VOL. XXIII. CRESTON, B. C., FRIDAY, APRIL 10, 1931 No. 3

Death Summons George Strong

Came to Canyon in 1919 from Peace River District—Lived in Creston of Late—Born in Lindsay, Ontario, 64 Years Ago

Quite a wellknown resident at both Canyon and Creston passed away on Sunday morning at his home in Creston in the death of George Strong, whose end came after a few days illness, although deceased had been in poor health for some time past.

The late Mr Strong, who was in his 64th year, was a native of Lindsay, Ontario, where he remained until quite a young man, when he removed to Coldwater, Ontario, in which town he was married in 1888, and a few years later came west and for a time was at Vanguard; Sask., from where he moved into the Peace River country, where he remained until 1919, when his health compelled him to seek a less rigorous climate' and he came into the Canyon district in the spring of that year. After occupying the A. R. Swanson place for a time he secured a place of his own and continued to live there until 1927 when they moved into Creston to take over the Commercial Hotel, which they conducted for two years, and then moved to Lethbridge, Alberta. Here they stayed a little over a year, moving back to Creston in the summer of 1930, and taking up residence in their new home on Barton Avenue.

The funeral took place on Tuesday afternoon from Trinity United Church, with interment in Creston cemetery. Rev. R. E. Cribb was in charge and there were many friends of deceased out to pay a last tribute of respect. The pallbearers were all old Canyon friends, F. Knott, A. J. Anderson, H. Taylor, D. Rogers, J. G. Wearmouth, A. Halstead.

There was a large turnout of friends of the deceased and family, particularly from Canyon, where the late Mr. Strong took an active part in community life and was prominently identified with all the activities of the United Church. At the church favorite hymns of the deceased were sung, "Nearer My God to Thee," 'Lead Kindly Light," and "Rock of Ages," and a solo number, "Open the Gates of the Temple," was feelingly rendered by Miss Frances Knott.

In addition to a widow, deceased leaves four daughters, Mrs. Smith of Vancouver; Mrs. Swanson of Vermilion, Alberta; Mrs. Fennessey of Cranbrook, and Mrs. Cook of Calgary, Alberta; and two sons, William of Mossleigh, Alberta; and Norman of Canyon, who will have the sympathy of all in their sad bereavement.

Creston Lutheran Church Dedicated

Dedicatory Exercises in Charge of Pastor—Rev. C. Janzow of Nelson Preaches Dedication Sermon—Attendance is Large

To the strains of that appropriate and favori e hymn,

"Open now thy gates of beauty;
Zion, let me enter there,
Where my soul in joyful duty
Waits for thee who answer prayer,"

a timely invocation and the reading of the equally appropriate psalm, "I was glad when they said unto me Let us go into the house of prayer," by the pastor, Rev. C. Baase, St. Paul's Evangelical Lutheran Church at Creston was on M nday evening dedicated and offcially opened for worship.

There was a good turnout of Lutherans and a sprinkling from the other denominations in town. In the exercises the pastor was assisted by Rev. C. C. Janzow of Nelson, who preached the dedicatory sermon, and by Mr. Hamann, also of Nelson, who presided at the organ.

The dedicatory exercises were simple but impressive. The prayers were short but meet for such an occasion. The hyms were also carefully chosen and given a hearty rendering, and the address by the Nelson pastor was most appropriate. Along with the usual remarks complimenting the congregation on the success of their efforts in providing the congregation with a suitable place of worship and pointing out their responsibilities, Rev. Mr. Janzow laid special emphasis on the fact that for right living it was most essential that people believe rightly. He entirely disagreed with the samewhat popular idea that it did not matter what people believed. He also insisted that in addition to being taught how to live right it was just as important that the church teach people how to die right.

In the afternoon Rev. Mr. Janzow was the preacher at a service in the German language, which was also well attend d. It was announced that for the present this service in German will be held every Sunday morning at 11, and the English service each Sunday at 7.30 p.m. Sunday school is at 10 a.m.

The new church interior presents a decidedly attractive appearence, although it is of necessity quite a pioneer edifice, having been erected entirely by volunteer labor, with a seating capacity much larger than the exterior appearance might indicate.

Tuesday and Wednesday morning and afternoon and Thursday morning there were a series of pastoral conferences at which church affairs in general were discussed, and at which a doctrinal paper was read by Rev. C. Baase, and one on religious instruction by F. Hamann of Nelson.

The Wednesday evening feature was the pastoral service with communion, at which Rev. C. Janzow preached, and Pastor Baase gave the confessional address.

Due to having been called home due to the death of his father, Rev. A. Wilkening, the Grand Forks pastor, was unable to be present. Rev. C. Thies of Calgary Alcerta, ho was annonnced to preach the dedication sermon, was also prevented from being present.

The Lutheran Church in Creston had its beginning some eight years ago. At that time a number of Lutheran families arrivee from Saskat hewan and settled in the Creston area. After some time they discovered that a minister of their denomination was living in Nelson and called upon him to serve them. At that time the Lutheran congregation had quite a number of adherents, but due to adverse conditions most of the new settlers left the Creston district, the Nickel family and Mr. Strobel being practically the only members who remained to this day.

In recent years the congregation has grown somewhat through the arrival of settlers from the prairie and chiefly through the influx of immigrants. Even in past years the Lutherans have had the services of resident pastors, namely Rev. Appelt and Rev. Spaude. The present pastor served Creston as student-vicar during the school year 1927-28 and was called as regular pastor on the completion of his seminary course. During the greater part of its history the Creston congregation has looked npon Rev. C. Janzow of Nelson as its pastor.

The growth of the congregation has been steady and moderate. During the past the greatest handicap has always been the lack of a public house of worship, hence the members now have great cause for rejoicing. They no longer have to endure the inconvenience which necessarily accompanies worship in private homes. Furthermore the stigma of exclusiveness is removed. Lutherans now have opportunity to offer their message to the public and everyone has an opportunity to attend the services and become acquainted with Lutheran doctrine and worship.

A cordial invitation is herewith extended to the public to attend the Lutheran services. The Lutheran Church is not a proselytizing body. It has no intentions of weaning away from their churches those whose denominational loyalties are fixed. But Lutherans are convinced that their church has a message particularly to the great number of unchurchen people in this country and community,

Regular church worship will be held every Sunday evening at 7.30, and Sund y School at 10 o'clock in the morning Services in the German language are held at 11.00 a.m.

Canyon City

Mr. and Mrs. A. D. Pocnin and daughter, Helen, of Nelson, spent the Eastee weekend at their ranch at Canyon.

Miss Frances Knott, who is teaching at Sandon, is home for the Easter week vacation.

Mrs. W E. Searle, who has spent the past five months on a visit with friends at Pasadena and other California points, arrived home at the end of the week.

Word has just arrived of the birth of a daughter to Mr. and Mrs. Bob Clayton, at Kimberley, on April 1st.

The Ladies' Aid realized a total of $42 at the Easter sale of work, supper and concert at the hall on Monday evening. The programme at the latter was largely by the Sunday school children who were trained by Mrs. Knott.

At their meeting on Saturday night the Farmers' Institute decided to have a St. George's night supper and concert at the hall on April 23rd. Messrs. Kolthammer, Bond and O. M. Samuelson were named a committee to make all arrangements.

Canyon people were out in large numbers at Creston on Tuesday afternoon for the funeral of the late George Strong, who passed away at Creston on Sunday morning. Deceased was a well known resident here from 1919 to 1927, and all will sympathize with Mrs. Strong and family in their bereavement.

Canyon on Tuesday heard with universal sorrow of the untimely death on Monday afternoon of John Walsh, eight-year old son of Mrs. Roberta Walsh, and a grandson of Mr. and Mrs. R. Lowerison, with whom the dead lad has lived. John had gone to Nelson on Thursday for the Easter h. lidays and on Monday he was one of a party of 40 Sunday school children who made the climb of Granite mountain near that city and at a point known as Pulpit rock he missed his footing and fell a distance of 200 feet meeting instant death. The pathetic part of the tragedy was that no one saw him fall and he was not missed until the descent of the mountain had been made on the return home. A search party was immediatley organized, the mountain re-climbed and with the aid of field glasses the body was discovered on the rocks beneath and was immediately recovered and taken to Nelson, where an inquest will be held. Mrs. Lowerison left on Tuesday for Nelson to be with her daughter. The dead lad was one of the most likable pupils at Canyon school and very genuine is the regret felt at his untimely death. Just as we go to press word comes that burial will be at Creston Thursday afternoon.

Where West Leads The East

General recognition is accorded to the fact that the West leads the East in grain and livestock production. It is known that the Western Provinces have a greater railway mileage per capita than the older settled provinces. It is an established and recognized fact that there are more rural telephones per capita in the West than in the East. It is not so well known that the West leads the East by a wide margin in the field of aviation. Yet such is the case as disclosed by the first annual report of Canadian Airways Limited, recently issued.

According to the report of this company, which is an amalgamation of all the large aviation companies in the Dominion, and in which the Canadian Pacific and Canadian National Railways are now largely interested, the amount of air business done in the West far outstrips the volume of Eastern business, and that operating conditions in the West are more favorable with the result that there is less non-productive flying and consequently greater profits here than in the East.

The figures given in this report will prove most illuminating and interesting to western people. They cover twelve months operation of the Eastern lines, and thirteen months operation of the Western lines. It is shown, for example, that the total mileage flown in the East was 754,199 miles, as compared with 1,213,925 miles in the West. Total flying hours in the East were 7,888, but with the Western total 13,137, or almost twice as great.

But it is when one comes to a consideration of the amount and value of the business transacted, and the efficiency in operation, that the ascendency of the West over the East in flynig is most strikingly illustrated. Mail matter carried over Eastern lines amounted to 126,430 pounds, while the corresponding figure for Western lines was 207,483 pounds. Freight and express carried on the mail 'planes in the East was greater than in the West, being 14,971 pounds as compared with only 307 pounds, but freight and express carried on other than mail 'planes tell an entirely different story and reveal the extent to which this form of transportation has been developed in the West. No less than 404,010 pounds of package freight and express was transported by air in the West, as against 82,151 pounds in the East. In other words, the East has not developed this department of air service, apart from the regular mail 'planes, to anything like the extent that has been done in the West.

In passenger traffic, both on mail 'planes and other aerial services, an even more surprising record has been established by the West, showing that our people are becoming air-minded. The number of passengers carried on mail 'planes in the East was 299, and in the West 3,246; on 'planes other than the mail 'planes, 1,447 Eastern people travelled by the air route, while in the West 3,808 chose the same method. Considering the much larger population of the East the fact that 7,054 Western passengers travelled by air as compared with 1,746 in the East speaks eloquently for this Western country.

This Western predominance in the air has no doubt partly accounted for the fact that the West is now regarded as an ideal country for flying operations, and also because of the further fact that distances between points to be reached are much greater in the West than in the East. That the West is well adapted to flying is demonstrated by the figures of mail efficiency contained in the report under review in this article. Out of a scheduled or possible mileage in Eastern Canada of 677,034 miles, only 558,264 miles were actually flown, leaving a lost mileage of 118,770, or only 82.4 per cent of efficiency. In the West, on the other hand, out of a scheduled or possible mileage of 764,578, productive mileage flown totalled no less than 708,544, leaving only 56,034 miles lost and representing an operating efficiency of 92.7 per cent.

The lighted airways of the West, making night flying practicable and safe, and the very fine municipal airports now in existence and being steadily improved, coupled with the excellence of flying conditions in general throughout the prairie country, provide an assurance that air transportation will more and more prove an important factor in the life of Western Canada, and in all probability a greater factor here than in the older sections of the Dominion.

Three Ingredients Needed

A blizzard calls for three ingredients, and must have all of them: cold, high wind, and a heavy snowfall, with the latter not so important as the first two because cold and a high wind to keep the snow in the air can create the impression of a heavy snowfall even when it is comparatively light.

Canada Well Advertised

Descriptive Booklet Was Distributed At Buenos Aires Exhibition

Canada was well advertised at the Buenos Aires exhibition in the Argentine Republic, fifty thousand copies of an artistically-designed booklet descriptive of this country having been sent to the exhibition for distribution. The booklet is written in Spanish and so is the wording on a series of beautiful pictorial blotters that were distributed with it.

The publicity branch of the Department of Trade and Commerce produced the booklet, which is of a quality reflecting credit upon the publicity director, H. E. M. Chisholm. The author does not forget to tell his South American readers that Canadians invented the telephone, originated the idea of standard time, built the first submarine telegraph, made the first electric stove, discovered insulin and did other remarkable things. Many of our own citizens would profit from reading what the blotter has to say about our form of government, nor national resources and the characteristic features of the country."—Toronto Star.

Acids In Stomach Cause Indigestion

Medical authorities state that nearly nine-tenths of the cases of stomach trouble, indigestion, sourness, burning, gas, bloating, nausea, etc., are due to an excess of hydrochloric acid in the stomach. The delicate stomach lining is irritated, digestion is delayed and food sours, causing the disagreeable symptoms which every stomach sufferer knows so well.

Artificial digestents are not needed in such cases and may do real harm. Try laying aside all digestive aids and instead get from any druggist some Bisurated Magnesia and take in water right after eating. This sweetens the stomach, prevents the formation of excess acid and there is no sourness, gas or pain. Bisurated Magnesia (in powder or tablet form—never liquid or milk) is harmless to the stomach, inexpensive to take and is the most efficient form of magnesia for stomach purposes. It is used by thousands of people who enjoy their meals with no more fear of indigestion.

Cracked Ice Is Used To Christen Submarine That Will Cross Arctic Ocean

They used cracked ice to christen the "Nautilus," the reconditioned submarine in which Sir Hubert Wilkins plans to cross the Arctic Ocean this summer.

The cracked ice was contained in a small silver barrel perched on the prow of the vessel. Lady Wilkins yanked a string, and the barrel discharged its eminently symbolical contents—symbolic because the "Nautilus" will attempt to cross the top of the world under ice floes, coming up now and again for air and observations.

The Family Physician.—The good doctor is always worth his fee. But it is not always possible to get a doctor just when you want him. In such cases, common sense suggests the use of reliable home remedies, such as Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil, which is wonderfully effective in easing inflammatory pains and healing cuts, scratches, bruises, and sprains. The presence of this remedy in the family medicine chest saves many a fee.

The Issue In India

Retired Official Gives His Opinion Of the Situation

"I have been in India 46 years and cannot help thinking that most of our troubles are due to the fact that in the past, politicians failed to think out the results of their actions to their logical conclusion," said Field Marshal Sir William Birdwood, who has just retired as commander-in-chief in India, in a speech to the London Devonian Society, England.

"I hope that whatever government is in power will remember that the masses of India are illiterate and inarticulate and will see that the safeguards we read about will be real safeguards; and that those people will not be handed over to the intelligentsia who speak in the name of India without having the same affection for the cultivators of the land as we English people have," the field-marshal added.

LAY PLANS FOR MARKETING OF THE WHEAT CROP

Rome, Italy.—The first steps were taken towards the orderly marketing of the world's next wheat crop. Representatives of Canada, the Argentine, Australia, Bulgaria, Hungary, India, Poland, Rumania, the Soviet Union and Yugo-Slavia met to discuss preliminaries to the summoning of a formal conference where, it is hoped, a definite agreement will be reached for the sale of the 1931-32 crop.

It was upon the motion of Hon. G. Howard Ferguson, Canada's high commissioner in London, England, and the Dominion's chief delegate at the conference, that the production committee adopted the suggestion of a later conference to deal with marketing the crop which is to come. Mr. Ferguson's motion read, "That this conference, recognizing the importance of orderly marketing of the export surpluses of wheat and being convinced the present low price of wheat on the world's markets is a serious factor in the present economic depression, is of the opinion that it is desirable that delegates of countries exporting wheat should meet together as soon as possible to organize on an international basis the exportation of the crop of the year 1931-32."

The motion concluded by suggesting that the United States also be invited to take part in the discussion. One suggestion is that the deliberations should be held in Canada early next summer.

The proposed conference covers a broader field than was originally suggested. As the work of the present wheat conference has proceeded so many divisions of opinion have been revealed that anything like a general agreement among the 46 nations represented appears to be hihgly improbable. The gulf between the overseas countries and the European wheat-exporting countries seems to be wide.

The Danubian countries again sought tariff preferences in Europe for their wheat. But to this serious objection was again made and proposals involving rationing of production met with like objections. The overseas exporting countries discussed orderly marketing, apart from the conference proper, and encountered so much success that approaches were made to the Dominion countries. They agreed to join a conference to be held next year and the Soviet delegation did likewise, making their agreement, however, conditional on the approval of the Soviet Government.

Then came the formal motion in the wheat production committee by Canada's chief delegate. The committee approved the motion and representatives of all the producing countries concerned met to discuss preliminaries.

Montreal.—A Dominion-wide contest in novel writing came to an end with the announcement that Raymond Knister, of Port Dover, Ontario, has been awarded first prize of $2,500 for his winning manuscript. The book will be published by the sponsors of the contest, an Ottawa publishing company.

Second prize of $1,500 went to Marcus Adaney, of Toronto, and Ella B. Wallis, of Calgary, won the third prize of $1,000. All three books will be published in the near future.

Several manuscripts were thought to be of such merit that the contest judges recommend that they be published also. Included in this latter group were books by Laura Goodman Salverson, Port Arthur, Ontario; Francis Owen, Edmonton; and Isobel E. Henderson, Winnipeg.

The object of the contest was to demonstrate to Canadian readers that 100 per cent. Canadian books rank as high as those published anywhere, and that there are many potential authors in the Dominion.

U.S. Airplane Crash

Knute Rockne, Notre Dame Football Coach, Is Killed

Bazaar, Kas.—Knute Rockne, Notre Dame football genius, plunged to his death with five fellow-passengers and two pilots on a Transcontinental and Western Air Inc. air liner in the mid-Kansas grazing country near here.

The 'plane California-bound from Kansas City, crashed on a farm, killing all eight occupants instantly. Witnesses said the craft, flying through clouds and fog lost a wing in the air and hurtled to the ground like a crippled bird.

The body of Rockne was identified by W. L. White, son of William Allen White, of the Emporia Gazette. The famous coach boarded the 'plane just before its departure from Kansas City, in mist and rain, at 9:15 a.m. He was bound for Hollywood to complete arrangements for making talking pictures.

Was Secretary To Royalty

Lord Stamfordham Passes Away At Advanced Age

London, England.—Lord Stamfordham, secretary to royalty for the past 50 years and said to have possessed more state secrets than any other man, died recently. He was 81 years old.

Born Arthur Bigge, the son of a country vicar, Lord Stamfordham was private secretary to Queen Victoria and at the time of his death was private secretary to the King. He was often referred to as "the man behind the throne."

On March 11, Lord Stamfordham underwent an operation but this resulted in little improvement in his condition.

The private secretary is survived by two daughters, the Hon. Mrs. Victoria Eugenie Adeane, and the Hon. Margaret Bigge. Lady Stamfordham died in 1922.

Appointed Lieut.-Governor

Lt.-Col. Munroe Receives Appointment For Saskatchewan

Ottawa, Ont.—Lt.-Col. Hugh Edwin Munroe, M.D., O.B.E., of Saskatoon, has been appointed Lieutenant-Governor of the province of Saskatchewan. Announcement of the appointment was made by Premier R. B. Bennett. He succeeds Hon. H. W. Newlands. Dr. Munroe is one of the "old timers" of the North West Territories and a prominent medical practitioner of Saskatoon. He has a distinguished war record.

Mr. Newlands retired from office on December 31, 1930. At that time Sir Frederick Haultain was appointed administrator of the province.

Because of illness of Sir Frederick, an acting administrator was named, Mr. Justice J. T. Brown, of the Saskatchewan Court of King's Bench, now holding this post.

Earnings of workers in the iron and steel industry of England now average $12.00 a week.

Reports Say Ottawa Plans Domestic Loan

To Cover Obligations Maturing Within Two and a Half Years

Ottawa, Ont.—While there are many rumors of government financing to provide for large maturities within the next few years, no decision as to the plan to be adopted has been reached. Canada paid off her $25,000,000 maturity in New York, April 1, out of money raised last year. This loan was one of the first war loans, and was floated in 1916.

In respect to the very large obligations which will mature within the next two and a half years there has been no official pronouncement. These total more than a billion dollars. It is the general impression that the government proposes to utilize domestic resources and that a large loan will be floated in Canada. Premier Bennett, in his capacity of finance minister, has the matter in hand, and the policy of the government will be announced in due course.

Wheat Stocks Less

Visible Wheat Supply Shows Big Decrease Over Last Year

Winnipeg, Man.—Decreasing supply of Canadian visible wheat was down at end of March to 183,489,397 bushels—more than 12,000,000 less than jammed elevators of North America a year ago. According to a report issued by E. A. Ursell, statistician to the Board of Grain Commissioners, stocks declined 2,135,966 bushels during the week ended March 27.

Ocean shipments of Canadian wheat fell off slightly, totalling 2,906,430, as compared with 3,737,809 bushels for the previous week. Notably, the clearance decrease was at United States ports on the Atlantic, where shipments totalled only 977,000 bushels. From Canadian Pacific ports shipments were 1,477,761 bushels. Clearances from Canadian Atlantic ports were 531,669 bushels.

Earthquake Takes Heavy Toll

City Of Managua, In Nicaragua, Is In Ruins

S.S. City of Panama, in Corinth Harbor, Nicaragua.—The City of Managua is in ruins and there are hundreds of bodies, Hoke Palmer, United States Marine Corps aviator, said on his arrival here, after witnessing the results of the earthquake which devastated Managua. The city was still on fire when he left, he said.

Palmer had come over here from Managua to scrape up all the medical supplies he could get from this ship and from any other source where they were available.

"The whole town is in ruins," he said. "I don't think there's a building left standing, and there are hundreds of bodies buried.

"The heaviest toll taken was in the penitentiary, which collapsed, and looked as though it had been ground to powder.

"Fire roared through the wreckage, and there was a panic in no time. Martial law was declared immediately.

"The railroad is destroyed, and all the wires are down. You can't get any word outside except by 'plane to Corinth, and then possibly by radio.

"When my 'plane left Managua the marines had the rescue work well under way."

Ripped Fabric Caused Dirigible Disaster

Commission Gives Report On Crash Of R-101

London, England.—The disaster to the dirigible, R-101, which stunned the world when it came down in flames on a hillside near Beauvais, France, last October, killing 48 men, has been attributed to mechanical causes, and not to human failure. The report of the Simon Commission, which made a long study of the disaster, and just made public, attributed the disaster mainly to "a substantial loss of gas in very bumpy weather."

The report considered that it was probable that the forepart of the ship's envelope was ripped. "Something of this sort happened on a previous occasion and no amount of care could assure that it would not happen again," the report said, emphasizing the possibility of mechanical failure in dirigibles as at present constructed.

The commission refused to take a position one way or another regarding the effects of the tragedy on the future of lighter-than-air navigation.

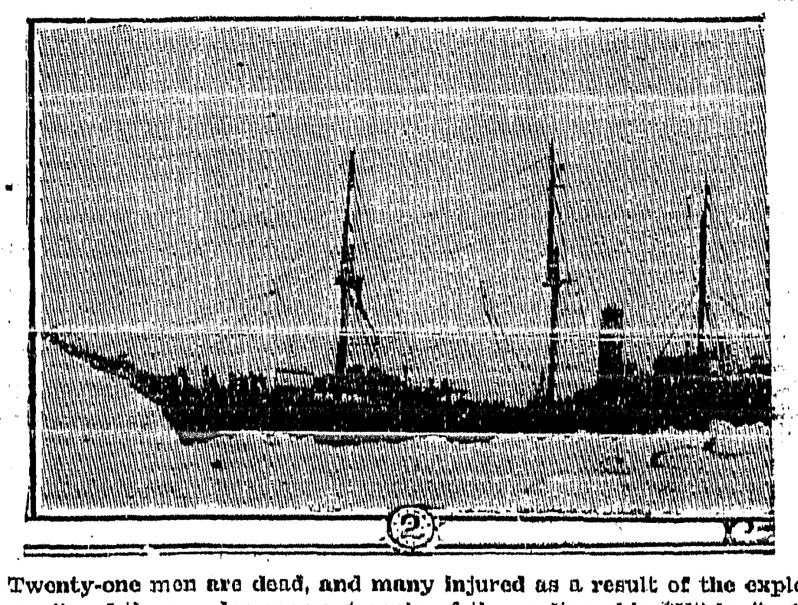
Look For Better Prices

Believe Canadian Wheat Prices Due For a Rise Shortly

Toronto, Ont.—Belief that Canadian wheat prices are due for a rise shortly, was expressed by C. W. Peterson, of the Farm and Ranch Review, Calgary, Alberta. Europe, contended Mr. Peterson, who is visiting the city, could not continue to produce wheat at present prices and when they did advance their prices the Canadian price would also increase.

United States, he thought, would soon disappear from the wheat market and would become purely an importing country.

SEALING VESSEL EXPLOSION



Twenty-one men are dead, and many injured as a result of the explosion supposedly of the powder compartments of the sealing ship "Viking" off the coast of Newfoundland. The photograph shows the "Viking." It was in the "Viking" that Fridtjof Nansen, Norwegian explorer, made his first journey north.

WILL MAINTAIN CLOSE CHECK ON EXPENDITURES

Ottawa, Ont.—"Every department must live within their appropriations; if not, then some gentlemen are going to lose their positions," declared the prime minister in the House of Commons. The House was in committee of supply considering supplementary estimates and had under examination an appropriation amounting to "505,510.46 to cover unprovided items 1929-1930," as per auditor-general's report. The item finally passed.

Mr. Bennett traced the growth of this annual amount, and asserted that if parliamentary control over appropriations was to be maintained, then discipline must be applied or the whole system would be wrecked. The amounts covered by the item had already been paid, and all that was being asked was merely to legalize the expenditures and begin the new fiscal year on April 1 with a clean sheet.

"I agree with the prime minister as to the desirability of exercising the closest possible control over public officials," declared Mr. Mackenzie King, leader of the opposition, but the prime minister should recall that he (Mr. Bennett) had had this for eight months of "the fiscal year, while the previous administration had had only four months. In view of that the responsibility for the over-expenditures lay with the government. The items, which had appeared regularly every year, were due, not to overpayment, but to unforeseen expenditures, which did not imply negligence on the part of anyone.

The question of whether the control of the auditor-general began before or after the payment of accounts was raised, the prime minister contending that this official's duty was to check the accuracy of the amounts and the authority for the expenditures. The money, he said, was paid before the auditor-general had a chance. Hon. Charles Stewart (Liberal, Edmonton West), declared that the prime minister would find it the most difficult thing in the world to close out accounts at the end of the fiscal year.

Mr. King recalled that in 1921-1922 the outgoing Conservative government had left an amount of $2,055,630.86 to be accounted for in the corresponding item for that year. Compared with the sum now under consideration it could be seen, he said, how the last administration had exercised care and caution. The prime minister observed that special reasons had existed then, the magnitude of the sum being due to activities in connection with unemployment relief.

The situation was, said the prime minister, that the present government, in an endeavor to have all things squared away for the beginning of the fiscal year, was seeking authority for the payment of these accounts now instead of placing them in the next supplementary estimates for 1931-1932.

"I am making an endeavor to see that hereafter there will be no over-expenditures by deputy ministers in the administration of their departments."

It might be that his conceptions of his obligations as minister of finance may not be realized, continued Mr. Bennett, but he desired to make it clear that the appropriations passed by the House must not be exceeded.

Money Awaits Court Ruling

London, England.—Sums of money which the post office department obtained by opening letters sent from England to Ireland for tickets in the Irish hospital sweepstake are being held up, pending a ruling by the British home office on what disposition to make of the currency. The sweepstake is not legal here.

Washington, D.C. — Sir Ronald Lindsay, the British ambassador will visit Canada during the latter part of April. It is expected Sir Ronald, paying his first semi-official visit to the Dominion, will leave Washington about April 28, to go on to Ottawa, Toronto and Montreal.

CRESTON, B.C., FRIDAY, APRIL 10

A Wise Appointment

Everyone in this section will heartily approve of the action of the department at Ottawa in naming Fred Ryckman indian agent for East Kootenay, official announcement of this appointment coming to hand a few days ago.

Fred started with the service in 1912 as constable, and a few years later to his work was added that of farm instructor, while the past two or three years, due to the indifferent health of the former agent, the late E. H. Small, Mr. Ryckman has pretty well taken care of the whole work attached to the office—and made a mighty good job of it.

Since the latter days of the late R. L. T. Galbraith, Fred is the only official thal has taken any real active interest in the indians, and has accomplished much good work, particularly along agricultural lines with the indians on the Shuswap and Windermere reserves near Invermere, where more than a few of them are now self supporting and carrying on farm work on really creditable lines.

If the new agent is given some latitude in picking his successor as constable. the indians, the department and the public interested will find Fred Ryckman the right man in the right place, as the old saying goes.

The Vegetable Situation

Now that all uncertainity has disappeared in connection with botn the quantity and quality of the fruit and vegetable marketing service at the disposal of local growers this year, the time appears to be opportune to draw attention to a line of production that ought to prove reasonably profitable, and one that at the present time is certainly not overdone.

For some years past the Review has noticed that in the fall season it has been necessary for all local selling agencies to ship in considerable quantities of onions which have to be provided in order to hold the trade for mixed cars of fruit and vegetables.

We take it onions have never found favor here due to the uncertainity of the moisture supply, but now that all the Erickson, Canyon and east Creston area have an abundance of irrigation water it should be possible to grow onions of a quality to replace those that have hitherto been shipped in from the Okanagan.

In addition to onions the Review has always been given to understand that the Valley has invariably been short on other lines of vegetables, and due this scarcity selling agencies have often been forced to pass up orders for mixed cars.

In order that any such lack in field crops can be intelligently remedied selling agencies might well make some announcement as to just how the local vegetable situation stands.

Will Remedy be Sought?

"Disgusted Ratepayer," and his full brother, "Wise Owl," to say nothing of the anvil chorus generally, severally and jointly have had much to say of the unsatisfactory service, and poor return for the money spent, by the public works department in this section the past few months.

And what we have heard of late is probably no worse than the things that have been said along this line for at least the past two years, and even longer. With the unemployment situation more acute it is but natural road expenditures, particularly, should be a favorite topic of conversation.

But now all are convinced that not only have we received much less than a dollar's worth of highway betterment for the many hundreds of dollars expended, to say nothing of a considerable waste by the constructing of roads that certainly do not give the greatest good to the greatest number of the travelling public, what are we going to do about it.

About a year from now, under ordinary circumstances, we should have a chance to ditch the present govern ent and try out another one, and certainly a change could hardly be for the worse, but after all will government control of highway matters ever be satisfactory.

Along with a change of government (so highly desirable in so many respects), should we not also have a change of system, and the change of system one that gives local control in such matters by way of the quite long forgotten district municipality?

There may have been a time in Creston Valley's history when government supervision was all we could afford, but after what has been said and seen in connection with our highways and bridges in the past few years, surely no one is of the opinion that our own citizens spending our own money, and directly responsible for such expenditures, could have made a poorer showing.

After seven years experience Creston village has found municipal government a splendid investment. Surely if the village can run its own affairs so satisfactorily the outlying districts should be equally competent.

Under present conditions we seem to be exemplifying the old saying of saving at the spigot and wasting at the bunghole. Now that we have been saved from the evils of central selling would it not be a good time to devote the same sort of energy to secure deliverance from the equally unsatisfactory central distribution of road monies, with its far more unsatisfactory control of supervision of expenditure.

With bread retailing at five loaves for a quarter at weekends the sage of Sirdar can't just refrain from remarking that this is about the best Creston can hope for in the way of realization on the main feature of its supplication to Deity, "Give us this day our daily bread."

WHY FAT MEN STAY FAT

"The trouble with me, and I guess this applies to 99 out of every 100 men who are putting on weight, I didn't have the energy or "pep" to keep it off. Lost all interest in any healthy activity and just lazed around accumulating the old pounds, until I got that "Kruschen feeling."

Start taking Kruschen Salts—that's the common-sense way to reduce—but don't take them with the idea that they possess reducing qualities in themselves.

This is what they do—they clean out the impurities in your blood by keeping the bowels, kidneys and liver in splendid working shape, and fill you with vigor and tireless energy.

As a result, instead of planting yourself in an easy chair every free moment and letting flabby fat accumulate, you feel an urge for activity that keeps you moving around doing the things you've always wanted to do and needed to do to keep you in good condition.

Kruschen Salts are the up-to-date Fountain of Youth. Take one-half teaspoon in a glass of hot water to-morrow morning and every morning—be careful of the foods you eat—take regular moderate exercise—then watch the pounds slide off.

FREE TRIAL OFFER

If you have never tried Kruschen—try it now at our expense. We have distributed a great many special "GIANT" packages which make it easy for you to prove our claim for yourself. Ask your druggist for the new "GIANT" 75c. package.

This consists of our regular 75c. bottle together with a separate trial bottle—sufficient for about one week. Open the trial bottle first, put it to the test, and then, if not entirely convinced that Kruschen does everything we claim it to do, the regular bottle is still as good as new. Take it back. Your druggist is authorised to return your 75c. immediately and without question. You have tried Kruschen free, at our expense. What could be fairer? Manufactured by E. Griffiths Hughes, Ltd., Manchester, Eng. (Estab. 1756). Importers: McGillivray Bros., Ltd., Toronto.

WORLD HAPPENINGS BRIEFLY TOLD

The next session of congress will probably see restriction of immigration from Canada to about 4,000 annually.

A general election in Britain before the end of the present year was predicted in an address by S. K. Radcliffe, British journalist.

The visa fee for Canadians going into China has not been increased so far, it was learned at the Chinese consulate at Ottawa.

A visit to Canada by Lord Jellicoe, as a delegate to the British Empire Service League meeting at Niagara Falls, is expected to take place in August.

THE PRODIGAL SON

Golden Text: "There is joy in the presence of the angels of God over one sinner that repenteth."—Luke 15. 10.

Lesson: Luke 15.

Devotional Reading: Isaiah 51.1, 2, 6-11.

Explanations and Comments

The Parable Of the Prodigal Son; the Son Sinning and In Want, verses 11-16.—As we first see the prodigal son, he is a picture of supreme selfishness. He demands from his father the portion of his property that would legally be his, and upon receiving it he betakes himself to a far country.

"Every one of us is making some demand upon life. It may be shouted from the housetops for all the world to hear, or advertised in every word and act of our life. The whole cry of some men is 'Give me, Give me!' Never mind the price. Never mind what it costs of the finer things,—the love, the honor, the joy of a clean soul, the pain of others. 'Give me the portion of goods that falleth to me.'" —James Reid.

How far will selfishness carry one if he follows it to the end? It carries the prodigal steadily downward. In the far country the wayward boy has his reckless fling. He becomes a spendthrift and a reprobate—he wastes his substance with riotous living. He loses his fine feelings, his friends, his good food, his good garments, and at last he comes to a field and the company of swine. Even the husks or pods of the carob tree given the swine are welcomed as food, for he is in sore want.

Riotous living may have for us no lure, but we may be guilty, nevertheless, of squandering our portion, be it youth, talents, education, time, opportunity, life.

The Son Coming To Himself, verses 17-19.—Referring to Swan's great picture of the Prodigal Son in the Tate Gallery, London, England, W. L. Watkinson said: "It is a masterpiece. The prodigal son, himself, is a very melancholy figure, and as for the swine they are simply fiendish, most diabolical beasts. But what struck me most of all is that the great painter had put in a few dabs of red. That is the poetic touch. In his dark cartoon Swan has painted in a few red poppies." There is a bright spot in the dark picture of the parable—the prodigal "comes to himself."

The Return and the Father's Forgiveness, verses 20-24.—The prodigal immediately carries out his high resolve. He returns in rags and tatters, a gaunt and unkempt vagabond.

"It is often a long journey from a resolution to its realization. The journey is frequently so long that it is never completed, and the resolve never becomes a reality. This is true because in so many instances the good resolution has nothing to back it up except a tainted life, and a weakened will. In the will of the prodigal there was still life and power."

We can picture him as he travels the long weary stretches back to his home, rehearsing in his mind the appeal he proposes to make there. How will his father receive him? He has ventured on no greater hope than to be received as a hired servant. But his father's love is far larger than he dreams. While he is yet afar off his father sees him and is moved with compassion; he runs to meet and kiss him.

"Yet a great way off he saw me, ran to kiss me as I came;
As I was my father loved me, loved me in my sin and shame."
—Terstiegen.

Discounts Russian Wheat Menace

Predicts That Within Five Years There Will Be a World Clamor For Wheat

The dark shadow of Russia on the wheat marketing picture will vanish gradually.

Within five years, there will be a world clamor for Alberta wheat.

Such were two of the main points in an optimistic address, delivered by Premier J. E. Brownlee, at the annual banquet of the Alberta Association of Professional Engineers in Edmonton. At the time he was replying to the toast to "The Province of Alberta."

Declaring that Russia was at the lowest margin upon which human life survived, Mr. Brownlee said it was evident that the country would move to higher standards of living.

Queer Place For Chapel

Four Bridges In England Have Church On Them

Wakefield's historic bridge over the River Calder—one of the four bridges in England to have a chantry chapel built upon it—is to be relieved of much of its traffic by the erection of a new bridge near by.

Such a bridge has long been necessary, since the present one is much too narrow to accommodate the heavy stream of traffic flowing between Leeds and Sheffield. The present bridge is to remain with its famous chapel in its historic position. The chapel has been used as a bacon factory, an old clothes shop, a library, a dairy, a corn factor's office, a jail and, since its restoration in 1842, as a church.

Delegation May Bring Better Trade Relations

Increased Business With Argentine May Result From Visit

The visit of the Canadian trade delegation has aroused the press of Buenos Aires to comment very favourably on the prospects of closer trade relations between the two countries.

It has even been suggested that negotiations be initiated for a mutual understanding between the Argentine and Canada on the all-important question of marketing wheat. Both countries, it is pointed out, would greatly benefit by such a move, although a basis of any such agreement has not yet been suggested.

Cordial discussions took place over a week-end between members of the Canadian delegation and representatives of the Argentine Government. Arising out of these discussions, it is confidently anticipated more profitable future business will result for both countries.

Train Smashed Car But Driver Escaped With Minor Injuries

Motorists who race locomotives to grade crossings seem to be blessed sometimes with an amazing good fortune. The driver of an automobile in the Southern States, recently was hit amidships by a yard engine. His life was saved by little short of a miracle. The locomotive crushed the wheels of his automobile, the chassis of the car dropped to the railroad tracks, and the automobile and driver were pushed along the track at a good rate of speed for more than 150 feet. The driver escaped with minor cuts and bruises. He collected the spare parts of his automobile, and aided by the railroad wrecking crew managed to get his smashed motor car to a vacant lot.

"Oh, no you don't!" broke in Gay hurriedly. "You don't see at all. I suppose I'm horrid. Perhaps I'm jealous because I can't sing with you as she can. I've always wished that I could sing. But I'm sorry I said anything if you've misunderstood me."

Her voice trembled, and Nick drew her suddenly close.

"Sometimes, dear old girl, you're just plain foolish. What's a voice, compared with the thing that makes you take off your shoes and stockings and go wading with a fellow? I don't say I'd want to wade every minute, or that I don't like to see your feet in those smart new pumps you're wearing; but neither could we go through life eternally bellowing duets. That's right—laugh! If anyone's been idotic it's the lady in my arms. Won't she admit it?"

"I suppose I am; but somehow, when I watched you tonight and saw how—how terribly attractive you are——"

"Have you just found it out?" Nick arose, laughing, and lifted her with him. "In any case don't let it worry you, because you're the only woman of my acquaintance who's sufficiently astute to discover the pleasing fact. That's a corking moon, my dear. I could sit here all night; but as the sober father of a family that's liable to wake early, I prescribe a few hours of sleep. Let's go up."

It was next morning that Angela's guests departed. Halliday, in an endeavour to appease his wife for what he knew she considered his unpardonable conduct in using her room for little Martha, accompanied them to the station; checked their trunks; and was the genially thoughtful host to the last minute. When the train pulled out he walked in silence to the automobile, and assisted Angela to the place beside him.

"Shall we go straight home, or would you like to ride for a few miles? It's a splendid day."

Angela laughed.

"How polite and considerate we are all of a sudden! It's a long time since you've asked me to ride with you, my dear."

Her tone was sarcastic, but Halliday refused to take offense, though he did not speak till they had left the town behind and entered a stretch of road that led through the pine woods. He drew a deep breath then, and stopped the car.

"Aren't these pines wonderful? I wish we had a lunch and could stay all day. Would you like to get out and follow that path a way?"

"I certainly should not, in these shoes. They pinch like anything. I never was one to enjoy prowling in the woods, you know."

"There was a time," he began, when with an impatient gesture she interrupted:

"Oh, then! What do you expect of a girl at a time like that? I was merely following your lead—doing the thing I knew would attract you. Did you expect me to keep it up? I can't see that you've continued trying to please me as you did in those days."

"What about this last week?"

He spoke evenly, and she flushed.

"I suppose that's a criticism of my friends. You always do criticize them. I'll have you know that the Myers are worth cultivating. They've got money to burn—oil wells in Oklahoma. They have a magnificent place in Pasadena, and have asked me to visit them next winter; but because they don't happen to like the things that you like, I can see that you scorn them."

"Angela," said her husband quietly, "do you enjoy these scenes you so often thrust upon us?"

She shrugged and said: "So the fault is always mine?"

"I'm afraid it is, my dear, for when I unwittingly arouse your anger I am sorry."

"Unwittingly? There've been times when you've goaded me to it!"

"I know. I'm sometimes hateful; but I'm trying to do better. Won't you help?"

She looked at him, puzzled.

"What do you want to get out of me?" she asked.

He sighed, and would have started the car had not she stopped him.

"Look here—if it's about having that child come back to the house you can save your breath. We'll settle it here and now. I hate to look at her. It reminds me of that awful ride in the rain, and how terrible she looked lying across my lap in those dirty, blood-stained clothes. Why her ears weren't even clean, nor her finger nails! I can't forget it. I wouldn't touch her for a hundred dollars. It was ridiculous your bringing her here. As for your sending her to the Hastings', I should think you'd be ashamed to ask a favor of such mere acquaintances."

"I consider them more than acquaintances. I saw a good deal of them while you were gone; but in any case I shouldn't have hesitated to ask a thing like that of Mrs. Hastings. She was glad to do it as I was glad to open my house to the child whom you had hurt."

"Well, she's not hurt now. There's no reason for keeping her any longer."

"There's an excellent reason. You will laugh, I know, but I happen to have grown fond of the little thing."

Genuine surprise lit Angela's face.

"You!—fond of that little mongrel! It's laughable. What would your Back Bay mother have thought of that?"

Halliday's eyes gleamed ominously, and his lips tightened.

"Isn't it something new for you to consider my mother's viewpoint on any subject? And I shall ask you not to refer to the little girl in those unpleasant terms."

"Very well; but if you expect me to vacate my room——"

"I don't ask that; but there's an unoccupied guest room, isn't there?"

"And you mean to continue indefinitely paying a trained nurse to look after that impossible child?"

"That won't be necessary much longer. We can get someone else, though Julie is fond of children and would be glad to help when help is needed. Martha does a good deal for herself, though she's such a baby. She hasn't been used to the tender care of the pampered rich."

"And for her own good she'd better not get used to it now," said Angela, her anger rising. "How long, may I ask, do you plan to keep the waif?"

"Always—unless my wife makes it impossible."

"Well, she does."

"In what way?"

"You can choose between us—that's all."

"You don't mean that, Angela."

"I never meant anything more. Why, you'll be adopting her legally next!"

"I had thought of that," Halliday admitted.

"Do you realize what you are saying? You adopt her legally, and at your death she gets the better part of your estate. Do you call that fair—a mere State ward who comes from the very dregs of the earth?"

All the old cynicism was back in Halliday's face as he replied: "There is no reason to count on my early death, my dear. I come, perhaps unfortunately, of long-lived stock."

"Well, I have told you to choose. If the child comes, I go. That's all."

"No," said Halliday sternly, "that is not all." He faced her, and instinctively she moved away, as if in fear that his words might hurt her physically. "The child is coming—and you are not going. You will not go because, when you think it over, you will see that by doing so you will gain nothing, and lose much. The name of Halliday shall remain unstained. I did not give it to you lightly, and you shall not cast it aside. Where would you stand in a divorce court should I tell the things I could tell? Answer me that."

Her face grew white.

"You—you wouldn't dare."

"I am no coward, Angela."

"But—I am your wife. You—you wouldn't——"

She raised her eyes, and he saw in them a subtle fear of him that was, he knew, the only weapon he possessed. Yet, as past memories flooded back upon him, he hated that weapon as he had never hated anything in life.

"Angela," he said gently, and his face softened, "Angela—my dear—why have we grown so far apart? If I am different from the man you married, what has made me so? Isn't the love we once had for one another worth fighting to preserve? Won't you try—as I have been trying lately, to—to——"

He hesitated, but the plea that should have stirred her heart only brought back his wife's lost poise. This was familiar ground — her ground. She laughed and answered, not caring that her words hurt him cruelly: "So you thought that I loved you? Really, Jim, after those hateful yarns you've written I suspected you of more understanding of humankind—or should I say, my kind?

"As for this quixotic idea about the child—you will end by doing as you please. You always do. But don't expect any help from me. I won't raise a finger for her. It's fortunate we kept the Boston apartment. I'm tired of Bakersville and everyone connected with it."

"Including me?"

Angela only shrugged.

"Thanks," said Halliday, as his mouth dropped into its cynical lines once more. "In that case there is nothing further to say."

He opened the throttle and turned the car toward home.

CHILDREN CRY FOR IT—

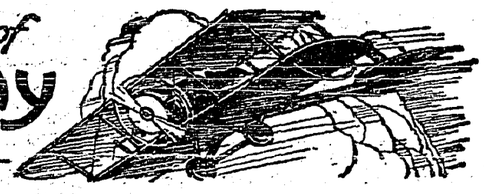
CHILDREN hate to take medicine as a rule, but every child loves the taste of Castoria. And this pure vegetable preparation is just as good as it tastes; just as bland and just as harmless as the recipe reads.

When Baby's cry warns of colic, a few drops of Castoria has him soothed, asleep again in a jiffy. Nothing is more valuable in diarrhea. When coated tongue or bad breath tell of constipation, invoke its gentle aid to cleanse and regulate a child's bowels. In colds or children's diseases, you should use it to keep the system from clogging.

Castoria is sold in every drugstore; the genuine always bears Chas. H. Fletcher's signature.

Fletcher's CASTORIA

The ADVENTURES of CAPTAIN JIMMY and his Dog SCOTTIE



Soon both Scottie and I were sound asleep by our campfire, and after he got those bears off his mind he ceased waking me whenever the blaze went down. Then I began to feel uncomfortably warm. Somehow I choked for breath, and knew I was not comfortable even while partially asleep. Just what the trouble was I could not make out, but I knew that there was something wrong. Scottie then whined and pulled at my sleeve just as I choked and coughed and became fully awake.

For several minutes I could not imagine where I was. My eyes smarted. My throat was parched and even the inside of my nose was irritated. There was the sharp smell of burning wood, and the valley itself was getting thick with smoke. The trees were burning.

When the gasoline tank of the old 'plane had exploded, burning parts had carried over into the woods and smouldered until they finally burst into flame. The fire was no doubt small at first, but gradually grew and spread until early morning, and while all that was happening, Scottie and I snored peacefully but noisily on. Next time you make a fire in the woods, remember how quickly it can spread even from a spark, and be sure it's all out, even away down in the ground, before you go away.

We were now in a bad fix. To the south the valley narrowed down to a sort of notch between the mountains. To the north it ended in a steep mountain slope. On either side were steep mountain sides that were now lost in the heavy smoke. It became hotter and hotter, and more and more choking and suffocating. "Scottie" says I, "I've heard a lot about dog's luck; and, Pup, you'd better get ready to use it because we'll both need plenty of luck before we get out of here. Come! let's go."

By this time the fire seemed to be raging on every side of us. The thick grass of the valley caught fire, towards the notch, and that was the direction in which we had a chance to escape. Heavy brown smoke rolled up from a pasty bog and threatened our only exit.

Hot as it was, I pulled on my leather jacket to protect my back, and my helmet and goggles to save my face and eyes. I snatched up Scottie, and holding him under my coat, started toward the lower end of the valley. The wind fanned the grass fire to furnace heat, and through this we had to go to reach the notch and possibly a stream of water. I turned to back my way through a wall of flame, and as I did so, Scottie slipped from my grasp and in a flash was out from under my coat. The smoke was so thick that it was scarcely possible to see the length of one's arm. I grasped along toward a muffled noise ahead of me, reached out blindly—and found him. With his hair singed, and badly scared, I bundled him under my coat and ran toward the notch lest the fire should get there first and head us off. But by this time I had pretty well lost all sense of direction. Only by means of the slope of the ground could I tell we were making progress toward the bottom of the valley.

My shoes were smoking, and my feet frightfully hot as we plunged forward. Abruptly we were in the edge of the woods and the ground was steeper and more uneven. All about us the fire burned down on us fiercely, threatening to swoop down on us with a sudden backdraft. For you know, a forest fire always brings a big wind with it. The hot air goes up, while cold air is sucked along the ground, blowing the flames with it. That's why a fire in the woods travels so horribly fast.

Showers of sparks made me dance around lively—pulling the collar of my coat up tight about my neck. I plodded on. Even small stones and roots caused me to stumble and I fairly gasped for breath. From time to time Scottie would whimper like a frightened child. "Buck up, old chap," I'd say to him. "Just a bit longer. We've got to make it somehow." For a fact, I think he knew. He'd stop and push his head from under my coat and try to lick my hand. You can't tell me a dog doesn't understand.

Then all of a sudden the smoke cleared out of the woods. One could see quite well for a minute. The wind had changed and fanned strongly in the other direction—I raced forward—every second counted—another moment and a seething wall of flame might rush at express train speed across our path.

Then the ground sloped steeply forward. I stubbed my toe in a branch; lunged; caught at thin air—and in an instant we were sliding down a fiercely burning gulch.

Down, down we went. I grasped a tree root—it burned through and came away in my hand. Then we shot out over a ledge into space. We were falling. What was that below?

When there's too much acid in your stomach, you must force yourself to work, and even pleasures are too great an effort. Appetite lags; the digestion is poor; the whole system suffers.

Laboratory tests show an acid condition is due to errors in our modern diet. But you need not wait to diet your way out of the trouble!

Take a tablespoonful of Phillips' Milk of Magnesia.

This will neutralize the excess acid instantly; make you feel like a new person in just a few moments.

Take a little whenever heartburn, sick headaches, nausea, flatulence, indigestion or biliousness show the digestive system is becoming too acid. Whenever you are taking cold or feel sluggish, weak, constipated, Phillips' Milk of Magnesia has a gentle, laxative action.

Delightful to take. Endorsed by physicians for 50 years and prescribed everywhere for men, women and children. The genuine is always a liquid; it cannot be made in tablet form. It always bears the name Phillips for your protection.
