DISTRICT EXHIBITION AT SALMON ARM

The Salmon Arm and Shuswap Lake Association Have a Fair That Is a Record Breaker. New Building Opened.

The Fall Fair at Salmon Arm was held on Friday and Saturday of last week. Glorious weather, a new and commodious building, a large attendance, and most of all a splendid display of exhibits, all combined to make it the best fair in the history of the town.

On Friday the judging of the exhibits inside the building was completed and the cermony of opening the building itself was carried through. This observance was graced by the presence of the Hon. Price Ellison of Vernon and J. P. Shaw, M. P. P., of Shuswap, the local member for the constituency. The building was erected at a cost of $6,500 and is a large two storey structure of the approved type for such purposes. Mr. Ellison in his speech at the opening intimated that at the rate the district was going ahead he was looking for another request before long for a grant in aid of a still larger building.

The fruit exhibit put beyond question forever the superiority of the Shuswap Valley as an apple country. There may be fairs that have bigger displays, but there are none that show a finer quality of fruit. The exhibit of pears and plums, too, was hard to beat.

The judging of stock on Saturday was of special interest to the lovers of a good horse. At the present stage of things the farmers in this part of the country are giving more attention to using horses than to breading them. D. Sinclair is about the only man who has gone in for raising well bred stock in the draft class. He had some fine samples of horse entered and won four first prizes.

The district displays were a new and successful feature. The first prize went to Tappen, with Canoe a very close second. The Silver Creek exhibit also got honorable mention.

The whole fair was a long step in an advance that shows no sign of halting or of resting on laurels already won.

Railway Construction.

The Grand Trunk Pacific Company's programme for 1912 will entail the expenditure of $20,000,000. On the main line, 185 miles will be built east of Fort George, and 150 miles west of Fort George, with 500 miles of branch lines. Hotels will be erected in Edmonton and Regina containing 150 rooms each, Twenty-five general stores will be built in various town, The arrival of steel is needed to complete 610 miles which are as follows: Regina south, 155 miles; Alberta coal branch, 20 miles; Regina, Moose Jaw, 100 miles; Topfield-Calgary, 90 miles; Prince Albert, 20 miles; Battleford, 50 miler; Cut Knife, 50 miles; Biggar-Calgory, 100 miles; and Brandon, 25 miles.

The Canadian Northern Railway Company's construction progromme for the year 1912 includes 1,053 miles. More than 10,000 men are at present engaged in the work, and as the season advances this number will probably be doubled. Operations will be carried on as follows:

Montreal to Hawkesbury, 58 miles; Ottawa to Ottawa River, 32 miles; West from Ruel, Ont., 100 miles; East from Port Arthur, 108 miles; branch lines and extensions in Alberta and Saskatchewan 400 miles; British Columbia, 75 miles; Sydenham, O., to Ottawa, 80 miles; relaying track on main line west 200 miles.

At a cost of $12,000,000 the Canadian Pacific Railway Comany have just let the contract for its new 185 mile line between Montreal and Toronto. Work has already started and it will take two years to complete. Branching from the present line at Glen Fay, fifteen miles west of Smith's Falls, the line will run south to touch Belleville, Trenton, Cobourg, and Port Hope, rejoining the present line at Agincourt, a little east of Toronto.

Revelstoke, B. C., September 27,—The Revelstoke city council has adopted a bylaw to augment the present gravity system of water supply with a 12-inch main, to run direct from Mountain creek into the city, at an estimated cost of $10,000. The report of an engineer states that the sources of supply on Mount Revelstoke provide ample of the purest water for a population of 50,000. The present additional main is required to cope with the growth of the city, and to enable the contract to supply the Canadian Pacific railway with water for industrial and engine purposes to be filled.

San Francisco Argonant: Judge M.W Pinckney at a recent banquet recalled an incident to show that there is some humor associated with such a thing as the law. In Dason City a colored man, Sam Jones by name, was on trial for a felony. The judge asked Sam if he desired the appointment of a lawyer to defend him. "No, sah," said Sam "I'se gwine to throw myself on the ignoance of the cote."

J. E. Fleming of Turtle Valley was among the visitors to the exhibition at Salmon Arm on Saturday.

KAMLOOPS TO KELOWNA

Contract for Canadian Northern Construction into Okanagan To Be Soon Let.

Vancouver, B. C., Sept. 29.—"A contract for the construction of the branch line from Kamloops to Kelowna, in the Okanagan valley, a distance of 131 miles, will be awarded shortly. It is our intention to have it built on the same high standard and with the expedition with which the main line is being extended across British Columbia," said Sir Donald Mann here to-day from the east.

He declared that Vancouver would be the company's terminus, while Port Mann would be the assembling centre and for car repairing ships.

Arrange Cheap Trip.

New Westminster, B. C. September 26,— Special rates have just been arwith the C. P. R. for all delegates and members attending the convention of the Canadian Highway Association in Winnipeg, from October 9 to 12. All delegates are required to purchase a full fare single ticket to Winnipeg and get a receipt for this from the agent, the receipt to be exchanged later for return transportation, after having been properly certified by the the secretary of the association.

The one-way ticket for the round trip is good only in case there is an attendance of 100 or over at the convention. If there is less than 100, one-third of the regular return fare will be charged. The attendance will probably be greatly in excess of the required number, and arrangements have been made for a hall that will easily hold four hundred people.

Mr. W. J. Kerr, President of the Canadian Highway Association, is now in Winnipeg arranging some of the final details and interviewing a few of the prominent speakers who have consented to address the meeting. A large number of photographs secured by the official photographer of the association, and also scenes showing Thomas W. Wilby in his automobile trip across Canada have been made into lantern slides and will be used to illustrate lectures at the convention.

Mrs. Lammers entertained for a few days recently Miss Harriet Moore of St. Paul, one of her old school friends. Miss Moore was making a trip through the mountain country. She came from Banff to Chase and was returning by way of California.

PYTHIANS IN CONVENTION

Will Inaugurate Publicity Campaign At a Cost of Ten Thousand Dollars.

The following extracts from a report read in the local lodge of the Knights of Pythias will be of interest to many beside those who were present:

The Twenty-Seventh Convention of the Supreme Lodge Knights of Pythias, was held in the City of Denver, Grand Domain of Colorado, Aug. 6-13, 1912, with 163 of the 165 Constitutional members present.

The following facts of interest are taken from the official reports submitted by Supreme Lodge officers:

The Order is included in 55 Grand Domains and 20 subordinate lodges not attached to any Grand Domain, but under the immediate control of the Supreme Lodge. On December 31, 1911, the total membership of the Order was 711,381.

During the year ending December 31, 1911, the number of new members initiated aggregated 48, 182.

The City of Winnipeg, Grand Domain of Manitoba, was selected as the place for holding the Supreme Lodge Convention of 1914, the date being fixed on the first Tuesday of August of that year.

The Supreme Lodge voted to inaugurate a systematic, world-wide campaign of publicity and promotion in the interests of Pythian Education and the extension of the Order, the campaign to be planned by the Committee on Pythian Education, of which committee George W. Penniman, of Mattapan, Mass., is chairman, in conjunction with the Supreme Lodge officers. By a vote of 132 in favor and 18 opposed, an appropriation of $10,000 for the next two years was made for this work, with the provision that no part of the appropriation may be expended unless the same has first been approved by the Supreme Chancellor, the Supreme Vice Chancellor, and the Committee on Finance.

Blind Bay Sports.

The sports and dance at Blind Bay on Friday, September 27th, reflected credit on the management. The arrangements for the day were in the hands of the Blind Bay hall committee, consisting of Mrs. Dunne, Mrs. Baines, and Miss D. M. Barnet.

Some interesting athletic events filled the afternoon. A spar and pillow contest was won by John Brown, of Celista. For the benefit of the uninitiated it is explained that in a spar and pillow contest two persons sit on a rail about six feet from the ground and indulge in an old fashioned pillow fight, the one who unhorses his opponent being the winner. The winning of this event was a great honor as it carried with it the world's championship.

The greasy pole event was won by Oliver G. Freeman. The prize was a bottle of Scotch, which the winner, being a novice in such things, mistook for beer, with results that need not be described.

The first honors in the hundred yards dash went to Flannigan, Reedman second.

The ladies' and gents' four oared boat race was won by Mr. A. and Miss D. M. Barnet.

The cigarette and button contest was another championship event, and was won in record time by A. Barnet and Miss Kate Thomson. The lady is equipped with a needle, thread and button, and the gentleman with a cigarette and match. They run towards each other from points one hundred yards apart and when they meet the gentleman hand the lady the match and cigarette and she hands him the other stuff. The lady smokes the cigarette and the gentleman makes proper use of the needle, thread and button. The pair that are finished first and back to the starting points are adjudged the victors.

The performance of the ladies showed the effects of long and careful training. Among the gentlemen some were stale from over training, while others were absolutely green.

The dance in the evening was better attended than the afternoon affair, and needless to say, was a success. Fxcellent music was furnished by Messrs. Buckingham, Thomson and Tom Brown, violinists, accompanied on the piano by Mrs. Baines and A. G. Reedman.

DEATH OF AGED RESIDENT

Hector McLean Passes Away at At the Ripe Old Age of 76 Years.

The death occured on Sunday, September 29th, of Hector McLean, sr. The deceased would have been seventy-seven years of age on the 9th of October. For many years he had been the victim of desease and for a long time had been a sufferer.

Mr. McLean was born in the state of New York, where he was married fifty-five years ago to Sarah Avery. In 1858 they moved west to Wisconsin, and later to Iowa. About ten years ago they came along with their son H. L. McLean to Gilpin, Alta. Two years ago they left Alberta for British Columbia, living for a short time in Kamloops before taking up their residence in Chase.

During their stay in this town both Mr. and Mrs. McLean have won the respect and confidence of all who knew them. The funeral services were conducted by the Rev. Mr. Sanford of Kamloops., who spoke appreciatively of his acquaintance with the deceased during the period of his residence in that town.

Delegate Appointed.

A special meeting of the Chase District Conservative Association was held in Robinson's hall on Monday evening, with the president, R. P. Bradley, in the chair. There was a good representation from Shuswap and Turtle Valley.

In the matter of the road to Notch Hill and Celista, the suggestion of Mr. Ina was agreed to that nothing be done until after the expected visit of Mr. Fordes, the government engineer.

It was decided to hold regular meetings of the Association once a month, to be called each month by the president and secretary. W, P. Pritchard was appointed delegate from the Association to attend the meeting of the Provincial Association in Revelstoke on October 24 and 25.

The meeting then adjourned.

A Good Move.

Vancouver, Sept. 30.—That a new deal is to be given to British Columbia Indians is forecasted by J. A, J. McKenna of the federal Indian department, who has for three months been investigating complaints in this province. Northern Indians during recent years have given a good deal of trouble notably threatening surveyors and land seekers and two or three times they have carried their grievances to Ottawa and London.

Mr. McKenna is conferring every few days with the provincial government and wishes to make some arrangement by which the good Indians will be enfranchised and received into full citizenship. Some period of probation may be devised. At any rate legislation along this line is to be introduced at the next session of the legislature.

Shuswap Items.

Walter Weaver has shipped his first crop of hay, amounting to two and a half carloads, and has cut a second crop of ten tons more.

Geo. A. Coburn is busy baling his hay. He has already shipped three carloads. His second crop this year will reach close to fifty tons.

A. G. Talbot is spending a few days at Grand Prairie.

L. C. Byers took down four pack and driving horses on Monday to Kamloops, where he is outfitting a hunting party that is going out into the Nicola country.

Band Re-organizes.

On account of its members being scattered more or less of late the band has been in eclipse for a few weeks past. The shadow passed off on Sunday afternoon and hereafter the constellation will shine with all its former brilliancy. W. T. Gordon resigned from the position of manager, thinking that he had borne the burdens of office long enough. The responsibility will now devolve upon R. J. Miner.

PRITCHARD IS MAKING PROGRESS

A Large Area In Crop and a Big Yield Gives New Impetus To Settlement. Are Now Asking for Bridge on South Thompson.

To most people living even as near to it as Chase, the name of Pritchard stands for a spur and a little freight shed with no agent, and one or two houses between steep banks of the South Thompson River. There is a surprise in store for such badly informed persons if they ever stop off at the little siding and spend a day on the adjacent benches.

Pritchard is twelve miles from Chase twenty-six miles from Kamloops on the main line of the C. P. R. It is the shipping point for one of the best agricultural districts in the Province. This district includes Martin Prairie, Duck Range, and Paxton Valley on the south side of the river, and a growing but still nameless settlement just north of the river and also the rich farming section known as Back Valley which is five or six miles north of the river.

Though throughout the whole district farming may be said to be still in its infancy the amount of crop harvested this season is enough to give an idea of the big possibilities of the future.

On the north side of the river there were cut 250 acres of grain beside a large acreage of potatoes and other vegetables. South of the river were 1000 acres of grain ripened as well as much that was cut green for fodder, and more than 250 acres of spuds. And the crops of both grain and potatoes were good.

The striking feature about the trend of settlement during the past year is the occupation of the vacant lands on the benches north of the river. These lands were formerly considered too high and dry for farming. The amount of produce now being shipped proves that such notions were a mistake.

Among the new settlers who have taken up land across the river within the last year or so may be mentioned the Phillips brothers, the Ramage brothers, and Messrs. Darrah' Wilson, Roe, Segall, H. Denny, Edwards, Whipple, Verge, Ruech, and R. J. Denny.

South of the river the new settlers are Messrs. W. Millner, W. Walker, Fred Carr, Edmund Carr, Boyde, Anderson, Gilbert, Garrett, Mattey and Deleeuw.

The most of these settlers are married men, often with families. Many of them are building quite roomy and comfortable homes, as the Adams River Lumber Company is in a position to know. That they are progressive and are going to make the landscape look different in a very few years is plain to be seen. The Deleeuw brothers have already this year shipped a carload of wheat, which is going some for new comers.

At Pritchard siding there is due to grow up a thriving little town. W. P. Pritchard is putting up a hotel in anticipation of the influx of more settlers and the growth of business at this point. J. T. Hutchinson has opened a general store that is doing a good business.

The case of the ownership of the Pemberton ranch, which has long been in dispute, has been carried before the Privy Council and must soon be decided. Then will follow the subdivision of this fine property of more than two thousand acres, situated directly across the river from Pritchard. When that day comes nothing but the good sense of the owners can save Pritchard from a real estate boom.

The thing the Pritchard people think they want most just now is a bridge across the river. The new settlers on the north side are not the kind that let you forget that they are there. With a government that seems to be fully alive to the growing needs of the rapidly developing sections of the Province, it should not be long before this keenly felt want is supplied.

GOLD STRIKE AT LOUIS CREEK

E. T. W. Pearse, as gold commissioner made a trip to Louis Creek this week in order to look over the scene of the recent rich gold discoveries there, which have created such a sensation in Kamloops.

The old commisioner visited Fison's camp, which has been in operation since July only and which has already taken out from their claims nearly $1000, and saw several pans of surface dirt washed, and in each case good color was obtained.

Nearly the whole of the creek is composed of black sand which is sure indication of gold. After lunch Mr. Pearse went over to Leroy's discovery claims where wonderful finds of gold have been made. In this section of the creek over a pound of gold was washed in four and a half days, and then only the surface gravel was taken, showing what rich deposits there must be down at bedrock.

While the claims already staked and in operation at Louis Creek are placer propositions, there is in the vicinity a likely looking quartz gold bearing ledge while the gold that is being found in the creek is coarse and very rough, which indicates that it has not travelled far. This fact points conclusively to the supposition that near the creek is a vast reef of gold quartz and every effort is being made to locate this.

Kincardine Review; "Tell the truth or I will," says W.R. Heast to Senator Penrose. It's a novel state of affairs when either one of them is reduced to that necessity.

The Catalogue Houses

Play up everything they have to sell. From these houses people buy things that would never have been purchased but for the mention in the Catalogue. The local dealer makes a mistake if he thinks that people will ask for what they want. The merchant should lead his customers up to new standards of comfort and convenience. He should not too much follow the lead of the public; he should be ahead of it and

CHAPTER III.

THE JESSIE.

TWO days passed, and Sheldon felt that he could not grow any weaker and live, much less make his four daily rounds of the hospital. The deaths were averaging four a day, and there were more new cases than recoveries. The blacks were in a funk. Each one, when taken sick, seemed to make every effort to die. They believed they were going to die, and yet, believing this with absolute conviction, they somehow lacked the nerve to rush the frail wraith of a man with the white skin and escape from the charnel house by the whale-boats. They chose the lingering death they were sure awaited them rather than the immediate death they were very sure would pounce upon them if they went up against the master. That he never slept they knew. That he could not be conjured to death they were equally sure—they had tried it. And even the sickness that was sweeping them off could not kill him.

With the whipping in the compound discipline had improved. They cringed under the iron hand of the white man. They gave their scowls or malignant looks with averted faces or when his back was turned. They saved their mutterings for the barracks at night, where he could not hear. And there were no more runaways and no more night prowlers on the veranda.

Dawn of the third day after the whipping brought the Jessie's white sails in sight. His partner was on board, vigorous and hearty from six weeks recruiting in Malaita. He could take charge now and all would be well with Berande.

Sheldon lay in the steamer chair and watched the Jessie's whaleboat pull in for the beach. He wondered why only three sweeps were pulling, and he wondered still more when, beached, there was so much delay in getting out of the boat. Then he understood. The three blacks who had been pulling started up the beach with a stretcher on their shoulders. A white man, whom he recognized as the Jessie's captain, walked in front and opened the gate, then dropped behind to close it. Sheldon knew that it was Hughie Drummond who lay in the stretcher, and a mist came before his eyes. He felt an overwhelming desire to die. The disappointment was too great. In his own state of terrible weakness he felt that it was impossible to go on with his task of holding Berande plantation tight gripped in his fist. Then the will of him flamed up again, and he directed the blacks to lay the stretcher beside him on the floor. Hughie Drummond, whom he had last seen in health, was an emaciated skeleton.

"Black water fever," the captain said. 'He's been like this for six days, unconscious. And we've got dysentery on board. What's the matter with you?"

"I'm burying four a day," Sheldon answered, as he bent over from the steamer chair and inserted a thermometer under his partner's tongue.

Captain Oleson swore blasphemously and sent a house boy to bring whiskey and soda. Sheldon glanced at the thermometer.

"One hundred and seven," he said. "Poor Hughie."

Captain Oleson offered him some whiskey.

"Couldn't think of it—perforation, you know," Sheldon said.

He sent for a boss boy and ordered a grave to be dug; also, some of the packing cases to be knocked together into a coffin. Having given the orders, Sheldon lay back in his chair with closed eyes.

"It's been fair hell, sir," Captain Oleson began, then broke off to help himself to more whisky. "Contrary winds and calms. We've been driftin' all about the shop for ten days. There's ten thousand sharks following us for the tucker we've ben throwin' over to them. They was snappin' at the oars when we started to come ashore. We got it from the water—water from Owga creek. Filled my casks with it. How was we to know? I've filled there before an' it was all right. We had sixty recruits—full up, and my crew of fifteen. We've been buryin' them day an' night. The beggars won't live, dash them! They die out of spite. Only three of my crew left on its legs. Five more down. Seven dead. Oh, h——l What's the good of talkin'?"

"That means another addition to the hospital. We've got to get them ashore somehow. Viaburi! Hey, you, Viaburi, ring big fella bell strong fella too much."

The hands, called in from the fields at that unwonted hour, were split into detachments. Some were sent into the woods to cut timber for house beams, others to cutting cane grass for thatching and forty of them lifted a whale boat above their heads and carried it down to the sea. Sheldon had gritted his teeth, pulled his collapsing soul together and taken Berande plantation into his fist once more.

"Have you seen the barometer?" Captain Oleson asked, pausing at the bottom of the steps on his way to oversee the disembarkation of the sick.

"No," Sheldon answered. "Is it down?"

"It's going down."

"Then you'd better sleep aboard tonight," was Sheldon's judgment. "Never mind the funeral. I'll see to poor Hughie. If you can see your way to it, come ashore tomorrow and lend me a hand. If you can't, send the mate."

"Right O. I'll come myself. Mr. Johnson's dead, sir. I forgot to tell you—three days ago."

Sheldon turned to his partner, calling for boys to carry him into the house. But Hughie Drummond had reached the end. His breathing was imperceptible. By mere touch Sheldon could ascertain that the dying man's temperature was going down. It must have been going down when the thermometer registered one hundred and seven. He had burned out. Sheldon knelt beside him, the house boys grouped around, their white singlets and loin cloths peculiarly at variance with their dark skins and savage countenances, their huge ear plugs and carved and glistening nose rings. Sheldon tottered to his feet at last and half fell into the steamer chair. Oppressive as the heat had been it was now even more oppressive. It was difficult to breathe. He panted for air. The faces and naked arms of the house boys were beaded with sweat.

Sheldon nodded his head, but did not look. Much as he had loved Hughie Drummond, his death and the funeral it entailed seemed an intolerable burden to add to what he was already sinking under. He had a feeling—nay, it was a certitude—that all he had to do was to shut his eyes and let go and that he would die, sink into immensity of rest. His weary body seemed torn by the oncoming pangs of dissolution. He was a fool to hang on. He had died a score of deaths already, and what was the use of prolonging it to twoscore deaths before he really died? Not only was he not afraid to die, but he desired to die.

But his mind that could will life or death still pulsed on. He saw the two whaleboats land on the beach and the sick, on stretchers or pickaback, groaning and wailing, go by in lugubrious procession. He saw the wind making on the clouded horizon and thought of the sick in the hospital. Here was something waiting for his hand to be done, and it was not in his nature to lie down and sleep or die when any task remained undone.

The boss boys were called and given their orders to rope down the hospital with its two additions. He remembered the spare anchor chain, new and black painted, that hung under the house suspended from the floor beams and ordered it to be used on the hospital as well. Other boys brought the coffin, a grotesque patchwork of packing cases, and under his directions they laid Hughie Drummond in it. Half a dozen boys carried it down the beach, while he rode on the back of

"THEY'RE COMING TO CHASE"

A SONG OF PROGRESS.

These things shall be! a loftier race
Than e'er the world has known shall rise
With flame of freedom in their souls
And light of knowledge in their eyes.

They shall be gentle, brave, and strong,
To spill no drop of blood, but dare
All that may plant man's lordship firm
On earth and fire, and sea, and air.

Nation with nation, land with land,
Unharmed shall live as comrades free;
In every heart and brain shall throb
The pulse of one fraternity,

New arts shall bloom of loftier mould
And mightier music thrill the skies,
And every life shall be a song
When all the earth is paradise.

These things—they are no dreams—shall be
For happier men when we are gone.
These golden days for them shall dawn
Transcending aught we gaze upon.

—JOHN ADDINGTON SYMONDS.

THE DEAD PAST.

It is a young country that has no past. And the country is not under the sun that has a past in which there are no mistakes.

It is an old country indeed that has no future. And the future always holds in its hand the opportunity of making amends for the mistakes of the past.

It is in the management of the affairs of a young country like ours that the most mistakes are likely to be made. So many problems are met for the solution of which there is no precedent. The phenomenal expansion of trade and population multiplies these problems. Gods, not men, would be required to guide the country's destinies without an error.

When we look to the past and its mistakes it should be with a purpose that has its eye on the future. The past is dead and solid and cannot be changed. The future is alive and plastic, and waits the impress that we shall give it.

LIVE CITIZENSHIP.

In the public business of British Columbia, and in that business every citizen should have a part, there are pressing questions that have had to wait. Some of them have waited too long, resulting in loss to the public that can never be repaired. Whether such is the fault of persons, or of the inevitable difficulties that beset the path of pioneers in government as in other fields, is hard to say.

The successful grappling with these questions by our public men will be aided by the intelligent interest of every citizen in public affairs. Leaders are not helped by those who follow blindly like sheep, for the pasture they expect to be led into. The best work of any leader must be based on the broad foundation of a wakeful, intelligent, critical interest of the people in public affairs. The true statesman does not resent but welcomes this attitude on the part of his supporters. In it he sees his country's hope for good government.

LET THEM GROW UP.

Many thoughtful persons will approve Dr. McKenna's idea of giving the Indians a chance to be men. There is no surer way of strangling any aspiration they may have toward manhood than to condemn them to perpetual childhood. Instincts of self reliance die when there is always stretched out the protecting hand of a too kind guardian.

By all means let those Indians who give promise of being able to make good have a try out as men and citizens. No people have any right to say to any other people: "Because you belong to an inferior race you can never be anything but children in the eyes of the law." What would become of some of us under similar treatment?

Sometimes men must be deprived of their freedom for reasons for which they are personally responsible. To close upon a man forever the doors of liberty just because he is an Indian is to take away from him the one chance he can ever have of showing that an Indian may be a man.

Winnipeg Commercial. It is doubtful if ever Western Canada trade had a more cheerful and optimistic tone. Practically the only unpleasing feature to contemplate is the possibility of difficulty being experienced by the manufacturers and wholesalers this fall in supplying adequately the demand for some classes of merchandise.

While the cucumber and tomato vines are still green in the gardens is the time to get the water pipes ready for January, and keep down the plumbers bills.

The Psalmist said in his haste: "All men are liars." There were evidently "snaps" in real estate in those far-off days.

Celista.

It was interesting to note how soon upon its completion the new wharf was utilized. On Friday last the whole front was piled full of baled hay, shipped by Chas. Riley outside of the district, besides a large amount of groceries and feed landed there for various parts of the district by W. F. Smith and Son of Notch Hill.

A man here has discovered a new fuel for gas engines. A few nights ago his engine refused to work. After trying all the various methods to coax it to go, he finally concluded to pour a half cup full of gasoline into the cylinder head. He poured a very liberal dose, of what he thought was gasoline into the engine, and turned the fly wheel. She started so quick that she nearly threw him overboard. He claims she turned over not less than 1500 revolutions a minute, and he had a difficult job to stop her. Throttle, switch, or timer, had no control or effect whatever. Later on after the excitement was over, he discovered he had poured nearly a cup full of Scotch Whisky into the bowels of that engine. He swears he bought the whisky at Chase.

Seymour Arm.

Mr. Albreeches, the steward of the Fruitlands messhouse, has left for the Peace River.

The Provincial "BOWSER" came as far as the wharf last week. He returned on the same boat.

Herb Tansley and Cecil Dore went to the Salmon Arm fair. BOTH returned single as they are hard to get to the hitching post.

Messrs. Whitman Dore and Tansley have formed The Petrified Cucumber Combine. The petrified cucumbers will be used for ties in the double-tracking of the C. P, R.

Dan Cameron and Scotty Smart are doing patrol duty at the mouth of the river, taking turns singing " Der Wacht und der Rhine." They are on the lookout for log pirates.

All lumbering records for the west were broken at Sicamous last week. Joe Seagram, Hiram Walker, and John Dewar, were the record breakers. Given the opportunity, these boys can break any old record.

Archdecon BEER of Kaslo paid us a visit during the week. He was looking for a suitable place for a vineyard. If Mr. BLUERIBBON or BUDWEISER BEER would only locate here, we would welcome them with open arms, but mostly with open mouths.

J. McKenzie BOATES and A. G. KING have gone to the plateaus where caribou are said to be so numerous that one has to take a club to drive them out of the way. We state this on very bad authority.

At night the foreshore of the lake resembles the coast of Dover in 1066 when Norman Williams and his band of land grabbers chased the John BULLS of those days from their watch fires. The fires here are made by the numerous settlers who are clearing land.

The annual Pow-wow of the B. C. school Trustees in Kamloops, wrestled with the question of Teachers Pensions and Truant officers. The local trustees did not attend as they are satisfied that one of our young men will never let our teacher reach the Pension stage.

Sorrento

Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Davidson are expecting Miss Motherwell on Monday the 30th for a short visit.

Mrs. S. W. Jackson is expecting her sister, Miss Miller, from Vernon for a short visit.

Celista is petitioning for a bi-weekly mail, instead of the weekly one and from appearances will get its wish granted.

Mr Brown of Scotch Creek Flats, sold twelve tons of potatoes. And one of carrots, three tons of turnips, one ton of parsnips and half a ton of beets, to the Adams River Lumber Company of Chase B. C. this week.

Friday Regattas are surely for people of leisure! And the Blind Bay regatta robs the Sorrento School of most of its pupils for the day. Whereas, Saturday, being a holiday would give all working people a chance, even the teachers!

Mr. J. Burrill of Blind Bay has about eighteen tons of splendid potatoes ready for shipping, and a ton of onions. The Bay has done wonderfully well this year in small fruits; and hundreds of crates of raspberries, currants, gooseberries and strawberries have been shipped by the farmers.

Miss Rodes visited Blind Bay last Saturday and has secured a fine lot of half plate photographs of Mr. Reedman's house, orchard, apple trees, etc, in addition to a few lovely views of the lake. She also sampled some lucious pears and grapes grown by the community of Blind Bay generally. Cantaloupes and melons are there now in abundance and of fine quality.

The Right Revenend Canon Perkins of Westminster Abbey, England. spent a few days in Sorrento this week. He is in this country to look after the interests of various missions of the Anglican Church and was so enraptured of the beauties of Sorrento that he is seriously considering the buying of a homesite here.

The wedding between Miss M. Motherwell of Alert Bay, B. C. and Campbell Davidson. M. D, fourth son of the Honorable Chief Justice Davidson, Superior Court, Montreal, and brother of C. C. Davidson, Esqr. of Sorrento, B. C. will take place on Thursday, Oct. 3rd, at St. Mary's Church, Sorrento. The Rev. G. Stuart, officiating.

Pritchard.

R. J. Denny is shipping large quantities of produce to the coast.

J. Deleeuw shipped a carload of wheat a week ago.

The two Misses Phillips have gone to Vernon on a business trip.

Mrs. Seigal is spending a couple of weeks at the coast.

A recent visitor in Pritchard was Mr. Jones, of Calgary.

Our town had a visit recently from C.P. R. officials, who were looking after the interests of their road.

Mrs. G. Frazer, who has been away for some time returned home last week.

The implement shed being built by G. J. Gilbert for W. P. Pritchard is nearing completion.

Frank Martin has hired Mr. George Barnes thrashing outfit and is thrashing on Duck Range.

Spud digging is the order of the day now. Altho the price is not very good as yet, we hear talk of 4 and 5 pound potatoes is not unusual.

We understand that Mr. Barnes of Chase has secured the contract for putting up the Government school house at Martin Prairie.

Mr. J. Upton has returned to his home in Calgary after spending a few weeks in Pritchard and the surrounding district.

Haying is about finished in the back Valley and everyone is talking about the big crops they are having there this year. Threshing is now in progress in that section.

Railway workmen are putting in a new culvert at Neds Creek. The C. P. R. have some bigger and better things than culverts on the program for Pritchard.

The railway has given Pritchard a freight rate of its own. Formerly shippers from here paid the Ducks rates on east bound and the Shuswap rates on west bound freight.

Mr. Robert Bell of Penceketan Valley was here on Thursday. He took some samples of rye 8ft. high, timothy and other grasses 6ft. high into Kamloops, to decorate the arches. And incidentily show what can be raised there It was certainly a surprise to the visitors and we understand that several went through the valley to see the land it was raised on.

Celista.

Albert Beguelin has sold his yoke of oxen to Grant and Ballard of Chase. He intends to buy a team of horses instead.

Quite a number of Celista people attended the sports and dance at Blind Bay on the 27th inst. All came back highly delighted with the good time they had.

Barney Holly has bought a new Gray engine, a 4½, H. P., from W. T. Smith & Son of Notch Hill. H. A. Fowler is installing in his boat for him.

Mrs. Mottishaw returned to Vancouver on Friday last. Mr. Mottishaw however intends to hold the homestead down during the winter months. Mrs Mottishaw and family, we believe, intend moving here in the spring.

It has been noticed, that the last two or three trips R. P. Bradley has made up the lake, he has given Fowler,s Landing, a wide berth. Never mind Bob, you may have a swifter motor boat next season, ha! ha! ha!

The wharf at Celista is finished, and all the crew have been discharged, excepting engineer J. A. Allan, who is still here in charge of the outfit. W. C. Cameron should be congratulated on the excellent job he made. The freight shed on the end of the wharf, is nicely painted and looks swell.

On Monday night the 23rd inst, the wharf boys gave a dance in the school house, to celebrate the completion of the wharf. Quite a number of people from the outside districts, and a few of the boys from Chase attended No need of furthur details, Celista still upholds her reputation for popular dances.

W. T. Smith was ten minutes late with the mail on Friday. He claimed the mail bag was more heavily laden than usual, and occupied more time to load. When the bag was opened, besides the usual quantity of mail! lo and behold, it contained four copies of Smith's and Bohannan's new paper, "The Limit" They were immediately grabbed and the contents devoured.

another, his arms around the black's neck, one hand clutching a prayer book.

While he read the service the blacks gazed apprehensively at the dark line on the water shore which rolled and tumbled the racing clouds. The first breath of the wind, faint and silken, tonic with life, fanned through his dry baked body as he finished reading. Then came the second breath of the wind, an angry gust, as the shovels worked rapidly filling in the sand. So heavy was the gust that Sheldon, still on his feet, seized hold of his man-horse to escape being blown away. The Jessie was blotted out, and a strange, ominous sound arose as multitudinous wavelets struck foaming on the beach. It was like the bubbling of some colossal caldron. From all about could be heard the dull thudding of falling cocoanuts. The tall, delicate trunked trees twisted and snapped about like whiplashes. The air seemed filled with their flying leaves, any one of which, stem-on, could brain a man. Then came the rain, a deluge, a straight, horizontal sheet that poured along like a river, defying gravitation. The black, with Sheldon mounted on him, plunged ahead into the thick of it, stooping far forward and low to the ground to avoid being toppled over backward.

"'He's sleeping out and far tonight.'" Sheldon quoted as he thought of the dead man in the sand and the rainwater trickling down upon the cold clay.

So they fought their way back up the beach. The other blacks caught hold of the man-horse and pulled and tugged. There were among them those whose fondest desire was to drag the rider in the sand and spring upon him and mash him into repulsive nothingness. But the automatic pistol in his belt, with its rattling, quick dealing death, and the automatic, death defying spirit in the man himself made them refrain and buckle down to the task of hauling him to safety through the storm.

Wet through and exhausted, he was nevertheless surprised at the ease with which he got into a change of clothing. Though he was fearfully weak, he found himself actually feeling better. The disease had spent itself, and the mend had begun.

"Now, if I don't get the fever," he said aloud and at the same moment resolved to go to taking quinine as soon as he was strong enough to dare.

He crawled out on the veranda. The rain had ceased, but the wind, which had dwindled to a half gale, was increasing. A big sea had sprung up, and the mile long breakers, curling up to the overfall 200 yards from the shore, were crashing on the beach. The Jessie was plunging madly to two anchors, and every second or third sea broke clear over her bow. Two flags were stiffly undulating from the halyards like squares of flexible sheet iron. One was blue, the other red. He knew their meaning in the Berande private code: "What are your instructions? Shall I attempt to land boat?" Tacked on the wall between the signal locker and the billiard rules was the code itself, by which he verified the signal before making answer. On the flagstaff gaff a boy hoisted a white flag over a red, which stood for, "Run to Neal island for shelter."

That Captain Oleson had been expecting this signal was apparent by the celerity with which the shackles were knocked out of both anchor chains. He slipped his anchors, leaving them buoyed to be picked up in better weather. The Jessie swung off under her full staysail; then the foresail, double reefed, was run up. She was away like a race horse, clearing Balesuna shoal with half a cable length to spare. Just before she rounded the point she was swallowed up in a terrific squall that far outblew the first.

All that night, while squall after squall smote Berande, uprooting trees, overthrowing copra sheds and rocking the house on its tall piles, Sheldon slept. He was unaware of the commotion. He never wakened, nor did he change his position or dream. He awoke a new man. Furthermore, he was hungry. It was over a week since food had passed his lips. He drank a glass of condensed cream thinned with water, and by 10 o'clock he dared to take a cup of beef tea. He was cheered also by the situation in the hospital. Despite the storm there had been but one death, and there was only one fresh case, while half a dozen boys crawled weakly away to the barracks. He wondered if it was the wind that was blowing the disease away and cleansing the pestilential land.

By eleven a messenger arrived from Balesuna village, dispatched by Seelee. The Jessie had gone ashore halfway between the village and Neal island. It was not till nightfall that two of the crew arrived, reporting the drowning of Captain Oleson and of the one remaining boy. As for the Jessie, from what they told him, Sheldon could not but conclude that she was a total loss. Further to hearten him he was taken by a shivering fit. In half an hour he was burning up. And he knew that at least another day must pass before he could undertake even the smallest dose of quinine. He crawled under a heap of blankets and a little later found himself laughing aloud. He had surely reached the limit of disaster. Barring earthquake or tidal wave, the worst had already befallen him. The Flibberty-Gibbet was certainly safe in Mboli pass. Since nothing worse could happen things simply had to mend. So it was, shivering under his blankets, that he laughed until the house boys, with heads together, marveled at the devils that were in him

Woman's Column

The lady editor of this column is some two or three thousand miles from the Tribune office. Communications and questions to the column will be welcomed, though the necessary time must be allowed for them to be answered. The Tribune is not responsible for opinions expressed by the editor of the "Woman's Column."

A young woman of education and intelligence, a short time ago a public school teacher in a New England city, now passes her days in an insane asylum, where she ceaselessly wails of the lover she has lost. That lover, hale and prosperous, is married and lives in the west. He was formerly engaged to this girl. She assured him tearfully that he was her soul-mate, then and forever, but she could not marry him in opposition to her parents' wishes. He continued for a time faithful to this soul relation, but he wanted to be married, and after the fashion of twentieth century young men, made a second choice since he could not win his first. The tragedy that followed would have been quite in order one hundred years ago. Today we spare invectives against the cruel parents and the faithless lover. We wish the poor girl had been more independent, and had married the man of her choice, or failing that, had sensibly accepted the consequences. We heartlessly conclude that the young man has a lucky escape from a weak minded wife.

The age is witnessing a wholesome reaction against morbid tendencies. Where is the tearful creature whose feelings were always getting hurt? Where the interesting invalid? Where is the woman whose lover deserted her, and who ever after sat at the window binding shoes, or doing some equally tedious stunt? These people once had their place among us. Now when we meet a case like the one recorded above its very rarity classes it with the abnormal.

Now-a-days we believe more in the equilibrium of forces, in the mental and spiritual realms as well as in the physical. Life holds the balance and what we cast into one scale is restored to us in the other. Therefore, when all is not well with us, we suspect that the cause of this may lie within ourselves; so the less said the better.

Thank Heaven for this current wholesomeness. It marks a point in the evolution of our race. The eighteenth century woman cried and wrung her hands when things went wrong; she of the twentieth century laughs and doesn't care. Nor is this because she lightly refuses to face conditions or accept responsibility. It is because she knows that the smallest circumstance is controlled by universal law, and that the end of that law is harmony and beneficence. "Let the victory fall where it will, we are on that side."

"Pity me not, you make me pitiable,
Grieve not for me, 'twill set me grieving too;
Come not forebodingly but courageful,
And speak the shining word that's strong and true.
If you would have me fearless, have no fears;
If you would have me light and sorrow free,
Then give your steps the music of the spheres,
Make your eye steadfast as Eternity."

JUSTITIA.

To the Editor of the Woman's Column.

Dear Madam:

If a "mere man" is permitted to venture within the sacred precincts of the "Woman's Column" I would like to claim your indulgence for a paragraph or two.

Your column is pretty good stuff and I like to read it even if it is intended especially for fairer readers with better manners. There is a suggestion I wish to make that you may at some future time see fit to take up and discuss in your department of the Tribune. The reason, perhaps, why we men of the west so often prefer to remain out of touch with the "eternal feminine" is that we don't want to get too close up against her eternal fussiness: In the hand to hand struggle with untamed nature that fills our days west of the Rockies the "domestic arrangements and table manners" of a girls' boarding school would be a long handicap.

In the west more than in the east we judge a man by other things than his dress and his table manners. The hard conditions of frontier life put the emphasis on what a man is and on what he can do. I suspect that ten years of eating in cook shacks and Chinese restaurants would leave their mark on the decorous manners of even the editor of the "Woman's Column."

Yours etc.,
WESTERN BACHELOR.
