Creston Honors Armistice Day

Remembrance Exercises Have Pleasing International Aspect —Splendid Address by (Rev.) N. G. Smith—Reunion Dinner

The international spirit was very happily present in Creston's observance of Armistice Day on Friday, the exercises following along traditional lines of exercises at the monument, decoration of fallen comrades graves, reunion dinner and dance. The day, while chilly, was not otherwise disagreeable, and the turnout of returned men as well as citizens was rather larger than in past years.

To a lively march by Creston brass band, the veterans moved off from the Shell Oil Company premises shortly before 11, in charge of Sergt. J.B.Holder reaching the cenotaph in time for the Cease Fire at 10.58, which was followed by the two minutes silence, Bugler G. H. Kelly then sounded Last Post, and this was followed by the Reveille by Bugler Millen. All the local organizations as well as a number of individual citizens presented wreaths, the display of flowers also being better than last year.

Rev. Andrew Walker's invocation was impressive and the address by (Rev.) N. G. Smith stressed the idea that the services and silences of Armistice will be in vain if the purpose of the great struggle, which he designated as a war to end all wars, is not enforced by nations and individuals.

Following Mr. Smith's practical talk came the presentation of the plaque from Boundary Post American Legion, Bonners Ferry, Idaho, and dedicated to the memory of the Creston Valley mothers who lost sons in the great war. This presentation was to have been a feature of the international Legion reunion last June, but due the plaque not being completed in time formal presentation had to be deferred till Armistice Day. The presentation address was by W. B. Scott of Bonners Ferry, who spoke briefly but most appropriately, and the was received on behalf of Creston Legion by Mrs. Robert Saewart.

During the exercises "O Canada" and one verse of "O God Our Help in Ages Past" were sung, the ceremony closing with God Save the King, after which the veterans paraded to Creston cemetery where they decorated the graves of a number of fallen comrades.

At 12.30 the reunion dinner was served at the King George Hotel where about 50 returned men sat down to an excellent banquet spread at which all the good things of the season were served in capital style under the direction of the proprietor, Comrade B. Morabito, who saw overseas service with the 49th Battalion.

After ample justice had been done the dinner, W. V. Jackson, president of the local Legion post, cordially welcomed all the veterans, expressing special pleasure at having the company of quite a number of the men who s rved overseas with Uncle Sam, a number of whom were heard in short talks. The toast to the King was heartily received. "The Army," was introduced by Hilton Young and the response was by Col. Mallandaine. "Our Guests," was proposed by R. J. Forbes, and rounds of applause greeted the replies by Judge Hunt of Sandpoint, and Messrs. Arthur Zimmerman, W. B. Scott and E. B. Campbell, all of Bonners Ferry.

Vocal solos by a number of local vets, as well as a great variety of army songs were much in evidence throughout the afternoon. In the evening the Armistice dance at Park pavilion was well attended and was very popular with all present, Crestonian orchestra supplying very fine music throughout the affair.

Canyon City

Mr and Mrs. Matt. Clayton and son, Bill, were visitors with their son, Bob, at Kimberley, a few days the past week.

Canyon school had a holiday on Friday in connection with Armistice Day. This year the sale of poppies was in charge of Principal Stephens, and was quite successful.

A. A. Bond has the contract of the plastering work at the new provincial public works building at Creston.

The Crestonian orchestra plays here to-morrow night, 19th, for a cinderella dance at the hall, 9 to 12, with an admission of 35 and 25 cents.

O. M. Samuelson has moved into the house on the Grover Kifer place. He is at present working at Sirdar.

Word is just to hand from Wm. Ridd that they will be at Antross Alberta, for the winter, where he will be in charge of the sawmill. They moved from Heatherdown at the end of October.

L. A. Campbell, manager of the West Kootenay Power & Light Company, of Trail, with an engineer and construction superintendent, were here at the end of the week, making an inspection of their power site at Goat River canyon.

Rev. R. Hardy, of Cranbrook, was the speaker at Canyon United Church on Sunday afternoon, and so pleasing was his address that some of the local congregation were at Creston to hear him again in the evening. On his trip here he was accompanied by G. Sinclair of Creston.

Canyon Water Users had their annual meeting at the hall on Saturday evening, but due the very disagreeable weather the turnout was smaller than usual. Jas. Bateman, chairman of the board, presided and he and Jas. Turner have consented to carry on as trurtees. Due to their being an ample supply of water it was decided to accede to the request of a number of requests of residents along the main pipe line for a domesti: supply of water. The finances of the association are in splendid shape.

R. V. Willcox of Salmon Arm, the ederal R.O.P. poultry inspector, was here on an official visit at the Fred Powers place during the week. Mr. Powers is just in receipt of the Wm. Watkins cup which goes to the owner of the pen winning highest honors at the Brandon experimental farm egg laying contest, which the Power pen of pullets won for 1932-33. It is a handsome piece of silverware and will be held by the winner for one year.

Miserable weather kept down the attendance to five tables at the Community Society bridge at the schoolhouse on Saturday evening, at which the prize scores were made by Mrs. A. W. Sinclair and Waddy Huscroft. The young people rounded out a delightful evening's entertainment with some literary and dramatic numbers, one of the best of which was "The Parson's Visit," as portrayed by Peggy and Ned Smith.

Residents who can recall the C.P.R. depot when it was in charge of A. R. Swanson will be able to place Murel Olson, who was assistant at that time, and whose marriage took place at Spokane last week to Miss Myrtle Flowers of Hollywood, Calif. Murl is now Canadian customs officer at Kingsgate, and will have the best wishes of many friends here for the best that's going in married life.

November 20th to 26th inclusive has been designated Education Week. Its purpose is to acquaint the general public with some of the objectives, achievements, and possibilities of the schools of B.C. As a result it is hoped that the interest in education may be deepened, and that many people will be induced to visit the schools while in actual session during that week and see for themselves at first hand just what is being accomplished.

At Creston quite an elaborate all-week programme has been arranged with the object of getting citizens better acquainted with education in all its branches. Strength And Courage.

Can we do better this week, followng so soon after the observance of Remembrance Day, than reproduce in this column an editorial from the National Home Weekly, published in Winnipeg? We think not. So here it is:

Gradually it is becoming clear to the minds of most people that conditions today are far more serious than they were during the years of the War. For then, men were buoyed up by hope. They knew that in time their troubles would be over. But no one can tell when this present misfortune will end. The mist of yesterday has become the dense black cloud of today. With many, despair has sapped the strength from courage.

It will not be out of place, then, to recall the words and deeds that during the War inspired hope and urged steadfastness. Of all the written messages there was perhaps nothing finer than the address of General Currie to the Canadian army on the eve of the great advance in March, 1918. In it he makes clear the seriousness of the struggle and the danger of defeat; he indicates the successes already won, and states the need of the moment. Finally he speaks of the reward of victory. The message will be read again with vivid recollections by those who were in the ranks in 1918. May all who read it now for the first time feel that it is equally appropriate today. The problems to be solved, the forces to be overcome, are just as real and as great, and the virtues of constancy, courage and self-sacrifice are just as necessary.

SPECIAL ORDER, March 27th, 1918:—"In an endeavour to reach an immediate decision the enemy has gathered all his forces and struck a mighty blow at the British Army. Overwhelmed by sheer weight of numbers the British Divisions in the line between Scarpe and Oise have fallen back fighting hard, steady and undismayed.

"Measures have been taken successfully to meet this German onslaught. The French have gathered a powerful army, commanded by a most able and trusted leader, and this army is now moving to our help. Fresh British Divisions are now being thrown in. The Canadians are soon to be engaged. Our Motor Machine-Gun Brigade has already played a most gallant part and once again covered itself with glory.

"Looking back with pride on the unbroken record of your glorious achievements, asking you to realize that today the fate of the British Empire hangs in the balance, I place my trust in the Canadian Corps, knowing that where Canadians are engaged there can be no giving way.

"Under the orders of your devoted officers in the coming battle you will advance or fall where you stand facing the enemy.

"To those who will fall I say, 'You will not die but step into immortality. Your mothers will not lament your fate but will be proud to have borne such sons. Your names will be revered forever and ever by your grateful country, and God will take you unto Himself.'

"Canadians, in this fateful hour, I command you and I trust you to fight as you have ever fought with all your strength, with all your determination, with all your tranquil courage. On many a hard-fought field of battle you have overcome this enemy. With God's help you shall achieve victory once more."

The seriousness of conditions today may be observed in both national and international affairs. At home trade is languishing, the army of the unemployed is increasing, and worst of all young people just entering manhood and womanhood are being deprived of the opportunity to earn a living or to form life associations or to contribute to good citizenship. The result is a growing feeling of discontent. Each individual is inclined to blame all others for prevailing misfortunes.

Internationally the problem is even more acute. Debtor countries are refusing to pay, because they feel that they have been unjustly treated, or because they no longer have world-coin to meet the demand. Nor will tariff barriers permit payment in the form of goods. To accentuate the mischief nation is vying with nation in the production of armaments. As for overcrowed states there is no territory available for the surplus population. All of these things make for the spread of those national hatreds which are one of the causes of war. If quarreling is easily possible when people are prosperous and inclined to be neighborly, it is almost certain to occur in violent form when they lose confidence in each other, and when extreme distress prevails.

The only way to avert disaster is the way of unselfishness and self-sacrifice. It is true today as of old that regardless of race, color or creed man is his brother's keeper. It is true now as two thousands years ago that men shall find their lives in losing them. The victories of peace are as glorious and as costly as the victories of war.

Driven by the higher motive it is easy for men to transform a world. The channels of trade will be thrown open, waste areas will be populated, armaments will be cast away, production and consumption will find a balance. Within the state, opportunities for culture and comfort will be measurably equal for all. The man at the machine will be of more value than the machine's production, the needs of the many shall be of more account than the desires of the few, the rich shall not batten on the poor, the laws of the land shall not favor the designs of the privileged class. But each man, recognizing that his neighbor has rights equal to his own, shall honor justice and practise righteousness. Thus in peace may they catch the spirit of General Currie's message. In 1932 men may be as brave, as loyal and as nobly self-sacrificing as they were in 1918. May they hear again the words, "Canadians, in this fateful hour, I command you, I trust you to fight as you have ever fought with all your strength, with all your determination, with all your tranquil courage. . . . . With God's help you shall achieve victory once more."

I saw your advertisement for Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills and decided to try them although I did not have much faith, but now I am very thankful I did as they have proved of wonderful help to me.

I am now strong and well again, but am never without a box in the house."

Obnoxious Billboards

Often Distract Driver's Attention From Important Traffic Directions

There are two counts against the billboard on the highway. It not only mars the landscape and destroys the natural beauty of roadside scenery, but its garishness also distracts the attention of the driver of the car. Important traffic directions posted along the road are often lost in a welter of commercial signs. In the interests of safety the most conspicuous signs on the highway should be those placed there by the highway department to direct traffic.

Now I am less round the hips, and only weigh 147 lbs. dressed. But I feel lighter and can now run upstairs, which before used to make me gasp for breath. Everyone says how well and fit I look, as I am in a store and get no walking exercise at all. The results may not be startling, but the fact remains that I feel much better than of late years—not so heavy—and I now enjoy dancing."—(Miss) J. H.

Landlords Would Be Protected

Quebec May Grant Them Priority Of Lien On Installment Goods

A bill that would give to landlords priority of lien on goods bought by installment, instead of the merchants who sell them, will be presented at the next session of the Quebec legislature, it is announced by Rosario Gaudry, secretary of the Property Owners' League of Montreal. Such a measure, Mr. Gaudry explained, would provide landlords with further protection against tenants who went beyond their means in the purchase of long-period-to-pay goods.

The other preparations do not have the same anti-acid action.

ALSO IN TABLET FORM: Phillips' Milk of Magnesia Tablets are now on sale at drug stores everywhere. Each tiny tablet is the equivalent of a teaspoonful of genuine Phillips' Milk of Magnesia.

BRITAIN READY TO AID CAUSE OF WORLD PEACE

London, Eng.—Stanley Baldwin, Lord President of the Council and leader of the Conservatives in the House of Commons, told guests at the Lord Mayor's banquet, Great Britain could make no further step toward disarmament without similar moves on the part of other nations.

Mr. Baldwin, speaking in place of Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald who was absent on doctor's orders, declared: "The time has come to an end when Britain can proceed with unilateral disarmament."

He added, however, that the United Kingdom was ready at any time to join other nations in plans which might reduce armaments and bring assurance of world peace.

The Conservative leader pleaded for settlement of the war debt problem. "It is essential to the world that ratification of the Lausanne settlements on reparations should now become possible and the work begun there should be completed," he said.

He added he wished the success which had attended the Lausanne parley had been reflected in the world disarmament conference, but reminded his hearers that in accordance with the terms of the "gentlemen's agreement," fulfillment of the accords reached at Lausanne depends on a more lenient debt settlement between creditor and debtor nations.

He reiterated that Great Britain was resolved to stand by her obligations undertaken under the covenant of the League of Nations, and would continue to co-operate with the League in every respect.

From disarmament and war debts, Mr. Baldwin turned to affairs within the empire and to prospects of increased prosperity in empire countries as a result of the Ottawa economic conference.

Of that conference he said: "Patience, forbearance, sympathy and a sense of one another's requirement, we believe, laid the foundations leading to increased trade between us by lowering economic barriers."

Government Not Giving In To Britain Says De Valera

Dublin, Irish Free State.—Eamon de Valera, president of the council of the Irish Free State, told members of the Flanna Fail party, of which he is a member, that "so long as this government is concerned the land annuities will never be paid."

"The new duties against Irish produce we had expected. We knew that the United Kingdom would attempt to bully and coerce us and if we give in she will always do so," he said.

Ottawa, Ont.—Further supplementary estimates for the presnt fiscal yar, totalling $1,534,957, were tabled in the House of Commons by Hon. E. N. Rhodes, Minister of Finance.

The largest single item in the list is an appropriation of $975,000, a further amount required for unemployment relief under the administration of the Department of Pensions and National Health.

Banana Crop Damaged

Jamaica Hurricane Causes Loss Of Three Million Dollars

Kingston, Jamaica.—Fully 50 per cent. of the banana cultivations on this island were wiped out by a terrific storm which struck West Jamaica.

The centre of the storm hit Point Negril, the western extremity of the island, and the wind registered 75 miles an hour. The damage was estimated at $3,000,000. There was no loss of life.

Banker Foils Bandit

Vancouver Hold-Up Is Frustrated By Action Of Bank Manager

Vancouver, B.C.—Less than two hours after a lone gunman attempted to hold up the Sixteenth Avenue and Oak Street branch of the Royal Bank of Canada, police arrested a suspect who is being held for questioning.

The man was arrested at his home by officers, who stated that on searching his room they found a revolver from which a bullet had been fired recently.

Quick thinking and prompt action by E. Devereaux, manager of the branch, foiled the holdup attempt and demonstrated again that the manager was no easy mark for "stick ups."

Shortly before noon a man entered the bank carrying a satchel. Going to Devereaux's desk he pointed a gun at the manager. Devereaux immediately dropped behind the counter and reached for his own gun. The bandit fired one shot and fled in a car, which was recovered by police 20 minutes later and discovered to have been stolen from H. Wright.

On July 28 last two men entered the bank and attempted to hold up Devereaus. The manager rushed into his office and fired several shots through the window to attract attention, frightening the bandits, who fled in a waiting car.

New Rules Issued

Conditions Under Which Civil Servants May Hold Municipal Offices

Ottawa, Ont.—The government has issued a list of conditions under which civil servants may hold municipal offices. The order applies throughout Canada.

In all cases permission must be secured from Ottawa before a civil servant contests a municipal election. If the post he seeks carries a salary or remuneration of $500 or less he may hold it without severing his connection with the government.

If the salary is above that figure, he must secure leave of absence without pay, devoting his full time to the municipal office.

Caught In Flood Of Oil

Two Men Drowned In Peculiar Accident At Montreal

Montreal East, Que.—Caught in a flood of fuel oil, Piacide Bourgeois, 45, and another man were drowned at the plant of the Imperial Oil Company when a huge tank containing 30,000 barrels of fuel oil burst.

The men were digging nearby, standing in an excavation several feet deep. The gush of oil from the broken tank overwhelmed them and both drowned before help arrived. Details as to how the tank broke were not immediately available, but it was stated there was no explosion of any kind. One body was recovered.

Build More Elevators

Vancouver Only Port In the World To Increase Elevator Capacity

Vancouver, B.C.—By December 15, Vancouver's grain elevator capacity will be approximately 1,600,000 bushels greater than at present, this being the only port in the world today where additional elevator construction is being installed.

Three additions to grain elevators are nearing completion, two of which are expected to be finished by December 1. Thus, Vancouver's present capacity of 16,205,000 bushels will be increased to 17,830,000 bushels.

To Market Canadian Products

Toronto, Ont.—The Retail Merchants' Association of Canada announced it would co-operate with the commerce department of Queen's University, Kingston, in plans for an exhaustive study to formulate definite information regarding domestic distribution of Canadian products.

Geese Tangle Wire Lines

Winnipeg, Man.—Four Manitoba towns—Holland, Glenboro, Baldur, and Cypress River—were without electric power for several hours following an aerial attack by a flock of geese on transmission lines. The birds caused a short-circuit, but only three of them were killed.

HUNGER LEADER

Wal Hannington, the militant organizer of the London "hunger march" which recently resulted in serious rioting in the British Capital. Hannington has been arrested, charged with "inciting to mutiny" and he will probably receive a stiff stntence.

Labor Statistics

471,668 Canadians Were Unemployed On June 1st.

Ottawa, Ont.—On June 1, 1931, the date of the Dominion-wide census, Canada's unemployed total stood at 471,668, according to a return tabled by Hon. H. H. Stevens, Minister of Trade and Commerce, in the House of Commons. The wage-earners numbered 2,564,879, of whom 81.39 per cent. were at work.

The number of "unemployed in the ordinary meaning of the term" was 392,809, or 15.32 of all wage-earners, since these persons recorded themselves to have "no job." Others were laid off temporarily, some were out of work through sickness, accidents and lock-outs.

Of the wage-earners, 2,017,606 were males, and 547,273 females. Of the former, 422,994 were not at work, and of the latter, 48,674.

Balloon Is Released

Calgary, Alberta.—Fifth to be released since September, a large meteorological balloon went soaring skywards from the municipal airport here to record pressure and temperature in the stratosphere, eight to 10 miles above the ground. The balloon was released by C. H. Bromley, representative of the Dominion Meteorological Bureau here.

Wife Of Stalin Is Dead

Most Powerful Figure In Soviet Russia Is Bereaved

Moscow, Russia.—Nadya Alliluieva, wife of Joseph Stalin, most powerful figure in all Soviet Russia, but herself a retiring woman who lived plainly, is dead.

The Tass agency, official Soviet news organization, announced her death but gave no details.

She was 30 years old. Only a few months ago she had completed a three-year course at the All-Union Industrial Academy which qualified her as an expert in the production of artificial silk and made her eligible to a high administrative-technical post in an important section of the Soviet textile industry.

In addition to Stalin, their two children—a boy of 12 and a girl of seven—survive her. There also is a stepchild, Stalin's son by a previous marriage, who is 23.

Soldiers On Guard

Militia Men Stationed At Federal Penitentiaries In West

Winnipeg, Mna. — Steel-helmeted militia men, with full field equipment and machine guns, are stationed at federal penitentiaries in Manitoba and Saskatchewan.

Twenty-five men were in each detachment to leave Winnipeg fully equipped and supplied with a plentiful quantity of ammunition. The troopers despatched to Prince Albert carried a truck load of ammunition, while both detachments had machine guns.

There are nearly 600 convicts at Prince Albert, while those housed at Stony Mountain total several hundred, probably near the thousand mark.

Still For Prohibition

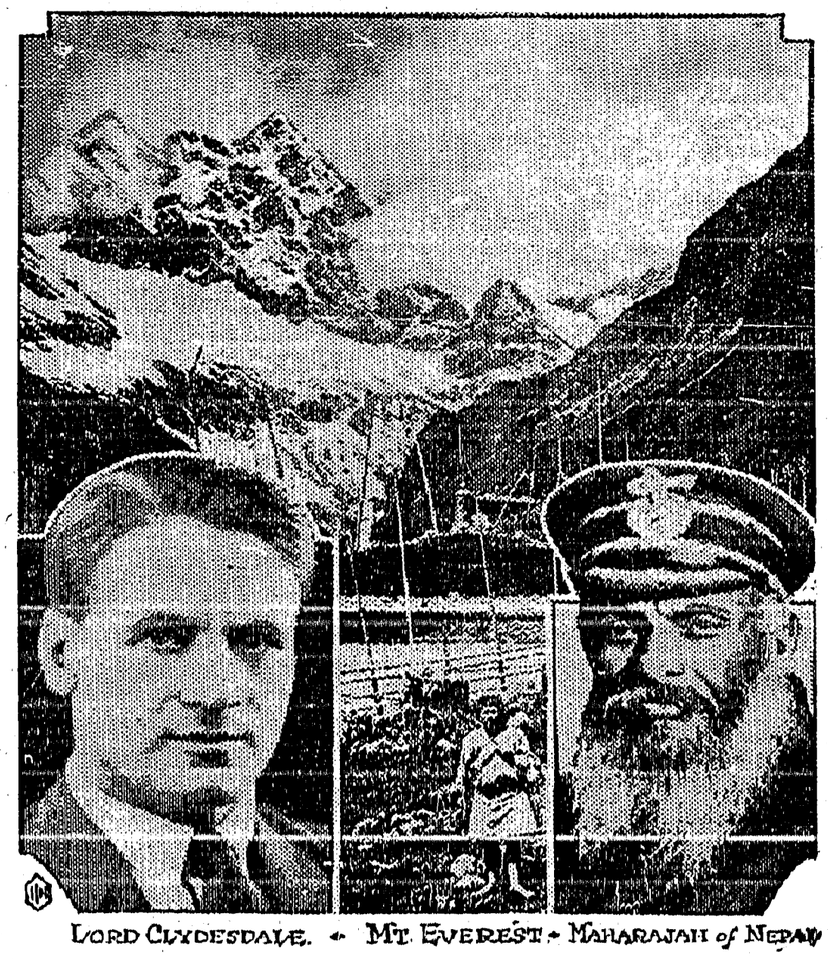
Andrew Volstead Has Not Changed His Viewpoint

St. Paul, Minn.—Andrew J. Volstead said he was still convinced prohibition is the thing for the United States.

Asked to comment on gains made by the wets in the election, he replied: "I have seen too many elections to have national sentiment mean anything to me. I am still for prohibition." He refused to amplify.

Volstead, co-author of the dry act, pertaining his name, is legal adviser to the district prohibition adminstrator here.

BRITISH MARQUESS MAY CONQUER EVEREST BY AIR



LORD CLYDESDALE. — MT. EVEREST — MAHARAJAH of NEPAL

With the chief object of promoting British prestige—particularly in India—the Marquess of Douglas and Clydesdale, British aviation enthusiast and Member of Parliament, with a few chosen companions, will take off from Northern Bengal sometime within the next few months, in an attempt to fly over the summit of Mount Everest, giant of the Himalayas. Clydesdale is being supported in his perilous venture by the British Air Ministry and India Office; and the Maharajah of Nepal, in whose territory the mountain is situated, has given permission for the flight. Two 'planes will make the attempt. One will photograph the other if, and when, it crosses the summit of Everest. This is to provide authentic proof that the feat has actually been accomplished.

MAJORITY FOR ROOSEVELT MAY PROVE RECORD

Washington.—Backgrounding the election of Franklin Delano Roosevelt as United States president by what promises to be the greatest electoral majority in the history of the country, Democratic supremacy in the next House of Representatives passed the three-to-one mark as completion of vote-counting neared.

Meantime the party figures in the senate approached the border of a two-to-one margin.

Some 70 house seats remained to be heard from, however.

It looked as though Democratic majorities would be increased instead of decreased, but there was nothing finally conclusive as to the final line-up.

From Connecticut to the state of Washington, the mighty rush of Democratic ballots that bore the New York Governor to presidency over Herbert Hoover, took heavy and hourly growing toll of "G.O.P." legislators, some of them veterans of many years at the capitol.

Outstanding among the latest Republican old guard victims were the veteran Senator Wesley L. Jones of Washington, and Senator Tasker L. Oddie of Nevada. Their victorious Democratic adversaries were Homer T. Bone, and Patrick A. McCarran.

Other familiar figures who fell before the Democratic hurricane were Read Smoot of Utah, dean of the senate, where he has served for 30 years; George H. Moses for New Hampshire, president pro tem; James E. Watson of Indiana, Republican leader, and Hiram Bingham of Connecticut, administration stalwart.

The lineup for the short session of the present congress, which expires March 4, was in doubt, with the Democrats holding 48 seats, the Republicans 46, and leading in one.

Doubts Conference Benefits

Hon. W. R. Motherwell Says Agreement Injures Trade

Ottawa, Ont.—"If the 1930 Imperial Conference was humbug, the last Imperial Conference was a double-eyed, twice-distilled quintessence of humbug," declared Hon. W. R. Motherwell (Lib., Melville), in the House of Commons. He continued debate on second reading of the bill to ratify the Canada-United Kingdom trade agreement.

He was opposed to the agreement, said the former minister of agriculture, for several reasons. He objected to the government's methods of giving preferences by raising tariffs against the rest of the world. Its effect would be to injure Canada's trade.

The agreement had been arrived at under the "threat" of an imposition of tariffs by the United Kingdom on November 15, said Mr. Motherwell.

Rt. Hon. Stanley Baldwin had given Canadian wheat a preference with one hand and taken it away with the other, when he insisted that the wheat be sold at world prices, Mr. Motherwell said. The only way to secure a preference was by way of a quota.

He had looked for some remedial action on the part of the British government in connection with the necessity of routing Canadian grain by Canadian ports in order to obtain the preference. He could not believe that the government would knowingly interfere with a long-established trade route, via Buffalo and New York.

It would cost twice as much to convey the wheat by way of Halifax and Saint John, in the increased costs of freight and storage. While he was prepared to patronize Canadian ports, he did not wish to do so at a price of four or five cents extra in the way of expenses.

Mr. Motherwell felt that the government's first act at the conference should have been to adjust the exchange situation. If this could not be achieved among "members of the same family," how did the Prime Minister hope to attain it at an international conference among foreigners?

So lonely ...no telephone

"This business of being without a telephone is like being cut off from the world," said Mrs. Grey. "Since we've been without one I've felt like a hermit. With John away and the children at school all day, I miss those cherry telephone chats more than ever. I'm so lonely. It's hard to be otherwise if you can't call up your friends or relatives once in a while, or if they can't call up you."

Mrs. Grey got rid of that lonely feeling by having a telephone installed.

B.C. Fruit at Birmingham

Mrs. L. W. Stephens of Canyon, who is at present on a visit in England, and who was in Birmingham at the time of the recent empire fruit show, writes in very practical fashion of the 1932 exhibition. We feel sure all our readers will be interested in her observations which are as follows:

Editor Review:

Sir,—For the past twelve years an exhibition of fruit and canning from all parts of the empire has been held in different towns, in the hope of interesting English housewives in empire producs.

On entering the 1932 exhibition, held at Birmingham, the first thing that struck one was that the whole hall appeared to filled with mounds and boxes of apples. As one becomes accustomed to the sight, other fruit was also noticed, but I want to dwell chiefly on the Canadian apples.

The Dominian Government had one of the most imposing stands for their display. It was divided into four sections, representing Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, Ontario, and British Columbia, and the apples were splendid. Without prejudice, one can say that the British Columbia apples were the most attractive in appearance. For example, the Delicious and McIntosh of the east were equal in size to those of British Columbia, but were a dull red in color, while the B.C. ones were a bright color.

One lady asked me if we really picked apples as large as those shown—she pointed especially to Delicious—and I could truthfully say I had picked and eaten similar ones in Canyon. This satisfied her. She probably had the idea that many have, that exhibition apples are grown at experimental stations.

One of the most prominent of the dealers' stands was that of the Birmingham (Smithfield Market) agents of the Associated Growere of British Columbia, who had a box of Extra Fancy of every B.C. apple with the exception of Cox Orange.

I had a talk with the stand manager and he explained the lack of this variety being due to poor color of this year's crop and it would, therefore, have spoiled the stand had it been exhibited.

The most beautiful, in point of color were the Winter Bananas. There is very little demand for these, or for Delicious—the favorite being Cox Orange and Jonathan.

The prices ranged from 11.6 for Winter Bananas to 15.6 for Cox Orange. In the shops Gravensteins were selling at 5d pound, and Jonathan at 5d. and Cox Orange at 10d.

There were many English apples and one wonders why there was a demand for imported varieties—the answer lay in the color, and flavor of the Canadian and Australian fruits.

I saw no boxes representative of Creston valley. The Associated being mainly from Okanagan, But perhaps as the exhibition becomes more widely known Creston will take her place among the exhibits.

Death of Mrs. Langlois

Death claimed a well known resident of Kitchener at an early hour Monday morning in the passing of Mrs. Ellen Langlois, whose end came after an illness of more than a year's duration. Deceased was a native of Buckinhamshire, England, where she was born in 1882, coming to Canada in 1910. In 1914 she and her husband, the late Joe Langlois, took up residence in Creston, and moved from that town to Kitchener in 1917, and has resided here ever since. She leaves to mourn her demise two daughters, Vivian and Celina, and two sons Jack and Joe, all of whom are at home, and to whom the sympathy of the community is extended in their sad bereavement. Her husband predeceased her about two years. The funeral was held on Tuesday morning from Holy Cross Church, Creston, with Father L. Choinel in charge and the pallbearers were G. A. Hunt, A. G. Strudwicke, Z. Geroux, B. Johnson, H. H. Redmile and Elmer Blair. Those sending flowers were: Children, Mr. and Mrs. G. A. Hunt and Clara, Mr. and Mrs. B. Johnson, Mr. and Mrs. A. Lepage, Mrs. A. Howard, Miss Jessie White and H. H. Redmile.

Local and Personal

The Crestonian orchestra will play at a cinderella dance at Canyon Saturday night, 19th, from nine till midnight, with an admission of 35 cents to gents and 25 cents to ladies.

Irwin Nickel, son of Mr and Mrs. Geo. Nickel, is a patient at the Creston hospital at present, recovering nicely from an appendicits operation he successfully underwent on Tuesday.

The Presbyterian Ladies' Aid are having their annual sale of work and tea in the United Church basement tomorrow 19th, from 3 to 5.30 p.m. A special feature will be the 50c. table.

NOTICE—From now until further notice my blacksmith business will be run on a strictly cash basis. The margin of profit is so small we are forced to conduct our business this way. W. Morrow.

Cranbrook golf club had its presentation of the season's prizes on Tuesday evening last and among the cup winners is Mrs. G M. Argue, formerly of Creston, who captured the Home trophy for ladies.

The trout fishing season in local waters closed on Tuesday. The 1932 trout catch does not appear to have been as heavy as last season, probably due to the imposition of a $1 angler's license.

E. Turner of Kimberley is spending a few days renewing acquaintances in Creston this week, and during his stay is endeavoring to line up enough talent for the organization of a Moose lodge here. He is east Kootenay supervisor for that order.

Fred Payne left at the first of the week for Cranbrook, where he is resuming work as fireman with the C.P.R. Due to considerable sickness at the divisional city former out-of-work employees are getting back on the payroll for at least a brief stay.

The by-law authorizing the final payment on the fall fair grounds and building was put through at the November meeting of the village council on Monday night. The plebiscite in connection with the purchase was voted on on May 31, 1928, and carried by a vote of 40 to 7.

Rev. R. Hardy of Cranbrook had a large turnout at Trinity United Church Sunday evening, in an exchange of work with Rev Andrew Walker. A feature to the musical service was the solo, "Open the Gates of the Temple," which was delightfvlly rendered by Miss Frances Knott.

At their November meeting on Friday, Creston and District Women's Institute decided to participate in Education Week and are having an open meeting on Tuesday afternoon at 3.30 at which there will be a programme, and Rev. Andrew Walker, will give a short address.

Creston district is experiencing the wettest fall season that it has ever known. There was a snowfall of four inches on Satuday followed by an inch of rainfall for the two days, Saturday and Sunday. The weather has been showery ever since.

Work was completed at the first of the week on a new dry kiln at the Chas. O. Rodgers sawmill and box factory. It is of cement and about 12 x 32 feet, and will be used for seasoning venner for the box factory as well as flooring. A mechanic to take charge of installing the interior equipment will be in from the coast in a few days.

Rev. A. Walker, who was a Cranbrook on Sunday, states that town had a snowfall of at least six inches on Sunday which was still in evidence on Monday. In Alberta they not only had the snow but also cold, Lethbridge had it 23 below zero on Tuesday.

Miss Patsy Richards, a former pastor of the Full Gospel Mission, who retired from the work about a year ago due to failing health, who has been at her home in Vernon, is here this week assisting with the special services that are in progrers. She is accompanied by her friend, Miss McKinnon.

The Relief Committee appeals again for used clothing, bedding, etc., as well as cash donations, to be brought to the village hall on Mondays from 2 to 4 p.m. when distribution will also take place. It is especially requested that all articles be clean. Shoes and stockings for children are urgently needed.

$549 was spent on mosquito control at Kelowna the past season.

At Oyama, in the Okanagan, the Anglicans are paying the pastor's salary by turning in boxes of apples in lieu of cash. Recently a carload had been assembled and these have been sold at a satisfactory price and the money when received will be handed the minister.

The Roman Catholics at Cranbrook have a clear profit of $495 on their 1932 bazaar.

Rossland is not stepping out in its oldtime style. Recently a dance for baseball club benefit barely cleared expenses.

Board Protests Station Service

C.P.R. Officials to be Urged Restore Former Sunday Service —Committee for New Hotel-Beer License Plebiscite.

Matters of considerable importance to both village and district were up for consideration at the November meeting of Creston Board of Trade on Tuesday night last. President R. J. Forbes was in charge and there was a turnout of about a dozen members. F. V. Staples' application for membership was favorably received.

The correspondence had much to do with highway matters, and the only direction in which results appear to have been obtained was in having some asked-for repairs at the bridge and road at Rykerts receive attention—according to one of the members present. The letter from West Kootenay Power & Light Company, which was published locally some three weeks ago, was ordered acknowledged.

Chas. Murrell, the board's representative on the power committee that visited Victoria the latter part of October in an effort to help Creston Power & Light Company get speedy action on their application to develop Summit Creek, reported in detail, and his report was concurred in by F. H. Jackson, who represented the village council. The report was accepted and Mr. Murrell thanked for the very satisfactory results abtained by the delegation.

A letter from a member unable to attend called attention to the withdrawal of C.P.R. station service at Creston depot on Sundays. The station is now locked up from Saturday night until Monday morning; not even comfortable waiting room accommodation given, and the report persists that the services of the assistant is to be withdrawn. The secretary will write the divisional superintend,ent, Mr. Manson, at Nelson, and Mr. Cotterell, who is operating superintendent for all British Columbia, asking that the old order of Sunday service be re-established and that the assistant be not withdrawn.

While at Victoria Messrs. Jackso and Murrell followed up a board letter of the liquor control board as to taking a beer parlor plebiscite at Creston, on the very definite understanding that no license would be issued except to a new and fully modern hotel, of which Creston has some prospect. Mr. Jackson reported that the chairman had advised them that aplebiscite on such terms would be provided at Creston as soon as the petition carrying the signatures of 35 per cent. of the bona fide voters at Creston was received at Victoria. Mr. Jackson was named chairman of the plebiscite committee with full power to select the other members of the committee.

With the prospect of another re distributation of the seats in the B.C. legislature, the redistribution committee of the board was asked to make another effirt to have the territory from Boswell east included in the Cranbrook riding. In the 1932 redistribution the whole Creston riding was merged with Nelson.

In connection with Education Week, Jas. Cherrington was named to act as the board representative handling the matter. The secretary will write Cranbrook board of trade thanking them for the effort they are putting forth to have the highway between Yahk and Creston put in better condition.

Dear Friends,

This is to thank you all for your kind donation of a carload of apples, vegetables, etc., to our drouth striken area in Southern Saskatchewan. If you could see the crowd of people waiting at the car, and the smiling faces as they drove away with a nice supply of apples for their families, you would surely be glad to have been able to help so many poor folks out of the kindness of your hearts. The people of this community wish you all the happiness and good things of this world and a happy Christmas and New Year. Saskatchewan Fruit Growing Campaign

Every Assistance To Be Given In Order To Encourage Fruit Growing In the Province

According to a statement just issued by the Hon. James F. Bryant, who is in charge of the Saskatchewan Fruit Growing Campaign on the Institutional Farms of the Province, an excellent start has been made this fall.

The plans which have been carefully thought out and considered in detail for the establishment of fruit orchards on the Saskatchewan Government Institutional Farms, and for the promoting of fruit growing in Saskatchewan are now definitely being undertaken and work has commenced in connection with the trial nursery and fruit breeding grounds at Regina, and the orchards on the Institutional Farms have been laid out and will be surrounded with windbreaks either this fall or early next spring.

Over eleven hundred grafted crabapple trees, one, two, and three years old, of sixty named varieties, all on Siberian Crab roots and northern grown, have been obtained and will be either planted in the Government Nurseries or distributed to the Institutional farms. Already at Battleford, an orchard plot 1,370 feet long and 376 feet wide has been laid out and planted with caragana windbreaks. Six each of thirteen varieties of hardy named crabapple trees have already been shipped to Battleford. The balance of the eleven hundred have been heeled in at the Regina Nursery and will be sent out next spring. Some twenty-four hundred seedling Siberian crabs have been obtained and on these will be grafted wood of named crabapples and standard apple stock.

Some seventy-five standard apple trees in six varieties have been obtained. These are all varieties that have proven satisfactory in Manitoba and in parts of Saskatchewan where they have been tried out by private owners. All these trees are either budded or crown grafted on Siberian crabapple roots and are perfectly hardy. The majority of these apple trees will be planted in the Regina Nursery in order to get seeds for future planting and distribution.

About one hundred and eighty northern grown, one two, and three year old plum trees, of the best varieties produced to date in Western Canada, have been obtained and were planted this fall in the Government Nurseries at Regina, to supply budding material for propagating these varieties. These grafted plum trees represent thirty-six varieties. One thousand five hundred and ninety seedling plum trees have been obtained for stock or to fruit.

In addition we have obtained from the Experimental Farm at Morden, nearly nine bushels of plum seeds taken from early very hardy plum trees, as well as from a few prominent high quality, improved varieties developed on the Morden farm. The plum seed included the following varieties:

Winnipeg	8	pounds
Olson	5	"
Carstensen seedling	17	"
Native plum	150	"
Mixed plum	75	"
Early Nigra	100	"
Mammoth	35	"
Assiniboine seedling	25	"
Waneta	40	"
Pembina seedling	30	"
Cree	8	"
Cheney	8	"
Assiniboine	15	"

A portion of these plum pits have been planted in the Regina Nursery and the balance divided among the Institutional Farm orchards where they also have been planted. The pits are planted three inches deep about one to two inches apart in rows three feet apart so that they can cultivate between the rows, and a mulch is being put over the rows in order to retain moisture and assist in germination. Of the plum pits retained for the Regina Nursery, one half has already been planted and the other half will be stratified in wet soil and planted in the spring. A record will be kept of the best germination under each method for future work.

The apple seeds and crabapple seed will be kept in the Regina Nursery. We have obtained 340 pounds of Western grown fruit from which the seed, mostly Siberian crab, will be taken, and in addition the Experimental Farm at Indian Head has just sent three sacks of apples and boxes of apple and plum seeds. The seedlings from these will be used as root stock on which to bud the standard varieties from cuttings and buds obtained from provincial private growers, and experimental farms. We are getting bud wood from one hundred varieties of apples and grafting it on the Siberian crab seedlings next spring. We have issued a public invitation to all private orchard owners in Saskatchewan after they have eaten their apples and crabs, to save the seeds and forward them with the name of the variety to the Government Nurseries at Regina, as a voluntary contribution to the cause of fruit growing in Saskatchewan. From private sources we expect to receive much valuable material. Part of the apple and crab apple seed will be planted this fall, and the balance will be kept in a cool cellar when it will be taken out in the spring, soaked in water for two days and then planted.

Mr. J. E. Park, the provincial landscape gardener, who has had a very valuable experience in experimental fruit work, is planning to introduce a set of records in the nursery and on each Institutional Farm, where bookkeeping entries will be made of each variety and the results obtained annually from same. A comparison will be made of the effect of local weather conditions at each farm on the different kinds of fruit, thus establishing the variety of each kind of fruit best suited to each locality.

When the orchard projects were first contemplated the proposals were taken up with the Hon. Robert Weir, Minister of Agriculture at Ottawa, and Dr. E. S. Archibald, Director of Dominion Experimental Farms, and both expressed their appreciation of the importance of the work, and promised their assistance and co-operation, which has been since given in a wholehearted way by them and the officials of their departments engaged in fruit experimental work in Western Canada.

Mr. W. R. Leslie, Superintendent of the Dominion Experimental work at Morden, has been especially enthusiastic and helpful. Mr. Leslie has done some of the finest work in Western Canada in the matter of fruit growing. On my visit to the Morden farm this summer to inspect the work, and ascertain the best varieties suited to the different localities in Saskatchewan in which our Institutional Farms are located, Mr. Leslie spent a full half day showing me over the orchards. He is freely giving his advice as to the best varieties and is not only sharing his experience with the Department of Public Works, but is giving us some of his best material. Saskatchewan is getting the advantage of fifteen years of fruit experimenting at the Morden farm.

We have also received very valuable assistance from Mr. F. V. Hutton of the Rosthern Experimental Farm, from which our young fruit trees have mostly come. Mr. William Gibson, Superintendent of the Indian Head Experimental Farm and R. Wilson, formerly of Morden Station, but now in charge of Horticulture at Indian Head, are also giving us strong encouragement in our work and are co-operating in supplying material which will be sent in and distributed to our orchards and planted in the spring. They have sent in plum, apple and crabapple seed this fall, and similar assistance in the matter of northern grown stock is being given by Superintendent Mathews of Scott Experimental station.

Professor Patterson who is in charge of horticulture at the University of Saskatchewan, is a strong exponent of the Government fruit growing campaign. He has welcomed the opportunity of having his selections from controlled crosses, originated by him at the University, tested out on the Institutional farms in the different parts of the province. Professor Patterson has given us plum seeds in addition to those already mentioned and is supplying us with raspberry plants.

About eighteen hundred raspberry shrubs of thirty different varieties and fifty-seven hundred cuttings of black, red, and white currants of twenty-four different varieties have been obtained and are being heeled in and will be planted in the orchards in the spring between the rows of fruit trees. Gooseberry plants will be received from Morden farm and planted in the spring in each orchard. We have received up to date 1,320 sand cherries for fruiting and experimental work.

We expect also to receive from Morden in the spring, a goodly supply of grape cuttings which will include the following varieties:

Alpha, Beta, Suelter, Hungarian, Selected native grapes from Riding Mountains, and Campbells Early.

The seeds from eleven quarts of sweet blue grapes grown this year and ripened in George Watt's old garden in Regina, have been saved and are being planted. These varieties trained to the fan system which eliminates the trunk, have wintered well in Manitoba and have produced abundant crops of large fleshy, early maturing grapes. They will be grown on all the Institutional farms, and pergolas will be erected where they can be used for ornamental work instead of Virginia Creeper, and at the same time when established will produce excellent fruit for jam, jelly and grape juice.

We therefore feel that the Saskatchewan Government fruit growing campaign is in full swing, and the plum trees which will result from nine bushels of plum pits and the other fruit trees will keep growing and supply fruit to the patients and others after many of us are dead and gone. Similar work will be done each year as it is only by growing and testing out thousands of seedlings annually that new and important varieties will be developed.

Fruit growing is the largest field for scientific and experimental horticulture that exists on the prairies. This field has not been developed in Saskatchewan up to date although here and there private individuals have done excellent work. In co-operation with the Experimental farms and University, the Department of Public Works, through the Institutional Farms, is going to use its best endeavor to encourage the growth of fruit on as many farm and home gardens as is possible in the province, in order to make the homes more attractive and to assist in diversified farming by making each home uniit as self-supporting as possible. Saskatchewan fruit, as a result of our climate, sunshine and soil, is surpassed in flavor by no other fruit in Canada.

With the introduction of the fruit trees, there will be established a hive or two of bees on each farm to pollinate the fruit. If this proves satisfactory it will be the beginning of Bee culture and the production of honey on the Institutional Farms.

STEWARDSHIP OF MONEY

Golden Text: "Take heed, and keep yourselves from all covetousness; for a man's life consisteth not in the abundance of the things which he possesseth."—Luke 12:15.

Lesson: Deuteronomy 8:7-18; Malachi 3:7-10; Luke 12:22-34; 1 Corinthians 16:1-4; 2 Corinthians 8:1-5; 9:1-15; 1 Timothy 6:17-19.

Devotional Reading: Matthew 6:19-24.

Explanations and Comments

Beware Of Forgetfulness Of God Because Of Pride In Possession, Deuteronomy 8:11-14.—Moses foresees that in the Promised Land which his people are about to enter they may become so prosperous as to forget God in not keeping His commandments. Against this temptation to pride (lest their heart be "lifted up") because of their fine houses, numerous flocks and herds, and abundance of silver and gold, Moses warns them, and reminds them of what they owe to God who brought them out of bondage in the land of Egypt.

It Is God Who Gives the Power To Acquire Wealth, Deuteronomy 8:8.—"The first and fundamental principle of stewardship lies in God's ownership of all things. The God who created life in the beginning has a priority claim upon all life. There can be no property, either without society or without God; neither would their be value to property without society or without the God who guarantees all life."—Stewardship Lessons.

Liberality Is Blessed Of God, 2 Corinthians 9:6-11.—Generosity in giving will enrich their own lives, Paul tells the Corinthians. Should a man hoard the greater part of his supply of wheat, being loth to part with it, he would have had a scanty harvest from the small amount sowed, and the hoarded grain, if kept too long, would spoil. It is from a bountiful sowing that a bountiful harvest is reaped.

"Gifts and good deeds are seeds sown which will yield a harvest just as surely as the grains of wheat one may sow in his field. They will yield many different harvests. The blessings they carry to those who receive them is one harvest. Then the blessing that the mere act of giving brings back to the giver is another; for Jesus said, 'It is more blessed to give than to receive'."—J. R. Miller.

THE HOUSE OF DREAMS-COME-TRUE

— BY —

MARGARET PEDLER

Author Of "The Splendid Folly," "The Hermit Of Far End."

Hodder & Stoughton, Ltd., London.

She was lying on her back in the shady wood whither they had ridden out to lunch that day, staring up at the bits of blue sky overhead which showed between the interlacing branches of the trees. The remainder of the party were grouped around her, reclining in various attitudes of a "dolce far niente" nature, while from a little distance away, where the horses were picketed in charge of a groom, came the drowsy, rhythmic sound of the munching of corn, punctuated by an occasional stamp of an impatient hoof.

"Yes, it's been good," agreed Lady Anne. "I shall never settle down again properly as a dowager at the Dower House!" And she laughed gleefully.

To her, it had been almost like a return to the days of her youth, for "her four children"—as she called them—had insisted on her sharing in all their active pursuits, and Lady Anne, who in her girlhood and early married life had been a first-class horsewoman and a magnificent swimmer, had consented "con amore."

Blaise pulled himself lazily up into a sitting posture and glanced towards the crimson glow of westering sun where it struck athwart the tall trunks of the trees.

"You'll none of you live to go back to England. Instead, you'll be dying of pneumonia and a few other complants—if we don't get a move on soon," he observed. "It's almost sunset, and after that it grows abominably chilly in this eastern paradise of Jean's. Besides, I fancy it's going to blow great guns before long."

It was true. Already a little chill whisper of wind was shaking the tops of the trees, and before the party was fairly mounted and away, the whisper had changed to a shrill whistling, heralding the big gale which drove along behind the innocent seeming breeze which at first had barely rocked the topmost branches.

It was a longish ride back to Beirnfels, and the sun had dipped below the horizon in a sullen splendour of purple and red before the shoulder of the hill, upon the further side of which the castle stood, came into sight. Now and again the moon peered out between the racing, wind-driven clouds, clearly limning the bold black curve of the hill against a background of lowering sky.

Jean and Blaise were riding abreast, a little in advance of the rest, engrossed by the difficulties of carrying on an animated conversation in a high wind. As they swung round the bend in the road which brought the hill's great shoulder into view, Jean threw back her head and stared at the sky above it with a puzzled frown on her face.

"Why . . . . how queer!" she exclaimed. "The sun set nearly half an hour ago and yet there's still quite a brilliant red glow in the sky. Look, Blaise—just above where Beirnfels stands."

Blaise glanced up casually in the direction indicated, then suddenly reined in his horse and half-rose in the stirrups, staring at the red glow deepening in the sky ahead.

"That's no sunset!" he exclaimed sharply. "It's—Great heavens, Jean! Beirnfels is on fire!"

Even as he spoke a tongue of flame, mocking the dull glow with its gleaming blaze, shot up like a thin red knife into the sky and sank again.

A shout came from behind. The others had seen it, also, and recognized its deadly import. The next moment the clatter of galloping hoofs echoed along the road as the whole party urged their horses on towards home as fast as they could cover the ground.

Soon they struck off from the road, taking a bridle path which slanted through the woods clothing the base of the hill, and as they emerged on to the broad plateau where Beirnfels had stood sentinel through wind and weather for so many years, the whole extent of the catastrophe was revealed.

By this time the angry glow in the sky had turned dusk into day, while from the doors and windows of the castle fire vomited forth as from a furnace—upward in long, sinous tongues of flame, licking the blackened walls, downward in spangled showers of sparks that drifted towards the earth like flights of golden butterflies.

Little groups of men and women, helpless as ants to stay the fire, rushed futilely hither and thither with hosepipe and engine, while on the smooth sward which fronted the castle lay piled enormous quantities of household stuff, a medley of fine old furniture, torn tapestry wrenched from its place against the walls, pictures, mirrors—anything and everything that could be dragged out into the open by eager hands and willing arms.

The major-domo, an elderly, grey-haired man who had been born and reared upon the estate and who had taken service with Glyn Peterson on the day when he had first brought Jacqueline, a bride, to Biernfels, caught sight of the riding-party returned and came hurrying to Jean's side.

The tears were running down his wrinkled face as he recounted the discovery of the fire, which must have started either just before or during the servants' dinner-hour, when few people, of course, were about the castle, and which had obtained a firm hold before it was detected.

The household staff, practised to a limited extent,—a fire drill had been held once a month in Peterson's time—had done their best to cope with the flames, but vainly. The high wind which had arisen had thwarted their utmost efforts, and finally giving up all hope of saving the interior from being gutted, they had confined themselves to rescuing such valuables as could be easily removed.

There was the usual mystery as to how the fire had originated, and several circulated amongst the chattering throng which hurried hither and thither, momentarily augmented by the peasants who, at sight of the castle in flames, had come trooping up the hill from the village below.

The most likely story, and the one to which Blaise inclined to give most credence, was that the child of a woman who worked daily at the castle, escaping from its mother's care and launched on an independent voyage of discovery through the rooms, had knocked over a burning lamp. Then, terrified at the immediate consequences—the sudden flaring of some ancient tapestry, dry as tinder with the summer heat, near which the lamp had fallen—he had bolted away, out of the castle and so home, too scared to tell anyone of the accident.

But, as Jean commented mournfully, what did it matter how it happened? Except from the prosaic viewpoint of the fire insurance company, who would probably desire to know all kinds of details that it was impossible to supply!

For her, nothing mattered except that Beirnfels, her home from childhood and the place where she and Blaise had proposed to spend a great part of their married life, was a furnace of flames.

It was a splendid but very terrible sight. The great grim walls of the castle stood four-square against the sky, charred and blackened but defiantly impervious to the flames that were licking covetously against the solid stone which fashioned them. Sentinel to the very end, they reared themselves unvanquished, guardians still, though all that they had sheltered through their centuries of watch and ward lay consumed within their very heart.

Jean, standing beside Blaise and watching the upward-tossing flames and the crimson banner of the lowering heavens, spoke suddenly:

"'And the sky as red as blood above it.' Blaise, the last of Keturah Stanley's prophecies has come true!"

An hour later help was forthcoming from the distant town to which a messenger had been dispatched post-haste as soon as it was realized that the household staff, even with the assistance from the village, was hopelessly inadequate to cope with a fire of such magnitude. But it was already too late to accomplish very much in the way of salvage. All that remained possible was to quench that inferno of fire as soon as might be and so, perhaps, save some of the outbuildings.

Hour after hour through the night, human endeavour fought with the flames—subduing them again and again only to find them kindling into fresh life at the gusty bidding of the wind, leaping redly from the lambent heart of the conflagration, which glowed and pulsed and heaved like some living monster intent upon destruction.

It was not until dawn was breaking, that, with the dying down of the wind, the flickering crimson light an hour later, when the fire had been faded finally from the sky; and a half at last extinguished, the village folk, gathered about the scene of the catastrophe, had dispersed to their homes.

Lady Anne, accompanied by Nick and Claire, started for the inn of the Green Dragon, whither the landlord had hurried on ahead to prepare temporary quarters for the now homeless little company from the castle. But Jean and Blaise still lingered by the deserted ruins loth to say farewell to the place that had meant so much to them.

Beneath the misty azure of the summer morning sky, fanned by little vagrant zephyrs—rearguard of the hurricane which had passed—stood all that remained of Beirnfels—blackened, naked walls, stark against that tender blue, brooding above the mass of cooling wreckage.

Jean's mouth quivered a little as her glance took in the scene of utter desolation.

"My House of Dreams," she whispered brokenly.

She was silent a few moments, her eyes embracing all that had once been Beirnfels in a gaze which held both farewell and retrospect. And something more—some vision of the future. In the dawn-light pearling the sky above she recognized the eternal promise of Him Who "commanded the light to shine out of darkness."

Her House of Dreams! The inner meaning of the song had grown suddenly clear to her.

When she turned again to Blaise, her expression was serene and tranquil. Touched with regret perhaps, but bravely confident.

"I don't think it matters, Blaise," she said simply. "Beirnfels was only a symbol, after all. My House of Dreams-Come-True isn't built of stones and mortar. No one's is. It's just—where love is."

There was a representative turnout of members of the curling club for the special meeting at the town hall on Tuesday evening, where the coming season's activities were informally discussed. It was decided to at once proceed with improvements at the rink, these to include the putting in of a couple of ventilators in the roof, a board cushion on both sides of the building which is counted upon to prevent the ice heaving. levelling the bottom of both rinks and the putting in of more sand, which will also help prevent ice heave, and a general repair of the rink roof.

The rapid development Creston has made as a retail centre is very strikingly evidenced this week with the taking into stock by S. A Speers of a solid carload of canned goods—fruits and vegetables entirely The car contains almost 700 cases, or well over 15,000 tins, of considerable variety, although 200 cases of it is tomatoes. This is the first time in Creston's history that one firm has taken delivery of a straight carload of these two commodities, which will be retailed at the Speers' store and Imperial Groceteria. The goods are all of the well-known Royal City brand from the Rroder canneries at New Westminister.
