John Joy is home again from Kaslo, where he has been for some weeks on a harness repair contract.

Erickson was well represented at Creston on Wednesday afternoon for the annual meeting of Creston Fruit Growers' Union. Even Manager Van Ackeran closed up the co op store in order to attend.

A couple of sleighloads of Lister people invaded the Littlejohn home on Friday night and treated them to a surprise party at which dancing and games of several sorts were the features and a real fine time enjoyed by all.

Mr. and Mrs. E. Botterill were summarily called upon to entertain last week's surprise party outing who celebrated in the usual style on Friday night at the Botterill home with cards and dancing, and the always excellent midnight lunch. The top scorers at whist were Miss Gladys Wood and Mr. Homersham, while Mrs. Cook and Clarence Maxwell distinguished themselves at low scoring.

The music for the dancing was by Mr. Marshall, Sam McNeil and Hector Stewart, whilst in between the dance numbers were songs by Mrs. R. Stewart, Misses M. Vaness and V. Marshall, and J. W. Vaness, whilst Robt. Stewart lent variety to the programme with a reading. The usual fine lunch was served, and everybody went home happy.

There was quite a good turnout at the United Farmer whist and dance on Saturday night at the schoolhouse at which the freewill offering netted about $12 for the general revenues of the local. Both prizes at cards went to the men players, Guy Browell doing the fancy high scoring and Hilton Young getting the booby trophy. There was great music for the dancing with Mrs. and Mr. Davie on the piano and drums. T. R. Mawson, violin, and Ted Swanson, accordeon.

If the prevailing sunny weather continues the 1923 sleighing will be gone completely by the time this appears in print. The Company needed about another week of it to complete their haul of logs and have also a quantity of ties yet to get to the siding.

We were in error last week in stating Mr. Kolthammer was pianist at the minstrel show on the 17th of February. Credit for the efficient work as accompanist belongs to Miss Frances Knott, who both on show night as well as at rehearsals rendered invaluable service in her usual happy fashion.

Her chestnut hair, piled in a silken crown on her shapely head, shaded a face that made those who saw it for the first time, catch their breath in instant admiration. Her radiance was of a glorious, compelling, and wholly distinct type, as refreshing as some view of green mountains from out a gloomy canyon. She had eyes, blue in repose, but shading to violet tints when aglow with vivacity; her nose was not perfect, because a trifle tip-tilted, but her face gained character through the defect; her very red lips held most delicious allurement in their slightly full curves. Her hands and feet were small enough to pay tribute to her birth and breeding, but not so small as to be doll-like. She wore a simple, white dress, freshly laundered, which made her look cool and inviting.

"You won't mind? Now that's good of you, and no mistake." Wade shook hands with her, slowly relinquishing her cool palm. "How is Mrs. Purnell? Better?"

"Oh, yes, I think so. You're better, aren't you, mother?" she asked, as they entered the cozy little living-room, where the temperature was in pleasant contrast to the outer heat. "The air up here does you good, doesn't it?"

Mrs. Purnell, a dispirited little person, admitted that she felt very well indeed, and seemed cheered at the sight of Wade, who greeted her deferentially but with easy geniality. She liked him for his wholesomeness, and she frequently declared that he was worth all the doctors in the country because of the impression of health and optimism which he bore with him. But she was aware that Dorothy liked him, too, and so presently made an excuse to leave the two young people together.

"Now, you may tell me all about what's worrying you," the girl said, seating herself across from Wade. "Something is. You can't keep the signs from me."

"Good girl!" His voice held a suggestion of tenderness, as he rolled and lighted a cigarette, in the home-like privilege which they allowed him there. "That's your way, always. No matter who's in trouble, you are ready to hasten to the rescue."

"Oh—," she deprecatingly began, with a trace of violet showing in her eyes, which meant a great deal more than words.

"No wonder every man in the valley considers himself your own, especial knight."

"I thought perhaps I could help you," she said briskly, to cover her sentimental moment. "But that was foolish of me, too, wasn't it? The idea of any one helping you."

"I'm likely to need all my friends soon, Dorothy," Wade answered soberly. "I came in to-day to see Race Moran. There's a big band of sheep on our upper range, and Jensen, who has charge of them, admitted to me this morning that Moran is behind him."

"Goodness, more sheep! Wherever do they come from?"

"I don't know where they come from, but they can't stay where they are unless I go out of business, that's certain." In a few words, he explained to her the significance of the movement, and told her of his talk with Moran. "I've no use for the man," he concluded, "and if it comes to a showdown between us, he need expect no sympathy. I've held back as long as I can. I understand better than he does what the crack of the first rifle will lead to."

"You have not liked him since you found that he took that snapshot of me," she said whimsically. "I didn't mind, but I can't imagine what he wanted it for."

Wade's face darkened.

"It was a confounded impertinence, whatever he wanted with it. But my dislike of him goes further back than that."

"What are you going to do?" she asked, resting her chin in her hand, and looking straight in the eyes, as she always did to those with whom she talked.

"It largely depends on him. Santry—you know how hot-headed he is—would run the herders away by force and kill off the sheep. As a last resort, of course, we may have to do something like that, but I want to win this fight without open violence if we can. A faction war, in the end, would be likely to ruin us all."

"You must be careful," the girl declared earnestly. "Moran is not going to be an easy man to handle. He seems to have plenty of money, and they say here in town that he stands in with the government; that he has some sort of 'pull.' He's clever, I think. He'll trick you if he can."

"I'm sure of that, Dorothy, but we're not going to let him. If only . . . ! Say, do you know something else that is being said in this town? Something that they're saying about me?"

"Something nice?" her tone was archly inquiring.

He leaned forward and lightly rested his hand on her knee, just as he might have done with a man friend, and she took little notice of it. His fingers were trembling a little under the stress of the emotion he felt.

"They're saying, those who don't like me, I guess, that I' m afraid of Moran and his crowd; afraid of a lot of sheep herders. No, of course, my friends don't believe it," he hastened to add when she started to interrupt. "But it's not doing me any good, especially now that public feeling is running so high."

"But you mustn't mind what they say, Gordon. That's part of the courage your friends know that you have: to do what you feel to be right, no matter what is said."

Her cheeks were glowing with indignation, and he appreciatively patted her hand before sitting erect in his chair again. It was no wonder, he reflected, in that almost womanless land, that many a cowpuncher rode the range by night, seeing her image in every star. The thought that each single man, and many a married one, in Crawling Water, would ride into the Pit itself to win one of her smiles, had been Wade's comfort, even when he was thinking of the possibility of bloodshed between the two hostile factions. But now, in the moment of her sympathy for him, he felt that he could not be content without some further assurance of her safety.

"What you say sounds well, Dorothy, but my pride's working on me, too, now. I can't help it. If my friends, who have been good enough to accept my leadership so far, should lose their heads and go to it without me, I might talk afterward until Kingdom come. I'd never convince anybody that I hadn't funked the thing. You spoke a few minutes ago of helping me. You can help me a great deal."

Her lovely face instantly blazed with eagerness.

"Can I? How?"

"By promising me that, if it comes to a fight, you and your mother will come out to my ranch. You'd be safer there. That is, of course, unless you'd prefer to leave Crawling Water altogether."

"Indeed, I shouldn't prefer to leave Crawling Water at this stage of the game, and"—she smiled reassuringly—"I'm sure we should be safe enough right here whatever happened. But, if you'd feel better about it, we would go to the ranch."

"Thanks. I feel better about it already, more free to show my hand. You are safe enough here now, of course, and might be clear through to the finish; but cheap whiskey has led many a fairly good man astray."

"If only there were some peaceable way out of it all." Her eyes became anxious as she thought of what he might have to face. "Can't you telegraph to Washington, or something?"

"Washington doesn't know whether Crawling Water is in the United States or in Timbuctoo," Wade laughed. "If we had some one in authority right here on the ground we might make him understand, but Mahomet will never come to these mountains, and they can't go to Mahomet. Why, what's the matter?"

His question was prompted by the sudden elation with which she had clapped her hands and sprung to her feet.

"How stupid of me, Gordon, to have forgotten." She stood over him with shining eyes and eager countenance, as lovely as a Lorelei. "There is an official of the United States Government here at this very moment."

"Here? In Crawling Water?" he exclaimed in amazement. "Who is he?"

"Senator Rexhill, Gordon." Wade stared almost vacuously at her as she ran on with her news. "He came in with his daughter last night on the Sheridan stage. Isn't that glorious? You must go up to see him at once."

"I will, of course," Wade said slowly, trying to catch his mental balance. "And with pleasure, too. It's been a long time since I last saw either of them."

"You know them—him?" Dorothy hesitated a little over which pronoun to use, with the somewhat disturbing reflection that Helen Rexhill was a most beautiful and distinguished look-ing girl. "That will make it all the easier," she added generously.

"Of course, Senator Rexhill has no authority of his own in such a matter, you know; but if we can get him interested, he may wake up Washington in our behalf. Only, I don't see what can have brought him to Crawling Water."

"Do you—do you know the daughter well?" Dorothy asked, with feminine cogency. "I suppose you met her back East?"

"We've known each other for a number of years." He arose his face expressive of the delight he felt at the Rexhills' presence in town. "We used to be good friends. You'll like her. But it's strange they didn't tell me of their coming. You'll pardon me if I hurry over to the hotel, won't you, Dorothy?"

She gently urged him out of the house.

"Of course, don't waste a moment, and let me know just as soon as you can what the outcome is. I do hope the Senator can settle all this trouble."

"I want you to meet them right away," he called, over his shoulder, and when he looked back for his answer, she nodded brightly.

But as she turned back into the cottage after watching him swing up the street she was not at all sure that she would like Helen Rexhill.

HER HEART SKIPPED EVERY THIRD BEAT

Mrs. James Burleigh, 248 King St. E., Chatham, Ont., writes:—"I think it my duty to let you know what Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills have done for me.

I suffered for years with palpitation of the heart, my nerves were very bad, and I could not be left alone at any time. I doctored for over a year, and the doctor said my heart was very bad as it skipped every third beat.

I gave up, just at this time, and then my mother advised me to try Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills, saying my eldest brother had been relieved by using them when he was very bad with his heart and nerves. I got a box and started to take them, and when I had used it I felt a lot better; could sleep a little and felt stronger. I continued taking them for about three months, and felt better than I had for years.

When I think of the misery and suffering I went through before I started Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills, I feel like letting everyone know what they did for me."

The Family Physician.—The good doctor is always worth his fee. But it is not always possible to get a doctor just when you want him. Maintained Revenue

In a review of conditions in Canada, the Monetary Times, one of the principal financial papers of the Dominion, states in its annual: "It would seem as though Canada had maintained her revenue better during 1922 than almost any other country in the world, for while in most other countries revenue has fallen off greatly, in Canada it has actually increased."

Vanished After Using Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

"Branchton, Ont.—"When I wrote to you for help my action was mostly prompted by curiosity. I wondered if I, too, would benefit by your medicine. It was the most profitable action I have ever taken, I heartily assure you, for through its results I am relieved of most of my sufferings. I have taken six boxes of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Tablets and a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Blood Medicine, and I can honestly say I have never been so well before. I had suffered from pains and other troubles since I was fifteen years old, and during the 'Great War' period I worked on munitions for two years, and, in the heavy lifting which my work called for, I strained myself, causing pelvic inflammation from which I have suffered untold agony, and I often had to give up and go to bed. I had doctored for several years without getting permanent relief, when I started to take your medicines."—Mrs. GOLDWIN MISENER, Branchton, Ont.

Honorable W. R. Saskatchewan alone will produce over thirty million pounds of creamery butter this year and this product is of splendid quality." Mr. Motherwell is a successful farmer himself in Saskatchewan.

CRESTON, B.C., FRIDAY, MAR. 2

A Timely Appeal

A special appeal to the employers on behalf of disabled returned soldiers is being made by Attorney-General A. M. Manson, minister of labor. A letter has been dispatched to practically every employer of labor in B.C. asking for co-operating in providing work for returned men, and especially those incapacitated through their war experiences. The minister points out that there are between 800 and 1000 disabled veterans in the province.

"They remind us," he writes, "of a duty which we cannot ignore. Many of them before the war were assured of safe positions in the professions, in commerce or in industry, and of every comfort for the rest of their days. They put these things behind them. They made the sacrifice—a sacrifice known to all. They have come back maimed in body and broken in health, desiring nothing so mmch as to be able to make a new start in life. Many of these men find it impossible to look for a return of the same measure of prosperity which they formerly enjoyed. But they do ask to be allowed to serve the community in some use ful capacity, in such a way as their strength and opportunity will permit."

Hon. Mr. Manson appeals to the employers to arrange their organizations so that at least a few veterans may be given employment and to give the preference to returned men when engaging more assistance. Incidentally, he points out that more than eighty per cent. of the men who have been added to the civil service during the past four years, by appointment and re instatement, have been returned soldiers.

Risky Playground

It is the unexpected that often happens—and the phenomena is as likely in Creston as anywhere else. In Vernon, as in Creston, children are in the habit of utilizing the railway tracks as a highway from school to and fsom home. No mishaps of any kind having taken place no heed was paid to this somewhat dangerous practice. A few days ago a Vernon youngster was killed whilst playing along the railway right of way, and in view of a weakness in the same direction amongst Creston children the following from the Vernon News will not be read amiss:

"The accident on the Railway track last week was not unexpected by those who have watched with much concern the school children who so carelessly walk across and along the tracks. The little victim, however, was not a scholar and it was perhaps his first visit to the railways, but nevertheless the boys and girls are much too careless when near the tracks.

"Parents and teachers should continually impress upon the youngsters the danger of playing near the trains. Time after time the trainmen have chased the kiddies off the right of way but back they come oblivious to the danger.

"Safety first is the best policy and parents and teachers should be most emphatic in warning the boys and girls.

"There is only one way for them to be safe from danger and that is to keep away from it."

Redistribution

Whatever excitement there may be in political circles these days has mostly to do with the proposed redistribution of the federal constituencies, legislation concerning which was brought down at Ottawa last week, providing for an addition of some twelve members, one of whom will come from British Columbia.

In defining the boundaries of the constituency to be looked after by the prospective new member it might look as if the Kootenay would again revert back to one representative—part of the West Kootenay riding being merged into Yale; with some of Yale added to Cariboo, and then Cariboo with the part of Yale added to it split up into two ridings, thus placing the extra member in the north country.

Other opinion is to the effect that the new member will come from a constituency at the coast carved out of the existing ridings of Vancouver and New Westminster, where the bulk of the increased population is.

Should the plan first mentioned be followed Creston will not be concerned in the redistribution effort, but if the decision is made to continue Kootenay with two members then it is more than likely the Creston Valley will find itself in East Kootenay when the next federal polling takes place.

Geographically East Kootenay would seem to be where this district belongs, and as the census taken in 1921 indicates that the population of West Kootenay is at least twenty-fixe per cent. greater than that of East Kootenay this change of constituency would seem inevitable.

Provincially considered this rearrangements of the boundaries of the federal constituencies is of even greater interest here. As is well known there will be a redistribution in British Columbia before the next provincial contest and in the fixing of the boundaries of provincial ridings the lines followed by the Ottawa authorities may well be used by the B.C. constituency reconstructors.

Should the Donminion redistribution land Creston Valley in East Kootenay the case for the creation of a new provincial riding of which Creston will be the centre would be materially strengthened. Owing to decreases in population it now seems certain that the Slocan riding will have to have more voters or there will be no excuse for a Slocan riding, and what would be more natural than to add the Kaslo district to Slocan—or Slocan to Kaslo—and thus create a constituency with interests in common and provide the needed constituency population.

This would leave Creston homeless and as Nelson and Cranbrook ridings both have the requiste total of population there would be nothing to it but to take part of the Kootenay Lake territory, Creston Valley and the area included in Yahk, and possibly Lumberton, and make a new riding with its central at Creston.

Politically as well as geographically this proposed new constituency has much to recommend it to the powers that be at Victoria. In the past the points east of Creston Valley have always shown strong Liberal tendencies on polling days and this would about wipe out the normal Conservative majority that has always been in evidence in Valley political contests. Likewise it would create a riding largely agricultural in which the new farmer party should find the fighting pretty much to their liking.

Board of Trade February Session

Seventy-five per cent. efficiency was shown at the inaugural meeting of the Creston Board of Trade at the February session on Tuesday night last, which was presided by President Bennett. One new member was added in F. V. Staples, of the garage firm of Staples & Pierson, and the board unanimously agreed to have the president name a committee of three to co-operate with the growers committee in the circulating of the contracts for signature in connection with the formation of a local of the Co Operative Growers of B.C., Limited.

A letter was read from R. Sinclair Smith of West Creston, asking the board to take up with Wm. Ramsay, district engineer, the matter of improving the ferry in the way of putting on aprons that will be the full width of the barge and a few feet longer. At low water periods the travelling would be measurably improved by a longer apron on both ends of the ferry, whilst a greater width to the apron would also be an added convenience. On motion the secretary was instructed to take the matter up with the engineer.

Secretary Payne of Creston local of the G.W.V.A., favored with a letter asking the board to communicate with the provincial Land Settlement Board asking that the rate of interest in the soldier-farmer land purchase agreements at Lister be reduced from seven to five per cent. On motion the letter was ordered fyled. As practically every Lister farmer has now signed his agreement, and remembering that it is quite impossible to borrow money for less than six per cent., the board members could not understand why a request of the sort should be made.

President Bennett, vice-president Garland, and secretary Allan were named a committee to strike the board's standing committees for 1923, and the following members have consented to ask on the committees assigned them:

Finance—Geo. Johnson, E. C Gibbs, C. F. Hayes.

Transportation and Highways—R. B. Staples, Dr. Henderson, C. O. Rodgers.

Irrigation and Agriculture—Jas. Adlard, W. B. Embree, Major Mallandaine.

Reclamation—Guy Constable, R. S. Bevan, C. B. Garland.

Publicity—C. F. Hayes, S. A Speers, C. W. Allan.

Legislative and Municipal—C. B. Garland, Major Mallandaine, Col. Fred Lister, M.P.P.

Chairman Bennett of the cemetery improvement committee, announces that there is now almost sufficient funds in hand to get on with the work, and as soon as the weather takes the right turn a start will be made.

Rod and Gun Club Having Banquet

There was an enthusiastic and representative turnout of members for the annual meeting of Creston Valley Rod and Gun Club, which was held at the office of Major Mallandaine on Friday night, President Mallandaine occupying the chair.

Secretary Capt. Crompton presented a carefully prepared statement of the club's activities during 1922, probably the most important of which was the planting of several of the bigger sloughs on the flats to wild rice, which had thrived wonderfully well, and been in great measure responsible for producing the best duck hunting season the Creston district has ever had. His report was adopted with enthusiasm as was also the financial statement, duly audited, submitted by Vic. Mawson, club treasurer, which showed the club to have finished the year with all obligations met, and a balance of almost $10 in the treasury.

So well satisfied is the membership with the work done by the 1922 officers that they were all given unanimous re-election for 1923, as follows:

President—Major Mallandaine.
Secretary—Capt. Crompton.
Treasurer—Vic. Mawson.

After the annual meeting features had been disposed of by a motion to that effect combined with the usual hearty vote of thanks for official services rendered, the club went into regular session for the month of February, and amongst other things elected two new members in J. Hall and W. J. Hale.

Letters were read from the Game Conservation Board suggesting that for this season at least four or five honorary game guardians be appointed to supervise game protection in the Valley, but the club members were of opinion that the necessity of the situation could only be met by the appointment of a permanent deputy game warden, and the secretary was instructed to write the department head at Victoria to this effect.

The letter from C. W. Robinson, fishery inspector notified that so far the data obtained was not sufficient to enable the fishery authorities to determine whether the bass now being caught in Kootenay River were sufficiently numerous or voracious as to be considered a menace to the other species of fish inhabiting that river as well as Kootenay Lake in which latter water bass were caught last year. Mr. Robinson also advised that from the observations he had been able to make the fishing season of 1922 generally speaking was quite the equal of any of the immediate previous years.

In connection with the bass the club decided to make no recommendation as to handling the situation beyond asking that the catch of these fish be limited to twenty-five a day, with none less than seven inches a legal catch.

So well pleased is the club with its experiment at rice planting that the secretary was instructed to obtain prices on rice for 1923 planting on more of the local sloughs.

The Game Conservation Board will again be asked to extend the geese shooting season to April 30th of each year. This request was made a year ago, and the club has had no occasion to change its mind in the interim. The board will also be asked to again pay bounty on crows, magpies and bluejays as in the past.

No alterations will be asked in the trapping regulations, but the game autorities will be urged to have an open season in this district for caribou, with a limit of one bull, and request will be made that for 1923 the kill of deer shall permit of taking one doe and two bucks of either species, in place of the past two seasons when the regulations provided for the kill of bucks only, with a limit of three.

To increase interest in club work as well as to get firsthand information on game conservation work generally it was decided that the Rod and Gun Club give a banquet during March, on a date that will permit of the attendance of J. F. Guimond of Cranbrook, one of the three members constituting the B.C. Game Conservation Board, and the secretary is in communication with Mr. Guimond arranging for as early a date as possible.

Gets Four Months

Provincial police McLaren did a shrewd bit of burglar catching last week, which ended on Saturday afternoon when Magistrate Mallandaine senttnced Louie Pascell to four months in Nelson jail for breaking into the residence of W. H. McQueen at Canyon a couple of weeks ago and stealing a revolver, several dollars in cash and some household articles. On being notified of the the theft Mr. McLaren immediately visited the McQueen home and in exploring the grounds discovered footmarks leading from some standing timber a few hundred yards away. Following these he came upon a dead horse, from which the saddle had been removed. On making enquiries for a possible owner of a horse answering the description of the dead animal he not only located the owner but also learned that the accused had been seen at Canyon the day of the theft with a steed that looked more dead thrn alive. On search being made of the Pascell home the revolver and some of the missing articles were found. The prisoner has been in custody before, and it is reported that last summer he was in trouble at Bonners Ferry for shooting a calf belonging to a white living near the reserve at that point.

Lessons Of History

The political history of the world is one long continued story of struggle towards the accomplishment of reforms—a never ending battle to overthrow existing evils and to right grievous wrong. From the early dawn of history, under old despotic monarchies, up through the dark ages," right down to the present time, man has striven to better his condition, obtain his liberty, and defend and widen that liberty.

But all too frequently in the attempts made to remove injustices and right existing wrongs, and in the methods employed to these ends, equally great injustice has been done, and even greater wrongs perpetrated. The history of the world affords numerous examples where, even in the name of religion, terrible wrongs have been inflicted upon thousands of innocent people, and appalling injustice meted out.

Take the Russia of today as an example. History records that for centuries under the absolute rule of the Czars people were downtrodden, liberty flouted, innocent men, women and children thrown into prison without trial, banished to Siberia, and put to death. Groaning under the burdens imposed upon people, plot followed plot, Czars and Governors were assassinated, revolutions fomented. Finally, the revolutionares were successful, and a republic set up. But what is it? A republic of fanatics, whose leaders hold office through a reign of terror, under which liberty has become a by-word, and whose excesses far exceed those of the later years of the Czardom. In other words, the cure is for the time being worse than the disease.

In the first half of the last century it is not to be denied that the workers of the world were underpaid, poorly housed and fed, and the conditions under which they were obliged to labor almost everything they should not be. Factories were unsanitary and unsafe, often veritable firetraps; mines unprotected! seamen were made the victims of press gangs, and the worker generally the victim of rapaciousness and greed on the part of others. Gradually, the workers of the world organized for self defence. Reforms were forced. Conditions bettered in every way. Then in turn the organized workers, utilizing their strength, began to impose arbitrary and unjust conditions, not on employers alone, but on their fellow workers, and to such an extent that only those who would conform to their particular views and methods, and subscribe to their creed, were allowed to enjoy the right to work and thereby live.

Realizing the power of trades unionism, not only over employers and Governments, but over the workers of the world, the "Reds" of the world burrowed their way into control of many of these union organizations. Socialists, Communists, Bolsheviki, all the loud speaking, agitating elements, have to a large extent succeeded in silencing the voice of the saner, level-headed men in the ranks of organized labor. Anyone challenging the half-baked theories of these agitators is denounced as a traitor to the cause, until they gradually drop into the background, while the Bolsheviki element step forward as the exponents of the cause of the workers of the world.

But, as all past history demonstrates, there inevitably comes a time when the newer evil which has developed out of the successful attempt made to right a still older wrong, must likewise give way before those who, disgusted and alarmed over the trend of affairs, organize and do battle against the latest and common enemy.

That is what has happened in Italy in recent months. During the war the Socialists and Communists got the upper hand and when the war ended they were masters of practically all Italian industry, and threatened the existence of stable government in that country. Then arose the Fiscisti. It had its origin in opposition to Socialism which was rapidly ruining Italy, as it has for the time being ruined Russia. From small beginnings, the Fiscisti Movement has developed until today it numbers one million members, the sons of the finest people of Italy. The Fiscisti have succeeded in driving the Communists out of factories and restored them to their owners. They broke the power of the agrarian trades unions and liberated many farm hands from Socialistic control. They have taken power out of the hands of Socialistic mayors and councils. They are rapidly putting an end to industrial strikes in Italy, which were paralyzing and impoverishing the country. Finally, they forced out of office through a peaceful revolution the national Government which was subservient to Socialistic influence.

As a result of this counter-revolution of the Fiscisti, Italy is gaining in prosperity and in power and influence among the nations. The Fiscisti stand for stable, responsible government. They are upholders of the law of Italy, and are striving for the welfare, not of any one class, but of the Italian people as a whole, of Italy itself. It is a national movement which is attracting the attention of the civilized world, and is bound to have a profound influence in other countries where existing organizations are selfishly striving for their own individual benefit rather than for the welfare of the community as a whole.

VARIETY in foods is essential, of course, but in providing variety do not overlook the importance of nourishment.

Some foods supply bulk with little nourishment —others provide nourishment with little bulk.

Crisp, delicious Grape-Nuts is a highly nourishing cereal food in unusually compact form. It supplies the rich nutrition of wheat and malted barley, including the mineral elements of these splendid grains, without which health and strength cannot be maintained.

Grape-Nuts with good milk is a complete food, combining all the food elements needed for body-building.

Economical, too, because a moderate amount provides unusual nourishment.

Renown's New Type Armor

Changes for Cruiser Which Carried Prince Around the World

H.M.S. Renown, "the largest yacht in the world," the battle cruiser which carried the Prince of Wales around the world, is going into dockage for a long period to renovate its armor in accordance with the lesson learned at Jutland. It is but one step in making the navy effective under the limitations imposed by the Washington conference.

The Renown is a sister ship to the Repulse, which already has undergone improvements, consisting largely of heavily increased deck armor, considered necessary to fend off the plunging fire of high elevation guns, and universally adopted after the Germans showed such deadly effectiveness at Jutland.

NERVOUS EXHAUSTION

The Only Sure Relief is to Enrich and Build Up the Blood

Nervous exhaustion is the cause of headaches and dizziness, and it is due, almost always, to conditions of impoverished blood. Tablets and powders for headaches should never be taken; they cannot possibly reach the root of the trouble, and are often most harmful. All that is needed to bring relief is a tonic that will enrich and purify the blood, and the very best tonic for this purpose is Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. These pills have a direct action on the blood, and in this way the headaches, dizziness and other bad symptoms rapidly disappear. Mr. Mark F. Taylor, Granby, Que., tells what this medicine did for him. He says:—"I had severe headaches which would be accompanied by vomiting spells. These would last for two or three days at a time. I would take one of those spells every three or four weeks, and it is almost impossible to describe the misery they caused me. I tried a number of medicines without getting relief, until one day my mother brought me six boxes of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. When they were used I was feeling much better, and I got a further supply, and under the continued treatment every symptom of the trouble disappeared. I cannot speak too highly of this medicine for it certainly has done wonders for me."

You can get these pills through any medicine dealer or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Large People Live Longest

Longevity Rule As Applied to the Human Race

Large animals, as a rule, live longest. The life of an elephant is fourteen times that of a rabbit, while that of a goose is eight to ten times that of a sparrow. The whale is perhaps the longest lived of all warm-blooded creatures.

To some extent this rule applies also to the human race. The big races include English, Scotch, Scandinavians, Bulgarians and the Northern or Tartar Chinese. The average weight of an adult man of these races is about 150 pounds. Next come French, Italians, Spaniards, Arabs, Turks and Southern Chinese. Their average weight is between 135 and 140 pounds.

The small races are Eskimo, Mongol, Burmese, Japanese, Bengalese, Malays, Javanese and Hottentots, whose average weight when full grown is between 120 and 130 pounds.

An Eskimo is very old at forty, and few Malays live beyond fifty-five. English and Scottish men live on an average ten years longer than Italians or Turks.

Climate and food modify length of life in various parts of the world, but the averages mentioned hold good.

TROUBLES ARE OVER SAYS MRS. PILBURY

Two Bottles of Tanlac Ended Headaches, Sleepless Nights and Loss Of Appetite, She States

"As a general tonic to build up and strengthen a person, I don't believe Tanlac has an equal," declared Mrs. Emily Pilbury, a highly esteemed resident of 830 Ninth Ave. West, Calgary, Alberta, recently.

"For some time past I could hardly attend to my housework. My appetite had failed me to such an extent that I had no relish for anything. I suffered with severe headaches and couldn't get a restful night's sleep. I was weak, tired and worn out and just felt miserable all the time.

"It took only two bottles of Tanlac to put an end to every one of these troubles, and now my appetite has greatly improved, I sleep much better, and I am so strong and energetic that I am doing my housework with ease. Tanlac is such a splendid medicine it is a pleasure to recommend it."

Tanlac is for sale by all good druggists. Over 35-million bottles sold.

Better Marketing Conditions Necessary For Future Of Grain Growing Industry In West

More grain came out of the west to the Atlantic seaboard before navigation closed this year than ever before in the history of the country. More grain poured into Port Arthur and Fort William by rail, and poured out of there by boat than ever before. But the cost per bushel to the western farmers of getting his wheat from his front gate to the docks at Liverpool is regarded by him as a handicap almost fatal to his hope of success.

A western newspaper recently remarked upon the fact that the grain grower on the prairie must send his wheat over a long haul to salt water, while his competitors in Australia, Argentine and Southern Russia reach the sea much more readily. In Canada we sometimes forget that it is our coasts, not our interior provinces, which are relatively near Europe.

The west wants and needs cheaper access to Europe with her grain. How is it to be had? Competition with grain from everywhere fixes the price of Canadian wheat at Liverpool; the railways and boats fix the price of hauling the grain to Liverpool; the producer of the grain gets what's left.

It isn't enough. The man who grows the grain says it isn't enough. Is there any competent authority in Canada familiar with conditions, costs and prices who is prepared to say that it is enough?

What is to be done about it? The people mostly concerned, the people of the west, on the farms and in the towns, have some suggestions which they desire the people in the rest of Canada to consider. They say that the National Transcontinental Railway was built on the promise that it would carry grain to Quebec for six cents a bushel. It has not done so, and gives no promise of doing it. In the west it is believed that relief can be sought in two directions, (1) by an energetic policy of grain shipping all the year around via Vancouver, and (2) by shipping grain out via Hudson's Bay.

As to the first of these proposals, the export of grain by way of Vancouver is rapidly increasing each year. As to the second, an opinion prevalent in Eastern Canada was expressed in a reference made to it editorially by the Ottawa Journal the other day when it said:

"The Dominion Government built a railway to Port Nelson, which is favorably situated as a port for the despatch of steamers to and from Europe, and it has been an unqualified failure. . . The utilization of such a channel as a short cut between the grain growing centres of the west and Liverpool is now known beyond doubt to have been a mere phantasm."

It may become necessary for the press of Eastern Canada to re-open its mind on this question. The west will by no means accept as correct the statements here quoted from the Ottawa Journal. To begin with, the Hudson's Bay road was never completed to Nelson; the steel stopped ninety miles short of there, although grading was done all the way. Port Churchill would probably have been a much better terminal. The roadbed was graded to Nelson at a cost of $14,000,000 and $6,000,000 spent on terminals, and the work ended when $4,000,000 would have completed the enterprise and placed it in operation.

Can grain be taken out that way? The contention of the west is that during the latter part of August, all September and early October the straits are free of ice, and that this period of the year is the precise time when the grain of the west is lusting to reach Europe.

If grain can get out that way at that season of the year what advantage would this confer? The reply of the west is that Nelson or Churchill is nearer a large part of the western grain fields than is Fort William. And Nelson or Churchill is as near Liverpool as is Montreal. What the western grain growers see in this Hudson's Bay route, if it is workable, is that in shipping their grain to Europe they can cut down the long haul from Fort William to Montreal and place their farms as near tidewater as the farms of their competitors in Australia, Argentine and Southern Russia.

Isn't it too splendid a possibility to be left untried, or abandoned when so nearly completed? If Nelson is the wrong terminal, why not shift to Churchill, which, it is said, was the proper objective from the first.

The west is growing insistent about this enterprise and Eastern Canada must consider it seriously. Canada has not at Montreal a large enough spout for the trade she has to pour out in the future. In the opinion of the west Montreal has been altogether too influential politically and financially and her influence will have to be checked so that Canada can utilize a port of Hudson's Bay and make much greater use of the port of Quebec than has been made in the past.—The Toronto Star.

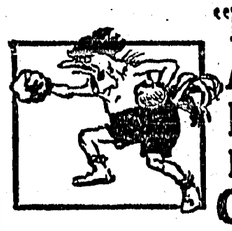
Pine Trees Commercially Important

There are nine distinct species of pine native to Canada, but, of these, three are of little interest from a practical standpoint. The other six are of great commercial importance; they comprise, in the east, the white, red and jack pines, and in the west, the western white pine and the lodgepole, or western jack pine.

WHO FIRST FELT "LIKE A FIGHTING COCK"?



COCK-FIGHTING was born with the cocks.

But it is only 80 years ago that the first man felt "like a fighting cock!"

Now he has brothers, sisters, nephews, nieces, all over the world—all feeling "like a fighting cock!"

It happens this way: A person half sick with bad stomach, dull and heavy headache, takes Beecham's Pills just before going to bed. Immediately the Pills begin to harmonize the digestive and eliminative organs.

Consequently, this person has a good night's sleep and arises in the morning with clear brain, bright eye, keen appetite, and full of energy for work and play.

It is now just 80 years since Beecham's Pills first began correcting disordered stomachs and stirring sluggish livers and bowels to natural activity — and feeling "like a fighting cock" is associated as inseparably with Beecham's Pills, as the pills are with good health.

Production Of Honey In The Three Prairie Provinces Assuming Large Proportions

Women are breaking into every line of endeavor in Canada, even to invading fields previously considered to be peculiarly man's. Last summer a taxi-cab company, not only the directors and officials but also the employees of which were women, was organized at Vancouver. The same province, saw the elevation of the first Canadian woman to cabinet rank in the Provincial Government. This year the first woman to be elected in a Federal riding took her seat in the House at Ottawa. The first Western Canadian woman to set out on the practice of law opened an office in an Alberta city a short while ago, and in the fall term McGill University registered its first woman dental student. Pioneer women are to be found in practically every line of activity in Canada, and the women who have achieved success and prosperity in the various phases of farming are numerous in every section of the country.

Another laurel must be added to the honors gained by Canadian women as pioneers in all professions in the announcement that the newly established course of bee husbandry at the University of Saskatchewan is to be presided over by a lady of the province, Miss Ethel May Brayford. It is only of recent years that the Canadian prairie provinces have come to pay any serious attention to the production of honey, and whilst there is a truly remarkable development under way, the province of Saskatchewan has fallen behind her sisters, Alberta and Manitoba, in this respect, and it is in an effort to remedy it that the course has been instituted.

Official attention was drawn to Miss Brayford when she was acting as lecturer and demonstrator with bees on the Saskatchewan Better Farming Train. Bees with her have been a life study and honey culture engrosses her exclusively. In the year 1921 she gathered 915 pounds of honey from 9 hives and sold it at 40 cents a pound, in addition to several hives which she disposed of to neighbors. Though the 1922 crop has not been weighed, 130 pounds of honey were extracted from the first hive. This work marks her as a real pratical exponent of bee culture, in addition to what pedagogic qualities she may possess, and explains her appointment to this important position.

Miss Brayford's observations should be of interest to prairie farmers concentrating their activities on large herds of cattle or expansive wheat fields. "I think bees are the most profitable sideline for farming one can have," she says, "for they carry the pollen to all flowers on vine and fruit crops." In her opinion beekeeping is one of Canada's neglected industries, this being particularly true of the west, and thousands of dollars are lost every year which farmers might be adding to their incomes. She believes that the culture can successfully and profitably be taken up by more women.

That interest in beekeeping in Saskatchewan and the entire west is increasing is apparent from the many requests Miss Brayford has had for hives as the result of her tour and the manner in which she has been bombarded with letters asking advice on the establishment of hives. Her own success is built up on a lifelong study of the insects and a natural love for what was first a hobby and has now developed into a profitable commercial undertaking. Coming from the east to Saskatchewan, she realized she could not follow the same methods owing to the shortness of the season, and she has developed the industry on lines particularly adapted to the western provincial conditions, which she will disseminate through the beekeeping course at the university.

Vancouver Busy Port

During 1922, 720 deep-sea ships entered the harbor of Vancouver, as compared with 496 in 1921. The gross tonnage for the year exceeded 4,100,000 tons, and the net will approximate 3,000,000 tons. In 1921 the gross tonnage entering the harbor was 2,946,659 and the net 1,853,844 tons. Increased lumber, grain and general export and import business are responsible. Coastwise sailings for the port averaged over 1,300 per month. The total for the year was 15,808 vessels.
