THE CRESTON REVIEW

VOL. XIV. CRESTON, B. C., FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 10, 1922 No. 1

Erickson

The milder weather that prevails this week is expediting apple shipments, considerable quantities of this fruit going east during the past few days. An unofficial estimate has it that there are a couple of thousand boxes of apples still in the hands of Erickson growers.

A couple of cars of alfalfa arriving since the first of the month have relieved a small sized hay famine. The alfalfa is selling at $23.25.

Erickson is helping supply the American market with poles this month. On Monday J. B. Winlaw had a car of 40-footers for shipment to a firm in New York city, and a day or two previous he loaded out a car to Clinton, Iowa.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Staples are visitors with friends at points west. While Frank is making a business call at Grand Forks, Mrs. Staples is stopping with Nelson friends.

A crowd estimated at almost 175 was in evidence for the United Farmers' social evening at the J. M. Craigie picking shed on Friday night, which took the form of a whist drive and dance, the prize-winners at cards being Mrs. Holder and Jas. Woods. After whist a supper that well sustained the reputation of the United Farmer ladies for serving quality refreshments in good quantity was in evidence, and then the floor was cleared for dancing, R. M. Telford supervising this feature, and there was high-class music by Mrs. Foremon and Mr. Kolthammer of Canyon City on the piano. T. R. Mawson and Geo. Davie of Canyon also on the violin and drums, the light fantastic trippers keeping it up until at least 2.30 a.m. In the crowd was at least a couple of dozen from Canyon, as well as quite a large delegation from Creston.

Milt Beam and H. Brubracker had a take of three cougar on last week's trapping operations at Arrow Creek last week, and two of them had pelts that measured nine feet from tip to tip without stretching the hides. A n ne foot six-inch stretched skin is the biggest ever seen in the Valley.

At the meeting of the directors of Creston Valley Co-Operative Association on Saturday afternoon. G. P. Smith was chosen president of the organization; M. R. Palmer, vice-president, and T. R. Mawson of Canyon City is secretary-treasurer.

The regular weekly meeting of the United Farmers took place on Tuesday night. The main items of business were enrolling new members, booking orders for powder, etc., other matters being shelved for the present in order to provide ample time for Jas. Adlard's report on the provincial U.F. Convention proceedings. This was listened to very attentively, and a vote of thanks was tendered Mr. Adlard for his effort. Votes of thanks were also tendered Mr. and Mrs. Craigie and the social committee for their services and kindness in providing last Friday's entertainment. Those who are wanting powder are requested to communicate with the secretary, W. G. Littlejohn, at once. There is a report current that a concert will shortly be staged by the U.F.

Hail to Creston Valley!

By T. M. EDMONDSON

You have heard of the Crystal Palace, built many years ago
By the famous Joseph Paxton, in Victoria's reign, you know.
This glass and iron structure, with its many domes and towers,
Cost in the neighborhood of seven million dollars.

It was in this famous building, where fruit and flowers grow,
Great Britain held her last—most famous Apple Show.
This show was of two classes: Number One and Number Two,
For it was thought that this was the proper thing to do,

Class Number One was open to every maid or squire
Who grew the juicy apple in Britain's great empire.
Class Number Two was open, as you can see with ease,
To the orchardists who apples grew in British colonies.

In both of these two classes, I would have you be content,
The Creston Valley apples therein did represent,
The apples that were staged, in cases, row on row,
Were Cox Orange, Wealthy, McIntosh Red and Snow.

The gentlemen who grew them, I pray you all do hark;
Were W.G. Littlejohn, W.V. Jackson and Creston's Robert Stark.
No show in British history, whether great or small,
Could equal this exhibit held in Crystal Palace Hall.

The apples all assembled, with true aesthetic taste;
The judges thither wended, their duties there to face.
At this momentous hour the world did anxious wait;
To learn of the decision they lingered until late.

The telephone, the telegraph, the wireless was used
To give the world its greatest, its most important news.
Now the judging over, the doors were opened wide
To admit the anxious people—rush like the surging tide.

It was here a brand new story to Miss Canada was told,
As the awards were written in letters as of gold.
It was here the Creston Valley the coveted prize did win
For growing Cox's Orange, the pride of Englishmen.

It was Robert Stark of Creston, who his neighbors did surprise,
When for Cox's Orange, Class No. 1, he won the second prize.
And for the Overseas Dominions of our beloved king
Stark's Cox's Orange won first place—a very pleasing thing.

For Cox's Orange again a second prize was won
For the Dominions Overseas, by W. G. Littlejohn,
Who also won the second prize for McIntosh Red and Snow—

Coincident with these triumphs the Creston Valley won
The natural thing to do was to keep a going strong.
It was here that Hayes and Bennett, publicity committeemen,
Shipped a box of apples to his majesty the king.

It was not Cox's Orange, to the Englishman most precious,
But in their mind a better kind—a case of our Delicious.
On arrival of the apples at the palace of our king
The Master of the Household the news to him did bring.

Commanded by his majesty, in robes of state arrayed,
To write to President Bevan, of Creston Board of Trade,
To thank him for his kindness, and thoughtfulness as well—
And the very kind address, which made his bosom swell.

Then hail to the Creston Valley, with its majestic walls;
Its beautiful springs and rivers, and its mighty waterfalls;
Its climate and its soil, its fish and hunting, too;
The loviest place on earth, they say, and I agree with you.

J. H. Webster got back at the end of the week from a business visit at Calgary, Wetaskiwin and Ponoka, Alta. He states the farmers in central Alberta all had average crops, but that due to low prices there is no surplus prosperity in evidence.

Miss Alice Carr returned on Wednesday last, after a short holiday with friends in Spokane and Yahk.

Mr. and Mrs. Guy Constable were visitors with Nelson friends a few days last week.

Mr. and Mrs. E. Payne entertained the Social Club on Tuesday night. There were games, music and dancing, along with a splendid lunch, and one of the best times of the season is reported by all.

Wynndel

Mrs. T. Sadler left last week for Coleman, Alta., to visit her daughter, Vera, who has been on the sick list for some days.

John Bathie is in Vancouver at present, as delegate from the Co-Operative Fruit Growers Association, to the convention. He is expected back this week. O. J. Wigen was to have accompanied him but, due to being indisposed was unable to go.

At the annual meeting of the United Farmers last month the following officers were elected:

Directors—Ken. Dewar, Monrad Wigen, Douglas Butterfield.

The home of Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Grady was the scene of a most enjoyable surprise party on Wednesday night, when about twenty people descended upon them. The evening was spent in music, games and some dancing, with a dainty supper about midnight, the happy party hieing themselves away in the wee sma' 'oors.

E. S. Butterfield left on Wednesday for Vancouver, where he figures on making his home in future.

Peter Andestad is busy loading out ties. He has a contract to load several cars of them.

Lister

Sam Lazachuck has returned to his ranch at Lister after working at points east for some months.

Mr. and Mrs. Bert Hare and A. H. Blumenauer of Creston were visitors with Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Jacks on Sunday.

H. Yewbury and two sons are now located at the Rodgers camp, where they have taken a lath contract.

Harry Brown has closed up his blacksmith shop here due to a poor run of business.

Evangelist Roper had charge of the Methodist service in the Schoolhouse on Sunday morning.

The Trading Company's store looks metropolitan like, adorned with its new 2 x 16-foot sign board across the front.

A whist drive and dance is announced for Saturday evening, Feb. 11th, at the schoolhouse, to which all will be welcomed.

On Wednesday of last week there was another meeting of the Stockbreeders' Association at 8 p.m., in the schoolhouse, with Col. Fred Lister occupying the chair. Secretary McLeod read financial report which showed an 85 per cent. gain in membership as compared with the last general meeting. It was resolved that secretary make application to the live stock commissioner to keep the Shorthorn bull for another season. Election of officers then took place and resulted as follows: President, Ed. Smith; Vice-President, J. Filmer; Secretary-treasurer, Wm. McLeod; Directors, Chas. Burgess and A. Sinclair. A letter was read from the inspector commending Amos Burgess, for fine condition of the bull. Some eight new members were enrolled.

Lister United Farmers had their monthly meeting on Friday night, with a good turnout of members, and President Powers in the chair. A large amount of routine business was handled, much of it having to do with the Vancouver convention. Final arrangements were made for the apple packing school and a hearty vote of thanks was tendered Capt. Rowbury for loaning building in which to hold the school. The president announced that the Union would shortly be ordering a shipment of stumping powder and would take orders this month. The meeting then switched to a poultry discussion which lasted an hour. The White Leghorn is being discarded here and everyone is going in for either White Wyanddottes or Barred Plymouth Rocks. Later the discussion turned to potatoes, and it was pretty well agreed that it would pay everyone to plant the same variety in case there should be surplus to ship. Wm. Hurl, who produced the most potatoes in the area last season, proposed the Early Ohio and Gold Coin, and the secretary was instructed to send away and secure ton prices on seed potatoes of these varieties, which would be sold by Lister United Farmers local.

Canyon City

A couple of dozen from here were at the U.F. whist and dance at the J. M. Craigie packing shed at Erickson on Friday night, and must have had a tip top time of it as it was almost 3 a.m. before the return trip was negotiated. T. Mawson (violin), and Geo. Davie (drums) helped out nicely with the music for the dancing.

At Canyon Local of the U.F. meeting on Saturday night Jas. Adlard of of Creston, who attended the provincial convention at Vancouver last month, gave a very complete and interesting report of convention proceedings. At the adjournment of the meeting there was a couple of hours dancing, followed by light refreshments.

Canyon is hoping to be favored with a return visit from Erickson whist players and dancers to-night, when the local U.F. is having a whist and dance, with a silver collection taken. There will be a first-class supper and the best of music.

Mr. Witherhead was home from Yahk for the week-end, his first visit since Christmas. He states there is only about eighteen inches of snow in the Yahk district this winter.

The Methodists had their annual congregational meeting on Thursday afternoon last, with Pastor Knox in the chair, at which it was decided to put an addition to the church as well as move the building to a more suitable location on the lot which has just been purchased, and which will be cleared. Messrs. Strong, Searle and Anderson were elected trustees for the ensuing year. The concert announced for this month has been temporarily postponed due to the two weeks' revival campaign that Mr. Roper is conducting at Creston at present.

In connection with the congregational meeting last Thurday the Canyon Methodist Ladies' Aid Society was fully organized with Mrs. Strong as president, and Mrs. Searle, secretary. Although the membership starts at the unlucky thirteen the ladies expect to render valuable assistance in the way of helping finance church operations this year.

Fred Chambers has gone to Kitchener, where he has secured a good job, and Mr. Finalyson of Creston replaces him at the log cutting work with Peter Burns.

Due to the high cost of living or other cause several of the Canyon residents are having their telephones removed this winter, much to regret of those who are keeping their instruments. Up till now almost two thirds of the ranchers had phone connection.

Canada's Needs

No. 6—Scientific Research

In the course of the several articles which have appeared in this column under the above general heading, some of Canada's needs have been enumerated but only in the most general way has any attempt been made to suggest ways and means of meeting and providing for those needs. Recently, however, a little pamphlet has been issued by the Honorary Advisory Council for Scientific and Industrial Research which merits the serious consideration of the Canadian people and is worthy of the widest possible circulation. It presents at least one very practical suggestion how some of the needs referred to, more particularly in the fourth article of this series, can be met. It is, therefore, proposed to quote at some length from the pamphlet in question which is entitled "Research and the Problems of Unemployment, Business Depression and National Finance in Canada."

"I am not a protectionist but I say this," declared a statesman now dead. "The variety of work carried on among the citizens of Canada should be as comprehensive as possible.

"Not because we are thus enabled to boast of the number of our trades —that would be mere vanity..

"Not merely because our country should be able to fill as many as possible of its own needs without having to ask foreign aid.

"Not merely because we should learn as soon as possible to finish the raw material with which Nature endowed us—rather than confess our helplessness by asking foreigners to finish them for us and giving them the wages and the profit on our raw matreials.

"Not merely because our country should as soon as possible escape from dependence for its prosperity on any one kind of production but should divide the risk among many.

"But because Canada should retain her most ambitious sons and daughters within her own boundaries by encouraging for their sakes that variety of occupation from engineering to farming—from chemistry to literature—which, if they want the highest awards and honors, they are still compelled nowadays to seek abroad."

One of the serious drains on the strength of the Dominion of Canada is the annual loss of engineers, chemists, scientific farmers and technical experts—whose training paid for by Canadians in Canadian schools and universities supported by Canadian public money, thus goes out to make foreign countries rich and place Canada further in their debt for foreign goods and services.

Monopolies of knowledge—that is, monopolies of special branches of technical knowledge—constitute one of the most powerful weapons of trade today.

Secret agreements, combines, trusts and the ordinary method of "conspiracies in the restraint of trade," become very mild and impotent weapons when compared to such formidable instruments as, for example, a secret chemical formula that might be scribbled on the back of a calling card.

In the bloodless wars for international trade it is the armies of chemists and engineers that must be mobilized, drilled and directed against the parapets of unknown scientific facts. Export duties, credit leagues, intelligence departments, persuasive salesmanship and even the magic of a great flag, cannot win or cannot hold, for long, trade for a country whose producers are not armed with scientific knowledge of their work.

A great camera manufacturing concern in the United States is able to dominate its field in at least half the world because it knows more scientific secrets of that trade than anyone else. Because, if a new concern started in opposition, it need only reach into its pigeon holes for some new formula—not otherwise convenient to exploit at present—by which to raise its product one step beyond the competition of the would-be rival.

So in steel-making! So in the manufacture of electrical apparatus! So in textiles! So in chemistry! So in agriculture! So in every important branch of human industry!

So in Canada—as compared to other nations—everyone of our industries is threatened, and must ultimately fall under the thrall of foreign domination unless it keeps pace with the advances in technical knowledge.

So, unless we master all that is to be known regarding the nature and possibilities of our vast supplies of varied raw materials, Canadians must ultimately find themselves at the mercy of foreigners who know how to prepare our riches for purposes of commerce.

Fifty concerns in the United States retain research departments at costs ranging from $25,000 to $2,000,000 a year. In England, France and Germany, the race for technical knowledge for purposes of trade gathers speed. The mere digger-out of raw materials gets the pay of a laborer. The nation that can finish its raw materials trebles and quadruples its rewards.

The question is—Shall Canada keep reasonably in pace with the modern movement? Shall Canada add to her natural possessions a superior knowledge of how to use them?

Can the needed variety of occupations for ambitious Canadian sons and daughters be maintained unless she does make places for such knowledge and encourage those who extend it?

Can the burdens of Canadian taxation and the evils of unemployment be off-set if Canada, in her struggle for markets and for good returns on her wares, does not possess herself of the instrument of technical knowledge?

WINTER WEATHER HARD ON LITTLE ONES

Our Canadian winters are exceedingly hard on the health of little ones. The weather is often so severe that the mother cannot take the little ones out for an airing. Will Limit Navies And Restrict Use Of Gas And Submarines

Washington—The Washington negotiations for limitation of armament reached their consummation when a plenary session of the Arms Conference gave definite and public approval to the two treaties limiting navies and restricting the use of new agencies of warfare.

One of the covenants thus sealed after eleven weeks of debate establishes a fixed ratio of capital ship strength between the five great powers and the other pledges them against unrestricted submarine warfare and use of poison gas. Within a day or two the plenipotentiaries of the United States, Great Britain, Japan, France and Italy will formally affix their signatures.

At the same session the Far Eastern wing of the conference moved forward toward completion of its tasks by announcing officially the terms of the Shantung settlement and by giving final approval to nine of the resolutions adopted in committee in regard to Chinese problems. The agreement on Shantung already has been put into a draft treaty between Japan and China and the other Far Eastern settlements are to be embodied in at least two generel conventions which will come before the conference shortly.

Country Too Big For Foreign Nations To Own

Los Angeles.—China will settle her own future, according to Dr. John C. Ferguson, advisor to the President of the Chinese Republic, in Los Angeles, on his way to Pekin from the Washington arms conference. China has enjoyed the opportunity of stating its case to the world.

"Foreign nations will never own China. The country is too big, too potentially powerful, too intelligent. It holds too many brilliant men and women for the nation to remain under foreign domination."

HALIFAX EXPLOSION WRECKED HER NERVES

The reader will, no doubt, remember when a few years ago there was a collision in the Halifax, N.S., Harbor and one of the munition ships was blown up, causing great loss of life and laying a large portion of the city in ruins, and causing a great deal of suffering and distress among the inhabitants.

Mrs. Winfield Dill, now of Windsor, N.S., was living in Halifax at that time and went through this trying experience and the shock wrecked her nerves. She writes as follows:—"I was living in Halifax at the time of the explosion, and it wrecked my nerves so that I could not do my housework. I would take such nervous spells I would be under the doctor's care.

I saw Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills advertised, so I took two boxes, and they helped me so much I took six more, and now I am completely relieved. I can recommend them to anyone suffering from heart and nerve trouble."

To all those who suffer from nervous shock we would recommend our

New Record For Vancouver Port

Largest Number of Ships Called During January

Vancouver.—Fity-three deep sea ships, not including the big vessels that ply between Vancouver and San Francisco, entered and departed at this port during January.

This sets a new mark for Vancouver and it is expected that the end of the year will see the total of deep sea vessels arriving and departing above any preceding year In November, 1919, fifty-five ships entered and departed, but these included many oil, freight and passenger ships to California ports which now are classed as coastwise.

Last year, to the end of December, 389 ships arrived here compared with 336 vessels during the preceding 12 months.

Berlin.—Two French soldiers were killed and twenty-five were wounded in the disorders at Petersdorf, Silesia, according to the latest reports from Gleiwitz. Shots were exchanged while the soldiers were searching houses for arms.

Ottawa.—The amalgamation of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police with the militia, naval and air forces in the proposed department of defence, is creating much interest as to the future of that force. During the last two sessions, when legislation was before parliament to provide for bringing that force out of the west and amalgamating with it the Dominion police with headquarters at Ottawa, there was considerable opposition from members of parliament, who contended that the force had been moved to the east and enlarged until it was becoming something in the nature of "a standing army."

In the house much criticism was launched against the government of the day on the ground that needless expense was being incurred and that the force would have been better occupied had it been kept at its former work of policing only the less settled areas of Western Canada.

In view of this attitude among Liberal Members of Parliament, there is some expectation of the Mounted Police Force being returned to something like its former footing, though so far as can be learned there has been no decision or even discussion by the government as to what its policy in this regard is likely to be.

CRESTON, B.C., FRIDAY, FEB. 10

A Government Liquor Store

The action of Canyon Local of the United Farmers and Creston Women's Institute at their January meetings in passing resolutions protesting against the establishment of a Government liquor store at Creston has evoked a considerable discussion of government control of the liquor business in this district.

Without taking sides at all in the controversy there are features connected with the adoption of the resolutions in question that no harm can come of calling attention to. With the Canyon U.F. action was possibly taken with the members under the impression that in the plebiscite on the question in October, 1920, the Valley had voted "dry" whereas the reverse is the case; the voters in the area between Kitchener and Sirdar rolling up a majority in favor of government control, and now that a move has been made to have effect given to the vote as recorded in the Valley it is hardly in accord with the best British traditions to have requests going into the authorities asking that the principle of majority rule be ignored in a matter in which it has not as yet been proven that any error of judgment has been shown by those who piled up considerably better than a three fifths vote in favor of government control.

Criticism of the Women's Institute resolution in the same regard is not so much directed against the violation of the rule by majority principle but rather that the Institute acted upon a letter received from an organization that the general public is not aware actually exists, to say nothing at all of the lack of knowledge as to who are the accredited officers even, other than the secretary of the "Citizens Committee," whose name was affixed to the missive.

While the Institute member, who called attention to the inadvisability of having anything to do with a communication coming from an unknown organization, received scant support—due, doubtless, to sentimental reasons—the point she raised was a most important one; particularly in this case where the title "Citizens Committee" had been appropriated, and which from its name might be considered altogether too embracive under all the circumstances. No responsible organization like the Women's Institute should countenance the operations of "committees" that are not at least semi-publicly organized, and are not sufficiently confident of their bona fides to sponsor a very important side of a community controversy, as to indicate who the officers pro tem or permanent may be.

In calling attention to the dereliction of the Citizens Committee in not sooner disclosing the identity of those responsible for bringing it into being, we trust none will gather that the Review is opposed to its operations. Our idea is that it can perform a very useful service in this locality, and if it will prosecute its endeavors over the wide field of usefulness that opens up before it the Committee can rightly earn the gratitude of even those who at the present time may be wishing it a short existence.

History recalls that when the state of Kansas went "dry" quite a few years ago the enforcement of the prohibition act was even a greater farce than that enacted in this province between 1917 and the establishment of the present era of government control, and it was not until the people of Kansas took what might be termed direct action by the formation of Citizens Committees in every district that prohibition actually did prohibit the sale and consumption of liquor throughout that state.

The Review very seriously commends to the Valley Citizens Committee the splendid work accomplished in Kansas by a similarly constituted organization, and trusts that the local effort will not end at the mere offering of resistance to the establishment of a liquor store here.

Commendable as that effort is, the preventing of the opening of the wet goods emporium hardly meets the existing liquor law enforcement situation half way. With the active co-operation of a genuine citizens committee and a 90 per cent. sympathetic population, the keeping of the operations of the despised bootlegger down to somewhere near the irreducible minimum should not be impossible in Creston Valley.

Assessing Well Done

Whatever faults (if any) that may be charged against the assessment roll court of revision held here last week, certainly complaint can not be made that a fair and full hearing of all appeals was not given—and in view of the provisions of the Assessment Act and on the evidence submitted very little kicking is justified on the decisions handed out.

Well deserved, too, is the almost universal favorable comment on the attitude taken by Assessor Ferguson in presenting his defense of the various assessments complained of. Although a few of the appealants were inclined to show hostility, and in some measure attempt to discredit the all too apparent fairness of the assessor in making the valuations of the different Valley properties, at no time throughout the eight hours of court proceedings did Mr. Ferguson lose his usually equable temper or in any manner attempt to reciprocate any of the ill feeling those questioning his work may have disclosed.

In addition to his urbanity, court proceedings also undeniably indicated that in assessing the Valley Mr. Ferguson had devoted much time and no end of attention to preparing a roll that is eminently fair to all when all the details connected with the making of an assessed valuation of a place are taken into consideration. Whenever called upon to demonstrate that any two or more places in a given locality had been assessed on a parity he was not only able to sustain his own reputation, but his willingness to produce this evidence for comparative purposes was equally creditable.

Both in his conduct at the court as well as in his field work in making up the roll last summer, Mr. Ferguson amply demonstrated that his aim was to prepare a roll that while in good measuer conforming with the provisions of the Assessment Act would not in any case be unduly burdensome on the party assessed. Just how well he succeeded is best indicated in the court proceedings which on appeals dealing with at least half a million dollars hardly $10,000 of a total reduction was accorded in a matter of sixty appeals.

In the conduct of the court and in the handing down of his decisions Judge O'Shea was eminently fair in every essential detail, and to the onlooker it seemed that in every case of reasonable doubt the appeal ant got the benefit of it.

In addition to affording opportunity to those interested to air their taxation grievances the court also disseminated much useful taxation knowledge, as well as being the means of establishing a well deserved confidence in the fairness and ability of the assessor and judge alike.

Tax Payment Date Change

While a definite pronouncement is still lacking as to why the minister of finance made such a radical change in the date upon which provincial taxes shall be due and payable, besides adding interest on rates unpaid after due dates, and clipping off the 10 per cent. discount for prompt cash settlement, possibly in the incessant demand for rigid economy may be found the reason for the changed state of affairs.

As is well known the government on or about the first of May commences its expenditures on public works of various kinds amounting each year to about two million dollars. In the past, with taxes not due until July, and not overdue until December, the only way to finance these public works was by a temporary loan, on which interest had to be paid.

With taxes now due at the end of April a goodly share of the money needed will be immediately available, necessitating a very much smaller loan—on which the interest will be met out of the interest charge of one per cent. per month on taxes not paid by May 1st.

While the change will, assuredly, entail some financial inconvenience on more than a few residents, taking the view of the situation as disclosed above there can be no denying the fact that as affecting the province as a whole the new state of affairs has its advantages.

Locally the withdrawal of the 10 per cent. discount has produced a situation that indicates an altogether too common insincerity in more than a few who in one breath declare that people will not be able to pay their taxes until at least early fall, and in the next gasp berate the government for withdrawing the discount—which only held good until the end of June under the old order of things.

While those fortunate enough to pay before midsummer greatly appreciated the ten off there nas always been a well deserved suspicion that the discount in some measure was added on first; at least that has been demonstrated in the matter of school rates in past years. In all B.C. organized municipalities the tax discount was abolished at least four years ago.

"The Nut"

How a man dashed madly through the streets in his underclothes, stopped New York traffic with a clothing dummy, started a fire unintentionally, became a murder suspect also unintentionally and finally invented his way to the altar, are but a few of the remarkable features of "The Nut," starring Douglas Fairbanks, which is coming to the Grand Theatre on Saturday night, Feb. 11th.

This picture is said to be a combination of comedy and heart interest, with a very pleasing love story dominating throughout. In addition to the star, the photoplay has in it some of the most capable and popular screen players in the picture business.

The theatre management proclaims this film as one of the most unique that "Doug" has ever done. It displays some of the most original and laughable situations ever shown, and at the same time develops genuine artistry in the nature of its treatment at the hands of this clever and athletic comedian.

NEWS OF KOOTENAYS

Floyd Bros. of Greenwood are using up a ton of hay a day to feed their herd of 125 head of cattle at present.

Oldtimers at Cranbrook are agreed that last month was the first January in the town's history that went through without the usual January thaw.

An up-to-date magic lantern has just been purchased by the Fernie school board and will be utilized in the teaching of geography and nature study.

At the increased rate for electric energy the citizens of Grand Forks will pay at least $8000 per year more than was the case the previous twelve months.

To induce owners to pay their dog taxes promptly the council at Fernie is allowing a rebate of 50 cents per canine on all tags bought before the end of March.

Real Scotch economy is again in evidence. At a silver tea given by a couple of English Church ladies at Cranbrook last week the cash intake was less than $10.

There is talk of building a creamery at Greenwood, and the Ledge estimates that there are at least 250 milk cows in that section that would be already available to supply the factory.

At Greenwood the electricity for lighting purposes is now being turned off a few hours every day, in order to save the large amount of extra current that is being used daily but not paid for.

Cranbrook ratepayers are to be afforded opportunity to vote as whether the increased school accommodation shall be in shape of a brand new school building or an addition to the present central school.

At least eighteen Kaslo citizens are employing their spare time this winter at trapping operations on the nearby creeks. John Drill, who is operating a line at Howser, had taken 20 marten up to the end of December.

Gardiner retained his sense of location, and slipped silently to the wall. Harris was rushing about the rotten floor in the darkness, crying, "What is it, Allan? For God's sake, what has happened? Are you shot?" and for his own noise he could not hear Gardiner's stealthy movements. Gardiner's hand fell on a log of the wall, and his keen fingers traced their way along it. Five steps, he judged, and the bag would be at his feet. At the fifth step his toe touched an object on the floor; he leaned over and raised the booty in his hand.

By this time his eyes had responded to the intense darkness, and he could discern a square of greyer gloom where the window admitted the night. He moved rapidly and silently toward it, but almost with the last step his foot slipped through a broken spot on the floor, and he staggered and fell. The revolver was thrown from his grasp, but he was able to pitch the bag through the window as he crashed to the floor.

The sound arrested Harris, and before Gardiner could extricate himself the farmer was upon him. At first he seemed to think it was Allan, and felt about in the darkness without attempting to defend himself. This gave Gardiner an opportunity; he was able to clasp his arms about Harris's shins, and, with a quick turn of the body, cast his adversary headlong to the floor. At the same moment he freed himself from his entanglement and made another dash for the window.

But Harris, still numbed from his heavy sleep, now realized that some kind of tragedy had occurred, and guessed enough to believe that Allan was a victim. From his prostrate position, with one powerful leg he interrupted Gardiner's flight, and the next moment the two men were rolling on the floor in each other's arms. Harris was much the stronger man of the two, but Gardiner was active and had some skill in wrestling. Besides, Harris had been taken wholly by surprise, and had no idea who his antagonist was, while Gardiner had full knowledge of all the circumstances, and the struggle was less uneven than might have been supposed. Inwardly cursing the luck that had thrown the revolver from his hand, Gardiner sought in the darkness for his adversary's throat, nose, or eyes. Harris, seizing the younger man by the waist, lifted him bodily from the floor and crashed him down again upon it, but the next instant Gardiner had one of his hands in both of his, and, bringing his knee down with great force on Harris's elbow, compelled him, at the risk of a broken arm, to turn face downwards on the floor. Gardiner again wrenched violently to break free, but Harris's grip was too much for him, so with the quickness and fury of a tiger he threw himself upon the farmer's back and wrapped his free arm about his throat. With his air partially cut off Harris released the grip of his other hand, and Gardiner instantly took advantage of this move to bring both arms to bear on Harris's throat. Things began to go badly with the farmer; face downwards on the floor, he was unable to shake his adversary off, and was losing strength rapidly with his choking. Gardiner no longer sought an opportunity to break away; his blood was up and he was in the fight to the finish, ruled at last by his heart instead of his head. Had he been content merely to retain his present advantage, unconsciousness would soon have overcome his victim, but he tried to improve his grip, and the attempt proved disastrous. His thumb seeking better vantage, fell into Harris's gasping mouth. Harris was no more depraved than most of mankind, but when fighting for life, and choking to death in the hands of an unknown enemy, he was ready to seize any advantage, and with a great effort he brought his jaws together upon the intruder.

With a yell of pain Gardiner sprang to his feet, jerking the farmer into a half-sitting posture as he did so, and Harris, with a great gasp for air, relinquished his sudden and unexpected advantage. But Gardiner's head was again in command; he rushed through the door, half falling over the obstruction as he went, and in an instant was lost in the gloom of the night.

For some minutes Harris lay on the floor, recovering his breath. As the oxygen welled back into his lungs he began to realize that, save for his choking, he was unhurt. With returning strength his thought reverted to Allan, and, calling the boy's name, he sprang to his feet. The first thing was to get a light. He found matches in his pocket, struck one, and peered eagerly into the gloom as its flickering flame beat back the darkness. A blanket, rolled and stained, lay in the doorway, and within it was a figure that might once have been a man. Harris's heart almost stopped at the sight: "Allan," he gasped, "my boy, Allan." He tiptoed across the crumbling floor toward it, holding the match before him. A man's boot and part of a trouser leg protruded from the mass. He held the match downward, leaning over them. They were not Allan's.

"Thank God," he murmured, swelling with a great hope, "thank God for that."

He struck another match and found the lantern. When he had lighted it he surveyed the little building, and saw Allan's gun lying at the end farthest from the door. Not until that moment did he think of the money. Allan had been uppermost in his mind, and when he thought of Allan, money was no consideration. But now a great wave of understanding rushed in upon him. Yes, the bag was gone. They had been attacked by robbers. Knowledge of their expedition had in some way got to evil ears, and while he slept Allan had been set upon. The boy had emptied his gun—the huddled mass in the doorway told that tale plainly enough—but other robbers had seized the cash and Allan had pursued them empty-handed. They had fired at him as he rushed from the building—that was the flash he saw a few seconds after the first loud report. He was not quite clear as to his own share in the fight, but he saw the general plan of it plainly enough. He began to wonder what had happened to Gardiner and Riles. Had they been shot down as they wound through the woods? This was evidently the work of a gang prepared to stop at nothing. Harris never for a moment suspected his old neighbour of treachery. He was himself a hard, grasping, money-seeking man, but he had a code of honour none the less, and within its limitations none was more honourable than he. To have done what Riles had done would have been quite impossible for John Harris, and because it was impossible for him its possibility for Riles never suggested itself.

Harris had not yet fully realized the loss of his money. It was overshadowed by the more tragic events of which one evidence lay before him. His anxiety for Allan loomed larger in his mind, although he had little doubt the boy would take proper care of himself, and, even if unarmed, would come back with the money and perhaps with a prisoner. The fact that Allan had not taken his gun was reassuring; if there had been any great danger he would not have left it behind. But he must get out now and aid in the search.

As he reached this decision his eye caught a gleam of something shining on the floor. He walked to it and found a revolver, fully loaded except for one chamber, which had been discharged. "This is evidence," said he—"important evidence." Harris had all the Old Ontario contempt for this kind of weapon, and knew comparatively little about it, but he concluded from its appearance that it was almost new. As he examined it his eye fell on the initials, "J. T.," cut in the grip.

"J. T.," he said to himself. "J. T. Those initials seem familiar. I'll just leave this thing where I found it, until the police see it."

Replacing the weapon on the floor, he stole out of the cabin, avoiding the silent obstruction in the doorway. Outside he stood for a moment undecided. The circle of light from his lantern might beacon Allan back to the shanty, but it would also prove a signal to the robbers, if they were still in the vicinity. The night was now very dark, clouds having obscured the stars, and an occasional big drop of rain spat about him. The roar of water came up from the valleys, but above or through that roar suddenly he fancied he heard a sound from the bushes near at hand. He held his breath and listened intently. He half wished he had brought the revolver with him. Yes, there it was again—a human sound, beyond question, half groan, half gurgle. He turned in the direction from which it came and stole quietly forward. Half-a-dozen yards from the building the light revealed, first a shadow, and then a figure lying on the ground. With some trepidation Harris approached. The man's arms had been extended when he fell, and his coat was thrown over his head. Harris stooped and drew it down over the shoulders exposing the face.

It was Allan.

The first shock of the revelation almost stopped the heart of the old farmer, and he sat back as one dazed unable to accept the testimony of his own eyes. Then came a panic of uncertainty, and he fell upon the boy, groping wildly for his heart, and at last pressing upon it in an agony of fear. . . . Yes, the beat was there, faint and uneven, but unmistakable. With a sudden surge of returning hope he brought his ear down to the open mouth, fringed with light red foam, and could hear the air labouring in the ravaged lungs. Then came that human sound, half gurgle, half groan; but to Harris, in the reaction from his first paralyzing fear, it was as very music from heaven. His boy still lived, and still should live.

A Lesson FROM Ancient Rome

Two thousand years ago the athletes and fighting gladiators of the Roman Empire, to ensure speedy healthy healing of wounds, sores and injuries used magical herbal oils and balms.

Taking a lesson from the Ancients, an eminent firm of manufacturing chemists undertook a search to recover these lost secrets. Certain rich herbal oils and essences were at last found and a scientific means of blending and refining them was devised.

After lengthy and costly experiment a super-balm was evolved which contains these potent herbal saps in the most perfect form. To this new discovery was given the name zam-buk, to indicate the highest achievement yet attained in the healing art.

Treatment of skin diseases and injuries has been revolutionized by zam-buk. Its healing and antiseptic power is enhanced by the complete absence of rancid animal fats that distinguish ordinary salves.

Eczema, ringworm, ulcers, piles, poisoned wounds, rashes, cold-sores, chaps, chilblains, children's scalp troubles, etc., yield rapidly to zam-buk.

Ship Wheat Via Pacific

Total Bookings for Season Estimated At Seven Million Bushels

Calgary grain men estimate that the total bookings of wheat via Vancouver this season will amount to approximately seven million bushels. In the course of an interview with one of the representatives in Calgary of a Vancouver exporting house, the Canadian Press was informed that the premium that was now being paid for wheat going via the coast as compared with Fort William, represented an average of $100 a car.

"There is every indication" he said, "that great as the increase has been this season in the Vancouver shipments, this will be largely exceeded next season. For a considerable time there has been a regular procession of New York, Chicago and Winnipeg grain agents at the coast, looking carefully into the new route, and they have apparently come to the decision that the new channel of shipment to the United Kingdom will become permanent."

MRS. ANNA E. HUGHES, Chicago, Ill.

Mrs. Anna E. Hughes, 22 West Elm St., Chicago, an artist who enjoys a wide and enviable reputation for skill in china painting, in relating the facts of her remarkable experience with Tanlac, says:

"I haven't enjoyed such good health or felt so well in every way in years as I do now. Before I took Tanlac I was so run down that half an hour at my work would tire me completely out and I was actually so nervous and weak that at times the brush would fall from my hands and I would have to quit work for the rest of the day. Every night I would lie awake for hours, miserable and nervous.

"My improvement after the first few doses of Tanlac was rapid and constant. I'm happy to say I'm well and strong now and feel better than in twenty years. Tanlac deserves every word of praise I can give it."

WOMEN AND GIRLS WANT ROSY CHEEKS

They Can Be Had By Keeping the Blood Rich and Pure

Every woman—every girl—wants rosy cheeks. They mean not only beauty but good health. When a woman's blood is scanty or anaemic her color fades, she looks debilitated, is short of breath and her heart palpitates after slight exertion. Sometimes this trouble is accompanied by severe headaches, or pains in the back or sides. This condition is entirely due to weak, watery blood, and can only be cured by making the blood rich, red and pure. For this purpose try Dr. Williams Pink Pills, which act directly upon the blood, and in this way bring new health and strength to weak, ailing people. Mrs. Isaac W. Howell, Petitcodiac, N.B., tells of what Dr. Williams Pink Pills did for her as follows:—"For some time I had not been feeling well. I had been gradually growing weaker, and found it constantly growing harder to do my housework. I was very pale and had frequent headaches. I consulted a doctor and took his medicine for some time, but it did me no good. I found myself growing weaker, and taking faint and dizzy spells. A friend advised me to try Dr. Williams Pink Pills, and although I had nearly lost faith in all medicine, I got a supply and began their use. After a time I found they were helping me, and I gladly continued taking them, and ultimately found that the trouble that had afflicted me had vanished I am giving this statement in the hope that my experience will be of benefit to others."

You can get Dr. Williams Pink Pills through any dealer in medicine, or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50, from The Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

With enough money, enough time and enough luck, a man may get back the health he has lost—or part of it.

It takes patience, too.

And then there may be no success, or only a little.

It's better to save what you have than hunt for what you've lost—as the most successful health-restorers will tell you.

Much of the loss of health is due to faulty, careless diet. Wrong meals at all times and right meals at wrong times load the long-suffering digestive organs with elements of destruction, or starve the tissues and glands of needed elements.
