THE CRESTON REVIEW

Vol. XIII. CRESTON, B. C., FRIDAY, MARCH 11, 1921 No. 6

Wynndel

Carl Carlson got back on Friday from Arrow Park, where he has been for the last three months, and is now busy getting things in shape for spring operations on his ranch here.

O. J. Wigen has men at work extending his overhead irrigation system the latest extensions to put another two acres under water, thus giving him at least seven acres of irrigated berries for 1921.

The trustees report work complete on the enlargement and renovation of the school and the erection of a new residence for the teacher. Miss Topliss is at present handling over 40 scholars and if the attendance keeps on growing another room will shortly have to be provided.

F. Bacon arrived from Calgary, Alta., late in the week with a couple of teams of horses, wagon, etc., preparatory to starting tie making operations on a stretch of some 450 acres of well timbered area on Duck Mountain. This week he unloaded a car of feed, and he states he will shortly be employing quite a big crew of tie makers.

Monrad Wigen is having the sawmill overhauled and put in shape for the season's cut. His camp at Cottonwood will close about the middle of the month.

Mr. and Mrs. Joy, who have been at the Price tie camp down Sirdar way, have returned to their ranch, and he is getting ready to build a new barn on the place.

Mrs. R. C. Eakin got back from Crenbrook on Friday, where they had been on a few days' visit.

Joe Sabanosh, on the old Coleplace is getting ready to erect a new barn on the ranch.

The old time social evening under United Farmers auspices on Saturday night was a splendid social success, and also enjoyed a financiol intake of about $10. There was a short concert programe in which Miss Nora Hagen contributed a recitation, and were songs by Miss D. Butterfield, A. W. Mason and E. S. Butterfield. After supper dancing was the order of the evening, Matt. Hagen being amongst those who helped out with music for the hop.

Sacrament of the Lord's Supper will be dispensed at the Presbyterian service at the schoolhouse on Sunday afternoon, March 20th, with the service in charge of Rev. J. A. James.

Sirdar

Station agent Goodman is expected back in a few days from a three week's holiday, which he has spent at Tacoma and other Pacific coast points. Mrs. Goodman and family accompanied him.

Yardmaster Loasby, who has been at Cranbrook hospital for at least five weeks, was able to leave that institution at the end of the week and is at present at Creston on a visit, but has to visit Cranbrook once a week to see the doctor. Mrs. Loasby is with him, and both are doing fine, though it will possibly be a couple of weeks before they return to Sirdar.

S. Pascuzzo was a business visitor at Creston on Monday. He has just purchased the old C.P.R. oil house which he will remove and rebuild into a garage. Another of his recent purchases is the horse contractor Fraser brought in here about a year ago.

The Kill Kare Club had their usual fortnightly Saturday dance at the schoolhouse on Saturday with the usual attendance, and music by Mrs. Choppen on the piano, and Mr. Price, drums.

Mrs. Geo. Cam and son, John Allenby, were week-end visitors with Sirdar friends, arriving from Taghum on Saturday.

The C.P.R. is gradually getting operations back on a normal basis. The section crews each added two men to their crews at the first of the month.

Rev. J. S. Mahood was here for English Church service on Sunday night. Sirdar is due to lose his services very shortly as a move is on foot looking to the establishment of a resident Anglican clergyman at Creston.

The lake is pretty well clear of ice and as most of the spring birds have also put in an appearance. With certain reservations Mayor Daly ventures the prophesy that Sirdar is due to have one of its old time real early spring seasons.

Guy Mahaffy, at one time a trainmain on this run, but lately in partnership in the conduct of the Cosmopolitan Hotel, Cranbrook, was a week-end visitor with Sirdar friends.

With the exception of the stretch at the Pascuzzo ranch, which is still held up pending an agreement as to the purchase price of the right of way, the new road to Kuskanook is practically complete and ready for traffic.

Mrs. Lane, who underwent a rather serious operation at St. Eugene hospital, Cranbrook, a couple of weeks ago, is making a very satisfactory recovery at latest reports.

Lister

The Ladies' Auxiliary piano fund dance on Saturday night was rather slimly attended, the weather being anything but favorable to coaxing people for a function of any sort.

The trustees have just enacted regulations governing the uses the school building will be allowed to be used for and amongst the enactments is a charge of $1.50 where both rooms are used, and $1 for the use of one room. The school will be available free of charge for church and Sunday School sessions as well as community meetings.

The Literary, Musical and Debating Society meeting on Wednesday night last was the monthly business session. Everything in the way of entertainment is cancelled this week due to the presentation of "Tony the Convict," by the dramatic society on Saturday night.

This week's casuality is to F. Bagshaw who had the first finger of his right hand badly mangled when he attempted to adjust a belt at the sawmill, the saw getting in its work between the thumb and adjoining digit.

Ticket holders for Saturday night's presentation of "Tony, the Convict," should be on hand prior to 8.15 to be sure of a good seat. Over 100 tickets have been sold already and after 8.15 the general public will be admitted, and there is sure to be a considerable crowd of them, which means standing room only will be the best late comers can hope for.

Sam Lazachuk, who has been at Cranbrook hospital for a couple of weeks, having the injuries he received in blasting operations attended to, is back, and is again at work at the old job.

J. A. McGee was a business visitor at Nelson over the week-end, returning Tuesday.

A. W. Brain is a business visitor at Vancouver at present.

C. H. Phillips is back again, after quite an extended visit at Cranbrook.

The tuner of Mason & Risch Co., Nelson, has been here this week on a business visit, and has put the player piano at the school in first-class shape again.

The annual meeting of Lister Local of the United Farmers was held on Friday night, with quite a large and most enthusiastic attendance. The chief feature was the election of officers the following being chosen for 1921.

Hon. President—Col. Fred Lister, C.M.G., D.S.O., M.P.P.
President—F. Powers.
Vice-President—J. A. McGee.
Secy.-Treas.—N. Stones.
Executive—W. Mitchell, J. Head, J. Jory.

The committee entrusted with the matter of importing cattle and the securing of a herd sire reported progress. Under the recent livestock loan feature the idea is to bring in purebred cattle of as few grades as possible, so that it will not be necessary to have too many sires.

Kitchener

Mr. and Mrs. Baker of Michel have arrived, and have taken up their residence in the C.P.R. house.

Mrs. Smee, who has been visiting her husband and son for some time, left on Tuesday for their home in Spokane.

West Creston

R Sinclair Smith is having the lumber hauled and will commence the erection of a residence on his property here as soon as weather conditions will permit.

Report has it that West Creston will shortly lose Mr. and Mrs. Dunn and family, who are moving to Creston, where Mr. Dunn is purchasing a ranch property close to the town. Mr. Dunn is at present on the old Logan ranch.

Transportation to and from town is a bit awkward at present. As far as Nicks sleighs are required but from there on to Creston wheels are the best going.

There is a well-defined rumor afloat that the new ferry will be installed some time this year, although nothing can be definitely stated until this year's estimates are passed by the legislature. However, a satisfactory amount is being asked for, and is almost sure to be voted.

J. J. Moores, who had the misfortune to lose his residence by fire about the middle of February, is making good headway with the erection of a new home.

The Indians wintering at Goat River are having some trouble pulling their cattle through. Quite a few head have died due to none too much feed and other causes.

There is some movement in West Creston real estate, this week seeing the sale of the Dan English place, more lately owned by the late G. M. Benney, the purchaser being F. K. Hurry.

Canyon City

The Irish of Canyon City will celebrate St. Patrick's Day on Friday, March 18th, at a concert and dance in the schoolhouse, under United Farmers auspices, with an admission of 50 cents

F. Knott is erecting quite a commodious new barn which will provide housing for all his livestock and feed.

There are about enough logs in the yard to keep the mill going until the end of April after which time it may stop operations for the summer.

A number of the ladies are assisting with the financing of the piano by giving afternoon teas. Among the hostesses in this respect so far are Mesdames Browell, Knott and Blair.

Quite a few of our ranchers are purchasing new work horses this spring. J. Turner and J. Vance have each got an animal from the Company, while Johnson Bros. have purchased a team from J. McCullum.

J. Johnson, sr., has been quite seriously indisposed this week with an attack of hiccoughs.

John Wood left on Tuesday for Birchbank, where he will again be in charge of Deschamps sawmill at that point. On Friday night he addressed the United Farmers on the work of the provincial convention at Vancouver last month, which he attended as the Canyon delegate. While at the coast he also visited his daughter at Seattle.

J. B. Winlaw's contractors have all finished operations. With a crew of eight men and four teams J. McCull of Bow island, Alta., landed some 6000 logs; Bergen & Olsen about the same quantity; and Samuelson, Johnson Brothers, Mowbury and Young some 10,000. All told Mr. Winlaw has landed about 35,000 logs. Johnson brothers and H. Young have just closed a contract with Mr. Winlaw for quite a cedar hauling job.

Alice Siding

The danger of a hay shortage has been relieved to some extent by weather conditions making it possible to graze cattle on the flats. The latter part of the week saw about 100 head of stock feeding on the meadows.

The new outfit of desks have arrived for Alice Siding school, and Principal Steele is busy putting them together prior to being put in place in the schoolroom.

Losses of cattle still continue. This week H. F. Wood lost another young steer, while a few days ago an animal belonging to Reed & Mather died—from the after effects of over browsing on evergreen shrubbery.

Mr. Vaness is having lumber hauled and as soon as weather permits will start the erection of quite a good sized new barn.

Frank Sinister is busy this week shooting the stumps on about an acre of the ranch which had been left uncleared.

Mrs. H. MacDonald of Calgary arrived a few days ago on a visit to her parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Webster.

Victor Carr is a temporary resident at Wynndel, where he is working at logging operations in Monrad Wigen's camp at Cottonwood.

The trouble between the C.P.R. fencing crew which during its operations appropriated some of the orchard area of adjoining ranches whilst widening the right-of-way, appears to have been quite amicably settled. In getting a speedy adjustment of matters President Bevan of Creston board of trade rendered property holders quite valuable service.

A Young Canadian Club has just been organized at Alice Siding school the chief ambition being to provide suitable entertainment from time to time in connection with the school work. Jack Miller is at the head of the organization, assisted by Will Vaness as vice-president; Grace Wirch secretary; and Victor Grundy. George Winch and Gladys Stewart the advisory committee members.

If Thin, Nervous, Run Down, Depressed, This Will Help!

The wear and strain of life has tended in recent years to produce nervous debility in a large percentage of our population.

Thousands are affected with a feeling they can't exactly describe. They are always tired and droopy, lack ambition, have poor appetite, look pale and suffer from depressing headaches and insomnia.

This condition is full of peril. It is the stepping stone to invalidism, the beginning of a shattered constitution.

We advise everyone in this condition to take a good medicine at once and try to get well while yet there is time.

Probably no better advice can be given than to use Dr. Hamilton's Pills, which have become famous in restoring the sick to good health. A general toning up of the system at once takes place. The whole body is vitalized by rich and purer blood. The appetite is increased, food is digested and naturally strength rapidly increases. Headaches go because the bowels are regulated and all wastes are carried off.

There is no experiment about using Dr. Hamilton's Pills because they certainly restore the sick, as a trial will quickly prove. Just as good for the old as the young, and suitable to the needs of women and children. This grand family medicine should be in every home.

Dorkin was suddenly called out of his reverie by a whine from the mother fox.

He sat up, yawning and stretching his cramped muscles.

"Well, Spray-Coat," he called, "are you pretty nearly all right again? What are you begging for? Is it your puppies?"

She sat up on her haunches and smiled a pleading and ingratiating smile, by opening her red mouth and protruding her red tongue. Her magnificent brush swept to and fro, coaxingly.

Dorkin gazed on her fondly. She was certainly a beautiful thing, and quite as wise, he told himself, as she was beautiful.

"Spray-Coat," he adjured, "you must be a good fox. Lie down and go to sleep, and maybe you can have your puppies in the morning."

"But I want them now," said the bright eyes, gazing steadily into his.

He shook his head and, rising, crossed to the corner. Larry sat up and watched his master, ears lifted and head cocked sidewise.

Dorkin reached down and felt the tip of the slender muzzle which the mother fox raised to him. "No fever, Spray-Coat," he said, "not the tiniest little bit. But, you see, grand lady, you may still have some poison in your system, so we must keep little Silo and the others away from you till morning, at least."

"Tell you what we'll do, though," he offered, as the old fox gave a pitiful whine: "we'll fix it so that you can reach your head in that cage and nose the sleepy little beggars, if you want to. See here!"

With his knife he cut a hole through the wicker-work of the crate, sufficiently large for Spray-Coat to insert her head.

"Now, then, go wake 'em up," he laughed.

She needed no second bidding. A moment later and she was in the crate up to her shoulders, nosing tenderly each of those grey balls and licking each yawning little face raised whimperly to hers.

"Larry," Dorkin addressed the dog, who had drawn close to watch proceedings with alert interest, "there, you see about twenty-five thousand dollars' worth of silver-greys, as estimated by the world of money-grabbers. And, Larry, boy," he said softly, "there you see about as many million dollars' worth of love, known only in this, your world and mine. Isn't it grand, purp, isn't it?"

He caught the shaggy setter, as he leaped to leave a damp caress on his master's face, and shook him roughly to and fro. "You're a wonderful chap, Larry," he cried, giving the dog a resounding slap, "and you belong to a wonderful family. We'll all stand together, won't we, boy? And if we fall, we'll fall together, eh?"

The setter whined, and curled up at Dorkin's feet ,once more, as he resumed his seat by the table.

Somewhere, in the silent cabin, a clock chimed the hour of two, and still Dorkin sat, with folded arms, thinking. Then voices sounded outside, and Larry, with a low growl, sprang erect.

A moment later Pete LaPeer entered the room. Behind him trailed half a dozen lean-faced, steady-eyed men of the forest.

Dorkin stood up and shook each of them by the hand, calling them all by their first names, and drawing from each a flashing smile, as he made them welcome.

From a big cupboard he brought a platter of cold meat and crackers and cheese, and placed it on the table. Pete went to the kitchen, and brewed a big pot of tea, the kind all genuine woodsmen love. This, with white, flaky biscuits, such as only Pete's good wife knew how to bake, along with wonderful confections brought up from the city, certainly looked inviting to the men, some of whom had had considerable of a tramp and paddle to get there.

"We wait on one anudder," Pete explained to Dorkin, as they all seated themselves, and fell to. "Dat is bes' plan, eh? We all come in togedder."

"Fine," Dorkin commended, and, looking gratefully from one to the other of the men who had so willingly responded to his call, "I want to say right here, that it was white of you chaps. I won't forget it."

They shook their heads and murmured that what they had done—was nothing. That was like them. Dorkin knew that not one of them had come in hopes of pecuniary gain. To a man, they had come out of regard for him, and his; and the conviction brought a lump to his throat.

"Boys," he said, after the meal was over, and pipes were alight, "I guess you know why Pete went after you, to-night. I'm not going to mince matters any by saying you're not running into danger by coming here to help us guard our Preserve. There is danger; danger of being shot by those who wish to wreck this place, danger of incurring the enmity of the raiders by standing shoulder to shoulder with us. Now, then, boys, if that wasn't clear to you before, it is now, and if any of you want to withdraw, you can do so, and still be my friend."

He paused, waiting for someone to speak.

Someone did. A grizzled-haired trapper, smoking a corn-cob pipe, cleared his throat deliberately, spat in the empty fireplace, and growled: "Oh, hell, Dorkin, don't spoil our good time by sendin' any of us back. We're jest naturally achin' fer a chance at Dalton an' his crew, eh, boys?"

"That's what!" and, "You've said it, Sol!" from the others.

"Thanks, men," said Dorkin quietly.

He walked over to the corner where the trappers had stacked their rifles, and surveyed the miscellaneous array of guns. All were woefully antique, with the exception of the one owned by the man, Sol, and it was not by any means modern, being but a single-shot, breech-loading rifle, of small calibre.

Dorkin knew that every man among them was watching him, knew how much each of those loyal bushmen loved his rifle, guessed what sacrifices he had made to secure it, and knew of the hope in each heart that some day he might own a repeating rifle, like LaPeer's.

So it was with a smile on his face and a gladness in his heart that he turned from his inspection, and crossed the room to what looked like a bookcase built into the wall.

"Boys," he addressed his volunteers, his hand on the knob of the door, "when a man has found something valuable, it's natural for him to want to keep it, isn't it? I found these hardwoods, you might say, and I found the wild things who make their homes in it. I love it and them. I don't want to lose either."

"You won't," they assured him.

"Well, I don't intend to," he resumed. "But, boys, I've found something else that I value, something else I want to keep by me, too, if I can, and that's the loyalty of six good men."

He waited a little, and then continued:—

"I would like you men to come up and make your homes here on the Preserve, if you will, you and your families. We'll build each of you a fine cabin and see that you want for nothing. I might as well tell you now," he said, to the look of wonder in their eyes, "that I am acquiring another considerable tract of forest from the Government, and will require the help of six or more men. Pete and I have about all we can do now."

Again he paused to mark the result of his words; then he said gently: "All your lives you men have hunted and trapped the wild things, in order that you might live. I can pay you all five times more money than you are now making, if you are willing to come and be one with us, and help those wild things to live. No!" he cried, holding up his hand as they were about to joyfully agree. "Think it over, and let me know later. We've got something else to consider now, and we've got to get into action right away."

He threw open the door of the case, and beckoned the men forward. "Behold your new artillery," he smiled. "A new rifle to each man who has proved his loyal friendship to me this night."

He laughed, boyishly, as they crowded about the beautiful repeaters, with expressions of wonder and delight. Well he knew how each man of them had craved for such a gun, and in the purchase of these for them, he had derived a great deal of happiness. He had intended making the gifts at Christmas, but it looked as though it were the better plan to let his woods-friends have them now. The raiders would, undoubtedly, have modern firearms .

One after another, Dorkin passed the rifles out to hands that shook in their eagerness to caress them. Pete had struggled in with a big wooden box of cartridges. Dorkin pried the box open and distributed the smaller cases to the trappers.

The simple woodsmen were wild in their glee at possessing each a new, modern rifle. They wrung Dorkin's hand until it ached, and he laughingly begged them to desist. They swore they would stand by him through anything, and scorned the idea of him paying them for helping him in his extended Preserve.

"Jest let us come an' work with an' fer you, an' all we ask is our livin'," they told him.

It was almost morning before Dorkin at last got his friends to lie down to sleep in the big inner room, the floor of which was spread with thick skins. And when, finally, they did lie down, each man fell asleep cuddling the rifle of which he had often dreamed, but never thought to possess.

Dorkin did not seek his own bed. His mind was strangely awake and active. The fatigue he had felt during the earlier part of the night had passed. He cleared the table of its dishes and broken victuals, and sat down to wait for dawn.

Over in the corner Spray-Coat had curled herself up to sleep, her slender muzzle touching the big wicker crate which held her puppies. The setter, too, was stretched out on a rug, paws crossed, heavy head resting on them, dreaming of dappled coveys on some shady upland.

Dorkin got up and passed across to the open door. Beneath the paling stars the forest swept, a sable blue, which melted with dense shadows beyond. It was the darkness which precedes the dawn, the hour in which the Great Silence holds in its grip the world of the solitudes.

Suddenly from out of the shadows, as Dorkin watched, a human form detached itself, and moved swiftly towards him.

"Is that you, Dorkin?" came Danny Farney's voice, in a whisper.

"Yes, Danny; is anything the matter?" Dorkin queried anxiously.

A Story of the Sea

Is Unique Among the After-the-War Narratives.

In a great many ways Mr. Archibald Hurd's book, "A Merchant Fleet at War," is unique among the after-the-war narratives. In actual fact it is a record, at times so conservative as to be almost an official report, of the war activities of the Cunard company. But concise and exact as is its record of actual events, it contains certain passages which are epic.

Consider, for example, this extract from page 103.

"It was on March 27, 1917, at eight o'clock in the evening that the Thracia, Captain R. Nicholas, while on a voyage with ore from Bilbao to Ardrosson, was sunk at sight and without warning, leaving only one survivor. Disappearing in one minute, those on board were left with no possible chance of saving their lives and it was only by a miracle that Cadet Douglas Duff, a boy of 16 years of age, was left to tell the tale. He succeeded in saving his life by clinging for sixteen hours to the keel of a capsized boat, during the early part of which time he was seen and jeered at by the crew of the submarine. One of them, indeed, raised a rifle and aimed at him, whereupon he shouted, perhaps characteristically of the service to which he belonged—'Shoot and be damned to you.' It seems to us all that all the romantic stories of the sea that ever were told, from Casabianca to Trafalgar Bay contain no greater thrill than this."—Halifax Herald.

Your Home Medicine Chest.—Among the standard household remedies that should always be on hand in your home medicine chest, none is more important than Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil. Its manifold usefulness in relieving pain and healing sickness is known by many thousands throughout the land. Always use Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil for relieving rheumatic and sciatica pains, treating sore throats and chests, coughs, burns, scalds, cuts, bruises and sprains.

RICH, RED BLOOD MEANS HEALTH

Pale Cheeks and Bloodless Lips Are A Danger Signal.

To be pale is no longer the fashion; to be languid is an affliction. Today the most winsome girl is the one with the pink tinge of health in her cheeks, lips naturally red, and eyes sparkling with life. Add to this a quick active step and everyone can tell the girl whose veins are full of the pure, rich blood of health. How different she appears from her ailing sisters, whose aching limbs and weak backs make them pale and dejected. Anaemia is the cause of so much suffering among girls and women that it cannot be too widely known that Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have transformed thousands of delicate anaemic invalids into happy, healthy women. These pills help to put rich red blood into the veins, and this blood reaches every part of the body, giving strength, rosy cheeks and brightness in place of weakness, prostrating headaches and a wretched state of half-health. Miss Edna E. Weaver, R.R. No. 1 Chippewa, Ont., says: "I was very much run down, weak, nervous and troubled with pains in the side. I tried different medicines but without any benefit until I began the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Under the use of this medicine I gained strength, had better appetite, slept better and the pain in my side disappeared. My health has since remained excellent and I advise anyone troubled with anaemia, or weakness, to give Dr. Williams' Pink Pills a fair trial."

Try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for anaemia, rheumatism, neuralgia and nervousness. Build up your blood and note how the purer and richer blood fights your battles against disease. Take Dr. Williams' Pink Pills as a tonic if you are not in the best physical condition and cultivate a resistance that with the observance of ordinary rules of health will keep you well and strong. Get a box from the nearest drug store and begin the treatment now, or send to The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont., and the pills will be sent you postpaid at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50.

Gray Flannel for This Trim Frock

By Gertrude Beresford.

Flannel in all colors is a favored fabric in the realm of dress. In the model that is illustrated a very pretty shade of gray is chosen. It is fashioned on the simple lines that so accentuate the youthfulness of the figure. Dark blue cire braid in two different widths decorates this delightful dress, which boasts the very short sleeves that are remarked on many of the new creations for spring. The hat of gray crepe de chine is a new version of the sailor. The crown is softly draped and the brim lightly rolled away from the face. A band of crepe de chine is drawn around the crown and tied at the sides so that the ends swing to the shoulder.

Worms, by the irritation that they cause in the stomach and intestines, deprive infants of the nourishment that they should derive from food, and mal-nutrition is the result. Miller's Worm Powders destroy worms and correct the morbid conditions in the stomach and bowels that are favorable to worms, so that the full nutriment of the child is assured and development in every way encouraged.

Grain Supplants Tobacco in the East.

Much of the tobacco land in Essex County, Ont., will be planted with grain. Last season more than 20,000,000 pounds of the smoker's weed raised in Ontario was not purchased, due to an over-supply in general, and farmers do not care to undergo a repetition. The grain-growing industry will lead to a greater hog production.

The Family Physician.—The good doctor is always worth his fee. But it is not always possible to get a doctor just when you want him. In such cases, common sense suggests the use of reliable home remedies, such as Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil, which is wonderfully effective in easing inflammatory pains and in healing cuts, scratches, bruises and sprains. The presence of this remedy in the family medicine chest saves many a fee.

Would Amend Banking System.

Tentative steps for the establishment of a provincial rural credit system were taken recently by the Provincial Treasurer in suggesting that the Canadian Council of Agriculture commence an expert examination into the possibility of developing the Canadian banking system to meet the requirements of agriculture. The present banking system, he claimed, whilst a most admirable one, was not created to meet the demands for agriculture, and the system of management leaves it to the head office to grant loans, whose officials are not always in a position to judge the merits of the applicants.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Arrow Creek Irrigation

EDITOR REVIEW:

SIR,—There appears to be some misapprehension on the part of some of the signers of the Arrow Creek irrigation petition as to their liability in connection therewith.

I would call attention to the motion passed at the meeting held in Mercantile Hall, which appointed commissioners under the Drainage, Dyking and Development Act, and instructed them to employ an engineer and ascertain the cost of the Arrow Creek and Goat River schemes and report.

To do this we had to follow procedure as outlined in the act. First, circulate petition and obtain signatures for a majority in value of owners as outlined in Sections 4 and 5. Second, give public notice of intention to present petition to the government as published in the Creston Review as well as the B.C. Gazette. And also present said petition to board of investigation, which will enquire into and report thereon to the minister of lands, as required by Section 9 of the act. This, Mr. Editor, is as far as we have got.

If in due time should the board report favorably on our project, and the lieutenant-governor-in-council should make the order constituting the Arrow Creek Irrigation District, this fact is advertised in the Gazzete according to Section 12.

The district being created the next step is the securing an engineer, who must be approved by the government, to make a survey and make a plan showing such of the lands as will be benefitted by the proposed works.

Sections 26 and 29 provide for plans of works and estimated cost also assessment roll giving proportion of taxes which will be levied.

Section 30 provides for the calling of a meeting of owners; notice to be mailed or delivered to each owner not less than ten days before such meeting. Every owner shall be entitled to vote either in person or by proxy. The estimates may be accepted, amended or rejected as a majority in value may decide.

I think, Mr. Editor, that from the foregoing it will be clearly seen that the intent of the signers of the petition will be fully carried out.

JAS. ADLARD.

Soldiers' Memorial

EDITOR REVIEW:

SIR—Will you allow me space in THE REVIEW for my views on the Soldiers' Memorial, that has already hung fire too long. I believe I was one of the first committee handling the preliminary features of the memorial, and when that committee was discharged it was decided by unanimous vote of the donators that a monument should be erected from the funds subscribed.

I do not know whether the subscribers have been consulted since then. However, I have not, and if a library is decided on I for one want my money back, for I know real well I can go out in this district and get enough funds from citizens—who hold the same views as myself—to build a monument.

The longer this is put off the harder it will be to collect even the money promised, as I often see deserters walking around town—and from some they get the same respect almost as is shown some of our returned men who are back from the war crippled and maimed for life—it looks to me as if it will not be long till the overseas fighters will fare little better in public esteem than the deserter, and for us to put anything in the shape of a building for slackers and deserters to frequent would be a very poor memorial.

R. S. BEVAN.

U.F. in Politics

EDITOR REVIEW:

SIR,—In view of the decision reached by the United Farmers of British Columbia at their recent convention at Vancouver, that the present is not an opportune time for the B.C. farmers organization to go into politics, the following extracts from editorial utterances of the Western Farmer, the official organ of the Alberta U.F., may be of interest. Here they are:

"The farmers' organization in British Columbia is a peculiar kind of critter, neither fowl, flesh, nor good red herring, as the old phrase has it. They have decided to walk hand in hand with British Columbia manufacturers, and will orginate in the near future some scheme in which the boosting of British Columbia manufactures and products will be the "big idea."

"Now it is easily seen from this that each individual province has its own peculiar ideas, very dissimilar, yet all based on the recognition of the economic view which happens to be in evidence in each province at any given period.

"It reveals another fact, and one not to be treated lightly—that the enthusiast who is forever declaring that the farmers of Canadg will be called upon to form the next Dominion government will get something of a shock after viewing the next election returns.

"The three wheat-growing provinces may go solidly enough for the new national policy, but will the representation from these three provinces counter-balance the adverse blows received in the far east and the near west? It is an open question.

"And while this is going on at Ottawa, the B.C. farmers, in convention, decide not to go into politcs as an organization because "politics is dirty." If there is any reason under heaven why the rural dweller should enter politics it is found in just that fact.

"The call comes to the men and women on the farms to enter and take the "dirt" out of politics. Alberta understands that in some measure. Pray for B.C."

The Only Solution

In this column a few weeks ago, some attention was devoted to the subject of the Canadian Banking system and the relations existing between the Banks on the one hand and the public on the other hand—the public being divided into two groups, those who placed money on deposit in the Banks and those who borrowed money from the Banks. At that time the principle was upheld that a Bank's first duty was to its depositors, that is, to those from whom it had accepted money and for whom it undertook to act as a trustee of the funds thus entrusted to it.

It was further pointed out that the loaning power of a Bank depended upon the volume of its deposits, and that, if a Bank failed to adequately protect its depositors, it would very quickly lose them and hence have no money to loan. It may be that there are still some people laboring under the delusion that a Bank carries on a loaning business out of its paid-up capital and accumulated reserves, but it only requires a very casual study of the Monthly Banking Returns to reveal the fact that the total paid-up capital and reserves of all the chartered Banks in Canada is equivalent to only a small fraction of the amount of money they have out in loans to the people. This means that the Banks have loaned the money received by them by way of deposits, retaining in cash on hand only sufficient to meet any demands which depositors may make upon them from day to day.

Such a system—and it is the only sound and safe banking system—forces upon Banks the necessity when "hard times" and "financial stringencies" arise to curtail credits, because it is inevitable that it is during just such periods that (1) the making of deposits drop to a low mark, and, (2) that those who have money on deposit have to draw some of it for use. There is only one thing for the Banks to do in order to protect their depositors and be in a position to honor all cheques drawn upon them, and that is to curtail credits and reduce loans.

In a very notable address before the Saskatchewan Grain Growers' convention at Moose Jaw early in February, Hon. C. A. Dunning, Provincial Treasurer, not only very clearly outlined the above situation, but he demonstrated, apparently to the satisfaction of his big audience, why a Federal Banking system is the only one in which the people of the West can look for satisfactory results. The West is a seasonal country. In the Fall and early Winter, when the grain crop is harvested and largely marketed, the bulk of the people have money. It is at that time the farmers pay their bills, interest on loans and mortgages, and when the better established farmers place money on deposit in the Banks. At that season few farmers, comparatively speaking, require credit, unless it be for the speculative purpose of holding their grain for a rise in the market price.

At other periods of the year, farmers are not making deposits, but are either gradually withdrawing money they had on deposit or are asking credit.

In other words, at the one period of the year when a purely local or Provincial Bank would have money on deposit which could be used for loaning purposes, the demand for credit is at a minimum, while the period when loans are most urgently required is the time when deposits are not being made, but are reduced to the lowest figure. It will be seen, therefore, that a purely local Western Bank would never be able to function as a great loaning institution at the very time when loans were imperatively required. Under the Federal system, on the other hand, a surplus of money on deposit in one section of the country can be used in another section where it may be required, money flowing back and forth, or in a circle, with the varying seasonal requirements of all sections.

Mr. Dunning, therefore, held out no hope of the establishment of purely Western agricultural Banks. On the other hand, while frankly stating that the present Canadian Banking system was well designed to meet the needs of commerce—and it was for that purpose it was originally created—Mr. Dunning admitted it had its weaknesses from the Western agricultural standpoint. The remedy, however, was, in his opinion, to be found in the making of certain amendments to the Banking Act which would enable Banks to accept certain securities now prohibited to them and thereby make possible the extension of larger and better credit terms to farmers.

Many of the more far-seeing Western bankers realized the necessity of such amendments, and would favor them. Mr. Dunning, therefore, advised the farmers to urge such amendments when the Banking Act came up for its decennial revision a year or two hence, rather than to persist in the impracticable demand for the establishment of local or Provincial Banks in the Western Provinces created for the specific purpose of meeting the credit needs of agriculture. This was impossible in a country where 75 per cent. of the people were engaged in a seasonal occupation. The present Federal Banking system, revised to meet the needs of agriculture, offers the only practical solution to this problem which is so vital to the development and prosperity of the West.

The United States graves registration service has expressed itself as opposed to the selection at present of the body of an unidentified soldier from the United States war dead in France for removal and burial with honors in the United States, should congress enact legislation to this end. The reason is the constant reduction in the number of unidentified and the hope of the eventual identification of almost all of them through teeth charts which are being sent to Washington and compared with the records.

Rebellion Days, 1884-85

By O-GE-MAS-ES (Little Clerk).

A couple of hours brought us to Goodfellow's, and here we received the heartiest of welcomes and heard the rather astounding news that the postmaster at Ft. La Corne had skipped down the river, taking his winter's furs, but leaving all goods and ammunition behind with no one to look after them. Goodfellow, though he had retired some years back, was on fire to save what he could of the company's property, but he had been alone, as all the surrounding residents had fled likewise. Now, with two of us, we decided to visit the fort next morning and stay the day. We received some very good news also as to a safe escape from the country (but the time for that was not yet) as he had a York boat hidden in a creek, and our united stocks would amply provision us. In addition we had four or five fish nets and plenty of hooks and ammunition. His cattle, of which he had a large band, worried him as to their final disposal, and we finally decided on the quiet that one of us would have to stay with them with his oldest boy and drive them to a safe retreat in the hills to the east. He was in great spirits over my arrival, and said that we were now good for a regiment of rebels. We made a famous night of it, he telling stories of wintering on the plains amongst the buffalo where they had often to defend the company's property against hostile Indians. And the ladies who saw one another very seldom in those days equally enjoyed themselves. Mrs. Goodfellow, who was a member of the well-known Turner family, was the soul of hospitality, and our children were at once petted and made much of by their fine youngsters.

Breakfasting early next morning and seeing to our arms, we drove down to old Ft. La Corne, at that time situated about two miles down the river from the present post and within easy reach of the water, all imported supplies coming there by boat at that time. We found a number of Indians very much interested in the valuable goods laying about, but Mr. Goodfellow had been master of La Corne for a number of years and immediately ordered them all across the Saskatchewan River. Away they went at once, being a peaceable crowd, and Christianized for many years back, this being the site of one of the oldest Church of England Missions in Saskatchewan.

As we were liable to be visited by hostiles at any time, to whom the supplies would be very acceptable, our first thought was of the ammunition, there being a considerable stock of powder, bullets, shot, guncaps and flints, for flint lock guns were still in use. We finally disposed of these in an old dry well, packing them carefully against dampness and removing all traces on the surface. We then carried all valuable things that were lying about into the store, put different classes of goods together, padlocked the place and went back home for the night. It took several days of steady work to take an exact inventory of all goods on hand, and the last day, while we were figuring up totals (which ran well into the thousands) the door of the shop opened and in filed four French half-breeds. I thought we were in for trouble and backed up against the shelves where my six-shooter was laying loaded, then looked at Goodfellow. Not a word was spoken. I could note that his beard was curling, and finally he said in sharp tones, "What do you want?" With that, the leader evidently, produced a letter to him from Chief Factor Clarke at Prince Albert, asking him to take an inventory of all goods he could find and ship the same down to Cumberland House, further stating that these men were loyal French half-breeds and anxious to get away from the fighting. The tension was then relaxed. I asked George afterwards what he would have done if they had proved hostile. "I would have called to them to pitch their hands up," was his instant reply. "I was over forty years in the company's service and never had anything taken from me yet; also I noted you had your big pistol handy." The letter also instructed that a careful copy of the inventory was to be sent up to Mr. Clarke by a trustworthy hand. Poor Lawrence Clarke. For many years he could have been called the uncrowned King of Northern Saskatchewan, with everyone obedient to his dictates. Now he had seen some of his good friends shot down at Duck Lake by rebels, and the shock was too much for him. One of the few Irishmen in the company's service, a finer fellow never stepped, and I owe him much gratitude for many acts of kindness.

We at once commenced packing and made a good start, then arranged a camp for the men and went back home, intending to freight my furs down in the morning. This we did, and after some hours' hard work, saw the boat off with its valuable cargo. This meant safety, as the rebels never attempted reaching the lower Saskatchewan. Running to the mouth of this river at Grand Rapids was the steamer Colvill on Lake Winnipeg, which took all cargoes on to Fort Garry.

After fair copies had been made of the inventory and shipping bills, I volunteered to take them to Prince Albert, so started next morning in the saddle, by way of the Forks This is a wild and beautiful spot where the waters of the north and south branches unite, having very high banks clothed with dark spruce, and whirling, eddying waters. I could see a house on the far bank and fired several shots to attract attention but without success; so after careful search up and down the bank in search of a boat or canoe and finding none, I rather recklessly determined to swim it. Riding up the south branch for half a mile, taking a small dry log along for a rest and placing valuables and papers on my head, into the water we went. Wow, but it was cold, and it took the little mare and myself all we knew to make the other bank, and we were both very much exhausted on reaching there. In fact but for the log I doubt our having done so. On going up to the house I found it deserted, the cellar trap open and a young heifer lying dead at the foot of the stairs. After some search I found plenty of fresh eggs, lit a monster fire, had a good supper and dried my clothes. The pony was quite comfortable in the stable, with lots of hay, and there I also slept.

Keep Watch On Ex-Kaiser

The Hague.—Replying to a question in parliament as to the present status of former Emperor William of Germany, and the former Crown Prince, Foreign Minister Van Karnebeck announced that J. B. Kan, secretary-general of Dutch Governmental affairs, had been instructed to carry out the regulations now in force or any which might be taken to restrict the liberty of the Hohenzollerns. But the former Kaiser and his son, said the foreign minister, were considered as "foreigners" who, because of positions they held, must content themselves with restrictions placed on their liberty.

Will Keep Out of Politics

B.C. Farmers As Body Decline To Take Any Political Action.

Vancouver.—The United Farmers of British Columbia, as a body, will not take direct political action, it was overwhelmingly decided by the delegates to the annual convention here. Several hours 'strenuous debate preceded the decision. The general opinion was that the farmers of the province must organize thoroughly on an economic basis before they could hope to become a powerful influence politically.

During the deliberations there were sweeping condemnations of the existing parties, Commander Lewis, of Rock Creek, remarking that since coming to this country he had taken no interest in politics as it had seemed to him to be absolutely dirty.

The convention decided to ask the Provincial Government to appoint a commission to secure reliable data on the Oriental question, in view of the approaching Imperial conference.

A case based on this information, according to the terms of the resolution, would be presented by the Provincial Government to the Federal Government urging necessary protection of British Columbia against the Orientals.

A Friend To the Aged!

When men and women get past middle life, their energy and activity, in many instances, begin to decline, and their general vitality is on the wane.

The heart action becomes weak and uncertain and the nerves more or less unsteady.

Little sicknesses and ailments seem harder to shake off than formerly, and here and there evidences of a breakdown begin to appear.

Those who wish to maintain their health and vigor and retain their energy unimpaired should use Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills.

They make the heart beat strong and regular, brace up and invigorate the nervous system, improve the memory, and impart a sense of buoyancy to the entire system.

Mrs. James Perry, Retlaw, Alta., writes:—"Some months ago I was not feeling well, my heart bothered me quite a lot, and my whole system seemed out of order. I sent and got two boxes of your pills. I took them a few days and my, what a change there was in me, and when I had taken the two boxes I felt so much better I quit them. Now I take them at intervals, and am fine although 72 years of age."

Upper House Member Leaves Government Benches

Senator Turriff, of Assiniboia, Decides to Support Progressive Party.

Ottawa.—Senator Turriff has announced himself as a supporter of the National Progressive party and left the government side of the house for the cross benches. He took this course because he did not agree with the government's tariff policy and also because the people of the province which he represented were overwhelmingly in favor of the fiscal policy of the Progressives.

Senator Turiff had no apologies for his course in 1917, when he broke with his old policy and supported conscription.

Dealing with the tariff, Senator Turriff had been surprised to hear Senator Foster, in moving the address, point out that cotton could be brought into Canada from the United States, manufactured and sold in competition with the United States finished products in the countries of South America. That did not indicate that Canadian manufacturers could not compete with manufacturers of the United States.

Senator Pope criticized Senator Turriff for his inauguration of the Farmers' party in the Senate, and said that if the manufacturers were permitted to make the profits of the co-operative grain associations of the west, they would be worth many more millions. These organizations robbed the farmers. Hon. T. A. Crerar was the hired man of the co-operative grain associations at $15,000 per annum, and of the people of Canada at $4,000 per annum. If he wished to represent Canada, he should cancel his $15,000 cheque. An investigation commission should be appointed. If it did not show the grossest wrong to farmers, he would leave the Senate. The grain organizations of the west had stolen millions of bushels of wheat from the farmers. The machinery for a sample market was held up by the grain organizations.

Boots and Shoes and Editorial Policy

Under date of Feb. 16, the following interesting article, dealing with the Murray idea, appeared in the Regina Leader:

The Murray idea that Canadian manufacturers should only advertise in newspapers which support the Meighen Government and a high protective tariff finds a warm supporter in The Hartt Boot and Shoe Co., Ltd., of Fredericton, N.B.

Unlike the Ames-Holden Co.—possibly the largest shoe manufacturers in Canada—whose shoes are apparently made to be worn by Conservative and Liberal alike, by Grain Growers and High Tariff and Low Tariff people, and are accordingly advertis d in Canadian newspapers irrespective of their editorial policies—the Hartt Boot and Shoe Co. have laid it down as the policy of their company that they will only do business with newspapers that are supporting the Meighen Government and a Protective tariff.

The extent to which this principle is followed in the policy adopted by the Hartt Boot and Shoe Co. is fully set forth in the following letter, addressed last September by the president of the company, S. D. Palmer, to the Vancouver Sun:—

THE HARTT BOOT AND SHOE CO., LTD.
Fredericton, N.B., Sept. 7, 1920.

Vancouver Sun,
Attention Advertising Manager.

Gentlemen: I received a day or two ago from you, your night lettergram, reading as follows:

"Your campaign has started here and we are disappointed you have overlooked us. We have been in communication with you from time to time and hoped that your advertising would appears in our columns. Sunday Sun has exclusive issue and is choice when one paper is required to cover this field."

Would say in reply, that it is true that at one time we were thinking of using your paper, but to be frank with you (and I take it for granted that you want me to be frank) our reason for dropping your paper was that we do not like the editorial policy you are pursuing.

We believe that your medium has advantages, on account of it being the only morning paper in Vancouver. On the other hand we are firm believers in the policy of doing business, as far as possible, with our friends, and your attitude in some cases with respect to some questions has caused us to feel that you are more against us than with us.

The definition of your tariff policy as announced in your issue of June 29 would be fairly satisfactory, if it had been consistently followed up, but since then we notice a tendency to favor the tariff policy of Mackenzie King in preference to that of Mr. Meighen, and to my way of thinking the return of a party pledged to Mr. King's platform at the present time would inspire such a lack of confidence in business circles that the country would suffer a severe depression. In keeping with your stand upon this point you have urged the dissolution of Parliament and a general election. In our judgment that advice is contrary to the best interests of the country at the present time, because there would be the possibility of the country being governed either by Mr. King and his followers or by the Farmers' Party, or perhaps by a combination of the two, and the far-reaching dangers to established business by putting into execution the policies that they preached, would put an immediate stop to the investment of further capital and mean retrenchment all along the line.

Another matter which I might refer to is the publication of certain editorials from time to time with regard to the business interests of the country. As an illustration, I might refer to the editorial which you ran near the end of July, dealing with the Lake of the Wood Milling Company. I have no brief for this Company and have no interest in it either directly or indirectly but being a business man and a manufacturer I can see very plainly that the large profits that they were able to roll up were made by keeping their plant running to full capacity all the year round, thereby turning out a tremendous output which they could afford to dispose of at a very small margin of profit and still make large financial returns on their investment.

The average man reading an article such as I refer to above would likely gather the impression from your line of argument that the consumer, from the standpoint of price, would be much safer in the hands of small millers than in the hands of large millers, whereas as a matter of fact, if it were not for the great efficiency of the larger plants, the chances are that the consumers would be paying a good deal more than they are today for their flour.

The above illustration is given to you frankly and candidly, and it is owing to these and other articles of a like character that we have not included your paper in our list of advertising mediums.

We believe that we have the right to say with whom we shall spend our money for advertising purposes, and while in many ways we like your paper, at the same time, we cannot consistently feel that we are serving the best interests of ourselves and the business community in general, when we advertise in a paper whose editorial policy has the effect of tearing down rather than building up the business interests of the country.

Yours very truly,
(Sgd.) THE HARTT BOOT & SHOE CO., LTD.,
S. D. Palmer, President.

Health Nurse Miss McLuhan has this week moved into her permanent apartments which have been provided in the remodelling of the Hendren workshop on Vancouver street. Serviceable furnishings have been installed and altogether the quarters are quite comfortable throughout.

The police court was rather a poor revenue producer during February, the gross intake from fines being only $52. Mr. Vachon, however, was fairly active obliging motorists with new license plates, his collections from that source being $172, while the amusement tax was good for $57.

The February report of Miss McLuhan, the public health nurse, shows the month to have been an exceptionally busy one. A total of 137 visits were made, 78 of which were nursing calls and 59 instructive. Her work also included the examination of 97 school children and 17 child welfare visits.

Rev. J. A. Varley of Edgewood was here on Thursday last in conference with officials of Christ Church, talking the situation over with a view of being placed here as a resident rector. He was so well taken with the field that he has asked the Bishop of Kootenay to teansfer him to Creston, and will probably be installed as vicar about the middle of April.

Mr. and Mrs. C. M. Loasby of Sirdar both of whom have been patients at the Cranbrook hospital since the new year, arrived from that institution on Thursday, on a short visit to Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Cook. Mrs. Loasby is feeling almost as well as eyer, but C. M. still travels a bit slow by cane, and will hardly be able to go back to work for almost another month.

The season's honors for the successful hatching of early chicks in quantity must be awarded to Mrs. C. O. Rodgers' flock of Barred Rocks, one of which is now mothering a clutch of 12 healthy chicks, which arrived on March 8th. Earlier chicks there may have been but certainly this showing of 12 out of 15 eggs is a record in that respect for so early in March.

There's nothing too good for the Irish and their friends is the slogan of the ladies of Holy Cross Church who are having a whist drive and dance at the Parish Hall on Thursday evening next, St, Patrick's Day, March 17th. It is hoped to get the classes going at once and it is hoped all the girls interested will be out on Monday night.

The residence of Chas. Moore was choked with company on Friday night when the Young People's Club had their semi-monthly meeting, which took the form of a social evening of music and various amusements. An appreciated musical number was the instrumental quartette by Misses Rose Cherrington and Hazel Hobden (violins) Mr. Chorlton, ('cello.) and Miss Lillian Cherrington, piano. The next meeting is on the 18th at the McAlpine home.

Searle, who took over the barracks at the end of last week. Const. and Mrs. Summerfield have also been transferred, their destination being Cranbrook. Sergt. Popular admission prices of 75c. and 50c. will prevail. Manager Bennett of the Bank of Commerce is just in receipt of a volume entitled, "Letters from the Front" which will be highly prized by all employees of the bank. The book contains the pictures of hundreds of the bank staff who served in the great war as well as a unique collection of letters written home by many of the boys while serving in the trenches. The book shows that 1701 Commerce men served in the war, and of these 259 were killed. Former employees of the Creston branch who are mentioned in the book include J. P. Baston, J. C. Dow, A. L. Dundass, J. M. Crookston and A. L. Davis, all of whom will be readily recalled by residents here of eight years' standing.

Almost all the members were out for the March meeting of the Liberal Association, the big feature of which was the secretary's report on his recent visit to a number of the cabinet ministers at Victoria. A particularly gratifying feature of the report was the statement as to where Kootenay Flats drainage matters had developed. It seems that already the B.C. government has disposed of all preliminaries and only awaits word from the U.S. authorities that the Americans are prepared to proceed in order to get the engineers together in conference to decide on the best plan of operations to enable the engineers to definitely ascertain whether drainage is feasible, and at what cost to both countries.
