INCLUDED in our CAIRO excursions is a visit to El Azhar, the largest official university of Islam and perhaps the oldest existing institution of learning ~ ~ founded about 975.

The student body numbers almost ten thousand boys who have come from Mohammedan countries throughout the world. Rich and poor alike are given free tuition and maintenance. Some students remain here six years and longer. Endowed by wealthy Moslems, the University employs over 300 teachers.

Few textbooks other than the Koran are used. The various courses are conducted mostly from memory, intended probably to foster the love of traditions.

The GREAT PYRAMID of Cheops near CAIRO, Egypt

ADAPTED FROM BAEDEKER'S "EGYPT AND THE SUDAN"

THE GREAT PYRAMID (Cheops), the Second Pyramid (Khafre) and the Third Pyramid (Menkaura) were built during the Fourth Dynasty (3733-3600 B.C.) to serve as tombs for the royalty of Lower Egypt. The stones, about 2½ tons each, were brought from the Mokkatam Hills (east of Cairo).

THOUSANDS of years have, in passing, left a rich heritage in the Land of The Nile. We enter a vast treasury which contains relics hoarded from the early dawn of our present civilization.

One needs little imagination, while visiting Egypt, to realize that important steps in progress were started here when Time was young.

The Egyptian Museum in Cairo opens our eyes to antiquities whose atmosphere breathes of departed glories. The Pyramids and the Sphinx are ever impressive.

Our included excursions are so very carefully arranged that we see all of Cairo's places of interest and still have time for optional trips to Upper Egypt... and time for the inevitable shopping!

LUXOR, KARNAK AND THEBES

THE TOMB of King Tut-Ankh-Amen in the Valley of the Kings on the west bank of the Nile is but one of many places of interest visited on the optional excursions in Upper Egypt.

Ancient Thebes, "the hundred-gated", once ranked as the wealthiest, mightiest city of all the world..... her peak of prosperity was reached about 1411 B.C., when both Luxor and Karnak were included in her glory.

Now only ruins remain. We look upon splendid architectural fragments that have withstood the destruction of time and man. Some of these antiquities are expected to survive modern monuments.

Queer hold-overs from a distant yesterday are the two colossi, Tama and Shama. The one to the right in the sketch below is Tama, known as the Vocal Memnon, reputed to have emitted sounds like singing during sunrise ~ until 27 B.C. when an earthquake made it dumb.

CAIRO'S Great Bazaar Section, known as the Muski, is approached by Sharia el Muski, but you need not ask a dragoman where it is ..... he will guide you there without encouragement.

Some of the most celebrated bazaars are grouped in Khan Khalili where your highly developed "sales resistance" meets a severe test against the charming wiles of the adroit merchant.....

"You do not wish to buy ? .... Very well, please come inside just to see and admire my shop....yes, kindly be seated...here....BOY !... Bring for Madame and Gentleman.... tea... coffee... cigarettes..... yes, you see these beautiful brass trays, silks, patch work, ... other things, yes, all made here in my shop... many rich people my customers - please read letter.... you see ?..... oh, you like these ?.... HOW MUCH ?.. oh, VERY cheap ! very special price for you !... Best price"..... (et cetera)....

And, of course, you buy..... and are satisfied.

NOWHERE ELSE can you see the same mixture of races. Humanity the world over is represented here as in Singapore, that other great "cross-roads."

It has been said that by sitting in front of the Cafe' de la Paix in Paris you will eventually see everybody you have ever known. In Cairo you will see people you never knew were in existence.

THE GREAT SPHINX near Gizeh, sculptured from solid rock, 66 feet high and 172 feet long, has the body of a crouching lion and the head of a Pharoah.

The origin and purpose of the Sphinx is unknown but it is believed to antedate the Second Pyramid which is more than 5,000 years old. Facing the east, the Sphinx supposedly represents the deity of the sun.

Drifting sand of centuries past has eroded the body. Invaders of Egypt have mutilated the face, but it has preserved its majestic countenance .... it is especially impressive by moonlight.

JERUSALEM was an important city as long ago as the time of Abraham, about 2,000 B.C. It has suffered destruction by more than a dozen sieges and has been twice completely desolated, probably remaining uninhabited for periods as long as fifty years. Excavations in Jerusalem reveal the remains of seven previous cities, the first one being more than a hundred feet below the present surface.

The irregular expanse of low houses with flat roofs and shallow domes which we see today covers unforgotten holy places of three great religions.

"Mastah..please..Laidee..please...
You like to see mongoos fight cobra!"

Such is almost the very first call of India when we go ashore at Bombay and encounter the charming men who stroll the streets with snakes around their necks.

The mongoos is a small weasel-like animal that is considered sure death to a cobra. In exhibition fights, non-poisonous snakes are often deftly substituted for the cobra...cobras cost many rupees.

Performing cobras rarely have their fangs or poison glands removed, contrary to popular belief. The operation makes them listless and poor performers. It is customary to irritate them periodically and to force them into ejecting their poison. Few of them are harmless. Most of the natives who handle the snakes are believed immune because of their gradual innoculation through successive bites and fortunate recovery.

The cobra's head is quite small. The hood is extended from the neck by cervical vertebrae when the snake lifts its head from the ground.

Scientific observers have claimed that the cobra is not "charmed" by music but merely sways back and forth to follow the movements of the musician.

Vishnu, the Preserver

Brahma, the Creator

Siva, the Destroyer

BRAHMA is the one God, according to Hindu theology, ~ the one impersonal and spiritual being which pervades everything. He has three personal forms: Brahma, Vishnu and Siva.

Brahma, the Creator, is generally represented in Hindu art with four heads and four arms, holding a portion of the Veda, a spoon for lustral (purification) observations, a rosary and a vessel of lustral water.

Vishnu, the Preserver, holds in his four hands a quoit, a conch shell, a mace or club, and a lotus flower. He is believed to have lived on earth nine times - as Buddha, the last time - and is expected to make another visit.

Siva, the Destroyer and Reproducer, also has four arms and holds a trident, an antelope, a noose for binding his enemies, and a drum. He is the chief god of the Hindu priests, revered for his wisdom..

.....never touching his mouth...

RELIGIOUS BRAHMANS, highest-caste Hindus, practise total abstinence not only from alcoholic drinks but also from meat. Some Hindus are said to have such keen sense of smell they know if a person as far as 20 feet away has eaten meat within 48 hours.

The Brahman eats in silence, washing his hands before and after every meal. His food is served on a banana leaf or other leaves sewed together - metal or porcelain plates are believed unclean. He feeds himself with his right hand only, tossing the food into his mouth and pouring water in such manner that his fingers or the vessel are never touching his mouth...

If any morsel of food, even a single grain of rice, happens to drop back on his leaf-plate, the Brahman's meal is at an end.

LARGE fruit-eating bats called "Flying Foxes" because of their fox-like heads may usually be observed in in the gardens of the Taj Mahal near Agra, India.

Some of these creatures have a wing-spread of more than twenty-four inches. They cluster in trees, hanging "topsy-turvy" from branches during the day when they wrap themselves in their hooked wings and slumber.

WHAT IS THE DIFFERENCE?

PRODUCT OF INDIA, CEYLON, CHINA AND JAPAN.....

TEA has been grown in China for many centuries, but it was used only as a medicine until 550 A.D. The first tea-house in London was started in 1657. Tea trade had much to do with the development of ocean transport.

Oriental tea plants, started in nurseries, transplanted on farms, would grow to a height of 25 feet, but frequent pruning keeps them down to 3 to 6 feet ~ more convenient for picking, and effecting better quality of leaves. A tea plant yields within three or four years after being transplanted.... several pickings each season over 20 years.

Leaves are picked by hand. Carried to drying sheds, they are placed in drying trays, turned at intervals until slightly wilted, next roasted or "fired" to soften them, then rolled and given another roasting. There are modifications of this process in various factories. On our included excursion by motor from Colombo to Kandy, Ceylon, we are given an opportunity to see the preparation of tea in its different stages.

GREEN tea and BLACK tea come from the same plant. The tea withered by steam remains green. When simply dried in open air, tea is turned black by oxidation.

HINDU CASTES of India

THE word "caste" is adapted from the Portuguese "casta", meaning race, kind or quality...

Descended from original four castes, there are today thousands of subcasts - one for almost every profession or trade... Separated by unbridgeable gulfs. Social positions, fixed by birth, are unchangeable. Marriage outside of caste is forbidden

ANCIENT and traditional faith of the Hindus explains that all people of India were born of Brahma, the Hindu God.....

BRAHMANS, the first or highest caste (the priest class), claim to have been born from the head or mouth of Brahma.

The second caste, KSHATTRYAS (warriors), is said to have been formed from Brahma's arms. The Rajputs are of this caste.

The third caste, VAISYAS (farmers, traders, artisans), is supposed to have come from the trunk and thighs of Brahma.

These first three castes, calling themselves "twice-born, were Aryans.

The fourth caste, SUDRAS (serfs, menials), all races conquered by the Aryans, was considered as being only "once-born" from the feet of Brahma.

The UNTOUCHABLE is in the lowest sub-caste of the SUDRAS. No matter how much wealth a SUDRA may acquire, he is still so far removed socially from the high-caste BRAHMAN that living on separate planets could not make a greater difference in the relative positions of the two castes.

RICE

RICE ~ first cultivated in India ~ introduced into China about 3000 B.C. ~ into America 1694 A.D. ~ is today the staple food of almost one-third of the world.

Upland rice is grown without irrigation, but most of the rice we see on our shore excursions in the Orient is Swamp rice.

The seed is first started in nursery beds where it grows about one month. Then it is transplanted in water-covered paddy-fields and flooded at intervals until blossom time. The water is later drawn off to permit more rapid ripening of the grain as well as to allow the ground to dry before harvesting of the paddy. (Note: "Paddy" is rice in the husk. The term "rice-paddy", sometimes used to mean "rice-field", is erroneous.)

After harvesting, the paddy is threshed. The kernels are polished to make the rice whiter, increasing its selling price, but removing some of the food value. Rice flour, resulting from the polishing, is considered more nutritious than polished rice.

Orientals derive more than food from the rice plant, for its by-products include rope, matting, paper, hats, coats, sandals ..... and saki, the popular Japanese wine.

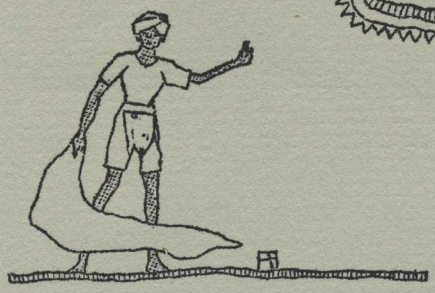
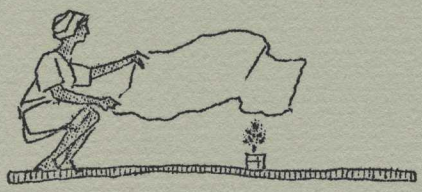
The Tree Trick of India

Something we shall probably see in India, Ceylon or Singapore.....



There are variations of performance but the strolling magician usually does it in this manner:

HE allows spectators to examine a mango seed which he places in a small mound or jar of earth, watering it carefully. He next covers this with a cloth, makes a number of hokus-pokus passes with his hands and utters "golly-golly" words of magic.....



Raising the cloth, he shows you a small plant a few inches tall, apparently growing from the seed..... so far, the trick looks easy .....almost anybody could do that... ... ...

But the magician drops the cloth over the plant a second time... talks some more ..... and when he removes the cloth again there appears a plant perhaps one foot taller.....well, even that looks simple.. merely a matter of substitution.....

The climax of the trick is when he draws away the cloth another time and reveals a real tree, two or three feet in height - - too large to be concealed on his person without crushing the tree. The leaves seem to be fresh and unbruised..... ..... How does he produce the tree?
