Institute Having Sewing Instructor

Being the busiest time of the year for the average housewife, the attendance at the August session of Creston Valley Women's Institute on Friday afternoon in the Parish Hall, was not quite up to the usual standard. The president, Mrs. Lyne, occupied the chair.

For the better community committee, Mrs. H. McLaren, convenor, reported on the status of the public tennis club that the Institute is indirectly interesting itself in. The club has a committee of management at work securing members, and the Institute voted $5 of its funds to assist with the financing of putting the grounds in shape provided the club gets under way.

For the committee on home industries Mrs. James Maxwell reported that Mrs. Dunk of Nelson was expected here in September to give a practical course in dressmaking, and that the fee for the course would be two dollars, ladies wishing to avail themselves of the instruction to notify the secretary, Mrs. Cherrington.

The feature of the session was a demonstration on preserving raspberries with a Conserve, which was given by Mrs. Maxwell, who did a very expeditious job of canning a canning a couple of jars of that fruit by this new labor saving process and had a busy few minutes of it answering questions of very sorts regarding the process.

The two jars of fruit were subsequently raffled and were won by Mrs. John Hall of Erickson, the raffle proceeds of $1.60 being donated to the crippled children fund being raised at Vancouver, to which also went the $1.50 taken from the tea served before adjournment, and which was in charge of Mesdames Fred Klingensmith, Morrow, James Johnston, and H. McLaren.

Sirdar

Norman Moore, district forester of Cranbrook, was through here on Friday on his way to Kuskanook, investigating possible site for the auto camp ground that will be put in there this fall.

Trainman Rumsey, who was married at Bonners Ferry, Idaho, on August 7th, to Mrs. Evans of Creston, passed through on Thursday last on the honeymoon camping trip at lake points.

Mrs. Heap of Coalhurst, Alta., has been a visitor here with her sisters, Mrs. Whitesides and Mrs. Martin.

Rev. H. Varley will be here on Sunday evening for Church of England service in the schoolhouse.

Mrs. Dennes, who has been keeping close to the house due to an attack of tonsolitis, is around again as usual.

Mayor Daly is home again from a few weeks' visit with old friends at Kaslo, and is a great booster for the cherries that grow in that town—some of them taking but ten to measure a foot.

Depot master Walters is expecting to get away at the end of the week for a couple of weeks' vacation.

Mrs. Cam was hostess at a miscellaneous shower in honor of Miss Parento on Thursday night, which was a much enjoyed affair, the guests remembering the guest of honor with many articles that will be useful in her married life, her marriage to an Italian from Frank, Alberta, being announced for the 18th of August.

Mrs. Martin was a between-trains visitor at Creston on Friday.

Mrs. Price and baby of Cranbrook, who spent several days here, guests at the C.P.R. boarding house, returned home on Wednesday.

D. C. Coleman, vice-president, and C. Cotterill, assistant superintendent of western lines, with their private cars, arrived at Kootenay Landing on Sunday and after a two hours inspection left on the eastbound express with Hugh Brock at the levers. T. R. Flett, divisional superintendent, met the party here and accompanied them east.

We hear the work trains are to be put back at work here about the 20th. They will get the bridge fill for use at the Landing at a point five miles east of Sirdar.

Mrs. Morrison and two children of Cowley, Alberta, arrived on Saturday to visit Mrs. Sid McCabe a couple of weeks.

Mrs. G. S. Moore and children, who have been here for two weeks, returned to their home in Cranbrook on Wednesday. Miss Molly Johnston has also returned to the divisional city.

Sunday Kuskonook was a veritable Coney Island minus the merry-go-rounds and peanut vendors. Many picnic parties were in evidence, while boating and bathing parties were to be seen everywhere. Passengers on the Nasookin, which loaded six autos there that day, remarked, "Where do all these people come from; do they live at Kuskanook." Two of the autoists were from California, who expressed themselves delighted with our scenery and the courtesy and kindness shown here, but deplored the absence of a tourist camp site at Kuskanook.

Erickson

Mrs. Geo. Cartwright got home at the end of the week from a month's visit with friends at Edmonton, Alberta.

Mrs. D. H. Linn and daughter, Evelyn, arrived home on Friday from a visit with relatives at Lethbridge and other Southern Alberta centres.

Mrs. E. Botterill and Frank were motor visitors to Sandpoint, Idaho, where they spent a week visiting with her son, Lorne.

Ray McKelvey and Charlie Botterill are the first to leave here to help with the prairie harvest. They left Monday for Saskatchewan.

L. R. Leveque and two children of Medicine Hat, Alberta, are visiting here this week with Mr. and Mrs. L. T. Leveque.

Charlie Linn of Lethbridge, Alberta, is a visitor here with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. D. H. Linn.

Mrs. Jenner is spending a few days with Nelson friends this week.

Miss Margaret Reid of Macleod, Alberta, is a visitor with Mr. and Mrs Bundy. Mr. and Mrs. Reid are spending their summer holiday on a trip to California.

Dr. McIntosh of Vancouver, one of the higher-ups of Provincial party, had a meeting with the Valley supporters of the new party at the schoolhouse on Wednesday night last, which was quite well attended.

Alice Siding

Mrs. Andy Matthews of Nelson, an Alice Siding resident up till three years ago, was renewing acquaintances here last week, the guest of Mrs. Stace Smith.

Mrs. J. W. Parkin is away at present on a short holiday visit with friends at Michel.

Frank Simister, who has been here for some weeks making improvements on his ranch property, returned to Butte, Montana, last week.

Mr. and Mrs. R. Stewart and family, along with their berry helpers, were picnicers at Kuskanook on Sunday, making the trip by motor.

E. Neilson, who has been working at the Parkin ranch for the past two months, left for his home at Kimberley on Saturday.

The Compton tractor attached to scraper and grader was at work the first of the week levelling down some of the high spots between the Beazer and Smith corners, so as to assure a standard grade for the new rock road that is being put down through this section.

Forest Fires are Few This Season

Up to the first of August the decrease in the number of forest fires, and attendant cost of fighting same, in East Kootenay, is almost 400 per cent., according to Norman Moore, of Cranbrook, district forester for the East Kootenay district, who was here on an official visit Friday.

Up till this time last year 218 forest fires were reported, whereas for 1923 the total is but 62, of which seven were reported in the Creston Valley area.

The expense in connection with handling forest fires this year has been practically nil, except for the salaries of the patrol men. Only one serious blaze has resulted so far. This was at Lumberton toward the end of July, when a crew of 120 men were busy for two days preventing the spread of flames that broke out in about 600 acres of slashings in an area operated on by the B.C. Spruce Mills Company at that point. The two pumps supplied by the forestry department did great work at this fire one of them throwing a stream through a 1000 feet stretch of hose, and the other handling a stream through 800 feet. No merchantable timber was touched in the conflagration, which was handled by the lumber company men for the most part.

Of the fires in Creston Valley reports state that three of these were caused by lightning, two from camp fires, and the other two from unknown causes. No expense, however, was incurred in extinguishing them and none of them burned over more than an eigth of an acre.

Due to the economy it has been possible to practise due to the absence of fires the forestry department will have a considerable surplus this fall and Mr. Moore is quite confident some of the unexpended balance will be used for improving old and putting in new camp sites, and part of his mission here was to look over the Kuskanook section in order to see just what sites are available there for a camp, and as soon as authority is given to go ahead with it he will consult board of trades interested in the matter. At Arrow Creek the site is now in use but will require some improving and more equipment.

In the whole East Kootenay district, which, by the way, is the first to put in these tourist camping spots, there are now fourteen camp grounds, each of which will comfortably handle four autos and their average passenger capacity of five persons.

More of them however, will have to be put in, particularly on the Banff Windermere road north of Cranbrook. This year it is modestly estimated that at least eighty cars a day are travelling the highway, and for the most part are using camping grounds somewhere along the route, and a great increase is looked for next season.

In connection with the auto traffic it is quite safe to say that forty per cent. of the cars are carrying American number plates, California and Washington being very largely represedted, and present a decidedly more prosperous appearance than the 1922 motor visitors through the Kootenays.

WHAT OTHER PAPERS SAY

A Father in Wynndel

What is probably the largest family in the Kootenays is that of Mr. and Mrs. Matt. Hagen, who make their home at Wynndel, near Creston. Five boys and nine girls, all, with the exception of a married daughter also living also in Wynndel, making their homes with their parents. The youngest of the Hagen family is a girl, a baby, a few weeks old. Besides being the father of 14 healthy sons and daughters, Mr. and Mrs. Hagen also boast of 12 sturdy grandchildren, the offspring of their son, Paul, and his wife. The Hagens are successful fruit farmers.—Cranbrook Courier.

A Writ for $10,227.00

Matt. G. Wilson, liquidator of the property of the Okanagan United Growers, Ltd., has entered suit against the Creston Fruit Growers' Union, Ltd., for the sum of $10,227. The Imperial Bank of Canada, with a branch at Creston is also being proceeded against by Mr. Wilson. The action is to recover monies advanced by the O.U.G. in excess of the net returns due the Creston branch of the old marketing organization. It is stated that Creston Growers formed a new organization under this name and that assets of the former local were turned over to the new one and further, that the Imperial Bank had taken a lien on the assets, when the bank will have to be brought in as the party in suit.—Vernon News.

Evans—Rumsey Nuptials

Godfrey F. E. Rumsey of Cranbrook B.C., and Hirell C. D. Evans, of Creston, B.C., were married at the St. Mary's Guild hall at 4 o'clock Tuesday afternoon, Rev. George Fowler performing the ceremony in the presence of a few of the intimate friends of the couple. During their stay here Mr. and Mrs. Rumsey were guests at the home of their close friends, Mr. and Mrs. I. Causton. They left today for Cranbrook where they will make their home. Mr. Rumsey is a conductor on the Canadian Pacific railway. The bride has made her home at Creston for many years and is a charming and talented lady. Both Mr. and Mrs. Rumsey have many friends in Bonners Ferry who take pleasure in extending heartiest congratulations and best wishes.—Bonner's Ferry Herald.

Lister

Harold Langston arrived from Klockmann, Idaho, on Sunday last, and will make quite an extended stay on his ranch here.

At a meeting of the school board on Saturday, F. B. Pearce of Creston was named principal of Lister school. Miss Brander of Fort Steele is to take charge of Division II., thus making the full complement of teachers.

George Niblow of Saskatoon, who motored to Lister on an inspection trip some time ago, has purchased the old Atkins ranch, and will take possession this fall.

W. Johnston left for Copeland, Idaho, on Friday last, and will be employed in a mill near there for some time.

E. J. Malthouse and C. Frampton have finished the cut of oats and alfalfa on the former May ranch, which they leased from the Land Settlement Board last spring.

Mr. and Mrs. R. Helme of Vancouver were weekend visitors with the Helme boys here.

John Davis and Jos. W. Bell, the local honey kings, are very busy extracting at present, and prophesies are for a substantial yield.

The question of affiliating with Creston high school has been occupying the minds of a number of residents here recently. The majority appear to favor the move but nothing can be done until 1924 when this district will be regularly assessed.

School Staff Complete

At a regular meeting of the Creston school board on Monday, August 6th, a conference was held between the Creston trustees and trustee Walter Hall of Erickson, on the subject of the high school and it was decided to call a meeting of the trustees of local schools from Sirdar to Kitchener some time in November to discuss the advisability of having a central high school.

It is thought that as so many pupils from points outside the Creston school area want to attend high school the time is ripe for such action, and that the trustees of the local schools should talk the matter over and agree upon a policy to put before their ratepayers so that a school could be erected.

At the present time outside pupils have to pay a fee of $50 per annum to attend Creston High School, and there is often difficulty in accommodating them, and at any time such difficulty might become insuperable with the result that pupils would either have to go without the advantage of high school education altogether, or go elsewhere.

The Creston School staff for 1923-24 is as follows:

Principal High School—C. M. Brousson, B.Sc.
Vice principal—J. D. Siddons, B.A.
Principal Public School—G. S. Simmons.
Vice-principal—Miss Vickers.
Division III.—Miss Wade.
Division IV.—Miss Brett.
Division V.—Miss Luxton.

1923 Lumber Cut Will be Lighter

Although the output of sawn lumber in the East Kootenay forestry district this year may be as much as forty million feet less than last year, due to an increased cut of ties and mine props, the value of the year's forestry output will most likely equal the figures of 1922, according to Norman Moore, Cranbrook, district forester for East Kootenay, who was here on an official visit at the end of the week.

Last year East Kootenay sawmills had a total output of 168,000,000 feet and had it not been for the later season experienced this year, along with a more acute labor shortage, that figure would have been equalled this season, which has about twenty one mills in operation and now sawing about 12,000,000 feet a month.

For the first time in some years there is a decided improvement in the prairie lumber market, which is taking a considerable quantity of lower grade lumber for granary and such like construction, and is leaving the millmen the better grades, for which the Eastern Canada demand is excellent. There is a very light demand for the 20 and 25-foot poles, but the market was never better than at present for poles 30 feet and over.

If present market conditions are maintained available stocks will be pretty well depleted before the end of the year and right now it looks as if the present winter will be a very busy one in the woods, absorbing considerable of the extra labor that will come into Alberta to help with harvest work in that province.

The trap shooting department of Kaslo's Rod and Gun Club will have a trap shooting tournament on August 29th.

At Penticton the public market building is now found too small to accommodate the throngs of Saturday shoppers.

"You had better leave us," Rexhill said brusquely to Dorothy. "You are not wanted here. Go home!"

While they were talking, Dorothy had looked from one to the other with the contempt which a good woman naturally feels when she is impugned. Now she crossed the room and confronted the Senator.

"Did you tell your daughter that I was caught in your office with Gordon Wade?" she demanded; and before her steady gaze Rexhill winced.

"You don't deny it, do you?" he blustered.

"I don't deny being there with him, and I won't deny anything else to such a man as you. I'm too proud to. For your own sake, however, you would have done better not to haxe tried to blacken me." She turned swiftly to his daughter. "Perhaps you don't know all that I supposed you did. We were in Moran's office—Mr. Wade and myself—because we felt sure that your father had some criminal purpose here in Crawling Water. We were right. We found papers showing the location of gold on Mr. Wade's ranch, which showed your father's reasons for trying to seize the land."

Helen laughed scornfully.

"Do you expect me to believe that?"

"No, of course not," her father growled. "Come on up to our rooms. Let her preach here until she is put out." He was on his way to the door when the vibrant command in Dorothy's voice halted him.

"Wait. You'd better listen to me, for it's the last chance you'll have. I have you absolutely at my mercy. I've caught you! You are trapped!" There was no doubting that the girl believed what she said, and the Senator's affairs were in a sufficiently precarious state to bid him pause.

"Nonsense!" He made his own tone as unconcerned as he could, but there was a look of haunting dread in his eyes.

"Senator Rexhill,"—Dorothy's voice was low, but there was a quality in it which thrilled her hearers—"when my mother and I visited your daughter a few days ago, she gave my mother a blotter. There was a picture on it that reminded my mother of me as a child; that was why she wanted it. It has been on my mother's bureau ever since. I never noticed anything curious about it until this evening." She looked, with a quiet smile at Helen. "Probably you forgot that you had just blotted a letter with it."

Helen started and went pale, but not so pale as her father, who went so chalk-white that the wrinkles in his skin looked like make-up, against its pallor.

"I was holding that blotter before the looking-glass this evening," Dorothy continued, in the same low tone, "and I saw that the ink had transferred to the blotter a part of what you had written. I read it. It was this: 'Father knew Santry had not killed Jensen. . . .'"

The Senator moistened his lips with his tongue and strove to chuckle, but the effort was a failure. Helen, however, appeared much relieved.

"I remember now," she said, "and I am well repaid for my moment of sentiment. I was writing to my mother and was telling her of a scene that had just taken place between Mr. Wade and my father. I did not write what you read; rather, it was not all that I wrote. I said—'Gordon thought that father knew Santry had not killed Jensen."

"Have you posted that letter?" her father asked, repressing as well as he could his show of eagerness.

"No. I thought better about sending it. I have it up-stairs."

"If you hadn't it, of course you could write it again, in any shape you chose," Dorothy observed crisply, though she recognized, plainly enough, that the explanation was at least plausible.

"There is nothing in that," Rexhill declared, when he had taken a deep breath of relief. "Your championship of Wade is running away with you. What other—er!—grave charges have you to bring against me?"

"I have one that is much more grave," she retorted, so promptly that he could not conceal a fresh start of uneasiness. "This morning, Mr. Trowbridge and I were out for a ride. We rode over to the place where Jensen was shot, and Mr. Trowbridge found there a cartridge shell which fits only one gun in Crawling Water. That gun belongs to a man named Tug Bailey."

By now Rexhill was thoroughly aroused, for although he was too good a jurist not to see the flaws in so incomplete a fabric of evidence against him, he was impressed with the influence such a story would exert on public opinion. If possible, this girl's tongue must be stopped.

"Pooh!" He made a fine show of indifference. "Why bring such tales to me? You'd make a very poor lawyer, young woman, if you think that such rumors will serve to impeach a man of my standing."

"There is a warrant out for Bailey," Dorothy went on quietly. "If he is caught, and I choose to make public what I know and can guess, I am sure that you will never reach a court. You underestimate the people here. I would not have to prove what I have told you. I need only to proclaim it, and—I don't know what they'd do to you. It makes me a bit sick to think about it."

The thought made the Senator sick, too, for of late he had seen that things were going very badly for him. He was prepared to temporize, but there was no need for him to contemplate surrender, or flight, so long as Bailey remained at large. If the man were captured, and there was likelihood of a confession being wrung from him, then most decidedly discretion would be the better part of valor.

"Oh, of course," he confessed, "I am willing to admit that in such a community as this you might make trouble, unjustly, for me and my daughter. I am anxious to avoid that, because my interests are valuable here and I have my daughter's safety to consider."

"Don't think of me," Helen interposed quickly. Above all fear for herself would be the shame of being beaten by Dorothy and of having her triumph go to the making of Wade's happiness. The thought of that appeared far worse to her mind than any physical suffering. "Do what you think is right. We are not cowards."

"But I must think of you, my dear. I am responsible to your mother." He turned to Dorothy again. "How much do you want?"

"How much? Oh!" She flushed hotly beneath the insult, but she chose to ignore it. "There is only one price that will purchase my silence. Tell me where Mr. Wade is?"

"Bless my soul, I don't know." The Senator affected a display of injured innocence, which sat oddly upon his harried countenance. "I am willing to do what I can to save trouble, but I can't do the impossible."

For a moment, in a wretched slough of helplessness, Dorothy found her conviction wavering. Could it really be possible that he was speaking the truth; that he did not know? But with the dreadful thought came also the realization that she must not let him fathom her mind. She told herself that she must keep her countenance, and she did so.

"There is not a man in Crawling Water who does not believe that Race Moran is responsible for Mr. Wade's disappearance," she declared. "That is another thing that you should consider, for it is one more link in the chain of evidence—impressions, you may call them, but they will be accepted as evidence by Wade's friends."

Rexhill was considering it, and swiftly, in the light of the visit he had had from Trowbridge. The cattleman had left him with a distinct feeling that every word spoken had been meant. "If we can prove it against you, we'll ride you to hell on a rail." The language was melodramatic, but it seemed very suggestive as the Senator called it to mind. He regretted that he had supported Moran in his lust for revenge. The lawless spirit of the West seemed to have poisoned his own blood, but somehow the feeling of indifference as to suffering personal violence had been left out, and he realized that the West was no place for him.

"Even so," he said pompously, "even if what you say of Moran should prove true, it does not follow that I know it, or am a party to it. Race Moran is his own master."

"He is your employee—your agent—and you are responsible for what he does in your behalf," Dorothy retorted desperately. "Why do you bandy words with me like this? You may be able to do it with me, but don't think that you can do it with Mr. Trowbridge, and the others, if I tell them what I know. I tell you, you can't. You feel safe before me alone, but you are in much greater danger than you think. You don't seem to realize that I am holding your lives in my hand."

Helen's cheeks blanched at this.

"I do realize it." There was a slight quaver in the Senator's voice, although he tried to speak with easy grace. "I assure you, I do and I shall be very grateful to you"—his anxiety was crowding out his discretion—"if you will help me to save my daughter. . . ."

"I say just what I said before," Helen interposed, courageous to the last. There is, many times, in the woman a finer fibre of courage than runs in the man.

Dorothy regarded the Senator scornfully, her feminine intuition assuring her that he was weakening. She no longer doubted that he knew; she was certain of it and happy to feel that she had only to press him harder to wring the truth from him.

Grateful? For helping you? I am not trying to help you. You deserve any punishment that could be inflicted upon you. I would say that, even if you had not insulted me and lied about me. You are an evil man. I am offering you your safety, so far as I can grant, only for the sake of Mr. Wade. If it were not for him, I should not have come here at all."

Her sense of approaching triumph had carried her a little too far. It aroused Helen to bitter resentment, and when she began to speak, Dorothy was sorry that she had not kept silent.

"Father, don't do it!" Miss Rexhill burst out. "It is insufferable that this woman should threaten us so. I would rather run any risk, I don't care what, than give in to her. I won't tolerate such a thing."

"You may be urging him to his death," Dorothy warned her. "I will not stop at anything now. If I tell the cattlemen what I know they will go wild. I mean what I say, believe me—"

"I know you will not stop at anything. I have seen that," Helen admitted. "A woman who can do what you've already done . . ."

"Helen!" The Senator was carrying with him a sense of gratitude toward Dorothy; and in the light of her spirit he was a little ashamed of the part he had played against her. "Let's try to forget what has past. At least, this young woman is offering us a chance."

"Listen!" Dorothy cried out suddenly.

Outside, in the street, a galloping horseman was shouting to some one as he rode. The girl ran to the window and raised the shade to look out. The lusty voice of the horseman bore well into the room. "They've caught Bailey at Seridan. He'll be here tomorrow."

"Senator Rexhill," said Dorothy, turning away from the window, "you'd better take the chance I've offered you, while you can. Do it for the sake of the old friendship between you and Gordon Wade, if for no other reason. No matter how bitter he may feel toward you, he would not want you in Crawling Water when Tug Bailey confesses. It would be too awful." She shuddered at the thought. "Tell me where he it and get out of town at once."

"Bailey hasn't confessed yet," Helen cut in gamely.

"No, but he will," Dorothy declared positively. "They'll put a rope around his neck, and he'll confess. Such men always do. Try to remember the position you are in. You'd be sorry if your father were lynched. Go with him, while you can. I know these people better than you do."

The Senator swallowed hard and mopped his damp forehead with his handkerchief. There was nothing to do but follow the girl's advice, and that quickly, he knew. After all, in the face of death, financial ruin seemed a mere bagatelle.

YOUNG DAUGHTER MADE WELL

Mother Tells How Her Daughter Suffered and Was Made Well by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Vancouver, B.C.—"My daughter is a young girl who has been having severe pains and weak and dizzy feelings for some time and had lost her appetite. Through an elder daughter who had heard of a woman who was taking it for the same trouble, we were told of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. My daughter has been taking it for several months and is quite all right now. It has done all it was represented to do and we have told a number of friends about it. I am never without a bottle of it in the house, for I myself take it for that weak, tired, worn-out feeling which sometimes comes to us all. I find it is building me up and I strongly recommend it to women who are suffering as I and my daughter have."—Mrs. J. McDONALD, 2947 29th Ave. East, Vancouver, B. C.

From the age of twelve a girl needs all the care a thoughtful mother can give. Many a woman has suffered years of pain and misery—the pains of thoughtlessness or ignorance of the mother who should have guided her during this time.

If she complains of headaches, pains in the back and lower limbs, or if you notice a slowness of thought, nervousness or irritability on the part of your daughter, make life easier for her.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is especially adapted for such conditions. C

Fox Farming In B.C.

Woman Is Pioneer In Profitable Industry At Coast

Vancouver Island is ideal for the breeding of high-grade foxes, according to Mrs. Beaumont Boggs, who, nearly three years ago, established the first fox farm on the island. The farm is owned and managed by Mrs. Boggs and her daughter.

With an intimate knowledge of conditions on Prince Edward Island, they have taken an intense interest in the raising and care of their furry charges. Not a single fox has been lost through disease or accident.

Chased and worried nearly out of existence in its wild state, Mrs. Boggs declares, the fox leads an easy and well-cared-for life in captivity, and has a painless death by chloroform.

There are now three fox farms on Vancouver Island, and they have all proved the possibility of making the industry profitable.

As a remedy for all pain, earache, toothache, cramps and disordered stomach, I know of no preparation so useful and quick to relieve as Nerviline." Virgin Islands Have Three-Year Drought

Petition U.S. Government For Money To Build Reservoirs

The Virgin Islands, which the United States bought from Denmark in 1917, have suffered greatly in the last three years from lack of rain. Both the sugar cane and the cattle industry, on which the prosperity of the islands largely depends, have been near complete failure, and the commerce of the islands has been at a low ebb. The islanders are asking Congress to appropriate money for a system of dams and reservoirs to preserve the islands from future mishaps of the kind.

THIN, IMPURE BLOOD

Means a General Weakness and Loss of Health

If people would realize the importance of keeping the blood rich and pure there would be less sickness. The blood is the means through which the nourishment gained from food reaches the different parts of the body. If the blood is impure, the nourishment that reaches the nerves, and organs of the body is tainted with poison and disease follows. The blood is also the medium by which the body fights off disease. If the blood is thin and watery, the power of resistance to disease is weakened. If you are weak and run down, if your nerves are frayed, if you lack ambition, have no appetite, and are short of breath after slight exertion, the trouble is almost always due to poor blood. In cases of this kind you should take Dr. Williams' Pink Pills to build up the blood. They help to enrich and purify the blood from first to last dose, and in this way bring new health and strength to weak, run down people. Mrs. John Timmons, Elmvale, Ont., tells of the benefit Dr. Williams' Pink Pills were to her, as follows:—"I became very weak and was hardly able to walk and had to be helped upstairs. I had no appetite and slept poorly at night. I finally went to a doctor who told me the trouble was lack of blood and that my condition was serious. He gave me medicine, which I took faithfully, but did not improve. I was advised to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and did so, and after I had taken two or three boxes felt that they were helping me. I could eat better, and I slept better I continued using the pills for some time longer and quite recovered my old-time strength and feel that I have to thank Dr. Williams' Pink Pills that I am not an invalid to-day."

You can get these pills through any dealer in medicine or by mail, postpaid, at 50 cents a box, from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

New Rumania Capital

Hermannstadt Is Considered Much Better Location Than Bucharest

Hermannstadt, a city in Transylvania, 16 miles northwest of Bucharest, is being considered as the new capital of Greater Rumania. For a long time many Rumanians have felt that the enormously increased frontiers of the country demanded a capital nearer the western states of Europe than Bucharest. They want to make of Hermannstadt, which in Rumania is called Sibiu, a sort of executive capital.

Hermannstadt was founded in the twelfth century, and has been splendidly developed by the Austrians. It is thoroughly modern and has a series of fine public squares, parks, schools, churches, libraries and theatres. It is much cleaner than any of the cities of Old Rumania, and has a much more healthful climate.

Sick Trappers to Have Hospital in Northern Saskatchewan

To provide a haven where sick trappers, half-breeds and other natives of the northern woods of the province may rest and receive medical treatment, and to provide a maternity home for the wives of settlers, residents of Big River, a town at "the end of the steel" north of Prince Albert are busy at work remodelling an abandoned hospital that was once an adjunct to a lumber camp. When alterations are completed the hospital will be opened as a Red Cross outpost.

The opening will probably not take place until fall, as that is the time when the north country begins to show signs of activity. A hospital is needed constantly during the winter, for scarcely a week passes that there is not a case of frostbite or other accidents.

Auto Monopolizes Accident Column

Horse Used to Attract Attention as Source of News

A horse ran away in Perth County a few days ago. The driver was thrown from the buggy and was instantly killed.

Is the horse coming back into the accident columns of the newspaper? Many people may have forgotten that there was a time when the horse contributed liberally to the news of the day. That was before the coming of the automobile. For a time, while the automobile was seeking to establish itself, the horse continued to fight for recognition; but eventually he seemed to give up the struggle and in time he ceased to attract attention as a source of news. The automobile acquired a monopoly as a cause of traffic accidents. Even the railways recognized that a change had come and they settled down to the business of carrying people instead of killing them, with occasional protests.

It seems necessary to remind the present generation that before the age of motor vehicles there were accidents.—Woodstock Sentinel-Review

HER BABY SUFFERED WITH SUMMER COMPLAINT

A fact mothers must face is that summer complaint with the prostration, often verging on collapse, which sometimes accompanies this disease, makes it one of the most serious and dangerous to contend with during the hot months.

Thousands of infants die annually whose lives could have no doubt been saved by the timely use of Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry, and it has been the experience of thousands of mothers during the past 78 years this valuable preparation has been on the market, that it is the safest and most effective remedy for use in all cases of looseness of the bowels.

Mrs. S. Lafontaine, Great Desert, Ont., writes:—"My baby, when a year old, was suffering with summer complaint. Two doctors attended him, but nothing would stop the vomiting and diarrhoea. A friend told me to try Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry and after the second dose the baby was better and I can say it saved my baby's life.

I wouldn't be without a bottle of Dr. Fowler's' in the house for untold gold."

A Reclamation Picnic

It is to be hoped that everyone who owns a car, and who can possibly spare the time, will make it a point to attend the Reclamation picnic that will be held at Bonners Ferry, Idaho, on August 24th.

The object of the picnic is to give those interested opportunity to inspect the productive possibilities of the Kootenay Valley lands as shown by the hay and grain crops that are growing this year in Drainage District No. 1, just north of the town.

The picnic will be held at a likely spot adjoining the cropped lands, where harvest work will be under way, so that inspection may be conveniently made and any and all information desired gathered first-hand.

In addition a live committee of town businessmen are taking charge of the picnic and will have many other attractions to help make the time pass pleasantly, and from some extended experience the Review has no hesitation in saying that the people from Creston will receive a splendid welcome, and thoroughly enjoy the outing.

Plenty of good drinking water, coffee, lemonade, etc., will be provided by the Commercial Club officials but visitors are asked to bring a picnic basket with them.

If there is any truth to the old saying that seeing is believing, certainly the Creston visitors will be convinced of the productive qualities of the Kootenay Valley—and the lands are just as fertile at this end as they are farther south.

A Central High School

Now that the statutes made and provided for the handling of a central high school have been amended so that they fit into the situation that exists here, and the all round need for the higher seat of learning acutely felt, it is to be hoped a workable agreement can be devised at the proposed conference of trustees of the Valley school districts to be held shortly.

Just why any outside school district should be averse to co operating is hard to understand. In addition to being a splendid thing for the parents and children directly interested better educational facilities—or lack of them, indirectly effect us all.

Without a good high school that can be depended upon to each year take care of all the students offering there are some who in order to give their children the desired education will be forced to leave the Valley, and by the same token prospective new residents are like to give the community a wide berth.

The time is surely past when ratepayers in outside districts not directly requiring a good high school will stand in the way of advancement of other people's children for the sake of saving a few dollars.

If Creston citizens are willing to bear an assessment sufficient to ensure higher education for the children within the local school area, the Review hesitates to think that the other districts, which are just as much interested will be found less public spirited.

This is a matter that every parent will sooner or later be interested in, and it is to be hoped those in the "later" category will not deny to those now keenly interested what they hope will be their good fortune to experience at a not distant date.

If all the parents in the outside school districts back the central high school project as they should its accomplishment should not be long delayed.

Forestry Safeguards

Announcement is just made that the province of New Brunswick has just got into line with Quebec in enacting regulations that make it compulsory for all who visit forest country for the purpose of "travelling, camping, fishing, picniciug, or other purposes," must register with a local fire warden or other official authorized to issue such permits.

The regulation remains effective from May to the end of October and is deemed necesary in order to prevent immense forest fire damage resulting from the carelessness or thoughtlessness on the part of those entering the forest on pleasure bent.

The adoption of the registration regulation is not an attempt to keep people out of the woods or to deprive the fisherman, camper or hunter of any sport. It is a regulation, it is pointed out, whereby each individual is reminded and encouraged to be careful of fire when in ths forest.

Living Closer Off the Land

Now that the fruit farmer is having considerable trouble to show a profit on his yearly operations on the land, stress is again being laid on the necessity of devoting greater attention to mixed farming—keeping two or three cows, chickens, pig, etc., and in general making a more pronounced effort to live closer off the farm.

In opposing the idea we again see in print the oldtime argument about ten acres being altogether too limited for successful mixed farming even on a limited scale, to say nothing of the high price of the soil still further militating against your own butter-and-eggs-and-pork proposition.

While it will be extremely hard to have the average rancher adapt himself to such a condition, the theory could be put into practice here to excellent advantage by the drainage of Kootenay Flats which would provide the necessary acreage upon which to grow all the hay and grain feeds needful for practical mixed farming, and not only for the present resident dwellers on the benches but for a very great many more.

If the comback of the fruit industry is to be as long delayed as many anticipate the reclamation project, if feasible, may well be urged to ease the lot of growers already here, as well as to attract needed new population.

NEWS OF KOOTENAYS

$3300 has been set aside by the public works department for the repair of bridges at Goatfell, Curzon, Kingsgate and Aldridge.

Provincial police Laird of Yahk has been transferred to New Denver to succeed George Gunn who is transferred to the coast.

The Associated Growers is advising the Okanagan growers to be prepared for disappointing prices on cherries, and possibly apricots.

The Gazette figures that around Grand Forks some of the wheat will run 40 bushels to the acre, and oats from 90 to 100 bushels.

A temporary swimming pool is now in use at the park at Fernie. It is quite safe for children with a depth ranging from one to five feet.

The Penticton Herald hears that Wenatchee Winsaps, wrapped in oiled paper, sold this spring at a price that netted the grower $3.44 per box.

Further proof that there is money in hotelkeeping at Fernie is furnished in the robbery of the Roma House one day last week, when $450 was taken from the safe.

Kaslo and Slocan Anglicans have a rector for the summer months in Rev. T. E Rowe of Vancouver, who is favoring them with a series of sermons on faith healing.

Wm. Liddicoatt is the champion sweet pea grower at Grand Forks. Last week he showed Editor Love of the Gazette some stems with seven large blooms on.

With a showing of 839 marks out of a possible 1000, Miss Nora Brander of Fort Steele leads all the students in East Kootenay writing on junior matriculation this year.

No quotations are at present available in the Okanagan, but it is understood some deals are being negotiated which promise good returns for apples to be placed on the European markets.

There is considerable disappointment at Vernon that the Associated Growers do not intend to operate the old O.U.G. apple evaporating plant in that city. Due to hailstorms and stricter grading the Okanagan will have a lot of apples that cannot be shipped.

The Shriners are having another big ceremonial at Nelson early in September.

Grand Forks will spend $3750 in a new auto fire truck for the town's fire brigade.

Cranbrook figures it is having visits from at least 100 auto tourists daily this month.

More than 125 new telephones have been installed in the Okanagan Valley in the past six months.

At the peak of the season the Kootenaian claims Kaslo was shipping two tons of cherries a day.

Now that the boom of two years ago is over Penticton police force is being reduced from three to two men.

The Holiday Season

The summer holiday season has arrived. City and town schools are closed for the long vacation and young Canadian boyhood and girlhood are happy over the prospect of long hours in the open. Thousands of people are moving to summer cottages at lakeside and other resorts, while other thousands, including Boy Scouts, Girl Guides, C.S.E.T., G.C.I.T. and various groups are going into camp.

This is as it should be. Here in Western Canada where long and cold winters make it necessary to keep the houses closely shut for many months, it is of the utmost importance that during the summer months all people, and especially children, should live as much as possible in the open. The health of the people demands it, and every possible encouragement should be given to the development of outdoor life and living, with plenty of exercise and amusement. In the cities and larger towns where it is not possible for many families to get away, supervised playgrounds for children should be created.

There are, however, certain dangers to be guarded against at summer cottage resorts and camps. The sanitary conveniences and arrangements do not exist, as a rule, at such places to which city and town people have been accustomed. There is danger of a too great laxity being developed regarding this all important matter during the camping season, and neglect along this line may easily result, not in an increase in health and strength, but in the development of disease. It is important that strict attention be paid to sanitary conditions by all parents and those responsible for the conduct and administration of summer resorts and camps.

Another matter calling for watchful attention and care is the water supply. People drink more water in the heat of summer than during the cold of winter, and life and exercise in the open further encourages water consumption. The drinking of lots of water is a good thing, providing the water is pure, but danger lurks in every cup if the water is contaminated. Many a case, and even epidemics, of typhoid fever have resulted from an impure water supply at a summer camp. Extraordinary care should, therefore, be taken regarding this matter.

Full advantage should be taken of the summer camping season to instruct boys and girls in the art of swimming. Every child should be taught how to swim. It must be remembered, however, that most children in this country live remote from bodies of water, and are ignorant of the dangers of bathing, and lacking warning and instruction are inclined to take risks which to the informed are nothing short of foolhardy. Young children should go bathing only when accompanied by an adult who can swim. The provision of such a simple safeguard will keep sorrow from many a home and save valuable little lives to Canada. Young children, too, should be strictly prohibited from going out alone in canoes.

Everybody, old and young alike, should be on guard against one thing—fire. If a camp fire is started, take full precautions against its spread and see that the last spark is extinguished before it is left. Smokers' beware of throwing matches, pipe ashes, cigar and cigarette stubs into grass and leaves. Carelessness in these matters may result in enormous loss of valuable property, and even life.

During the summer holidays spent at resorts and in camps, boys and girls should learn to know the flora and wild fruits of the country and be instructed so that they can distinguish between those that are poisonous and harmful and those having healing properties or are good to eat.

In a word, the summer holiday season should not mean a complete relaxation from all study and the gaining of useful knowledge. True, it is a time for rest, fun and outdoor life and exercise, but while enjoying these, and blended with them, there is a wonderful and beautiful opportunity for learning many things which may prove of immense advantage to a person at some unexpected turn or crisis in their lives.

Locating Ships Automatically

Instrument Invented In Austria Considered Distinctly Valuable

Austrian inventors have perfected an instrument which automatically and accurately records the passage of any vessel over a given body of water, night or day, to observers who may be located on shore. As an aid in catching smugglers, and a help to coast defence in war time, the invention is regarded as distinctly valuable.

The device consists of a small searchlight sending a ray no bigger than a pencil across the space to be controlled, and a receiving apparatus at the other end containing a light-sensitive selenium cell. Whenever a passing vessel interrupts the rays of the searchlight, the selenium cell closes a relay which starts a bell alarm, or operates a recording device.

The instrument was tested recently between two points three and one half miles apart, in the outskirts of Vienna, and the passage of every object, as well as every person, was duly recorded. These tests were made in broad daylight, with a 50 candlepower incandescent lamp as the source of light.

The occasional use of the Tablets prevent stomach and bowel troubles, or if the trouble comes suddenly—as it generally does—the Tablets will bring the baby safely through. They are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25c a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Methods Used To Secure Best Results In Making Hay From Clover Or Alfalfa

One of the difficulties in the way of the adoption of sweet clover and alfalfa in a more general way throughout the west is the fact that they are more difficult to handle in curing for hay than the grasses. They are much harder to dry out and more subject to damage. While it is hardly accurate to consider the two crops in the same way yet there is enough similarity that the same treatment may be given for both. The difference is one of degree rather than kind. Sweet clover presents the same kind of difficulties as alfalfa but in a much greater degree.

These difficulties are due to a very heavy juicy stem which is slow to dry out and to the leaves which dry very quickly and when dry become brittle and break off. The stems of the sweet clover being much larger and juicier than those of the alfalfa and the leaves fewer, the difficulty is greatly increased with that crop.

Now these difficulties are by no means insurmountable. They have been presented frankly so that new growers of these crops will understand why they have to be handled differently. But if they are handled properly alfalfa at last can be made into the very finest quality of hay, and sweet clover into what is at least reasonably edible and palatable.

The crucial point in curing is the prevention of too rapid drying of the leaves. The moisture that must be expelled before the green fodder becomes hay is mostly in the stems. The leaves are the means of pumping this out of the stems. So long as the leaves are moist they are evaporating moisture, but when they dry up they are closed as avenues of evaporation, and the juice in the stems remain.

Then the leaves are the most valuable part of these plants for feed. They are rich in food elements and more digestible than the stems. If they become so brittle as to break off, which they readily do, the loss of food value is serious.

The way, therefore to handle these crops is to dry them in coils, and not spread out. They should be raked up and coiled before the leaves dry. In bright hot weather they should be raked and coiled the same day as cut, in cloudy weather the next day will be about right. Hand-made coils are, of course, best, but under present labor conditions hardly practicable if any considerable area is grown. Bunches made by the horse rake are not so good but are very much better than not coiling at all. Small coils are best; large ones become too solid so that the bottom becomes airtight and instead of drying the hay turns yellow. The hay should be left in the coil for several days depending on the weather. In judging of the fitness of alfalfa hay for storage the moisture in the stems should be judged rather than that of the leaf. It should not be possible to twist juice out of the stems. The day that hauling is to be done, the coils should be upset and the bottoms loosened out a few hours before hauling so that the dampness may be dried out of the lower layers.

In order to make the best use of sweet clover for hay, it may be grown mixed with Brome grass. This mixture is much easier to make into hay than the sweet clover alone. It is not necessary to mix alfalfa with a grass to make the finest kind of hay. If it is mixed with grass, western rye grass is the best to mix with it.

The Wool Crop

Contracts involving more than 21,000 sheep in Saskatchewan and Manitoba have been received to date by the Canadian Co-operative Wool Growers, Ltd. In all, about 325 contracts have been received from sheep breeders, an estimated 170,000 pounds of wool. This is in excess by several thousand pounds of the amount of the contracts filled with the concern up to the first of June, 1922.

Construction In Saskatchewan

During the month of April, 1923, the amount of building construction actually started in the province of Saskatchewan totalled $500,081, of which brick buildings consisted of $26,000, residential $21,200, commercial $30,000 and the balance industrial.

Destruction of Forests by Fires

U.S. Owns 25 Per Cent. and Canada 85 Per Cent. of Nation's Timber Lands

An indication of the situation that will be faced by Canada in a very short time, if the destruction of forests by fire continues in such widespread fashion as during the past few years, is seen in a report by Dr. Richard T. Ely, Professor of the University of Wisconsin, on the "Forest Crisis," in the United States. Dr. Ely has made a recommendation for government ownership of all forest lands in the States and the creation of a block system in timber areas so that administration and fire protection would be economically conducted. In this connection, it is pointed out that, whereas the American people own just 25 per cent. of their forest estate, 85 per cent. of all timber lands in Canada belong to the people of the Dominion, which means that every time there is a forest fire in the Dominion the whole nation suffers — not "just the lumber companies." Industrial, economic and employment conditions are also directly affected by a timber conflagration.

Dr. Ely, in his statement, refers to the fact that there are 80,000,000 acres of burnt-out forest country in the United States which are lying absolutely idle. He also stresses the economic value of maintaining and protecting natural forest beauty for recreational purposes.

"The Great Lakes Section will lose 75 per cent. of its charm when the forests are gone," he said. "Recreation means an actual money income to the state. It is estimated that Michigan profits to the extent of $75,000,000 a year from the people who visit that state for recreational purposes."

London's Smoky Atmosphere

Constitutes a Real Problem in World's Metropolis

The injurious effects of coal smoke were explained by Sir Arthur Holbrook in a lecture before the Royal Society in London. He said that airmen had asserted they could see and smell a London smoke fog at distances of over 100 miles.

The smoke problem, he declared, has harmful economic, asthetic and health aspects. In every house now being built only one smoke-producing fire should be allowed, and an effective law in place of the present "inoperative absurdity" should be devised to deal with the nuisance.

Indignation in London against a smoky atmosphere was very old, Sir Arthur said, for in 1307 a man was executed for the crime of burning coal. The damage to buildings was mainly due to the sulphurous and sulphuric acids present in the products of raw coal combustion, their effect being enhanced by uniting with the tarry and adhersive particles of soot.

The elimination of both smoke and invisible impurities was made possible only by the use of gaseous fuel or electricity and the knowledge of fuel experts was now great enough to justify the hope that in the near future smoke would be banished alike from industrial and residential districts.

Manitoba Good Roads

Expenditures on roads in Manitoba this year will amount to $556,500, according to announcement by Hon. W. R. Clubb, Minister of Public Works. Of this sum $273,000 will be contributed by the province, $60,000 by the Dominion, and $223,500 by the municipalities. No extensive provincial highway undertakings will be started this year and expenditures will be limited to linking up short stretches and repairing bad spots in the roads.

Increase In Butter

Official returns from Ottawa show the following increases by provinces of the manufacture of creamery butter in 1922 compared with 1921: Prince Edward Island, 165,076 lbs.; Nova Scotia, 201,798 lbs.; New Brunswick, 66,801 lbs.; Quebec, 4,050,941 lbs.; Ontario, 7,528,468 lbs.; Manitoba, 1,861,397 lbs.; Alberta, 2,126,807 lbs.; and British Columbia, 99,113 lbs.

Renovated Butter

Strong Opposition to Dairy Act Amendment Permitting Its Importation

"Renovated butter versus oleomargarine," was the subject of a debate in the House of Commons in connection with the resolution of Hon. W. R. Motherwell, Minister of Agriculture, to amend the Dairy Act. The resolution, which proposes to allow the importation, manufacture and sale of renovated butter in Canada, aroused much opposition, and after two hours debate the minister proposed that it be laid over, at the same time intimating that he was willing to consider amendments.

Hon. S. F. Tolmie, ex-Minister of Agriculture, led the opposition to the bill, while W. F. Carroll, Liberal, Cape Breton South, who moved the resolution, favoring the sale of oleo, joined in warmly.

"The minister is creating a new industry," said Mr. Carroll; "we used to have people going about crying 'old rags and bottles.' Now we will have them coming about our backyards, crying 'dirty butter, dirty butter.'"

Mr. Motherwell defended renovated butter as a solution of the problem of "a cheap spread on bread,' and defined it as "about half-way between creamery butter and oleomargarine."

Says Tarantula Not Dangerous

Healthy Blood Immune From Poison Theory of Arkansas Professor

A professor of the University of Arkansas thinks a tarantula little more dangerous to the ordinary healthy person than common spiders. To prove his theory he induced a tarantula to bite him several times. The poison caused his fingers to swell a little, but no pain remained after two hours. The professor believes that, if illness results from the bite of a tarantula, it is because the victim's blood is in an unhealthy condition.

The Atlantic Outlet For The Western Provinces By Way Of Hudson's Bay

Jaffa Is Opposing Electric Power Plan

Concession Regarded As Political and People Are Rejecting It

A message from Palestine states that for the present there is little prospect of a settlement between the Jaffa municipality and Mr. Rutenberg, who holds the much-discussed concession for the development of electric power throughout Palestine.

Mr. Rutenberg has not yet utilized the water power or other natural resources of the country, but has erected a large power station at Telaviv, near Jaffa. Cables for conveying power have been laid throughout Telaviv, and to the central square of Jaffa, but notwithstanding steady progress in the work the deadlock between the municipality and the Jewish concessionaire is unsolved.

The population of Jaffa, almost exclusively Moslem or Christian, remain uncompromising in their attitude to what they regard as a purely political concession fastened upon the country by certain official Jewish influences. All the efforts of the Government to persuade the population to participate in the scheme have failed, as well as every endeavor to allay the suspicion that the concession is political.

At a meeting of influential citizens of Jaffa it was resolved to oppose every effort by the Government to compel acceptance of the scheme. The people of Jaffa have been wearing ribbons inscribed, "Lamp-posts of Rutenberg are a gallows of our race."

May Build Railway In China

Reported That Canadian Company May Secure Contract For New Road

According to word received from China, the Northern Construction Company, of Vanccuver and Winnipeg, has secured a contract to build 1,200 miles of railway from Canton to Chengtu. Mr. C. V. Cumming, Vice-President of the company, who recently returned from China, will neither confirm or deny this report. It is believed, however, that if the Sun Yat Sen Government can arrange the financing, the undertaking will be assured.

Boom In Steel Products

Financial writers are commenting on the improved outlook for steel companies in Canada with the reentry of the railways into the market for steel equipment. It is pointed out as an example that the Sault Ste. Marie plants of the Algoma Steel Corporation are working to capacity—doublt shifts of ten hours each—on the manufacture of rails and pig iron for Canadian railroads. Between 30,000 and 40,000 men are employed.

In France it is penal offence to give any kind of solid food to a baby under a year old, unless it is prescribed in writing by a regularly qualified medical man.

The alternative route upon which there appears to be unanimity on the prairies, is that via Hudson's Bay. . . . It has been promised by Tupper, Laurier and Borden. It is approved by Meighen and King. About $15,000,000 has been spent on the road, and $6,000,000 on its terminals. Construction has proceeded sporadically until the road is within one hundred miles of tide water. There has been little open opposition, yet the men in the west feel there has been but half-hearted support. And now, with the problems of marketing more insistent than ever, there is a concerted movement being fostered throughout the prairie provinces for its completion.

In support of their contention they put forward many strong arguments. One is the fact that such a huge sum had already been expended that to abandon it now would be a shocking waste of public money. An equally strong argument is that the road has actually been financed by the west, being paid for out of a special fund for which provision was made years ago. Large areas in Saskatchewan, Alberta and Manitoba were set aside and the proceeds from which sale earmarked for this special enterprise. A statement by the Department of the Inferior, submitted in 1922, shows that $28,000,000 has been realized from the sale of these lands, and that half of it has already been paid in cash.

The popular distrust of Hudson's Bay as a route for regular sailings has no doubt had some influence in delaying matters up to the preesnt. A special Senate inquiry several years ago dissipated some of these misconceptions. It developed that in a century and threequarters, 750 vessels had entered the bay, ranging from a seventy-gun ship to a pinnace of ten tons and that only two had been lost. This was in the face of the fact that all the vessels in question were sailers and hence somewhat helpless in ice. It further devloped that the period of navigation is determined not by the presence of ice in the bay itself (from which it is comparatively free) or even in the straits, but in the harbors, ports and roadsteads, in which the services of icebreakers can materially lengthen the season. This would seem to last for about four months, beginning in July. The Senate committee declared that the route was feasible and probably would be profitable, especially if proper aids to navigation were installed.

Given that the route is feasible on the ground of safety of navigation, the prairies have a very strong case based on the tables of distances as compared with existing routes. The distance from Port Nelson, the terminal of the Hudson's Bay Railway, to Liverpool is almost exactly that from Montreal, namely 3,000 miles. This would save the 1,000 miles from Port Arthur to Montreal, as most of the prairie shipping station are as near to Port Nelson as they are to Port Arthur. In conjunction with the Pacific route the use of this outlet would overcome the present congestion and excess freight rates on the Great Lakes, which during last season caused such resentment. It would bring Calgary, Edmonton and Saskatoon more than one thousand miles nearer to Liverpool than is possible by any existing line.—John Nelson in Maclean's Magazine.

Land of Midnight Sun

Revellers Throughout Yukon Witness Interesting Phenomenon

The end of the longest day found hundreds of revellers throughout the Yukon out of doors at midnight to celebrate the midnight sun. The big red disk of light swung above the horizon at midnight and started again for the zenith without setting and daylight saving became superfluous.

It is estimated that 15,000 to 20,000 tourists made the pilgrimage this year to the land of the midnight sun. They come from all the coast cities principally, but not a few traveled from farther east to witness the phenomenon.
