THE CRESTON REVIEW

VOL. XXIV. CRESTON, B. C., FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 23, 1932 No. 27

Geo. Cartwright Fatally Injured

Resident of Erickson Since 1905 When he Established Sawmill There—Took Active Interest School, Church, Fall Fair.

Erickson district has lost one of its best known and progressive citizens in the death of George Cartwright, who was the victim of a most unfortunate accident at the ranch late Saturday afternoon. There were no witnesses to the fatality but it would seem that while taking a Jersey bull ont of the barn the animal got out of control and in its wild rush to get out of the stable collided with Mr. Cartwright, breaking three of his ribs, and inflicting such serious internal injuries that he died almost instantly. The body was found by one of his grandchildren, who was holidaying there, about 15 minutes after the children recall seeing deceased enter the barn.

The late George Cartwright was in his seventy-seventh year. He was born at Mountsburgh, Ontario, in 1855. He was married in 1883, and continued to live in that district, following lumbering and farm operations, until 1900, when the family moved west, locating at Cranbrook, where he resumed his lumbering activities for about five years, when he again moved west, locating at Erickson where for another three years he operated a sawmill, going out of the mill business about that time to go into fruit growing and dairying, dividing his energies between these two lines until today the Riverside ranch can claim the best Jersey herd in the district and an orchard property among the best in the Erickron section.

The funeral took place from the family residence on Monday, with Rev. A. Walker officiating, and burial was in Creston cemetery. The esteem in which deceased was held was evidenced in the many that were out to pay their last tributes. The pallbearers were four sons-in law of deceased, H. A McKowan, of Cranbrook; J. S. Peck, Calgary, Alberta; D. Macdonald, Greenwood, and F. V. Staples.

The late George Cartwright was a fine type of citizen. Both in his early day and varied later activities he was progressive both in the commercial and community life of the district. The Cartwright ranch at Erickson is a fine tribute to his industrial capabilities, while in the educational life, church activities and other good causes he gave freely and intelligently of his time and means. Creston's fall fair association has lost one of its best friends in his passing.

He is survived by his widow and four daughters, Mrs. McKowan, Cranbrook; Mrs. Peck, Calgary; Mrs. F. V. Staples, Creston; and Mrs. D. Macdonald, Greenwood, all of whom were here for she funeral, and to whom is extended the sympathy of the community in their bereavement.

Wreaths were received from, Members of the family, Mr. and Mrs. Elvin Cartwright, Ruth, Lloyd and Roy Cartwright, Mr. and Mrs. Tom Dickson, Mr. D. Tully, Mr. and Mrs. R. Browell, Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Fall Fair Plans About Complete

Entries Close October 3rd—Exhibits Received at Fair Building All Day October 4th—25c. Admits to Everything.

Final arrangements for Creston's 1932 fall fair were practically completed at a well attended meeting of the directors on Friday evening, at which all present were unusually optimistic as to the success of this year's exhibition, which will be held on Wednesday, October 5th.

For this year exhibits will be received into the main building all day Tuesday, October 4th, up till 9 p.m. The staff of judges will be increased somewhat and thus make it possible to have all the awards placed before the opening hour on Wednesday.

This year the admission will be 25 cents to adults, and children free. This one admission fee admits both to grounds and main building. Exhibitors can show their best work in all classes for a fee of 10 cents per entry, and will receive a membership ticket which entitles them to free admission.

In the main building an orchestra will supply music throughout the day, and will also play for the exhibition association dance in the pavilion in the evening. The ladies' organizations have secured the right to serve refreshments and the catering to fall fair patrons will be well attended to. Local business men have been invited to make commercial displays this year in the main building.

The feature to the ontdoor attractions this year will be a baseball tournament in which teams from Wynndel, Canyon, Porthill and Creston will participate. There will be three contests, with the curtain raiser at 10 a.m. Some very fine ball should be provided as these four teams were all well up at the finish of the 1932 international league season. The usual games of chance and novelties are to be in full swing

A major attraction this year is the School Fair. Hundreds of entries are already to hand, and students are busy putting finishing touches to collections of nature study. With the scholars the naming of hitherto unknown flowers and leaves is the absorbing pre-occupation at present. Arrangements may provide for presentation of prizes to successful students at 3 o'clock on the afternoon of fair. It is hoped the school children will have sufficient time off to see the exhibits—although some of the rural schools will require a full day's holiday if they are to take part.

Exhibitors are reminded that entries close on Monday, October 3rd, and the secretary will very much appreciate having these made as early as possible.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Cranbrook, B.C.
Sept. 20th, 1932.

Manager,
Creston Review,
Creston, B.C.

Dear Sir:

The Cranbrook Relief Society would like to get about 60 sacks of apples for this number of families that are on relief here, windfalls or apples that would not be picked by the owners. I have no doubt but there are orchards around Creston which could supply this amount and if the Society would only know of such an orchard or orchards we would go up from here and secure them.

Should you know of any such and advise me the Society would be most thankful.

Very truly yours,
A. J. CHISHOLM,
Secy-Treasurer.

Workers Unity League Meeting

Coast Delegates to Workers' Economic Conference Address Canyon Gathering—Remarks Applauded in Spots.

W. Purvis and A. Evans of Vancouver and Port Alberni, officials of the Workers Unity League of Canada, addressed a meeting at Canyon community hall on September 7th, under the auspices of the Farmers' Unity League, of which there are locals at Camp Lister, Wynndel and Kitchener. It was the third meeting held in Canyon so far this season. These leagues are branches of the Communist party.

Messrs. Evans and Purvis were returning from attending the workers' economic conference held in Ottawa last month. They travelled via the box car route. Comrade Wilcox of Wynndel occupied the chair, and expressed appreciation to Canyon hall association for providing them with a hall after being refused in Creston.

Mr. Purvis spoke first, giving an account of his trip to Ottawa, and the work accomplished. Mr. Evans, chief speaker, wound up the meeting with one and one-half hour address. In opening, he stated it was the first meeting he had addressed when no Mounted Police, or "yellow leg bulls," as he called them, were present.

He touched on Premier Benne t's starvation policy, the arrest of Dan Malone of Toronto, Estevan and Coleman strikes, harangued such labor leaders as Woodsworth, Heap and McInnis, who are members of the federal house, and Reeve Pritchard of Burnaby, classing them as traitors for not advocating revolution.

He appealed to the workers to secure the support of the women, and especially the youths, as the Soviets maintain their present success is due to adopting this policy at the time of the Russian revolution.

In reply to a question, put by chairman Wilcox, as to what stand workers should take in case of war breaking out as in 1914, he advised them to organize and oppose any move to ship food supplies or munitions out of Canada, and if called upon to take up arms not to use such weapons against the opposing forces but to turn the guns on those who urged their use. This statement was loudly applauded by practically the entire audience, including school children and men on relief.

The Valley Workmen's Club, which is under the leadership of Rev. A. Walker, came in for much condemnation by Wynndel delegates present. Evans advised against placing any confidence in sky pilot fakers in the employ of the capitalistic class. Constable Hassard was severely criticised in the manner in which he was handling relief. Evans read a letter the chairman had received last December from the constable. He suggested a committee should deal with the letter and endeavor to have the constable relieved of his duties. Hassard was not present, as at former meetings.

Evans stated that his wife and child were receiving $30 a month relief while he was away in the interests of the workers. He advised against the reading of capitalistic papers, but encourage the reading of revolutionary literature, which prompted a local citizen to volunteer the statement that he had tried that course in Canyon 20 years ago but found it impossible to get Canyon people to read it.

No suggestion was put forth by the speaker to overcome this difficulty, other than that the time was ripe for the revolution which, he said, would take place within a year.

As an orator, Evans was in a class by himself. About $5 was raised to help the Coleman strikers. The speakers were the guests of Mr. Simpson of Kitchener.

Coalition Governments.

The question of coalition, or union, governments has been brought very forcibly to the attention of the people throughout the Western provinces of Canada within recent months. There is undoubtedly a very considerable body of public opinion which favors the reorganization of governments at the present time upon a non-partizan basis,—that is, the formation of cabinets of ministers inclusive of representatives of all existing political parties, with the strongest men chosen from each to constitute the Government.

But the average elector has but a hazy idea as to how this can be brought about. Many people entertain the view that all present parties are equally responsible if such coalitions are not effected. If an official offer of coalition is made by the head of the Government in office, and it is rejected by the other party, or parties, then, of course, the latter must accept full responsibility for their decision. There is, however, only one person in each Province who can take the initial step leading to coalition. That is the Prime Minister.

Under the British system of parliamentry government the King, or his representative, invites the leader of the party having a majority in the House of Commons, or Legislature, as the case may be, to form a Government. He becomes Prime Minister. It is then his sole prerogrative to select his own ministers. He may consult as many people as he chooses, but he, and he alone, names his ministers. Nobody else has any rights in the matter, except, of course, that such ministers must be approved by the people themselves by election to the Legislature. Having chosen his ministers, the Prime Minister alone can demand their resignation from the Government.

It was Premier Ramsay MacDonald who proposed the formation of a National Government in Great Britain; it was Premier Sir Robert Borden who proposed Union Government in Canada during the war in 1917; it was Premier Bracken who proposed coalition in Manitoba this year; it is Premier Tolmie who recently proposed coalition in British Columbia. Nobody but the Prime Minister has any right to do so. For a leader of an opposition party to propose coalition would be to infringe on the prerogatives of the Prime Minister.

Once a Prime Minister does propose coalition to the leaders of other parties then a large measure of the responsibility for the realization of such a form of administration is shifted on to their shoulders, and it becomes a joint responsibility of all to so compromise their differences as to make a union of their forces effective.

Coalitions in the past, both in Canada and elsewhere throughout the Empire, have been brought about in times of emergency in order to carry through certain policies deemed by all in the interests of the country but which it would be extremely difficult, if not impossible, for a government representative of only a section of the people,—even of a majority of them,—to do by itself. Therefore, when coalitions are formed the exact nature of the emergency to be met, and the policies by which it is to be met, must of necessity be clearly stated, and it is on the basis thus set out that coalition takes place. This was true in the case of the present National Government in Great Britain, and also when Union Government was formed in Canada to win the war and enforce conscription.

Much of the opinion in favor of coalitions today is founded in the idea that party politics and party Governments are a mistake; that the whole citizenship should be united in one party and one Government; in a word, that Provincial Governments at least should be in the nature of a municipal council, or board of directors of a company. Whether such an ideal is practical is another question. There are divergent groups in many company directorates, controlling majority and a dissentient minority. The same is true in municipal councils, although the members may not be definitely classified under any group name or as Government and Opposition. But the parties or groups exist just the same.

In fact when any two persons join forces to bring about any given result a party is formed, and the same is true when two persons unite to oppose any given policy or line of action. In fact, coalitions become necessary when, because of a multiplicity of parties, no one party can command a majority and thus form a Government. Coalitions, therefore, are not the solution of the party system, and it would appear that there will continue to be parties just so long as everybody does not think, see and act alike on public questions.

Finally, a coalition government is not created through a joining of forces by a few individuals, but a union of parties. Only by a merger of parties for a given purpose can the required strength be given to a coalition. One or two individuals might enter a Government to add strength to that Government, but it would not be a coalition. Parties must unite to bring about a coalition.

Old Orders Still Used

Some of the standing orders still in force in the House of Commons are over two centuries old. An old Norman French phrase is still in use in certain instances, notably "Le Roy le veult" (the King wishes it) in giving the Royal assent to a Bill.

A "cheerful telegram" campaign to boost the sending of good as well as bad news by wire, has been started in Scotland.

The death warrants of Charles 1. and Mary Queen of Scots, are among the bequests in the will, published recently, of Miss Margaret Penelope Clegg, of Boston, Lancashire. She left the two death warrants and other historical relics to the Guildhall Museum, London, England.

Suffered A Severe Attack Of Dysentery

Mr. P. L. D. Moullard, Vernon, B.C., writes:—"Last Summer I suffered from a severe attack of dysentery. I tried nearly everything on the market, without getting any relief, until a friend told me to use Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry, which I did, and I got immediate relief. Now I am making it a rule to always keep a bottle of it in my medicine chest.

"Wild Strawberry is sure relief for dysentery, colic and diarrhoea, but I always see I get the genuine 'Dr. Fowler's'."

One Well-Managed City

Louisville, Kentucky, Took Simple Way of Effecting Economies

Lousiville, Kentucky, will face its new fiscal year, September 1, with a cash surplus of more than $400,000, the majority of its employes will be on a full salary basis and another reduction in taxes is promised.

Cheques are being written for $140,000 to pay back a 10 per cent. salary cut which went into effect on January 1. At the same time the tax rate has dropped from 23.4 mills to 22.3 and assessment values have been cut 7 per cent.

The explanation is simple. In the closing days of 1931 Mayor Harrison, of Louisville, announced a 10 per cent. salary cut for civic employees, and at the same time promised them that should they effect sufficient economies despite the reduction in the tax rate and assessment, they would be given the back pay.

The effect was instantaneous. Economies were effected in every department. The savings came from positive acts of the employees, such as curtailing gasoline supplie, care in driving trucks and other vehicles, substituting of materials—in short, from thrifty vigilance.

Even the taxpayers showed an improved tone. On July 28, 89 per cent. of the taxes had been paid, leaving only $887,046 unpaid of the total $8,055,945 receivable as of January 1, 1932.—Winnipeg Tribune.

HAS LOST FAT FOR THREE YEARS

68 lbs. Gone Altogether

A woman writes:—"For nearly three years I have been taking Kruschen Salts every morning in hot water, and have lost 68 lbs. of fat. My weight before taking them was 196 lbs., and it is now 128 lbs. Compare the difference — it is marvellous. My mother and sister are also taking Kruschen and lots of our friends, and think they are wonderful. As regards diet, it is not necessary to do one little bit of dieting; in my case I have never denied myself anything since I started taking Kruschen Salts. I walk every day, and do not eat many potatoes or much sugar. I don't think I shall ever be grateful enough to Kruschen Salts for the great help they have been to me, and shall never stop taking them, or recommending them to people I think need them."—(Miss) K. T.

Taken every morning, Kruschen effects a perfectly natural clearance of undigested food substances and all excessive watery waste matter. Unless this wastage is regularly expelled, Nature will eventually store it up out of the way in the form of ugly fat.

Wonders Have Vanished

Loch Lomond, Scotland, where Kaye Don made his world speed-boat record, has lost wonders which attracted tourists. Its floating island has disappeared, and scientists have explained that its "waves without wind" are merely the result of natural swell, and that the "fish without fins" are really vipers which travel from one island to another by swimming.

Awful Asthma Attacks. Is there a member of your family who is in the power of this distressing trouble? No service you can render him will equal the bringing to his attention of Dr. J. D. It has a truly wonderful record, covering years and years of success in almost every part of this continent, and even beyond the seas.

OTTAWA SESSION LIKELY TO MAKE NEW HISTORY

Ottawa, Ont.—Canada's parliament convening on October 6 will make new history.

Signs portend a four weeks' sitting of parliament in the fall devoted almost entirely to intra-empire trade. Perhaps even three weeks may suffice. To some extent opposition members will be a determining factor. And from that quarter there has been no official expression of views on the results of the Imperial Conference.

But in any event, approval of the trade pacts will probably take place in time for adjournment on or before November 15. A recess until January 15 is expected.

The legislative programme when parliament reassembles in January will probably comprise:

(1) Legislation on the report of the transportation commission, headed by Mr. Justice Lyman P. Duff, of the supreme court of Canada.

(2) Approval of the Canada-United States St. Lawrence seaway treaty providing ratification has been already given by the United States senate.

(3) Amendments to the Finance Act.

(4) Introduction of redistribution bill.

From present indications, the budget will probably be brought down late in February. Like the financial statement, the main estimates will not be tabled until early next year. Preliminary work on the estimates will likely be under way shortly.

A bill for redistribution of Dominion constituencies always follows the completion of Canada's census every ten years. From the viewpoint of suggesting an election the measure consequently has no significance whatsoever.

Usually contentions amendments to the redistribution act go through a committee before being submitted to the Commons for enactment. This course will be followed during the coming session, it is stated.

The Finance Act in all its ratifications will likely be reviewed by a special committee. Amendments to the act are promised for early next year.

Russian Who Shot French President Dies On Guillotine

Paris, France.—Paul Gorgouloff, half-mad Russian adventurer, died on the guillotine at Sante prison for the assassination of President Paul Doumer of France. The knife of the guillotine fell at dawn 6:03 a.m.

The Russian fanatic's last hope of escaping the razor-edged knife of "The Widow" passed when President Albert Lebrun, who succeeded Doumer, rejected his appeal for a commutation.

Dr. Gorgouloff was not told of the president's decision until a half hour before his execution, in accordance with French law and custom. Then he was awakened by his guard and lawyers, informed of the appeal's failure, and led unceremoniously to the guillotine.

Remembrance Day

War Veterans Favor Stricter Observance Of Anniversary

Vancouver, B.C.—Believing that the importance of "Remembrance Day"—November 11—is not fully realized by the Canadian people, the eleventh annual convention of Amputations' Association of the Great War passed a strongly worded resolution favoring stricter observance of the anniversary.

"We pledge ourselves to do all in our power to see that this day shall be sacred in our national life," the resolution declares. "We further appeal to the industrial and commercial life of Canada to follow the splendid example set by dominion, provincial, and municipal governments in closing down all but necessary works on 'Remembrance Day'."

Says Empire Threatened

British Ideals Of International Trade Are In Danger

Toronto, Ont.—Suggestion that the very civilization Great Britain had created might destroy her in the end was made here by Dr. T. E. Gregory, of London, one of the world's leading economists, in an address. Cabinet ministers, professors, bankers and outstanding business men were in his audience.

Dr. Gregory questioned whether the British ideals of international trade and congresses would win out, or whether the American ideal of less interest in international trade and more in mechanization of production would prevail in the next two decades.

"Do we want civilization of the kind my country has created, and which may destroy my country in the end, or the kind America has created and may carry to a very triumphant conclusion?" Dr. Gregory questioned.

There was going on in the world a revolution in raw material that could not be checked, said Dr. Gregory. The raw material producing areas were going to resort to manufacturing in order to keep those busy who were being driven from the land.

Aviators Burned Alive

Pilot and Pupil Meet Horrible Death At Montreal

Montreal, Que.—Two men were burned alive in an aeroplane here as the machine went out of control and crashed to the ground. They were Captain Blaise A. Leboeuf, chief instructor of the Montreal Light Aeroplane Club, and C. W. Chambers, also of Montreal, a student pilot.

Leboeuf had taken Chambers up for one of his final lessons in "spins" and "dives." The machine was seen to falter when about 1,000 feet up. There was a roar when flames suddenly appeared about the engine and swept back over the occupants.

The 'plane then dived into a farmer's field near St. Hubert airport. There was an explosion as the machine struck the earth. So intense was the heat, no efforts at rescue could be made.

Captain Leboeuf was one of the most proficient flying instructors in Canada. He learned to fly in Windsor, Ont., and later joined the Royal Canadian Air Force. At Camp Borden he was regarded as one of the three outstanding instructors there.

A coroner's jury investigating the mishap returned a verdict of accidental death on both victims.

No Fall Session

No Early Sitting Of Alberta Legislation Is Expected

Edmonton, Alberta.—A fall session of the Alberta legislature is not likely, it is stated by Premier Brownlee, and the action of the Dominion Government in calling parliament for October 6 will not have any effect upon the situation in this province so far as its own house is concerned.

Unless some unexpected emergency arises, it will not be necessary to call a sitting of the legislature before Christmas, said Premier Brownlee. If economic or other conditions should become sufficiently serious, it might be found desirable, but there does not appear at present, the premier said, any reason for such action this fall.

Mr. Brownlee intimated however, that in any case as early a date as possible after the new year will be arranged for the regular session.

British Motorists Pay More For Gasoline

Price Has Been Increased Nearly Twenty Per Cent.

London, England.—British motorists were hit by an increase of nearly 20 per cent. in gasoline prices, raising the standard grade to 39 cents a gallon.

The London Omnibus Company estimated the rise would increase its expenses more than $1,000,000 a year. News of the increase caused a sharp rise in oil shares.

The growing army of small car owners had hoped the oil war which has given them cheaper gasoline would continue indefinitely but the inclusion of Roumania and Russia in an agreement ended the price cutting.

COMMENCES BIG WORK

James Purves, heraldic artist of London, Ontario, who has been given the task of inscribing some 68,000 names in the Book of Remembrance, which will be placed within the casket of the Altar in the Memorial Chamber at Ottawa. The names will be written by hand on fine calfskin vellum.

Freight For Bay Route

Will Shortly Discontinue Solicitation Of Freight For 1933 Season

Ottawa, Ont.—While the government takes no part in the operation of the Hudson Bay Railway and the Port of Churchill, the information that the Canadian National Railways will shortly discontinue the freight solicitation service for the new route is unofficially confirmed here.

The railway has been pushing the Hudson Bay route strongly in the past few months, but this effort will be stopped shortly prior to the closing of the Hudson Bay navigation season. The chief motive in discontinuing the service is to economize, but it is pointed that there is little purpose in soliciting freight for 1933 at this time.

Pay Roll Robbers

New Type Of Tear Gas Gun Is Demonstrated

Chicago.—Pay roll robbers are going to shed a lot of tears.

A new type of tear gas gun, so small it can be concealed in a coat sleeve and reputedly of sufficient power to route a whole gang of pay roll robbers was demonstrated at the Northwestern University Crime Detection Laboratory here. It is fastened to the wrist like a strap watch. A fine wire leads from the trigger to a ring in the middle finger. All one needs to do is lift up the arm and flick the finger and the trick is done.

United States Farmers Buy Manitoba Land

More Than Two Hundred Families Coming To Canada

Winnipeg, Man.—Over long distance telephone from Des Moines, Iowa, Senator L. E. Francis confirmed his association with W. J. Whidden, Winnipeg, in the purchase of 10,000 ares of farmlands in Manitoba for United States farmersc.

Mr. Whidden, who telephoned Senator Francis when shown a despatch from Des Moines quoting Mr. Francis as saying "nothing to it," showed the Canadian Press reporter the title to the property and his contract with the United States senator.

With other parties Mr. Whidden is negotiating for 25,000 more acres in Manitoba. More than 200 United States farmer families will settle on the total acreage, he said. These farmers are coming to Canada, he said, because of higher prices received for farm products in Canada and the fertility of Manitoba soil.

Dairy Barn Destroyed

Heavy Loss Sustained By Farmer Near Moose Jaw

Moose Jaw, Sask.—The huge barn of Fred H. Jones, prominent dairy farmer living two miles north of the city, was completely demolished by fire, incurring a loss estimated at $23,000. Starting either from spontaneous combustion or from a short circuit in the electric wiring of the barn, the fire blazed uncontrolled for three hours.

The barn, measuring 270 feet by 36 feet, was valued at close to $20,000, the feed which was stored inside was valued at $2,000, milking machine equipment was valued at $1,000, and 12 sets of harness were valued at about $500. All these were a total loss.

Support Is Withdrawn

Kaye Don Loses Sponsor In Speed Boat Racing

New York.—Kaye Don, British speedboat driver and holder of the world record with Lord Wakefield's "Miss England III.," said he knew of no one in England who might take his former backer's place as sponsor of speed boat racing.

Lord Wakefield withdrew his support of Don and said he planned to withdraw entirely from further speedboat ventures.

Lord Wakefield is said to have spent at least £1,000,000 in the last few years promoting automobile, speedboat and airplane speed ventures.

COMPLETION OF CANADA'S WAR MEMORIAL

Canada's War Memorial, which will in due course be erected on Parliament Hill, Ottawa, has now been completed at Farnborough, Kent, England, and for a short period will stand in Hyde Park, London, England. This picture shows the six March Brothers and sister standing before the three gigantic figures which form part of the memorial. The memorial consists of a huge arch through which pass representatives of the services who responded to the call for men during the World War.

FREE STATE STILL CONCERNED OVER LAND ANNUITIES

Dublin, Irish Free State.—Both governments continue to maintain the strictest silence concerning the terms of the latest note from the Free State to the United Kingdom in the dispute over the land annuities, but it was reported that President Eamon de Valera had declared that in event of failure to reach an agreement on the method of arbitration, he would use the monies so far withheld for the "relief of sufferers from the economic warfare."

The Free State so far has withheld payments of about $10,000,000 on account of failure to reach agreement on the form of arbitration of the dispute—the Free State holding out for an international tribunal and the British government for an Imperial arbitral board.

President de Valera is expected to visit London for a day or so, and have a final interview with J. H. Thomas, Secretary for Dominion Affairs, before leaving for Geneva to attend the sessions of the league assembly.

Farmers Hold Wheat

Alberta Farmers Show Tendency To Wait For Higher Prices

Calgary, Alberta.—Alberta farmers are showing a tendency to hold their wheat until higher prices appear, according to grain trade heads in Calgary. Farmers are being given an average price of 32 cents per bushel No. 1 Northern.

Alberta wheat pool officials state farmers feel grain should be held at all places where facilities are available. Storage places, however, are lacking in some centres and it is feared congestion may result in many districts.

Some farmers are urging that coarse grains also be retained until prices improve. They point out that present prices made delivery hardly worth while as No. 2 C.W. oats brought only 13 cents per bushel, No. 3 C.W. barley 12 cents, and No. 2 C.W. rye 13½ cents.

Pool heads strongly denied farmers in some districts were forming organizations for the purpose of holding all their crops.

Sees Better Times

Speaker At Chamber Of Commerce Gathering Looks For Improvement

Halifax, N.S.—Declaring Canada is "on the threshold of the upswing," President W. L. McGregor, of Windsor, Ont., gave a keynote of optimism to the seventh annual convention of the Canadian Chamber of Commerce.

"I am glad to be able to state that it is not only my opinion, but the opinion of many leaders that we are on the threshold of the upswing," he said.

But Colonel McGregor wished to make it clear he was not suggesting the advent of recovery.

"How could anybody seriously forward the idea of the advent of recovery with 14,000,000 unemployed on this continent alone?" he asked.

He was wary of the spectacular rise in stock prices.

Gandhi's Threat

Effort Being Made To Prevent Mahatma From Starting Hunger Strike

Simla, India.—Powerful efforts are being organized to deter Mahatma Gandhi from carrying out his threat to start a hunger strike.

The viceroy talked for an hour with Rao Bahadur, representative of the untouchable class in the assembly, who appealed to all classes to strive to save the life of "the greatest Indian of our time."

The Pandit Malaviya, Hindu leader, was summoned to a conference at Delhi in the hope of reaching an early agreement regarding representation of the untouchables, the issue which influenced Gandhi to threaten his campaign of starvation.

No job couldn't be reached by telephone

Anything doing at the shop, Mr. Jones?" said Bill hopefully.

"Sorry, Bill," said Mr. Jones, "I could have given you work last Monday—in fact, I wanted to give the job to you; but I needed someone right away, and as I couldn't reach you by telephone, I had to get someone else."

No telephone—and so Bill didn't get the job.

Opportunity used to knock; now it uses the telephone.

Hints to Exhibitors

Have you read the rules carefully? The object of the rules is to make competition equal and fair. The rules should be complied with in making entry, in preparing the spicimens for the show, and in actually setting up the exhibit at the right time and place.

Plates of Plums and Prunes—Choose a considerable number and select from them the most perfect twelve. Be careful to preserve the bloom, and on plums the stems also. Avoid bruising and handle as little as possible.

Vegetables—In practically all garden vegetabl s the size should be moderate but not large; in fact, oversize vegetables are coarse and of low quality and rough. All root-vegetables should be washed free from dirt, and fibrous roots and tops removed. With Cauliflower the heads should be about 8 inches in diameter with good depth of curd. Stalk and larger leaves should be removed, and those remaining trimmed off just below the level of the head.

Potatoes—The tubes should be from 6 to 8 oz. in weight, the flesh firm, close grained and true in color. The cortical layer should be relatively thick and the inner medullany area small and confined. In preparing for exhibition care should be taken that the natural color and bloom of the skin is not destroyed.

The Collection of Garden Vegetables—Offers an opportunity for farm display. Much depends here on attractiveness and arrangement. Neat tabels indicating the varieties of the different vegetables are called for, and will increase the educational value of the exhibits. A proportion of the points awarded are for the relative table value of different vegetables—The following list indicates the relative value of some of the items.

	Poin's		Points
Artichoke	2	Potatoes	10
Beets	7	Pumpkins	4
Cabbage	8	Swiss chard	5
Carrots	8	Squash	5
Corn	7	Tomatoes	9
Peppers	2	Onions	9

Plan World Cruise

Cunard Cruiser "Carinthia" To Make Cruise Of Southern Hemisphere

The Southern Hemisphere will be encircled for the first time by a cruise liner when the Cunard cruiser "Carinthia" makes her world cruise next January, leaving New York on January 7th. The entire cruise will be made under the Southern Cross. The duration of the cruise will be 139 days with a distance of approximately 36,301 miles, calling at 35 ports.

After leaving New York the "Carinthia" will call at Kingston, Jamaica, then through the Panama Canal to California, Hawaii, down to the South Sea Islands, visiting in rapid succession those atolls of fabulous beauty and fascination, Tahiti, Rarotonga, Samoa and the Fijis, continuing to New Zealand and Australia, New Guinea, the Dutch East Indies, including Bali and Java, the Strait Settlements, Ceylon, makes a stop for the first time in the history of any cruise at the famous Seychelles Islands, (Port Victoria), down the coast of sunny East Africa from Mombasa to Cape Town, across the South Atlantic to Montevideo (for Buenos Aires), Santos, Rio de Janeiro, and back to New York. Practically all ports of the itinerary have seldom been visited by Canadians or Americans.

The cruise will be particularly interesting to Canadians in that a large number of British possessions will be visited, including amaica, New Zealand, Australia, the Strait Settlements, Ceylon, Seychelles, Kenya, Zanzibar, Union of South Africa and Barbadoes.

The ship is due back in New York on the afternoon of Thursday, May 25th. The "Carinthia" is the newest steamer in the Cunard fleet, was especially constructed for cruising and is of 20,000 tons gross. The shore arrangements of the cruise are being managed by Thos. Cook & Son.

Secrets Of The Skies

Monster Astronomical Observatory To Be Built In States

Pooling resources, the University of Chicago and the University of Texas plan a co-operative new astronomical observatory—surpassed only in size by the Mount Wilson Observatory—to search out the secrets of the skies.

Announcement of the project was made by Vice-President, Frederic Woodward, of the University of Chicago. The observatory, he said, would house an 80-inch reflecting telescope. It is expected the observatory will be completed by July 1, 1938, at a cost of about $375,000.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

SEPTEMBER 25

MOSES HONORED IN HIS DEATH

Golden Text: "Precious in the sight of Jehovah is the death of His saints."—Psalm 116: 15.

Lesson: Deuteronomy 32:48-52; 34: 5-8.

Devotional Reading: Psalm 116:12-19.

Explanations and Comments

Moses Learns Of His Approcahing Death, 32:48-52.—Moses' work was over. In the plains of Moab he was in sight of the goal of his forty years' pilgrimage. He could behold the Land of Promise, for he was over against Jericho, but he was not to enter it; his last hour had come.

Death is part of the divine economy. The thought of death should make this life seem worth while, and the other world real. Life is a beautiful gift from our father's hands, meant for us to enjoy, but above all, to use aright. And death is another gift from our Father which will lead us into an infinitely larger, happier life. Dr. Henry van Dyke's beautiful prayer breathes the true spirit: "Steady me to do my full stint of work as well as I can; and when that is done, stop me, pay me what wages Thou wilt, and help me to say, from a quiet heart, a grateful Amen."

The Death Of Moses, 34:5-8.—To Joshua, his minister, Moses turned over the reins of his authority. He climbed to the summit of the ridge overlooking the Plain of Moab. Below him lay the white tents of the people whom he loved, for whom he had labored. To the West lay the goal which he had ever had in view; its attaining had been the sustaining hope throughout all the wilderness life. Long and earnestly he gazed. "And then he quietly turned away to take his journey to a fairer land of promise than that upon which his eyes had been fixed. No finer close to a great life could be imagined. Any description of the pageantry of a royal funeral would be tawdry in comparison with the dignity and grandeur of those closing scenes. To leave the grand old warrior alone with God on that mysterious summit overlooking the land which in after years would in every event of its glorious spiritual history witness to his service—the imagination could not dream of an end more august and splendid."

New Anti-Aircraft Gun

Claimed To Have Range Of Seven and Half Miles

That a new anti-aircraft gun can bring down an attacking bomber seven and one-half miles up in the air, is the claim to those conducting tests on the Riviera coast near La Seyne, France. The secret of the gun's construction is jealously guarded by the firm whose engineers planned it. Anti-aircraft guns have previously proved effective at a height of about three and one-half miles, but modern aircraft can attain much greater altitudes. In the experiments off La Seyne an aeroplane with pilot and mechanic, ascended seven and one-half miles towing, suspended 1,000 feet beneath it, a target on which the anti-aircraft gun opened fire with live shells. Aviation, military and naval men of Europe are watching the tests.

Government Vessel Sets Mark For Far North Sailing

Completing what is said to have been a new record in far north sailing, the SS. Ocean Eagle, government survey ship, in command of Captain William Poolok, returned to Churchill after a 17-day voyage into the Foxe Basin regions. The "Eagle" steamed near the southern extremity of Cockburn Land, east and slightly south of the magnetic pole. It is stated that no steamer of the proportions of the "Eagle" had sailed so far north in that area east of Baffin Island.

Ontario Is Interested

Province Expects To Be Well Represented At World's Grain Show

Ontario will be adequately represented at the World's Grain Show in Regina, July 24 to August 5, 1933, Hon. T. A. Kennedy, provincial minister of agriculture, said at a meeting of the show's Ontario committee at Toronto recently.

The minister advised the committee Ontario should be represented in the intercollegiate and junior grain judging competition. Plans are being completed for holding grain judging competitions at several strategic points throughout the province to select representatives for a final competition at Guelph. There three Ontario representatives will be chosen.

Consideration was given the preparation of an educational exhibit at the show, representing the natural resources of the province.

Aspirin is harmless—cannot depress the heart. So there's no use waiting for a headache to "wear off." It is useless to endure pain of any kind when you can get Aspirin. It is a blessing to women who suffer regular systemic pain; to men who must work on, in spite of eye-strain, fatigue or neuralgia.

Learn its quick relief for colds; for neuritis, rheumatism, lumbago. Be sure to get Aspirin—and not a substitute. All druggists sell Aspirin tablets. "Aspirin" is a trade-mark registered in Canada.

THE HOUSE OF DREAMS-COME-TRUE

— BY —

MARGARET PEDLER

Author Of "The Splendid Folly," "The Hermit Of Far End."

Hodder & Stoughton, Ltd., London.

Tortured beyond bearing, this final taunt, levelled at the woman he held more dear than anything in life, snapped his last thread of self-control.

He flung himself forward and his hands were gripping, gripping at the soft ivory throat from which the taunt had sprung. He felt the woman writhe, struggling to pull his hands from her neck. But it meant nothing to him. He did not think of her any longer as a woman. She was something vile—leprous to the very core of her being—a thing to be destroyed. The thing which had made of all Jean's promised happiness a black and bitter mockery.

The mad Tormarin rage surged through his veins like a consuming fire. He would break her—break her and utterly destroy her just as one destroyed a deadly snake.

And then across the thunderous roar that beat in his ears came the beloved voice, the voice that would have power to call him out of the depths of hell itself—Jean's voice.

"Blaise! Blaise! What are you doing? . . . . Stop-"

CHAPTER XXXII.

The Dividing Sword

Slowly, reluctantly, Tormarin's hands loosened their clasp of Madame de Varigny's throat, and with a swift, flexible twist of the body she slipped aside and stood a few paces from him.

Jean looked from one to the other with horrified eyes.

"Madame de Varigny?—Blaise?" she stammered. "What is it? . . . . Why, you—you might have killed her, Blaise!"

He stared at her blankly. His release of the Italian woman had been in mere blind response to Jean's first imperative appeal that he should desist. But the mists of ungovernable anger had hardly yet cleared from his brain; the blood still drummed in his ears like the roar of the sea.

"Blaise"—Jean spoke imploringly. "What were you doing? Tell me——"

With an effort he seemed to recover himself.

"It's a pity you didn't let me finish it, Jean," he said harshly. "Such wowomen are better dead."

Madame de Varigny was fingering her neck delicately where the pressure of Blaise's grip had scored red marks on the cream-white flesh. She seemed quite composed. Her smile still held its quiet triumph and her long dark eyes gleamed with the same mockery that had brought her within measurable distance of quick death.

"As Monsieur Tor-ma-rin seems to find a difficulty in explaining—permit me," she said at last. "He was angry with me because I bring him the good news that his wife is still alive, that he need mourn no longer."

While she spoke her eyes, resting on Blaise's mask-like face, held an expression of malicious satisfaction.

"His wife . . . . alive?" repeated Jean dazedly. "Blaise, is she mad! Nesta has been dead years—years." Then, as he made no answer, she continued rapidly, a faint note of fear vibrating in her voice: "Isn't it so? Blaise—speak! Quickly, tell her—Nesta has been dead some years!"

"He cannot tell me anything about her which I do not know already, Mees Peterson, seeing that she is my sister and has been living with me ever since her husband's cruelty drove her from his home."

"Is it true, Blaise?" whispered Jean.

Belief that some substance of horrible truth lay behind the Italian's coolly uttered statements was beginning to lay hold of her.

"Blaise, Blaise"—her voice rising a little—"say it isn't true—tell her it isn't true."

He looked at her speechlessly, but the measureless pain in his eyes answered her more fully, more convincingly than any words.

"You see?" broke in Madame de Varigny triumphantly. "He cannot deny it! It was I who told him of her death and I who now tell him that she still lives. Listen to me, mademoiselle, and I will recount you how——"

"No!" interrupted Jean proudly. "Whatever there may be for me to hear, I will hear it from Blaise—not from you."

She turned again to Tormarin.

"Tell me everything, Blaise," she said simply.

He took her outstretched hands and drew her slowly towards him. No one, reading now the calm sadness, the stern imprint of endurance on his face, could have imagined it was that of the same man who, a few moments earlier, had been swept by such a tempest of uncontrollable anger.

"Jean," he said very gently and pitifully. "I'm afraid that what Madame de Varigny says may be true. I have no proof that it is not ——"

"Nor have you any proof that it is," broke in Jean swiftly. She swung round on Madame de Varigny. "Where is your proof—where is your proof?"

The Italian smiled.

"Monsieur Tor-ma-rin will find his wife in my car. I bade the chauffeur wait with it at the lodge gate."

"Do you mean you have brought Nesta—here?" cried Blaise.

"Why not?" replied Madame de Varigny, with a return to the same exasperating complacency with which she had originally described her whole scheme of revenge. "And—here? Surely her husband's house is the proper place to which to bring his wife?"

"She cannot remain here," said Blaise with decision.

"No? For the moment that was not my idea. I brought her with me because I thought there could be no more convincing proof."

Blaise looked at her searchingly. He fancied he detected a false note in her voluble speech, and a new idea, presented itself to him. Was the woman simply putting up a gigantic bluff? Or was it really Nesta, his wife, waiting in the car at the lodge gates? It occurred to him as perfectly feasible that it might be merely some woman whose remarkable resemblance to the dead girl had suggested to the Comtess's fertile brain the scheme that she should impersonate her.

His mind seized eagerly upon the idea, bolstering it up with Madame de Varigny's own admission. "I made little changes in her appearance," she had said. "The colour of her hair, the way of dressing it." Probably she was relying on those "little changes," and on the blurred recollection resulting from the length of time which had elapsed since Nesta's death, to aid her in her plan of introducing as his wife a woman who closely resembled her. He felt morally sure of it, and the light of hope suddenly shone bravely.

"I believe you are deceiving me," said quietly. "Lying—as you have lied all through the piece. I'll come and see this 'wife' you have waiting in the car for me"—grimly. He turned to Jean. "Keep up your courage, sweetheart," he said in a low voice full of infinite solicitude. "I believe the whole thing is a put-up job to separate us."

Jean smiled at him radiantly. She felt all at once very confident. In a few minutes this nightmarish story of a Nesta still alive and claiming her rights as Blaise's wife would be proved a lie.

Tormarin crossed the room and opened the door.

"Now, Madame de Varigny—will you come with me?"

The woman hesitated a moment.

"Come," insisted Blaise firmly. "Or—are you afraid, after all, to bring me face to face with my wife?"

She shook her head.

"No," she said. "I am not afraid. It is only that I am so sorry—so sorry for the little Jean."

Her eyes, soft and dark and liquid as the eyes of a deer, sought Jean's beseechingly.

"I am so sorry," she repeated. And passed, slowly,—almost unwillingly, it seemed, out of the room, followed by Tormarin.

Jean raised her head from Blaise's shoulder and pushed back her hair, damp with perspiration, from her forehead. It seemed to her as though she had been down, down into some awful, limitless abyss of darkness from which she was now feebly struggling back to a painful consciousness of material things. A great sea had surged over her head, blotting out everything, and remained poised above her like a huge black arch, imprisoning her in the vast, deserted chaos in which she found herself wandering. Then—after a long time, it seemed—it had surged away again and she could distinguish Blaise's face bent above her.

"Then—then it's true?" she said stupidly. Her voice sounded tiny, even to herself—a mere thread of sound. Blaise made no answer. He only held her a little closer in his arms. She supposed he hadn't heard that thin little thread of voice. She must try again.

"Is it true, Blaise? Is Nesta——" But somehow the last words wouldn't come.

She felt his arm jerk against her side.

"Yes," he said baldly. "It's true. Nesta is alive. I've seen her."

Jean said nothing. She knew it—had known it all the time the arched wall of sea had kept her down in that awful black waste where there had been neither warmth nor sunshine but only bitter, freezing cold and lightless space. She clung a little closer to Blaise, like a frightened, exhausted child.

"Heart's beloved . . . . little dearest Jean . . . ." She heard the wrung murmur of his voice above her head. Then suddenly, his arms tightening round her: "My soul!"

The sunlight still slanted in through the windows, mellow and golden. A gay shout of laughter came up from the boat on the lake. The clock on the chimneypiece struck the hour—twelve slow, maddening strokes.

Jean stared at its blank, foolish face. The hands had pointed to half-past eleven when the door of the room had closed behind Blaise and Madame de Varigny. It had taken just a brief half-hour to smash up her whole world—to rob her of everything that mattered.

"I must think—I must think," she muttered.

"Belovedest"—Blaise's voice was wonderfully tender—not with the passionate tenderness of a lover but with a solicitude that was almost maternal. "Belovedest, don't try to think now. Try to rest a little, won't you?"

And at that Jean came right back to an understanding of all that had happened, as the needle of a compass swings back to the frozen north.
