Promising Area Adjoins Creston

Arrow-Kid Creek Section Grows Excellent Fruit, Vegetables, Hay, Grain—Great Dairying Acreage—Hathaway Develops

Someone has said, "It is a good thing to stop once in a while and size things up," and the axiom is one of considerable merit at this time when Creston is giving much thought to district development and expansion, and recognizing that continued and increased prosperity must chiefly come from activities in the way of production from the land. And with any such development comparatively easy access to rail transportation must have consideration with demonstrated productive qualities of soil—with emphasis on the 'demonstrated.'

For about five years now practical attention to ascertaining the productive possibilities of the lands to the east of Creston in what is now better known as the Hathaway development—between Arrow and Kid Creeks—in the Goat River valley, with Kitchener as centre; has demonstrated that in that section are located lands capable of producing fruits and vegetables both in quantity and quality; strawberries from this area meeting with ready sale in competition with the products from other parts of the province.

Creston is wont to complain that people travelling through by train cannot get any idea at all of this part of the country, and with much greater emphasis can it be said that people travelling along the main highway get no idea whatever of even the lay of the land, much less the productive qualities of this Arrow to Kid Creek district, and it can be safely said that the rather scant attention it has received in the way of settlement is in great measure due the fact its possibilities cannot be grasped from travel along the main trunk road. A tramp over any section of the district reveals wide benches, well watered, for the most part easily cleared, and with a natural growth of grasses, wild fruit, shrubbery, etc., that indicates a remarkable fertility to the soil.

The Hathaway holdings, which embrace 6000 acres, with C.P.R. steel as the south boundary, can be divided into three well defined subdivisions. In Sublot 13 are 1800 acres, extending from Kitchener to Kid Creek. It is a chocolate loam, which at mid-July was showing an excellent reserve of moisture due to a rich vegetable content in the soil. In it are four benches of desirable width and so clear y defined as to eliminate sidehill almost completely, and with a fertility that is as much in evidence on the high land as at the bottom.

This is noted in the developed properties operated by Messrs. Simpson and Nowlin on the high bench, where strawberries in commercial quantities are successfully grown and marketed; plum trees carrying a full load of green fruit are in evidence; and pears, cherries, apples and quinces as thrifty as one will see anywhere; and most everything in the way of gardentruck.

Along the main highway almost directly below the Simpson place, is the Elmer Blair ranch, where the same excellent growth is noted in strawberries and vegetables, the latter including head lettuce that for size and texture certainly equals the imported article.

Throughout this block experiments have been tried out with fall rye, oats and timothy, and with the former straw six feet high was in evidence two weeks ago, and most of the rye was a good five feet in length. Timothy was equally promising and the oats equally desirable. This whole block is dotted all over with streams and can be irrigated from both Kid Creek and Goat River.

The upper end of Sub Lot 15 along Goat River, about a mile above Kitchener, has 1500 acres in one big field that at once strikes the onlooker as being excellent for dairy farming. There are three creeks traversing the area as well as Goat River, assuring an abundance of water. In this acreage was once located a logging camp and the horse fertilizer from the stables is responsible for a stand of timothy and clover that assures the land has wonderful productive possibilities. The timothy was standing four feet high and uniformly thick throughout.

The balance of the acreage also lies west of Kitchener extending through to almost Arrow Creek, where an examination shows a wonderful growth of wild fruits, native grasses, etc., betokening sub-irrigation and soil richness. Much of this is along Goat River bottom at a height that prevents overflow while along the higher stretches are many homsites of great natural beauty.

These lands comprise much of the timber holdings of the former firm of Paulson & Hathaway, and are now owned outright by W. L. Hathaway of San Francisco, who every year spends a month on vacation on his holdings, in the centre of which is Kitchener, providing convenient shipping facilities, as well as postoffice, school, etc.

Since becoming outright owner of this area Mr. Hathaway has spent quite a few thousand dollars in getting exact information as to the soils in the area, the locations of streams, and in proving out the productive possibilities of his holdings and in offering this land to prospective settlers it is marketed with sincerity based on firsthand knowledge of its all round capabilities, as demonstrated by Elmer Blair, a practical Saskatchewan operator, who for five years has been in charge of developement, and who, on his original holdings just east of Kitchener, pioneered vegetable and fruit production in this promising new area.

Kitchener

Death has claimed one of Kitchener's well known and quite oldtime citizen in the passing late Sunday evening of Joseph Langlois, at the age of 44 years. The end came suddenly from heart failure from which deceased had suffered for some time past. Early in the evening he was around in his usual health and good spirits, but about 11.30 he collapsed in the upstairs room, and before the family had reached him life was extinct. The late Mr. Langlois was a native of Quebec and had worked in various points in East Kootenay, part of the time as stage driver between Cranbrook and Athalmer, and in 1914, he was married and took up residence in Creston, in which town he remained until about 1916 when he moved to Kitchener and opened up in the store business, and has resided at Kitchener ever since. The funeral was on Tuesday to Creston cemetery, with Rev. F. V. Harrison, Anglican rector of Cranbrook, in charge, and G. A. Hunt, Z. Goroux, H. Redmile, Elmer Blair, L. Nowlin and A. Simpson officiating as pallbearers. There was a large turnout of friends to pay a last tribute of respect and the many floral remembrances bespoke a well deserved popularity. In addition to his wife he leaves two daughters, Vivian and Celina, and two sons, John and Joe, to mourn his passing, and in their bereavement they have the sympathy of all.

Official Opening Irrigation District

Dedication Exercises Saturday, August 2nd, at 3 p.m.—Local Member to Officiate—Others Deliver Short Addresses.

The formal opening of East Creston Irrigation District water system will take place on Saturday afternoon, August 2nd, at what is known as the Memerial Square, located at the corner of the R. J. Long ranch, opposite R. B. Staples' place, with the exercises to commence prompt at 3 o'clock.

Along with the opening will also be the unveiling of the monument at this site. The dedication address will be by Col. Fred Lister, M.P.P., and other speakers will be Col. Mallandaine, president of Creston Board of Trade; and F. H. Jackson, reeve of Creston village.

A platform for the speakers has been erected, and arrangements are being made for having some suitable music. A drawing contest is being held to select the girl who will have the honor of removing the flag with which the monument is draped.

Work is being pushed at top speed so as to be sure everything in the way of construction will be completed by Saturday morning. T. DeWolf of Vernon, who is provincial government supervisor of irrigation systems, has been here during the week, and after a thorough examination pronounces the system quite the best in all British Columbia.

Another interested visitor of the week is A. W. Clark of Vancouver, general manager of the B.C. Concrete Company, Limited, which firm had the contract of making and laying the big concrete main, and who has also expressed hi self well satisfied with the all round handling of a project that has necessitated an expenditure of about $150,000.00

Everyone interested is invited to witness the inaugural exercises, and they are asked to be on time, as commencement will be prompt at 3 o'clock.

Esling Leading Most Valley Polls

Reclamation Farm Only Poll to Give Liberal Candidate Lead—Esling Majorities Here are Much the Same as 1926.

Harmonizing with the days preceding polling, Monday was about the quieteft election day ever seen at all points in the Valley. At Creston neither of the old parties had its full quota of scrutineers and transportation facilities were certainly not up to the standard of other years. And and at night neither party made the usual arrangements for getting the all-Canada returns. The vote in the Valley polls follows:

	Eslg.	McL	Watts
Kitchener	25	9	2
Lister	69	19	0
Canyon	56	22	9
Erickson	65	32	7
Creston	274	144	15
Rec. Farm	8	12	2
Wynndel	65	62	20
Sirdar	41	21	4
Boswell	65	22	4

The showing of A. E. Watts, a sort of self-nominated Farmer-Labor candidate, while not large is at least creditable when it is recalled that he held no meetings in this section.

The World's Grain Exhibition

The World's Poultry Congress is now in progress at the Crystal Palace, London, England, including a representative display of birds from Canada and with prominent Canadians identified with the poultry industry in attendance. A year or two ago Canada was honored by being host to the World's Poultry Congress, held in Ottawa, and which proved to be the most successful of these world's congresses held up to that time. Canada received most valuable publicity as a result, while the poultry industry throughout the Dominion was decidedly benefited thereby.

Canada is again to be host to a world's exhibition and conference in 1932, when the World's Grain Exhibition and Conference will be held in the city of Regina, Saskatchewan. It will be the greatest grain exhibition and conference ever held, with over $200,000 in cash prizes, an unprecedented sum, to be awarded, while grain experts from all over the world will be in attendance to participate in the conference.

Already the response of countries in every hemisphere has surpassed expectations. To date nearly one million copies of the official prize list have been distributed in 84 countries. They have been placed where they will do the most good, and give a maximum of advertising to Canada, and Western Canada in particular, in every corner of the civilized world.

Canada as a country dependent on agriculture, and suffering all the growing pains of the young, needs this advertising, and even supposing no person from outside Canada attended the Exhibition and Conference at Regina, in 1932, the world-wide advertising already secured would be an ample return for all monies expended to date.

But the countries of the world will be represented, not only by interesting and instructive exhibits, but by leading agricultural experts. The Government of Canada officially issued invitations to other countries to participate and today,—two years before the event,—eight countries have accepted. These are Peru, New Zealand, Guatemala, Poland, Czecho-Slovakia, Yugoslavia, Belgium and the Netherlands. The Governments of other countries, such as the United States, Great Britain, France, the Argentine, Australia, have asked for further and more complete information, and by 1932 it is expected at least 50 countries will have accepted the invitation and be present.

The management of the World's Grain Exhibition and Conference has taken advantage of the World's Poultry Congress, in London, England, this month to further its campaign for world-wide participation at Regina in 1932, and has sent an exhibit to London, and this week are entertaining, in London, the official delegates of 56 countries. At this luncheon the managing director of the World's Grain Exhibition will address these delegates and outline to them why they should participate at Regina. Afterwards he will visit the ministries of agriculture, of the countries of Europe, to drive that message home.

Exhibits of the World's Grain Exhibition are also being prepared for the Canadian National Exhibition, and the Royal Winter Fair, at Toronto, and the International Grain Show at Chicago.

This is what is being done to bring the world to Western Canada in 1932. But, and this is important, Western Canada should put forth every effort to retain for this country the world's championship wheat trophy. Other countries are going to try and capture it; we are asking, even urging them, to make the attempt. Western Canada must therefore look to its laurels. The wheat farmers of Western Canada,—the best in the world,—must be alert and put forth their best efforts, individually and collectively, to retain for this Dominion the proud title of the World's Wheat King.

Now is the time to prepare for the exhibition. It cannot be put off until 1932. It must be done in 1930 and 1931.

World Depression In Wool Prices

New Zealand, like Australia, has been hit a severe blow by the world depression in wool prices, it was revealed recently. The gross receipt of the New Zealand wool sales this year were almost $35,000,000 below last year's yield. Wool forms by far the largest part of New Zealand's exports, the value of the wool export in 1928 being more than $80,000,000.

Archbishop Opposed To Death Penalty

Says It Lowers Conception Of Sanctity Of Life

The Most Rev. William Temple, Archbishop of York, is one of the few witnesses who has come so far before the Royal Commission on punishments to favor the abolition of the death penatly.

"I dissent from the view that punishment should be regarded as regulated vengeance," the Archbishop stated. "From a Christian viewpoint, vengeance is entirely illegitimate. The infliction of death or outlawry would, perhaps, be justifiable in the case of a man who was wholly evil but no person was ever that."

The main argument advanced by the archbishop from a sociological viewpoint was that the behaviour of a community as a whole was so largely imitative that the reaction to the taking of life by the state tended to a lower general conception of the sanctity of human life.

Usual Order Reversed

Cleveland Children Look On While Parents Graduate

The usual order of school commencements was reversed at Cleveland when an audience of children sat in the auditorium of John Hay High School and applauded their parents as they marched to the platform to receive high school diplomas. The occasion was the annual commencement of the Cleveland Extension High School.

Ages of the graduates ranged from 17 to well past middle age. In the class was a golf professional, an assistant sales manager, a chief auditor, a credit manager, an assistant treasurer and a field manager for a large oil company.

May Purchase Canadian Land

Another English Peer Interested In Farming In Dominion

The possibilities of southern Saskatchewan for ranching on a large scale were investigated recently by Lord Middleton, Yorkshire landowner, who is touring Canada with a view to purchasing land in this country. Lord Middleton specializes in breeding beef cattle on his 3,000, acre farm in the north of England. He recently made the decision to dispose of the whole of his estates, comprising some thousands of acres, driven to this step by the excessive burden of taxation to which every British landowner has been subjected since the war. It is his plan to take up land in Canada. He was an interested visitor at the Brandon Summer Fair, and in all the departments he visited, those in charge were rather amazed at the knowledge he had of farm affairs and of horticulture. He brought over to Ontario some fifty Yorkshire lads, who will be placed on Ontario farms.

Father Of Many Inventions

Sir Charles Wheatstone Gave Many Scientific Ideas To World

The concertina celebrated its centenary last year. It was invented and patented by Charles—afterward Sir Charles—Wheatstone, in 1829. He must have been a wonderful man, for his inventions seem to have been legion. Sir Charles invented, for example, the stereoscope, by which the appearance of solidity is obtained through the mental combination of two pictures, and the polar clock, which made it possible to tell the time by the light from the sky although the sun might be invisible. It was he who made the electric telegraph available for the public transmission of messages. And in between his scientific studies he sandwiched the invention of our little musical friend the concertina.

Use of war-time mustard gas in combating cancer is described in the annual report of the grand council of the British Empire cancer campaign.

TRAIL OF DEATH FOLLOWS 'QUAKE IN SOUTH ITALY

Naples.—Amid the vineclad hills of the Appennines the simple peasant folk of southern Italy had counted their dead to the number of 679 in half a score of towns tumbled to ruins by a series of terrific earthquakes.

Government estimates placed the injured at more than a thousand, and the homeless at ten times that figure. Melfi, picturesque mountain city, perched perilously upon the crater of the extinct Monte Vulture, was an area of ghastly debris. Even the ancient cathedral whose history in its several phases goes back to the ninth century, was wrecked.

The almost inaccessible nature of some of the areas devastated made difficult the work of succor and the estimation of casualties. Most of the towns hit the hardest are off the beaten paths of tourists, with poor transportation and almost inaccessible altitude.

Several supply trains have been sent to points on the railroads in the interior from Naples, and hundreds of relief workers were penetrating the recesses of the agricultural area, offering relief to the still terror stricken victims.

The 'quake stunned all Italy. It was the worst earthshock since Messina was all but obliterated in 1908. The first shock came an hour after midnight. Its own awful nature was supplemented by a tremendous electrical storm over virtually the whole affected area.

The shaken area extended from the Tyrrhenian sea to the Adriatic, but the coast settlements suffered less in proportion than the mountain populations. Naples experienced several hours of panic with several houses and scores of casualties. Among this city's victims was the Countess De Rossi Vargas. Never in all Neapolitan history had this classic city experienced such stark-mad fright. A frenzied populace raced through the streets apparently heading nowhere.

Wrecked bridges, snapped communication wires and many other obstacles had been tossed in the path of the relief workers by the upheaval of nature. Motor cars made little progress over unaccustomed routes. The highways of the area are notoriously undeveloped and rail lines passed through many gorges into which the quake had tumbled avalanches.

Several tunnels upon the road to Melfi, where 180 persons perished, according to official figures, fell in and blocked service beyond restoration for many days.

Floods In England

Two Lives Lost In Consequence Of Cloudburst In Yorkshire

Whitby, Yorkshire, England.—Two lives are already known to have been lost, and other fatalities are feared, in consequence of a flood that followed upon a cloudburst in the valley of the Esk River.

The last connection with the village of Sleights, in the centre of the flood area, was severed late today when the telephone wires broke down.

Many families throughout the area are imprisoned in the upper floors of their houses.

The train service has been dislocated over a wide area.

Spectacular rescues were effected by the life saving crews, who did particularly effective work in Ruswarp. From one house a woman and four children, who had climbed to the roof, were hauled through the flood to safety by means of a breeches buoy brought into play by the coastguard.

From another house five people were rescued by the coastguards with life-saving apparatus at a time when the water had already reached the bedroom windows.

Twelve people were rescued from the upper storey of a mill.

The town crier of Whitby patrolled the streets and warned the populace that the water supply would last for only 48 hours. The pipes from the reservoir had been burst.

Aviation Pioneer Dead

Glenn H. Curtiss Did Not Lose Faith When Others Became Discouraged

Buffalo, N.Y.—Glenn H. Curtiss, widely known aviation pioneer, died in the General Hospital here.

Mr. Curtiss was brought to the hospital from his home at Hammondsport, N.Y., to undergo an operation for appendicitis. The operation was said to have been successful and he was reported recovering rapidly.

Mrs. Curtiss came here with her husband and has been almost constantly at his bedside.

Hospital authorities stated death was due to pulmonary embolus, caused by a blood clot on one of the main arteries leading out of the heart.

Glenn H. Curtiss nurtured the young science of aviation in the middle years of its development, when fainter hearts had grown discouraged.

With a tomato can for a carburetor, he built his first motor bicycle in 1902. He continued to experiment with lightweight motors and evolved his famous V-type motor, a departure in design reflected in the radial aeroplane engines of today. In 1904 he set a motor bicycle speed record at Ormond Beach, Fla., of 10 miles in eight minutes and 54 seconds, and in 1906, over the same course, travelled faster than man ever had before, a mile in 26 2-5 seconds.

His fame spread and drew the attention of the late Major Thomas Scot Baldwin, builder and operator of balloons. In 1904 the two men met in Hammondsport and installed a Curtiss motor in Baldwin's balloon. With this machine they made a circular flight of Oakland, Cal., in August, 1904, first to fly that way.

Dr. Alexander Graham Bell, inventor of the telephone, commissioned Curtiss to build a motor for a man-carrying kite. Gliders were experimented with for a time, and then the men turned their attention to power aeroplanes.

Terrified By Masked Rider

People In Hills Of Wyoming Receive Threatening Letters

Wheatlands, Wyo.—Death threats signed "The Phantom Rider" received by several Fletcher Park ranchers, has added to the uneasiness spread by the recent appearance of a masked horseman who rides the rugged Laramite peaks on a snow-white horse.

Five men and a woman are reported to have received the letter which were placed in the hands of officers seeking the "Phantom Rider" who recently rode into the yard of Charles Adams, 20, and shot the rancher through the shoulder.

Posses searched the hills following the attack but were unable to apprehend the mysterious horseman who is believed connected with recent cases of cattle rustling.

Weather Conditions Forced Prince To Abandon Airplane Trip

London, England.—For the first time on record the Prince of Wales was forced to cancel an official engagement because of weather conditions.

Air Tragedy Told

Aviator Makes Heroic Attempt To Save Life Of Youthful Passenger

Edmonton, Alberta.—A story of terrific storm and of a heroic battle by Dale Atkinson, Western Canada Airways pilot, in the freezing waters of Lake Nisku, Northern Saskatchewan, to save the life of his passenger, was told with the arrival of the body of the passenger, Woodrow "Chuck" Eagle, 17, of The Pas, Man., brought from the north by aeroplane.

Atkinson came out with the body in an aeroplane piloted by W. E. Gilbert.

Eagle died when Atkinson, running into a terrific windstorm which had attained the proportions of a typhoon, swung about, raced to Lake Nisku, landed and was pushing to shore. A cross gust of wind lifted one wing of the machine high in the air, toppled the aeroplane over on its back, and threw the occupants into the water.

Fighting his way down through the turbulent waters, which had been swept into fury by the storm, Atkinson smashed his way into the cabin of the machine, found that his passenger was not there and dived several times in an effort to find him.

Near exhaustion, Atkinson gave up the uneven battle and swam the dozen yards to shore.

The fatality occurred on July 15, and the pilot waited until the water gave up the body, July 19.

U.S. Increases Population

Expect New Census To Show Population Of About 122,957,000

Washington, D.C.—A total of about 122,957,000 people—just a few thousand under 123,000,000—probably will be shown as the population of the United States for 1930, when the final count is announced here by Director W. M. Steuart, of the census.

The 1929 population was 105,710,620. Should final figures bear out the calculation, the country would show a growth of around 17,246,000 people in the ten years.

This approximate total figure has been calculated by the Associated Press on the basis of actual preliminary returns from 40 states and the District of Columbia.

Scores Drowned At Coblenz

Pontoon Bridge Collapsed Under Strain Of Heavy Traffic

Coblenz, Germany.—Scores of persons were drowned in the collapse of a pontoon bridge here during celebration of the evacuation of the Rhineland in which President Von Hindenburg had taken part. About 100 people were on the bridge when it crumbled.

An enormous crowd had gathered along the banks of the Rhine during the evening at the so-called "Deutsches Eck," where the Moselle River joins the Rhine.

They stood watching the display of fireworks and the illumination at the ancient castle of Ehrenbretistein in honor of President Von Hindenburg's visit.

When the display was over, thousands of people tramped across the pontoon bridge, which leads to a place known as "Security Harbor."

Suddenly, while about 100 persons were on the bridge, it collapsed under the strain of the unusual traffic.

Many were killed by falling timbers, and others were swept away in the black, swirling water and drowned before help could reach them.

In the darkness, which lately had been intermittently illuminated by the fireworks across the rivers, people could be heard splashing about and crying for help.

Rescuers immediately launched boats, but many of the victims could not be located.

ADMINISTRATION OF PEACE RIVER BLOCK BY B. C.

Victoria, B.C.—British Columbia takes over the administration of the Peace River block and the railway belt on August 1, under tentative plans announced by the government. Efforts are being made now to adjust the necessary administrative details by that date.

The actual transfer will be accomplished without the disturbance of existing administrative machinery. For the time being, federal officials will carry on. As soon as possible, however, the administration will be entirely overhauled to eliminate the present duplication by federal and provincial officials, particularly in the railway belt, where two sets of machinery have operated side by side for years. In some offices the provincial officials will be able to carry on alone, possibly with addition of one or two from federal territory. In the forestry department, however, it may be necessary for forest patrol in the large areas to be transferred.

Beatty Issues Statement

Detailed Information On Air Service To Be Announced Later

Montreal.—In reference to the newspaper reports with respect to possible aviation developments in Canada, Mr. E. W. Beatty, chairman and president of the Canadian Pacific Railway Company, made the following statement:

"By amendments to its charter secured in 1919, the Canadian Pacific Railway Company was empowered to establish and operate services of aircraft of all kinds, and in recent years it has, through its express department, entered into contracts for express services with established Canadian air service companies. Discussions have taken place between the president of the Canadian National Railways and this company, looking to participation by both companies in the ownership of airway companies, both in eastern and western Canada, and these discussions have proceeded to the point where an agreement in principle has been reached.

"It is anticipated that each of the transcontinental railways will have an equal interest, and when negotiations have been concluded an announcement in greater detail will, no doubt, be made."

King Government Defeated

It's all over, including the shouting—most of which latter was done by the Conservatives—and in two weeks, possibly, Canada's affairs will be in full charge of the new government, Hon. R. B. Bennett and his supporters having carried about 138 seats in the house of 245, assuring a comfortable majority wherewith to carry out many, if not quite all, of about a billion dollars worth of promises made during the campaign which ended on Monday.

Undoubtedly unemployment was the issue. This is particularly noticable in western Canada where practically all of the gains made by the Conservatives were in districts with a large urban population.

While the Tory win is not at all unanimously acclaimed, yet it can be said that most everyone is happy that the winning party has a clear majority of ample size over all the other parties combined.

In West Kootenay W. K. Esling has been favored with re-election by a largely increased majority, said increase being in good part due to the splendid vote polled by him in Trail and Rossland. Four years ago the former was Liberal by a few votes and the latter was rather stingy with the plurality its native townsman secured over R. H. Gale.

In Creston Valley the Esling majority is much on a par with 1926, in an election that was much the quietest of any ever previously witnessed. Little if any canvasing was done. Neither party had a committee room, and transportation to the polls on Monday was given scant attention by both sides.

Assuming that it will take two weeks for the King Government to clear up and clear out, some time about middle of August we may expect the beginning of the new area of prosperity so readily promised by Mr. Bennett.

And notwithstanding the none too enthusiastic endorsation of assurances by Mr. Esling this will give him good and timely warning that West Kootenay expects right from the start of the promised better times to share in the relief of the intolerable and altogether unjustafiable stagnation in general business that now prevails due to the alleged mismanagement of national affairs by the now defeated King administration.

Tolmie's Doom Foretold

In every general election contest there is always some surprises, and the one just ended is no exception to the rule, as it has provided two outstanding samples of the unexpected.

In hitherto almost solid Liberal Quebec province the Conservatives emerge with about 25 supporters of the party and in others a sprinkling of independents of Liberals persuasion have been returned.

And in British Columbia where the fashion in federal politics has been to eleef but one Liberal in a total rhpresentation of about 14, Monday's polling has given the Liberals five straight supporters, along with oldtime nominal Liberal-Labor, A. W. Neill, who has again carried Comox-Alberni.

Amongst the Conservative fallen is none other than Hon. H. H. Stevens in Centre Vancouver, and his fellow Tory candidates in all the other Vancouver ridings (Burrard, South and North Vancouver) and missing from the Conservative fold are also New Westminster. and Skeena ridings. The downfall of Mr. Stevens is almost unbelievable as he swept the constituency four years ago, and was sure of a place in the new Conservative cabinet at Ottawa.

Various excuses are being put forward to account for the totally unexpected reverse in these Tory strongholds—and so soon after the Tolmie sweep of this province—chief of which is the popularty of the Kiug government's Australian and New Zealand preferential policies with the Vancouver electrate, and which policies are to be cancelled according to Mr. Bennett's platform promises.

However, none of the many alibis offered are imqroving Premer Tolmie's sleep this week. He iknows the exact reason for these reversals. And the one excellent reason is none other than that these constituencies have taken this opportunity to serve notice on the B.C. government that the gross mismanagement of provincial affairs in general must stop, or Tolmie, Pooley et al will share precisely the same fate when the present provincial administration goes back for endorsation within a short two years.

And while other constituencies have not been so rude with the powers that be at Victoria, none the less genuine is the dissatisfaction that exists. and precisely the same treatment will be meted out to Tolmie supporters in 1932. The handwriting is on the wall beyond the shadow of a doubt.

Discusses Apple Export Market

British Columbia Apples Equal Best on Market—Warns of Possible Lifht Demand Due to Britain's Financial Depression

Instruction and entertainment were happily combined at Tue day night's meeting in Trinity United Church hall, at which J. Forsyth Smith, Canada's fruit trede commissioner in Great Britain, was the chief speaker, and was closed with the showing of a few reels of moving pictures showing the picking, packing and shipping of fruit in B.C., a great variety of fruit handling and selling scenes in England, including some interior views of the Imperial Fruit Show at Birmingham last year. The chair was occupied by W. G. Littlejohn, R. G. L. Clarke, chief B.C. fruit inspector, spoke briefly, taking satisfaction in observing that since certificated car inspection has been introduced claims for rebates from wholesalers have been greatly reduced.

Some firsthand information on the sizes of apples that find favor in the Old Country was gathered from a display of exact-size samples in wax to which attention had also been given to the precise reproduction of the natural colors, which all present had opportunity to examine.

In opening Mr. Smith had no hesitation in claiming the pack and quality of B.C. apples sold in England were quite on a par with the fruit from Washinhton or Oregon, for which he thought the fruit inspectors deserved a fu measure of credit. And in connection with certificated car shipments he emphasized the point that this 100 per cent. inspection facilitated selling B.C. apples on the cash market, but was of no particular benefit where fruit was auctioned and thus subject to inspection before bidding commenced. Last year possibly 700,000 of boxed apples were sold in Britain.

Mr. Smith was careful in pointing out that while the apple crop in Eastern Canada as well as England would not average more than 60 per cent. of 1929, yet B.C. with a slightly larger yield should not be too optimistic about the export market. Due to the continued financial depression in Britain the buying power of the people was not up to standard and high prices were entirely out of the question this year regardless of the decreased crop.

In connection with the recent embargo Great Britain had placed against C's and the lower grades of American apples, which would be effective until toward the end of November, Mr. Smith explained that the special effort to keep out American fruit was due to a prevalance of apple maggot in U.S. apples, and that the same embargo would apply against Canadian fruit as well if the maggot were found, and the speaker was just a little bit afraid Nova Scotia might be in the same class as the U.S. grower. Mr. Smith also directed attention that while this embargo might be of some benefit on the export market, yet if the Nova Scotia and U.S. unexportable product found its way onto the prairies the resultant benefit to the B.C. grower would be practically nil, particularly with the Nova Scotia fruit, 50 per cent. of which came within the classification of low grade fruit prohibited by Britain at this time.

Mr. Smith explained the preference for the Cox Orange over the McIntosh Red by expressing the belief that the English were born with a taste for Cox Orange, and this had been brought home to him in a test he had mane on half a dozen persons selected at random at the Imperial Fruit Show who were giveu half a Mac. and half a Cox to eat with no knowledge whatever of what had been handed them, and five of the six unhesitatingly preferred the Cox and the other was not quite sure of his preference though leaning towards the Mac. Mr. Smith pointed out that in recent years the Delicious gains favor in compe,ition with the Jonathan.

Mr. Smith spoke in highest terms of the aid being given in popularizing Canadian fruit by the British Empire Marketing Board which spends large sums annually in publicity work of every variety. What money the Canadian government provides for publicity is largely devoted to getting full co-operation from the retail trade as it has been found that appearance counts for about 75 per cent. in selling apples and on this score Canadian fruit has it over the British orchard product.

Mr. and Mrs. Joe Travis and daughter, Verna, of Michel, were weekend visitors with Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Parkin. They were motored here by Frank Travis, returning on Monday, the latter's wife and son, Harold, who have been visitors with her parents, Mr. and Mr. Parkin, returning home with the party.

At the annual school meeting on July 12th, $200 was voted to finance educational affairs the coming twelve months. W. H. Mather was favored with re-election for a three year term, and Guy Constable was the unanimous choice for auditor, a position he has filled ever since the school started. Victor Carr and John R. Miller complete the trustee board.

The first shipment of Australian oranges to enter Vancouver, 5,000 cases from Sydney, N.S.W., was unloaded recently for distribution at various points throughout the Dominion.

When Aviators Trespass

Judge Rules People Own Air Five Hundred Feet Up

Aviators must fly at least 500 feet high to avoid trespassing on property over which they pass, Federal Judge George P. Hahn, of Cleveland, Ohio, ruled in a precedent setting decision.

The decision was on a bill of complaint brought a year ago by two suburban property holders against the Curtiss Airport Corporation, the Ohio Air Terminals Company and the Curtiss Flying Service.

The complaint cited the ancient Roman legal principle, "Whosoever controls land controls it from the centre of the earth to the zenith," and sought an order forbidding 'planes to pass over the property.

Judge Hahn ruled that the "effective possession" of such property extends only 500 feet up.

Novel Attempt To Escape From Prison

Robber Serving Sentence In Sing Sing Sewed Up In Mattress

A novel method of attempting escape from Sing Song prison was uncovered when guards found Jack Levy within a mattress made in the prison factory. Levy, small and middle-aged robber, almost got away with it. He would now be on his way to freedom but for the curiosity of Victor Brown, keeper-chauffeur, who thought a pile of mattresses on his truck looked suspiciously lob-sided although it had been twice inspected by other guards.

Brown summoned Principal Keeper Sheehy and a search was instituted. Sheehy ripped open one misshapen mattress and discovered Levy. Levy had a razor with which to cut his way out, and a hammer. The robber will be sent to Clinton prison, Dannemore, N.Y. His attempted escape will put back his earliest possible date of release to 1952. Levy was sewed into the mattress from the outside. His accomplice has not been found.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

NAOMI AND RUTH

Golden Text: "And He made of one every nation of men to dwell on all the face of the earth."—Acts 17. 26.

Lesson: The Book of Ruth.

Devotional Reading: Isaiah 61.1-7.

Explanations and Comments

The Beginning Of the Story, 1.1-13.—In the days of the Judges there was a famine in the land of Canaan, and to escape it a Bethlehemite, Elimelech, and his wife Naomi, and their two sons, left their home and settled in Moab across the Jordan. The Jews have a legend to the effect that Elimelech was of a princely house, a descendant of Amminadab, the father-in-law of Aaron, that he was wealthy, and left the country in the time of famine in order to preserve his wealth intact, for he was afraid of being besieged by his starving brethren.

In Moab the two sons married daughters of that alien land, Ruth and Orpah. Ten years passed, father and sons found their graves there, and Naomi, now poor, whatever she had been in Bethlehem, determined to return to her native land. Farewells seldom take place in the home in eastern lands, and Ruth and Orpah carried out the usual custom when they accompanied Naomi a short distance on her way. When Naomi thought they had gone far enough to show her fitting respect, she stopped to dismiss them. With tears and kisses she bade them return to their homes and let her go on her way alone.

Ruth's Great Decision, verses 14-18.—Though it grieved Orpah to part with her mother-in-law, she kissed her and returned as Naomi had urged her to do. Ruth, however, clung to Naomi. With all her power Naomi sought to dissuade Ruth from accompanying her. "Behold," she said, "thy sister-in-law is gone back unto her people, and unto her god (Chemosh); return thou after thy sister-in-law." In answer Ruth uttered those beautiful words which have become so famous through the ages; "Entreat me not to leave thee, and to return from following after thee; for whither thou goest I will go; and where thou lodgest, I will lodge; thy people shall be my people, and thy God my God." The ancient belief was that each people had its own god, and that in going to another land one must necessarily serve the god of that land: compare 1 Samuel 26. 19.

"Ruth was a Moabitess, of an accursed race, who according to the law of Moses was not allowed to enter the congregation of the covenant. While this story finally teaches that no such disability remains when faith in God is exercised, we must not forget the difficulty as it existed for Ruth; how the people would be likely to look at her, how she herself, as she came into contact with the religion of the Hebrew people, would realize the greatness of her distance. Again, there was nothing calculated to allure her from the standpoint of material prosperity. Those she had known of the people of Jehovah had been compelled to leave their land on account of famine. From them she knew of the perils of those who had remained in the land, and all the sadness of their condition. She came back with Naomi into poverty, and to people who in all probability were hostile to them both."—G. Campbell Morgan.

"Large is the life that flows for others' sakes;
Expends its best, its noblest effort makes;
Devotion rounds the man and makes him whole;
Love is the measure of the human soul."—James Buckham.

Captain Sherlock Has Newest Air Record

Flew Mail 'Plane 1,500 Miles In One Day Making Five Stops

Record achievements in the air are just part of the day's work in the north country. The newest feat, unheralded almost among the brilliant exploits of the sub-Arctic fliers, is that of Captain W. N. Sherlock, Commercial Airways pilot. In less than a day he flew the mail from Fort McMurray, in northern Alberta, to Aklavik, on the topmost rim of Canada—some 1,500 miles — making five delivery stops en route.

Son of Sir Francis and Lady Sherlock, Irton Hall, Cumberland, England, Captain Sherlock is a former member of the Royal Air Force. He has seen war and peace-time service in France, India, Egypt and Mesopotamia. Before joining the Commercial Airfleet, he was a member of the flying staff of Dominion Explorers.

On the morning of June 26, at 5:45 o'clock, Captain Sherlock took off from Fort McMurray air base, flying a Bellanoa Pacemaker. Less than 21 hours later, at 2:25 o'clock the next morning, with the midnight sun casting its twilight glow, he landed the mail at Aklavik, within the Arctic circle. On his way, he made postal deliveries at Fort Resolution, Fort Simpson, Fort Norman, Fort McPherson and Arctic Red River along the rushing Mackenzie River.

Captain Sherlock's flight—just one of the records set up by fearless airmen speeding to and fro across the barrens of the northwest—was the first one-day flight from Alberta to Aklavik.

Puns are not always properly attributed to their original author — possibly because puns have been condemned as the lowest form of wit. But some are worthy to live. CHAPTER XXI.—Continued

Long after she had read the letter a second time and put it safely away in prospect of a third perusal, parts of it kept coming back to her, such as: "You ask why I should be inarticulate with you, 'of all people.' I've sometimes wondered about that myself. Ask Grandma. Perhaps out of the wisdom of years she can explain that foolish self-consciousness on my part. . . . ." And lower down: "Of course I wasn't mad—not even hurt, just a little sore, maybe. . . . I knew that deep down inside you didn't think me a Shylock anyhow — you just didn't understand. . . . So it was the dear old doctor who gave me away? . . . ." And near the end: "How's your boarder? According to Lizzie Baker he's about to settle down with a lady of my acquaintance 'for better, for worse,' etc.; only in this case it would be a great deal better than he, or any other man deserves. If this happens to be idle gossip, Charmian, please pass the good word along. Yours always, Jim."

"Well," said John Carter, rousing the girl from her reverie, "was it satisfactory?"

"You mean?" questioned Charmian as they started back.

"I refer to the letter I was good enough to bring you," he replied.

She laughed happily.

"More than satisfactory. It took a load off my contrite mind. You see, John, I said something mean and hateful to Jim Bennett before he went away. I didn't intend to be unjust; but I was, terribly. Now it's straightened out and . . . ."

"'God's in His heaven'?" quoted the doctor as she hesitated.

"You're a marvelously understanding soul," she answered. "That's exactly the way I feel, only I didn't think to express myself through Browning."

He smiled, drew up under a lonely tree and stopped the car.

"Trouble?" asked Charmian, thinking of the engine.

"I hope not!" he replied. Then his face grew serious and he turned to her. "Charmian," he began, "now that you've digested that letter—got your mind cleared on the subject, in a way, I've something to tell you. Wait till this automobile passes, and . . . ."

But the approaching automobile didn't pass. It stopped, and Ezra Bascomb's familiar face peered at them from behind the windshield.

"Hi, Doc!" he greeted. "One of Luella Moore's twins is took down with appendicitis. Doctor Howe wants you should hurry right along to the deacon's. He's waitin' fer you there."

"Thanks," shouted John Carter as Ezra, who was evidently in haste, sped on. Then he turned again to the girl beside him, and added ruefully: "Like tide and time, appendicitis waits for no man. It's our confidential conversation that must wait. Do you mind if I drop you at the church? I ought to hurry."

CHAPTER XXII.

Where's the doctor?" questioned Grandma, who was surprised to see the girl arrive on foot.

Charmian explained, while the old lady uttered an ejaculation.

"Dear me! Appendicitis?—and the deacon and Luella have just had words! Lizzie Baker told me the whole story. Maybe this trouble will bring 'em together again, though it's like as not to drive 'em farther apart, seeing as theirs isn't what you'd call a love match. Well, dearie, you got your letter, didn't you? Did Jimmy tell you what his mother's up and done?"

Charmian laughed, tossed the old coat on a chair and kissed her grandmother.

"He told me everything. I was silly to get worked up, Grandma. Of course Jim wasn't angry. He wrote as soon as he got my letter. Here!" Charmian drew the lengthy epistle from her pocket and tossed it into Grandma's lap. "There's nothing in it that you can't see. It's a darling letter."

"You read it out loud, dearie." Grandma smiled noting with thankfulness that the girl looked her sunny self again. "There's no hurry about supper with the doctor off hunting an appendix. I told you all along that Jim wasn't the boy to bear a grudge. You sit with your feet over the register, Charmian, and get warmed up while you read to me."

Charmian was only too glad to obey, and her grandmother was an attentive audience.

"That sounds most as if Jim was talking, doesn't it?" she commented when the letter was finished. "Read again what he says about his mother. She and Sophie always did look as alike as two peas; but that's where the resemblance ends. George K. used to say that Sophie (who was born half an hour ahead of Sarah), took all the unselfishness there was, and didn't leave any for her twin! George was always a little hard on Sarah because he felt she ruined James Bennett's life. What was it Jim said about them, dearie?"

Charmian found the place and read: "I feel as if I had two mothers all of a sudden. It's a weird sensation, coming into a room and not being sure whether you're confronting your mother or your aunt? Joking aside, the resemblance is really startling, till you get used to it. And how they love each other! Seeing them together has made me wish I had a twin — some one who'd understand me the way Mother and Aunt Sophie seem to understand each other. As for this ranch business—"

"He didn't say, did he," broke in Grandma, "whether he's going to run the farm for 'em? Seems if those two women were pretty old to start any such a thing. Sarah Bennett married late in life. She can't be a day under fifty-six, nor Sophie either."

"Well, naturally," laughed Charmian, "considering that they're twins! No, Jim didn't mention that part of it."

"Nor say what they'd do with the Wickfield house," went on Grandma, exasperated at this oversight. "Men are terribly unsatisfactory about details. I remember a parish meeting thirty-odd years ago when there was an awful fight. I was sick with a cold and couldn't go; and will you believe it, when your grandfather came home all he said was that 'there seemed to be a little unpleasantness'! He never so much as mentioned how Edgar Purdie shook his fist in the face o' the parish clerk (it was Emmy Bascomb's father and as meek a little man as ever lived), and went off slamming the door behind him; or how Mrs. Garfield got so excited she had hysterics right in the vestry and had to be carried out. I never heard a word about it till next day when Lizzie Baker run over to borrow a yeast cake. I wonder, childy, if Jim is coming back to Wickfield."

"And leave his mother running a fruit ranch!" gasped Charmian. "If Jim ever does a thing like that, Grandma, I'll look for the end of the world. It's a wonder Mrs. Bennett let him go to San Francisco that week without her. Oh, dear! how can a woman with a nice son like Jim be such a tyrant?"

"I've been thinking that maybe Sophie will see how the land lies, and give Sarah a good talking to," replied Grandma. "Sarah'll take from her what she wouldn't take from anybody else, even James Bennett, and in her own way she loved him, too. Mrs. Merry was in a minute after Lizzie left, Charmian. She said to tell you they'd had a long letter from Madge, and that the baby'd got another tooth. It does seem strange to think of Madge having a baby, doesn't it? It makes you seem like a—well . . ."

"An old maid?" suggested Charmian, rising. "You may as well get used to the idea, Grandma. An old maid schoolma'am who—"

"Shucks!" interrupted Grandma with indignation. "I guess you don't need to be an old maid unless you want to! What are you going to tell Jimmy about that idle gossip he'd heard talk of?"

Charmian laughed, but she flushed also, and answered: "I think I'll forget that question, Grandma. It's none of his business."

"I guess he thinks 'tis," responded Grandma wisely; then with a sudden change of subject: "I wish you'd make milk toast for supper, dearie. Seems as if I'd sort of relish it tonight. And be sure you leave some cocoa on the stove in the double boiler. The doctor'll be home late, and most frozen, night like this. Look here, Charmian," she added as the girl turned toward the kitchen, "I didn't understand what Jim meant by saying he'd appoint you his deputy in the matter of Towser and Mouser."

"That was merely a bit of sentiment," smiled Charmian. "I'll explain about it later, but now I must hurry with our meal. You want a lamp, Grandma? It's almost dark."

"No, childy. I like to sit here this time o' day and see the lights come on in the kitchen windows, and watch folks hurrying home to supper. Sometimes I can't make out who they are, but I always know they're glad the day's work is done and they're going home. Many's the time I've sat here in the twilight with your grandfather and watched the 'shadows of the evening steal across the sky,' as the vesper hymn says. I'm never lonesome this time o' day as some folks are. I guess it makes me feel the way you felt one night when you were just a mite of a thing and I was putting you to bed. Your mother'd been in the habit of leaving a light turned low in the hall outside your door—sort of to keep you company; but that night she was at a church supper and after you said your prayers I sat down on your little bed and repeated the twenty-third psalm.

"I can see you now, looking up at me so soberly and listening to every word like a grown-up. Well, I kissed you, and gave the bedclothes a last tuck, and said: 'Good-night, childy, I'll leave the light, same as Mother does,' and what do you suppose you answered? You said, just as solemn as anything, 'No, Grandma. The Lord is my shepherd, I shall not want—a light.'"

"Oh, Grandma!" cried the girl, as she visioned the little Charmian of long ago. "You never told me that before."

"Didn't I? Well, I've thought of it enough times, goodness knows. It came into my head the minute you asked if I'd like a lamp. You see, dearie, I'm not afraid of the twilight even though it's a time of memories. . . . . The Lord is my shepherd. I shall not want—a light."

Signatures On the Roof

Copper Plates On Stockholm Town Hall Bear Name Of Donor

Ragnar Ostberg, who has just been made a Royal Academician, is probably the most famous architect in Europe. His fame rests largely on the wonderful town hall which he designed for his native Stockholm, and which has been inspected by visitors from all over the world. It cost nearly a million pounds to build and it was decorated by a remarkable team of artists, which included a prince of the Royal House. The roof is composed of copper plates, each one of which is inscribed with the name of the citizen who paid for it, and the floor of one of the magnificent halls was made by the workmen, on their own initiative, out of odd pieces of marble left over from other building operations.

Hundreds of testimonials received annually prove its effectiveness.

Canadian Goods In British Daily Life

Always Something To Remind People Of Dominion's Products

"What the future holds for Canadian products in the United Kingdom can be judged in the light of today," said Douglas S. Cole, B.Sc., Canadian Trade Commissioner, at Bristol, England, in an interview at Toronto. "The modern Englishman can rise in the morning from a Canadian-made bed on to a Canadian carpet, lather himself with a Canadian shaving brush and Canadian shaving cream, shave with a Canadian razor, come down to breakfast and eat Canadian cereals, Canadian bacon, Canadian eggs, and toast made from Canadian flour, all cooked on a Canadian gas or electric range, and kept wholesome in a Canadian refrigerator, the while he reads a newspaper printed on Canadian paper. He can drive in a Canadian car to an office equipped with Canadian furniture, dictate letters on Canadian paper, which he signs with a Canadian fountain pen. He reduces his weight by a Canadian massage roller, plays racquets in Canadian rubber shoes, tries to look graceful on Canadian skates, and drives his doctor to starvation with Canadian apples.

Utilities Show Profit

The City of Regina utilities showed a new surplus, according to the statement of S. B. Nelles, city comptroller, of $131,674 for the first five months of 1930, after deducting administration charges of $7,083, while the Electric Light and Power Department showed a surplus revenue of $139,507, the Water Department, a profit of $11,391, and the Street Railway, a deficit of $12,140.

CHILDREN CRY FOR IT—

CHILDREN hate to take medicine as a rule, but every child loves the taste of Castoria. And this pure vegetable preparation is just as good as it tastes; just as bland and just as harmless as the recipe reads.

When Baby's cry warns of colic, a few drops of Castoria has him soothed, asleep again in a jiffy. Nothing is more valuable in diarrhea. When coated tongue or bad breath tell of constipation, invoke its gentle aid to cleanse and regulate a child's bowels. In colds or children's diseases, you should use it to keep the system from clogging.
