming evidence against him, I'm convinced he is not guilty.

I know he's not! She was standing beside him, her momentary weakness vanished.

Good. But remember you love him.

She winced, and her face grew rosy red; she looked proudly into the Jew's face.

Yes, I love him.

Can your love save him? he whispered. No—it's your love which threatens him. It increases his danger, points to his guilt.

She rolled back a few paces horrified. But how can people be so vile as to think because he loves me he would take a human life, above all the life of the woman who became his wife.

Aaron Roberts took a notebook from his pocket, searched until he found a certain letter, then opened it and handed it to Iris. She glanced at the signature—Ella Francks — then gave it back to the Jew.

I can't read it.

It was written to Mr. Saintsbury in answer to an application for money he sent his daughter, money which he required to pay off a loan to me. She refused to send him the money—because she had discovered her husband's secret. She discovered it the very day they were married, and so though they lived as husband and wife they were nothing to one another, not even friends, just acquaintances. Another link in the chain, Miss de Fontaigne.

How did you get that letter? she asked.

Saintsbury showed it to me; he couldn't pay me, you see. I retained it. I realise how very valuable it might be. Now I shall destroy it.

She stopped him, and at the contact of her hands he trembled.

It doesn't belong to you, you must not do that. If Mr. Saintsbury insists on using it as evidence against Mr. Francks, you must give it back to him. Mr. Francks himself would wish it, she whispered. I wish it—and you?

Slowly he folded up the letter. But if Saintsbury wished to give me this letter in exchange for a debt?

Iris de Fontaigne turned away without replying. Slowly she moved towards the door and Aaron Roberts watched her go.

When she reached it she turned. You have warned me of Mr. Francks' danger, you have saved my brother from prosecution for theft, and you are fighting to prove Mr. Francks' innocence—because you love me?

Her voice was quite emotionless now and there was neither fear nor scorn nor even pity in it.

Because I love you, the Jew replied very gently.

And what do you want in return?

Her voice was so low now it scarcely reached Aaron Roberts' ears. But he heard each whispered word; yet he did not reply. And so they waited a long, long time. The clock ticked aggressively on the mantelshelf as if trying to remind the Jew of his favorite maxim—Time is money. A short time ago the detective had in jest remarked that the ticking of the clock must sometimes be very irritating to the Jew; he did not even hear it now, he was unconscious of time, of place. He was only conscious of this wonderful ambition which had been born to him.

The ambition to love; stronger than even the desire to be loved.

At last so prolonged was the silence that Iris repeated her question. And what do you want in return.

Nothing.

The Jew shut his eyes; he dared not look any longer at the little shadowy figure in the gloom of the door. He waited for her answer.

And her answer was the closing of the door. When he looked up he was alone.

Nothing.

With that one word he had cast back into the gutters all the wealth he had slowly and eagerly accumulated during his life. The ambition of his youth, and the ambition of his race, he had slain at the very hour of its fulfilment, centreing his whole soul on a new ambition which could never be reached save by passing through the gates of Death!

CHAPTER XXII.

Having put his hand to the plough, Aaron Roberts had no intention of turning back. His original impulse on his first meeting with Iris de Fontaigne, when subconsciously he realised she was the woman he desired for his mate, was to win her by fair means or foul.

Whether it would please her to accept him as a husband never entered his head. He wanted her; he knew that as surely as he knew he wanted gold; the means of forcing her to accept him lay ready to his hand.

Subsequent meetings with her had changed his point of view. Indeed he was a changed man, though he was unaware of the fact himself.

The eagle-like Faber realised it though, and lamented. He made up his mind to save his chief.

Now Faber was a married man—though he never boasted of the fact; [illegible] His wife was a worthy woman, and he knew he had no real cause of complaint; but he had never forgiven her for successfully persuading him in their pre-nuptial days that she possessed everything that the selfishly romantic heart of man could desire, except wings.

Faber had clothed her with his ideals, wrapped her about with dreams and mysteries, even written a sonnet to her eyebrow or her elbow, or some other inconvenient spot. And she, fulfilling her destiny, had encouraged him, and not until the marriage had been consummated, did he discover that he had married a commonplace, buxom little woman whose weight was nine stone ten, who was clever with her needle, and whose ambitions were centred on a gas-stove, a cookery book and the nursery.

It was a rude awakening, but it gave him a sort of mental and spiritual superiority over the unmarried of his sex, and caused him to keep a watchful eye on Aaron Roberts.

Take care that girl doesn't fool you, he said to his chief after Miss de Fontaigne had taken her leave. She is as cunning as the rest of her sex.

Roberts looked at him, and Faber wilted away. He knew then how badly his chief had the disease.

Get out! Roberts roared.

The Jew realised that he had very little time left in which to help Jimmy Francks to prove his innocence at the forthcoming inquest. Doubtless he had exaggerated the suspicions which attached to Francks. For some twenty minutes he was busy with the telephone, while Faber prowled up and down the outer office, growling to himself like a caged beast and hurling invectives against the sex unjustly described as weak.

Just as Aaron Roberts was on the point of leaving his office, Mr. Saintsbury appeared. He was dressed in deep mourning. He entered the room quickly with an almost jaunty step.

Afraid I might miss you. You got my letter this morning?

PIMPLES ON FACE ARMS AND LEGS

Scratched So Made Red Sore. Trouble Grew Worse All the Time. A Cake of Cuticura Soap and a Box of Cuticura Ointment Completely Cured.

Ville Jollette, Que.—"My little girl, aged four years, had so many pimples on her face, arms and legs that I did not know what to do. They lasted for a year. She commenced to scratch and this made pimples, clear, not red. She scratched so much that the blood ran and it made a red sore. The sores were worse on her arms and legs and on her face, and they were ugly looking with the blood. I was told what to do to stop her suffering, and I used the treatment but other pimples came out all the time. I tried all sorts of remedies but the trouble grew worse all the time. It was always the same story, until I used Cuticura Soap and Ointment. I began to apply the Cuticura Ointment on her, also hot water and Cuticura Soap. Immediately I began to see that they were curing her, and after having used a cake of Cuticura Soap and a box of Cuticura Ointment she was completely cured. [illegible]

"My husband also used Cuticura Ointment for cracks in his hands. After three applications of the Cuticura Ointment he was completely cured." (Signed) Mrs. Alfred Corrier, Jan. 16, 1912.

TO MAKE SHIPS ROLL

Gyroscopes on Lake Boats Might Prevent Their Freezing

Most novel of all the applications of the gyroscope that have been proposed in the last few years is the use of a pair of mighty gyroscopes to make a ship roll, so that in passing through icefields it will not freeze tight. The possibility that this will make traffic possible on the Great Lakes during the winter has been suggested among ship engineers, though there are other difficulties to winter lake traffic besides lake freezing.

On the car ferry Ashtabula, which operates on the lakes such a pair of gyroscopes have been installed by Elmer A. Sperry, the leading authority in America on this peculiar force, and the inventor of the gyroscope compasses that are being supplied to many ships of the navy. The apparatus on the Ashtabula serves the double purpose of restricting or diminishing the rolling of the vessel when the water is rough, and of causing rolling when water is quiet and there is danger that the vessel may be caught in the ice.

The big gyroscopes are placed low in the vessel, and with their attachments, weigh fifty-one tons. Not much power is required to keep the heavy wheels revolving at high speed; and so long as they are revolving the rolling of the vessel is controlled. A very sensitive pendulum automatically manages the big wheels. As the pendulum swings it causes the big gyroscopic wheels to turn slightly in such a way as to diminish the ship's rolling; or if it is desired to make the ship roll the pendulum can be made to swing—and, in turn, this will move the gyroscopes and make the vessel roll.

Mr. Sperry believes the method of controlling the rolling of a ship by great tanks of water on the deck so connected that the water flows from one to another at the desired moment is not a satisfactory solution, for he has discovered that the rolling of a ship in a heavy sea is not regular. It will start at a slight degree and then work up to a heavy roll, reaching the climax in perhaps a dozen swings, then diminish again to the slight rolling. By the use of the pendulum, however, each rolling motion is met with just the right amount of gyroscopic action needed for that one roll.

Tea and Coffee Finally Had to Go

The way some persons cling to tea and coffee, even after they know they are doing them harm, is a puzzler. (Tea is just as harmful because it contains caffeine, the same drug found in coffee). But it is an easy matter to give it up for good, when Postum is properly made and used instead. A girl writes:

"Mother had been suffering with nervous headaches for seven weary years, but kept on drinking coffee.

"One day I asked her why she did not give up coffee, as a cousin of mine had done who had taken to Postum. But Mother was such a slave to coffee she thought it would be terrible to give it up.

"Finally, one day, she made the change to Postum, and quickly her headaches disappeared. One morning while she was drinking Postum so freely and with such relish, I asked for a taste.

"That started me on Postum and I now drink it more freely than I did coffee, which never comes into our house now."

Name given by Canadian Postum Co., Windsor, Ont. Write for booklet, "The Road to Wellville."

Postum comes in two forms.

Regular Postum (must be boiled).

Instant Postum doesn't require boiling, but is prepared instantly by stirring a level teaspoonful in an ordinary cup of hot water, which makes it right for most persons.

A big cup requires more and some people who like strong things put in a heaping spoonful and temper it with a large supply of cream.

Experiment until you know the amount that pleases your palate and have it served that way in the future.

EXPLORING THE PALATINE HILL

Prof. Boni Describes Temples Discovered Under Rome

The 2666th anniversary of the foundation of Rome was celebrated this year by Prof. Boni who lectured on his recent excavations on the Palatine. The objects of these excavations, which were started a year ago, is twofold, the exploration of the original structure of the historical hill on which Rome was built and the discovery of traces left by its earliest inhabitants.

The results so far obtained may be briefly explained as follows. By means of deep borings reaching down to the original rock of the hill three separate series of pits or cellars of unknown ancient temples were discovered and the development of the dwellings in different periods could be followed from the rough huts of the first inhabitants to the humble houses of the early republic, which were gradually transformed and enlarged until they were changed to the palatial mansions of the empire. Practically every building on the Palatine was erected over edifices of earlier periods. In the basilica of the Palace of Domitian traces of an exedra built by Nero were found, and underneath were the piscina or water tanks divided into five compartments, which cut through the walls of a republican house with frescoed walls.

In the vestibule the foundations of the imperial throne were discovered cutting through the walls of three palaces built in different periods over a republican house richly decorated with rare marbles. Still deeper down the favissae or pits of ancient temples were found, with traces of broken pottery identified as dating from the fifth century, B.C. The explorations carried on in the house of the Flavii are of the utmost importance for the topographical study of the Palatine Hill, and although no great discovery of statue and works of art has been made, since everything was plundered during the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries, when extensive digging for treasure was undertaken, historical buildings have been identified. The house of Tiberius, for instance, has been identified, and underneath it is the pit used as a prison where Drusus was starved to death.

In Suffragette Days

Dr. Lyman Abbott told at a recent luncheon in New York, an anti-suffrage anecdote.

Two suffragettes, he said, were talking one evening at the club over a game of billiards'

How is your husband? the first asked.

Slowly mending, thank you, the other answered.

Slowly mending? I didn't know he was ill.

He isn't ill, the other suffragist explained, laughing heartily. He is slowly mending my khaki riding breeches.

A portable searchlight, supplied with gas from a tank carried on a man's back, has been invented to enable linesmen to see to the tops of poles at night without having to climb them.

When the young husband reached home from the office he found his wife in tears.

Oh, John, she sobbed on his shoulder. I had baked a lovely cake and put it out on the back porch for the frosting to dry and the dog ate it!

Well, don't cry about it, sweetheart, he consoled, patting the pretty flushed cheek. I know a man who will give us another dog.

PANAMA OPENS THIS YEAR

One of the Locks Will Soon be Completed

It is not impossible that the Panama Canal may be open to navigation this year as Col. George W. Goethals has stated that the passage of ships will be permitted as soon as one set of twin locks can be operated. Work is being pushed on the lower guard gates in the west chambers, in order to have all the gates on this side completed as soon as possible, thus permitting the passage of ships before all the gates are completed, as the other side of the locks can be kept dry. The same plan is being followed at Pedro Miguel and Miraflores locks, and all the gates in the west chambers will be completed by October 1st.

A Scientific Congress

Special interest attaches to next year's meeting of the Association Francaise pour l'Advancement des Sciences which is to be held at Havre, probably September 4th to 12th. A large number of British societies are to take part in the meeting. There are 160 British societies affiliated with the British Association for the Advancemen of Science, and it has been the custom for these societies to hold a conference in London whenever the association itself met in some far distant city—as in the case of the meetings at Winnipeg and in South Africa. (Strange to say the British Assocation has never met in London). Now it happens that in 1914 the British Association meets in Australia, and comparatively few members will be able to make the long and expensive journey, aside from those whose expenses are to be paid out of funds raised for this purpose in Australia. Accordingly, as Havre is comparatively near England, it has been decided to hold the conference of delegates from the affiliated societies at that place, in conjunction with the meeting of the French association. It is hoped that American scientific societies will also be represented at this joint meeting.

Milking Machines

The milking machine is becoming a recognized part of the equipment of large dairies. It has already reached the point where it compares favorably with ordinary hand milking in the item of germ content of the milk and in its effect upon the flow. There is still much room for improvement from the mechanical viewpoint especially in the matter of simplicity and expense of installation.

The success of the milking machine is closely associated with the personality of the operator. Unquestionably it takes a higher grade man to operate a milking machine successfully than to hand-milk a cow equally well. There is every reason to think that in the hands of careless operators the machinery will work injury to the cows, but the same result is too often obtained from inefficient hand-milking.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. There was once a chap who went skating too early, and all of a sudden that afternoon loud cries for help began to echo among the bleak hills that surrounded the skating pond.

A farmer, cobbling his boots before his kitchen fire, heard the shouts and yells and ran to the pond at breakneck speed. He saw a large black hole in the ice and a pale young fellow stood with chattering teeth shoulder deep in the cold water.

The farmer laid a board on the thin ice, and crawled out on it to the edge of the hole. Then extending his hand he said:

Here, come over this way, and I'll lift you out.

No, I can't swim, was the impatient reply. Throw a rope to me. Hurry up. It's cold in here.

I ain't got no rope, said the farmer, and he added angrily: What if you can't swim—you can wade, I guess. The water's only up to your shoulders.

Up to my shoulders? said the young fellow. It's eight feet if it's an inch. I'm standing on the blasted fat man who broke the ice.

Harry Lauder tells a story of an English nobleman. His lordship was introduced to me at the end of the Tivoli one night, so the story begins. He asked me to dine with him. I accepted, and then he hesitated and said:

I don't mean dine at my home, you know. My wife doesn't approve of—e—r—music hall people you know. I mean dine at my club.

At your club? said I with horrified look. Oh, no! No, thank you, my lord; I'm sorry to have to decline, but the fact is, you know, my wife doesn't—er—approve of clubmen.

Yes, replied Mr. Meekin, if I can thoroughly convince her that I desire her to march and make speeches maybe she'll get resentful and refuse to do so.

Why?

Because, when I asked what her favorite flower was she took care to name something that doesn't cost more than 50 cents a bunch.

No, said I.

Along with dyspepsia comes nervousness, sleeplessness and general ill health. Why? Because a disordered stomach does not permit the food to be assimilated and carried to the blood. On the other hand, the blood is charged with poisons which come from this disordered digestion. In turn, the nerves are not fed on good, red blood and we see those symptoms of nervous breakdown. It is not head work that does it, but poor stomach work. With poor thin blood the body is not protected against the attack of germs of grip—bronchitis—consumption. Fortify the body now with

STRUGGLE WITH FIVE LEOPARDS

Officers of Storm-Tossed Freighter Lassoo Animals Released by Lightning

While a terrific storm raged about them, tossing their big freighter about like a cork in the ocean, six officers of the German steamship Rheinfels, which arrived recently in Philadelphia from Calcutta, battled for five hours before they succeeded in subduing five frenzied leopards which had escaped from their cages.

During the storm all hands had been ordered on deck by Capt. Albert Kuckens, and when lightning struck the poop deck it knocked the leopard cages down in the midst of the 48 men.

With a scream of fright the men took to the rigging, kicking, cursing and fighting in an effort to climb to a place of safety. In an instant only the six officers were left on deck. One stoker, seized by fear when he saw the loose leopards, leaped into the sea and was drowned.

Around and around the battered deck the quintet of leopards raced, paying little attention to the group of six men crouched in one corner. All the deck load had been washed into the sea, giving the beast sample room to romp and run. After an hour the leopards sighted the men and stationed themselves in front of them, evidently intending to wait until the storm abated to advance on them.

But the officers thought otherwise. One crawled from the group on his hands and knees to his room, procured a rope and returned. Suddenly he threw the rope across the leopards, seated on their haunches a few feet away. Unprepared for the movement, two of the beasts were caught and made fast. Other ropes were secured, but it was not until three hours later that the last of the leopards was captured and placed in another cage.

In the same cargo of wild beasts were two giraffes and two antelopes. Their cages were shattered, but they remained quietly on the poop deck and watched the fight.

FIRE IN STOVE 70 YEARS

Primitive Cooking Apparatus in Cornwall, England

Incredible as it may seem to us who have at our command every sort of labor saving machine and device that it is possible to conceive, there are some parts of the world—and not the most remote, either—where many of the ordinary tasks of life are accomplished in almost identically the same way that they were centuries ago, says a writer in Gas Logic. Travellers in foreign countries have frequently told of surprising instances of this kind which they have met with in their wanderings in out-of-the-way localities.

A striking illustration of the way in which people who come little into contact with modern methods oftentimes cling to ancient and cumbersome ways of doing things is afforded by the case of a farmer in Cornwall, England, whose primitive and picturesque cooking apparatus has attracted attention.

The fuel used in the stove is neither coal nor wood, but peat. No other fuel has been burned in it. The Cornish farmer declares that to his knowledge the fire in it has not been out in seventy years.

When the farmer's family have any cooking to do, the embers are first raked flat, and an iron plate is placed over them. The dough is then put into a tin, which is placed upon the iron plate, the tin being covered over with a big iron pot. The whole is covered with embers and in eighty minutes' time, it is said, the bread is perfectly baked.

An Irish member of parliament is telling a story of a man who complained to three friends—an Englishman, a Scotchman, and an Irishman—that his servant was constantly breaking china.

What do you think I ought to do with her? he asked plaintively.

The practical Englishman said: Dismiss her! But as she was otherwise an excellent servant, her master was unwilling to do that.

Then take it out of her wages, suggested the thrifty Scot.

That wouldn't do much good was the reply, for her wages are less than the amount of damage she does.

Then raise her wages! said the Irishman promptly.

Would you mind resting your head on my left shoulder, dearest?

To be nearer your heart murmured the beautiful girl.

Yes, and to be further away from the cigars I have in my right pocket.

That boat embraces many points in its slops.

That's why, then, it is always hugging the shore.

TOLD BY HIS TEETH

Teethmarks More Reliable in Crime Detection than Finger Prints

The case of the burglar who was recently identified in Paris by the marks of his teeth in some fruit he had bitten and left behind, led a London dentist to comment on the value of the teeth and palate for purposes of identification. It recalls, too, the researches of Dr. Paul Prague, of Vienna, who more than five years ago declared that a long series of experiments demonstrated that the palate never changes from childhood to old age, and that identification by this means is even more certain than by means of finger-prints.

The gums and palate, said the dentist referred to, are an infallible test of identity. No matter how a person changes in facial expression and in general appearance, the gums and palate remain to assure him and others that his identity is the same. The sooner this fact is realized the better for one can state no limit to its usefulness. Here is a case that came directly under my own notice.

A man of considerable wealth and of high social standing went on a tour to Africa. He disappeared, and though every effort was made to trace him he could not be found. Meanwhile difficulties arose concerning the disposition of his property. There was no evidence of his death, and presumption of death was refused by the court. Reports arrived later to the effect that he had been murdered by natives and it was stated that his body had been buried in an African village. As it happened, I had made the man a set of teeth and still retained the cast of the mouth. The man's brother went out, returned with the skull and I found that the cast I had taken fitted the mouth of the dead man. That was sufficient. The death was presumed, and the estate duly administered.

The palate test is infallible, and should be used by our detectives. A cast of the mouth of every criminal could easily be taken, and would prove more effective and reliable than the much-vaunted finger-print system.

Hogan's Clock

The frequent and unsuccessful candidacy of certain men for public office reminded George Dore of a story of his old friend Hogan.

Hogan was raffling a clock, said Mr. Dore. He was fairly successful in disposing of tickets in the shop where he worked, but he ran up against trouble when he canvassed the neighbors.

Dropping in at a neighbor's home he tried to sell a ticket on the clock.

'Gwan, the old clock doesn't run, replied the neighbor.

Well, drawled Hogan, changing front completely, well, perhaps yez won't win it, and then ye'll have the laugh on the fellow who does.

And what did he say? asked the diplomat.

Real Examples of Dual Personality

Are there in actual existence cases of Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde? A remarkable article in the current number of the Practitioner by Sir George Savage, lecturer on mental diseases at Guy's Hospital, London, seems to indicate that phenomena of dual personality approaching very nearly Stevenson's famous phantasy are occasionally discovered by those whose studies bring them in contact with the mysteries of the abnormal human mind.

The article is entitled 'Automatism,' which the writer defines broadly as the condition in which complicated mental processes give rise to complicated reactions to the surroundings which are not recollected in the ordinary waking and normal state.

Sir George divides his cases of more serious automatism into three groups. In the first there is no epilepsy; in the second fits are followed by automatic acts, and in the third replaced by them. He gives two terrible instances of the first two groups. In one a man killed his wife; in the other a mother wounded her child with a knife. Both man and woman were unconscious of what they were doing.

In the third group, continues the writer, we find cases like that of a certain country squire of middle age, of healthy, active habits, with no hereditary history of any neuritis, who came to London to consult his solicitor on a certain Tuesday morning. The lawyer asked him to call again at three o'clock. He did not return, but finding himself near his lawyer's office some days later about half past three, he went there, believing the day still Tuesday, and that he was only half an hour late as a result of his watch having stopped. He could not believe that the hour was half-past three and the day Friday. He then recognized that he had not shaved, but he seemed to have washed, dressed and eaten regularly. He certainly had not been drinking. He could not trace where he had been or what he had done, but it is clear that there had been nothing abnormal in his conduct to lead anyone to suppose him to be out of his mind.

Not the least interesting part of this extraordinary question of automatism, dual personality, loss of memory—whatever may be the correct title for each instance—is its legal aspect, and how far the author of crimes committed while in an abnormal state is amenable to the criminal law. To what extent must Jekyll suffer for the misdeeds of Mr. Hyde? This is Sir George Savage's view: I have on several occasions been asked to defend female kleptomaniacs on the plea of unconsciousness, but I have generally declined, although I admit it is possible for thieving, adroitly done and with apparent endeavor of concealment, to follow an epileptic seizure.

Another famous mental specialist, asked his views on this point, said: Serious crimes as well as petty thefts can, of course, be quite unconsciously committed and no memory of what has been done may be retained. This was a theory in the notorious 'Jack the Ripper' cases.

And Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde, do they—or does it—exist?

I have known of cases so extraordinary, was the reply, that the actual physical appearance of the patient is different during the period of aberration. I have known a physically sound and normal man to develop paralysis of an arm or some other limb or alteration of facial expression in sympathy with the abnormalities of his mind.

SLEEP WALKERS

Extraordinary Cases Related by a British Medical Man

The many remarkable stories which have been told of persons falling from windows or walking over heights while in a somnambulistic state are supplemented by some extraordinary cases which are related by Sir George H. Savage, M.D., in the Practitioner.

One concerns two friends of his who were travelling in Sweden. One night they stayed at a cafe and occupied the same room. Two hours after retiring one of them got up, seized a water bottle, and hurled it at the head of his friend, smashing it against the wall. He then returned to bed and was perfectly unconscious of the act.

Epilepsy is the cause of many acts of somnambulistic automatism, and Sir George tells the story of a man who had passed a brilliant school and university career and eventually entered the Government service. He secured an appointment abroad and left for the East in good health, but at Port Said he disappeared. After months, when he was supposed to be dead, his friends heard that he was in a state of destitution far from where he landed, but he had no recollection of his movements after he left the boat. After careful nursing, he was ready for work.

He took a private secretaryship in the colonies, where he soon proved his ability but shortly afterwards he disappeared and was again found in a state of poverty in quite another part of the world. A third time he started work on a ranch, and was making a success of it when he again vanished and on his being discovered in a state of great distress some months after, he was placed in an asylum.

Pampered Lapdogs

The New York papers report that a wealthy woman well known in society circles went to one of the finest hotels in New York and engaged a suite of four rooms and three baths for three months at $50 a day. There was a living room, a bedroom, and a bath for herself, a room and a bath for her maids, and a bedroom and bath for her babies, as she calls her three dogs, two Japanese and one Pekingese spaniels.

Rising from their satin-lined baskets in the morning, the dogs are bathed with scented water in the big white tub. After that comes breakfast with milk and toast. At luncheon the babies are served with lamb chops and creamed potatoes. Dinner consists of a bit of chicken, mashed potatoes, and a desert of ice cream or some creamy confection.

The fare of the dogs is $12 a day or more than $4,000 a year.

Whistling for a Living

A novel industry has been brought to light by the news that a man who in taking 450 British song birds to British Columbia is an expert bird whistler. It appears that it is no uncommon thing for a man who keeps a bird fancier's shop to be able to whistle a distinct series of bird notes. At the beginning of each series says The Daily Citizen, describing the work of the professional bird-whistler, the different feathered tribes whose cages completely covered the walls took up the lay, piping as if their little hearts would break with joy. When the linnets ceased the canaries, hearing the notes of the man-whistler, broke into full-throated song. Then when the expert started to whistle skylark notes the imprisoned songsters of the heavens forgot their captivity and gave the sun, peeping shyly in between the closed blinds, a melodious welcome.

It appears that when a bird is caught and put into a cage it is very apt to sulk and become miserable, this is where the bird-whistler comes in useful. He imitates the tones of whatever kind of bird this one happens to be, and the little prisoner, thinking it has company, forgets all his troubles and breaks into a song of joy.

Sometimes the bird-whistler can teach one bird another bird's song. One man taught a goldfinch to sing like a linnet and a linnet to sing like a goldfinch.

Mayor Rockwell of Akron was condemning the claim often put forward by the rich, that poverty is good for the character.

Poverty is good for nobody, he said. It embitters the mind, hardens the heart, causes unhappiness and fear and suffering.

There's nothing like adversity, a millionaire once said to me—there's nothing like adversity to bring a man out.

Yes, I replied, out at the elbows.

There are few who realize how important a role the thumb has played in the social customs of the people. Erskine records that among certain classes of people in Scotland the final settlement of a bargain was always signalized by the licking and joining of the thumbs. Kissing the thumb was at one time considered a characteristic of servility. The clergy, the rich and the great, were in receipt of the honor from tradesmen. From remote times the practice of licking the thumb has been regarded as a solemn pledge and promise, existing according to Tacitus and others, among the Goths, the Iberians and the Moors, and it may be traced through successive periods down to the present time.

Then the bank Broke

By the way, began the spokesman of the party, I don't believe I ever told you before of a curious incident that befel me.

It was the commercial room of the hotel, and bagmen of all ages and classes were gathered round. Although they smiled no particular welcome, the talkative traveler rambled on.

I was staying in the country, and one day, whilst out for a walk, I rested on a wayside bank. On rising after a little nap, I found that a dollar had dropped out of my pocket, and try as I would I could not discover the coin.

Well, what of that? asked the bearded one.

Just one year later, resumed the story teller, I was at the same place again. I clambered on the bank but the earth crumbled away, and I fell to the bottom again. But what do you think I found?

Your dollar, replied the bearded one.

No sir, wrong. I found the dollar and five cents. You see, my dollar had been in the bank a year at five per cent.

An article elsewhere in this issue of the Review dealing with the marking of fruit for market, is, we consider, of vital importance to the fruit grower and incidentally to the community.

We invite a careful perusal of its provisions and suggest that you keep a copy of it for future use. The reason of this is evident from the circular itself.

If the Dominion Government has thought enough of the industry to compel the importer to comply with certain regulations in order to enter his product into active competition with the Canadian grower, and if the importer finds it to his advantage to live up to the standard established by the Canadian Government, surely it must be to the advantage of the Canadian grower, not only to live up to this standard, but to meet the improvements of his competitor in every way that lies in his power.

Failing to meet this competition, what happens? Simply this, the retailer, finding that the imported goods are more uniform in grade, in quality, in pack and in price, gives his business where it pays him best to buy and the Canadian market is destroyed, and there is no sentiment in the fruit market, or in any other market of perishable goods.

The department of Agriculture has been and is at some expense to help the Canadian fruit grower to help himself, but if he refuses to be helped, then the Government will compel him to conform or keep out of the market. This is only fair, for this reason: The day of the limited production is passing and the time will come when the market must have protection from the demoralization of overproduction, then is when the Canadian grower, having formulated satisfactory grades and absolute standards, will have established a market which he can hold against any compeditor.

A LESSON TO US.

New Zealand's newly completed battle cruiser has visited Canada's shores. She came only as the harbinger of glad tidings from a sister Dominion and not to chide us for our own apathy. And yet, who can dwell upon the significance of the visit without feeling keenly conscious of Canada's utter failure to take any part in either the defence of its own coasts or of the British Empire?

Four weeks ago Canada celebrated the forty-sixth anniversary of her existence as a nation; forty-six years in which the burden of our defense was borne by the motherland. Through our infancy, when we were unable to help ourselves the burden was unselfishly carried. In the last decade, while we have enjoyed a prosperous development that almost surpasses comprehension, the motherland has rightly looked to us to help ourselves. And what is the sum total of what we have done? Absolutely nothing! And if Liberalism has its way what will we do towards lightening the empire's burden of defence in the next decade? Absolutely nothing!

But Liberalism will not prevail. The self respect of Canadians demands that Canada do her duty, and she will. —Calgary Herald.

A visit which ought to mean a lot to the fruit growers of this section, is that of R. G. L. Clarke, Chief Dominion Fruit Inspector for British Columbia, who, with Mr. Fletcher, Local Inspector, has spent the best part of a week in this section trying to interest the growers in the new Fruit Marks Act and pointing out to them the great advantage they derive therefrom. Mr. Clark is an experienced grower and knows this particular section from one end to the other, and we are fortunate in having a practical man and a man who can explain and convince others.

The subject matter of Mr. Clarke's visit is in fact the most important matter that could be brought to the notice of the people in this district and if we fail to benefit therefrom we have only ourselves to blame. We are glad to be able at this time to quote from an article in the Spokesman-Review of August 4th, which states: "In future all American fruit marketed in Canadian markets must conform in its grading to the Dominion system. Apples for example, can only be sold there when graded and markedas No. 1, No. 2, or No .3.

It is therefore vitally essential that all associations, independent shippers and individual growers who intend to send fruit to the Canadian markets shall conform strictly to the new regulations."

This suggests an argument of great force, viz: If it is "virtually essential" that the United States shipper should conform to Dominion regulations, how much more essential is it that our own Canadian shippers should grade their goods and pack their fruit according to the regulations which primarily were designed and enacted for their express benefit.

The Review proposes to publish the whole article in the next issue and to deal with it in its various phases editorially as it suggests some things which are obviously for the best interest of the grower and his market.

If we were given credit for trying to be good some of us would still have to pay cash.

Why Clocks Stop

The reason why mant lpiece clocks so often get out of order is so obvious that it is ange that attention to it has not been drawn before. A clockmaker said:

It is because mantelpieces are rarely level. If a clock meant for a mantelpiece is not placed in an exactly horizontal position it is sure to go wrong. When the clock gains or loses because of its slanting position, people regularly move the hands forward or backward, as the case may be, in order to adjust it. Eventually the clock's hands are moved about so much that the mechanism gets out of order, and the clock refuses even to tick.

Watches and travelling clocks are constructed differently from the stationary clock, and they will go in any position. That is why they are relied upon more than the ornamental mantelpiece clock.

New York's New $6,000,000 Post Office is Modern Wonder

New York's new $6,000,000 post office building, a massive pile of pink granite five storeys in height and two blocks long, facing the rear of the Pennsylvania station, is the greatest building of its kind in the world. The curb to the topmost piece of granite is 101 feet. There are 1654-000 cubic feet of granite, 18,000 tons of steel, 7,000,000 bricks, and 200,000 square feet of glass in the building. The main corridor, corresponding in length to the outside colonnade, is a combination of buff marble, white plaster and glass, two storeys high, 29 feet wide, and 280 feet long. There are 400,000 square feet of working space within the building.

I am glad to make your equaintance, sir, said the editor, enthusiastically. The story you sent us is perfectly splendid. But why use a nom de plume? Let us publish it over your own name and it will make you famous.

I'm not after fame, objected the author. It's money I want.

But you'll get just as much money in either case.

No, I won't. If I publish it over my own name my wife will get the money.

Several years ago when the University of Chicago held its decennial celebration John D. Rockefeller was its guest for several days. A bewildering succession of functions followed one another in such quick succession that each affair was from one to four hours late.

At the great banquet on the closing day Mr. Rockfeller in his after dinner speech told the following story:

I have felt for the past twenty-four hours like the Boston business man who lived in the suburbs and came in to his office every day. One winter afternoon he took the train for his home, but a terrific snowstorm was raging, and about half way to his suburb the train was snowed up. All night the passengers were imprisoned but early in the morning they managed to reach a nearby telegraph station, and the Boston man sent the following despatch to his office:

Will not be in the office today. Have not got home yesterday yet.

Mysteries of Antiquities

Was there at one time a large island in the Atlantic Ocean between the United States and Europe which has now entirely disappeared under the sea? Pluetrch about 100 A.D. in his life of Solon, who lived 600 years B.C., relates that when Solon the great law giver of the Greeks, was in Egypt he learned from the priest of Sais the story of Atlantis, which Plato gives us in his Timaeus.

Abridged, the priest of Sais says to Solon: Among the great days of Athens is one that should be placed before all others. Our record tells us that the Athenians destroyed an army that came across the sea and invaded Europe and Asia, for this (the Atlantic) was then navigable and beyond the strait where you placed the pillars of Hercules (Straits of Gibraltar) there was an island larger than Lybia and Asia Minor combined. From this island one could pass to other islands and from this to the continent lying around the interior (Mediterranean sea).

One fatal day and night there came a mighty earthquake and inundation which engulfed the island. Atlantis disappeared beneath the sea. Other classic writers describe the island or continent of Atlantis as containing mountains and pleasant valleys and streams and cities adorned with stately buildings.

Is all this story as told by Plato merely a fable? It is impossible to decide how far this legend is due to Plato's invention and how far it is based on facts of which no record remains. Medieval writers, for whom the tale was preserved by Arabian geographers, believed it true, and were fortified in the belief by numerous traditions of islands in the western sea which offered various points of resemblance of Atlantis.

The very ancient writers warmly adopted various theories regarding the incident of the disappearance. With the decline of the Platonic school of Alexandria, even the name of Atlantis dropped out of literature and was not heard during the middle ages. After the Renaissance, with its renewal of interest in Platonic studies, numerous attempts were made to rationalize the myth of Atlantis. The island was variously identified with America, Scandinavia, the Canaries, and even Palestine; and again in the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries the credibility of the whole legend was seriously debated, and sometimes even admitted by Montaigne, Buffon and Voltaire.

That Atlantis, a large island between Europe and America, might have existed and disappeared, leaving only remnants of islands, to many minds was too evident to escape notice, and so the controversy was renewed and engaged some of the most learned minds of the world.

Abbe Brasseur de Bourbong, the most eminent decipherer of Mexican records, asserted that he had found in Atlantis the ethnography of Americans. He finds the Toltecs to be descendants of the panic-stricken fugitives of the great catastrophe which is recorded by them as well as by the Egyptians.

But the most learned treatise in favor of Atlantis has been by M. Paul Gaffarel, which was published in 1860 and 1880. He utilized the deep-sea surroundings and found a ridge running down the middle of the Atlantic, pertaining toward the Azores, the depth of the water over the ridge being less than one thousand fathoms, while the valleys on either side averaged three thousand.

Mr. Gaffarel, and other enthusiasts go so far as to say that science will yet enable men to recover some Atlantean evidence from the submerged cities of Atlantis that will for ever close the discussion.

At the first meal on board the ocean liner Smythe was beginning to feel like casting his bread upon the waters. His friends had told him that when he began to feel that way he should stuff himself. He tackled a cutlet first, but it didn't taste right. He observed to the waiter: Waiter, this cutlet isn't very good.

The waiter looked at his whitening face, then replied: Yes, sir, but for the length of time you'll 'ave it, sir, it won't matter, sir.

To Speak on Irrigation

The arrangements for the annual meeting of the Western Canada Irrigation Association at Lethbridge, August 5, 6 and 7 are fast nearing completion, and the indications point to one of the largest attendances and most educational sessions this organization has ever held. Invitations have been sent to the most representative men in agricultural development in Canada and the United States, and acceptances have been received from a large number thus early. The Premiers, Ministers of Agriculture and Deputy Ministers of Agriculture of each of the western Provinces have been extended invitations to participate, and nearly every one of them, it is anticipated, will be present.

It is believed that the representation from British Columbia will be one of the best ever, and it is hoped that Sir Richard McBride, the premier, will head it. Invitations have been accepted by Hon. Price Allison, minister of finance and agriculture, and Hon. W. R. Ross, minister of lands.

Saskatchewan will probably be represented by Hon. Walter Scott, Premier, Hon. W. R. Motherwell, minister of agriculture and others.

Miss Sweetums—And what have you got for your pains?

Aviator—Arnica.

The elderly matron with the bundles, who was journeying to a point in Wisconsin and occupied a seat near the middle of the car, had fallen asleep. On the seat in front of her sat a little boy. The brakeman opened the door of the car and called out the name of the station the train was approaching. The elderly lady roused herself with a jerk and inquired hurriedly of the boy: Where are we, Bobby?

I don't know, grandma, answered the little boy.

Didn't the brakeman say something just now?

No, he just stuck his head inside the door and sneezed.

Help me with these things, Bobby! she exclaimed, she exclaimed, hurriedly. This is Oshkosh. It's where we get off.

THE SECRET OF GOOD HEALTH

Keep the Blood Rich and Pure with Dr. Williams' Pink Pills

The condition of the blood makes all the difference between health and sickness. Impure blood and strong healthy nerves and muscles never go together. If the blood is thin every part of the body becomes weak. The stomach fails in strength and the appetite becomes poor. The body does not obtain enough nourishment from the food, and soon the nerves begin to complain and the person becomes irritable, despondent, worn out and nervous. For a time there may be no actual sickness, only a run-down weak condition, but there is no defence against disease and from such a condition spring disorders such as anaemia, rheumatism, indigestion, neuralgia, and even paralysis itself.

People with impure, thin blood should take Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. Every dose helps to make new, rich blood, and new blood means health and strength. They stop the progress of disease, and red cheeks, good appetite, new strength, declare the general improvement in the health. Here is an example. Miss Ellen Maude McQuodale, Harriston, Ont., says: "I feel it my duty to add my voice to the many now recommending Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. For years I was a sufferer with backaches, rheumatism and nervousness. I was so bad at times that I was confined to my bed. I felt sleepy and heavy after my meals, and had flashes of light before my eyes, and a difficulty in collecting my thoughts. After using several remedies without benefit I began using Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and used ten or twelve boxes in all. They gave me the best health I have enjoyed for years, and I have not since had the least return of the trouble."

You can get these Pills from any dealer in medicine or by mail at 50 cents, a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

How American Bird Bandinj Association Studies Migration

To extend scientific knowledge of bird habits by means of records made by students and accurate observers, the American Bird Banding Association has been organized with head-quarters at the American Museum of Natural History. During the last year more than eight hundred wild birds have been banded with an aluminum ring that is adjusted loosely so as to cause no injury or inconvenience to the birds.

On the ring appears the words: Notify the American Museum, New York, and a card in the filed records of the museum gives the species of the bird, the date, the place and circumstance of banding. It is hoped by this system to learn the distance birds travel by migration, their definite routes, and information regarding their winter quarters. A long period of time is required to obtain results of value.

Green McCurtain, once chief of the Choctaws, had a very high opinion of the business astuteness of white men. No Indian can get the better of a pale face, Chief McCurtain said to a Guthrie reporter during the recent Oklahoma investigation. And when two pale-faces get bargaining together, then it is like cutting diamonds with diamonds. Two Oklahoma pale-faces once hunted in my camp. They spent the evening with me and over the fire and the firewater they began to barter and traffic and to make deals and dickers. Finally Bill said:

Sam, let's trade horses—my bay for your roan.

It's a go, Sam argued. The trade's a go. Shake on it, partner.

They shook hands. Then Bill said with a loud laugh:

Sam, I've bested yo this time. My hoss is dead. Died yesterday.

So's mine dead, said Sam. Died this morning. And what's more I've took his shoes off.

Parson—Do you know where little boys go to when they smoke?

Boy—Yes; up the alley.

Concrete is the cheapest building material

WHETHER for a silo, a milk-house, or a million bushel grain elevator, concrete is the most economical building material in use today.

Concrete never requires repairs, and the saving in repair-expense alone makes the greater economy of using concrete more apparent every day.

The cost of other building materials is constantly increasing.

The cost of concrete is being reduced.

Canada Cement

which Canadian farmers use, with their own sand, stone and gravel to make concrete, is the only ingredient you have to buy.

We have, by reason of our large output and scientific methods, been able to bring the price of "Canada" Cement so low that it is within the reach of everyone.

An increase in demand results in a greater economy of production, and when conditions have warranted it, we have, from time to time, shared this saving with the consumer by reducing the price of Canada Cement. This demand will continue to increase—as fast as farmers learn of concrete's superiority over other materials.

When you buy cement, see that you get "Canada" Cement; by so doing you will assure the complete success of all your concrete work.

Send a post card for our book "What the Farmer Can do With Concrete." It is free.

There is a Canada Cement dealer in your neighborhood.

If this label is not on every bag it is not Canada Cement.

More Treasures Leave England

One of the best preserved masterpieces of Elizabethan interior decoration in England is doomed to be dismantled in order to adorn the mansion of some American magnate. A West End firm has acquired, lock, stock and barrel, the Elizabethan building, with its Queen Anne additions, known as Rotherwas, the seat of the Bodenham family, situated about two and a half miles from Hereford. The mansion had descended in unbroken line from George Bodenham, who lived in the reign of Henry 1, to Count Lubienski Bodenham, who died last year. The superb paneling — Elizabethan, Jacobean and Queen Anne—of thirteen of the apartments is now to be taken to New York. Rotherwas is mentioned in Domesday Book.

All the Difference

The sort of sentiment which the French system of marriages de convenience, or in plain English, of marriage for money produces is well illustrated by a story which a French paper tells.

Marie, a young lady, announces to her parents that she has accepted the hand of Monsieur X.

Child, you are crazy! exclaims Marie's mother.

But why mama?

Young X will have no money for many years, because it all belongs to his grandfather and after that comes his father, and you will be old before you get the property.

But mama—

No buts about it—you are a bad and undutiful child!

But, mama, it is the grandfather whom I've accepted!

In the Spring the Blood is Thin

The body of man can be influenced in health or disease only through the medium of two channels—the blood and the nerves.

When the blood is thin and watery, as it usually is in the spring, the nerves are starved and depleted, and every organ in the human body is less capable of performing its natural functions.

The action of the heart weakens, breathing is weaker, the gastric juices of the stomach do not flow regularly, the liver, kidneys and bowels are less active, and in fact the whole body falls an easy victim to disease.

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food goes directly to the formation of new, rich blood, and on this account is a restorative of exceptional value. You can scarcely conceive of a treatment better suited as a spring tonic to enrich the watery blood and put new vim, vigor and energy into every part of the human body.

There is no trouble from headaches, neuralgia, sleeplessness, irritability, nervousness and despondency when the nerves are properly nourished, with an abundance of pure, rich blood. The use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food is the most certain means of getting the blood into perfect condition.

Sermon by C. CHARLES T. RUSSELL Pastor Brooklyn Tabernacle.

MOST PRECIOUS TEXT IN BIBLE

How Differently It Reads From What We Once Supposed.

Pasadena, Cal., —Pasadena is favored. Pastor Russell was to have spoken to-day in Los Angeles, but the best auditoriums were unavailable. Instead, he spoke this forenoon at Santa Ana, this afternoon and evening here, giving Friday and Saturday to San Diego and Los Angeles. Pastor Russell addressed a thoroughly representative audience. His afternoon topic was "Beyond the Grave." His evening topic we report. His text was, "God so loved the world that He gave His Only Begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in Him should not perish, but have everlasting life."—John 3:16.

Forcefully the Pastor pointed out that once Christian people, even Bible students, misunderstood this text and read into it a conflicting thought, dishonoring to God—read it as though it said that God so loved the world as to keep them from perishing, in order that the few, the saintly Elect, might attain to glory and look over the battlements of Heaven and see all the remainder—Jews, heathen and the masses of Christendom—writhing in torment to all eternity—unable to perish—forced to live, in order that they might, by their sufferings, entertain the more fortunate, who were guaranteed bliss to the full.

What right did we ever have, said the Pastor, to thus put into the mouth of our Saviour, as our creeds have done, words which He never uttered—words which are very untrue—indeed, a blasphemy against our Maker!

We are not faulting our forefathers. Had we been in their place, doubtless we would have been as confused as were they, and we might have indulged in heretic burning, etc. And had they lived in our wonderful day of great light, knowledge, privilege, opportunity, education, Bibles, etc., doubtless they would have had as noble ideas as ourselves respecting the proprieties of Christian conduct and Divine conduct and Love and Justice. The Bible tells us that Satan and his fallen angels are responsible for those terrible "doctrines of demons" which have given thinking people such horrible nightmares, and driven so many of them away from God and the Bible into unbelief, agnosticism, and even atheism.

Let us rejoice in the light of the better Day which has dawned. Let us become Bible students in the highest sense of the term. Never before has there been such an opportunity for knowing the real teaching of God's Book—what it does contain and what it does not contain. We have the Bible, concordances and helps, and we have the general education which permits us to study them. Our forefathers labored against lack of education, time, lack of Bibles, and lack of good artificial light.

When we come to think of it, the word perish contains not the remotest suggestion of fire or torture. In our ignorance we read all that into the text and into other texts of similar import; for instance, the statement that God is not willing that any should perish, but would that all should come unto Him and live; and the statement of St. Peter that the wilfully ignorant shall perish like brute beasts, made to be taken and destroyed; and the statement through the Psalmist, "All the wicked will God destroy." How lurid these simple words become before our inflamed and perverted imaginations! How some of us rang the changes on these Bible terms in a vain attempt to drive men toward God through fear, when God declares that He does not want such to come and has no pleasure whatever in their worship or service.

Did not Jesus tell us that the Father seeketh such to worship Him as worship Him in spirit and in truth? (John 4:23.) And our perversions of the Divine Word and Plan only helped men away from God to such misunderstanding of Him that they could not worship Him in spirit and in truth, and, at most, could worship only in form and ceremony.

The Pastor told of an experience he had in India. Some of the higher caste Hindoos, wholly unapproachable by the missionaries, heard that he was preaching a more reasonable message. They came, entreating him for further meetings, declaring their respect for the intelligence of Christians, but that they could not believe the doctrines usually preached. They could not believe in a God so unjust, so unmerciful, so wicked that He would torment them and their forefathers through all eternity because they did not believe on Jesus, when they had not so much as heard of Him. They said that their gods were not so unjust; for they forbade men to torture even dumb brutes. They preferred to hold on to the reasonable gods of their fathers rather than to believe in the unjust one preached by the missionaries.

Can we blame them? asked the Pastor. On the contrary, he admitted that in the past himself and other Christians had seriously misinterpreted the Bible. He urged his hearers to study the Bible itself and to ignore the unreasonable teachings which are driving men away from the Bible and the God which it presents.

Pastor Russell found that the heathen do not really worship the idols, but through the idols seek to worship an unseen deity. At first he wondered that they could bow before such hideous, awkward, vicious-looking images. Then the thought came to him, that these poor heathen had formulated their gods of clay, stone, bronze, etc., but that we Christians had formulated ours differently—instead of using material substances we merely constructed ideals and described them, and that from this viewpoint, the creedal pictures of the God of Love are farther astray than the images of stone, wood, etc.

Look critically at our text. Exercise the gray matter of your brains. What does it really say? It corroborates the account in Genesis 2, as explained by St. Paul in Romans 5:12-18. By one man's disobedience sin entered into the world and death as the result of sin, and death passed upon all men, because all men are sinners—by heredity. This death penalty has been carrying down our race to the tomb for six thousand years. The present death rate is about ninety thousand per day. The declaration of the Bible is that these all would have perished—would have had no more future existence than a brute—had it not been for God's compassionate mercy, "The great Love with which He loved us" while we were yet sinners. — Ephesians 2:4, 5.

Our text comes in here, and assures us that this salvation of mankind from perishing comes only through God's Love and Mercy, operating through our Lord Jesus Christ. We ask, What did our Lord Jesus do for the race? The Bible promptly answers, "Christ died for our sins according to the Scriptures"; "Jesus Christ by the grace of God tasted death for every man"; "He poured out His soul unto death"; He made "His soul an offering for sin."—1 Corinthians 15:3; Hebrews 2:9; Isaiah 53:10, 12.

Let us note carefully that as perishing does not mean eternal torture, so the Redemption price which Jesus gave is not eternal torture or purgatorial suffering, but—death. "Christ died for the ungodly." Other Scriptures tell us that the death of Jesus was a Ransom-price, or price corresponding to the penalty that was upon Father Adam and inherited by his race. The Bible thus explains that God, by providing an equivalent price—for the sin-penalty against Adam can be just in releasing us from the death penalty.

The simple proposition of the Bible is that as Adam and all of his race legally perished, so they have all been legally redeemed from that perished condition—the death of Jesus being the Satisfaction price. It is because of this redemption that the Bible assures us that there is to be "a resurrection of the dead, both of the just and the unjust," because all were redeemed—redeemed from the perished condition.

Hence the Bible lays great stress upon the resurrection of the dead, and, further, it assures us that the resurrection of mankind must wait until the completion of the Church. Then the Second Coming of Christ will be in order, that He may exalt His Church with Himself as the reigning Power, the Spiritual Seed of Abraham, which God for four thousand years has promised shall be exalted to glory for the very purpose of blessing all the families of the earth—the non-elect.

Surely no Bible student worthy of the name has overlooked the fact that the Bible everywhere speaks of the the dead as asleep—nowhere does it tell about their being in Heavenly glory or purgatorial suffering, or in a hell of torment. Neglect of the Word of God has confused our poor, imperfect judgments. We lost our way in the fogs of the Dark Ages, conjured up by Satan in support of his lie, "Ye shall not surely die," and in contradiction of the Lord's Word, "The soul that sinneth it shall die."—Ezekiel 18:4, 20.

Now we remember that Jesus plainly said, "No man hath ascended up to Heaven." Now we remember that neither Lazarus nor any awakened from death had any tales to tell respecting the things seen or heard when dead. Now we remember the particular declaration of God's Word, "The dead know not anything." Now we remember that the Scriptures teach that the dead are asleep—our own unconsciousness every night being an illustration to us, if we had only heeded the Word of God instead of the word of men. Now we see that the death state is called a sleep, because of God's intention to have a great awakening, or resurrection of the dead. It will come in the morning of the New Dispensation.

The One who died for man's sins is to be the great Redeemer who will awaken all the sleeping ones. Did He not illustrate this at His First Advent and thus show forth the glories of His coming Kingdom? Did He not declare that Jairus' daughter was asleep, and awaken her? And did He not say, "Lazarus sleepeth," and awaken him? He did not resurrect any of these. They were merely awakened—and before the time for general the awakening. Hence they fell asleep again. A great awakening Day, however, is near at hand, the Pastor declared.

He carried his hearers back to the remote past. He reminded them of the record respecting Abraham, that he died with his fathers. He asked who the fathers were and where they slept, and replied that they were heathen. He asked whether they could sleep in Heaven, or whether they could sleep in so warm a place as Purgatory is supposed to be, or in the still more unreasonable hell. He took it for granted, apparently, that his hearers agreed with him that sleep under such conditions would be impossible, and that the only conclusion must be that they slept in death.

The Pastor reminded them that similar expressions were used in respect to the good and bad kings and judges and prophets. They were gathered to their fathers, they slept with their fathers. Similarly, when St. Stephen was stoned to death, we read that "he fell on sleep." He cited St. Paul as teaching that all the Church will sleep, except those who are alive at the time of the Second Coming of Jesus: "We shall not all sleep, but we shall all be changed." He quoted Jesus' words, "All that are in the graves shall hear His (Jesus') voice and shall come forth"—the faithful, the saintly, to a resurrection of life—perfection, honor; the remainder of mankind unto a resurrection of trial, testing.—1 Corinthians 15:51.

Without the death of Jesus, said the Pastor, all of the race would be perished, and only in the resurrection have we any ground whatever for believing in a salvation from death. Only because Christ died is there an opportunity for the Church during his Gospel Age to respond to a "high calling" to the Divine nature. Likewise only through the merit of Christ's death will the world of mankind be saved from perishing and have an opportunity during Messiah's Kingdom to be recovered from sin and death conditions, from ignorance, superstition, etc.—from the tomb.

Gradually they will be raised up, up, up, in the image and likeness of God in the flesh, ultimately to enjoy Him forever in a world-wide Paradise, from which will be cut off in the Second Death all wilful evil-doers, all who prefer sin to righteousness, when the Truth shall be made clear to them and when the opportunity will be fully within their grasp. Incidentally, the Pastor mentioned a gross mistranslation of the inspired Word in John 5:29, namely, "resurrection of damnation." The Greek word here, he said, is krisis, and has not in it the slightest suggestion of fire or torture or suffering. The Revised Version renders this verse properly—"a resurrection of judgment."

I am not forgetting, said the speaker, that our text proffers Divine blessings only to believers. Neither am I forgetting that only a few are believers in the Scriptural sense now. Statistics mention four hundred millions of Christians; but, as we all know, this includes practically everybody in Europe and America, with a few in Asia and Africa. It includes many in prisons and insane asylums, penitentiaries, etc. And that leaves three times as many whom we call heathen, who have no knowledge of Christ whatever—twelve hundred millions. Surely none of these are believers in the sense defined by Jesus and the Apostles.

Jesus implies that if any one really believes His Message, his faith will transform his whole life— he would see so great a blessing promised to the faithful follower of Jesus that he would count all other aims and ambitions as loss and dross—and run with patience the race set before him. Only these are believers, and they are comparatively few. They are a fine company. They will get the prize, the "pearl of great price," the Kingdom joint-heirship with the Redeemer in His glory, honor and immortality.

But are no others to be blessed? If not, why did Jesus taste death for every man? Does not that expression imply that every man will have some opportunity of profiting by Jesus' death? It surely does! Those who now hear, appreciate, believe, in the Bible sense, alone will have an opportunity for sharing the First Resurrection of the blessed and holy. But the remainder, we are assured, will all come forth from the tomb—to be granted an opportunity then for hearing and believing and gaining an inferior blessing. The blessing now is a spiritual one only; but the blessing to be offered under Messiah's Kingdom will be an earthly one—Restitution, human perfection in an earthly Paradise everlasting.

The Bible tells all this, says Pastor Russell. It declares that the god of this world, Satan, is now blinding the minds of all except believers. It equally tells that in God's due time, during Messiah's reign, all the blind eyes will be opened, and all the deaf ears unstopped. (Isaiah 35:5.) Then the whole world will be granted an opportunity of enlightenment respecting the God of Love, and His wise, just and loving terms of reconciliation, and will be blessed by the great Mediator of the New Covenant. Note how this is explained by the Apostle: God wills to have all men come to a knowledge of the Truth, that they may be saved. To this end He has provided that Jesus shall be the Mediator between Himself and mankind. In harmony with the Father's Plan, Jesus is now selecting the Church class, to be a Royal Priesthood, a Bride class, to share with Him in His Kingdom glory and Mediatorial work for the world. It was to this end that He gave Himself a Ransom for all—to be testified in due time.—1 Timothy 2:4-6.

A "NOBLE CLOWN."

His Motive For Humbling Himself Before the Footlights.

Visitors to Paris who have recently wandered by chance into one of the cafe concerts, which are mostly frequented by that class who neither toil nor spin, must have been amazed and saddened by a very unusual music hall turn. Every night, between the "sentimental tenor" and the "chanteuse legere," a mournful looking young man appears. He is greeted with derisive yells.

He sings, or tries to sing, a sentimental ballad and a comic song. He also imitates animals, the noises of tools and the whistling of locomotives.

The effect is so deplorable that the audience recently insisted on the "noble clown" apologizing for his lack of skill. He humbly advanced to the footlights and bowed to right, left and before him. Then, in a voice choked with sobs, he began to express his regret. With pathetic resignation he went down on his knees, offered profuse apologies for his lack of skill and promised to do his best to please them in the future.

Few who have seen this lamentable exhibition know its origin and excuse. This abject buffoonery is inspired by one of the noblest motives—filial love. This descendant of one of the oldest and noblest families in Venice was left alone, when very young, with his infirm and penniless mother. For many years they had lived on the charity of friends, but the old woman is now in such health that admission into an almshouse would be the only means of saving her life. But this cannot be obtained without payment of a certain sum, and her son is now employing the only means of procuring it open to him.—Paris Cor. Brooklyn Eagle.

CLEARS THE DECKS.

Documents That Are Kept Moving Require No Pigeonholes.

Pigeonholes have been entirely removed from most of the desks in the naval bureau of ordnance at Washington, it being Admiral Twining's policy to keep papers moving, and moving papers do not require pigeonholes. Most papers require immediate attention, and they get it. If for any reason action must be deferred to a later date the letter concerned is generally filed and then brought out on a predetermined date by means of the regular "follow up" system. In order that the chief of the bureau may be familiar with the circumstances attending all delays in action on incoming letters there is submitted to him from each desk on Monday morning of each week a list of unfinished correspondence, on which is written the explanation of any delays. Letters that may have been lost or misplaced would of necessity not appear on these reports of unfinished correspondence. Such losses are detected by a card system kept in the file room.

Each letter received in the bureau has a card assigned to it. The cards give a complete history of all letters received and of the action taken on them. When the action has been completed the cards are destroyed. If, however, on Monday morning any cards show that no action has been taken such cards are brought to the attention of the chief of bureau. By them he is enabled to detect any losses of papers or failure for any reason to act on them.

The number of letters handled by the bureau is enormous, and the above system prevents delay.—Chicago News.

A Valuable Bug at Large.

Not long ago a Washington scientist, an enthusiastic student of natural history, captured a fine specimen of beetle. On reaching home he in a moment of haste pinned the beetle to a library table with his diamond scarfpin. When he returned to the library from his dinner he found his captive had got loose and was flying about with the diamond pin glistening from its back. Man and bug made a rush for the window at the same instant. The beetle got there first and triumphantly sailed away, barely eluding the scientist's outstretched hand. Neither bug nor pin has since been seen.—Exchange

Greece and a Fair Haired King.

King Constantine of Greece being decidedly fair haired fulfills the terms of another mediaeval prophecy besides that in which his name figures. If you want to get a cubist
Or a futurist effect,
Take the shade of an idea
Which is quite completely wrecked,
Put a pencil in the fingers
Of an active two-year-old
And just tell him to draw pictures.
He will do as he is told.

Then go get a rabid rooster
That's been scratching in the dirt,
Make him walk across the picture
With an extra jaunty flirt.
Keep him thusly promenading
Till he's spattered o'er the page
Lines and jabs about the baby's,
For this style is all the rage.

Now throw ink spots on the picture,
And if still remains a trace
Of a line which could have meaning
Try that meaning to erase
With a currycomb or toothpick;
Then when you have done it all
To the likeness of a brainstorm
Call it "Maidens at a Ball."

The Difference.

A Frenchman who was visiting this country was kidnaped last summer by some of his admirers in Maryland and sentenced to go through with an all day picnic in the woods, where there were plenty of cold food and a lot of chiggers. The food that was handed to him crucified his palate. The ham was tar flavored, the pastry was soggy, and the cake was moist and heavy, and in as polite a manner as he could he lifted up his voice to heaven and wept that such things should be.

"Why, monsieur," one of the young women answered his lamentation, "I thought we Americans had improved immensely in our cuisine. Look at our fashionable restaurants. Even their menus are printed in French."

"Yes," retorted the witty Frenchman, "but they are still cooked in American."—Popular Magazine.

And over them proceed to drop odd lots of broken brick.
I utilize the building lime which folks around discard,
And soon I'll have a garden prime fixed up in my back yard.

And had the bridegroom say "obey."
Of course this made the thoughtless laugh
And scatter round their verbal chaff.
Yet is it true, whate'er they say,
The fact remains they all obey.
—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Hence the Anvil Chorus.

"What's the objection to the man you sent to congress?"

"Nothin' in particular," replied Farmer Corntossel; "jes' the fact that he got elected to a steady job has made a whole lot o' people jealous."—Washington Star.

His Goal.

A youth who'd been going the race
Dropped finally out of the race.
He fell quite a bit,
And I know where he hit,
Enough, of course, I can't mention the place.

Big Birthday Cake For Little Bible Students.

AN UNUSUAL CELEBRATION.

Children Helpers of the British Bible Society Meet the Lord Mayor at Anniversary Party—Things of Interest to Small People.

An unusual birthday party, attended by about 2,000 children, was held at Guildhall, London, with the lord mayor and aldermen as guests. The celebration was in honor of the one hundred and ninth anniversary of the birth of the British and Foreign Bible societies. The invitations were confined chiefly to the London children's helpers of the society, and each of them carried away a small cardboard box containing a piece of the mammoth cake provided for the occasion. The cake was a beautiful sight and weighed 109 pounds—one pound for each year of the society's existence. The first celebration took place in 1901, and the cake made for the children then weighed ninety-seven pounds, but the passing of years has added twelve pounds to the monument of sweetness.

The cake was cut by a granddaughter of the lord mayor and then packed in boxes for distribution to the children and others fortunate enough to get a piece.

Things That Interest.

Kissing the hands of great men was an old Grecian custom, though originally of eastern origin.

The smallest flower known to the botanist is said to be that of the yeast plant. It is microscopic in size.

So strong is the light emitted by Jamaica fireflies that the presence of six will enable a person to read.

Daffodils, which are one of the harbingers of spring, are so called from the old English "affodyle"—that which cometh early.

Elephants can climb to a great height. Their tracks have been seen upon the very summit of mountains 7,000 feet high.

The mummy of an Egyptian princess who lived 2000 B. C. shows around the waist a contrivance similar to the modern corset.

Among the Paniyans, a laboring class in Malabar, when a man wishes to marry a girl he must carry a bundle of firewood to her house daily for six months.

How Do You Like Your Neighbors?

The company must be seated in a ring, with one person left standing in the center. This person may ask any one he chooses, "How do you like your neighbors." Only one of two answers is allowed, "Very much" or "Not at all."

If the person questioned answers "Not at all" he is asked whom he would prefer, when he must name two other members of the circle. The old neighbors and the new must then change places, and while they are out of their seats the player in the center must try to secure one of them.

The person who loses his seat must then take his place in the center. Should the person questioned answer "Very much" every one of the players must change seats, so it is not very difficult in this case for the questioner to find a seat.

The Lamb's Protectors.

The shaggy wolf dog was set to watch a lamb. Another dog, also near a wolf in shape and color, saw him and fell upon him at once. "Wolf, wolf, what are you doing with this lamb?" cried he. "Wolf yourself! Be off or you'll find out to your sorrow," was the answer. The one tried to carry off the lamb, the other to keep it by force, and between the two it was torn to pieces.

Sunlight and Dew.

One night I went right out to play
When I had had my tea,
And on the grass bright teardrops lay
As far as I could see.

"The grass is crying, mother dear.
What can the matter be?"
I cried and stooped to catch a tear
From off a bramble tree.

My mother could not tell me why
She only shook her head.
I wondered that the grass should cry
Till I was tucked in bed.

Next morning I ran out with fears;
But, to my great surprise,
I found the sun had dried the tears
When he began to rise!

And then I knew the reason why—
It was as plain as day—
The grasses all begin to cry
When sunlight goes away!

CRESTON BAKERY

Something new in the line of carnivals in the Northwest will be offered by the Spokane fair this fallwhen Rice and Dorles Water circus sets up its props on Midway hill. The main feature of the midway attraction will be a tank 50 feet in diameter the same as the famous one used at the New York hippodrome into which 100 men and women and some 10 animals disappear at one time not to be seen by the audiences again for some minutes when they return to the theatre by the regular entrances. Horses valued at $10,000 each do high diving acts into the tank while the regular performes consist of some of the most expert divers and swimmers in the country.

CARD OF THANKS.

Mr. and Mrs. Hendren and family wish to thank the kind friends for their sympathy in their sad bereavement at the loss of their beloved daughter and sister.

Owing to the fact that we went to press early, last week, our account of the funeral of Wino Hendron was of necessity somewhat incomplete. The service was held in the Methodist church at 2 o'clock and was one of the largest that has taken place in Creston for some time, nearly all available rigs being pressed into service. The casket was literally covered with floral tributes amongst which were the following: Crescent, sent by D. O. K. K. Lodge, Spokane, Wash.; Crosses sent by K. P. Lodge, Creston, and Mr. and Mrs. S. A. Speers; Wreaths were sent by each of the following: Methodist Ladies Aid, Mrs J. Stocks, Mrs. Fairhead, Mr. and Mrs. Parfull, Mr. and Mrs. Carpenter, Mrs. Maxwell, Mr. and Mrs. Gilpin and Family, Mr. and Mrs. G. Johnson, Mrs. Wells, Mrs. M. Young; Bouquets were sent by each of the following: Mr. and Mrs. Edmondson and Laura, Mr. and Mrs. Heald, Mrs. Bains, Mr. and Mrs. Mead, Mr. and Mrs. Mallandaine.

5. The removal, erasure or obliteration of original grade marks or brands on closed packages containing imported fruit and re-marking or branding of said closed packages to conform with the provisions of the Inspection and Sale Act as required by these regulations, shall be done at the time when the said packages are being taken from the railway car, steamship or other conveyance in which they have been brought into Canada.

6. The marks or brands specified in section 4 of these Regulations shall be placed on the end of the packages."

The Association has just received a letter from Mr. J. A. Ruddick, Dairy and Cold Storage Commissioner, who is charged with the enforcement of the Fruit Marks Act, saying that a circular is in the hands of the printers for distribution. This circular makes public the Provisions of the law, which must now be obeyed by the importer under the penalties of the Act.

It should be a matter of congratulation to British Columbia fruit growers that this unfairness has been removed. We are confident that the change will assist materially in securing for our fruit a market at a fair price. The success of the B. C. Fruit Grower's Association in this matter will be of benefit to all the fruit growers of Canada and should greatly encourage us to improve the codditions of the industry in other ways.
