Best Ever Fall Fair Awaits Visitors

Provided the weather man dispenses the brand of climate he has favored with up to the time of going to press visitors to Creston's fall fair on Saturday are most certainly assured the best holiday outing of the year.

To start with the exhibition itself. Lhe list of entries that had been received up till Thursday noon unmistakably indicates that the showing in each of the fourteen classes of the fair will excel anything in Creston's fall fair history. This is possibly more noticeable in the ladies' sections, where the display in needlework and cooking will assuredly be both larger and of better quality. Another class that should be the best ever is vegetables where the going is strong in many of the sections, particularly the competition for the best collection.

The school children's competition will be a show in itself. From each of the five school districts represented there is a heavy entry list already, and Mrs. Foster, who will do the judging, is certainly going to have some trouble placing the red and yellow tickets on the map drawing and writing. There is every indication that the juvenile class, too, will be filled, especially in the needlework lines.

In the outdoor classes the show will certainly be stronger than a year ago. Numerous attractive special prizes in the cattle and poultry classes are attracting attention, while the youngsters are keenly interested in the Bankers' Competition in both calves and pigs.

The directors and those in charge of the several classes have things well in hand so that all exhibits will be staged expeditiously, and Secretary Walmsley is working overtime to have the books complete in every detail so that the judges can get their work under way at 7 a.m. Saturday, thus assuring the opening ceremonies starting prompt at 1 p.m.

Hon. John Keen, M.P.P., will be in charge of the opening feature, which he has the knack of handling in happy fashion. C.P.R. Supt. Hall of Cranbrook has also accepted an invitation to be present and will lend a hand in this connection.

For the amusement of the crowd there will be a line of races for the children and adults, as well as other athletic contests, while at 3.30 Porthill and Creston teams will hook up for the baseball championship of the Kootenay Valley.

For those wishing to get home early Manager Rodgers has provided a showing of pictures at the Peekin at 4 p.m. and has, without doubt, one of the best programmes yet shown. The second performance will be at 7.30.

Starting at 8 p.m. prompt there will be a grand dance in Mercantile Hall, with music by Creston 4-piece orchestra. This affair is in charge of a committee composed of Messrs. Bennett, Allen and Garland, which is a guarantee that the dancers will be well looked after.

Visitors to town will have no trouble in securing meals. In addition to the hotel and three restaurants both the Methodist and Presbyterian ladies' aids are serving luuches, and are prepared to take care of a crowd fifty per cent. bigger than was in evidence a year ago.

Every detail is well in hand to make Saturday 1920's last, best holiday outing and from all appearances the crowd in town will be in keeping with the excellence of the entertainment offered.

Sirdar

After mature deliberation Mayor Daly announces that he will support the present prohibition legislation. With true Irish characteristic he is agin the government control, and justly so, after his experience with the war time sugar rationing.

Mr. and Mrs. Jack Cameron were Sunday visitors at Creston, making the trip in their Ford car.

W. Watcher, who is in charge of the blacksmith work of the two road crews, was also a week end caller at his home in Creston.

Due to having two services at Creston Rev. J. S. Mahood omitted Church of England service here on Sunday.

Although coke shipments are not unduly extensive the movement of freight, both east and west, is the heaviest Sirdar has experienced for some time.

Now the rainy weather has let up apple picking operations have been resumed. The Pascuzzo ranch will head the list of apple producers this year, with a crop that looks good to run to almost 500 boxes.

Sirdar was favored with a brilliant display of northern lights on Tuesday night. Old timers take them as a sure sign of fall weather almost up till Christmas.

From Cranbrook comes word that Conductor McBurney has just purchased the residence of Dan Murphy, at one time a well-known engineer on this run. With the all essential property qualification Dick should speedily rise to the dignity of an alderman at the divisional city.

Mr. and Mrs. Brewis and Mr. and and Mrs. Loasby jonesed it to Creston on Sunday evening for the harvest thanksgiving services in Christ Church.

Now that the shipping of fruit and vegetables, both by express and freight, has assumed considerable proportions there is an insistent demand for the removal of the station to the north side of the yard, which would do away with carrying the stuff across the tracks. With the completion of the new government road the situation will be still further aggrevated—the yard with its several tracks lying between the station and the highway

Local and Personal

DENTISTRY—Dr. Lillie will start another year's work in Creston by starting here Tuesday, Oct. 5th, for the balance of the week.

Geo. Johnson was at Nelson on Tuesday, combining a business visit with a look over the fair which opened in that city that day.

The mortgage sale of the Creston Hotel, which was annonnced to take place at Nelson on Monday, has been postponed until Monday, Oct. 18th.

LIVE FOWL WANTED—Will buy live hens, chickens ,ducks. Top cash price paid. Dong Barney, Pacific Restaurant. Creston—next Mawson Bros. store.

John Blinco is a Nelson visitor this week, attending the fruit fair and the annual session of Kootenay Beekeepers' Association, of which he is a director.

Mr. and Mrs. Teacher of Fort William, Ont., who are on a holiday trip in the west, are spending a few days in Creston, guests of Mr. and Mrs. John Blinco.

The Ladies' Aid of the Methodist Church will serve meals on fair day, Saturday, Oct. 2nd, in Speers' Hall. Dinner from 12 to 2, and supper from 4 to 6. Meals are 50 cents.

Mr. and Mrs. Ray Crisler, who left here about three years ago to take up residence in California, got back on Saturday, on a short visit with the latter's mother, Mrs. Ryckman.

Earl Swanson is a visitor at the Nelson fair this week, where he will probably take a hand in the inter-city school sports, which are one of the features of this year's exhibition.

FOR SALE—Mattresses and cot nearly new; three tables, two creamers, and other household effects, Mrs. W. K. Brown, Creston.

Rev. R. E. Pow, who resigned as Presbyterian pastor here about three years ago to take charge of the Y.M.C.A. at Cranbrook, has just tendered his resignation to that organization, and will probably re-enter the ministry again.

Crestonites who in the past have stocked up with Canadian silver wherewith to finance visits in Spokane, will in future be out of luck in this respet. Spokane is now flooded with Canadian silver and the banks slapped on a 20 per cent. discount.

Lister

Col. and Mrs. Lister left on Monday for Nelson, where they are seeing the sights at the fruit fair and visiting friends.

The baptisimal service, which had been arranged for Sunday afternoon, had to be cancelled, owing to the unavoidable absence of some of the parents. It will probably be held on the 17th. There are at least half a dozen infants who will be presented.

Ivpr Christenson has just commenced work on the erection of a commodious bungalow for W. Powers.

W. Scott, who has been a visitor at coast points the past couple of months, got back last week. Another resident to get home is J. Paul, who has been in Alberta on harvesting operations for a couple of months.

Jos. W. Bell, president of Lister G.W.V.A., has just been notified of his appointment to take charge of the prohibition referendum vote in this constituency on October 26th, and is at Kaslo this week arranging matters in this connection with the registrar of voters.

Lister will be out in full force at Creston fair on Saturday. Some of the ranchers will be showing poultry and the children are making a big display in the school district's competition.

Now that the L.S.B. has discontinued its freight and passenger service between here and Creston, a loca company has been organized known as Lister Transportation & Traction Company, and they are handling the work, with E. Thompson, former truck driver, in charge. Last week they purchased a Chevrolet light delivery car at the Embree garage, Creston, which is admirably adapted for the carrying of both passengers and freight.

The whist feature to the dance at the schoolhouse on Saturday night attracted a big turnout, which included delegations from Creston and Canyon. The prize winners at cards were Mrs. A. W. Brain and H. G. Smith, while Miss Hurl and John Head distinguished themselves by landing the booby trophies. Excellent music for the dance was supplied by Mesdames Lister and Christenson and Mr. Noble, while the floor was equally well handled by Jas. Turnley.

Erickson

Miss Connie McCarthy of the nursing staff of St. Eugene hospital, Cranbrook, is a visitor here this week with her parents.

F. V. Staples, now resident at Grand Forks, was a week-end visitor here. He states that the rainy spell we had here also prevailed in the Boundary country—only it rained there in the daytime and that fruit and vegetable harvesting was at a standstill for almost ten days.

Mr. Atkinson of the Fruit Growers' Union staff is making headquarters here at present, in charge of central pack operations at the new warehouse.

Mrs. Jas. Maxwell got back this week from Claresholm, Alta., where she had been to attend the funeral of her brother, who had been killed in an accident in the States, and whose remains were brought to Claresholm for burial.

Shipping at the Erickson station is averaging five cars a week at present. This week sees the last of the Wealthy apples moving, and a start made on the later varieties. While the former have not come up to expectations it seems safe to predict that the late September rains will enlarge the output of winter apples and that, on the whole, the crop will be well up to the late summer estimate.

Erickson Union Sunday school had their annual picnic at Arrow Creek bridge on September 17th. It was a splendid success, with an attendance of about forty pupils, teachers and parents. Rev. and Mrs. Knox of Creston, the superintendent, Mrs. Birney, and the parents attended well to the amusements of the youngsters, as well as the supper and other refreshments. There were races of various sorts, volley ball and many other forms of sport. Thanks are due to those who assisted with provisions and conveyances. Extra thanks are due to T. Crawford for taking a full load of children to the picnic. Come again next year, Tom.

The Man Hunter

William Farnum has a thrilling story in "The Man Hunter." This is the big picture that will be shown at the Peekin Theatre, Wednesday, Oct. 6th.

Mr. Farnum runs up and down the entire scale of emotions in this de luxe production. He begins as a wealthy American in London, quickly drops to the position of a steerage passenger, and then becomes a longshoreman in New York. Finally he is a stowaway and is wrecked on a tropical island with an oil king's daughter and the one man in the world whom he hates—the man who had started him on his downward slide by selling him a huge block of stock which was supposed to be worthless. This man is killed in a terrific fight on the island. When Mr. Farnum and the girl return to New York the former begins his upward climb, because he soon learns that the stock which was practically worthless when he bought it has become very valuable; in fact, he is a millionaire.

The oil king's daughter has loved him despite his poverty; but it is not until the money barrier is swept away that he even thinks of marrying the girl.

Secretary's Report Women's Institute

While, possibly, not as spectacular in spots as some of the reports submitted by other institutes at the annual conference here last month, the summary of the Creston organization's activities for the year ended in August indicates that the local ladies have undertaken much useful work. The report as compiled by the secretary, Mrs. J. W. Hamilton, follows:

"At the date of the last conference our membership numbered 69; it is now increased to 96, of whom 10 are juvenile members. The average attendance during the year hus been 36. A year ago last April we started a lending library free to members of the Institute and now have over 300 books most of which have been donated by members of the Institute and friends.

"The Institute this year has started a campaign for a public health nurse in the district and has succeeded in getting a health committee formed from local organizations, and this committee have the matter now in hand. We have been of assistance in one or two cases of distress in the neighborhood.

"On the day of the fall fair last year we helped the Board of Trade entertain visitors from Nelson by putting up a banquet for them the proceeds of which helped the Institute. We gave an entertainment to provide funds for the G.W.V.A. to furnish a clubroom. Hot lunches have been installed in the school. Once a year we havr a social meeting with a musical programme, and one meeting during the year is given up to the junier members who recite, sing or play, and they also serve the tea.

"During the year we have had a demonstration on dry cleaning and canning meats and fruits by Miss Olive Hayes—taking three days—which was very well attended and much appreciated; We have had an address from Dr. Henderson on the care of children between the ages of two and twelve years, and also a health talk by him. Mr. Schofield of St. John's Ambulance Association gave an interesting address. Various instructive readings have been given by the members from Mrs. Parson's Manual and the Busy Women's Handbook, and papers have been read on "Finance in Relation to Women's Citizenship," and on the growing of bulbs. We have established a visiting committee to the public and high schools whose recommendations have been brought before the notice of the trustees."

Timberley, his face white, turned half towards the path; then, as suddenly he turned again, in his eyes a look of mingled subjection, admiration, wistfulness.

He took a step towards Dorkin with hand outstretched, then stood rooted to the spot.

From out the thicket that hedged the grove there bounded a great grey animal with round head set with tufted ears and big blazing eyes. With a snarl it sank, belly close to earth, and crept slowly towards Timberley. But even as the big lynx pierced the sward with long claws preparatory to making the spring, Dorkin acted. Like a flash he leaped forward and grasped the great cat by the neck. She turned with a spitting snarl, then lay shuddering, her amber eyes still on Timberley's face. With his free arm Dorkin pointed towards the lake.

Timberley backed slowly away until he felt the path beneath his feet. Then he spoke. "Of course, if it's to be a fight, so be it. Hereafter, I'm out to get you and yours, my friend, and so I warn you."

Not until he was safe in his canoe, and his Indian guide had put a good distance between him and the shore, did Timberley breathe easily. Then, twisting about, he gazed sombrely back across the hardwood forest stretching like a pale-green ribbon across the deeper verdancy of the coniferous trees.

"Musko," he said, addressing the Indian, "if you had tried to buy, at a big price, something belonging to another man, and he refused to do business, what would you do?"

The Indian grunted and paddled steadily for some moments before he answered. "I go to Abe Dalton and say, get um, ugh."

"Musko," said Timberley admiringly, "you're a sensible man."

Once more his eyes turned towards the hardwoods, now melting and blending softly with the fire and tamaracks in the far distance.

He sank back comfortably on the bearskin in the canoe's bottom and gave himself up to reflection. "Well," he mused grimly, "I never expected to find this young savage of an animal keeper and Francis Stanley one and the same, I'll be jiggered if I did. Talk about putting ones' head into a lion's mouth, egad! I did it with a vengeance. I'm a damn fool, anyway. I'll never come nearer getting killed, and miss it, than I did to-day." He threw the much mauled cigar away and drew his pipe from his pocket.

His eyes swept the placid lake, marking the rush-lined shallows, the dusky cloud-shadows swimming in the depths, the forest-crowned shores rising height on height, and lastly, the round, blue-tinged peaks of Old Creation Hills standing sentinel of the woods and waterways of the boundless shagland.

"Musko," he asked, his eyes on the mountain peak, "how long have you lived in this forest?"

"Heap long time," grunted the Indian. "All the time I live here."

Timberley smiled. Something indefinable gripped him tight and held him as in a vise to face the strange reality of a bigness, a sublimity that awed and overpowered. His empty pipe was clenched between his teeth.

"Think of it," he said, half aloud, "think of it working that change in a man. He came here broken in body and spirit. It took hold of him and remade him, that's what it did."

"You speak?" asked the Indian.

Timberley sat erect. "Yes," he said, "I spoke. I asked you if you were a Christian, Musko?"

"No, Cree," answered the guide proudly.

"Oh!" Timberley filled his pipe, lighted it, and smoked quietly. By and by he asked another question. "Who made all this forest and these lakes, Musko?" It surprised him to hear himself asking these questions, but it relieved him. He must say something.

The Indian had drawn in his paddle and sat looking at Timberley gravely.

"Me no understand," he said. "You say um some more."

Timberley twisted his head so as to watch his guide. "I asked you who made all this big forest and these lakes?" he repeated.

"Injun no tell," returned Musko. "Heap big woods and lakes here before Musko."

"You mean to say you have never heard of God?" asked Timberley sternly. "Well, you must be a"—he checked himself—"a heathen," he finished, "a primitive savage for sure."

The Indian flashed him a look of resentment. "Ugh! Me say God same's white man, me say um when canoe snag, when camp-fire burn blanket. Musko swear God some and damn lots, same as Dalton and white trapper. Him no savage what you call um, no."

Timberley shook his head. "Your religious training has been sadly neglected, my red-skinned friend," he said with mock sadness. "When I get through with the work in hand I'll start a little missionary society up here. Run the canoe into yonder lagoon, Musko. I promised to pick up my amiable friend, Haight, somewhere hereabouts."

As he spoke a man stepped from among the cedars lining the shore and stood waiting for the canoe to beach. He was of middle age with hair white at the temples. Like Timberley, he was dressed in tweeds. His face was long and wore an habitual scowl. He stepped forward as the boat grated on the pebbles.

"It's a wonder you came back at all," he said snappishly. "What luck up yonder?"

Timberley stepped from the canoe and knocked the ashes from his pipe before he answered.

Then he said gently, "My dear fellow, I had the very best of luck."

"Then you got away with it?" eagerly.

"It?" Timberley raised his brows: "Oh, yes, I got away with it, although for a minute or two I was not quite sure that I would." He laughed shortly. Then, noting the other's darkening face, he threw his forced levity from him with a shrug.

"There's no use trying to do business with that man Dorkin, Bob," he said crisply. "He won't sell us so much as a mangy chipmunk."

"He won't? Why—why, you just said that you got away with it."

"Meaning my life, Bob; and let me tell you, I was lucky, believe me, I was. If you ever happen to see a big fat baby toddle up against a rattlesnake, you might think of me facing that long-haired tiger in his den. Do you know who that man Dorkin is," he asked sharply.

"No, I don't," answered the other coolly, "and what's more I don't care the smallest kind of damn who he is."

Timberley laid a heavy hand on his thin arm.

"Well, you're going to start caring right away. Just as soon as I speak his name to you, you are going to lie down on those pine needles and throw a nice little fit, that's what you're going to do."

Haight paused in the act of putting a lighted match to the little pile of dried branches he had placed in the open.

"What are you driving at?" he asked.

"[illegible]" answered Timberley [illegible] four year or so ago, through lack of a [illegible] head, you're no longer."

The match in the other's fingers charred out leaving a smarting blister. [illegible]

"You mean?" he gasped.

"That the real heir is the keeper and owner of Hardwoods Retreat, Francis Stanley, alias Dorkin."

CHAPTER VIII.

"Musko," called Timberley to the guide, "you'll find a fish-rod and fly-hook beneath the bearskin in the stern of the canoe. Get them for me, like a good fellow." Then, turning to the man who sat hunched before the unkindled pile of wood, "Haight, I glimpsed a pretty little stream back along the shore a piece. Come along and we'll try for a trout. I want to have a little talk with you where the black flies are less persistent; the little beggars hang close to these bushes, and down yonder it seems more open."

He rubbed a swollen spot on his neck and reached for the canvas case which the Indian had brought. "You might kindle that funeral pyre yonder in about three quarters of an hour, Musko," he suggested, "and have the water boiling. And, Musko, make the tea strong, real strong. My nerves have had a severe shock. I crave for a strong and bitter draught, oh, noble red man."

"Umph," grunted the Indian, "me make um plenty strong, you bet."

"Right, brave warrior," encouraged Timberlay. "Come along, Haight."

The two threaded their way through the thick growing cedars in silence, save for an occasional muttered but significant something by Haight that qualified the hungry black flies. At length above the swaying drone of the trees there arose a swishing murmur, and by and by there flashed into view a wide stream of tumbling water that bubbled and gleamed in the high sunlight.

"Isn't that beautiful, Haight?" cried Timberley, his face aglow. "Isn't thaat simply magnificent? 'Men may may come and men may go, but I go on forever,'" he quoted, as he jointed his rod and selected a Silver Doctor from his fly-book.

Haight, standing moodily by, seemed to feel little of his friend's enthusiasm. The information which Timberley had so crisply handed him a little time back had, in a sense, robbed him of all appreciation of anything save the unpleasant position in which he was now placed. He sat down at the root of a lone pine and moodily nursed his sharp knees in his long arms.

Had A Picturesque Exhibit

A Vivid Portrayal of the Beauties of Canadian Rockies.

The Canadian National-Grand Trunk Railways this year combined to make one of the most striking displays in his history of the Canadian National Exhibition. The exhibit, which occupied two of the three main sections of the railway building, gave a new vision of the extent and resources of the Dominion.

One of the sections was devoted to a vivid portrayal of the beauties of the Canadian Rockies at the point where the peaks reach their greatest heights. The grandeur of the Yellowhead Pass and its surrounding peaks was shown on a scale commensurate with the magnitude of the great mountain chain. The visitor stands under the shadow of a giant cedar, the branches of which arch over the whole of the ceiling. At his feet are the Maligne Falls and the turbulent silver stream of the Maligne River, threading its way among the foothills. In the background is a panorama 100 feet in length, of the magnificent mountains in Jasper National Park and Mount Robson Park, the two great scenic reserves through which the Canadian National and the Grand Trunk Pacific Railways make their way to the Pacific Coast. Mount Edith Cavell, the beautiful peak named by the Dominion Government in memory of the martyr nurse, is in the centre of the panorama, and is supported by Mounts Geikie, Fitzwilliam, Pyramid, Roche de Smet and Roche Miette, with the massive Mount Robson, the monarch of the Canadian Rockies, looming up in the distance.

The atmosphere of Canada's mountain world was retained in a wonderful way, and it was difficult for the observer to realize that he was not viewing the scene from some favorable vantage point in the Rocky Mountains. The system of lighting was arranged to give, in various periods of the day, the effects seen among the mountains at sunrise, noonday and evening.

In the second section of the exhibit the working the Canadian Government marine was featured in connection with the great network of railway lines that is now known as the Canadian National system. Adding a graphic touch to this display, the ships of Canada's merchant marine were seen flashing actual wireless messages, and these were picked up in turn by no fewer than 43 wireless messages. In order to make this possible the Marconi Company installed an aerial system above the railway building to receive messages from all points, these being handled by an operator housed in an exact replica of a steamship's wireless cabin. Simultaneously the messages were spelled out in Morse by a wonderful system of miniature lamps spread over a gigantic map of the Dominion of Canada. In addition to the wireless telegraph apparatus there was kept working the new system of wireless telephony. Expert engineers were on hand to explain in full the working of the various forms of apparatus.

The Canadian Government department of marine also assisted in making the Canadian National exhibit complete, and showed a remarkable series of aids to navigation, including large revolving lighthouse lanterns and beacon lights, fog horns, etc.

Emphasis was also placed in the exhibit on the opportunities awaiting the settler along the lines of the Canadian National Railways, the whole display being excellently planned and carried out on a high scale of excellence.

Will Develop Oil Fields of Alberta And Saskatchewan.

The Canadian Press is informed that a contract has been entered into by the Imperial Oil Company, Ltd., and the Great West Natural Gas Corporation, Ltd., for the development of Saskatchewan and Alberta as natural gas and oil fields. It is understood that both companies have agreed that if gas is found the Great West Company gets it, and if oil is located, the Imperial Company will get this. It is stated, as a result of wide research, the prospect for successful operations is best in a certain area easily accessible from Regina.

WOMEN AS POLITICIANS

By CHARTER MEMBER

In the days when the suffrage-for-women propaganda was being freely disseminated, the world was told that women would do away with political corruption, and that a new era in politics would arise with their freedom. It is doubtless early yet to judge the results, but present indications tend to prove that human nature is the same irrespective of sex. Women are just as easy a mark for the mob organizer, just as uniformed on vital matters on the franchise, just as gullible, just as keen on having their elections framed up beforehand as men.

Perhaps no more numerous examples of these facts have occurred in a single gathering than at the Women's Institute at Creston recently. That women, much as they may wish to conduct their meetings in a businesslike way, are not familiar with parliamentary procedure and need the assistance of the mere man was evidenced by the number of times the Superintendent of Institutes was called upon for a ruling.

That there was some sort of a campaign put on for the advisory board member election was evident by the fact that only two names were submitted from the fifteen branches represented, even after it was explained that any member of any Institute could be nominated. Now the act governing Women's Institutes is the same as for Farmer Institutes and it seems a pity that more candidates were not chosen in all fairness to districts other than the one.

That women do not pay much attention to Federal, as distinguished from Provincial, laws was very evident when the resolution came up asking that all post offices be put under the Civil Service—under existing regulations an impossibility, and a great hardship were such the case.

Then there was the resolution regarding the teaching of First Aid in the High Schools. The ladies who were responsible for the resolution evidently being quite in ignorance of the immense amount of work already on the High school curriculum, and the fact that the subject in question is covered in the public school. It took the combined efforts of ex-school teacher delegates and a Creston High school girl to persuade them that the matter was being attended to in an efficient manner.

The ex-school teachers made, on the whole, a very creditable showing as they were well versed in Canadian History and government regulations. For instance when two well meaning members introduced a resolution dealing with Bible reading in the public school, the ex teachers stood pat and refused to pass a resolution sure to introduce separate school questions. It also developed that teachers who have taught in several provinces seems to have a broader conception of the national problems. In fact a man who wants leisure to farm successfully and yet wants the family represented in the body politica might do worse than marry a school teacher.

In attending the Creston convention a mere onlooker missed a lot of points of interest from a psychological view in studying the women as politicians. For instance during the election of the advisory board member there was a good deal of by-play that probably had a special significance to the iniated.

There was the question asked by a very quiet member as to weather the Superintendent would explain why the advisory board had been abolished. The chairman ruled this question out of order so suddenly that it must have aroused the suspicions of many. Private inquiries have since elicited the information that the department gave out that the advisory board was dissolved owing to its having been formed without due regard to the act. Going further it appears that this irregularity might never have been considered if members of said board had been satisfied to merely advise but their ambitions seem to have outstripped the anticipations of mere men. When the contest had assumed a most interesting feature the leading lady took occasion to give up her earthly activities and her colleagues, entrenched as it were behind her coffin, made it impossible for said mere men to deal further with one aspect of the situatian so it was considered advisable to leave the matter in statu quo until time and tide obliterated the impressions of the past.

Members who attended the Nakusp convention last year may recall a resolution aiming to put all moneys under the control of the Advisory Board. The resolution was supposed to have been introduced by the Nelson Institute but was repudiated by the Nelson delegates in all its undertakings.

This year the same idea, couched in different terms, was introduced by Creston Institute and asked that a central provincial executive be appointed for Women's Institutes. A good old time politician would have suspected a frame-up in this resuscitation. Fortunately some delegate, accidentally or intentionally, asked the question as to whether this would do away with the government grant? As the reply was in the affirmative the resolution was at once dropped.

But what an extraordinary contradiction in terms to have representatives of the only government subsidized society, and one owing its inception and development to the government, asking to be put in the precarious position of charitable organizations. It may be asked if some of the members are forgetting the object of the society which is to assist in the dissemination of agricultural knowledge and afford a link between the department of agriculture and the women on the farm.

NEWS OF KOOTENAYS

The Italians at Fernie have just opened up a co-operative store in that city.

The Free Press claims that Fernie now has about 1000 school pupils, and a staff of 25 teachers.

Frache Bros., the Grand Forks greenhouse men, have just stocked up with 200 tons of coal and coke to heat their premises with this winter. This expense item only $1700.

Cranbrook council has given chief of police Adams and his staff until October 10th to make the place respectable, and no extra pay for the overtime effort that will certainly be necessary to turn the trick, either.

The Free Press is demanding that the C.P.R. extend the station platform in that city so that passengers can get aboard the rear—end passenger cars in winter without wading through snowdrifts up to the knee.

This year Penticton high school has an attendance of about 65, and the the Herald almost stopped the press to announce that this term—for the first time in history—one of the high school classes has more boys than girls enrolled.

One night recently a couple of suit cases full of clothing were stolen from the C.P.R. station platform at Vernon. Penticton is demanding an affidavit to this effect before swallowing the story. Editor McDougall believes there was other stuff than clothing in the baggage.

Remove the Discrimination

Certain statements of fact contained in the recent decision by the Board of Railway Commissioners upon the application of the railways of Canada for largely increased freight, passenger and sleeping car rates call for serious consideration by the people of this country. The facts referred to are of vital concern to the people of the West, and they must be the active agents in forcing attention to them with a view to reform, but they are, in a broad national sense, matters of importance to the East as well as to the West.

It is not the intention of this article to discuss the merits of the case for increased rates; that is a matter to be decided in the light of costs of operaion, wages paid, and costs of material used which the Railway Commission is well qualified to judge for itself. Apparently the Commissioners were thoroughly convinced that increased rates were fully justified and indeed a necessity if the railways were to be efficiently maintained.

But in granting increased rates the Railway Commission authorized a 40 per cent. increase in Eastern Canada and a 35 per cent. increase in Western Canada. In explanation of this difference between the East and the West, the Commissioners, in their judgment, pointed out that the existing rates were from 13 to 18 per cent. higher in West than in the East and they, therefore, authorized a five per cent. smaller advance in the West than in the East in order to partly remove the discrimination against the West which it was thus frankly admitted existed.

The action of the Commissioners was right so far as it went, but it did not go far enough. If discrimination against the citizens of any one section of this Dominion exists it is the duty of the Board of Railway Commissioners, as a national body, to proceed to order the removal of that discrimination. One of the reasons for the creation of the Railway Commission was to put an end to discrimination rates in Canada and to see that even-handed justice was accorded to all.

The failure of duty on the part of the Railway Commission is all the more marked and inexcusable because in this same judgment it is also frankly admitted that costs of railway operation per ton or per car mile are lower in the West than in the East. If there is any justification whatever for a national administrative body to sanction discriminatory rates, then the lower rates should apply in the West where costs of operation are lower, than that the East should enjoy the lower rates where the costs of operation are higher.

We hear a great deal these days in the nature of appeals to the Canadian people to develop a national spirit. They are urged, and rightly so, to think nationally rather than Provincially; to view national questions, problems and policies in a big way as they affect the whole country, rather than from a narrow and selfish sectional standpoint. The East and West are urged to get together, and emphasis is laid on the necessity of closing the gap which unfortunately exists in sentiment and upon economic issues between the manufacturing and financial East and the agricultural West.

Such appeals are all right and quite legitimate. It must be frankly recognized that the best interests of Canada demand the creation of a truly national spirit and sentiment in order to promote the sound and rapid development of the Dominion. Such a spirit is absolutely essential to the making of a real nation. But nothing is to be gained by shutting our eyes to the fact that inculcation of national sentiments is not possible so long as the people of one-half of the country are made to suffer loss because of unfair discrimination enforced against them by a national body which is supposed to know neither east nor west in the discharge of its administrative functions and powers.

If a Federal Government Commission admits that discrimination is practised against one section of the Dominion, and it sanctions that discrimination, it is proceeding along a course which makes for disunion and effectively kills the movement for the development of a broad and sound national spirit. The inevitable effect of such action is to arouse a spirit of antagonism in the West against the East, and to give force to a renewal of the old demand for the division of the Railway Commission into two sections, one for the East and one for the West—something that is the reverse of national.

The feeling prevailing in the West that many Eastern people and interests look upon the West as a cow to be milked for their benefit, and that they have about as much regard for the West as they would have for a cow, is not allayed but increased when a national body like the Board of Railway Commissioners authorize the perpetuation of discriminatory railway rates against the West—a discrimination which by their own judgment they show to be uncalled for upon any economic grounds and, therefore, rankly unjust and unfair.

In the interests, not of the West alone, but of all Canada in order that a real national spirit and a sense of nationhood may be developed, this discrimination should be removed once and forever. It is the duty of Parliament to amend the Railway Act, if necessary, specifically forbidding any and all such discrimination.

PALLID CHEEKS MEAN ANAEMIA

New Health Can be Obtained by Enriching the Blood Supply.

When a girl in her teens becomes peevish, listless and dull, when nothing seems to interest her and dainties do not tempt her appetite you may be certain that she needs more good blood than her system is provided with. Before long her pallid cheeks, frequent headaches and breathlessness and heart palpitation will confirm that she is anaemic. Many mothers as the result of their own girlhood experience can promptly detect the early signs of anaemia and the wise mother does not wait for the trouble to develop further, but at once gives her daughter a course with Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, which renew the blood supply and banish anaemia before it has obtained a hold on the system.

Out of their experience thousands of mothers know that anaemia is the sure road to worse ills. They know the difference that good red blood makes in the development of womanly health. Every headache, every gasp for breath that follows the slightest exertion by the anaemic girl, every pain she suffers in her back and limbs are reproaches if you have not taken the best steps to give your weak girl new blood, and the only sure way to do so is through the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.

New, rich, red blood is infused into the system by every dose of these pills. From this new rich blood springs good health, an increased appetite, new energy, high spirits and perfect womanly development. Give your daughter Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and take them yourself and note how promptly their influence is felt in better health.

You can get these pills through any dealer in medicine or by mail postpaid at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Crop Outlook in the Okanagan.

Whilst it is estimated that the production of apples in the Vernon, British Columbia district will this year fall somewhat below that of 1919, pears, it is stated, will double last year's crop, and the peaches, cherries and apricots will maintain last season's figures. Onions and tomatoes and potatoes have a larger acreage this season than ever in the history of the district, and the output of all three are expected to constitute records.

MEIGHEN SPEAKS AT GRANBY.

Believes Farmers' Party Has Joined Hands With Malcontents and Restless Elements.

Granby, Que.—Addressing a large audience in the open air here, Premier Meighen once more treated of the tariff question and largely reiterated his announcement of the previous evening. At the outset he explained that he was not making any attack on the sitting member for the constituency of Shefford, George Boivin, who, being deputy speaker, was outside of politics, but he wanted to address them as citizens in Canada.

Mr. Meighen reiterated the previous statement as to the policy of the Government in prosecuting the war and the subsequent policy in the re-construction period. As far as he was concerned, he abided by what had been done, with the problem of conscription, during the war, and the re-establishing of soldiers having been solved, the Government was now facing another issue, that of the tariff. Of this question the Government was being challenged, although the people had decided on it three or four times already. The Premier proceeded to show how the Farmers' party was committed to free trade, and that the strength of that organization was enhanced by the undoubted fact that it had joined hands with and dragged behind it, all the malcontents and restless elements of the country.

"I do not say that the leaders of the Farmers' party, much less their followers, want to overturn representative government," said the Premier, "but I do say that those with whom they have aligned themselves, as for instance, the Winnipeg and Vancouver seditionists, had as their goal the upsetting of the system of government in Canada. They almost achieved success in these efforts and, consequently, I say the addition of the group to the Farmers' party constitutes the party which is the most formidable antagonist of the present administration."

Mr. Meighen went on to demontrate how Canada suffered from an adverse trade balance with the United States, and argued strongly for a tariff, protective of industries and Canadian workmen. He emphasized the increasing industrial importance of this province, which, he said, was rivalled only by Ontario and not surpassed by that province.

Transfer Track to be Replaced

Railway Board Orders Re-installation of Transfer Track at Conquest.

Ottawa.—The re-installation of the transfer track at Conquest, Sask., between the lines of the Canadian Pacific and the Canadian National Railways, is ordered by the Railway Commission in a judgment written by Commissioner J. G. Rutherford and concurred in by the other members of the board. The work is to be completed not later than November 1 of this year, on the understanding that in the event of the situation being later relieved by the linking up of the Canadian National lines with the Grand Trunk Pacific Regina and Riverhurst subdivision, the matter may again be brought before the board.

Hearings in this application, which was made by the Saskatchewan Stock Growers' Association, Moose Jaw, were held at Saskatoon, Regina and Moose Jaw, and it was shown that the livestock industry in the district affected was seriously handicapped by the back-haul necessitated by the abandoning of this transfer track in December, 1917.

HEART SO BAD WAS NOT SAFE TO LEAVE HER ALONE

Miss Eva P. Yateman, Krugersdorf, Ont., writes: — "I feel that I must write and tell you of the benefit I have received from Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills. About four years ago I was taken terribly bad with my heart, nerves and fainting spells, and was down in bed for about six months. I doctored with two different doctors and seemed to get better, although the fainting spells would not leave me. I would take such terrible fails, wherever I was, that it was not safe to leave me alone at any time. At last I decided to resort to proprietary medicines and took several different kinds, but seemed to receive but little benefit from them. One day noticing the advertisement of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills, I decided to try them, and before I had taken more than two boxes I could see they were helping me. I have taken about ten boxes, and am almost cured of those terrible spells. I sincerely feel that your medicine has proved a blessing to me, and I advise any one troubled with their heart to try them, as I am confident they will find relief."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50c a box at all dealers or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

ISSUE REPORT ON SHOOTING OF COUN. LYNCH

SHOT RESISTING POLICE.

Prominent Limerick Sinn Feiner Meets Death at Hands of Constables.

Dublin.—An official report issued concerning the shooting of Councillor Lynch, a prominent Limerick manufacturer, in his hotel room in Dublin has been issued It says that 12 soldiers accompanied by two members of the Royal Irish Constabulary went to the Royal Exchange Hotel to arrest Mr. Lynch. As they opened the door to Mr. Lynch's room, a shot was fired at them and the military replied to the fire, Lynch falling dead. He was shot through the mouth.

The report states that he was violently resisting arrest when he was killed.

Mr. Lynch's home in Killmallock frequently had been raided.

A motor lorry containing six policemen was ambushed near Lalinch by nearly a hundred men. Two military lorries came to the rescue. The attacking party fired and two soldiers are reported to have been killed; 30 arrests were made. Two houses in an adjoining village were burned, supposedly as a reprisal.

The military authorities have commenced an investigation of the Balbriggan affair. A public inquiry will be held at which citizens of Balbriggan having knowledge of the trouble will be urged to testify. The "Black and Tans" in the vicinity of Balbriggan, have been ordered confined in barracks.

The damage done by the "Black and Tans" in Balbriggan, in their raids, after the shooting of two police officers in that town, is estimated at £200,000. Among the dwelling destroyed by the raiders were the residences of Mrs. Frank White, sister-in-law of Eamonn De Valera, and Lawrence Flannagan, brother-in-law of De Valera.

Eight armed and masked men entered the Ulster Bank, Dublin, and held up the staff. They escaped with a considerable sum of money.

"Spies and informers beware," was the label pinned to the clothing of a man found in a field in County Carlow.

Canada Has Many Phones

Is Second Among Nations in Use of Telephone Service.

Ottawa.—An interesting comparison showing the popularity of the telephone in Canada has been made by officials of the Bell Telephone Company in connection with that company's application for increased rates, now before the Board of Railway Commissioners.

The figures compiled show that Canada stands second only to the United States in the matter of per capita use of the telephone. The Postmaster-General of Great Britain, in a recent report, gave the figure for Great Britain as two telephones for every hundred of population. On the same basis the United States has 13.6 telephones per hundred. Canada comes next with 10.8 per hundred people; Sweden, 6.4; Norway (1917), 4.4; Germany (1914), 2.2; France, 1.0; Italy (1917), 0.3.

Favored as Candidate For Presidency to Succeed Deschanel.

Paris.—Premier Alexandre Millerand was chosen as a candidate for the presidency to succeed President Deschanel, who resigned as chief executive of the republic because of ill-health, by the joint caucus of members of the Senate and Chamber of Deputies in the Senate Chamber.

Two of the candidates who were prominently mentioned as possible successors to Deschanel declared themselves out of the running. The men were Leon Bourgeois and Raoul Poret ,the presidents respectively of the Senate and Chamber of Deputies.

Before former Premier Clemenceau left Paris on his hunting trip to India, he said, according to the Petit Parisien, that he regarded Premier Millerand as the man best qualified for representing France in the eyes of foreign people.

Traffic in Drugs

Far-Reaching Regulations Affecting the Drug Traffic in Canada.

Ottawa.—By an order presented in a special issue of the Canada Gazette some very far-reaching regulations affecting the drug traffic in Canada go into force immediately. Every doctor and druggist within the Dominion is to be circulated with a view of rounding up drug addicts, and measures are to be adopted which will make the carrying on of illicit drug traffic practically impossible.

That the government health officials are sincere in their effort to clean up the drug evil and also that they are enjoying nothing short of wonderful success is shown by some figures given out. Compared with the three months ending June 30 last year, the amount of cocaine imported into Canada for the same period this year has dropped from 2,376 ounces to 605 ounces. Codiene has dwindled from $12,284 worth to $5,816 worth. Morphine has dropped from 11,058 ounces to 3,978 ounces and opium from 7,931 pounds to 992 pounds.

Reds Occupy Series of Villages in Grodno Region.

London.—An official communication sent out by the Russian Soviet Government at Moscow, says:

"In the Grodno region our troops repulsed enemy attacks along the whole of the front, and on assuming the counter-offensive occupied a series of villages. Red troops have occupied Stary-Chardrui and Bukhara and have seized the whole region."

FUEL SITUATION IS IMPROVING SAYS CARVELL

IS NO NEED TO WORRY.

Daily Imports From U.S. Have Recently More Than Trebled.

Ottawa.—Much of the worrying which is being done with regard to Canada's fuel supply for the coming winter is needless. That is the view of Hon. F. B. Carvell, chairman of the Board of Railway Commissioners, under whose control coal imports and exports were placed by the Dominion Government during last session.

During the period from April 1 to September 15, 1920, Eastern Canada imported 114,658 fewer tons of anthracite, but 1,852,065 more tons of bituminous coal than in the same period of last year, and as conditions on the other side of the international boundary are improving, so the imports of coal are increasing.

Since the Board of Railway Commissioners took charge of the fuel situation, the imports daily have been more than trebled.

Want Menace Removed

Veterans Object to U.S. Cruiser on the St. Lawrence.

Kingston, Ont.—The United States Government has a cruiser on the St. Lawrence with guns mounted for the purpose of suppressing violations of the liquor laws, according to a protest of the local branch of the Army and Navy Veterans, who have complained to the Federal Government that this is a violation of the treaty between the United States and Great Britain. The Veterans say the use of navy guns on narrow waters of the St. Lawrence is a menace to shipping and Canadian homes.

The cloudy and decidedly rainy weather that prevailed all last week came to an end with the full moon on Monday, when things cleared up magnificently and haymaking resumed on Tuesday morning in full force. Numerous citizens can attest to the excellence of the venison, and the much appreciated generosity of the lucky hunters.

The trustees had a furnace expert from Nelson here last month making an examination of the school heating plant, which invariably fails to throw sufficient heat on the very cold days. The expert's diagnosis of the trouble is that the cold air registers of the furnace are too small, and he has been instructed to secure and install registers of sufficient size to remedy the trouble.

Carpenters are busy this week on an extension to the S. A. Speers store. A new 28 x 28-foot warehouse is being added at the rear, and the intention is to include the present warehouse in the main store building. When this is accomplished the store will have floor selling space of 75 x 40 feet. It is the intention to considerably enlarge the boot and shoe and clothing departments.

The War Trophies Board has just advised that Creston will be supplied with two machine guns for soldiers' memorial decorative purposes, and that these will be shipped from Ottawa about the tenth of the month. Almost a thousand towns and cities have made similar requests and some trouble is being experienced in getting enough discarded artillery to supply the demand.

Last week the enrollment at Creston public school touched the high mark of 159 pupils, with almost 50 in the primary room. His health is about normal, but it is essential that he be located handy to the special medical care he is still receiving.
