THE CRESTON REVIEW

Vol. XV. CRESTON, B. C., FRIDAY, OCTOBER 26, 1923 No. 38

Canyon City

Mrs. Barnhardt and children of Glenlilly are visitors here at present with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Knott.

The portable mill at the Lyon ranch is shut down at present with the crew busy shifting the equipment to a spot near the Helme ranch, where it will again be in operation in a few days.

Grover Kifer is leaving in a few days for Kitchener, where he has taken a pole making contract for the winter.

Apple picking is completed in this section with some of the growers showing a tendency to store part of the crop here, while others are hauling their surplus to the Creston warehouse for later selling.

C. Blair is spending the week at the Reclamation Farm, where he is busy with the fall roundup and branding.

The Community Club ladies assure that their hallowe'en whist drive will be the best yet, with lunch served cafeteria style. The whist will be held at the schoolhouse on Wednesday night.

The United Farmers had an emergent meeting on Saturday night at which the hard surface road question was the foremost item of business and on the vote being taken it was decided to request the department to build the highway to Canyon siding.

Alice Siding

Mr. and Mrs. Dick Smith were visitors at the home of the latter's parents at Porthill a couple of days at the end of the week.

The stockmen are busy with the fall roundup and branding of cattle this week.

R. Stewart is the first Alice Siding rancher to tackle celery production and had quite a shipment of high grade stuff last week. He will have approximately half a ton to ship this season.

Mr. Strobel, who is in charge of the Rose ranch this year, is having a visit from his daughter and son, who arrivee from Saskatchewan last week.

Miss Teresa Churchill made the trip to Porthill by horseback one day last week, following the K.V., initiating a new saddle horse which has just been purchased from Louie Luke.

We hear Messrs. Ash and Hilton, along with Mr. Richardson of Erickson are arranging to ship a straight car of Cox Orange apples direct to the English market, and will be loading them out in a few days.

The good roads truck started in this week to put the rock on the road from the Alderson ranch to connect up with the Creston end. John Miller and George Marshall have joined the good roads crew for the balance of the season.

Wandering cattle looking for something different in the feed line appeased their appetite in the strawberry patch on the Tom Anderson ranch a few days ago, making a first-class job of eating all of them.

Miss Ruth Smith left on Saturday for California, where the family will spend the winter, with Mrs. Smith and Ron due to leave as soon as the apple packing season is over.

GRAND THEATRE
Saturday, OCT. 27

Monte Cristo

REGULAR PRICES

Monte Cristo

"Monte Cristo," the most recent big William Fox production and based on the famous romantic tale by Alexandre Dumas is to be shown at the Grand on Saturday night. It has had successful runs in a number of the larger cities.

The Dumas story is deeply absorbing and its dramatic material furnishes a basis for one of the finest screen dramas ever shown. The plot deals with the stirring adventures of a young French sailor, Edmond Dantes, who, on the eve of his marriage, is arrested and thrown into prison on false charges. He stays there for twenty years and finally makes his escape. A fortune comes to him from a former fellow prisoner. He then seeks revenge and how he succeeds without actually shedding any blood by his own hands make this a story and screen drama of uncommon worth.

The production was directed by Emmett J. Flynn and the character parts are skillfully handled by an all-star cast headed by John Gilbert.

Local and Personal

Pigs For Sale—Six weeks old. $5 each; Yorkshire White dam, Duroc Jersey sire. P. W. Foot, Creston.

The Kaslo Fifteen Hundred Club membership is now 1375, and applications are still coming in. Any of our readers who have a notion to join the club should make application at once to Jas. Cook local representative, as the full quota of members will be reached long before the end of the year.

Ted. Mawson, who has been working at harvest and threshing operations at Estevan, Sask., the past two months, arrived home on Tuesday. Wet weather has hampered threshing in that province—the last three weeks of September being so wet in some districts that threshing was suspended completely.

Lumbering operations will be active in the Arrow Creek area this season. The Bentley portable plant is already at work on the Bayle limit manufacturing ties and lumber, and the Mallandaine plant which Jim Johnston has purchased, is rapidly being got in shape to take care of a big cut of the same lines.

W. O. Davis, the Kitchener trapper who appeared before Magistrate Mallandaine on Thursday last on a charge of shooting with intent to do grevious bodily harm to George Betti, was sent up for trial before Judge Forin at Nelson, provincial McLaren accompanying him to that city on Thursday afternoon.

Word has just reached Creston of the marriage of Frank Callander, which took place at St. Annes on Sea, Lancashire, on September 18th. Frank is now occupying the position of managing director of Walmsleys Motors, Limited at Preston, Lancashire. A host of oldtime friends will extend heartiest congratulations—on both his matrimonial and business ventures.

Kaslo Kootenaian: D. P. Kane has some remarkably fine grapes on his garden lot, next to his stone wall. Four different varieties have matured well, and produced grapes of fine flavor, although the vines were set out only last spring. It is most unusual for vines to bear the first year from planting, but Mr. Kane has demonstrated that it can be done. The roots were secured from a Creston grower.

Cranbrook Courier: R. R. Piper accountant for the firm of DeWolf and Ham for the past two years, left Sunday for Lansing, Michigan, where he will visit with old friends and relatives before settling down across the line. "Bob" will be sadly missed around Cranbrook, where he has a host of friends. Previous to his departure a number of old tillicums gathered together and passed a pleasant evening.

Apple Shipments Will Equal 1922

With at least 125 cars already shipped from Creston Growers, Limited, warehouses at Creston and Erickson, and not less than twenty cars due to move this week, another two weeks will see the finish of apple shipping for this year.

At Creston and the two warehouses at Erickson a total of 26 packers, with at least another dozen at nailing, trucking, loading, etc., are working a full daylight shift, and with Wealthys all gone long ago, as well as the McIntosh, and the end of the Jonathans reached on Tuesday the Wagner is the only variety of any dimension that is yet to be handled, and last week the combined staffs put up in the neighborhood of 18,000 boxes.

This season's wrapped stock is being confined almost exclusively to "Fancy" and according to Manager R. B. Staples the crop will run at least 65 per cent. to this grade. Ranchers appear to be showing special care in the apples they bring in as the per centage of culls is very light and on no occasion have the packers averaged less than 60 boxes for the eight hour shift.

This year's packing house charge is 19 cents a box, of which 7 cents goes to the packer, 7 cents is for paper, and the other nickel is required for the warehouse rent and handling the loose apples to the packing benches and taking the packed apples away, and at the rate the loose and packed product was moving on Monday everyone was going at full speed.

This year's pack is entirely bench work The grader was tried out at the Creston warehouse when the Wagners first began to move in quantity but after two days it was abandoned in favor of the all-hand way of doing it.

The packed boxes are going into the cars as fast as they are available, three cars being loaded at Creston and five at Erickson on Tuesday. The ranchers are not showing any tendency to do much individual storing of fruit and the selling agency is adopting the same policy of moving it as fast as it comes in.

No fear is entertained as to the keeping quality of the crop. There is nothing coming in showing overripeness which is generally charged with being the chief cause of apples not standing up.

Since the cleanup of the McIntosh shipping is confined exclusively to assorted cars, with the Wagner most prominent, and Jonathans the second choice. Unfortunately the latter are not as heavy a yield as in 1922, while an even more marked decrease is shown in Spys, Yellow Newton and Baldwin.

At Erickson both the Union and Staples Fruit Company warehouses are in use, the latter being utilized for handling the apples from the infested area, with C. B. Twigg, district horticulturist, making a close inspection of the orchard boxes of fruit as they go on to the packers.

The feature to the crop in the Erickson area is the decided increase in the output of Delicious this year, this variety now being estimated to form possibly 15 per cent. of the total Valley apple crop. This increase, coupled with the fact that the market is not now demanding nearly so much select fruit, will probably mean that growers of Delicious will have to take prices pretty much on a par with the other winter varieties.

With one selling agency handling the bulk of this year's crop the figures are available and these indicate that 60 per cent. of the fruit in Creston Valley is now being handled at Erickson. Figures also compiled in connection with the 1923 crop make it look safe to predict that this year's total yield will not fall very short of the 1922 record of approximately 170,000 boxes for the whole Valley area.

Growers, Limited, patrons, who wish to store their apples for later shipment, and who have not proper storage facilities, are invited to place their surplus in the storage basement at the Creston warehouse. It has accommodation for at least eight carloads, and just at present it does not look as if the local selling agency will be utilizing much of this space, although in view of the confidence expressed by the management as to the keeping quality of the 1923 yield it is not the intention to take reduced prices to effect immediate sales. Should there be any break in present quotations the apples will be held, as it is figured that winter selling should see prices at the present level rather than lower.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

A Scotch Protest

Editor Review:

Sir,—In your remarks re "Fooling them at Kaslo," it seems to me you enjoy yourself knocking the Scotch, but let me tell you, sir, those same fools (Scotch) are the people who made Canada. Maybe we are slow at seeing a joke—it takes a fool to make a fool see jokes. We have brains when we are born, but we don't wait for old age before we use them. It was those fools who led the British army and navy from 1914 to 1918, so hands off the Scotch, sir. A few more of those fools in this district might wake it up a bit. Scotland does the deed; England takes the glory. I have yet to see the Englishman who can fool the Scotch. Your own remarks recently were: "A wise man will change his mind, but a fool never." "O wad some power the giftie gie us, to see ourselves as others see us."

GEO. DAVIE.

Kitchener

Miss Ellen Andeen, who has been in St. Louis, Mo., for the last six months taking treatment, has arrived home much improved in health, Mrs. Johnson and Laura going to Spokane to meet her.

Mrs. Algot Johnson of Moyie was a weekend visitor with Kitchener friends.

Mrs. McBurney of Cranbrook spent a few days in Kitchener, the guest of Mrs. Hunt.

Mrs. Percy Watson is a visitor at her home in Creston.

Erickson

The biggesst day's carload shipping at Erickson was recorded on Tuesday, when Growers, Limited, booked out six cars of apples. If good picking weather continues packing shed operations will be at an end in about a week.

George Kelly was a visitor with Spokane friends a few days last week.

Word has just reached here that Mr. and Mrs. G. P. Smith are now located at Seattle, Wash., and will be making that city their permanent home for the present at least.

Mr. and Mrs. Miller who recently returned from Claresholm, Alberta, to live at Creston, are now Erickson residents, moving into the Palmer Bungalow the latter part of the week.

Fred Klingensmith, who had been home from Birchbank for a few days, due to a water shortage shutting down the mill, returned to that point on Thursday last.

E. W. Harrison was a business visitor at Trail and Nelson this week.

A. E. Penson, who has been home for the past month helping with fall work, on the ranch, returned to Kellogg, Idaho, on Saturday.

Lorne Botterill of Dover, Idaho, was a weekend visitor at his home here, making the trip by motor, Mrs. Botterill and their young daughter accompanying him.

The rainy spells of the past two weeks have delayed apple picking but with fine weather again assured the crop should all be off the trees before the end of the week.

Lister

Jos. W. Bell left on Saturday for Kimberley, where he expects to be working for at least the next two months.

Charles Frampton has moved his family and household effects to Copeland, Idaho, where he will reside for at least the winter, having secured work for himself and members of the family.

Miss Muriel Millington, who is attending high school at Cranbrook, spent a few days this week with her parents here.

Col. Fred Lister and Mrs. Lister are leaving before the end of the week for Victoria, the legislature being due to open on Monday next. They will be gone at least six weeks.

Jas. Huscroft is back from a business visit to points in southern Alberta, after being gone about a week.

All residents holding agreements with the Land Settlement Board received official notification at the end of the week that the first instalment of interest is due the first of November. Most of the residents appear to be able to oblige on or about due date.

The potato harvest is completed in the Lister area and from all accounts the yield is at least average, though not as heavy as the favorable season might indicate.

On his official visit here last week public school inspector Manning informed the trustees that unless attendance showed a considerable increase before Christmas Lister would be reduced to a one-teacher school.

Announcement was made on Friday of the selection of John Bird to succeed Capt. Rowbury as superintendent of the area, the latter having asked some few weeks ago to be relieved of the position in order that he might get away to the coast where, we understand, he will go farming in the Fraser valley. Mr. Bird takes charge at the first of November.

Wynndel

Ed. Dewar left on Monday for Bellvue, Alberta, to join his brother, Ken., who is working in that town.

Mrs. J. B. Rudd has again left for Alberta points to look after the distribution of a carload of apples that left here last week.

Miss Kitty Rosindale went to Fernie on Tuesday, where she will be the guest of Mr. and Mrs. H. Rudd, former residents here.

Mrs. Hook arrived from Spokane on Tuesday for a short visit with her mother, Mrs. Grady.

Why Not Protect Yourself?

In the successful carrying on of any business, whether it be that of farming, or a store, or a factory, there are so many factors over which the individual has no control that it is all the more important that he should provide every possible safeguard against loss which it is within his power to command.

A few days ago a farmer came into one of our large Western cities and, meeting a friend, asked him the location of a certain mortgage corporation's office. In surprise the friend inquired as to the reason he was visiting such an office. The farmer explained that he had lost 1,500 acres of wheat through a severe hailstorm, and was now forced to mortgage his land. This big farmer, farseeing in so many things, had neglected to insure his crop against hail.

He could not protect his crop against drought, or rust, nor sawfly, and only to a limited extent against grasshoppers. As an individual he could not control freight rates, market prices, nor many of his productive costs. But it was hail, which he could not prevent, but against which he might have adequately insured himself. He failed to take that precaution and consequently found himself compelled to mortgage his land and pay heavy rates of interest which will make inroads into future profits.

The factory owner who fails to insure his buildings and plant against fire, and the storekeeper who neglects to insure his business, is regarded as little short of insane. The professional man who fails to insure his life, and whose family's income ceases when he dies, is improvident and the object of severe censure among friends and relatives. And the grain farmer who is dependent on his field crops, the loss of which means his ruin, is a fool if he neglects to protect himself through insurance. If hail does not strike, he can afford to pay the premium; if it does strike, he can pay the premium out of the insurance received and still have a substantial margin wherewith to carry on.

The entire farming community of Western Canada is stirred up over the organizations of Wheat Pools, having for their object the more orderly marketing of wheat, the prevention of individual dumping on the market, thus tending to lower prices. Through the organization of these Pools it is hoped to add a few cents per bushel to the price realized by the grower, and in many cases those few cents will represent the difference between actual loss on production and a small profit. It is, therefore, hoped the Pools will succeed.

But hundreds, even thousands, of farmers continue to allow weeds to infest their land, weeds which reduce the yield per acre very considerably, sometimes alarmingly, and result in a loss far greater than the difference of a few cents per bushel in the selling price. Even with Wheat Pools it is going to be difficult to influence prices in the right direction, and the individual farmer cannot hope to do so. But farmers individually and collectively can add many dollars to the selling price of their grain crops by keeping their land as free as possible from weeds. Yet so many of them fail to do so. Even municipalities, entrusted with the responsibility of weed destruction, leave their road allowances to become veritable weed beds, a menace to the whole countryside.

United States Government experts have traced a loss of $12,500 to one barberry bush. The outbreak of stem rust started by this one bush travelled in one direction at least five miles and affected the wheat on eighteen farms. All over Western Canada can be seen patches of thistle being left to ripen for our prevailing winds to scatter in all directions and sufficient to reduce the yield of grain on tens of thousands of acres to an extent to more than offset many times over any betterment in price which the Wheat Pools can possibly bring about. Whether the Wheat Pools will prove a success time and actual experience alone can tell, but weeds can be successfully fought and overcome, and financial benefits from such action are certain.

The past season has been a difficult one, it is true, from the standpoint of weed destruction owing to the excessive moisture making the persistent working of the land at times impossible. But this fact only makes it all the more important that all municipalities adopt vigorous measures along the line of weed destruction. Let the Municipal Councils set a good example by cleaning up all the road allowances, and vigorously enforcing their bylaws insofar as all other land is concerned.

Swiss Farmers Making Good

Judging by all reports received to date, the 700 Swiss brought out to Canada in the course of the present year are doing very well and progressing with their farming activities under the best of auguries. About 70 per cent. of the Swiss brought out were farmers by profession. Additional parties yet are expected this year.

Why We Are Right Handed

Ingenious Explanation Sounds Perfectly Good in Any Event

Away back in the beginning the chief occupation of man was fighting. In battle he carried a shield in one hand and a weapon in the other. It was not much work to carry the shield, but the quick action required by the hand and arm which did the fighting soon developed that arm. It also developed the nerves and the half of the brain that governed the right side of the body. Those who shielded their left side—thus protecting the heart—were the ones who usually came out victorious. Down through the ages this selection continued, the right hand gradually becoming more proficient.

RHEUMATIC SUFFERERS

May Obtain Relief by Enriching the Blood Supply

In the days of our fathers and grandfathers, rheumatism was thought to be the unavoidable penalty of middle life and old age. Almost every elderly person had rheumatism, as well as many young people. It was thought that rheumatism was the mere effect of exposure to cold and damp, and it was treated with liniments and hot applications, which some times gave temporary relief, but did not remove the trouble. In these days there were many cripples. Now, medical science understands that rheumatism is a disease of the blood, and that with good, rich red blood any man or woman of any age can defy rheumatism. There are many elderly people who have never felt a twinge of rheumatism, and many who have conquered it by simply keeping their blood rich and pure. The blood enriching qualities of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills is becoming every year more widely known, and the more general use of these pills has robbed rheumatism of its terrors. At the first sign of poor blood, which is shown by loss of appetite, dull skin and dim eyes, protect yourself against further ravages of disease by taking Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. They have helped thousands—if you give them a fair trial they will not disappoint you.

You can get these pills through any dealer in medicine or by mail at 50 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Two Useful Recipes

A White Sauce for Creaming Vegetables or Meats

¾ cupful Borden's St. Charles Milk.
¾ cupful water.
1½ tablespoonfuls butter or butter substitute.
1½ tablespoonfuls flour.
1 scant half teaspoonful salt.
High seasoning of pepper or paprika.

Melt the butter substitute in a small saucepan, stir in the pepper and salt mixed with the flour and stir until well blended, away from the heat. Then gradually stir in the milk and water mixed, preferably using a wire whisk, and taking care that all of the liquid is thickened before a further amount is added. Let boil a moment or two, then add the vegetable and let stand over hot water for ten minutes to become thoroughly heated. Serve with asparagus, string beans, peas, brussels sprouts or potatoes.

Eggless Mayonnaise

3 tablespoonfuls Borden's St. Charles Milk, undiluted.
½ teaspoonful salt.
¼ teaspoonful mustard.
2 tablespoonfuls sharp vinegar.
¾ cupful salad oil—any kind.
¼ teaspoonful pepper.

Combine the seasonings, add the milk and gradually beat in the oil with an egg beater. Then whip in the vinegar. Use as any Mayonnaise. Transfer to a covered jar. This will keep indefinitely in a cool place. If too thick, thin with Borden's St. Charles Milk.

Gold From Laurentic Has Been Recovered

Divining Spear Helped Greatly in Locating Bullion on Ocean Bed

All except a few bars of the thirty million dollars worth of gold bullion which dropped to the ocean bed when a German submarine sank the Laurentic off Donegal, Ireland, have been recovered by divers who, since 1918, have been carrying on their labors 90 feet below the surface of the sea. The 30 bars remaining in the wreck, it is expected, will also be brought up.

In addition to the gold, which was consigned to United States' bankers, the Laurentic was laden with almost $5,000,000 in silver specie, mostly in 2-shilling pieces, all of which has been salvaged by the divers. The men have been using a divining spear with a dial attached which shows whether the spear point is touching gold, or a base metal such as iron. The apparatus was brought to the attention of the admiralty in 1920 by a college professor.

Previous to that time the divers in three years of labor had recovered 668 bars, but since the galvanometer was brought into use more than 2,100 have been brought to the top, each bar being worth from $5,000 to $10,000, depending upon the standard of the gold and the size of the bar.

Settlers For Western Canada Expected In Increasing Numbers From Britain And U. S.

Farming conditions in the middle western states are not as satisfactory as in the Canadian prairie provinces in the judgment of W. J. Black, Deputy Minister of Immigration, who has returned to Ottawa after attending a meeting of the Canada Colonization Association at Winnipeg and making a study of problems affecting his department.

While in the west, Mr. Black paid a visit to St. Paul, where he attempted to get in touch with the outlook of the farmer in the middle western states. He found that the agrarian population there was even more dissatisfied with its lot than was the case in Canada, that there was the same restless desire to move to other states or across the boundary line to begin over again in new surroundings, and that there seemed every prospect that American farmers would come to the western provinces in more than sufficient numbers to balance any loss sustained through removals from that part of the country.

Commenting upon the work of the Canadian Colonization Association, the deputy minister said that the efforts of this organization had, up to the present time, been chiefly directed towards settling farmers from the United States upon western farms. As time went on, he expected that the activities of the association would be carried on upon a broader scope and would include British immigrants as well as Americans.

Every effort would be made by the Colonization Association, Mr. Black stated, to find work to tide British harvest hands over the winter so that they could settle permanently in this country. Many of them, he claimed, had some money which they were ready to invest in farm lands, and every assistance would be rendered this class by immigration and colonization officials.

Asked about the operation of the Empire Settlement Act, the deputy minister said those sections of the legislation pertaining to juveniles and domestics were working smoothly, but that the nominating regulation had not been long enough in force to judge its effect upon immigration.

Under the Empire Settlement Act, Mr. Black explained $80 was advanced as passage money for boys and girls in Great Britain to come to Canada. Of this amount, $40 was subscribed by the Dominion and $40 by imperial authorities. The money advanced for the passage in the case of domestics took the form of a loan. Under the third class, prospective immigrants were nominated by citizens of Canada. It was stipulated that they would settle upon the land and 75 per cent. of their passage money was advanced to them.

No grants or loans were made to harvest hands by the Government, the deputy minister said. There was an impression in some quarters, he felt, that such men had received financial assistance from the Canadian authorities, but this was incorrect.

Refused to Leave Dangerous Island

Missionary Menaced by Head Hunting Blacks Sticks to Post

The story of the zeal of a lone missionary on one of the uncivilized islands of the Solomon group, who was rescued from the hands of head-hunters, but refused to be taken away from his chosen station, has just been brought to Sydney by an island schooner. Men aboard the schooner, nearing the island, saw a number of natives in war paint, dancing around a blazing fire, according to their story.

The captain, believing that some person might be in danger, armed the crew and sent them ashore. They fired a volley over the heads of the natives and ran into the European-built house and found a white man inside, praying on his knees. He said that he was a missionary and had been on the island for a year.

Sickness had broken out among the natives and he had been blamed for the loss of life. The natives had sent their women-folk into the bush and started a war dance. As that was a sign of future trouble, he had locked himself in the house.

The missionary was importuned to come aboard the vessel for safety. He refused, however, and the ship sailed away, leaving him at his lonely and dangerous post.

"Opening Doors," by Elinor Marsden Eliot, is the title of the new serial story which is offered to our readers this week. It is a story dealing with western rural conditions, and will be found of absorbing interest.

Prince Rupert, B.C., Has Most Promising Future

An event significant of the future of Prince Rupert as a trans-oceanic port occurred last month, when the Canadian Merchant Marine ship Canadian Transporter, sailed thence with a cargo of lumber direct for Yokohama. This was the first ship to load cargo at Prince Rupert and clear for the Orient. It is hoped that the inauguration of this direct service will develop into a permanent route for trans-Pacific traffic.

Advice on Marketing Potatoes

Much Too Large a Proportion Are Graded Canada C, Ungraded Quality

Eighty-two per cent. of last year's potato crop was of merchantable quality, according to the Dominion Bureau of Statistics, states Mr. W. Waldron, Acting Commissioner of the Co-operation and Markets Branch. The same authority gives 92 per cent. of the oat crop and 98 per cent. of the wheat crop as merchantable also. On this basis 16 per cent. more of our wheat crop was in a merchantable condition than was the case with potatoes, the latter containing 18 per cent. of an unmarketable quality. When we take the quantity of potatoes that we have fit to market and again subdivide into grades, we find, judging by the shipments which reached the markets last fall and winter, and again this spring, that a large proportion fall into group C, which is officially known as "Canada C, ungraded quality," and that is not very satisfactory.

The Federal Fruit and Vegetable Inspector offers the following suggestions to those interested in the potato trade and who desire to sell in the larger markets of this province.

Sell grade "Canadian A" potatoes only—feed the remainder.

Use only good, dry bags.

Weigh the potatoes into the bags, preferably of 100 pounds, so that the bags are of even weight; allow a few pounds for shrinking if being shipped a long distance.

Forget all about the percentage below grade allowed for Grades A and B.

Tie bags securely and thread the tags on the tying string.

Write distinctly on the tag if no stamp is available.

Alberta's Dairy Interests Growing

Indicating the growth of the dairying interests in the province of Alberta, it is reported by experts of the province that the number of milking cows is at the present time nearly 400,000. The value of these cows is estimated at $19,500,000 and the value of their production in the past year $23,000,000, $3,500,000 more than the value of the cows. Fifteen creameries have been established in Alberta this year making a total of sixty-nine now in operation.

Canada's Cereal Supremacy Is Clearly Shown By Crop Records Of Recent Years

The rapid settlement of Western Canadian lands which has taken place in the last quarter of a century, especially by the two main classes of British and Americans, is the most eloquent testimony, if any were needed, of the greater advantages found in following the pursuit of farming in that area over their native lands. Many of the advantages are patently obvious, others not so clearly so.

The American immigrant, who is nearly always a farmer, is given the opportunity of securing, at a much lower price, a more substantial acreage than he has been accustomed to; he can expand his holdings without limitation, which extension is precluded when hemmed in with high-priced lands. The boom is even greater in the case of the British immigrant, to whom the possibility of ever owning land of his own is extremely remote.

It has likewise been pointed out recently that the Western Canadian farmer has certain advantages over the agriculturist south of the border in the marketing of his produce. Whilst, for instance, wheat prices at the Canadian markets are frequently as high as on the American markets, the farmer in the prairie provinces is able to get his crop to the marketing points or ship it to the lake terminals at a much lower rate than that paid by his farming brother to the south.

There is another decided advantage to Canadian farming often overlooked. Whilst the American farmer coming to Canada secures a much larger acreage than he has left, at a considerably lower price, he finds the cheaper acre of Canadian land capable of a greater production than his former high-priced land. Even in comparison with the small farms of the British Isles, where farming activities are prosecuted so intensively, the Canadian yields on farms, many times their size, compare very favorably.

To consider wheat first. The quality of the Canadian product cannot be gainsaid when year after year it secures the world's premier honors and millers all over the world demand it. The average production of fall wheat in Canada for the last ten years has been 23 bushels to the acre, and of spring wheat 15.50 bushels to the acre. In the United States, where farming operations are carried out on a very similar scale, the average production in the period 1916-20 was for fall wheat 14.93 bushels, and for spring wheat 11.23 bushels. The production of all-wheat in England and Wales in 1919 was only 28.7 bushels to the acre.

Taking a list of the thirty leading wheat-producing countries of the globe, Canada is found, in average yield per acre, to be outclassed by only eight of them, and they, such countries of intensive farming as Germany, Belgium, Denmark, England and Wales, Greece, Poland and Czecho-Slovakia. Canada substantially out-yields such other countries of small farms as Austria, Bulgaria, Spain, Finland, Hungary, Italy, Netherlands, Roumania and Sweden.

The average acre of Canadian land seeded to oats in the last ten years yielded 32 bushels to the acre as against 31.32 bushels in the United States in the four-year period 1916-20 and 44.33 bushels in England and Wales in the same time. Only six of the thirty countries exceeded Canada's average, Germany, Belgium, Denmark, England, Netherlands and Sweden, and it should be remembered that all of Canada's export wheat is hard.

Canada's ten-year average in barley production has been 24.75 bushels per acre. Against this the United States, in the four-year period under review, produced an average of 24.33 bushels per acre, per year, and England and Wales 32.04. The same six European countries outclassed the Dominion in the average production of barley.

Against a United States average rye production of 13.75 bushels per acre in the period 1916-20 Canada has a ten-year average for this crop of 15.75 bushels, and only seven countries have a higher average yield, and that on relatively small acreages.

Japanese Motoring Rules

Orientals Polite Way of Laying Down Traffic Laws

Every nation has something to learn from other nations, says Answers (London). For instance, consider our motor rules. How tersely worded they are, how banal and brief!

How different from the Japanese, from whom we might well learn the art of being polite in verse.

The following, a contemporary tells us, are some of their motor rules:

At the rise of the hand of the honorable policeman stop with rapidness greatly. Do not pass him, or otherwise disrespect him.

When a passenger of foot heaves in sight tootle the horn, melodiously at first. If he still obstacles your passage, tootle him with large vigor, and express by word of mouth a warning, "Hi, hi!"

Beware of the wandering sow, that she shall not take fright as you pass. Do not explode the exhausted noise-box at her.

Give space to the festive dog that makes play-sport in the roadway.

Avoid entangling your dog with the wheelspoke.

Go smoothly on the grease-mud as there lurks the skiddy demon. Press the brake of the foot as you roll round the corner, and save collapse and lie-up.

Thank you honorably.

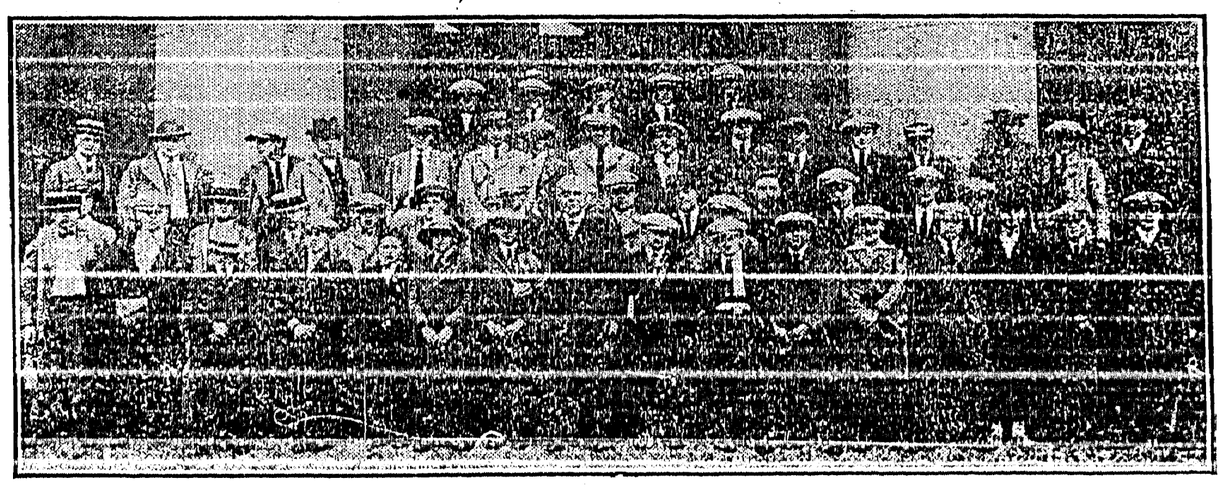
Feared Over Production Of Fish

Officer Closed Lesser Slave Lake For One Week

The Lesser Slave Lake was opened July 15th for summer fishing, with the following firms operating, viz.: McInnes Fish Company, Menzies Fish Company, Lakeside Fish Company and Clark & Johnson. The operators have been allotted as their season's catch one million and a half pounds of whitefish. Up to the end of July, twelve cars, containing an average of 24,000 lbs. per car, passed Edmonton, moving to Chicago, Ill. A very heavy run has been reported and so large was the take that the fisheries officer in charge decided that over production would be the result and as a consequence, closed the lake from July 31st to August 6th.

Demand For Canned Whale Meat

The whaling industry is very promising this season. Whales are reported early and plentiful on the grounds, the whale oil market is on the climb, and the demand for canned whale meat has become so pronounced that the prospective pack of the British Columbia whalers is already disposed of. The canned whale meat is mostly distributed from England.



To Tour Alaska---Boys Receive Send-Off From Canadian Pacific Station, Vancouver

Forty-four of Detroit's brightest boys photographed in front of the Canadian Pacific station, at Vancouver, B.C., enroute to Alaska in charge of George Buchanan, wealthy bachelor, of the former city. Every boy in the picture, including Donald Blaine, who is the first boy on the left in the front row, and who enjoyed the distinction of being the only Canuck in the party, earned at least one-third of the cost of the trip, the remaining two-thirds being met on a long term loan agreement between the boys, Mr. Buchanan and their parents. The youngsters who had to attain certain other standards besides salesmanship, earned their share by selling lead pencils, ash buckets and coal from Mr. Buchanan's yards in Detroit, the small Canadian recruit "horning in" on the party after an aggressive campaign of paper selling in Bow Island, Alta.

Plenty of Peaches

One thing the fruit display at this year's fair has demonstrated, and that is that Valley growers are now producing peaches of quality and in sufficient quantity, we are told, to well supply the local demand for high class preserving fruit of this variety.

Criticism has been levelled at local merchants who have brought in United States peaches to supply the needs of Creston customers, but for this state of affairs the local growers are not entirely blameless for certainly the 1923 exhibition is the only one held so far at which the most optimistic could gather evidence that would permit him to truthfully state that Creston could produce peaches of the quality in evidence this year.

Here is surely an incident that abundantly proves the advertising value of the exhibition right amongst our own people and now that it has been shown local orchards have the variety of peach in demand no more will be heard of outside stuff being brought in for the local trade.

The merchant as well as the local residents are more than anxious to patronize home fruit industry in all its lines, but they are only human, and unless they are informed somehow of just what is available it is quite natural that they should ask for something else.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Fooling 'Em—at Creston

EDITOR REVIEW:

SIR,—I was greatly taken with your breezy article in last week's issue, headed "Fooling 'Em at Kaslo." Your reference to utterances at the Bowser meeting here in June was particularly appropriate, except that you did not deal with some of the other speeches on that occasion. Had your article followed further in that direction probably a more appropriate caption would have been "Fooling them at Creston."

On the subject of roads certainly Col. Lister's effort must have taken the breath away from even the most ardent Conservative, but at that he hardly excelled the combined effort of Messrs. Jones and Bowser in the same connection.

In the highways feature of Mr. Jones' talk he was at considerable pains to demonstrate that for this year the department of public works had appropriated just a little less that a million and quarter dollars for provincial roads, which certainly looked a pretty small appropriation after the many millions Mr. Jones proceeded to state were being spent in other directions.

But Mr. Jones' figures were rudely contradicted by Mr. Bowser, who followed him, and who in his effort to show that Kaslo riding, which he alleges was only given $45,000 this year, was most unjustly treated when compared with the Delta riding, which received $342,000 and Nanaimo, which he stated received $112,000. If these appropriations are added together it will be seen that at least half a million was spent in three ridings—an average of $150,000 per riding, and as there are, roughly speaking, 40 constituencies in the province, on the Bowser basis of figuring the B.C. highways expenditure might have run close to six million dollars.

I am not contending the expenditure actually amounted to the latter sum but on Mr. Bowser's figures I would not be fooling people any worse than the opposition speaekrs attempted to mislead them were I to definitely assert the roads expenditure accounted for that large an outlay.

Another Jones joker was his assertion that the farmers were not going to get the promised 50 per cent. cut in the fruit trees assessment this year. Mr. Jones was probably heard to best advantage when expressing what he hoped would pass for righteous indignation at Premier Oliver for promising this reduction whilst the legislature was in session, and within three months of its close absolutely refuse to give any such consideration to the already over-taxed agriculturist.

This speechmaking coming at the end of June—with the last day for paying taxes but three or four days off—was certainly well timed for fooling people because within ten days after the end of June all who had paid their taxes by June 30th were favored with cheques giving them the promised rebate of 50 per cent.

Whether as heavy a discount should be placed on the other remarks of the speakers of that evening, as is certainly permissible in the matters I have referred to, is not really important. When it comes to "foolin 'em," Mr. Editor, my letter would at least seem to indicate that the opposition forces have no greater regard for Creston's intelligence than the local member's not altogether unpardonable effort to make some of his constituents feel proud of their districts on the theory that it made Kaslo feel good and could do Creston no possible harm.

FAIR PLAY.

Erickson, Oct. 22.

WHAT OTHER PAPERS SAY

Where the Inconsistency?

Our contemporary, the Creston Review, takes us to task because it seems to find some contraniction in the terms of recent Herald editorials.

In one, published on April 10, The Herald mentioned the fact that the new co-operative had rejected brokerage proposals made by Guy Constable and others.

In another, published on Augnst 24, The Herald urged that the Associated have its own representatives in the markets.

We fail to find the contradiction which Editor Hayes is anxiously looking for. We made no reflection upon Mr. Guy Constable. In fact, we know little or nothing about the gentleman. But we do know that Creston is not taking the same full share in carrying the initial burden of the co-operative movement as the other fruit growing sections.

We have been told that the reason why the co-operative did not listen kindly to the Constable proposal was that the suggested independent brokerage was not to be under the full and complete control of the Associated. Unless such control is obtained we might as well continue as we are. We have been told also that the proposed personnel was not satisfactory. If the Associated is to have its own salesmen or salaried brokers, it doubtless would claim the right to select them.

Because The Associated did not adopt the Constable programme and The Herald noted that fact, surely does not create in the mind of any reasonable person the idea that motives were imputed or aspersions cast. Far be it from us to reflect upon Mr. Constable's "business acumen and personal integrity." We know nothing about either. But we certainly think now, as we thought last spring, that the Associated had nothing to gain by linking itself up with a private brokerage house, even if said brokers were composed of men such as C. L. Lowe and Guy Constable. The proper brokerage house for the Associated is its own complete sales force, not a sales agency proposed for private profit.—Penticton Herald.

SYNOPSIS OF LAND ACT AMENDMENTS

PRE-EMPTIONS

Vacant, unreserved, surveyed Crown lands may be pre-empted by British subjects over 18 years of age, and by aliens on declaring intention to become British subjects, conditional upon residence, occupation, and improvement for agricultural purposes.

Full information concerning regulations regarding pre-emptions is given in Bulletin No. 1, Land Series, "How to Pre-empt Land," copies of which can be obtained free of charge by addressing the Department of Lands, Victoria, B.C., or to any Government Agent.

Records will be granted covering only land suitable for agricultural purposes, and which is not timberland, i.e., carrying over 5,000 board feet per acre west of the Coast Range and 8,000 feet per acre east of that Range.

Applications for pre-emptions are to be addressed to the Land Commissioner of the Land Recording Division, in which the land applied for is situated, and are made on printed forms, copies of which can be obtained from the Land Commissioner.

Pre-emptions must be occupied for five years and improvements made to value of $10 per acre, including clearing and cultivating at least five acres, before a Crown Grant can be received.

For more detailed information see the Bulletin "How to Pre-empt Land."

PURCHASE

Applications are received for purchase of vacant and unreserved Crown lands, not being timberland, for agricultural purposes; minimum price of first-class (arable) land is $5 per acre, and second-class (grazing) land $2.50 per acre. Further information regarding purchase or lease of Crown lands is given in Bulletin No. 10, Land Series, "Purchase and Lease of Crown Lands."

Mill, factory, or industrial sites on timber land, not exceeding 40 acres, may be purchased or leased, the conditions including payment of stumpage.

HOMESITE LEASES

Unsurveyed areas, not exceeding 20 acres, may be leased as homesites, conditional upon a dwelling being erected in the first year, title being obtainable after residence and improvement conditions are fulfilled and land has been surveyed.

LEASES

For grazing and industrial purposes areas not exceeding 640 acres may be leased by one person or a company.

GRAZING

Under the Grazing Act the Province is divided into grazing districts and the range administered under a Grazing Commissioner. Annual grazing permits are issued based on numbers ranged, priority being given to established owners. Stock owners may form associations for range management. Free, or partially free permits are available for settlers, campers and travellers, up to ten head.

A writer in the Grand Forks Gazette points out that the high cost of living can be materially reduced to the family man if the education department will legislate that children attending school must all wear a standard but inexpensive uniform.

At both Vernon and Penticton Associated Growers contract holders are being compelled to ship all their stuff through the big new organization. At Vernon one gentlemen who took a chance at independent selling had to whack up 25 cents a box on all fruit sold outside the Associated.

Author of "My Canada," and Other Stories

Published by Special Arrangement with the Author

CHAPTER ONE

I was bapized "Margaret Anne," and Father and Mother always called me by the double name.

When I was quite tiny, Mother, who had the keenest imagination of any woman I have ever known, taught me to pretend that I was two little girls, so that I should always have someone to play with. Margaret it was who washed the dishes after tea, who never forgot to hang up her coat and hat, who shut doors quietly and always said, "Please" and "Thank you." But Anne was the tomboy who would rather climb trees than go to school, the knees of whose stockings were sure to exhibit holes at the most embarrassing times, and who was always getting into scrapes out of which the more thoughtful Margaret had to extricate her. As I grew older Mother confessed to me that she had begun the game with a purpose. She had realized, she said, that I was of a temperament that was likely to give me trouble in after life, and so she had tried to make me see that each side of me had qualities to be curbed or developed. The impulsive Anne must be trained to think, the outwardly less troublesome Margaret to avoid growing into a materialistic and selfish woman. I believe now that Mother exaggerated the situation somewhat, but even yet I find myself sometimes Margaret and sometimes Anne. It was, for instance, Anne who married . . . . . but I am running ahead of my story.

Father died when I was ten. I remember him as a quiet man of the scholarly type, always gentle and very patient with me, but often worried and absent-minded. I know how that he was worried, for he knew that he must leave Mother and me with practically nothing to live on. He taught Latin and Greek and Mathematics in the Collegiate in Winnipeg, and even yet I often meet men and women who tell me that he was the most wonderful teacher they ever had. Like all men of his type, he had a dream. Teaching did not mean to him the cramming of unrelated facts into the plastic brain of a child. It meant the giving of the world's store of knowledge in such a way that the pupil would be fitted for life, would be able to apply his learning to the problem of everyday existence, and so develop the finest type of citizenship. Growing out of this ideal was Father's plan for a new method of teachnig languages. Only last week I showed Murray the pile of manuscript notes that Mother had kept for me, the synopsis of the text-book that Father hoped some day to write. Bare as the outline is, it shows the broad vision that inspired the man who drew it up—history, geography, philosophy and science are all made to contribute their share, and Greek and Latin become, not dead languages, but a living link in the long chain of the progress of the race.

As I said before, Father died when I was ten. We buried him in Old Kildonan and then Mother and I discussed what we should do. I can remember how proud I was that Mother should consult me, and it did not occur to me then that in her loneliness she was merely thinking aloud. Childlike, I was delighted when she told me that she had seen the Superintendent and was to be given one of the primary grades in the very school I attended. She had taught for a short time before her marriage, but she would always say, "I was never a teacher of your father's sort. I taught because I had been brought up to believe that it was the one way in which a lady might earn her living without losing caste."

We sold all but our nicest furniture, our books and pictures and china, and, with the good fortune that is the nearest thing to a miracle, we found, almost without looking for it, the place that was for many years a real home.

On Donald Street, which was not then the street of boarding-houses that it has since become, you can still find the old cottage, shabbier now than when Mother and I lived there, but still looking comfortable and homelike if one approaches it in the proper mood. It is a real cottage, not the modern bungalow with tiny rooms; and it is owned and lived in by two of the dearest people that were ever put into the world to teach us to grow old gracefully.

The Robertsons had a small income, but not enough to keep up the home they loved. And so a friend of Father's, who was also a friend of theirs, persuaded them to take Mother and me to live with them. We had two rooms—"In the roof," Father's friend said, and I was greatly puzzled until I saw the place. But when I discovered for myself the fascinatingly cornery rooms, with windows turned the opposite way from those in other people's houses, my mystification gave place to love, and I have loved the old house ever since. Granny and Grandad Robertson took us not only into their home but into their hearts, and the rent of a "suite of Light Housekeeping rooms" could never pay them for what they gave us. Their reward will come out of the treasures laid up for those who comfort the fatherless and the widow.

When I was ten I considered my Mother to be quite an elderly person, though at that time she was only thirty-two. She was a pretty woman, with very charming ways, and as I grew older I realized that she might more than once have married again. She never mentioned the subject but once, and that was after I had overheard an old but tactless friend remonstrating with her.

"You will not understand this now, Margaret-Anne," she said to me, "but try to remember what I say and when you are older it will come back to you. A woman is often tempted in this hard world to take a second-best. But if she knows, or has known, what alone will satisfy her, she will be strong enough to endure whatever comes. Mrs. Stevenson is a kind woman, and she meant well, but she should not have spoken before you as she did. Your mother will never put another man in your father's place, nor ask her child to share her with someone else."

For eight years Mother and I lived a very quiet life, but to me at least a very happy one. We always had to count our pennies, but we had many friends, and as for my girl chums, they always seemed as glad to come to my home as to the homes of the wealthier members of our circle.

Social life was much simpler in Winnipeg then than it is now. Even wealthy people sent their children to the public school quite as a matter of course, and many of the women who are now leaders in the younger married set were my schoolmates. And, quite frankly, I believe that they will bear comparison with those of a later generation who are the product of private schools.

I do not mean to say that twenty years ago Winnipeg was in the Golden Age of absolute social equality, but it had undoubtedly more of the pioneer spirit than it has today. Even then we had our fast set and our exclusive set, our snobs and our climbers, but I do not think that the mere getting and spending of money was held to be of quite so much importance as it is today. People who had "roughed it" more or less in the early days were, in most cases, satisfied with a comfortable home and an assured income. Even had they desired it, there was not the opportunity for ostentatious spending that there is now.

Such conditions made it possible for Mother and me to associate with people of the sort with whom she had been brought up, and I can truthfully say that we were seldom handicapped socially by the fact that we had to make our own way in the world.

I went to school until I was eighteen. Then I took a course in stenography and in a few months was ready for an office position. Mother, I think, would have liked me to be a teacher, but I had little inclination to follow in her and Father's footsteps in that respect. Margaret saw very clearly that while a teacher gave greater service to the community than almost any other member of it, the rewards were small indeed.

"But, child, you cannot put work of that sort on a financial basis," said Mother, when we discussed the subject.

Whereupon I retorted, "No, but a moral compensation will not pay the grocer and the butcher."

Had there been no financial problem I should have gone to college. At different times I saw myself a doctor, a nurse, a lawyer, even a teacher who would carry on Father's traditions. But I could not let Mother support me for another four or five years. And I had, besides, an idea that women would in the future play a larger and more important part in the business world than they had in the past. Poor mother, I am afraid she thought I come down a step in the social scale, but I bore heavily on the fact that if I were a teacher I should have to spend two or three years in country schools before I could hope for a place in Winnipeg, and eventually she became reconciled.

For four years we both worked, and during that time we began to accumulate the Rainy Day Fund that was so great a comfort to Mother. But I had been fortunate in finding employment in one of the offices where salaries were good to begin with, and where increases came regularly, and when in 1912 my salary was raised for the third time I insisted that Mother should resign and take the rest that she had so long needed. All my powers of persuasion were required to make her see that such a course was practicable, but at length I succeeded, and so long as I live I shall be thankful that I was able to repay even that small part of the debt I owed.

With the lifting of the constant strain of teaching and controlling, day in and day out, fifty wild young animals of the human species, Mother seemed to grow younger as the months went by. Freed from the necessity of having to conserve her strength for her work, she was able to go out more, to accept all the invitations that came her way, and to give freely of her time and energy to the Church and charitable work in which she had always been so greatly interested. And she was still able to add to the Rainy Day Fund from time to time. For years she had occasionally written and sold a story for children, a nonsense rhyme, or a story for grown-ups about children, and now that her time was her own the little cheques came oftener. We continued to live with the Robertsons, rather against my wishes. I felt that we might have had a small suite of our own in one of the apartment blocks, but at any hint of this Mother would cry: "No, we are living cheaply and very comfortably here, and it would be foolish to move. What we can spare we must save for your house." And then I would laugh at her and change the subject. For at that time I was firmly convinced that I had been predestined to a business career, and Mother could never be persuaded to take me seriously.

Looking back now I find it hard to realize how much my work filled my life at that time. At first I hated the office. Mother had sheltered me from the hard and sad side of life more than I knew, and, fatherless and brotherless, I had very little knowledge of men and their ways in the business world. It is funny now to think of the day when the uncle of one of my chums snapped out a complaint at me in language more forceful than courteous, but then it was tragic. The mistake for which he blamed me had been made by one of the other girls, and while Margaret wanted to cry Anne wanted to fight. However, to parody Kipling, "I learned about men from him," and in time I acquired the necessary impersonal attitude toward my fellow workers.

And almost imperceptibly I became more and more interested in my work, and I am afraid I was rather hard on the girls who did what was demanded of them and nothing more. I did not realize then that they, in many cases, had no social life, and no opportunity to make friends, except amongst the people with whom they worked. I do not think that I was exactly snobbish, but it so happened that I had very little in common with any of the other girls. My friends were still the girls and boys with whom I had gone to school—it made no difference to me whether the Manager's stenographer asked me to go to lunch with her or not, or whether the man at the next desk looked upon me as a machine or as an attractive human being. It was only natural, I suppose, that I should have looked with youthful scorn upon the girls to whom such things were matters of importance, but I am just a little sorry now that I was so critical—and that I failed to grasp the truth that the girl who has a home and a circle of friends and the girl who is quite "on her own" must be judged differently.

Graduate Nurse Finds "The Perfect Remedy"

"From my long experience as a professional nurse, I do not hesitate to say Tanlac is nature's most perfect remedy," is the far-reaching statement given out for publication, recently, by Mrs. I. A. Borden, 425 Pontius Ave., Seattle, Wash., a graduate of the National Temperance Hospital, Chicago.

"I have used Tanlac exclusively for seven years in the treatment of my charity patients," said Mrs. Borden, "and my experience has been that for keeping the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels functioning properly, and for toning up the system in general, it has no equal.

"About a year ago I had a lady patient who could not keep a thing on her stomach, not even water. I prevailed on her to try Tanlac and after the sixth bottle she could eat absolutely anything she wanted without the slightest bad after-effects.

"I had another patient who simply could not eat. I got him started on Tanlac and by the time he finished three bottles he was eating ravenously and able to work.

"These two instances are typical of the wonderful merits of the medicine. My confidence in Tanlac is unlimited."

Tanlac is for sale by all good druggists.

Natural Resources Bulletin

Natural Resources Bulk Largely In Our Export Trade

The Natural Resources Intelligence Service of the Department of the Interior at Ottawa, says:

The extent to which Canada's natural resources enter into her export trade is shown by the figures for the year ending March 31 last. Agriculture, the backbone of our export trade, as represented by agricultural and vegetable products, amounted to $407,760,000, or 43.8 per cent. of the total, while animal products amounted to $108,339,000, or 11.6 per cent. The forests, with their products of wood and paper, supplied a value of $228,756,000 to our export trade, or 24.5 per cent., while mines and minerals contributed $123,143,000, or 13.3 per cent. Fisheries, Canada's first natural resource to be developed, showed exports of $27,502,000, or 3 per cent. of the total, while chemical products, derived entirely from our natural resources and largely due to our unexcelled waterpower providing facilities for their manufacture, showed exports of $14,047,000, or 1.5 per cent. of our total export trade. With such a showing made by our 8,788,000 population, it is not much to be wondered at that Canadians are proud of their natural resources.

Americans In Canada

Twelve Per Cent. of Our Population Said to be From U.S.

Few people would credit the extent to which the American people have come to permeate the Canadian Dominion, especially the Western Provinces, in recent years. In the year 1871, when the first census of the newly federated Dominion was taken, Canada was found to have a population of 3,485,761, and of these 24,162 recorded their birthplace as the United States. This was equivalent to not quite seven-tenths of 1 per cent. of the total population. At the time of the 1901 census there were 127,899 citizens of American birth in Canada. In that of 1911 there were 303,680, representing 4.1 per cent. of the total population of the time. From 1911 to 1921 a total of 748,118 citizens of the United States entered Canada, so that at the present time there are well over 1,000,000 people in Canada who have been citizens of the United States, or something like 12 per cent. of the total Dominion population.—E. L. Chicanot in August Current History Magazine.

Australia Air Post Pioneer

Has Covered 2,400-Mile Flight Punctually For Two Years

Australia prides herself on being one of the pioneers in air postal service, and recent compilations have brought out some interesting facts in this connection.

In 1921 an aerial distribution service was started in West Australia with a 1,200-mile route over the most desolate part of the state. The aeroplanes carried both mail and passengers. The planes ply between Geraldton and Derby with a punctuality of arrival and departure that varies only a minute or two on the round trip of 2,400 miles.

Air postal services are also in operation in other states.

Simla Prays By Electricity

Government Solved Difficulty Created By Buddhist Priests

When English engineers wished to build an electric light generating plant for the city of Simla, Buddhist priests opposed the plans because upon every available mountain stream the faithful had installed prayer-mills operated by the current. Upon the wheels were fixed prayers, and each turn of the wheel was a prayer offered to the gods, as efficacious as if offered by word of mouth. It would be a sacrilege, they said, to use the water for industrial purposes.

The government solved the difficulty by directing the electric light company to install motors to drive the prayer-mills, so that Simla now prays by electricity.—Record of Christian Work.
