Public Meeting Nov. 12th to Discuss Organizing Agricultural Association

The executive of the Fall Fair is getting affairs wound up as quickly as possible and will hold a public meeting at the Auditorium on Wednesday evening Nov. 12 at 8 p.m.

The object of this meeting will be first to pay al prize money and consideration of any complaints which may have arisen out of the last show. Then there is the question of forming an Agricultural Association. This will require careful thought and it is to be hoped the brain of the district will be present in strons force to consider the advisability of taking this step also ways and means. It will therefore be as well for all the knowing ones to overhaul their stock of knowledge on this subject and let it be aired on the evening of Nov. 12.

DUCK CREEK NEWS

Miss Emma Johnson left on Sunday's eastbound train for Cranbrook, where she will stay until Christmas.

O. J. Wigen, W. J. Cooper, Mr. Grady, and Mrs M. Hagen were Creston callers Saturday last.

P. Andestad left on Sunday for Canyon City where he will work awhile.

Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Pease were host and hostess at a most enjoyable Guy Fawkes party. About 30 people were present and a large bonfire surmounted by a large Guy Fawkes was burnt early in the evening, about 9:30 p.m. Dancing started and with a few breaks for songs and recitations was carried on until 7:15 a.m. Thursday morning. Owing to the inclemency of the weather everyone decided it was no good going home so we made a night of it quite a number of Duck Creekites were present.

Paul Ofner returned from Burmis Tuesday.

The Duck Creek Social Club will hold a house warming party in the new school house on Saturday, November, 8 at 8:30. Everybody invited to attend and warm her up in good style. Ladies are asked to furnish either a cake or a few sandwiches.

It is rumored that the Social Club will give a Christmas tree on Boxing Day, Friday December 26. Come to the dance on Saturday and here the arrangements.

NOTICE OF MEETING

The special meeting for the young under the auspices of the W. C. T. U. will be held in the Methodist Church on Thursday Nov. 13 from 3 to 5.

All the High school girls are specially invited.

Miss Lamont and Mrs. Carpenter will address the meeting.

The Annual Meeting of the Creston Liberal Association will be held in Speers Hall, November. 15. Election of officers for the coming year and other matters of importance will be dealt with.

Dont forget the public meeting on Wednesday.

The Grand Ball given by the K. P. last week was a decided success nearly fifty couples enjoyed the efforts of the Knights and danced till the early hours. Everybody seemed to think that the K. P. dances were too far apart.

These are busy days for the wood and coal men, but then they are all pretty big fellows and can stand a little hard work for a change.

C. J. Little, of the firm of Little & Atchison, Cranbrook, was transacting business in our burg yesterday and today. He finds a ready sale for the Big Red Apples we grow.

—The C. C. S. of Cranbrook is selling Iron Beds with mattress and spring for $11.

MINISTER SCORES POOR APPLE SHOW

Vernon, B. C. Oct. 23— Hon. Price Ellison in a speech here yesterday at the opening of the annual apple show voiced bitter dissapointment at the small size of the show and the general lack of interest which seemed to be manifested in the event. He declared that the exhibit was not representative and that scores of car loads of better apples were on the trees today in numerous orchards than were brought to the show. The minister said that he hoped that it would be bigger and better next year, as the display in this, the Okanagan district, should be the best in British Columbia. The president, Mr. W. Scott Allen, also backed up the minister in this complaint by saying that the exhibits were not what they should be, but he thought that it was due to the fact that the growers were too busy shipping their produce to the eager markets

In short, the growers displayed a general lack of interest, although the prizes offered were large. The show was opened formally Lieutenant-Governor Paterson, who said that he thought the future of this district as an apple-growing centre was assured. He drew a remarkable comparison to the country now and twenty years ago, when he lived here. He highly praised the co-operative selling plan which was inaugurated this year.

The lieutenant-governor and his wife were guests of the Hon. Price Ellison. He inspected the public schools in the morning, after which he declared a half-holiday for the afternoon. —From the Vancouver World.

TO RUN NURSERY ON BRIGGS RANCH

With the object of carrying on nursery and mixed farming operations on a large scale at Harrup, W. G. Kennedy has rented D. W. Briggs ranch at that place and is moving his nursery stock from Willow Point.

The ranch is of 50 acres and is equipped with piggeries and barns for 20 cattle. Mr. Kennedy will go east shortly to purchase a carload of cattle and is making arrangements to increase his stock of pigs. He is raising the Deerrock Jersey breed and declares from his experience in Kootenay, that pigs are well named "the mortgage lifters."

He has planted 50,000 seedling stock and 5,000 rose bushes, and has made arrangements, for the erection of greenhouses.

Rubber shoes and gum boots at A. Mirabelli.

EVERY RANCHER SHOULD HAVE COW

Although the disposal in British Columbia of cattle brought in by the provincial government from Ontario may result in some cases in building up some portions of the province as dairying centres the chief object of the government in giving ranchers an opportunity to purchase thoroughbred cows at reasonable prices is to induce the rancher who is giving his attention almost entirely to fruit or some other one branch of agriculture, to keep sufficient cattle to supply milk and butter for himself and his family explained H. Rive of the dairying branch of the provincial department of agriculture, who was at the Hume last night with Dr. W. W. Alton and T. A. F. Wiancko two other officials of the department.

They are here in connection with the sale of thoroughbreds cows which is to take place in Nelson on November 11 when 40 animal will be offered at auction by Charles A. Waterman, who has been appointed to conduct the sale. On November 13 a sale of 35 cattle will be conducted by the government at Cranbrook

It is believed, continuede Mr. Rive that if every rancher in the province produced his own mik, cream and butter the imports of dairy produce to British Columbia would immediately show a very heavy decreas and it is chiefly with this idea in view that the government since August last has brought in and sold about 500 cattle in various parts of the province

Cattle to be sold here an at Cranbrook are chiefly Ayrshires and all have been tested by officials of the Domion livestock branch and given clean bills of health. Having been found clear of tuberculosis and other diseases. It is not likely thai any further shipments will be brought into the interior this year on account of the near approach of winter.

In some places Mr. Rive has been asked by ranchers why the government does not bring in bulls He explained last night that in the first place there was a sufficient number of good bulls in British Columbia to meet present requirements and in the second place the live stock branch had already made provision to supply ranchers with such animals, allowing three years for payment to be made. It had been arranged said Mr. Rive, that ranchers who wished to buy a thoroughbred bull could make application to the government through any farmer's institute, they would then be supplied with a bull. One third of the price had to be paid on receipt of the animal, one third at the beginning of the second year and the balance at the beginning of the third year, no interest charged. The government also paid transportation to the ranch of the purchaser. The sale in Nelson on Tuesday will take place at the old Tierney building, near the gas works. The terms of the sale will be cash. Dr. Alton has alreadp received a number of enquiries from ranchers who desire to buy cows and it is expected that the shipment of 40 animals will be snapped up.

We extend hearty congratulations to R. M. Reid, who today is celebrating his birthday with a party to some of the old timers. Bob has been here since there was a here and through the long and tortuous path of railroad service has made a large number of friends from all the walks of life, and from every political complexion. As a representative of the greatest transportation corporation on the face of this earth we are all proud of R. M. Reid, as a fellow citizen and a good friend we all unite in wishing him the many happy recurrences of the day he celebrates as his birthday.

MISSION DAVE SENT UP FOR TRIAL

Saturday at the Police Court occurred the preliminary hearing of Mission Dave, the Indian arrested last week on the charge of cattle stealing. Attorney Wilson, of Cranbrook, appeared for E. Lupton the owner of the critter and Indian Agent Eckeman represented the Indian Department.

Joseph Goodman, son of the trinal chief, acted as interpreter and presented the case to the Indian in a thoroughly creditatable manner.

Edward Lupton was the first witness called and identified the beast as his beyond question. Geo. Johnson, manager for P. Burns, identified the hide as the one he had bought from accused.

Mr. Cherrington was called to verify the brand as Lupton's which he did unhesitatingly and convincingly. J. Hobden was called as the special constable who through the medium of a search warrant located the beast and seized the hide.

Justices Lowenberg and Mallendaine sat on the case and after the facts were presented, decided that there was sufficient evidence to connect the man with the theft and he was committed to Nelson to await trial, and on Sunday was taken there by Constable Forrester.

C. C. S., SIGNATIES CRANBROOK CO-OPERATIVE STORES.

Messrs, Bevan and Henderson leave to-morrow for a short hunting trip. They are going to get some deer.

There will be a masquerade ball at Canyon City on Friday the 14th.

Kenney Campbell was a visitor in town for a couple of days this week.

A. McL Fletcher paid us a short visit this week, his visits are getting fewer and soon must cease, needless to say we will miss his genial presence, but will look forward to his return next year.

SEVERAL CAMPS NEAR CRESTON THIS WINTER

A few weeks ago we began to hear rumors of the coming of the lumber men to our town and throughout the days we have watched the little events that one by one have come to pass in the preliminary processes, and now in the last few days we have noticed the advent of the lumber-jack, the big, broad-shouldered, large-hearted man, with top boots and blue jeans. The fellow that likes to smile and joke, the fellow that carries his bed right along with him, that can tell a good story and eat a square meal, who knows a thousand and one things about all of the great out-of-doors. The fellow that often faces danger or accident in the woods alone and far from the camp, the fellow who stays by his partner through thick and thin, through life and death.

These are the fellows who precede the great development of our country and and as they come to town for a few hours let us give them the right kind of a hearty, friendly, human brotherly welcome, they are the precursors of advancement, the van guard of rich acres and smiling orchards.

SCENE SHOWS WRECKAGE OF ZEPPELIN AIRSHIP

The above photograph shows scene following the explosion and destruction of Germany's new navy dirgible. Wittnesses of the tragedy say that at least a dozen of those on the dirgable fell off before the wreckage reached the earth their shrieks of pain or horror being heard above the roar of the motors which were still running.

Rescurers hastened to the scene but the flaming ruins were so hot that nobody dared to approach to remove the two or three men still alive, whose moaning could be heard. These sounds ceased before the many willing hands of Germans and army pioneers could reach them.

Only Lieut. Baron Von Bloni, who had gone up as a guest of his friend, Lieut Freyer, the commander of the dirgible, was conscious when he was extricated. He was in agony from burns on his head, face, legs and hands and shrieked repeatedly, while being carried away in an ambulance, "For Heaven's sake, kill me! kill me! After suffering terrible agony he passed away in the hospital.

MAY TAKE IT TO SUPREME COURT

A desire to have the validity of the passage of Idaho's drainage law tested out in the supreme court is being expressed by those interested in the several big drainage projects of the state and it is more than probable that steps towards this end will be taken in the near future. As a matter of fact the the drainage law of Idaho has never been declared null and void by any court. The question of validity came up in September last when the hearing in the mater of the formation of District No. 7, comprising some 40,000 acres in the Kootenay valley, was had before Judge Dunn. The attorneys representing opposition to the formation of the district brought evidence to show that the drainage bill had not legally been passed by the House of Representatives of the last legislature although the vote on the measure was unanimous in the House and carried by a large majority in the Senate.

When this evidence was introduced the attorneys for the Drainage District conceded that the law was null and void and called for no decision of the court and the matter was dropped

The representatives of big drainage districts in Canyon county and in Kootenay county seem to believe that the supreme court will hold the passage of the bill to be valid and so allow drainage work to again carried on without having to wait for the passage of a new bill or the re-passage of the old one. In case the matter is brought before the supreme court and an adverse decision is rendered it is intimated that the attorneys, representing the drainage districts wil proceed to investigate the passage of other important bills which became laws at the last session of the legislature and if and if flaws were found in the passage of the same, steps will be taken to have them also declared null and void. Such an action, it is claimed would result in the nullification of the appropriation bill and several important measures and would mean the calling of a special session of the legislature in ordr that alleged mistakes could be rectified. Many prominent people of the state are interested in drainage projects. The draining of 40,000 acres in Canyon county is now being held up as is also the drainage projects of Kootenay county in which the Washington Water Power company interested and the drainage of 40,000 acres in Bonner county. In some of the districts work had actually commenced.

Word was received recently by those interested in the draining of the Kootenay valley to tee effect that W. G. Sloan, drainage engineer in charge of Drainage Investigations of the U. S. Department of Agriculture with headquarters at Boise, had been ordered to come to the Kootenay valley district to make an investigation of the conditions here. Mr. Sloan is directly in charge of the "Pioneer District" drainage project in southern Idaho.

Local people feel that his visit here means that the government will take a hand in the drainage problems of this valley.

THE WINDOW AT THE WHITE CAT

By Mary Roberts Rinehart

I will be thirty-nine, I said, with dignity, and if I marry—if I do—it will be some girl who turns and runs the other way every time she sees me.

The oldest trick in the box, Edith scoffed. What's that thing Fred's always quoting: A woman is like a shadow; follow her, she flies; fly from her, she follows.

Upon my soul! I said indignantly. And you are a woman!

I am different, she retorted. I am only a wife and mother.

In the library Fred got up from his desk and gathered up his papers. I can't think with you two whispering there, he said. I am going to the den.

As he slammed the door into his workroom Edith picked up her skirts and scuttled after him.

How dare you run away like that? she called. You promised me—The door closed behind her.

I went over and spoke through the panels.

Follow her, she flies; fly from her, she follows. Oh, wife and mother! I called.

For heaven's sake, Edith! Fred's voice rose irritably. If you and Jack are going to talk all evening go and sit on his knee and let me alone. The way you two flirt under my nose is a scandal. Do you hear that, Jack?

Good night, Edith, I called. I have left you a kiss on the upper left hand panel of the door. And I want to ask you one more question. What if I fly from the woman and she does not follow?

Thank your lucky stars, Fred called in a muffled voice.

I had some work to do at the office and half past 8 that night found me at my desk. But my mind strayed from the papers before me. After a useless effort to concentrate I gave it up as useless, and by 10 o'clock I was on the street again, my evening wasted, the papers in the libel case of the Star against the Eagle untouched and I the victim of an uneasy apprehension that took me, almost without volition, to the neighborhood of the Fleming house, for it had occurred to me that Miss Fleming might not have left the house that day, as she had promised, might still be there liable to another intrusion by the mysterious individual who had a key to the house.

It was a relief, consequently, when I reached its corner to find no lights in the building. The girl had kept her word. Assured of that, I looked at the house curiously. It was one of the largest in the city, not wide, but running far back along the side street and a small yard with a low iron fence and a garage completed the property. The street lights left the back of the house in shadow, and as I stopped in the shelter of the garage I was positive that I heard some one working with the rear window of the empty house. A moment later the sound ceased and muffled footsteps came down the cement walk. The intruder made no attempt to open the iron gate, and against the light I saw him put a leg over the low fence, follow it up with the other and start up the street with a peculiar noiselessness of stride. He was a short, heavy shouldered fellow in a cap, and his silhouette showed a prodigious length of arm.

I followed, I don't mind saying, in some excitement. I had a vision of grabbing him from behind and leading him or pushing him under the circumstances, in triumph to the police station, and another mental picture not so pleasant of being found on the pavement by some passerby with a small punctuation mark ending my sentence of life.

Once the man just ahead stopped and lighted a cigarette, and the odor of a very fair Turkish tobacco came back to me. He glanced back over his shoulder at me and went on without quickening his pace. We met no policemen, and after perhaps five minutes walking, when the strain was growing tense, my gentleman of the rubber soled shoes swung sharply to the left and—entered the police station!

I had occasion to meet Davidson many times after, during the strange development of the Fleming case. I had the peculiar experience later of having him follow me as I trailed him that night, and I had occasion once to test the strength of his long arms when he helped to thrust me through the transom at the White Cat, but I never met him without a recurrence of the sheepish feeling with which I watched him swagger up to the night sergeant and fall into easy conversation with the man behind the desk.

Two or three round men were sitting against the wall lazily, helmets off and coats open against the warmth of the early spring night. In a back room others were playing checkers and disputing noisily. Davidson's voice came distinctly through the open windows.

The house is closed, he reported, but one of the basement windows is not shuttered, and the lock is bad. I couldn't find Shields. He'd better keep his eye on it. He stopped and fished in his pockets with a grin. This was tied to the knob of the kitchen door, he said, raising his voice for the benefit of the room and holding aloft a piece of paper. "For Shields," he explained and signed Delia.

The men gathered around him. Even the sergeant got up and leaned forward, his elbows on his desk.

Read it, he said lazily. Shields has got a wife, and her name ain't Delia.

Dear Tom, Davidson read in a mincing falsetto, we are closing up unexpected, so I won't be here tonight. I am going to Mamie Brennan's and if you want to talk to me you can get me by calling up Anderson's drug store. The clerk is a gentleman friend of mine. Mr. Carter, the butler, told me before he left he would get me a place as parlor maid, so I will have another situation soon.—Delia.

The sergeant scowled. I'm going to talk to Tom, he said, reaching out for the note. He's got a nice family and things like that are bad for the force.

I lighted the cigar which had been my excuse for loitering on the pavement and went on. It sounded involved for a novice, but if I could find Anderson's drugstore I could find Mamie Brennan. Through Mamie Brennan I would get Delia and through Delia I might find Carter and so I made the first note in my new business of man hunter.

It was late when I reached the corner of Chestnut and Union streets, Fred had said Allan Fleming had come to grief in a cab. But the corner man had gone, and the night man on the beat knew nothing of course, of any particular collision.

I went home to bed. I had made no headway, I had lost conceit with myself and a day and evening at the office, and I had gained the certainty that Margery Fleming was safe in Bellwood and the uncertain address of a servant who might know something about Mr. Fleming.

I was still awake at 1 o'clock and consulted the telephone directory. There were twelve Andersons in the city who conducted drugstores.

When I finally went to sleep I dreamed that I was driving Margery Fleming along a street in a broken taxicab and that all the buildings were pharmacies and numbered eleven twenty-two.

After such a night I slept late. Edith had gone out with Fred when I came downstairs. I have a great admiration for Edith, for her tolerance with my uncertain hours, or her cheery breakfast room and the smiling good nature of the servants she engages. I have a theory that, show me a sullen servant and I will show you a sullen mistress, although Edith herself disclaims all responsibility and lays credit for the smile with which Katie brings in my eggs and coffee to largess on my part.

On that particular morning Katie brought me a letter, and I recognized the cramped and rather uncertain writing of Miss Jane Maitland.

Dear Mr. Knox — Sister Letitia wishes me to ask you if you can dine with us tonight informally. She has changed her mind in regard to the Colored Orphans' home and would like to consult you about it. Very truly yours,

SUSAN JANE MAITLAND

It was a very commonplace note. I had had one like it after every board meeting of the orphans home, Miss Maitland being on principle an aggressive minority; also having considerable mind, changing it became almost as ponderous an operation as moving a barn.

I came across Miss Jane's letter the other day when I was gathering the material for this narrative, and I sat for a time with it in my hand thinking over again the chain of events in which it had been the first link, a series of strange happenings that began with my acceptance of the invitation, and that led through ways as dark and tricks as vain as Bret Harte's Heathen Chinee ever dreamed of to the final scene at the White Cat. With the letter I had filed away a half dozen articles, and I ranged them all on the desk in front of me—the letter, the bit of paper with eleven twenty two on it that Marjorie gave me the first time I saw her, a notebook filled with jerky characters that looked like Arabic and were newspaper shorthand, a railroad schedule, a bullet, the latter slightly flattened; a cube shaped piece of chalk, which I put back in its box with a shudder and [illegible] and a small gold buckle from a slipper, which—at which I did not shudder.

How to Prevent Fires

Realizing the importance of the small boy as a pernicious factor in the starting of fires, the central fire office of the Boy Scouts of America in this city is sending out in its weekly bulletin to the Boy Scouts a list of two dozen 'Fire Scouts' compiled by George D. Porter, director of public safety of Philadelphia. The list is part of an article written for the Boy Scouts in the September issue of their magazine, dealing with instruction of the boys in usefulness in fire emergencies.

Here are the simple precautions given to the boys by Mr. Porter.

Don't kindle fires in stoves with kerosene.

Don't go into closets looking for clothing with a lighted match.

Don't put hot ashes and coal in wooden barrels or boxes.

Don't thaw out frozen water pipes with a torch or lamp.

Don't allow waste paper, excelsior and rubbish to collect.

Don't use gasoline for cleaning in a closed room.

Don't look for gas leaks with a match or lamp.

Don't allow lace curtains near gas brackets.

Don't allow oily rags near stoves or about the premises.

Don't allow sawdust to be used in cuspidors or on the floors.

Don't throw waste paper in a fireplace.

Don't throw cigars or cigarettes away if lighted.

Don't keep matches in paper boxes or lying about carelessly.

Don't use shapping parlor matches, taboo them.

Don't forget that matches are the beginning of many conflagrations.

Don't hang your clothing near open fires or stoves.

Don't fill lamps after dark, and never when lighted.

Don't allow rubbish in hallways or on fire escapes.

Dont burn leaves and dead grass on windy days.

Don't forget to have the chimneys of your home cleaned once a year.

Don't fail to look twice at everything that looks like fire.

Don't leave everything to the landlord; inspect your own building.

Don't fail to notify the chief of the fire department of anything you may see that is dangerous and liable to cause fire, remembering that every day is fire prevention day.

Don't fail to give the representatives of the fire marshal or the firemen themselves every opportunity to make a careful examination of your property. They are trying to help you.

DIDN'T KNOW
That Tea and Coffee Cause Trouble

So common is the use of tea or coffee as a beverage many do not know that they are the cause of many obscure ails which are often attributed to other things.

The easiest way to find out for oneself is to quit the tea and coffee for a while at least, and note results. A lady found out in this way, and also learned of a new beverage that is wholesome as well as pleasant to drink. She writes:

"I am 40 years old and all my life up to a year and a half ago, I had been a coffee drinker.

"Dyspepsia, severe headaches and heart weakness made me feel sometimes as though I was about to die. After drinking a cup or two of hot coffee, my heart would go like a clock without a pendulum. At other times it would almost stop and I was so nervous I did not like to be alone." Tea is just as harmful, because it contains caffeine, the same drug found in coffee.

"If I took a walk for exercise, as soon as I was out of sight of the house I'd feel as if I was sinking and this would frighten me terribly. My limbs would utterly refuse to support me, and the pity of it all was, I did not know that coffee was causing the trouble.

Reading in the papers that many persons were relieved of such ailments by leaving off coffee and drinking Postum, I got my husband to bring home a package. We made it according to directions and I liked the first cup. Its rich, snappy flavor was delicious.

"I have been using Postum about eighteen months and to my great joy digestion is good, my nerves and heart are all right, in fact, I am a well woman once more, thanks to Postum."

Name given by Canadian Postum Co., Windsor, Ont. Write for copy of the little book, "The Road to Wellville."

Postum comes in two forms:

Regular Postum—must be boiled [illegible]

Instant Postum is a soluble powder. A teaspoonful dissolves quickly in a cup of hot water and with cream and sugar, makes a delicious beverage instantly. Grocers sell both kinds.

"There's a reason" for Postum.

The Return of Johnnie

No amount of persuasion or punishment could keep Johnnie from running away. The excitement of being pursued and of being brought back to a tearful family appealed to his sense of the dramatic and offset the slight discomfort that sometimes followed.

Finally his mother determined upon a new method. She decided after many misgivings, that the next time Johnnie ran away no notice whatever should be taken of it. He should stay away as long as he pleased and return when he saw fit.

In a few days the youngster again disappeared. His mother was firm in her resolve, and no search was made. Great was poor Johnnie's disappointment. He managed to stay all day but when it began to grow dark his courage failed, and he started for home. He sneaked ignominiously into the kitchen. Nobody spoke to him. Apparently his absence had not been noticed. This was too much and as soon as opportunity offered he remarked casually: Well, I see you've got the same old cat.

Tommy, who was the proud possessor of a couple of rabbits, on arriving home from school one day proceeded to his rabbit hutch, and holding one of the rabbits up by its ears squarely in front of him, asked it, with a menacing look: Twice two?—a shake—Twice two?—well then: Twice six?

Throwing the rabbit back into its hutch he remarked in angry tones: I knew teacher was telling fibs. She said rabbits could multiply quick.

I've met the meanest man, he answered. I've heard of him, and I've read about him in the papers, but I never expected to meet him face to face.

How do you know he was the meanest man?

By the way he acted. I showed him this work of art, lectured on it for half an hour, showed the engravings, and when I hinted that it would be a good thing to order, what do you think he said?

I don't know.

He said he never bought books. He didn't have to. He just waited for some idiot of an agent to come along and tell him all that was in them and turn over the leaves while he looked at the pictures.

When Mark Twain, in his early days, was editor of a Missouri paper, a superstitious subscriber wrote to him saying that he had found a spider in his paper. Was that a sign of good luck or bad? The humorist wrote him this answer, and printed it:

Old Subscriber: Finding a spider in your paper was neither good luck nor bad luck for you. The spider was merely looking over your paper to see which merchant is not advertising, so that he can go to that store spin his web across the door, and lead a life of undisturbed peace ever afterward.

She entered the doctor's office, truly a sorry spectacle. Her right eye was bandaged, a bruise marred her cheek and her left arm was supported by a sling.

Ah, good morning, Mrs. Brewster. An accident, I see? said the doctor sympathetically. I am very sorry, indeed. How did it happen?

Well, you see, sir, it was like this. I was a-goin' 'ome the other evenin, an' it was very dark on our stair, an' I thought I'd reached me own door, but when I knocked it wasn't, an' the gentleman what opened the door thought I was his wife.

Another New Comet Found

Another new comet, the second to be discovered this month—has been located definitely in the constellation Pisces, west of the star Omega, according to Prof. E. F. Barnard of the Yerkes Observatory at Williams Bay, Wis. Prof. Barnard calls the visitor a remarkable celestial body. It was discovered on Sept. 6 by Neujmin, an European astronomer. The first comet was found by the Rev. Joel Metcalf on September 1.

Prof. Barnard says that the comet appears like an asteroid, defined by astronomers as a starlike body, but has a nebulous appendage extending to the east. This distinguishes it from ordinary asteroids.

The new comet will not become visible to the naked eye, but may be seen through a five inch telescope. It differs from the Metcalf comet in being periodic; that is, it will return at stated intervals.

Getting Their Own Back

A young man had take his wife to a theatre, and as there was no one to look after the baby, they had brought it along. It cried lustily all through the first act. At the close of the act an official came down the gangway and informed them that if they could not keep the baby quiet they would have to go to the box office, get their money back and go out.

They succeeded in squelching the baby and all went well for a time.

Then five minutes after the last act had commenced the young father leaned over and said: How do you like the show?

Rotten! was the reply.

Stick a pin in the baby.

New England's Champion Trapshooter Retains Title

E. A. Randall, of Portland, Maine, who in 1912 won the title of champion trapshooter of New England, captured the honor again this year by breaking 195 out of 200 targets at the Paleface Shooting Association's tournament held at Wellington, Mass., Sept. 10-11. Mr. Randall also won high amateur average for the meet with 383 out of 400. H. D. Gibbs, shooting the speed shells in his Remington pump gun, was high over all, scoring 388 out of 400 targets thrown.

Wind Every Five Years

Clocks are now made to run five years with once winding up. In 1881 the Belgian Government placed one of these in a railway-station and sealed it. It has kept capital time, having only been four times wound—in 1886, 1891, 1896, and 1901; and there is a clock in the Church of St. Quentin, in Mayence, which has only stopped once during a period of 500 years.

A clergyman was anxious to introduce some hymnbooks into the church, and arranged with his clerk that the latter was to give out the notice immediately after the sermon. The clerk, however, had a notice of his own to give out with reference to the baptism of infants. Accordingly, at the close of the sermon he arose and announced that all those who had children whom they wish to have baptised please send in their names at once to the clerk. The clergyman who was stone deaf, assumed that the clerk was giving out the hymnbook notice, and immediately rose and said: And I should say for the benefit of those who haven't any, that they may obtain some from the ushers any day from 3 to 4 o'clock; the ordinary little ones at 25 cents each, and special ones at 50 cents.

Recklessness

At a dinner given in New York by the Greeters, an organization of hotel men, T. C. Breslin of the Plaza, said:

Hotel men cannot be niggardly. They must not imitate old Cornelius Husk. Old Corn Husk, as you know, saw his boy the other day carrying the thermometer from the kitchen out into the yard.

Whatcha doin' wi thet thar thermometer, boy? he asked.

I wanter git the difference in temperacher, pop, betwixt inside and outside, the son answered.

Wall, quit it, snapped old Corn Husk. Keepin' the mercury runnin up and down the tube like that, fust thing ye know the durn thing'll be worn out, and long'll go 25 cents for another thermometer.

When Bobbie went to see his grandmother he was much interested in whatever went on in the kitchen. One day she said to him: I'm goin' to make you a nice little pie in a saucer, all for yourself. Don't you think I'm pretty good to take so much trouble? Bobbie pondered. Grandma, he said at length, mother told me not to be a bother, and if it's going to be any trouble you can just as well make my pie regular size.

CHILDHOOD AILMENTS

Ailments such as constipation, colic, colds, vomiting, etc., seize children of all ages and the mother should be on her guard against these troubles by keeping a box of Baby's Own Tablets in the house. If any of these troubles come on suddenly the Tablets will cure them, or if the little one is given an occasional dose of the tablets he will escape these troubles. The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25c a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Recovering All Right

The following letter is from a small boy to his mother, who had sent him into the country to recover from an illness:

Dear Mum; I forgot to write before. Me and some other boys went out in a boat yesterday, and the boat turned over, but a man got me out alright. This morning we were out for a bike ride, and I fell over and cut me head. And tonight we are going to set light to a haystack and let Mr. ——'s chickens out of their cages. So I think we will enjoy ourselves. I feel much better now.—Your loving son, Tom.

MAKING MOTION PICTURE FILMS

One Company Spends $50,000 a Year Just to Robe Its Various Productions

Every frequenter of the motion picture theatres must have been struck, at some time or another, by the luxuriousness of the stage setting of most of the society dramas—the magnificence of the decorations, the richness of the furnishing, and the costliness of the dresses worn by the performers.

Few, however, have any real conception of the huge cost of these things, or appreciate the pains taken by the big film producing companies to get the best of everything.

Take, for instance, the costume of the principal actresses. The capital of Europe are ransacked for the latest creations in millinery and modes. When Miss Miriam Nesbit and Miss Mary Fuller were last over here with the Edison Company, they paid a visit to Paris for the purpose of purchasing a stock of such things for future Edison productions, and in two days' shopping they spent more than $15,000.

Miss Lottie Briscoe, the Lubin star actress, recently played in a film which necessitated no fewer than fourteen changes of costume, each costing on an average about $75, and she needs when on tour, twenty trunks for her wardrobe.

Miss Gene Gauntier wears one set of furs in the Kalem films that cost $4,000, and she has other sets almost equally as valuable. Miss Asta Neilson is credited with being the most expensively dressed actress in the pictures. Frequently her costumes in the society scenes in which she specializes will cost as much as $500 apiece.

It might be thought that as the actual dresses worn by the performers are not seen by the public, but only the photographic representations of them, that common material or imitation stuff would do as well as the real articles.

But, as a matter of fact, this is far from being the case. Indeed, the very reverse holds good. To get a really first-class photograph, first-class properties must be provided.

In the early days of the picture play business this was not properly realized, and a company that laid out $5,000 on a collection of properties, although expecting them to last for years, was considered extravagant.

Nowadays, on the other hand, it would be a very cheap affair that would start with less than $15,000 or $20,000 worth; while one of the best known of the really big firm companies is reported to spend as much as $50,000 every year in dressing—or, as it is technically termed, 'robing' its shows.

The Desire to Disagree

There are those who seem to be born with the instinct to disagree. I have in mind at this moment one such person. I have heard him express emphatically a certain opinion and then, perhaps a day or two later, I have heard him denounce the same opinion expressed in his presence by someone else.

Sometimes, of course, this kind of thing is done by those who love argument for the sake of the intellectual exercise. But in this instance it was due simply and solely to the love of disagreeing.

If we did not spend so much time in trying to disagree, if we did not torment ourselves with the ill feeling that accompanies the will to disagree, we should be surprised at the strange improvement in the people and in the world about us.

We should find that, through persistent self assertion, instead of gaining we lost.

We should also discover that through resisting the desire to disagree, through giving people as good a chance to express themselves as we long to give ourselves, we should exert a far greater influence than we do now, and we should be heard oftener and with more profit.—From 'Intimations,' by John D. Barry, Paul Elder & Company, Publishers.

Shortly after a new administration took hold of a wellknown southern railroad a great number of claims were preferred against the company on account of horses and cattle being killed along the line in Kentucky. To make matters worse it appeared that every animal killed, however worthless it may have been before the accident invariably figured in the claims subsequently presented as being of the best blood in Kentucky.

One day in conversation with one of the road's attorneys, the president became very much excited in referring to the situation. Do you know, he exclaimed, bringing down his fist on the desk by way of emphasis, I have reached the conclusion that nothing in Kentucky so improves live stock as crossing it with a locomotive.

Amusing the Editor

A village cricket match was in the course of progress. The fielding side were for a time a man short, and a farm-laborer was pressed into service. A ball was hit in the substitute's direction, and to the surprise of the spectators in general, and of himself in particular, he made the catch. The following Saturday he anxiously scanned the local papers for a record of his feat, and was greatly disappointed to find it reported as 'caught sub.'

What's this 'ere caught sub? he asked a friend.

Why, doan't thee know, Bill? That means 'twore a accident, was the reply.

The editor of the paper was amused next morning by the following note:

Deer sur,—You say in yore paper as 'ow I cort a man out in last Setterday's match by accident. I mite summons you for libel, only I shan't, but if you should 'appen to get a clump on the nose one of these odd days, you'll know it was Bill Wiggins as done it, and it won't be no sub neither.

LEPROSY AND FISH

Noted Surgeon's Death Recalls His Theories of Disease

Sir Jonathan Hutchinson, the famous surgeon, who died at Haslemere, England, at the age of eighty-four, devoted much time to the study of the origin of leprosy. He formed the theory that the disease was due to the eating of diseased or imperfectly cured fish, and to confirm his view he set out at the age of seventy for a long tour in India and Robben Island, Cape Colony. His writings did much to secure better conditions for leprosy sufferers.

In bygone times, he once wrote, I used to call leprosy 'fish-eaters' gout'; but he latterly preferred the description: fish-eaters' tuberculosis.

Leprosy, he said again, advanced in inland districts of Europe with the advent of Christianity, and the observance of fish fasts, and it disappeared when Protestantism threw fasts into disuse. This contention brought him into conflict with the heads of the Roman Catholic Church.

Sir Jonathan, who lived in Haslemere for fifty years, was the founder of the educational museum there, the superintendence of which he counted as one of his recreations.

Stomach Troubles and Weakness of Kidneys Cured by Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills.

There is an enormous amount of suffering from liver and kidney derangements and stomach troubles that could easily be avoided by using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. If you could only realize the scores of everyday ills that arise from a sluggish condition of the kidneys, liver and bowels you would not be long in giving this medicine a trial.

Mrs. Edward Stewart, New Richmond West, Que., writes: "I want to tell you how thankful I am for using your Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills for stomach troubles and backache caused by weak kidneys. I was unable to wash any clothes for over two years on account of my back being lame. I read the Almanac and began using these pills. Two boxes made a complete cure. I can do my own washing and any other work now and want to say to lady friends that they do not know how much I appreciate Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills."

Little Polly coming in from her walk one morning informed her mother that she had seen a lion in the park. No amount of persuasion or reasoning could make her vary her statement one hairbreadth. That night, when she slipped down on her knees to say her prayers, her mother said: Polly, ask God to forgive you for that fib.

Polly hid her face for a moment. Then she looked straight into her mother's eyes, her own shining like stars, and said: I did ask him, mamma, dearest, and he said: Don't mention it, Miss Polly, that big yellow dog has often fooled me.

Eyeglasses and Royalty

According to an American paper, the King of Sweden is probably the only monarch ever known to wear eyeglasses and spectacles on State occasions. In point of fact, both eyeglasses and spectacles are very rare among Royalties of today. This certainly is true of our own Royal family, no member of which (unless we include the present Duke of Cumberland) has ever employed any aid to vision.

Corrected the Witness

He hit the poor old girl, was the evidence given by a witness in a summons at Woolwich.

Mr. Hutton (the magistrate)—Don't say the poor old girl, say the elderly lady.

To the long list of 'less' things, as the seedless orange, the fireless cooker and the trackless trolley, an Ohio horticulturist claims to have added the odorless onion. It may be so. It may look like an onion and taste like an onion, but can it be an onion still without its odor?

Hair-Cutting Causes Baldness

Several matters of interest to the mere layman engaged the attention of the British Medical Conference at Brighton recently. Dr. Barendt, a skin specialist, for example, suggested too much hair cutting as a cause of baldness.

Why is it that there are so many bald men and so few bald women? he asked. I believe it is because men will not let their hair grow to a proper length. The average man wears his hair about an inch long, whereas it should be at least thirteen or fourteen inches.

Dr. Barendt afterward explained that he considered nature was affronted by frequent cutting of the hair. If it is not allowed to grow to the length I have mentioned it becomes dry and loses its strength, much in the same way that the muscles of the body become flabby and weak if they are not exercised.

Dr. David Walsh, a Harley street skin specialist, told the meeting that he considered the abnormal loss of hair on the head, as well as many skin diseases, was largely associated with defective circulation of the blood. Loss of hair might often be taken as a sign of heart trouble. In support of this he found that out of thirty-six bald persons he had examined twenty-four were suffering from valvular disease of the heart. Dr. Eddowes, however, mentioned the case of an extremely bald man who was one of the most powerful gymnasts he knew.

Speaking before another section at the conference, Dr. H. F. Winslow declared that we are quite wrong in our methods of taking food. He would not promise any short cut to the millennium but he suggested that mankind would enjoy much better health if they would only recognize the fact that it is wrong to drink at meal times. All drinks should be taken between meals. He was not talking about alcohol; in fact, he entirely dissociated his present contention from any discussion of temperance. What he wanted people to do was to eat without any sipping at all.

Henry James, the American novelist, lives at Rye, one of the Cinque Ports, but recently he left Rye and took a house in the country near the estate of a millionaire jam manufacturer, retired. This man, having married an earl's daughter, was ashamed of the trade whereby he had piled up his fortune.

The jam manufacturer one day wrote Mr. James an impudent letter vowing that it was outrageous the way the James' servants were trespassing on his grounds. Mr. James wrote back:

Dear Sir:—I am very sorry to hear that my servants have been poaching on your preserves.

P.S.—You'll excuse my mentioning your preserves, won't you?

The Rev Dr. John Wesley Hill, of New York, told the following story the other night in illustration of a point he wished to make:

I am reminded, he said, of the Irishman whose alarm clock stopped running. He shook it, but it would not run. He waited but it did not improve, and then one day he took the back out of it, looked in, and saw a dead cockroach. Shure enough, said he, I've diskivered the difficulty. The engineer is dead!

Love of Canada

There was the smell of rain and of quickening earth in the air, and a few duck flew over, making no sound.

Tempest stood still to watch them go. Then he looked out across the land which was so dear to him with the old light shining in his eyes.

Presently he spoke with a half laugh and a half break of love in the words:

To love you isn't enough, he said, God grant we're ready to suffer and work for you—Canada.

The telephone bell rang in the consulting room of a doctor who was an enthusiastic motorist. In his absence the assistant answered it, and said the doctor was out.

Will you tell him, the voice asked, that Mr. Thompson has a gymkhana coming on, and wants to know if he can do anything for it?

I will tell him the moment he comes in, the assistant answered; meanwhile put a bread poultice on it, and renew it every two hours.

A teacher in a tenement district hurried from the school to find the mother of a pupil who had been taken ill.

Can you show me where Mrs. Angelo Scandale lives? she inquired of a cherub, transplanted from the sunny south to a dark, sunless alley.

Yes, teacher, I show you, and a willing sticky hand dragged her on with such speed as to make her stumble over an Italian dame seated on the threshold.

After the teacher's breathless flight toward the clouds the little hand stopped tugging.

There where Mees Scandale live, indicated the horizontal arm and finger, but she downstair sitting on the step, finished the smiling lips.

Pat's Excuse

Pat was late again. Somehow or other, try as he would, he did not seem able to get to work on time, and worst of all, his stock of excuses had just about given out. The foreman was eloquent in his denunciation, and his sarcasm unlimited. Well, he snarled, nine o'clock. What d'yer mean by comin' in at this time, eh? It's a wonder a man o' your means troubles about comin' at all. Now, then, trot another excuse out.

Pat thought hard for a moment and at last the excuse came:

Sure, sor, said he, I dramed last night thot I was at the football match, an it ended in a draw. So th' referee ordered an extra half-hour to be played, and begorra, sor, I had to stop an' see the finish.

Dinah, when asked why she had not put on mourning for a recently deceased admirer, replied: Law, miss I just thought this way. What's the use? He's there and I'm here.

His straining hands tore the words from the depths of his soul and threw the secret in the cobbler's eyes.

Motion Picture in School Still Opposed

Teaching by symbols is a recognized element in pedagogy of today. It is often a more direct way of rousing the appreciation or understanding of students than precept or homily. Illustration, too, plays a larger part than of old. Laboratory practice was long in superseding mere lecture room work in the colleges, but it is now thoroughly established that to see the process with the eyes, to handle materials and to practice the rules is the only way to make sure that the student understands what he is taught. The concrete presentation of things in the forms of illustration, as the word is used, verbal or pictorial, is one of the favorite pedagogic means. The use of illustrations in school books and of pictures in the classroom constantly increases. Children not only read about the strange homes of distant peoples, but see them pictured. They not only read about historical events, but have pictures that make the actuality of the happening more vivid.

At the same time the present day experiment of teaching by motion pictures is opposed by many people as going too far. Of course, with all the pictures of processes, places and the various doings which children learn in geography, history and kindred studies, careful explanation goes along and no doubt the children will also be prompted to ask intelligent questions, and will be interested and remember the answer because the question came spontaneously, but one must still agree that teaching by pictures may have the fault of its virtue. What is so easily and readily accepted may be as easily let go.

Giving it Away

A dear little bride in a railway carriage was like most brides in desiring to avoid identification as such. The husband went out to get some refreshments at a stopping place. An old lady opposite talked to her.

You are lately married, my dear, I know, she said kindly.

Oh, no, we have been married a long time, returned the younger woman, briskly.

Ah! excuse me. You are so young and you seem so happy.

Oh, we have been married eight, yes, eight years.

Have you any—

Oh! (blushing furiously) no!

Well! Well! and I thought at first you were on your honeymoon.

Oh, no. My husband will tell you—here he comes—that we have been married eight years. Haven't we, Jack?

Yes, yes, certainly, he replied. Do you know, Mabel! he added, with a wriggle, I have some of that beastly rice down my back yet?

My dear, says the kind-hearted husband, I do not wish to say anything about our extravagant way of keeping house, but do you know it is a fact that the average French family lives on what the average American family wastes?

But, my angel, comments the helpful wife, that would be impossible. In the first place, the cost of sending it to France would be too great, and besides it would spoil before it got there.

Simple and Sure.—Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil is so simple in application that a child can understand the instructions. Used as a liniment the only direction is to rub, and when used as a dressing to apply. The directions are so plain and unmistakable that they are readily understood by young or old.

She Got a Hen

Once upon a time runs a modern fable, a youth about to embark on the sea of matrimony, went to his father and said:

Father, who should be boss, I or my wife?

The old man smiled and said: Here are a hundred hens and a team of horses. Hitch up the horses, put the hens into the wagon, and wherever you find a man and his wife dwelling stop and enquire who is the boss, wherever you find a woman running things leave a hen. If you come to a place where a man is in control, give him one of the horses.

After ninety-nine hens had been disposed of he came to a house and made the usual enquiry.

I'm boss of this farm, said the man.

So the wife was called, and she affirmed her husband's assertion.

Take which horse you want.

I'll take the bay.

But the wife did not like the bay horse, and talked to him. He returned and said: I believe I'll take the grey.

Not much, said the young man. You get a hen.

There's no Place Like—

Absurd! fumed the fussy commercial, as a follow-breakfaster entered the coffee-room. Don't know what these hotels are comin' to, I'm sure! I've been here the whole blessed week, and can't get anything of a morning but eggs—eggs—eggs.

But they are different eggs, observed his companion sadly tucking his napkin under his chin.

Well, of course they're different, snapped the fussy commercial.

Then be thankful for at least that consolation, replied the other, and do not be too hard on hotels. I know a place, my friend, where I am given a hot joint one day, renew its acquaintance in a state of frigidity on the next, toy with its mangled remains in the form of hash on the third, flirt with it among macaroni and tomato sauce on the fourth, and probably on the fifth, detect it lurking yet again in the recesses of a rissole.

Great Scott! exclaimed the commercial, brought away from his own troubles at last. Where's that?

In a little place, replied the silent sufferer, called home.

Mrs. Stronghead had just thrown a paving stone through a drug store window merely proving that she was entitled to a vote, and had been marched off to jail.

Thank heaven! said Stronghead. That settles the where shall we spend the summer problem, anyhow.

In Case of Emergency

One Saturday a small boy arrived with an important air at the penny savings-bank of a college settlement, and withdrew two cents from his account.

Monday morning he promptly returned the money.

So you didn't spend your two cents, observed the worker in charge.

Oh, no, the lad replied; but a fellow likes to have a little cash on hand over Sunday.

Husband (after the theatre)—Well, how do you like the piece?

Wife—Very much. There's only one improbable thing in it. The second act takes place two years after the first, and they have the same servant.

SUFFERED EVERYTHING

For Years, Restored To Health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Canadian women are continually writing us such letters as the two following, which are heartfelt expressions of gratitude for restored health:

Glanford Station, Ont.—"I have taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and never found any medicine to compare with it. I had ulcers and falling of womb and doctors did me no good. I suffered dreadfully for years until I began taking your medicine. I also recommend it for nervousness and indigestion." — Mrs. HENRY CLARK, Glanford Station, Ont.

Chesterville, Ont. — "I heard your medicines highly praised, and a year ago I began taking them for falling of womb and ovarian trouble.

"My left side pained me all the time and just before my periods which were irregular and painful it would be worse. To sit down caused me pain and suffering and I would be so nervous sometimes that I could not bear to see any one or hear any one speak. Little specks would float before my eyes and I was always constipated.

"I cannot say too much for Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Liver Pills, for there are no medicines like them. I have taken them and I recommend them to all women. You may publish this testimonial." — Mrs. STEPHEN J. MARTIN, Chesterville, Ontario, Canada.

The Creston Review

Published every Friday at Creston, British Columbia, by the Creston Printing and Publishing Company, Ltd.

The Review is the acknowledged advertising medium of the Creston valley, circulating in nearly one thousand homes throughout the Creston district and reaching out in a broad manner into other communities. Our advertising rates are based on the scale of the Kootenay and Boundary Shippers' Board of Trade. Land purchase and land lease notices, $7 for statutory time. Display advertisements, $1 per inch per month; other advertising 10 cents per line first issue and 5 cents per line in succeeding weeks. Subscription rates $2.00 a year in advance. Our columns are open to contributions dealing in matters of local interest and the welfare of the community. Contributions must be brief and signed.

A. B. S. Stanley - - - - - Editor and Manager

A man is known by the company he keeps," enough said.

Verbosity is not sense or knowledge, either in law or in fact.

In passing we would like to mention that the persons who write threatening letters leave themselves criminally liable.

The man or woman who thinks to muzzle the press is very much like the poor little yearling calf which lowers his head in defiance and charges the Twentieth Century Limited and the effect is about the same.....biff.

Nearly every up-to-date town worthy of the name of town is afflicted with one or more of the type of man who "has no axe to grind, and curries favor with no one" and "knows exactly what he is talking about" but who manages to get mixed up in affairs that don't concern him and which add no white to his already immaculate character. He generally tries to run the paper, the post office, the bank the Farmer's Institute, his neighbor's affairs and everybody in the county besides.

For all such we have neither time or room and only make reference to him when the news of the week connect him in one way or another with some story we have to make public. If he should connect himself with police court news that is his own lookout.

We are in receipt of a letter from Mrs. McPeak asking us to publish a letter over her signature but which is on the face of it evidently from the "press" or typewriter of Mr. T. M. Edmondson.

With regard to the former, we gladly publish the letter from Mrs. McPeak as it only goes to show some of the circumstances that enter into the daily experience of the ebitor of a country weekly. That the lady should rise to the defence of Mr. Edmondson is only fair as he had already defended her son in his recent police court hearing, but that either or both should think that by threats and bluffing they could compel the editor of the Review to publish their stuff is beyond comprehension and suggests a condition out of which Creston and its paper have long since grown.

The letter is as follown:

"Sir: Enclosed in separate sheet you will find a letter which I request you to publish in this week issue of Review.

Should you fail to comply with my request I will call personally on you first of next week and will give you an interduction to some westen fair play with or without your approval and it wont be with printers ink but something more substancial. While you live in Creston, make note of this don't you ever again have my name or any member of my family appear in print in the Review for I do not allow any man great or small meddle in my family affairs so take my advise and mind you business enough said.

I remain Mrs. McPeak"

The Province, speaking of the return of the Duke of Connaught, has the following to say:—"The Duke of Connaught returns to Canada to resume his office as Governor-General, and with him to the sincere delight of all Canada comes the Duchess, whom it is hoped is really restored to health. The Dukes long absence was largely due to the illness of ehe Duchess, and as soon as ever she was well enough to travel he returns to hss duties. The Duchess Determined to accompany him although it was thought that she would stay in England on account of her health.

Canada knows the Governor-General now, and has a very real affection for him and his family. The wedding of his only son roused much sympathetic interest, on account of the personel sentiment felt for the Duke, which means so much, and yet seems so little apparent in the ordinary relations between a Governor-General and the country.

Some are inclined to look on the person of the Governor-General as a mere figure-head which means nothing, and is never missed. The fact that the Duke of Connaught is uncle to King George, was at first in some quarters considered to emphasize this view, but when Canada came to know the Duke that opinion was changed

It was recognised that the Duke stood for exactly the same standard of efficient work combined with effective imagination as Earl Grey, whom he succeeded. In him for the first time Canada saw royalty at work close at hand.

The office under the Duke's hand was no sinecure. The figure-head was alive, and adding much to the ship of state. Many people were inclined to think that to set a royal precedent was not democratic enough for a country like Canada. But the Duke showed that democracy is not the monopoly of the demagogue. He has set such a royal precedent that all Canada will be only too delighted to welcome his son as his successor if it can be arranged. That in itself is an accomplishment of which only those who realize the delicacy and difficulties of the Duke's position and office are in the position to ludge."

"JUG-HANDLE" RECIPROCITY.

The Republican friends of the American farmer announce, in the most pathetic tone, that the Canadian farmer gets under the new Wilson tariff practically everything he would have received under the reciprocity agreement, without paying anything for it. Very well. He will now see what his wonderful Reciprocity would have brought him. We ventured to say at the time when it was up for discussion that he would be mightily dissapointed in it if he took the roseate predictions of its partizans at par; and we would like to recall this remark on the brink of the enactment of an American tariff which its American critics charge amounts to a "jug-handled" Reciprocity with Canada. The Canadian citizens wil note, however, that—whatever may be the effect upon him of this new American tariff— he is not being asked to pay the price for it which he would have paid, had the Taft-Fielding agreement passed into law.

He will not be compelled to open his own market in return. When prices rule low in United states and high in Canada, he will get the legitimate benefit of this condition of affairs, while, when the reverse is the case, he will obtaid whatever advantage the Welson tariff awards him "free, gratis, for nothing."

More important still, there will be no assault upon our national independence. Canada will not become "an adjunct" of the United States.

Any people who may have been "preparing to anneex Canada," have been balked in their plans. The British bond, though light and imperceptible," will not be attacked. We can test out the worth of the American Market, without—as Kipling told us—"imperiling our soul" into the bargain. The Canadian deople certainly took the course of wisdom, even in a commercial sense, when they decided to wait and see if the Americans would not voluntarily reduce their own tariff before we paid them a perilously high price for doing so. —Family Herald and Weekly Star.

Now is the Time to Plan For Next Years Fall Fair

The time is now ripe for the organization of an Agricultural Association that will take in all the territory of the Creston Valley and will look to the time when the industry of the Valley will include not only Fruit, Vegetables and Poultry but also live Stock and some of the domestic industries as well as the arts.

Why should this, the best favored of all the valleys of British Columbia be satisfied to be regarded as a second rate affair where "they grow apples"?

Removal of Shoe Boils.

To remove a shoe boil, if you cannot employ a graduate veterinarian, says the Farm Journal, proceed as follows: Put a twitch on the horse's nose and have one fore foot held up by an attendant. Make a single loop knot or noose on a length of piano wire. Put the loop over the shoe boil and pull tight so as to make the tumor have as narrow a neck as possible. Now cut off the shoe boil by means of a redhot hatched shaped iron or cut it off with a sharp scalpel and at once stop the bleeding by cauterization with a thermo cautery or redhot iron. This leaves a large, flat wound, but it is surprising how quickly it heals and what a small blemish (scar) it leaves if simply wetted a number of times a day with a lotion composed of one ounce of sugar of lead and six drams of sulphate of zinc shaken up in a pint of water.

Cheering.

Mrs. Knagg: If I were to die you'd never get another wife like me, Knagg. —It's very kind of you to say that.—Boston Transcript.

SYNOPSIS OF COAL MINIG REGULATIONS

Coal mining rights of the Dominion, in Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta the Yukon Territory, the North west Territories and in a portion of the Province of British Columbia, may be leased for a term of twenty-one years at an annual rental of $1 an acre. Not more than 2,560 acres will be leased to one applicant.

Application for a lease must be made by the applicant in person to the Agent or Sub-Agent of the district in which the rights applied for are situated.

In surveyed territory the land must be described by sections, or legal subdivisions of sections, and in unsurveyed territory the tract applied for shall be staked out by the applicant himself.

Each application must be accompanied by a fee of $5 which will be refunded if the rights applied for are not available but not otherwise. A royalty shall be paid on the merchantable output of the mine at the rate of five cents per ton.

The person operating the mine shall furnish the Agent with sworn returns accounting for the full quantity of merchantable coal mined and pay the royalty thereon. If the coal mining rights are not being operated, such returns should be furnished at least once a year

The lease will include the coal mining rights only, but the lessee may be permitted to purchase whatever available surface rights may be considered necessary for the working of the mine at the rate of $10 an acre.

For full information application should be made to the Secretary of the Department of the Interior, Ottawa, or to any Agent or Sub-Agent of Dominion Lands

WATCH THE FENCES.

A good fence is insurance against the depredations of browsing animals. All repairs should be made promptly. Diversified farming requires small fields and considerable fencing material, but it pays. Do not be afraid of spending a few dollars for fences if they are needed. Cut up the farm into small fields so crops can be grazed.—Iowa Homestead.

TO KEEP UP SOIL WEALTH.

Growing a Legume Crop Is Necessary Every Four Years.

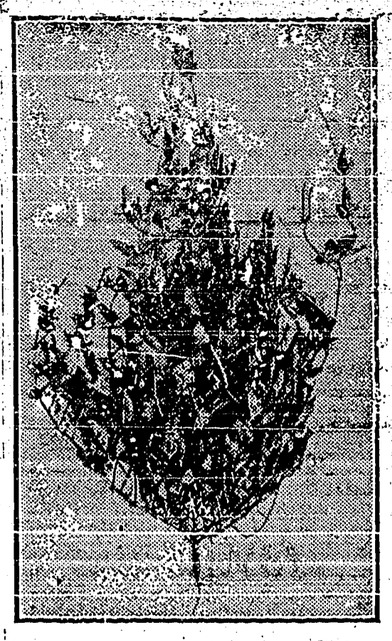
Clover or some other legume crop once every four years is absolutely necessary in order to maintain the nitrogen of the soil for corn, wheat, oats, timothy and like crops.

Where it is difficult to secure clover the trouble is either a sour soil needing limestone or a soil low in phosphate.

To help out the stand, says Farm Magazine, it is often advisable to sow part in alsike clover. Alsike clover will often produce a good stand where red clover fails.

Where clover has failed and a crop like clover is needed soy beans and cowpeas are proving a very profitable substitute in the corn belt.

Soy beans make a valuable hay, yielding from one and a half to three tons per acre. The seed when left to ripen make a very valuable concentrate, being as rich in protein as oilmeal. They will yield from ten to fifty bushels per acre, and the seed often sells for $2 or more per bushel.



Photograph by Tuskegee agricultural experiment station, Alabama.

WELL GROWN COWPEA VINE.

A crop rotation should be practiced which includes the growing of clover or some other legume crop at least as often as once every four years. If the clover should fail some other legume, as soy beans or cowpeas, should be substituted.

All crop residues, as well as manure, whether stalks, straw or chaff, should be left on the farm, being hauled if necessary and plowed under, either directly or in the form of manure, in order to supply organic matter and nitrogen.

Make Swine Pay Two Ways.

An important consideration that is too often overlooked is the economical utilization of manure produced by swine. Dry lot feeding in summer is often associated with a heavy waste of manure on account of the large part of the manure that is leached or blown away when deposited in bare lots. Feeding on pastures or in cultivated fields will do much to obviate this loss, since a large proportion of the droppings and urine will then be deposited in the field where the fertilizing constituents may be utilized.—Iowa Homestead.

LITTLE BITS OF FARM LORE.

The heating and burning of alfalfa hay in the stack may be avoided by proper curing.

We believe it is not safe, as a rule, to pasture cows on alfalfa alone, says Hoard's Dairyman.

Most of the diseases to which the potato is subject may be avoided by intelligent handling of the seed before planting.

In choosing tomato plants for growing prize tomatoes do not select tree tomatoes, as they are not prolific, but pick out some good, smooth, meaty variety.

The use of machines for transplanting vegetables is on the increase. Every grower should know that machine set plants thrive just as well as those which are planted by hand, provided the work is done with care.

There are two mistakes usually made in putting rye into the silo. Most people let it stand too long before cutting and then do not pack it down hard. For silage rye should be cut before it comes into bloom and while the plants are soft and tender.

THE VALUE OF DAIRYING.

Without agriculture no civilized government can stand, no nation of free men exist, while without live stock there can be no permanent system of agriculture. Specialized concentrated effort counts, and of this dairying is an illustration of the highest type. As nature gave the richest soil, so the cow and the silo will conserve it.

Reasons for Using Nyal's Remedies

CLUCK AND CROW.

Common road dust with a little powdered sulphur mixed in makes a good dust bath for fowls that are troubled with lice.

If good, clean, sound grain in abundance and variety, with pure water, grit oyster shell and meat in some form, will not produce eggs nothing else will.

Ducks are great feeders, and they are also great growers, so where does the loss come in? A few ducks will help to keep the income up to the required standard.

Every hen house should have two yards. When one is occupied the other should be sown to some forage crop. Swiss chard is best, but rape, turnips and clover are also good.

Fowl fanciers and experts in the bureau of animal industry, Washington, are experimenting with crossbreeding whereby the hen may grow feathers sufficiently variegated to be used in place of bird plumage for millinery.

Little turkeys are the most helpless of all poultry. They require great care during the first ten or fifteen days of their lives. They should not be fed until they are thirty-six hours old and then on well baked corn bread crumbs

Stranger Than Fiction

By the way, said the romancer of the smoking-room the other day, I don't think I ever told you of a curious incident that once befell me.

I was staying in the country and one afternoon while out for a walk I rested on a wayside bank. On rising I discovered that a sovereign had dropped out of my pocket. In vain I searched everywhere; no trace of the coin could I discover.

A year later I happened to be in the same district again, and during the course of a ramble found myself on the spot where I had lost the sovereign.

I clambered up the bank to pick some flowers, but it gave way under me, and sent me to the bottom. On picking myself up what do you think I found?

The sovereign, was the unanimous reply.

Wrong! I found a guinea. You see the sovereign had been in the bank a year, and had accumulated interest at the rate of five per cent.

Not Likely

Well, my little man, what can I do for you? asked the grocer as he rubbed his hands genially together.

Please sir, mother says these matches she bought this morning ain't no good.

No good, exclaimed the grocer, now looking almost as much worried as the boy. What's the matter with them? This is the first complaint I have had.

Can't help that, said the small boy. Mother says they ain't no good.

Nonsense! replied the grocer. Then taking a match from one of the boxes he gave it a smart rub, which ignited it immediately, and turned to the boy again. Well, he enquired, what have you got to say now?

The small complainant returned the disdainful look, undaunted.

That's ori right, guv'nor, he remarked, but do you fink my muvver's coming 'ere to strike matches on your boots every time she wants a light?

All the Same to Him

Stranger—Hallo, Green!

Artist—Sir, my name is Brown!

Stranger—That's all right! I'm color blind!

Of Course Not

One of the inmates of a lunatic asylum, an Irishman, was sent to an adjoining ward to find out the correct time. He returned in a moment and announced:

Twinty minutes t' twilve.

Pat are you sure that clock is right? he was asked.

Roight, is it? he replied. D'ye think it wud be in this place if it wuz roight.

Many children die from the assaults of worms, and the first care of mothers should be to see that their infants are free from these pests. A vermifuge that can be depended on is Miller's Worm Powders. They will not only expel worms from the system, but act as a health-giving medicine and a remedy for many of the ailments that beset infants, enfeebling them and endangering their lives.

Like a Slot Gas Meter

Tommy—What is a retainer, pa?

A retainer, my son is the money people pay to us lawyers before we can do any work.

Oh, I see, it's like those slot gasmeters. The people have to pay their money before they get any gas.

Saved up for It

One day two women hired a cab and paid the driver his dollar for their ride with the following coins: A twenty-five cent piece, three dimes, five five-cent pieces, a three-cent piece, two two-cent pieces and thirteen pennies

After looking at the miscellany for a moment, the driver smiled broadly, and asked whimsically: Well, well, now, and how long have you been saving up fir this nice little treat today?

Farmer's Wife—Now, then, you just clear out. When I gave you a splendid pair of boots a month ago, you promised me you wouldn't trouble me again.

Persistent Peter—Neither would I, mum, only the boots 'ave worn out, so I thought I'd ask you if you'd mind havin' 'em soled and 'eeled for me?

Now, Tommy, said Mrs. Bull, I want you to be good while I am out.

I will be good for a nickel, replied Tommy.

Tommy, she said, I want you to remember that you cannot be a son of mine, unless you are good for nothing.

He Found Out

The little agricultural village was billed with 'Lecture on Keats,' for over a fortnight. The evening arrived at length, bringing the lecturer ready to discourse on the poet.

The advertised chairman, taken ill at the last moment, was replaced by a local farmer. This worthy introduced the lecturer, and terminated his remarks by saying:

And now, my friends, we shall soon know what I personally have often wondered—what are Keats?

Knew the Sex

Doctor—Your daughter madam needs rest—absolute rest.

Patient's mother—But she won't listen to me, doctor.

Doctor—You must appeal to her in the interest of her complexion madam.

Quite Unusual

A commission in lunacy had called a woman before them as a witness.

And now, said the commission's counsel to her, what is your ground for claiming that the accused is insane?

The woman gulped, wiped her eyes and answered: Well, gentlemen, he took me to the theatre twice in one week. Each time we went in a taxicab; we had supper each time after the performance, and each time he bought me chocolates and flowers. He didn't go out to see a man between the acts either.

But, madam, said a commissioner, surely these actions do not prove insanity on the accused's part.

But you forget, sir, said the lady, with a sad smile—you forget that the accused is my husband.

A Cleveland lawyer tells how, during a trial, one of the jurors suddenly rose from his seat and fled from the court-room. He was, however, arrested in his flight, before he had left the building, and brought back.

I should like to know what you mean by such an action as this, demanded the judge, in a lenient tone, however, as he knew the man, an elderly German, to be a simple, straightforward person.

Vell, your honor, I vill explain, said the juror. Van Mr. Jones finished mit his talking my mind was clear all through, but ven Mr. Smith begins his talking I becomes all confused again already, and I says to himself, I better leave at vonce, und stay away until he is done, because your honor, to tell the truth, I didn't like der vay der argument was going.

A Pill That Is Prized.—There have been many pills put upon the market and pressed upon public attention, but none has endured so long or met with so much favor as Parmelee's Vegetable Pills. Widespread use of them has attested their great value, and they need no further advertisement than this. Having firmly established themselves in public esteem they now rank without a peer in the list of standard vegetable preparations.

Just on One Leg

It was the usual custom at Seaweed Farm for Mrs. Giles to wind up all the clocks each Saturday evening. But one Saturday Mrs. Giles was on the sick list—nothing more serious than a slightly sprained ankle—and she found it impossible for her to move about the house. So Giles was bidden to undertake the performance of her duties.

Now, Giles was short and fat. The kitchen mantel shelf was high. In order therefore to reach the clock which stood upon it, Giles was forced to requisition the services of a chair.

Laboriously he mounted it, while Mrs. Giles watched the manoeuvre in fear and trembling.

John, John, she cried, do be careful. That chair, you know, is none too strong. I'm sure it won't bear your weight.

Giles turned round and surveyed his spouse calmly.

Ay, ay, my dear, he said, it's quite all right; I'm only standing on one leg.

He Was the Cabman

A local preacher once drove in a cab to the village church to preach. Upon reaching the church he was very concerted to find that the congregation only consisted of one man. Remembering however, that a well-known minister had on one occasion preached to one man, and converted him, he decided to give him the benefit of his discourse.

At the close of a long sermon he shook hands with his congregation and asked him if the sermon was too long.

Oh, it makes no difference to me, was the reply. I am your cabman.

He—Private Jones just stood me a gingerbeer.

She—And did you stand him one back?

He—No, of course not. A true British soldier never re-treats!

Very Unique Spot

Doubtless the most unique spot in Europe is the little village of Altenberg, on whose border three countries meet. It is ruled by no monarch, has no soldiers, no police, and no taxes. Its inhabitants speak a curious jargon of French and German combined, and spend their days in cultivating the land or working in the valuable calamine mine of which the village boasts.

A policeman, giving evidence at the Southwark Coroner's Court recently, said his name was Vitruvius Rainbow.

The Coroner—Were you named after anyone?

The Constable—No, sir.

A pen-nib is a little thing, yet there is more steel used in the manufacture of nibs than in all the sword and gun factories in the world. A ton of steel produces 1,500,000 pens.

Yes, said the retired insurance agent, I once got a man to take out a $50,000 life policy only the day before he was killed, and it took a lot of coaxing to do it.

Gosh! that was rough on the company. I expect you wished your persuasive powers had not been so successful!

Well, hardly. You see, I married the widow.

The Great Question

Woman, growled the villian, the crime is on your own head.

Is it on straight? anxiously demanded the villianess.

Dared Death to Test Invention

People in Camberwell, London, were horrified a few days ago by seeing man knocked down by a bus, and their horror was turned to surprise when something in front of the bus picked the man up, and when the vehicle had been brought to a standstill, gently deposited him on the roadway.

The explanation is that a new life-guard for motor propelled vehicles was on trial. It has been invented and patented by W. J. Gocling and D. A. Sweeney, of New Maiden. Mr. Sweeney announced some time ago that he had such faith in the invention that when the contrivance was ready for a public test he would submit himself to the experiment of being knocked down in the street by a motor bus to which the life guard was affixed in order to give the best possible public test of its efficiency in the saving of life.

After the first test Mr. Sweeney was able to go away, none the worse for the experiment, except for a slight abrasion on the cheek, caused by contact with the life guard in front of the bus. Had there been no such life guard on the bus, the daring inventor would probably have been killed or seriously injured. On four occasions altogether did Mr. Sweeney submit to being knocked down in the same road and under the same circumstances.

The new life-guard is briefly described as a screen of steel, wire netting, seven feet wide and three feet six inches deep, which is affixed to the front of the motor bus by steel tubes. All the parts are so nicely adjusted that when an obstruction hits the screen it falls inwards, and thus forces down a platform at the bottom of the screen, which moves on rollers, so close to the ground that it is impossible for an obstruction, however small, to pass underneath. In addition to the front life guard, there are two similar life guards in front of the back wheels of the bus, with a returning screen, which it is claimed, makes it impossible for any obstruction to get under the wheels of the vehicle.

Why Americans Buy

The influx of American farmers into the Canadian west is a solid proof of that country's attractions, says the Scottish-American. The American agriculturist is for the most part a shrewd and practical man, who knows good land when he sees it, and who understands what he can make it produce. His standard of land values is the market price of land in his own State. When he sees that he can buy in Canada equally good or better land for a quarter of its real value as judged by his standard what wonder that he grasps the opportunity? He buys his new farm in Canada with the certain knowledge that he can make a good living off it, and in the confident expectation that it will gradually and steadily increase in market value, just as agricultural land in his own State has risen in value from the low level of $10 per acre or less to its present value of something like $100 per acre. He understands in fact, the intrinsic value of land is at present priced far below its real value.

Two of a Kind

A private in the regulars went to the colonel of his regiment and asked for a two weeks' leave of absence. The colonel was a severe disciplinarian, who did not believe in extending too many privileges to his men and did not hesitate to use a subterfuge in evading the granting of one.

Well, said the colonel, what do you want a two weeks' furlough for?

Patrick answered: Me woife is very queer and the children are not well, and, if ye didn't moind, she would loike to have me home for a few weeks to give her a bit of assistance.

The colonel eyed him for a few minutes and said:

Patrick, I might grant your request, but I got a letter from your wife this morning saying she didn't want you home; that you were a nuisance whenever you went there. She hopes I won't let you have any more furloughs.

That settles it! Ol suppose Ol can't get the furlough, then? said Pat.

No, I'm afraid not, Patrick.

Colonel, can I say somethin' to yez?

Certainly, Patrick; what is it?

You won't get mad, colonel, if Ol say it?

Certainly not, Patrick. What is it?

Ol want to say there are two splendid liars in this room. Ol was never married in me loife.

Cause and Effect

An English gentleman from the Midlands, who was spending a month at Brighton, went to London for a few days' visit. He had his wife and daughter and plenty of money with him.

The daughter, after buying whatever she wanted, decided that she must also have a bulldog. The entire family went to help her to select the dog, but they could not agree in their choice, so the gentleman bought three—the selection of each.

He had the three dogs sent to Brighton, then changed his plans after going back there, and took his family home. A few days later he received the following letter from the stable-man at Brighton.

Dear Sir—Your three bulldogs arrived all right last night on the same train. I locked them up together last night in a loose bo Yours truly, J.J.

P.S.—We have only one loose box.

P.P.S.—You will have to buy some more dogs.

Estimating His Worth

A well-known M.P., not remarkable for his physique, some time ago visited a factory where a great number of men were employed.

The M.P. enquired of one of the workmen: What wages do you receive here?

Well, replied the workman scratching his head, and raising his cap with the same hand, that depends on what you are, guvnor; a chap like you, for instance, would get about eighteen bob a week.

Gibbs—Wonder why Blankfort when he puts up at a hotel always takes a single room.

Dibbs—His doctor told him he must avoid suites.

Tanning Materials in United States

The figures of the United States forestry service show that there are some 22,000,000 worth of vegetable tanning material used every year in the United States. The chief source of tanning is hemlock bark, but the quantity used is steadily decreasing, owing to the depleting of the forests. The amount of bark utilized in the United States in 1906 was 930,000 tons, in 1907, 816,000 tons; in 1908 810,000 tons; and in 1909, 698,000 tons.

There are in all, six sources of tanning: gall nuts, fruits of certain plants and leaves of some trees and shrubs, wood of such trees as chestnut and quebrecho, bark of many trees and shrubs, roots of certain plants. The decrease in the amount derived from these usual sources of vegetable tanning is being met by introducing new materials and chemical substitutes. There appears to be a limit, however, to which substitutes can be successfully carried, and the question of a future supply of vegetable tanning is becoming a matter for serious consideration.

Animals are Good Patients

A piece of bone jammed between the molars of a Bengal tiger made the great cat furious, but when the Bronk zoological physicians touched the tormenting object with forceps she began to relax completely, and the bone was removed with ridiculous ease. The Bulletin of the Zoological Society records the case of several other animals that proved to be far more satisfactory patients than human beings. All the great apes, for example, are perfect patients. But the gentle deer, which are high-strung, nervous creatures, are the most difficult of all to handle when ill.

G.O.M. OF HAMILTON

ADAM BROWN IS STILL HALE AT NEARLY NINETY.

Prominent Figure at Hamilton Centennial Celebration Moved to the Ambitious City in 1850 and Since That Time He Has Held Many Posts of Honor in the Place of His Adoption.

Adam Brown, "Hamilton's Grand Old Man," is nearly ninety, but his face is fresh and ruddy with health, his step firm and elastic, and form erect and full of vigor. The city of which he has been so much a part was only 11 years old when Adam Brown was born, in Edinburgh, Scotland, in April of 1826. When seven years old he came with his parents to Canada, and for 17 years resided in Montreal. His first position was with Gillespie, Moffat & Company, then the largest commercial house in Canada, dealing in all kinds of the country's products.

In 1850 he went to Hamilton by way of Toronto. To reach the latter required six days and seven nights from Montreal, first by sleigh and then by coach. At Toronto he took the steamer Magnet, now the Montreal, the first iron boat on Lake Ontario. He took the boat, but it did not take him to Hamilton. A storm drove it back, entrance to the bay being found impossible. He then went by coach.

He had come to take a position with D. MacInnis, afterward Senator. Next with the late W. P. Maclaren, wholesale grocer, and in two years became a partner in the firm, later to become Brown, Gillespie & Company, and finally Balfour & Company.

He was a member of the Federal House at Ottawa from 1886 to 1891, when he was appointed postmaster of Hamilton, a position he has held continuously to the present. Mr. Brown represented Canada at the World's Exposition in Jamaica, W.I., and there frequently met the present King George, whose father, the late King Edward, he had helped entertain when in Hamilton during his visit to Canada in 1860.

In 1857-58 he took a leading part in securing a by-law for waterworks for Hamilton, and was one of the commissioners, and later chairman of the board. The work was done by Thos. C. Keefer, now C.M.G. The Prince of Wales was to visit the city and was to open the gate to let the waters of the lake flow through the streets.

Mr. Brown, having charge of the keys to the two finest houses in Hamilton, the owners both being in England at the time, threw open "Oak Bank," W. P. Maclaren's, and "Arkledun," Richard Juson's, and the Prince and his suite occupied them while in the city.

Mr. Brown has been most prominently active in many ways. He was president of the railway that runs through the counties of Wellington, Grey, and Bruce, from Guelph to South Hamilton and from Palmerston to Kincardine. When it was completed it was handed over to the Great Western, and later absorbed by the Grand Trunk Railway; he was president of what was at first known as the Ontario and Pacific Junction, running from Gravenhurst to North Bay, where it connected with the Canadian Pacific, then building. With the late Wm. Hendrie he stood watching the last spike driven that united the two roads. This is now also a part of the G. T. R. system. He was also a director of the road between Toronto and Ottawa, then called "The Toronto and Ottawa Railway." At first this was a "piecemeal" road, being built "in spots."

The policy of the Federal Government was to give but $3,000 per mile toward railways—the previous MacKenzie Government having given $12,000. Mr. Brown was instrumental in having deputations from all the towns and cities, from Windsor to Ottawa, to meet in the latter to urge the change from $3,000 back to the former $12,000 per mile, and the change was made.

In 1866 he was secretary, and later president, of the Hamilton Board of Trade, and in 1877 he was president of the Dominion Board of Trade, which met in Ottawa, once a year, and which was instrumental in bringing about protection of Canadian industries. He has been and still is president of the Royal Humane Association, founded on the principle of the British Association. For sixteen years he was president of the Children's Aid Society, of which there are seventy branches in Ontario, all working under the statute prepared and carried through the House by the Hon. John M. Gibson. Few realize the enormous good that this society accomplishes. Since its organization fully 7,000 neglected children have been provided with homes. He has taken a great interest in the St. Andrew's Society, of which he is now honorary president. He is a trustee of the Aged Women's Home, is president of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals. He is one of the honorary presidents of the Hamilton Centennial Celebration—1813-1913—which has just been held by the Ambitious City, which he has watched grow from 12,000 to a population of 100,000.

COSTLY KISSES.

A War, a Race Riot and a Regiment of Soldiers Among the Results.

In the year 1794, the beautiful, charming and famous Duchess of Gordon founded and raised the Gordon Highlanders, one of the most famous regiments of Scotch Highlanders.

The most attractive terms to a new recruit in this gallant regiment were a guinea in gold and a kiss from the far-famed duchess. It is said that this famous regiment of soldiers was raised more quickly than any other regiment in the British service. This seems all very good, yet the Gordon Highlanders paid dearly for the kiss they had received from the charming Duchess of Gordon. They were soon sent to fight the French and in their first engagement 800 of them fell, killed and wounded. The survivors of the Gordon Highlanders always maintained that they never regretted the price they paid for a single kiss.

In the year 1703 a stolen kiss was the means of bringing about a bloody and expensive ware. Ferdinand of Bavaria was journeying into a neighboring state. One day during his journey he visited the royal household of a neighbor and while wandering wandering around in the spacious park that surrounded the palace he espied a beautiful maiden under a wide-spreading tree close at hand. He was so bewitched with her beauty and charming personality that he impulsively and thoughtlessly implanted a kiss on her fair and lovely cheek.

She was a princess of the royal family, but the Bavarian prince did not know it, neither did he know that she was an affianced bride and that the bridegroom-elect was near by and saw the whole affair. There were hot words and blows. A duel was fought and both principals were almost fatally wounded. Diplomatic relations between the two petty kingdoms were suspended and a long and bloody war ensued. The stolen kiss was paid for most dearly in blood and treasure.

It is considerably within a decade that a negro kissed a white waitress in a restaurant in a little town called Granger, near Salt Lake City, Utah. The lookers-on were indignant and very soon there was a mob and a race war ensued. Thirty-six white men were killed and wounded and over 80 negroes met the same fate.

The strangest and most peculiar climax in this bloody affair was the fact that the same negro and white waitress that had been the cause of the bloodshed and riot were married and then the negresses of the town joined issue with the white men and started in pursuit of the negro and his white bride and they barely escaped death at the hands of the angry black and white mob by sudden and swift flight.

Swinburne's Hatred of Tobacco.

Tennyson was the smoking poet of the Victorian era, says the London Chronicle. His two great contemporaries—Browning and Swinburne—hated tobacco, especially Swinburne. He expressed himself with characteristic vehemence. He had wandered into the Arts Club, where he sought and in vain, a room that was free from the fumes of tobacco smoke. At length his fury overcame him. "James I," he exclaimed, "was a knave, a tyrant, a fool, a liar, a coward, but I love him, I worship him, because he slit the throat of that filthy blackguard, Raleigh, who invented this filthy smoking!"

Veteran Peer Dead.

The veteran Irish peer, Viscount Charlemont, died at Drumcairne, County Tyrone, a few days ago. He was eighty-four years old. As Captain Caulfield he served with distinction in the Crimean War. From 1868 to 1895 he was Comptroller of the Household to successive Irish Viceroys. In 1892 he succeeded to the Irish Viscounty of his cousin, the last Earl of Charlemont. He had no seat in the House of Lords. He is succeeded in Viscounty by his nephew, Mr. James Edward Caulfield. The Countess of Ranfurly is the late peer's daughter.

St. James Was Hospital.

St. James' Palace was originally a hospital dedicated to St. James, and was adopted as a Royal residence by Henry VIII., who built the clock-tower and gateway from designs by Holbein. Charles I. slept at St. James' Palace the night before his execution, and walked across St. James' Park to Whitehall next morning. The British Court is officially known as the Court of St. James, though the Palace is no longer used as a residence of the Sovereign.

Free Pass.

The tenant of Huntingdon farm, Swaston, England, is bound to grow three acres of peas every year for the inhabitants. When they are ready for picking the town crier announces the fact, and those who choose can pick what peas they like. The custom dates back 300 years, when a poor woman was imprisoned for stealing peas.

Ground Flat.

A young man from a country village when sightseeing in Edinburgh was greatly astonished on seeing "Mr. Smith, Hailor (ground flat)," inscribed on a door and after a careful study of the plate exclaimed:

"Great Scott, sic a death! Shairly he's been run ower wi' a steam roller!" —London Graphic.

House Owners.

At the London County Council recently it was stated that 38,000 persons own more than five acres of land, public authorities and railway companies own twenty-two square miles, and the Duke of Westminster owns three-quarters of a square mile.

Table Mountain Railway.

The Swiss engineer who has recently submitted plans for the construction of a railway up Cape Town's famous mountain, estimates that the funicular railway which he recommends will take two and a half years to construct.

Minister at 90.

Probably the oldest minister of the gospel in the British Isles is the Rev. Evan Edwards, of Torquay, who is still hale and hearty, although in his ninety-ninth year. He was actively engaged in the pastorate until a few years ago, and still attends services.

PRINCE AT SCHOOL

King's Younger Sons Will Have No Favors Shown Them.

Prince George and Prince Henry, the younger sons of King George V. of England, have recently been slightly sick and were sent to Newquay to recuperate as well as to enjoy brief vacations. The interesting young members of the royal family enjoyed the outing to the fullest extent. The cliffs at Newquay overlook Pistral bay, and the scenery around this place is the most beautiful and most interesting in all England.

Henry, the third son of the King, who is now thirteen years old, will enter Eton college for the first time this fall. He has been at a private school heretofore and has been treated by all as a member of the royal family. But on entering college it will be different. He will attend the classroom duties just as any other boy, and efforts will be made to make him forget for the time that he is the son of the King. His fellow-students will treat him just as if he was an English boy. He will be compelled to arise every morning at 6.45 o'clock and must attend early classroom exercises at 7.30 o'clock every day. On full school days the young prince will spend six hours daily in the classroom, while on half holidays he will be in the schoolroom for four hours.

As a member of the lower class he will be looked on as a "fag." A fag, a freshman, is compelled to run errands for the upper classmen. He will also be made to keep the rooms of the upper classmen in a neat condition, light their fires, even on cold winter mornings, and must cook their eggs, prepare their tea and run out to the corner shops to buy fruits and pastries. It has long been a custom in English schools to look upon the members of the upper class as dignified persons and on the members of the lower class as a fit subject for hazing in the milder forms.

When it was first announced that Prince Henry would enter Eton college this year it was feared that he would not be received with much enthusiasm by the other students. When he attended the private school he gained the reputation of being a mother's darling and was never allowed to join in the athletic games or to mix with the other boys at the school. In this respect he was much different from his older brother, the Prince of Wales, who while a student took part in many forms of sport and was a member of several clubs at Oxford.

Henry is the first son of the present King of England to attend school at Eton college, his brothers having been sent to other colleges. The boys have decided that they did not like his surname, Guelph, and therefore announced even before the college opened after the vacation that they would call him Henry, a much more appropriate name for a real college boy.

But Prince Henry is not always a good boy by any means. In this respect he shows that there is the same touch of naughtiness that exists in every boy. Just prior to the coronation exercises the young prince behaved very badly.

These two young princes are most interesting persons, as is their brother, the crown prince.

Bamboo Sap in India.

In India the sap of the female bamboo is used for medicinal purposes. "Tabasheer," or "banslochan," is sold in all Indian bazaars, as it has been known from the earliest times as a medicinal agent. It is also known in Borneo and was an article of commerce with early Arab traders of the east. Its properties are said to be strengthening, tonic and cooling. It has been analyzed and has been shown to consist almost entirely of silica, with traces of lime and potash. From its remarkable occurrence in the hollows of bamboos the eastern mind has long associated it with miraculous powers.—London Standard.

Helping the Post Office

In a history of the great advance in postal methods accomplished by Sir Rowland Hill is given this anecdote: To the post office of at that time tiny Ambleside came one day a well to do man to buy a stamp to put on the letter he was about to post. "Is this new reform going to last?" he asked the postmaster. "Certainly," was the reply. "It is quite established." "Oh, well, then," said the man, resolved to give the thing generous support, "give me three stamps!"

Oil Prospects in Africa.

Mr. Cunningham Craig, the oil expert, who has been engaged by Government to investigate the oil resources of the Union, has been interviewed by a Bloemfontein paper and is reported to have said that there are possibilities but they are not very hopeful. He, however, hesitated to give a decided opinion before he had seen a great deal more of the country.

Australian Oil.

As far back as 1851, at the Great Exhibition in London, it manufactured in South Australia gained "honorable mention on account of its clearness, color and flavor." The industry is growing rapidly in South Australia, where the soil and climate are admirably adapted to the growth of olive trees.

New British Citizens.

Only 1,334 aliens became naturalized Britains during 1912, according to the recent report issued by the British home office. Russia supplied no fewer than 493, Germany 390 and France 23. Of New Britain's, 1,223 have taken up their residences in England and Wales, 523 of them living in London.

Ostrich Farming.

The ostrich industry has taken firm root in the Umvoti County of Natal, one firm alone having 1,500 birds. Some very handsome feathers, the product of the district, were exhibited at the recent Agricultural Shows in Maritzburg and Durban.

Aladdin's Lamp.

"Aladdin's lamp, in good condition and working order, price £500,000," is the inscription on a card attached to a curious looking lamp exposed for sale in the shop window of a Kingston (Eng.) antique dealer.

THE BALLAD OF YAADA.

[The following poem taken from Toronto Saturday Night, is said to be the last written by the late E. Pauline Johnson, the Indian poetess, who died in Vancouver a little over a year ago.]

There are fires on Lulu Island, and the sky is opalescent
With the pearl and purple tinting from the smouldering of peat.
And the Dream Hills lift their summits in a sweeping, hazy crescent,
With the Capilano canyon at their feet.

There are fires on Lulu Island, and the smoke, unlifting lingers
In a faded scarf of fragrance as it creeps across the day,
And the Inlet and the Narrows blur beneath its silent fingers,
And the canyon is enfolded in its grey.

But the sun its face is veiling like a cloistered nun at vespers;
As towards the altar candles of the night a censer swings,
And the echo of tradition 'wakes from slumbering and whispers,
Where the Capilano River sobs and sings.

It was Yaada, lovely Yaada, who first taught the stream its sighing,
For 'twas silent till her coming, and 'twas voiceless as the shore,
But throughout the great forever it will sing the song undying
That the lips of lovers sing for evermore.

He was chief of all the Squamish, and he ruled the coastal waters—
And he warred upon her people in the distant Charlottle Isles,
She, a winsome basket weaver, daintiest of Haida daughters,
Made him captive to her singing and her smiles.

Till his hands forgot to havoc, and his weapons lost their lusting,
Till his stormy eyes allured her from the land of Totem Poles,
Till she followed where he called her, followed with a woman's trusting,
To the canyon where the Capilano rolls.

And the women of the Haidas plied in vain their magic power,
Wailed for many moons her absence, wailed for many moons their prayer,
"Bring her back, O! Squamish foeman, bring to us our Yaada flower,"
But the silence only answered their despair.

But the men were swift to battle, swift to cross the coastal water,
Swift to war and swift of weapon, swift to paddle trackless miles,
Crept with stealth along the canyon, stole her from her love and brought her
Once aagin unto the distant Charlottle Isles.

But she faded, ever faded, and her eyes were ever turning
Southward toward the Capilano, while her voice had hushed its song,
And her riven heart repeated words that on her lips were burning,
"Not to friend—but unto foeman I belong.

"Give me back my Squamish lover, though you hate, I still must love him,
Give me back the rugged canyon where my heart must ever be—
Where his lodge awaits me, coming, and the Dream Hills lift above him
And the Capilano learned its song from me."

But through long-forgotten seasons, moons too many to be numbered—
He yet waited by the canyon—she yet called across the years,
And the soul within the river that through centuries had slumbered
'Woke to sob a song of woman's love and tears.

For her little, lonely spirit, sought the Capilano canyon,
When she died among the Haidas in the land of Totem Poles,
And you yet may hear her singing to her lover-like companion,
If you listen to the river as it rolls.

But 'tis only when the pearl and purple smoke is idly swinging
From the fires on Lulu Island to the hazy Mountain crest,
That the undertone of sobbing echoes through the river's singing
In the Capilano canyon of the West.

Looking Ahead.

"I suppose you take a deep personal interest in the education of your daughter?"

"Oh, yes. I am doing my best to have her fitted to be the wife of a man with a title. You see, my husband has patented an invention that is almost sure to make us immensely wealthy."

A Huge Seal.

What is reported to be the largest seal ever caught on the Cape Breton coast has just been taken at Mabou Mines by a father and son. It weighed 800 lbs. The skin measured 7 feet. 10 inches in length by 4 feet 4 inches in width.

Veterans All.

The "A" Company Connaught's Own Rifles, of Vancouver, claims the proud distinction of being the only company in the British Empire composed entirely of men wearing medals bestowed for active service.

Still the Veterans Apply.

There is no let-up to the applications for Fenian Raid veteran bounty grants at Ottawa. Up-to-date 10,800 have been paid the grant of $100 and fifteen thousand are under consideration.

Well Used to It.

More to Come.

"The fools are not all dead." "That isn't the worst of it. They aren't all born yet."

Women and Flowers.

A beautiful woman without brains is like a flower without perfume.

ROMANTIC ARUNDEL.

It is the Beautiful Home of "the Luckiest Child in England."

The luckiest child in England bears the sonorous names of Bernard Marmaduke Fitzalan Howard. This small 5-year-old boy already has the titles of Earl of Arundel and Surrey. He is heir to the dukedom of Norfolk, and as Earl of Norfolk will hold the premier earldom of England. His father, the Duke of Norfolk, is hereditary earl marshal and chief butler of England, premier duke and premier earl. In addition to his inheritance of noble titles the lad will come into one of the richest estates in England. The Duke of Norfolk is the owner of 68,900 acres of land in England, and is one of London's greatest landlords. Among his magnificent estates are Arundel castle, Sussex; Derwent Hall, Derbyshire, near Sheffield, and Beach Hill, Sheffield.

The little Earl of Arundel was the first of his line to be born at beautiful Arundel castle. The estate has the odd distinction of ennobling any person who may hold it. If it were sold, for instance, it would make whoever held it a nobleman. Even an aspiring American could enter the British peerage in this fashion. The little Earl of Arundel is the child of the second wife of the Duke of Norfolk, who was the Hon. Gwendolen Mary Constable Maxwell, the daughter of Baron Herries, heir to her father's title.

None of the family histories of the British peerage surpasses that of the Dukes of Norfolk in romantic interest. The first title in the family was the feudal title of the Earl of Arundel, granted about 1155 and confirmed in 1433. The seventh and eighth earls were attainted and beheaded, and John Maltravers, the first baron of that title, was proclaimed a tratitor, but later was restored to favor. The 13th earl was attainted, but the title was restored to the 14th, who later was created Earl of Norfolk.

The dukedom had its beginning in the house of Mowbray, the sixth baron of that title being made Duke of Norfolk in 1307. The fifth duke, dying without male issue, the title became extinct, but was later revived for Sir John Howard, who had married a daughter of the fifth duke and who also became earl marshal of England. The family suffered heavily under Henry VII. and Henry VIII., several members of it being executed. The titles, too, were forfeited. The feudal earldom of Arundel was not affected, however, and in 1660 Thomas Howard was restored to the dukedom, with the original precedence of the first duke.

The present earl is the 15th of his line. He is the foremost Roman Catholic peer in England. He held office as postmaster-general in the cabinet of Lord Salisbury. When the Boer war broke out he volunteered for the front but did not satisfy medical requirements and was rejected. Not content, however, he equipped a body of men at his own expense and, as their major, led them in the field until he received a dangerous wound and was invalided home. The Duchess of Norfolk is a direct descendant of the famous Countess of Nithsdale, who saved her husband from the block by changing clothes with him in his dungeon in the Tower of London and remaining behind while he affected his escape to France. The earl was an active participant in the abortive uprising of the Old Pretender against the Hanoverian dynasty in 1715 and was sentenced to death. The countess was afterward pardoned for her act of daring devotion.

Tradition declares that Arundel castle was erected by the giant Bevis and it receives first mention in the will of King Alfred. It has sustained many sieges, especially in the civil war of the 17th century and has sheltered and welcomed many Kings and Queens of England.

Guarding Queen's Jewels.

Great precautions are taken in guarding the jewels belonging to the lady members of the Royal family. When Queen Mary is staying at Buckingham Palace her ornaments are kept in specially-built strong rooms, and only two of the officials of the household can gain access to these. When travelling, the Queen's jewelery is always in charge of a lady-in-waiting. The Hon. Charlotte Knollys is responsible for the care of the jewels of Queen Alexandra, and the safes in which they are kept, both at Malborough House and at Sandringham, are so constructed that any attempt at burglary would set electric bells ringing all over the house.

King's Famous Vine.

The famous vine near Cumberland Lodge, Windsor Great Park, the exact age of which is not known, though its history has been traced back 140 years, now bears between 800 and 1,000 bunches of grapes. Many of the bunches weigh over 4 pounds. The vine, which is of the Black Hamburg variety, is still growing, and the vinery will soon have to be enlarged, although it has already a roof area of 2,400 feet. The King is said to prefer these grapes to any others.

Natal Sugar Industry.

In connection with the recent Agricultural Show at Durban, the Natal planters organized an exhibit illustrative of the sugar industry, which in point of interest was one of the chief features of the show. As indicating the importance of this industry, it may be stated that the number of employes engaged in the production of sugar is 21,000 persons, and that the value of the yield was £1,450,000.

Hare's Attack on a Cat.

A remarkable fight between a cat and a hare is described by a Folkingham (Lincolnshire) resident. Hearing the cry of an animal, he writes, he saw a cat attacking a young hare. The mother hare came to the rescue of its young, and, jumping on the cat, fiercely fought it for some minutes. The fight ended by the cat taking flight and being chased by the hare.

High Prices for Ostrich Farms.

A striking illustration of the profits in ostrich farming is found in the report in a local newspaper that a man in the Oudtshoorn feather district in South Africa has leased his farm for a period of ten years for $7,500 per year. In the same district 35 acres of land sold for $36,000.

SALUTE FOR KAISER WILHELM

Many Things of Interest to Boys and Girls—A Mystifying Trick With Figures—Bits of Useful Information, Riddles to Puzzle and Amuse.

In Germany, as in most European nations, militarism is very much more in evidence than in our own land of the free. In all the cities there are constantly to be seen soldiers in the uniforms of their respective arms of the service. Parades are a matter of everyday occurrence, and it is therefore not surprising that the German little folks, especially the boys, should become inbued with the military spirit. When the kaiser turns out at a review of troops there is always a large crowd to cheer him and his gaudily attired soldiers. At the recent Potsdam review the camera man snapped a couple of boys perched on a window ledge just as they were saluting the kaiser in true military fashion. One is in the uniform of a naval officer and the other in the gorgeous uniform of the royal hussars.

BOY SALUTING THE KAISER.

A Trick With Figures.

Desire a person to think of a number. Tell him to triple it and take the exact half of that.

Triple that half if the number is even, if odd multiply the larger half by three. Then ask him how many times that answer contains nine, for the answer will contain the double of that number of nines and one more if it be odd.

Thus, if the number thought of is five its triple will be fifteen, which cannot be devided by two without a remainder. The greater half of fifteen is eight. If we multiply this by three we have twenty-four, which contains nine twice. So we shall have 2 plus 2 plus 1 equals 5, the number first thought of.

Game of Mosaic.

A writing game for any number. Each writes a word on a slip of paper, and after the slips are mixed one of the players draws and reads them aloud in the order in which he draws them, and each player must write them down in the same order. Then each one must write a little story or paragraph, using the words in the same order. The game may be made more difficult by requiring the story to be of a specified length or written within a certain time, or it may be made easier by allowing the players to use the words in any order they please.

A Water Experiment.

Procure two pieces of glass about six inches square, join any two of their sides and separate the opposite sides with a piece of wax so that their surfaces may be at a slight angle. Immerse this apparatus about an inch in a basin of water, and the water will rise between the plates and form a beautiful geometrical figure called a hyperbola.

A Proverb.

"Haste makes waste," the sages say.
It's a proverb old, yet true each day.
If our work is done with haste
Something will surely go to waste.
Careful movements are what tell.
A hurried task is ne'er done well.

Let's read the proverb another way:
"Waste makes haste," they say.
Waste time in one way or another,
Don't waste the precious moments bright.
Read either way, the words are true.
They're worth a trial, I think. Don't you?

GREEN TOMATOES SWEET PICKLES

The following receipe togerher with a sample of the finished product was handed to the editor by a subscriber. After sampling the pickles the editor says he can recommend them to the world.

1 pk. medium sized tomatoes, 6 lbs. brown sugar, 1 oz. Cinnamon, 1 oz. of mace. Mix spice and put into bags. 2 oz. whole cloves stuck into tomatoes. Put sugar and spice into vinegar enough to cover and bring to boil, put in tomatoes and cook until a straw will pierce. Take out tomatoes and boil syup until as thick as molasses, then put tomatoes back again and boil a few minutes longer. Put into jars. Will keep indefinitely and can scarcely be distinguished from pears.

Ripe ones put up after the same receipt are delicious.

CANADA'S DAIRYING INDUSTRY

"The ice cream trade in Canada and the home consumption of milk is valued at over $30,000,000 a year, making it rank next in importance to butte-making and greatly surpassing in value the output of cheese. The Dairying output in Canada represents over $109,000,000 each year" writes Mr. J. A. Ruddick, Canada's the Journal of Commerce, Montreal.

There are now 3,760 cheese factories and creameries in the Dominion and 12 condensed milk and milk powder factories. The value of the Dairy output increased from $66,000,000 in 1900 to over $109,000,000 in 1910."

"There is every inducement for the farmers of Canada to continue in the business of milk production and to increase that production very largely."

SCHUBERT SYMPHONY CLUB GRERT SUCCESS

A very fair house greeted the Symphony Orchestra on Saturday evening probably told against the house but those who did attend certrinly listened to a very high class concert.

From the oyening number until the last notes of our grand national anthem ceased the audience were entertained and it was with a sigh that we heard the announcement that the next number would be the last.

It would be fruitless to specialize as each number was especially good and it seemed that the program of thirteen numbers each of which received an encore, was all too short.

It is to be hoped that the Club will visit our town again next year.
