Creston Markets Own Fruit Crop

Creston Valley's fruit crop (Wynndel excluded) will be sold entirely independent of the Associated Growers of B.C., the big new provincial co-operative selling agency.

This was finally decided at a directors meeting of Creston Fruit Growers Union, Limited, that lasted until almost 1 a.m. Saturday, and which was attended by A. M. Pratt of Vernon, the Associated Growers general manager, and Mr. Howe, one of the permanent directors of the Associated Growers.

The meeting was quite harmonious throughout, with the Vernon delegation willing to concede most of the Creston demands, with the exception that it would not free Creston from the payment of the five cents a box which the Associated Growers require for the purchase of premises of fruit selling locals that are insolvent but which are being taken over by the Growers, as well as for purchasing independent packing houses and equipment which will be needed at different Okanagan points for the conduct of the Growers' business.

In addition to requiring an assessment of five cents a box on all fruit handled by Creston Fruit Growers Union, the Associated Growers also required that Creston should contribute an as yet unknown per box charge for the maintenece of central, and on top of all this the Union directors would still have to make provision at Creston for financing the season's operations here. The directors were quite unanimous that Creston Valley growers would not consent to paying the two Associated Growers charges as well as taking care of their own local financing and for these reasons it was decided to remain entirely clear of the Associated Growers for 1923.

Messrs. Pratt and Howe are exceptionally optimistic as to the new selling organization being able to this season open up new markets that will take care of several hundred cars of apples that were previously sent to the Old Country or consigned on the prairie market.

Their special hope in this connection has to do with the McIntosh Red, for which they anticipate a greatly increased demand on the markets of the eastern United States. Extensive advertising campaigns and other methods will be utilized to increase the demand on the Canadian market for B.C. apples.

Mr. Pratt was very dubious as to marketing the 1923 yield of Jonathahs. This variety had been a very poor keeper in 1922 and he doubted very much if there would be any demand for them at all this year. Just now it seemed more than probable than Jonathans might not be handled by the Associated Growers at all this year.

West Creston

Potatoes in the Lochead garden at the ferry are well above ground, and would appear to be the earliest in the Valley including Kuskanook.

During his visit here the second week in May road superintendent Moore arranged for some road repair work in the Corn Creek section, which is now under way. It is expected a camp will be put in to take care of the men who will do the rock work on the prespective new road through the French and other places.

Branding operations were under way at the Reclamation Farm last week before the young stock was turned out to graze. About 150 head of stock of all ages was wintered at the farm.

Jimmy Lochead is a Queen's Birthday visitor at Cranbrook where he is taking in the boxing on the 23rd and the horse races on the 24th. Some of the local Indians are there wiih their steeds for the running events.

The biggest bass ever taken out of the Kootenay River was hooked on Friday by young Jack French, the specimen tipping the scales at just over five pounds.

Prospective land buyersare frequent visitors here a gentleman from Kitchener calling early last week to look the Peterman place over.

Angus Currie is now looking after the Seymour place which has been rented by Ferryman Lochead during George's absence in the Old Country.

The Kootenay river is coming up slow this year, last week's rise being hardly more than half an inch per day.

1923 Chautouqua Open Wednesday

The sale of this year's Chautauqua tickets which started on Saturday indicates that this popular attraction will be even more largely patronized than usual, the demand for tickets at Sirdar being ahead of 1922, and from all the ticket handlers comes the same encouraging report.

The attention of the public is directed to the fact that the price of the ticket does not include the amusement tax, which will be 30c. and 10c. extra. As Chautauqua opens this year in the evening, rather than the afternoon, as in the past, ticket holders are asked to make an early appearance at the tent so that payment of the amusement tax can be made and no delay caused starting the programme at 8.30.

The afternoon programmes will be at 3 o'clock, and arrangements are being made for Creston and nearby schools to close in time to permit the children all to attend, the lost time being made up by the elimination of the usual morning and afternoon recess.

Arrangements are now being made for the usual community church service in the big tent on Sunday, June 3rd. At morning worship it is expected the previous' days Chautauqua speaker will give a short address and, as in the past, the musical company will provide special musical features.

In order to assure good order throughout the committee have decided to expell all youngsters who do not behave, and also to cancel their season tickets to prevent their attendance at all future programme, and a number of the men will see that this order is enforced.

As usual there will be a limited number of reserve seats which can be had for the whole six days at a charge of $1, whilst any not thus taken will be available at 10 cents per programme.

Now that all the advertising matter has been given out and the public have been able to size up the whole eleven offerings, all are agreed that the 1923 Chautauqua is the best yet and at an average price of 30 cents a performance represents the greatest entertainment value ever offered, and altogether too good to be missed.

After the first evening season tickets will be $3.50 so the wise thing is to buy now. The Calgary Kiddies, who give the opening programme, will score the biggest hit ever made in Creston, and the other musicalfeatures are bound to be equally attractive. The lecturers and their subjects speak for themselves.

Tickets in town are on sale at Norris' bakery, Mawson Brothers, Beattie Oatway, Ltd., and the Review Office, or can be had from any of the 40 guarantors. For an inexpensive and ideal let up for six days Chautauqua fills the bill, particularly for the ladies who combine much needed community sociability with entertainment notably at the afternoon programmes.

Erickson

This section is being thoroughly canvassed on behalf of Chautauqua with the ticket sale quite satisfactory.

The road crew are busy with the truck putting in the foundation for the extension of the hard surface road around the loop to the school road. Nothing is in sight, however, to indicate construction into the station.

The McCarthy residence looks much better for a new coat of paint that is being applied this week.

Alf. Palmer left last week for Kitchener where, we understand, he will supervise forest fire fighting this season. He did good work in this line last year in the big blaze up Sullivan Creek.

Mr. and Mrs. W. Percival of Yahk were weekend visitors with Mr. and Mrs. R. Dodds.

Rhubarb now figures prominently on the Erickson export trade, as many as ten boxes going east per day the past week.

Mrs. H. A. McKowan of Cranbrook was a visitor here early this week with Mr. and Mrs. G. Cartwright.

Jimmy Lochhead, the West Creston ferryman, loaded his running horse here on Tuesday for shipment to Cranbrook for the 24th of May race meet in that city.

Mr. Barter of Cranbrook will be in charge of the Erickson depot for a couple of weeks, agent Bundy being away on his annual holiday, part of which he will spend with his brother at Cowley, Alberta, and with Mrs. Bundy will also visit Spokane.

New orchard plantings in the Erickson section are coming along fine, the quantity of dead stock supplied being lighter than usual.

School Principal Smith Resigns

Creston public school will have a new principal when operations are resumed after the summer holidays. At the May meeting of the trustees on Monday night, G. P. Smith, who has been at the head of the public school for the past three years, tendered his resignation and after considerable discussion the trustees have accepted the same.

The secretary submitted the reports on the school work as turned in by Inspector Manning who was here last week, and these indicate that this year's staff, including Mr. Siddons who has the Entrance work, is the best all round staff the school has ever had, and the board is congratulating itself that up till the present Mr. Smith is the only member to signify his intention of retiring.

A bill for $72 from W. B. Embree, the contrart price for putting in the new fountain and sink in the two-room school, was ordered paid, and instructions have been given to instal a valve that will prevent the waste of water at the fountain in the four-room school.

The swings and half dozen teeters have been installed for the use of the scholars in the two lower rooms, this playground equipment being provided from funds donated by the Women's Institute, whilst the new fountain and sink were partially financed by the Red Cross, and these two societies will be written to thanking them for their contributions.

Inspector Manning strongly recommends that the four rooms of the old school be re painted and kalsomined inside and the trustees will shortly call for tenders to see just what expense will be incurred in going on with either or both of the jobs.

Although the public school has a total attendance that taxes the capacity of the staff to handle, it is expected that with the usual pass list into the high school via the Entrance exams, it will be possible to re group the classes in the various rooms and obviate the need of providing another room this year, though 1924 will most likely produce a state of affairs that will necessitate a sixth room at the public school.

Before the term ends the trustees are arranging to have a conference with each of the teachers in both high and public school regarding educational affairs generally.

CHAPTER XI.

Tangled Threads

Relieved though Helen was to some extent, by her father's assurances and by the explanation which he had given, she was far from being in a tranquil frame of mind.

She knew that whatever might be the outcome of the graver charge against Gordon, he would probably have to suffer for his release of Santry, and she found herself wishing more than ever that her lover had never seen the West. What little it had contributed to his character was not worth what it had cost already and would cost in the future. Surely, his manhood was alive enough not to have needed the development of such an environment, and if his lot had been cast in the East, she could have had him always with her. A long letter, which she had recently received from Maxwell Frayne, recounting the gayeties of New York and Washington, made her homesick. Although she could scarcely think of the two men at the same moment, still, as she sat in the crude little hotel, she would have welcomed a little of young Frayne's company for the sake of contrast. She was yearning for the flesh-pots of her own Egypt.

From the news of the fight at the ranch, which had been brought to town by the messenger, she gathered that Wade meant to intrench himself on the ranch and defy the law, which would probably embroil him in other criminal acts. Crawling Water, too, was rapidly filling up with armed cattlemen, who, she thought, would do Gordon's cause more harm than good. Toward afternoon, word came of a bloody skirmish on the Trowbridge range, between a number of his punchers and some of Moran's hired men, and that added to the tension among those crowding the main street.

From the parlor windows of the hotel she watched what was going on outside, not without alarm, so high did feeling seem to run. The threats of the ranch men, handed about amongst themselves but loud enough for her to catch a word now and then, made her wonder if the town was really safe for her father, or for herself. A storm was coming up, and the rising wind whipped the flimsy lace curtains of the windows and kept them fluttering like flags. The distant muttering of the thunder and an occasional sharp flash of lightning wore on her tired nerves until she could sit still no longer.

For the sake of something to do, she went up to her room, intending to write some letters there, but her bed had not been made up, so she returned to the parlor with her fountain pen and writing-pad. To Maxwell Frayne she wrote a brief note, which was not likely to cheer him much. She had become so in the habit of taking her moods out on Maxwell that to do so, even with a pen, was second nature to her. She despised him for his tolerance of her tyranny, never realizing that he reserved to himself the privilege of squaring their account, if she should ever become his wife.

Then to ease her mind of the strain it bore, she wrote at some length to her mother; not telling the whole truth but enough of it to calm her own nervousness. She said nothing of the conversation she had overheard, but went fully into the scene between her father and Gordon Wade. With a little smile hovering on her lips, she wrote dramatically of the Senator's threat to crush the ranchman. "That will please mother," she said to herself, as her pen raced over the paper. "Gordon felt, you see, that"—she turned a page—"father knew Santry had not killed Jensen, and . . ."

The hotel-keeper poked his head in at the doorway.

"Two ladies to see you, Miss," he announced. "Mrs. Purnell and daughter."

He gave Helen no chance to avoid the visit, for with the obviousness of the plains, he had brought the visitors upstairs with him, and so, blotting what she had written and weighing down her letter against the breeze, she arose to greet them.

"This is good of you, Mrs. Purnell, and I am so glad to meet your daughter. I've been lonely and blue all day and now you have taken pity on me."

Mrs. Purnell shot an "I told you so" glance at Dorothy, which made that young lady smile to herself.

"I was sorry not to have been at home when you called, Miss Rexhill."

The two girls looked at each other, each carefully veiling hostility, Dorothy beneath a natural sweetness of disposition, and Helen with the savoir faire of social experience. Each felt and was stung by a realization of the other's points of advantage. Dorothy saw a perfection of well-groomed poise, such as she could hardly hope to attain, and Helen was impressed with her rival's grace and natural beauty.

"Won't you sit down?"

"But aren't we disturbing you?" Mrs. Purnell asked, with a glance toward the writing materials.

"Indeed, you are not. I was writing some duty letters to kill time. I'm only too glad to stop because I'm really in no writing mood and I am most anxious to hear what is going on outside. Isn't it dreadful about Mr. Wade?"

"You mean his helping Santry?" Dorothy asked, with a little touch of pride which did not escape her hostess.

"Partly that; but more because he is sure to be arrested himself. I've been terribly worried."

Dorothy glanced at her keenly and smiled.

"I have an idea that they may find Gordon hard to arrest," she remarked.

"Yes," Mrs. Purnell put in. "He is so popular. Still, I agree with you that there is every cause for anxiety." The good lady did not have a chance every day to agree with the daughter of a United States Senator, and the opportunity was not to be overlooked.

"The people feel so strongly that Santry should never have been arrested that they are not likely to let Gordon be taken just for freeing him," Dorothy explained.

Helen shook her head with every indication of tremulous worry.

"But it isn't that alone," she insisted. "He's to be arrested for the Jensen shooting. That was why the posse waited at his ranch after Santry had been caught."

"For the Jensen shooting?" Dorothy showed her amazement very plainly. "Are you sure?" she demanded, and when Helen nodded, exclaimed: "Why, how utterly absurd! I understood that you were with him yourself when he received word of it?"

"I was," Helen admitted. "He is supposed only to have planned the crime, I believe. He's supposed to have been the principal, isn't that what they call it?" She appealed to Mrs. Purnell.

"Oh, but do you think he could do such a thing?" Mrs. Purnell asked, much shocked.

"I don't know. I hope not."

"I do know!" Dorothy burst out emphatically. "I know Gordon Wade too well to think for one minute that he did it; and every true friend of his ought to speak out at once and say the same thing."

The challenge in her voice was unmistakable, and Mrs. Purnell moved uneasily in her chair. She glanced curiously at Helen and was relieved to see that the latter had lost none of her poise.

"I hope to be fully as you do," Helen said sweetly, "but things move so fast here in these mountains that I find it hard to keep up with them."

"Of course," Mrs. Purnell soothed, with a troubled look at her daughter. "When swore out the warrant, I wonder?" Dorothy asked, in a more tranquil tone, a bit ashamed of her outburst. "Was it Mr. Moran?"

"I'm sure I don't know," Helen answered. "I supposed it was the Sheriff. Why should Mr. Moran have anything to do with it?"

"Because he seems to have been concerned in all the trouble we have had," Dorothy replied calmly. "This was a peaceful little community until Mr. Moran moved into it."

Helen made no direct reply to this, and for awhile Dorothy allowed her mother to sustain the conversation. She had no doubt but that Moran was back of it all, and she was thinking of what Lem Trowbridge had said; that if they could only "get something on" Moran and the Senator, a solution of the whole problem would be at hand. She thought that she had detected a defensive note in Helen's voice, and she was wondering why it should have been there.

"But you haven't answered my question yet about Mr. Moran," Helen presently challenged her. "You seemed to have something more in mind than what you said. Would you mind telling me?"

Dorothy looked steadily but not offensively at her.

"Oh, it's nothing, Miss Rexhill. I was only thinking that he has gone rather far; been very zealous in your father's interests. Probably . . ."

"Why, Dorothy—!" her mother interposed, in a shocked tone.

"Miss Rexhill asked me, mother, and you know that I always speak frankly."

"Yes, do go on," Helen urged, with even an added touch of sweetness in her manner. "I really want to know. I am so out of touch with things here, so ill informed."

"Well, you can sit here at the windows and learn all you wish to know. There isn't a man in this town that would see Gordon arrested and not fight to free him. Feeling is running high here now. You know, it's something like a violin string. You can stretch it just so far and then it snaps. That's all."

"Dorothy, I'm really mortified that you . . ."

"Oh, you've no occasion to be, Mrs. Purnell," Helen interrupted, smiling. "I asked for the plain truth, you know."

Mrs. Purnell laughed feebly.

"Dorothy has known Mr. Wade so long and we both like him so well that she can't bear to hear a word against him," she explained. Her sense of lese majeste was running away with her judgment, and Dorothy shot an irritated glance at her. "Not that I think he did it at all, you understand; but . . ."

"Oh, perfectly," declared Helen, with rising color and an equal feeling of annoyance. "Oh, dear me, do look at my poor letters!"

A gust of wind, stronger than any that had come before, had swept the weight to the floor and scattered letter paper, envelopes and blotter about the room. Helen was just able to catch the writing pad as it slid to the floor, while Dorothy and her mother laughingly salvaged the rest. The incident happily relieved the awkward drift of their conversation, and they all felt relieved.

"Well, now, did you ever?" Mrs. Purnell ejaculated, looking at the lithographed blotter, which she held in her hand. "I declare this picture of a little girl reminds me of Dorothy when she was that age."

"Oh, mother!"

"Really?" Helen broken in. "How interesting. I hadn't noticed the picture. Do let me see."

To be courteous, she agreed with Mrs. Purnell that there was a strong likeness, which Dorothy laughingly denied.

"I guess I know what you looked like when you were five better than you do," Mrs. Purnell declared. "It's the image of you as you were then, and as Miss Rexhill says, there is a facial resemblance even yet.

"Perhaps you would like to take it with you, then," Helen suggested, to Mrs. Purnell's delight, who explained that the only picture she had of Dorothy at that age had been lost.

"If it wouldn't deprive you?"

"No, indeed. You must take it. I have a large blotter in my writing-pad, so I really don't need that one at all. So many such things are sent to father that we always have more than we can use up."

When Dorothy and her mother left the hotel, urged homeward by the first big drops of the coming rain, Mrs. Purnell tucked the blotter in the bosom of her dress, happy to have the suggestion of the picture to recall the days when her husband's presence cheered them all. Her world had been a small one, and little things like this helped to make it bright.

GLAD SHE DID AS DOCTOR TOLD HER

Took Tanlac on Physician's Advice and It Put Her in Fine Condition, States Mrs. Coles

"Tanlac is certainly an ideal medicine," recently said Mrs. Bessie Coles, highly esteemed resident of 1851 Lorne St., Regina, Sask.

"I was in such a badly run-down condition that I just felt miserable all the time. My appetite had failed me to such an extent that I was losing weight steadily. My nerves were awfully unstrung; many, many times I couldn't get even an hour's sleep all night long, and I never felt like doing my housework at all.

"A physician advised me to take Tanlac and I lost no time getting a bottle. Now, I really don't feel like the same person. My nerves have steadied down, I am sleeping like a child, eating heartily, have gained several pounds, and am feeling just fine. Knowing what a wonderful medicine Tanlac is, I can sincerely recommend it."

Tanlac is for sale by all good druggists. Over 35-million bottles sold.

Alberta Oil Wells

Large Production of Gasoline From Well Located Near Okotoks

Quantities of gasoline amounting to between 40 and 85 barrels daily, and natural gas amounting to between 1,500,000 and 3,000,000 cubic feet daily, can be obtained from the Illinois-Alberta well, west of Okotoks, according to the report of S. E. Slipper, Dominion Government petroleum engineer. Mr. Slipper, in his report, states, "the test shows that the well is an important producer of gasoline gas, from which gasoline may be extracted on a commercial scale."

The worms that infest children from their birth are of two kinds, those that find lodgement in the stomach and those that are found in the intestines. The latter are the most destructive, as they cling to the walls of the intestines and if not interfered with work havoc there. Miller's Worm Powders dislodge both kinds and while expelling them from the system serve to repair the damage they have caused.

I also used to have weak spells. Thanks to Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, however, I am real well now. I shall always keep a box of the Nerve Food in the house, and recommend them to my friends; they are a wonderful medicine."

NEW BLOOD NEEDED IN THE SPRINGTIME

Try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills as a Blood-Improving, Health-Restoring Tonic

Every man, woman and child needs new, rich, red blood at this time of the year. That is a scientific fact. All doctors know it. The blood grows thin and poor in the winter; there is not enough of it and spring shows the effect. Take notice and see how many people are pale and sallow at this time of the year. They complain of being easily tired, their appetite is poor, and they are often depressed and low-spirited. That is mother nature urging them to improve their blood supply; but often their digestion is weakened so that they cannot turn food into blood without help. Here is where modern medical science comes to the rescue. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have a direct action on the blood and enable you to get full use of the blood-making elements in your meals. You soon feel their effect—your appetite improves, your nerves are steadier, color returns to the cheeks and lips, you have more vim and energy and can work with less fatigue. The above statements are borne out by the experience of Mr. J. P. Greschuk, Janow, Man., who says:—"Very recently I found myself in a badly run down condition. My stomach was quite out of order; I could eat but little and what I did eat did not appear to nourish me. I did not seem to have enough blood; my hands and legs were blue, and I had no strength to work. I tried several medicines but did not get good results. Then one day reading our newspaper I read about Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and decided to try them. I used a half dozen boxes, and now feel well and strong, have a good appetite, and can do my work with ease. Naturally I have great faith in this medicine as a blood-making tonic."

Whether you are seriously ill, or merely feel easily tired and out-of-sorts, you should try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills this spring. They are sold by medicine dealers everywhere, or will be sent by mail at 50 cents a box, by writing The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Vancouver an Important Port

Now Ranks Third in Importance on the Pacific Coast

A total of 716 ocean-going vessels, with a gross tonnage of 3,967,000, arrived and departed from the port of Vancouver in 1922, as compared with 476 vessels of 2,946,000 gross tons in 1921. During the past year 1,540,000 tons of cargo were handled, as against 998,000 tons in 1921. In addition, there was handled 225,000,000 feet of lumber, 14,460,000 bushels of grain, 482,000 barrels of flour, and 153,000 cases of apples, compared with 190,000,000, 1,240,000, 99,000 and 71,000 respectively in 1921. Vancouver is now third port in rank on the Pacific Coast, having passed Seattle and Tacoma.

Is It a Mistaken Policy

An Age-Old Argument that Inevitably Makes for War

The argument that the stronger we are the less temptation will there be to attack us will be used a thousand times in the coming years as it has been in the past. And it is indicative of the one-sidedness of political thinking that it never seems to strike us that the position we take here is an anti-oscial one, that it asks of others something we passionately refuse to accept when asked of us. We do not tolerate the existence of a group of rival powers so strong that resistance to it would be hopeless, condemning us to a permanent diplomatic inferiority: making our free movement over the world a matter of sufferance. —Norman Angell in "Is Britain to Live?")

Chinese Soldiers Sew Clothes On

Ten thousand Chinese soldiers guarding Tachienlu, the pass to Tibet, are having their clothes sewed on their bodies. Garment after garment of heavily padded cotton is sewed into place on the body to remain undisturbed until the suns of summer return. The pass is the coldest place on the border.

If Tormented With Corns Use Good Old "Putnam's"

It's really a simple thing to remove your corns, and without pain, if you apply Putnam's Painless Corn Extractor. It acts like magic, lifts out the corn, root and branch, leaves the skin smooth as silk. No failure with "Putnam's," 25c everywhere.

Distinctive Names

Picturesque Appellations of Western Towns Add to Their Fame

"It is high time," says the Brantford Expositor, "that Moose Jaw changed its name." And it mentions Regina and Kenora as places which changed their names.

No doubt, says the Toronto Star, Regina was quite right in deciding that Pile of Bones was not a suitable name for a city that was destined to become the capital of a province, but when Rat Portage changed its name to Kenora, it evinced a finicky spirit and, for most of us, somehow, Kenora has never stuck out on the map as one of the salient points in Canada the way Rat Portage did.

As for Moose Jaw and Medicine Hat, we hope they will stick to the distinctive names they bear. Towns named like that appeal to the imagination, and one cannot travel through the west without stopping off to see them, and to see the citizens of towns who have enough personality to adhere to such names, instead of picking new and better ones out of the works of Bertha M. Clay or May Agnes Fleming.

Ingenious Wind Turbine

Has Greater Efficiency than Windmill Says Japanese Inventor

An ingenious wind turbine, said to be capable of utilizing air currents in the generation of power with far greater efficiency than its predecessor, the windmill, has been perfected by A. Ozaki, a Japanese inventor. He claims the turbine in operation turns into power 50 per cent. of the force of the air currents striking the planes. The ordinary windmill utilizes but 20 per cent. The equipment includes a storage battery arrangement by which the power generated may be held in reserve to secure uninterrupted service when the wind subsides.

CRESTON, B.C., FRIDAY, MAY 25

The Season's Selling

Without exception every rancher in the valley will read with a great deal of satisfaction our announcement elsewhere in this issue that Creston growers have decided to remain out of the Associated Growers this year.

This feeling of satisfaction is due not to the fact that the growers here are out of sympathy with the Associated Growers at Vernon, or that it is certain that keeping out of the big organization is the best thing to do, but to the fact that a definite selling policy has been decided upon.

With the fruit shipping season certain to commence within two weeks, and with rumors circulating of financial difficulties to be overcome, ranchers have been justified in feeling quite uneasy as to the marketing outlook this year. Now that a definite announcement is made this uneasiness will change to optimism.

The mere fact that the present board of directors and the management of the Union have announced a selling policy for the season means that they have taken hold of the business feeling assured that the season will prove a successful one, an assurance which they could not have unless certain that both financial and marketing arrangements were in good condition.

So far as marketing arrangements are concerned it would appear that the directors had no option as to what course they would pursue. At the commencement of the co-operative agitation it was unanimously decided by both ranchers and business men that the one essential thing was to get together as a body locally.

With this end in view committees composed of both business men and ranchers devoted days of their time making a thorough investigation in an effort to arrive at a basis upon which the growers of the valley could work together.

That the efforts of this committee were directed along intelligent lines is more than proven by the fact that over 85 per cent. of the growers have signed contracts to sell through the Union this year.

The basis on which these contracts were signed outlined a definite policy in connection with the provincial co-operative movement, stating the conditions under which the growers would consent to join the larger movement. These conditions the Associated Growers were unable to meet with the result that Creston will do herown selling this year.

In connection with this decision we have no apology to offer. The men who have had the work in hand are just as capable of making wise decisions as are the leaders of the Okanagan movement and in addition have a thorough understanding of local conditions.

Whether the move is a wise one or not time alone will tell; certainly the rank and file of the ranchers seem to be delighted with the turn affairs have taken and are decidedly optimistic as to the ability of the Union to produce results in real profits to the grower this season.

This much can be assured of. The future success of every man in the district is definitely dependent upon the success or failure of the Creston Fruit Growers Union. The only possible course for each citizen to follow is to give the business both moral and financial support. Say a good word for the Union at every opportunity, and turn every dollar of business their way that you can.

Sulphur and Fertilizers

Commencing May 25th the Union will be in a position to supply Contract Holders with credit accommodation on purchases of Sulphur and Fertilizer.

Paint and Clean Up !

The Review is grateful for at least one letter commending our editorial reference last week to the good work done by the Board of Trade cemetery beautification committee, at the conclusion of which we observed that in an ambitious town like Creston appearances count.

What our correspondent would have us point out is that now such good work has been done beautifying the general outward appearance of the abode of the dead, what is going to be done about brightening up things about the premises of the living, more especially in the direction of painting up residences and business houses and otherwise cleaning up the town. The suggestion, while far from being new, is very pertinent. We have no hesitation in saying that no town on the Crow line is better known than Creston—certainly no other place gets half the effective publicity given Creston—and yet it must be admitted that visitors, or those who merely pass through, can hardly be favorably impressed with the all too shabby appearance of the place.

In business and social life most of us believe that a good appearance is most essential, but when it comes to maintaining the reputation of the town is this equally essential respect its wonderful the number of slackers the town possesses.

Insofar as a general paint up campaign goes it has the merit of combining a necessary investment along with the benefit conferred in making the place more presentable for, as the more modern adage has it, when you save the surface you save all.

Sirdar

Supt. Flett paid Sirdar a visit again on Friday, inspecting fill operations at the Landing on which work will probably be complete at the end of the month, with about 1500 feet of fill made this season.

Rev. H. Varley was here from Creston for Church of England service on Sunday evening. A number from here will go to Creston this Sunday on the occasion of the visit of the bishop of Kootenay.

E. W. Ryckman, the Creston plumber, was here on a business visit on Friday.

E. W. Payne is in charge of the carpenter work on the addition that is being made to the Whitesides store. The lower floor will provide a store room with cold storage, whilst the top floor, which will be about 30 feet square will be available for dances or public meetings.

Mr. and Mrs. C. M. Loasby were motor visitors to Creston on Friday. C. M. has just completed the erection of a garage at Kuskanook—the first structure of the sort to be built there.

Carpenters are busy at Kuskanook this week erecting a boathouse alongside the wharf, for the housing of the launch used by lineman Phillips in telephone repair work.

Deer are reported unusually thick in the country around Kuskanook this spring, George Jensen counting some twenty of them in a single herd one day last week.

The frame work of Sid McCabe's new residence is nearing completion and when finished it will attract the attention of all in its commanding location on Shaugnessy Heights.

Tourist at Kuskanook this season will be able to while away the hours of the evening in pleasant fashion. Sam Bysouth is busy installing a radio outfit which he hopes will be sufficiently powerful to enable him to listen in on broadcasts as far distant as Spokane.

Cuticura Heals Face Disfigured With Itchy Eczema

"Eczema broke out in watery pimples on my face and head. Later my cheeks and head became so bad that they were covered with large scales. The itching and burning were so severe that I could not sleep at night. My face was badly disfigured. My hair became dry and lifeless and fell out so that I had to have it cut off close to my scalp.

New Serum Discoveries

Three of Latest Announced by Institute at Copenhagen

The Danish Serum Institute at Copenhagen, which, under the leadership of Dr. Thorvald Madsen, is a centre of European scientific serum investigation, announces three discoveries as the result of its efforts:

1. A completely new method of making diagnosis for syphilis more certain than the Wasserman test.

2. The manufacture of a better and cheaper serum against diphtheria.

3. A method which makes it possible to discover whooping cough in its early stages.

From Paris it is reported that satisfactory results have been obtained by the injection of a serum extracted from the blood of children who are convalescent from measles.

Professor Sloty, who made this statement to the Academy of Medicine, claimed (says Reuter) that two epidemics of measles were checked last year by this method.

Rail Rates In Canada Lower Than In U.S.

Omaha Newspaper Claims American Freight Rates on Wheat Much Higher Than Here

Investigation shows that Canadian railroads are performing the same service for Canadian wheat raisers at just about one-half the figure charged by American railroads, says the Omaha World-Herald. And the Canadian farmers are complaining that they do not get a square deal.

Western American farmers are paying from 50 per cent. to 100 per cent. more to get their wheat to the lakes than the Canadian farmers have to pay, but how? Nobody seems to know.

The three great lake ports for western wheat are Fort William for Canadian farmers; Duluth for Northern American farmers; and Chicago for central farmers. All three of these ports are at the head of the lakes. Fort William is some 200 miles from Duluth. All three are about equal distance from Buffalo.

Sweetgrass, Montana, on the Great Northern railroad, is about ten miles from Coutts, Alberta, on the Canadian Pacific. Sweetgrass is 1,004 miles from Duluth. Coutts is 1,203 miles from Fort William. When the American farmer at Sweetgrass ships his wheat to Duluth, 1,004 miles, he pays 43 cents per hundred pounds. When his Canadian neighbor ships his wheat to Fort William, 1,203 miles away, he pays 27½ cents. The American rate for the 200-mile shorter haul is 15½ cents greater. And the two farmers may live within sight of each other.

When the Lander, Wyoming, farmer ships his wheat 1,275 miles to Chicago over the Northwestern railroad, he pays 69½ cents per 100 pounds—as compared with the 27½ cents paid by the Canadian farmer at Coutts.

Behave Decently Or Perish

Approaching a State in Which We Could All Live in Harmony

Now that man can do so much more good and so much more harm than ever he could before, so that he is approaching a state in which all mankind could live almost like one respectable family or could annihilate itself by the perfection of its poison gases and its cultures of deadly germs, the piquancy of the old dispute between the ascetics and the humanists increases in like proportion. We are becoming so strong that if we are not good, we shall pull the whole temple down on our heads. We must either behave decently or perish, and the issue cannot be evaded by calling upon science to give us goodness as a kind of by-product of the things that it can and does give us. Wireless telegraphy will go on getting clearer and clearer, but it will never tell us which kind of messages it is honorable to send, and which not.—Manchester Guardian.

In England it is quite a common custom to cut Bank of England notes in half and send the two halves by post in separate envelopes. This is done to lessen the risk of loss, and does not impair the value of the notes, which will be honored if joined together.

THANKFUL MOTHERS

Once a mother has used Baby's Own Tablets for her little one she would use nothing else. The Tablets give such results that the mother has nothing but words of praise and thankfulness for them. Among the thousands of mothers throughout Canada who praise the Tablets is Mrs. David A. Anderson, New Glasgow, N.S., who writes:—"I have used Baby's Own Tablets for my children and from my experience I would not be without them. I would urge every other mother to keep a box of the Tablets in the house." The Tablets are a mild but thorough laxative which regulate the bowels and sweeten the stomach; drive out constipation and indigestion; break up colds and simple fevers and make teething easy. They are sold by medicine dealers, or by mail at 25c a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Borrowed Way to Fortune

Small Loan Bought Partnership Which Netted Fifty Million

Henry Phipps was associated with Andrew Carnegie for fifty years in the steel business. His wealth increased from nothing to $50,000,000. His climb was illustrated by a friend who told of the career of a man who owned a large chicken farm.

"How did you happen to start in the chicken business?" somebody asked him.

"When I was young I was out of work for a spell," he answered. "So I borrowed a hen and a dozen fresh eggs from a neighbor. I set the hen on the eggs and all of them hatched. Then I waited until the hen had laid a dozen eggs. I took the hen and the dozen eggs I borrowed back to the owner. He had what I borrowed from him and I had a dozen chickens. The dozen chickens started my farm."

Phipps borrowed 25 cents to advertise for a job. Later he borrowed $800 to enter the partnership which made him rich.

American Newspapers Would Build a Radio Station Near Halifax

Application has been made to the marine department to license the erection of a wireless station at St. Margaret's Bay, near Halifax, by the American Publishers' Committee on Cable and radio communication.

The New York Times, Tribune, World and Herald, the Chicago Tribune, Philadelphia Public Ledger, International News, and United Press are associated in the enterprise, the application being made by C. F. Crandall, of the British United Press. An experimental plant of moderate power has been operated for a year between London and Halifax, and thence overland to the large American cities. It is now proposed to erect a large station for handling press matter exclusively. There are stations in Britain and on the continent as far east as Moscow.

Country Committed To Pledge For Early Completion Of The Hudson Bay Railway

In the recent debate in the House of Commons on the Hudson Bay route the leaders of all parties committed themselves definitely to the completion of the route. The discussion was on a resolution moved by Mr. Andrew Knox, of Prince Albert, which favored completing the railway and giving the undertaking priority over other transportation projects started later this one. The position of the Progressives is so well known that they need not be quoted here. The other quotations given herewith are from the Hansard report of the speeches by Hon. S. P. Graham, Hon. Arthur Meighen and Hon. W. S. Fielding.

Hon. S. P. Graham, Acting Minister of Railways, speaking for the Government, said in part:

"The present situation is this: the Government has no idea of abandoning the Hudson Bay railway, but we have to go carefully and with caution. The position of the second 118 miles at the present time is almost as if it had never been constructed. I believe—and I propose to make this recommendation—that we ought to proceed to put that second 118 miles in such shape that it could be operated, and to rescue some million dollars worth of material—I do not mean to take it out, but to rescue it—and put into workable shape, that 118 miles of line . . .

"I think the first duty of the Government to the country it to place that 118 miles in repair again. When that is completed we can decide what the next step will be.

"In the meantime I assure the House that so far as the Government is concerned they have never suggested, so far as I have any knowledge, the abandonment of the Hudson Bay project."

Hon. Arthur Meighen said:

"In the first place I favor the Hudson Bay railway. I do not propose to canvass the merits of the undertaking as one would be compelled to do if the whole project were in the future. . . . The matter has been debated and investigated, investigated and debated not for a few years but for many years, for a whole generation. For forty years it has been the subject of dispute, and in that forty years, this country has come to the conclusion in so far as a country can express a conclusion, and come to it more than once and at the hand of both great parties of this country.

"The Senate of Canada has rendered a special service in this connection. Committees of that body have liberated, listened to evidence, listened to professional opinion, have delved to the very heart of the question on more occasions than one. I think the most thorough inquiry was at the hands of the Senate Committee of 1920. There were those of the Upper House who viewed most pessimistically the feasibility of the navigation of the Hudson Straits and who doubtless sought to bring before that committee the weightiest evidence that could be adduced against the practicability of that transportation route. Notwithstanding this, notwithstanding every effort, after very patient and prolonged inquiry, the Senate Committee reported favorably, and so far as the report shows, it was unanimous on the part of all its members. . . .

"I think the weight of evidence, the weight of the verdicts that have been given by competent bodies, is in favor of the route. . . . We are not at the commencement of the venture. We are well on towards the conclusion of the venture. This country is committed to the project. This country has been committed to the project for at least fifteen years. This country has made a contract with many citizens that that road will be built and it is a matter of good faith with that portion of our population that the covenant of the Dominion be kept. . . . It should have priority in my judgment over other national ventures of a major kind. I do not think that good faith will be kept with Western Canada unless that is recognized by this House. . . . Settlers have gone in; large sections are today more populated than they would have been had the word of Parliament not been given in this regard."

Hon. W. S. Fielding, Minister of Finance said:

"Rightly or wrongly, this House under various governments, has consented to the building of the Hudson Bay railway, and the Government of which I was a member began the construction of the railway. I think if one looks at a map of Western Canada it is not difficult to find a reason why the western country should seek an outlet to the nearest and most attractive tidewater. If I lived in the west I should feel that we should have access to that route. Both parties have accepted the responsibility of it, and have done something in the way of building it, and both parties should see to it that it is one of the things we must undertake and in a reasonable time complete. I would hesitate to vote against it, because there is the danger that if one should vote against the resolution it would seem to imply a denial of the commitment of the past. I do not wish to be put in that position. . . .

"We must have some regard to the financial condition of the country, and I ask the House to keep that reservation in mind. I am going to support the resolution, because to vote against it would seem to me to be an indication that we were denying responsibility for the Hudson Bay railway. I do not want to deny it. I want to accept it, and the only reservation I make is that which applies to all large enterprises in Canada, namely, that you must have regard to the financial situation of the country."

Great Britain First

Only Nation that Has Decreased National Debt Since the War

The only bright spot in financial Europe was Great Britain, stated A. B. McMaster, K.C., M.P. for Brome, Que., in an address before the University Club in Ottawa recently. Britain, went on the speaker, was the only nation that had decreased its national debt since the war.

The easiest way for the laymen to grasp the extent of the indebtedness of Europe to America was to remember that Europe owed every man, woman and child in the United States $140, he continued.

Canada was now also a creditor nation as far as European countries were concerned. Great Britain owed Canada 76 millions; Rumania over 20 millions on which no interest has ever been paid; Greece seven and a half millions on which only part of the interest was paid, and France almost six million on which all interest was paid.

JAMES McKINNON PAYS TRIBUTE TO DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS

He Suffered from Kidney Trouble for a Considerable Time and now Loses no Opportunity to Praise Dodd's Kidney Pills.

Mulgrave, N.S.—(Special).—"I will never be without a box of Dodd's Kidney Pills in the house." That is the tribute Mr. James McKinnon, a well known resident here, pays to the old reliable kidney remedy.

"I feel it is my duty," Mr. McKinnon continues, "to let others know how I have benefited by taking Dodd's Kidney Pills. I was in a run-down condition before taking them, having pains in my back. I got thin and pale. Rheumatism also troubled me. After taking five boxes of Dodd's Kidney Pills I feel better than I ever did."

The satisfaction Dodd's Kidney Pills are giving as a remedy for kidney troubles is shown by the large number of people who keep them always on hand. They have learned that the proper way to avoid serious forms of kidney disease, such as rheumatism, diabetes, dropsy, and heart disease, is to correct the early symptoms of kidney trouble.

Dodd's Kidney Pills have built their reputation on the good work they have done. Ask your neighbors if Dodd's Kidney Pills are not the sovereign remedy for kidney trouble.

We often wonder what effect it would have on a man's disposition if he had dishes to wash three times a day.

Canadian Wheats Have Grown In Value And Popularity By Process Of Careful Selection

In a recapitulation of the past 17 years of wheat growing in Canada, P. Russell Cowan, cerealist for the Dominion Government, finds that beardless wheats have supplanted bearded wheats to the result that Canadian wheats have grown in value and popularity.

"Seventeen years ago," he says, "only one hundred million bushels of wheat were produced on the prairies; in 1922 three hundred and sixty-six millions of bushels were produced. On looking over the history of cereal production in Western Canada, we find that this phenomenal increase was due largely to the successive introductions of various wheats. White Russian was supplemented by Red Fife and Red Fife by Marquis. This, of course, refers only to the main crop wheats. A remarkable feature of this is that all of the above mentioned wheats are beardless or bald.

"During the transitional stage of the supplanting of Red Fife by Marquis, many other varieties of wheat were introduced and tried, but at no time did any of these varieties become popular. Reference is made more particularly to such wheats as Stanley, Percy, Preston and Huron. These wheats did not gain in popularity owing to various reasons, chiefly, though, because of inferiority to Red Fife. Of these wheats, Huron and Preston were bearded varieties and were soon discarded because they were unsuitable for prairie growth and inferior in milling and baking qualities. Stanley and Percy made some headway and are still grown in some localities. It should be noted that these two wheats are beardless.

"Let us now consider the more recent introductions on the Canadian prairie, such as Ruby, Red Bobs, Supreme, Early Triumph, Kitchener, Early Red Fife and Kinley, all of which are beardless. What does this mean. It means that the Canadian west, at the present time, demands a bald wheat.

"There are also numerous bearded wheats, some of which have already been referred to that have been tried in the west with only partial success. Among these may be mentioned Huron, Pioneer, Prelude and Preston. It may be truthfully said of all the above mentioned bearded wheats that they are more subject to shattering than beardless wheats. This is a very important factor to be considered in the prairies where winds are so prevalent. Again, the above mentioned wheats all produce flour of inferior quality and color to such wheats as Red Fife, Marquis, Ruby, or, in other words, most of our bald wheats. This statement must not be interpreted to mean that all bald wheats are superior in quality to all bearded wheats. This is not the case, although it appears from our present knowledge that the best bald wheats produce a higher quality flour than our best bearded wheats.

One Clear Call

John M. Stahl has woven many dramatic elements with masterly skill in the production of his latest First National attraction, "One Clear Call," which will be the feature at the Grand Theatre Saturday night. Behind the spectacular incidents is a story of gripping human interest with the pathetic heart appeal that has been equalled only by the traditional stage classics, such as "The Music Master" or "Uncle Tom's Cabin. If there is any one thing that has distinguished the work of this producer in the past it has been the simple, effective way in which he has handled tense climaxes without either overdoing the sentiment or allowing the actors to overplay their roles. In "One Clear Call," the action of which takes place for the most part in a small southern town, Mr. Stahl has a greater assemblage of incidents of audience interest than in any previous picture he has made. The spectacular scenes, however, are handled with such genuine sincerity, if we are to believe those who have already seen the production, that the story runs along in unbroken continuity without constant breaks caused by over-emphasis of spectacular effects.

Mayor Webster
Calgary, Alberta.

"Calgary Kiddies" opened Chautauqua season here to-night. Audience taken by storm. We feel we must hasten to congratulate Calgary on this wonderful production. Chautauqua would be well advised to return this act next year.

The above telegram to Calgary's mayor goes to show the hit the Calgary Kiddies made at Ladner. This juvenile organization are but one of a dozen features of the same high order that figure in the 1923 Chautauqua, which opens at Creston on Wednesday. Adults will save $4.75 by buying season tickets,
