MEXICO CITY Mexico

Your most exciting gateway to Peru, Chile, Argentina, and all South America

Mexico is a delightful introduction to the ways of South America. For in all Latin America, time becomes an unimportant part of any contract. Time may be vital elsewhere, but when the tropical sun is bright, and the nights are starlit, and there is a whole world of pleasurable things to see and do, duty fades and the whim of the moment may become everything.

Prepare yourself for Mexico's leisurely pace of living. Situated in the tropics, but high on a plateau, the climate is pleasantly stimulating. Truly, this one of the world's magnificent cities, with excellent hotels at reasonable rates, fascinating restaurants and night-clubs, day and night excursions into the past and almost surrealistic present.

Mexico City is ideal for a transition from the harried pace of North America to the dignity and calm of South America. The English language is understood practically everywhere the traveller goes; the welcome is warm as from one close neighbor to another; all the glamour and enticement of the Latin American way of living unfolds before you.

All roads lead to Mexico, and practically every major city in North America is only a brief, non-stop flight away.

Come away to this continent of South America, starred with six of the world's great cities — infinitely robust, exquisitely cosmopolitan, lusty, exciting . . .

The great cities ring the shoreline of the continent. Between east and west coasts, there lie the endless pampas and the awesome welter of the Amazonian rain forests. To the west lie the cruel Andes, catapulted to staggering heights in the sky aeons ago, on of the world's treasure troves, and as yet, almost undeveloped.

This is the continent which has the virility of the very young, but a peculiar tenacity for an historic past.

The long darkness of prehistoric times brought forth the Incas — perhaps from across the vast Pacfic, perhaps by way of Alaska's land bridge from the Orient. Here they flourished, built cities in jungles and on mountain pinacles, and here their great civilization died. Nothing remains but the wind-swept, sun-swept, massive ruins.

After the Incas, European conquerors rode the fertile land, and crushed the races that preceded them. Just recently, the swift tumult of history swept them too away, and left the exuberant young, modern republics we all now know — Mexico, Peru, Chile, Argentina, Brazil and others.

This is the continent, now, of ripening political maturity and new financial stability. Still hard pressed, perhaps, but with a wonderful enthusiasm for living, and a gracious acceptance of the traveller as a friend. Nowhere in the world will you find such warmth of greeting, such pride of hospitality, such courtesy.

Modern Mexico

LIMA

Peru

The City at a Glance: "City of Kings", Lima has preserved its Spanish colonial atmosphere in its buildings and in its way of life. Besides being the historic capital, it is Peru's most important commercial and social center. Here is a city of perpetual springtime. With its quiet but gay charm, Lima will reveal to you an endless wealth of variety and contrast.

Climate and Clothing: Although just under the Equator, Lima lives in continuous spring — its climate is temperate, not tropical. Winds, rain, frost or thunderstorms just don't happen in Lima, and when the Limenan speaks of rain, he refers to the light mist which sometimes, in the cool weather of July, August and September, is sufficient to moisten the pavements. The average temperature ranges from 60 to 70 degrees. When visiting in winter (Canadian Summer) fall clothes are suitable; if visiting in summer (Canadian Winter) summer clothes are proper.

Places to See: Countless beautiful, colorful plazas (squares) abound, the most famous of which are the Plaza de Armas and Plaza San Martin. At tea time, visit the Rotunda of the Bolivar or the Lounge of the Crillon where Peruvians gossip and sip coffee. Outside Lima, one can explore the unbelievable monuments of the Inca days — whole cities built on top of towering mountains, irrigation projects and farm lands carved out of the side of steep hills on terraces which wind up into the sky.

Other Highlights: Attend an exciting bullfight at the ancient Plaza de Acho, built in 1765 and witness the skill of the best Peruvian and Spanish matadors. Make your visit complete with a tour of the nightclubs, where as is the custom, the crowd begins gathering at midnight or one o'clock in the morning. At most of the nightclubs you may drink, dance and be merry in a continental atmosphere, and very reasonably. Dining is an adventure in itself — delicious local dishes are a gourmet's delight.

Special Events: Fiesta de San Juan, the bright-hued Indian festival, is held during the week of June 24th. During Holy Week, the first week of April, come the matchless pageantry and religious solemnity of the Church festivals, when the impressive dignity and beauty of these ceremonies reach their height.

Shopping Bargains: All travellers love a bargain, and shopping on Lima's lengthy Union Street, filled with myriad shops, is a souvenir hunter's paradise. Here one may buy impressive quality gifts — beautifully hand-fashioned silver services; gold and silver jewelry; leather goods and native craft-turned articles of all kinds.

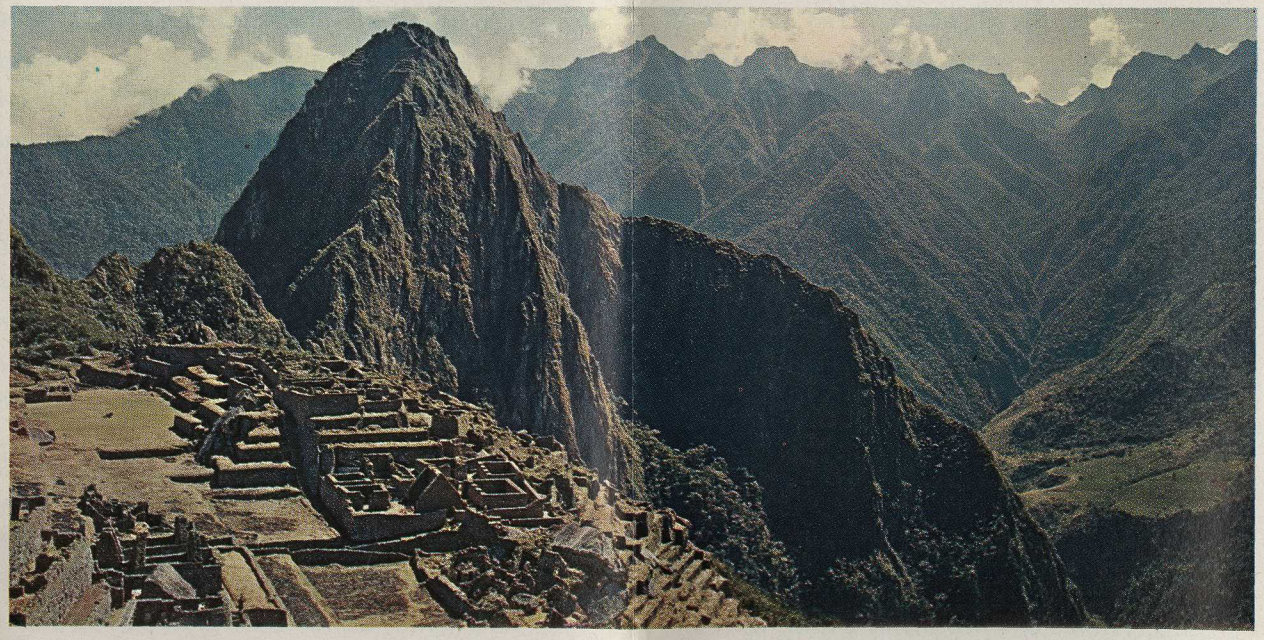
Sports: Golf, swimming, horse racing, bullfighting, tennis, fishing.

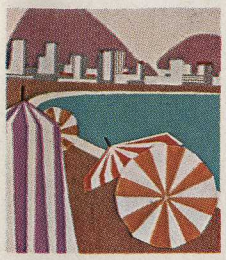
This is the continent of the Incas . . . the great, tall, perhaps redheaded, but surely mysterious race that came out of nowhere and vanished into nothingness. This is the "lost" city of Machu Picchu, stark against the sky, hidden 2000 feet above Peru's rail line far below. Other cities still unknown await the explorers' probing. Pause here awhile and join in the world's awed wonder.



Machu Picchu, Peru

SANTIAGO

Chile



The City at a Glance: Third largest city in all South America, Santiago is ideally situated in a valley surrounded by mountains, snowcapped practically the year round. It has a population close to two million, or one-third of the total population of Chile.

Climate and Clothing: Santiago boasts the best climate in South America, very similar to that of central California. Temperatures are in the 60's year-round. Dress the same as you would for springtime or fall at home.

Places to See: From Santiago, it is only 80 miles to the famous Vina del Mar on the Pacific Coast, with its beaches and gambling Casino. A side trip to these resorts would be well worthwhile. In winter there are ski fields only 1½ hours by motor car from downtown Santiago. From Santiago, local airlines will take the passengers in less than four hours to the lake district in the South where there is fabulous trout fishing in any of the streams and lakes.

Special Events: Throughout the summer, rodeos take place at most of the little towns around Santiago. As there are no fixed dates, the tourist must request advance information. The famous "Green Squadron" of the "Carabineros de Chile", (Chilean Mounted Police) also put on shows during summer.

Shopping Bargains: Copper is a must — trays, ornaments, even jewellry. Leather goods are also very good, especially saddles, leather purses, belts, etc., made of the very best pigskin.

Restaurants:

"El Parron" — open air barbecue.
"La Chatelaine" — Hungarian cooking at its best
"Chiaranda" — French and Italian — informal.
"Danubio Azul" — Good Chinese food.
Dinner average price about $3.80, including a bottle of good wine.

A tax of 25% should be added to these prices. As the Chilean Peso is currently fluctuating, prices are estimated as a guide only.

Currency: The Chilean Escudo is the monetary unit, at present fluctuating, but worth about 92 cents.

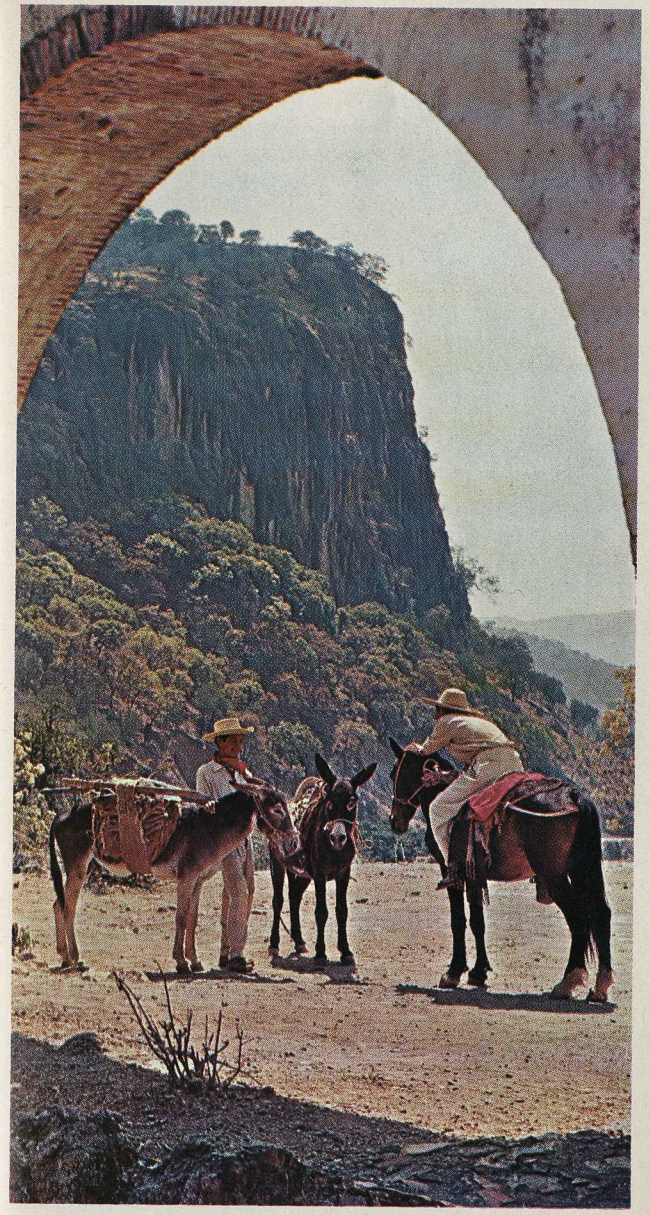
Recreation:

Night Clubs: Hanga Roa — Hotel Carrera, Waldorf, Tap Room, La Posada del Corregidor, Mon Bijou.

Theatres: Large number of legitimate theatres and movies throughout downtown.

Sports: Soccer football is played the year round. Horse races every Sunday in the year.

This is the continent where, high aloft in your "EMPRESS", after flying over seemingly endless stretches of mountain, shore, forest or field, your airliner suddenly hovers over jewels of cities. And everywhere, when you descend, you will learn the fascination of how South America has blended the old with the new, and revel in the contrast between traditional and modern ways of living.



Sunshine is everywhere

BUENOS AIRES

Argentina

The City at a Glance: Buenos Aires, Latin America's largest city, has a cosmopolitan population of four and a half million people. Commercially, industrially, politically, and culturally, "B.A." is the very nerve center of Argentina. It's the nation's chief port and rail center. Dynamic and progressive, Buenos Aires is a charming blend of the Old World and the New. The very atmosphere is charged with energy. Here is a middle class only infrequently found in Latin America, and the average "Porteno" is well housed, well clothed, and fabulously well fed.

Climate and Clothing: Any season is the right season to visit Argentina and Buenos Aires. With seasons the reverse of ours in North America, January is the warmest month (85°), with June and July the coolest (35°). When travelling in Argentina in the Argentine winter, your wardrobe should include warm woolen clothes; suits, sweaters, heavy topcoat. In their summer, lightweight dresses and suits (including white ones for men) are worn in Buenos Aires. If you plan a trip to the Andean Lake region and Cordoba Hills, summer clothing should be supplemented by a sweater and topcoat.

Places to See: Focal point for sightseeing is the Plaza de Mayo in the very heart of the city. Within the radius of a few blocks are fashionable shopping streets, the commercial district, and theatrical district. At the Plaza itself, you'll find the historic Cabildo where the movement for independence from Spain was inaugurated, the Government Palace, Municipal Building, the Cathedral, burial place of General Jose de San Martin, Argentina's greatest son; the nation's main banking institution, and only a few blocks away the National Library and many of the city's leading hotels. Any direction from the Plaza will lead you on to fascinating and picturesque sights of the old and the new of Buenos Aires.

Shopping Bargains: Calle Florida, street of big department stores, and swank little shops. Calle Santa Fe, exclusive dress and hat shops, beauty salons. Arenales and Juncal streets, for antiques, furniture, rare books and china. Calle Corrientes, the City's "Great White Way", for theatres, restaurants, cafes and sparkling night-life. Finely made leather goods, woolens, elaborate silver, knives, boots and luxurious rugs are all good buys in Buenos Aires.

Other Highlights: For the tourist who likes to browse, Buenos Aires has a score of museums devoted to History, Arts, Natural Sciences and almost every phase of national culture. Be sure to plan an afternoon in famous Calle Florida at tea time when all traffic is barred from the street for the promenade of swarming pedestrians. A visit to Palermo Park and the race track is a "must". Visits should be made to the suburbs, particularly to Belgrano with its cobblestone streets and tile sidewalks, San Isidro with its gigantic race track.

Currency: The Argentine Peso is the monetary unit, at present fluctuating, and is worth about 1.2 cents.

Recreation: Night Clubs, Theatres, Sports. Some better night clubs are the Gong, Tabaris, Embassy, La Querencia, Achalay. Current movies are shown at the Ambassador, Broadway, Gran Rex, Metropolitan, the Metro and Opera. Stage presentations are given at the Cervantes, National Theatre, and the Municipal Theatre. Year-round horse racing, polo, horseback riding, football, golf at ten prominent clubs, tennis at every athletic club, swimming at most country clubs and beach resorts.

This is the continent where cities of great new skyscrapers cheek-by-jowl with magnificent historic palaces, look into distances infinitely serene and timeless. Beyond the theatres, beyond the night clubs, beyond the race tracks, beyond the bull rings, lie almost endless farm lands, where the waking day begins at sunrise and returns to sleep at sunset, and the years are leisurely, patient, calm . . .

RIO DE JANEIRO

Brazil

The City at a Glance: Rio de Janiero is one of the most beautiful cities in the world, located in the midst of grey-green mountains, bounded by sun-swept beaches and the deep blue waters of the bay. The city itself sparkles like a jewel in the bright sunshine. Rio is the capital of Brazil, and the center of social and cultural life as well. Somehow this concentration of interests makes Rio life more intense, more vividly exciting, perfect for a vacation.

Climate, Altitude, Clothing: Rio lies almost in the temperate zone. The climate is warm and equable; from November to March, light summer-weight linens and cottons, sport clothes and bathing suits are required. Warmer clothing like that usually worn in early spring in the United States, is suitable for the months between May and September. Swimming practically the year round.

Places to See: Most visitors to Rio want to see the Copacabana Beach before anything else. Sunbathe or swim, or take in some of the glittering night life. The beautiful Avenida Rio Branco, one of the loveliest thoroughfares in the world, extends for one and one-half miles through the heart of Rio. It passes many of Rio's most famous buildings, including the Municipal Theatre, the National Library, the Municipal Building, the Academy of Fine Arts, the Monroe Palace. Among the many beautiful public parks is the Jardin Botanico (Botanical Garden) which contains more than 5,000 species of plants from all parts of the world.

Things to do: Rio is famous for its fast moving night-life and its pleasant beach activities. But there are many other things to do in Rio. Be sure to take the thrilling ride by cable car to the top of Sugar Loaf which rises precipitously 1,300 feet out of the bay. The most spectacular time is at sun-down when you can stop for dinner at the restaurant on the Urca Peak and watch the lights go on over Rio. Another thrilling trip is to the summit of Corcavado to see the great staue of the Christ 2,300 feet above the City. Carnival time in Rio comes on the three or four days immediately preceding Lent — when the festive spirit of the city literally bubbles over in a tremendous display of gaiety and fun. Don't miss the Hotel Quitandinha at Petropolis, an hour's drive from Rio.

Shopping Bargains: Rio has many quality shops such as you would find in Paris or New York. Smart buys in Rio are in topazes, aquamarines, amethysts, zircons and brilliants. Also, there are beautiful leather and inlaid wood products. Shopping streets: Rua Ouvidor, Goncalves Dias, Av. Rio Branco.

Recreation: (Night Clubs, Sports, Theatres). Rio's night life centers along the Avenida Atlantica and Avenida Copacabana. The famous gambling casinos are now closed, but at the Copacabana, the Midnight Room serves until 3 or 4 in the morning. Another popular place is the Night and Day room at the Hotel Serrador. There are many good bars and restaurants along the beach. All kinds of sports are possible near Rio: swimming, sunbathing, tennis, golf, hunting, fishing as well as good horse racing, pro tennis, football and boxing to watch.

Nearby Points of Interest: Up in the mountains of Petropolis, about 35 miles from Rio, is one of the most fabulous resorts in the world: Quitandinha, which has its own theatre, newspaper plant, swimming pools and artificial lake. Here you can spend restful days at a cost no greater than staying in Rio. Across Guanabara Bay from Rio is Niteroi, capital of the State of Rio, connected to downtown Rio by frequent ferryboats.

SAO PAULO Brazil

The City at a Glance: Sao Paulo, the largest city in Brazil, with a population of over three million, gives one the impression of briskness and energy. The visitor is immediately impressed with the buildings being constructed on all sides and the spirit of competition and business acumen everywhere. This city has led the world in growth and construction during the past fifteen years. Sao Paulo is noted for its beautiful suburban and residential districts and the gardens and flowering trees lining the streets make a lasting impression on the visitor.

Climate, Altitude, Clothing: The city is at an altitude of 2,500 feet and the comparatively cool and changeable climate is partly responsible for the energy and business agressiveness of the inhabitants. It is never very hot for long periods. Plenty of rainfall during the summer months of November through February and midday heat with cool evenings make light suits and raincoats a necessity, while in the winter months of June through August, heavy coats and even furs are sometimes welcome.

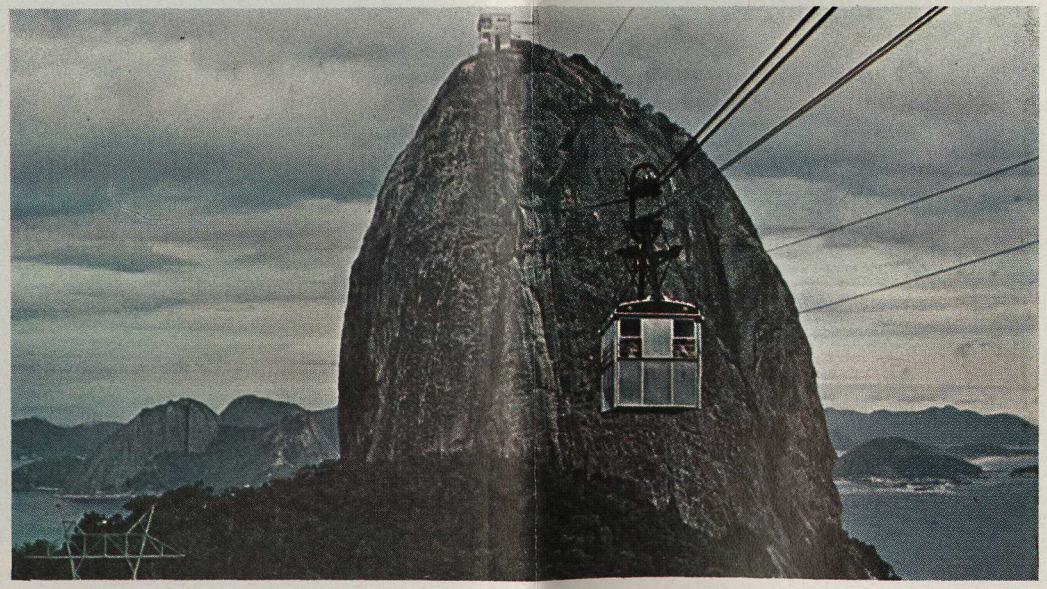
Places to See: The famous Snake Farm at Butantan, near the city, is the greatest drawing card for visitors. There is the interesting Ypiranga Museum set in a beautiful park, where colored fountains can be seen on certain days. The Palace is on the historical site where independence from Portugal was declared. One should not miss the Orchid Farm during the season from November to February and in May and June. Sao Paulo is justly proud of its magnificent Municipal Stadium which is amongst the finest in South America with a capacity of 80,000 spectators. Other interesting places to visit are: The Municipal Market which has stained glass windows, the modern Public Library and Art Museum, and the Museum of Modern Art, for the visitor culturally inclined.

Things to do: Life in Sao Paulo offers diversions to every taste, with races, various sports events, good music, night clubs and theatres, and the numerous popular cinemas, sailing on nearby inland lakes, and motor trips to neighboring hazendas and the sea. Tennis, golf and swimming can also be arranged for visitors at one or more of the excellent private clubs in the area.

Recreation: (Night Clubs, Sports, Theatres). Night Clubs: Jaragua Stadium, Othon Palace Grill, Oasis, African Boite, Chicote, Baiuca are the most important of a total of 400. Theatres: In the center of town stands the old, well-loved Municipal Theatre which boasts a stage second in size only to that of the Scala Theatre in Milan. Popular also with the fast-growing population are plays and reviews, there being about a dozen such theatres operating in Sao Paulo.

Shopping Bargains: There is a unique establishment near the Luz Railroad Station, called the "Liceu de Artes e Oficios" where one can see and buy beautiful, hand-carved and inlaid Brazilian woods. The color, grain and satiny surface of the different Brazilian woods are a delight. Jewelry shops show varied assortments of colored tourmalines, amethysts, topaz and the more expensive blue aquamarines. There are Bahiana dolls, hand-made laces and embroidered blouses and table linens, unbelievably fine and delicate. At antique shops one can pick up for a good price, trays, candle sticks and other antiques fashioned in the old Portugueses silver.

This is the continent where pleasure is always close at hand. The climate of all the major cities is equable, and year-round the outdoors offers every diversion possible. Beaches are excellent; fishing, particularly deep sea, is spectacular; golf courses abound — in fact, it is only necessary to name your outdoor sport, and in season, it will be available somewhere. Often festivals such as Mardi Gras combine with outdoor sport, and the fun is doubled . . .



Rio de Janeiro, Brazil

Nearby Points of Interest: An interesting trip can be made by motor car or train to outlying coffee fazendas. A most enjoyable trip by motor car or the famous Sao Paulo Railway, a model of engineering, is the one to the port of Santos, a 46 mile ride down from Sao Paulo to the sea. Watch the "carregadores" loading bananas on the docks.

Throughout Latin America, and particularly in South America, the opportunities for shrewd shopping are immense.

In every city there are stores or open markets in which you can buy the products of the local artisans — jewellery, exquisitely ornate silver, handsomely fashioned brass, purses, bags and other leather work in rare reptile skins, basketware, primitive art, native fabrics dyed with subtle natural colours, bold wood carvings in exotic woods — at a fraction of their prices in North America.

Plan to return laden with bargains you can never find anywhere else in the world.

Canadian Pacific flights to Mexico and beyond offer the same impeccable standard of service that has made the name first choice of world-wise, experienced travellers. You may choose the luxury "Empress" service or you may prefer the thrift of going "Princess" tourist. Whichever class you choose, Canadian Pacific in-flight service combines delightful Canadian informality with a preview of the traditional Latin American courtesy. Both are personified in your cabin attendants, a happy team of both Canadian and Spanish bilingual Latin Americans.
