The most important question now before the Spanish Cabinet is the German submarine campaign and the inroads it has made on Spanish shipping. The matter was brought to a head by the sending of a note to Berlin stating the Spanish Government's intention to seize a German ship among those interned in Spain for each Spanish ship sunk by a German submarine.

A deputation of Denman Island residents came over yesterday morning to protest to H. Stewart M. P, against the manner in which the wharf at Denman Island is being repaired. It appears that the old wharf, which was badly in need of repairs, has been completely torn down and an almost new warehouse thrown into the sea. Now it is proposed to build a smaller wharf and a much smaller ware house in the place of the one destroyed. Those who use the wharf say the old one was much too small to accommodate the shipping that is offered. They want the wharf rebuilt as large or larger than the old one, and one of the deputation says all they wanted was some needed repairs to the old wharf, not money wasted on a new one, and if a new one was to be built, at the side of the old one was the proper place for it.

Most Heat from Fuel

One reason why the Kootenay Range gives the most use of the heat generated from the fuel, is that the grates have ample vents to make perfect combustion in the firebox, which is properly and scientifically proportioned according to the needs of the range.

r the War Re-Organization of Military System

lans for a re-organization of the adian military system and n of the principle of universice on a basis similar to that emed in Switzerland are now being cussed by military men, among om H. H. Mowat, K. C., M. P., has n prominently in favor of the proed change. He has had an experie of many yars in th Canadian volteer force, and is well qualified to ak from the military standpoint, le his position as a member of House of Commons leads additional weight to his views.

Mr. Mowat's main proposal is that e present Canadian system should replaced by a citizen defence force which fit men up to 25 years of age ould receive training for from four six weks in each year, so that even ally every man in he Dominion ould befamiliar with field service d rifle shooting. His argument is at Canada has spent $9,000,000 a r on active malitia and $2,575,000 the permaneot forces without satactory results in preparing the ntry for waar. This works out at 0 per annum per man, while on the er hand Switzerland trained her zen army at a cost of $18 per man l was able to mobilize 510,000 solrs in three days. Every man was his place, well trained and well hipped, the entire organization was nd to be complete and effective d the result was that Switzerland, ile menaced on all sides, was able preserve her independence.

Mr. Mowat is of the opinion that ne-tenths of the people of Canada e in favor of some kind of defence ce for the future, and points out at the other Dominions, Australia, w Zealand and South Africa, have iversal service, while the State of ew York recently passed a bill for e traaining of boys up to 19 years age. He holds that to place compulsorily, all classes of men, rich and oor alike, in the ranks will tend to roduce good comradeship, and break own class prejudices. The more early the government attained to the im of having every fit man enroled, e more democratic and less professional would the army become.

"If opposition be expressed," says e member for Parkdale, "it will be ased upon te eronlous idea that by aining and making men fit for an mergency, the emergency is thereby ricipitatd." H quotes the utterances the German Deputy Chief of Staff owever, to show that their authori es are already at work on preparaons for another war, he adds: 'It essential that the civilized nations the world shall maintain some deence until the aims of the Teuton eople become manifest.

The Part Long Distance Plays
The part the telephone plays in business and social life is often never appreciated until an emergency arises. Recently a case arose where Long Distance was asked to get on the wire a party who was cruising on a yacht in the Gulf of Georgia. It was not known where he was, but the message was extremely urgent. Without detailing the work of the operator, or the number of places called, it is enough to say that the party was located and a message sent out by row boat that he was wanted on the telephone. Then he talked with Vancouver.
On cuch occasions the inestimable value of the telephone is brought home

THE HOLY LAND.

Pte. C. L. Main of the Motor Transport, B. E. F., in Palestine, writes as follows in the Dundas Star:

Lately I have been about a good deal and have seen some very interesting places in the Holy Land. I believe in one of my former letters I was telling you about a trip I had with the signal corps, out around the Dead Sea. We were up around the hills overlooking the Dead Sea, miles from our own men, when quite unexpectedly we ran across aa native visage. You can hardly credit the conditions I am going to quote, but still they are absolutely true in every detail.

The natives may be Arabs, Turks, Bedouins, or Syrians, but I think the term nondescripts is more applicable, for they are all colors, ranging from Sambo Black to almost alternate fair, thus showing a mixture of many tribes, and quite possibly races of people as well.

The natives live in much worse places than farm yard straw stacks, or pig stys. They build their excuses for homes out of all kinds of odds and ends and bits of rubbish, which they collect from time to time while herding their flocks. In one native shake-down you may see canvass, brush-wood, pieces of old bran sack, woven weeds and bunches of grass, piled upon a rough frame work of twisted limbs of trees shaped like you would make a cabbage pit. They leave an opening in the inverted V shaped end and crawl in and out exactly like pigs. Their dress is so fine that you can hardly see in; by that I mean they are almost nude. You would think a hurricane had blown some bits of clothing over the hills and it stuck on here and there just where it happened to hit them. They sure are a sight, and are a perfect example of poverty stricken people in its worst posible form. They were terribly alarmed, in fact the women were almost scared to death when we blew along with our tin lizzie, for I suppose they never saw one in their lives before and no doubt will never see one again. They looked as though they expected the world to come to an end and that they were all doomed to eternal destruction. I couldn's help but think when I saw all the women and kids curled up like so many turnips on logs outside their native hauts abuot half asleep until I hooted the hooter on the car, what a fast time they were having. Guess they live about every time a Ford appears on the scene, which is about once every 200 years. The men were busy herding their flocks and it was a common sigh to see the shepherd with his staff and dogs attendingto some 200 or 300 sheep and a few goats.

Of course the goats were only there as a natural protection for the sheep. We couldn't speak to the men for every time we went anywy near they ran like deers. I honesty believe they thought we were real demons. Do you know, we saw the women and kide eating grass just as though they were out to pasture. I was puzzled to know until I saw them grazing, what they lived on I can understand and believe now that Nebuchadnezzar did actually live like the beasts of the field, for you see in some parts of this far-famed land that it is customary to do so.

BRAVE SOLDIERS.

Sacrificed Their Lives in an Attempt to Save the Colors.

In days gone by the Zulus were the boldest fighters among all the natives of South Africa, and it was not until they had been defeated in several battles that they would live in peace with white people.

In 1878 15,000 of the Zulus attacked and killed a regiment of British soldiers, and a most heroic deed was the attempt made by three British soldiers to save the two flags, or colors, belonging to the regiment.

When it was seen that the Zulus were so many that there was no hope of keeping them at bay the colonel of the British regiment called to a young officer whose name was Lieutenant Melvill and said, "You will take charge of the colors, Melvill, and try to get away from here."

The lieutenant saluted and took into his hands the two colors of his regiment. Then, with another officer and a soldier, all mounted on horses, he suddenly dashed away with his precious burden.

They were at once seen by the keen sighted Zulus, however, and after a long chase the three gallant Englishmen, fighting to the last, were killed by the enemy.

Some time afterward one of the flags was found near a rocky stream, where the heroes had fought and died, and it was taken to England and presented to Queen Victoria.

And in memory of the three brave soldiers who had died while defending it the queeen placed a wreath of immortelles on the staff which held the flag.—London Mail.

Paganini's Cab.

On awakening one morning at his hotel in Vienna, Paganini, the celebrated violinist, was informed that the cabman whom the previous evening he had employed to drive him to the concert hall where he was playing was waiting to see him. On being admitted to his presence the man, after having advanced poverty and a large family as an excuse for the request that he was about to make, prayed the great musician to make his fortune. "What do you mean?" demanded Paganini. "Authorize me to write in large letters on the back of my vehicle these two words, 'Paganini's Cab,'" was the answer. Consent was given, with altogether satisfactory results.
