May Give $1000 New Hospital

Village Council to Donate This Amonnt Subject to Some Stipulations Being Met—Fall Fair Delegation Leary of Note.

Hearing deputations was the big feature of the March meeting of the village council Monday evening at which Reeve McFarland presided; and Councill rs Henderson and Jackson were in attendance.

Correspondence was about the lightest ever known and was quickly disposed of The board of trade han two requests. One was for a cash donation to help with 1933 publicity, which was stood over for fuller particulars. The other was asking for a tie up shed for the accommodation of farmers who came to town with horse vehicles. This was refused, as was also the request of the Salvation Army for even the usual donation of $10 to help with the organization's rescue work. Accounts passen for payment totalled $224.

The first delegation was from the Agricultural Association and consisted of President C. Sutcliffe and H. W. McLaren, one of the directors. The village is held up securing title to the fall fair buildings due the fact that the fall fair people owe the Park Association $115 of interest that was due the park people when the fall fair directors sold the exhibition property to the village, and which has never been paid.

It was suggested that the village loan the fall fair the $115 to complete the deal and the fall fair directors give the village a note, without interest, for this amount Legal advice was produced showing that such a note could be given by the agricultural association officials without those signing the note being liable for payment. but President Sutcliffe was doubtful in that connection and after some very friendly discussion it was agreed to let it stand till the fall fair annual meeting on Monday night.

The other deputation was from Creston Valley Public Hospital, consising of Geo. Johnson and Jas. Cherrington, and who were introduced by Councillor Jackson who was ex-officio a member of the committee with the two delegates. Messrs. Johnson and Jackson spoke in some detail of the proposed new hospital building which it is hoped to erect before July, and for the construction of which a cash grant was desired from the village.

The probable site for the hospital is on Creston Avenue on the heights overlooking the toutist park, which all agreed was ideal. Cost of the new building was placed as low as $2000, but those present were not so optimistic. The plan for the building has been prepared and will provide for 14 beds in a very modernly laid out and equipped hospital. The proposed cost feature provoked the most discussion and it was finally moved and seconded by councillor Jackson and the reeve that $1000 be donated subject to certain conditions to do with building be complied with.

Lister

Bluebirds were reported seen in the Huscroft area at the first of the month, and this week meadowlarks were reported arrived at the late P.D. Thomas' ranch. Robins have been with us for some time.

Mrs. H. Lindhorst was taken to the Creston Valley public hospital at Creston Monday, where she underwent an operation for appendicitis and is recovering nicely.

Baseball will be featured in the sports life at Lister school this year. The money won in the school districts' exhibit at Creston fall fair last year is being used to purchase an outfit.

Lister had two church services on Sunday. Rev. M. T. Percival took Anglican worship at 11 a.m., and at 3 p.m. Rev. C. Banse was here for Lutheran Church.

W. P. Edwards loaded out a carload of Alfalfa for Castlegar, on Thursday, shipped to the Vancouver Milling & Grain Company at that point. The same day Julius Kranabetter shipped a car of the same feed to Nelson.

The Community Society will have a bridge at the schoolhouse on Saturday night, 18th, at 8.30, with Mr. and Mrs. Frank Baker as hosts.

Jim Byrne of Cranbrook, who has just come out of the hospital at Creston, is spending a few days with his sister, Mrs. Ben Byer.

C. E. Hopper, secretary of the Land Settlement Board was here on Saturday for the annual meeting of Lister Waterworks District, of which he is one of the trustees. The meeting was in charge of Frank Baker, chairman, and Fred Powers acting as secretary. W. P. Edwards will carry on as a trustee, with Colonel Lister and Mr. Hopper as the other members of the board. Mr. Hopper was here to submit the new terms the board proposes to enforce in connection with payments. The newer settlers are to at once pay all arrears of land, school and water taxes, and with this done they will enjoy a two year moratorium, otherwise they will be asked to vacate their places. Somewhat better terms are offered the original settlers, although they are to at once pay all the arrears of taxes. Mr. Hopper explained that the board had decided to quit playing Santa Claus—at least insofar as all taxes and interest payments are concerned.

Board of Trade March Meeting

Want Action to Bring Orchard Production Back to Former High Standard—Freight Rate Equalization is Premature.

An attendance of about 15 members was in evidence for the March meeting of Creston Board of Trade on Tuesday night, with President W. L. Bell in the chair, and the business transacted entirely of a local nature.

Some very plain talk was indulged in in discussing the report submitted by Col. Mallandaine, chairman of the transportation committee, everyone present agreeing that the roads in the district this spring are the worst the valley has ever known; that the district was not getting the value for the money spent on relief and some remedy should be applied, but no one had a remedy, although several were of the opinion that a change of government would help in that direction.

Chairman C. W. Allan of the committee on freight rates equalization on apples shipped to export via Vancouver, was absent but Messrs Putnam and Rodgers of that committee presented a statement of case in which the board concurred, to the effect that in view of the limited tonnage moving it would be just as well to let the matter drop.

There was an animated discussion in connection with the decline in orchard production in the district. It was pointout that in 1924 the outgo of apples was about 225,000 boxes. Of course, that was the year of the blizzard that took heavy toll of apple trees, but in 1928 the outgo was 186,000 boxes, while in 1931 and 1932 the shipping was not quite 165,000 boxes—with the bulk shipments worked out as going boxed.

Some were of the opinion the district horticulturist should be moved back to Creston and established on a small experimental farm, others thought experimental plots at the several points in the valley would accomplish much. One rancher present argued it could be cured by a much greater use of fertilizer. Others advanced the idea that if a growers organization pledged to produce not less than 500 boxes per acre were established it might do a lot of good work in enlarging production. The matter was finally disposed of by referring it to the committee on agriculture for a report at the April meeting.

Attention was called to the unsafe condition of things at the C.P.R. track crossing opposite the Mercantile, but as this is not a public highway the only action taken was to ask the village to improve the street lighting facilities at that spot by moving the present corner light to a post nearer the depot platform

Institute Decides Have Bulb Show

Will be Held End of April or Early May—Favor the Tudor Rose League—April Meeting Early to Avoid Good Friday

Creston and District Women's Institute had the March meeting at the home of Mrs. M. Ross, with the president, Mrs. C. F. Hayes, in the chair, and a good turnout of members and four visitors. Mrs. W. Fraser was appointed convenor of the schools committee.

There was a discussion regarding Tudor Rose League of which all members are pledged to support the purchase of Canadian and empire goods in preference to others, but no definite action was taken, although the general feeling was in favor of the objects of the league.

The visiting committee reported considerable activity in the past two months, and undertook to carry on for March. This committee consists of Mrs. R. Stevens and Mrs. Maxwell.

It was decided o have the usua annual bulb show, the date to be set later, either at the end of April or early May suggested. The April meeting will be held on Thursday, 13th, owing to regular date falling on Good Friday. The meeting will be at the home of Mrs. Cherrington.

Roll call was answered by each member giving an Irish joke or story. The half hour of entertainment was arranged by Mrs. Dr.) Warren, closing with a competition in flower names, which was won by Mrs J. P. Ross, with consolation honors going to Mrs. McLaren. The tea hostesses were Mrs R Stevens and Mrs. C. Murrell and a free-will offering was $1.30.

Things looked bad for the Meds when Ada Lewis sprained her ankle in the first few minutes; but the red-and-blue aggregation made sure of a second place tie at least by shutting out the Dominoes, 11-5.

The Centipedes practically cinched their leading position when they turned back a bold bid by the Bearcats, 17-11. Sloppy passing almost cost the blueshirts the the game.

Creston Loses Natal, Basketball

Score was 23-13—Visitors Had Much the Best of First-Half Play with Creston Finishing Strong—High Reps. Have Win

Creston men put up a game fight against the snappy Natal Pirates, losing a hard game, 23-13. There was plenty of rough checking on both sides, 17 personals being called.

The game opened with Creston getting possession of the ball, yet for the first few minutes the local men seemed afraid of the reputation of the Natal team and failed to attack at all. The result was a fast break by the Natal outfit, Katrichak scoring the first basket. Using the bounce pass another team attack gave Challa a score on a beautiful one-handed shot. In the next two minutes Qualye, Challa, and Tom Krall scored to give Natal a pretty lead. Then Creston came to life, and worked the ball down the floor with some nice combination for Webster to score. Katrichak and Corrie both sank foul shots. Creston called time out. Farris missed two free shots. Christie sank one. The first half ended in a Creston rally. Score 11-4.

The second half started with a Creston rush, but attack after attack failed when they threw the ball away under the Natal basket. Four personals in quick succession by the locals resulted in two points more for the Pirates. Farris scored on a pass from Christie, these two playing a pretty game all the way through. Venzi made a nice one-hand-field basket. Corrie made a free throw. Another spectacular shot by Venzi followed. Then the Natal team broke beautifully, Katrichak scoring on the play. A Creston rally followed, Webster scoring on a combination play and Tully on a one-handed shot from under the basket. Christie and J. Krall free shots. In a scrimmage under the basket, Katrichak scored. This was the last point in the game, final score being 23-13.

In the preliminary, High School Reps trimmed the Creston Motors, 26-10. Opal LaBelle played a steady guard game and saved many a point for the winners. Dot MacDonald was the pick of the losers.

"Fresh from the Gardens"

Primary Cause Of Depression.

A recent address by Professor Gilbert E. Jackson, of the Department of Economics of the University of Toronto, delivered before the Empire Club of Toronto, has attracted wide attention throughout Canada, and deservedly so. It has been quoted on the floor of Parliament, and has been made the text of countless newspaper articles. Yet it dealt with a very simple subject, a subject as old as the human race,—selfishness.

Thousands of sermons have been preached on this subject, books and dramas without number have been written with selfishness as the central theme, the law courts have been filled with cases arising out of selfishness, sorrow and trouble of all kinds have sprung from it all down through the ages. Nevertheless, Professor Jackson's address commands an immediate and large audience today because he deals with the all-prevailing world depression as having its basic cause in just this one thing selfishness. And who is there who will say he is wrong?

Professor Jackson is an economist. He deals with cold facts and still colder figures. He is concerned with the actualities of life, with things material to our human well being. But when he has analysed all the factors, and sifted all the facts, and studied all the evidence pro and con relative to this world economic depression, he is forced to the conclusion that the basic trouble is, after all, not some man-made institution or system like banking or tariffs, that it is not over-production or under-production, but a condition of mind and heart of the average individual,—his selfishness, avarice and greed, of which all these other things are but the natural and inevitable outcome.

So, professor Jackson stressed the point that economic betterment must come primarily from a change of heart in the individual rather than merely by tricks of economic readjustment; from proposals that go deep into the heart of man and begin with his own conscience. "Looking back on the past four years I wonder," he said, "that the realization of these things has not brought forth a new religious movement."

It is not a new religious movement that is called for or necessary, but action based upon acceptance of the fundamentals of Christian religion. The Sermon on the Mount contains the whole and complete formula for the cure of the present depression, and the prevention of any depression in the future. It is not the formula of Capitalism, nor Socialism, nor Communism. It is the formula of the Golden Rule, acceptance and application of the principle of doing unto others as we would that others should do unto us.

What are these tariff barriers erected by all nations but an outward expression of the narrow nationalistic sentiments of individuals, and narrow nationalism is the outcome of the selfishness and greed of individuals. Tariffs are erected for the openly avowed purpose of selfishly promoting our own individual and national interests at the expense of loss and suffering by other individuals and nations. Selfishness and greed is the mainspring of such actions.

And what is true of tariffs as an instrument of economic warfare between nations, applies with equal truth and force to scores of other man-devised and man-made methods, schemes and systems, conceived in selfishness, first of the individual, and through the individual or the community, the nation, and the world. And the selfishness and greed of the indivdual is merely more openly expressed and multiplied when it takes the form of the selfishness of classes, communities and nations.

At the present time it is considered the popular thing to denounce the so-called "vested interests" as the embodiment of all the selfishness and greed in the world, and to declare because one class acts from these undesirable and evil motives, other classes should unite in order to act from exactly the same motives. Two wrongs do not and never did make a right, and the swing of the pendulum from one wrong to another wrong will remedy nothing, but only provide still more trouble, further greed, a greater growth of selfishness.

Those who today control finance and industry under the prevailing system have much to account for. They have been greedy and selfish. They must and will be made to mend their ways, even if their hearts and desires remain unchanged. But the remedial method to be employed to that end is not to meet greed with greed, to oppose selfishness with more selfishness, to organize one set of interests to wage war on another and opposing set of interests.

All greed and selfishness does not arise from greed for wealth or property. There is the greed for position, for power, for domination, for honors, for social distinction, for something, almost anything, the other fellow has and we have not. And how few individuals striving for these things are animated solely by a desire to possess and use them unselfishly for the benefit of others?

Professor Jackson is right, unquestionably so, when he declares that economic betterment must come primarily from a change of heart in the individual, and that word "individual" is all inclusive; it means the banker, the mortgage and loan executive, the railway head, the politician, the manufacturer, the merchant, the farmer,—all of these, but it also includes the clerk, the artizan, the farm hand, the laborer. Mankind is in one lifeboat in the storm of this depression. They must pull together on the oars in unison, not at cross purposes. It is a case of one for all and all for one.

To change the metaphor, this is a time for building up, not tearing down. It is a time to sink all selfishness for the common good. The man in debt must receive generous treatment and ample assistance at the hands of his creditors; equally so the creditor is entitled to and must receive proper recognition of his rights by the man who is indebted to him. The employer must make sacrifices in the interests of his employees; the employees must do likewise to help their employer.

Supplies From Britain

Imports Of New Products From the United Kingdom

Outstanding characteristic of the imports into Canada from the United Kingdom during the first nine months of the present fiscal year was the increase in many raw products that are to be finished in this country or to play some part in manufacture, said Hon. H. H. Stevens in a statement issued regarding trade with the United Kingdom.

"It is encouraging," said the minister of trade and commerce, "to note the diversity of these increasing demands for supplies from Great Britain."

Union Of British Columbia Municipalities Ask For Plebiscite

Initiating a move to secure a Dominion-wide expression of public opinion on the question of legalizing sweepstakes for hospitals, the Union of British Columbia Municipalities at its convention in Victoria, decided to petition the government of British Columbia for a plebiscite on the subject in that province.

In addition, all municipal unions in Canada will be asked to take similar action, as well as the Canadian Union of Municipalities.

"The prettiest rag rugs I ever saw"

"I feel I should share with you a wonderful compliment I had on my new rag rugs," writes an appreciative Three Rivers woman. "A wealthy lady from the City of Quebec was visiting here and saw the rag rugs I had just finished. She was so enthusiastic—said she had never seen such artistic ones, with such rich, lovely colors. She asked me if I bought new materials to get such beautiful color effects. When I told her I had dyed my old scraps with Diamond Dyes, she simply couldn't believe it. Of course I'm very proud of my rugs. Besides being beautiful colors, they are fast and washable." In the popular new art of rug making women are finding again the real value of Diamond Dyes for permanent dark colors by boiling. No other dyes make old materials look so new and rich in color, because no other dyes contain so much of the finest aniline colors. For light dainty shades without boiling for lingerie, summer blouses and dresses, use the wonderful new Diamond Tints. All drug stores have both Diamond Dyes and Diamond Tints.

No Argument

The Court was trying a case which had arisen out of a car accident.

"You say you were half scared to death," said counsel for the defence.

"I know very well I was," said the victim, with warmth.

"Then," said counsel coldly, "how do you know it was a motor car, or something resembling a motor car, that hit you?"

The victim looked square at him.

"It resembled one all right," he replied. "I was forcibly struck by the resemblance."

Cannot Issue Special Coins

Government Has Refused Request By City Of Toronto

In these days of discussion regarding stamp bills, flat money and other methods of ridding Canada of its share of the depression, it is interesting to note that the issue of money in any form for special purposes is contrary to all British practice. None but the King may benefit by the issue of coinage.

Some time ago it was suggested to Ottawa that the Canadian government authorize a special issue of 50-cent pieces in order that Toronto might facilitate the financing of the 1934 centennial celebration. It was estimated that a substantial profit might be realized in selling these at a premium over the counter to souvenir hunters and coin collectors. Mayor Stewart asked, of course, for a monopoly on the sale for the city of Toronto.

However, His Majesty's government, through Ottawa, has ruled that important as the occasion may be, such a precedent cannot be established in the case of Toronto, according to a report made to the centennial committee.

France Has Largest Gun

Throws One-and Half Ton Shell Over Eleven Miles

Just to add spice to the disarmament discussions, it is announced that France has built the largest gun in the world. It is a 52-centimeter howitzer. That is a 20.4-inch calibre and is larger than the 18-inch naval piece which was built by Britain during the war and mounted on H.M.S. Furious and the monitor Lord Clive. Britain had discussed building a gun of 20-inch calibre, but it was never manufactured.

The new howitzer of the French can throw a shell weighing 3,080 pounds a distance of 11¼ miles. When you think of projecting a chunk of metal weighing more than 1½ tons through the air to drop on a building or some other target, the imagination is stretched to contemplate the possible damage from the explosion. The gun is carried on a railway mounting 98 feet long and weighing 265 tons.

Travellers Ask For Better Inspection Of Hotels In Saskatchewan

Pointing to the need for adequate inspection of Saskatchewan hotels to afford guests protection against fire hazards, members of the Associated Canadian Travellers at their monthly luncheon in Saskatoon recently, declared themselves unanimously in favor of government action leading to the enforcement of existing regulations providing for fire escapes. It was the opinion of speakers that travellers, who were the largest class of country hotel users, were the proper individuals to request government action. The recent Tisdale tragedy was cited to show the dangers of hotels lacking fire escape equipment.

Hikers On Maine Highways Must Face On-Coming Cars

The State of Maine is giving official recognition to the rights of the pedestrian to a limited use of its highways. That is a concession. Actually the pedestrian has the right-of-way over the cars—but the cars have the momentum. But the hikers in Maine are going to have a legislative enactment requiring pedestrians to walk on the left side of the highway. Such a walker would face oncoming cars, and be in greater safety than if on the other side. Motorists would be no less relieved from a hazard that distresses conscientious persons as they drive.—Brandon Sun.

A MEASURE TO REPEAL THE BAN ON SWEEPSTAKES

Ottawa, Ont.—Sweepstakes for hospital and charitable purposes would be legalized in Canada if a bill introduced in the senate by Senator A. D. MacRae, of Vancouver, becomes law. It is the Vancouver senator's second attempt to repeal Canada's ban on this type of large scale gambling. He introduced a similar bill last year, but failed to get it through.

Public feeling was now in favor or regularized sweepstakes, Senator MacRae said. In Vancouver 73 per cent. of the voters at a plebiscite had approved government controlled sweepstakes. The British Columbia Hospital Association had voted in favor of them and the Union of British Columbia Municipalities had endorsed the idea.

The object of the bill is to authorize the provinces to permit the conduct of sweepstakes in their territories, not by any group of citizens, but only by a committee authorized by the attorney-general, who would direct the scheme. The money would be devoted to the welfare of the sick, the destitute and the maimed.

The bill expressly forbids the advertising of a sweepstake outside the province in which it is being conducted and the appointment of agents for the sale of tickets outside the province.

Senator MacRae said in 1931, the Irish hospitals received from the three sweepstakes, more than £2,000,000. In 1932, according to a cable he received recently from Ireland three sweepstakes had gross receipts of £11,000,000. They gave away in prizes £7,500,000 and the expenses were £1,000,000.

As to the moral question involved, the churches in Ireland had voiced no disapproval of the holding of sweepstakes. After all church bazaars were the same thing on a small scale.

Senator MacRae outlined the serious situation of the hospitals and other charitable institutions in Canada. The Vancouver hospital for instance, owed $270,000 to the bank, and had no money to pay it. Other institutions were in like predicament. He closed with an urgent plea for the passage of his bill.

May Reduce Number Of Police Magistrates

Alberta Has Lowered Appropriation As a Matter Of Economy

Edmonton, Alberta.—Estimates introduced in the Alberta legislature for the attorney-general's department show a reduction of $13,758 compared to last year's figure and it is understood a reduction in the number of police magistrates in the province is planned by the government.

The appropriation for police magistrates dropped from $69,205 to $52,180. Attorney-General J. F. Lymburn said it might be necessary to place some magistrates "on a fee basis, or there may be a reduction in the number employed."

Hit By Financial Crisis

Former Kaiser May Lose Money As Result Of U.S. Situation

London, Eng.—The former German Kaiser probably will be obliged to cut his household expenses as a result of the financial situation in the United States, the London Daily Mail's Doorn correspondent reported.

Wilhelm also was said by the reporter to be anxiously watching fluctuations of the Dutch florin, a fall in which would make him comparatively poor.

To Help British Farmers

London, Eng.—Major Walter Elliott, Minister of Agriculture, introduced in the House of Commons a bill designed to re-organize British agriculture and bring prices of British farm products to a remunerative level. It would empower the government to protect organized markets by regulation of imports through quotas or other means from any flood of overseas imports.

Report Not Confirmed

Ex-Kaiser May Have Abandoned Claim To German Throne

London, Eng.—Any prospects of former Kaiser Wilhelm II. seeking to regain the throne of Imperial Germany as a result of recent events there is stated to have vanished through the former sovereign's own act.

If the London Daily Mail's correspondent at Doorn, Holland, is accurately informed, Wilhelm Hohenzollern has completely and voluntarily abandoned the claim with which he has often been credited—of again wielding power over his own people.

Instead he is reported seeking permission to spend his declining years in the privacy of his castle at Homburg Vor Der Hone, the famous mineral spring resort in Hesse-Nassau. He was 74 years old in January.

Any anxiety the ex-kaiser may have felt concerning the attitude of his sons toward his abandonment of claims to the throne were reported removed by a kind of confirmatory document of abdication. At a recent family council in Doorn, the sons were reported to have turned over all their "rights" to the throne to the ex-crown prince for his disposal.

Approves Financial Move

London Daily Mail Thinks Canada's Intention Is "Wise Step"

London, Eng.—The Daily Mail, Conservative organ, described the alleged intention of the Canadian government to ask parliament for extraordinary powers in the matters of finance as a "very wise and timely step."

"There are many factors," it continued, "which must operate strongly in Canada's favor. Her banking system is free from most of the weaknesses which brought difficulties elsewhere. She has not a multitude of small mutually competitive banks but a close co-operation between 11 large banks under the Bankers' Association."

The Daily Mail refers to the report the government would ask parliament to invest it with all the powers conveyed under the "peace order and good government" clause of war-time legislation. This clause would give the government power to initiate practically any measure thought necessary to the welfare and stability of the Dominion.

Cut Hollywood Salaries

Motion Picture Producers Feel Financial Pinch

Hollywood, Cal.—Cessation of all activities at all motion picture studios in Hollywood was ordered early today by the Association of Motion Picture Producers unless drastic cuts in salaries and wages for an eight-week period, due to the banking situation, were taken by all employees and artists.

For salaries more than $50 weekly, a cut of 50 per cent. for the eight-week period would be made with a minimum salary of $37.50 established. Those earning less than $50 weekly would take a 25 per cent. cut with a minimum of $15 a week. The cuts would be retroactive starting March 6.

Break Up Parade

Vancouver, B.C.—A parade of several hundred women and some men who planned a demonstration in front of the city hall, was broken up and the participants dispersed by police. One man, Gus Carstrom, was struck on the head by a police baton during the melee and was removed to hospital for treatment.

Want British Destroyers

Canberra, Australia.—Prime Minister Joseph Lyons announces the Australian government is negotiating with the United Kingdom for replacement of destroyers in the Australian squadron by four destroyers of the latest type from the British navy.

Ready To Leave League

Tokyo, Japan.—The cabinet approved and sent to the privy council the draft of a communication in which Japan is expected to notify the League of Nations about March 20 of her withdrawal from that international body.

FIRST MATE BECOMES K.C.

The King has approved the appointment of Mr. Lewis Noad to be King's Counsel. Mr. Noad, in his youth, sailed on liners between London and the East and obtained his First Mate's certificate. Being ambitious to be a barrister, he has risen to be a successful junior counsel in the Admiralty Court and a Lloyds salvage arbitrator.

Political Disturbances

Foreign Correspondents In Germany Face Expulsion Measures

Berlin, Germany.—Five persons were killed and several injured in political disturbances in four German cities.

In Breslau, one Nazi was killed and five wounded when shots were fired from trade-union headquarters upon a group of 250 brown-shirted marchers.

Two Nazis were killed and six injured when a funeral procession in Duesseldorf was fired upon. In Wuppertal a Reichsbanner man was killed by unidentified assailants.

A Communist leader was found shot to death on a street in Duisburg, while a worker was seriously injured in his home by an unidentified person.

Foreign correspondents in Germany have been warned that expulsion measures are being prepared to apply to those who have "persistently misrepresented the internal situation."

Consigned To the Sea

Four Hundred Gallons Of Pure Alcohol Dumped In Harbor At Coast

Victoria, B.C.—Four hundred gallons of pure alcohol, valued at approximately $10,000 went into the sea here recently.

Officers of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police, on instructions from authorities at Ottawa, poured that quantity into the waters of Esquimalt harbor.

The liquor was seized by the Mounted Police last summer on board the American-owned gasoline launch "Advance," which was captured in the Gulf of Georgia on its way to the mainland.

Tribute To Cermak

Chicago Citizens Pay Respects To Slain Mayor

Chicago.—The body of Mayor Anton J. Cermak lay in the darkened parlor of his home as Chicagoans went about their affairs at a slower tempo after according an impressive tribute to the man who rose from immigrant to mayor.

But one floral piece adorned the casket—a spray of lilies sent by President and Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt. The president, for whom the bullet that brought death to Chicago's chief executive was intended, was represented by a military aide, Lieut.-Col. Campbell B. Hodges.

From the time the train bearing the funeral cortege arrived until the casket disappeared behind the portals of the Cermak home, the citizenry observed a minute calm. The motorcade of official automobiles that followed the hearse through the Loop district, past Mayor Cermak's workshop—the city hall—and to his home on the northwest side, numbered almost 100.

Vote Against Fighting

Victoria College Students Oppose Taking Up Arms For Country

Toronto, Ont.—Men and women students at Victoria College, by a majority of six, voted "that this house will not, under any conditions, fight for its king and country."

About one-tenth of the 1,034 students registered at the college attended the debate. About half of these present were women. There were several unusual scenes. A white feather proffered by a girl student was enthusiastically accepted by young men attending. The League of Nations was termed "half-baked idealism" and a "ghastly failure." Pacifism was called "a damnable sin" by a co-ed.

Must Pay Legal Costs

Halifax Lawyer Awarded Judgment Against Veregin

Halifax, N.S.—J. J. Power, K.C., Halifax lawyer who argued in supreme court on behalf of Peter Veregin, has been awarded a judgment for $661 against the Doukhobor leader. Costs of $35 were added to the amount by Judge W. J. O'Hearn in his decision.

Shortly after Veregin was freed from the threat of deportation to Russia, litigation was opened on Mr. Power's bill.

It is understood a settlement of the account will be made with little delay.

Purchasing Radio System

Ottawa, Ont.—The Canadian radio broadcasting commission will purchase the radio broadcasting system of the Canadian National Railways. It was understood the sale would consist of three stations, one in Vancouver, the others in Ottawa and Moncton, N.B.

A HAPPY PICTURE WITH A SAD ENDING

MARSHAL CHANG RESIGNS HIS POST AS COMMANDER

Peiping, China.—Thirty-five year-old Marshal Chang Hsiao-Liang, who resigned as commander-in-chief of the Chinese armies operating against the Japanese in the north, explained to the government he considered himself unfit to command.

His resignation climaxed a long period of criticism of his administration of the Chinese defence forces which, since September, 1931, have been almost steadily withdrawing before the Japanese. In a telegram to the Nanking government the young marshal said:

"After the loss of the three eastern provinces (comprising Manchuria), I tried my best to remedy my fault but the fall of Jehol convinced me I am unfit to keep command."

Chang succeeded his father, the late Marshal Shang Tso-Lin, as war lord of Manchuria in 1928.

Peiping, China.—The arrest and execution by the Chinese of General Tang Yu-Lin, who governed the province of Jehol until that territory was taken over by the Japanese, was reported here today.

A reliable source said General Tang had been seized at Hsif-Engkow, a pass through the Great Wall. Troops of Marshal Chang Hsiao-Liang, who has just resigned as the principal North China military commander, made the arrest, it was said.

Discuss Railway Problems

Diverse Opinions Heard In Ottawa Debate

Ottawa, Ont.—Joint operation of the Canadian National and Canadian Pacific Railways was termed the only lasting solution to transportation problems, by Dr. Peter McGibbon, Conservative, Muskoka, in the House of Commons.

From the other side of the House, Hon. Peter Heenan, former Liberal Minister of Labor, attacked the government legislation implementing the recommendations of the Duff commission on transportation on the ground it would establish exactly what Dr. McGibbon advocated—joint operation of the railways.

Laws Should Be Uniform

Hon. R. J. Manion Advocates New Regulations For Truck Traffic

Ottawa, Ont.—Uniform regulations throughout Canada are needed for truck traffic in competition with railways, Hon. R. J. Manion declared in the House of Commons.

The railway minister intimated additional measures were being taken to make uniform the various regulations throughout Canada.

A questionnaire had been sent out, and when replies were received officials of the various provinces would probably be brought to Ottawa with a view to arriving at some equitable scheme of taxation and fixation of rates for the buses and trucks.

Aids Empire Products

Schedule Introduced In Australia House To Reduce Duties

Canberra, Australia.—A schedule reducing substantially the duties on 51 commodities from empire exporters was introduced in the House by Lieut.-Col. T. W. White, Minister of Customs.

The bill represents the first instalment of application of articles from nine to 14 inclusive of the agreement of the imperial conference. The chief reductions included in the bill introduced recently are on wool, felt, fur goods, hats, socks, stockings, wireless goods and rabbit traps.

Soviets Taking No Part

Moscow, Russia.—The Soviet government has refused to participate in the League of Nations consultative commission which is to deal with the Chino-Japanese conflict. The reason ascribed was the "hostility" of the major participants toward the Soviet administration.

Cut off from his friends . . . no telephone

Being without a telephone for the first time in many years made Art Smithers realize how much his telephone had meant to him. What he missed most was the social contacts. He couldn't have those friendly chats over the wire, invitations that used to come by telephone didn't come at all now, and when he wanted to have the bunch in for the evening he couldn't get in touch with them.

He couldn't stand being cut off from his friends for long, so he had a telephone installed.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Progress by Cheap Transportation

Editor Review:

Sir—British Columbia motorists hailed with delight a benevolent government's New Year gift in the shape of 14 months car licence on easy terms for the price of 12. To look a gift horse in the mouth is not sporting, but experience has taught us to enquire rather closely into the motives behind gifts from this source.

We wonder if an early election is threatening, or what there is in the wind. It is apparent that the minister of finance is after the scalp of the motorist who, in previous years, took out plates for the best travelling months only. This owner will henceforth have to buy a licence for the whole year or be forced off the road.

Presumably this "New Year's gift" is designed to augment the treasury at the expense of the harassed motorist; actually the regulation will seriously interfere with the production of the goose that lays the golden eggs.

The whole system of taxation by high licence fees is arbitrary and unfair, in consequence of which it is a poor producer of revenue. When the high licence tax was slapped on, were our legislators under the delusion that the owner of even a model T was wealthy. and therefore fair game to be taxed to extinction?

It is conceded that practically all road costs should be borne by the motorist, but let this road-user pay according to his use, by means of an increased gas tax, and let the licence fees be reduced to a normal figure.

Reasons for encouraging motor traffic abound, Our roads, with the exception of the narrow path through the heart of Creston, are wide enough for all our cars. There are also uses for most of the cars now rusting in storage by reason of high licence fees.

The gas-driven vecicle is a cheap, convenient form of transportation, indispensable to the professional and business man. It is also the most economical method of import and export for the many agricultural holdings which are too small, or too valuable for horse-feed production.

The employee's interest in this question is as important as either of the above, for motor transportation enormously increases the area of his potential employment. This point is emphasized in the major construction now being carried through to completion at our doorstep. At Canyon the West Kootenay, and theoretically the ultimate power consumer, are saved the expense of building cook and bunk houses for their employees, while the employees in a wide area, by living at home, save boarding and many other expenses.

Motor transportation makes this possible and its cost, though slight to the employee enabled the local garages to retain their mechanical and service staffs through the winter months.

Let us then, as opportunities arise, instruct our representatives in no uncertain terms that high license fees must go, that we must have good roads, which we will pay for on a fair basis by means of an increased gasoline tax, and above all that the retention of the flivver on our roads is essential to the prosperity of town and country alike.

CRANK CASE.

BACK OF BEYOND

By OPTIMIST

Part VI.

"This area," continued the farmer, pointing to the south, "comprises some 7000 acres of the finest wheat land in the world, and when under crop attracts visitors from every part of the American continent. They come here in swarms, eager to buy, but after one voyage on the Nightmare they beat it back home, to dream about land that is not the best in the world but a certainity of a longer life to enjoy it in.

"I wish, stranger, you could see the activity prevailing here at the time of harvest. Dozens of trucks hauling the grain; tractors, combines and all the machinery of this mechanical age, all tearing into it, and the harder they tear into it the greater is the flow of gold into the coffers of the government. Every man that could beg, borrow or steal anything on wheels got a job here on the grain haul.

"They had to put on a special service of haulage to keep the village and this place supplied with gasoline. In fact, John D. is said to have mentioned to his bankers that a few of these harvest conditions would about put him on easy street, and yet," continued the farmer, sadly, "our government is so dead, so decayingly dead to its own interests, that it allows the hired help they keep here, supposedly looking after their interests, to slowly gtrangle the bird with the golden egg production. Honestly, stranger, if I were a weeping man, I would drown you in my own tears."

"By the way," said the stranger, "I noticed a life buoy within the packing case on the ferry; is it ever used?" "Not yet," came the answer, "It only arrived a few days ago. It has quite a story attached to it. If I do not weary you I'll spring it. Shall I?" The stranger expressed himself as tickled to death so the farmer commenced.

"Quite a number of years ago the board of trade over yonder in the village, having more boards than trade upon their hands—say, why don't you laugh out loud." "What at," asked the stranger.

"Oh, Lord," said the farmer, "I got off a good one there, and you don't even smile." "Well I'll smile if you tell me what to smile at," said the other.

"Alright, I'll spoil my joke by explaining it," said the farmer. "You see, the boss of the board of trade over there gets his living by the manufacture of boards. He runs a sawmill; quite an asset to that burg; keeps a lot of families with eats, and keeps a lot more from bumming off the taxpayers. Well, at the time I am speaking of, he was stacked up with lumber and had no orders. Do you get it now?"

"Oh yes," said the stranger, "I get it; the board of trade had a lot of lumber and no orders." "What," screamed the farmer, "are you, by any chance, an Englishman; I've heard you cannot drive a joke into their heads with a chisel and mallet?" "Alright, let it pass, you have taken all the conceit out of yours truly. I'll manufacture no more jokes for your benefit, and get along with the story."

"As you heard my remark just now, the board of trade had lots of boards and no trade, so to keep themselves out mischief, and to let the League of Nations know they were still on the map, the board cast about for something to occupy them. I happened along about this time and the board asked me to suggest something to occupy them. I mentioned several matters I mentioned several matters I thought they could not make any worse by tackling, and one of these was to the effect that they might try to obtain for the ferry ship. Nightmare, a boat and a lifebuoy. I also suggested the board might reduce the price of lumber, but this was not looked upon with favor, so I did no press the matter.

"I presume the board acted upon my lifebuoy suggestion, for the first thing we knew an official was established here to check up on the number of people using the ferry, the number of drownings and other accidents. The official remained in residence about a year, and was then transferred elsewhere selling railways on a commission. I think he was a very conscientious man, and kept a careful tally of the traffic. In fact I feel sure of it, because after he had been reporting to headquarters for about two months he was advised to discontinue reporting the drownings, etc., and confine himself to the traffic that successfully made the trip alive with no bones broken.

"Of course this made the job easy; it cut his work about 75 per cent., and reduced stationery costs to nil, for from that time onward he was able to send his tally of successful passages without accident on the back of a used envelope. I've heard it said that when the incompetent in town heard of the saving of department moneies he was making, he gnashed his store teeth, causing some damage and expense of an overhaul. Anyway, he vowed he would beat this tallyman's record if he had to use the same bottle caps over and over again.

"Well, our tallyman went out selling railways and we figured it out that our hope for a lefebuoy went with him. But it is the unexpected that happens, as the man said when the brick dropped upon his head, and this is the unexpected part of it. Some time ago, so it is rumored, seized all the goods and chattles from some poor fellow for non-payment of liquor license; maybe it wasn't his liquor license, perhaps it was because he voted for the wrong party. Anyway they seized for something, and when they came to sort the spoil, lo and behold, they came upon a lifebuoy.

"I'll tell you, stranger, trade and commerce picked up right away. A special session of the house was called, and the members from near and far respondid Times were slack with most of them and the clarion call of duty had reached them. Incidentally, their transportation and expense money came with it, at least some of the expense money, because they —most of them never know what expenses they need until they get through with the job.

"The telegraph companies did a land office business; the wires almost burned themselves out carrying messages of reservations required in the members' old quarters in the Dowager. Orders for the necessary refreshments wer scattered around among those who boasted the sign 'purveyor of his majesty's provincial parliament,' and taking it all in all th country appeared to be on the verge of a boom.

"After the members had all assembled and the proclamation read to them, the house adjourned to the cellar where the matter was discussed informally, and the refreshments were sampled. The informal discussion lasted for a couple of weeks, and the members, by this time, were more or less aware that they had been brought together to decide the momentous question of what to do with the lifebuoy.

"Of course, each member whilst agreeing with his colleagues, kept certain ideas to himself, and when the members were put to the question on the final day, Donneybrook fair wasn't in it. The member from the Klondyke wanted the lifebuoy to protect the valuable lives of our heroes who go gaff spearing for whales. Others wanted it spread among the salmon fishers. One member wanted it so that he might teach his kids to swim.

"But after that bunch had howled themselves hoarse, the member stood forth and made the speech of his life. "Mr. Talker—I mean brother Speaker, or you up in the front there, just listen to this and listen good, because what I say in this joint goes over, see. There's no monkey work about me. Maybe I climb up on the cupboard onee in a while, but that is a reversion to the habits of my remote andestors. According to Hansard, there was great applause, which seemed to soothe the ruffled feelings of the member. Anyway he went right after them only pausing at times to accept the refreshment brought to him by the "sergeant at arms"

"I cannot tell you all that took place, but I have it on good authority, that he wound up his remarks by ordering the Speaker to wrap the darned thing up and he would take it home with him to install it upon the ferry ship Nightmare.

"With these words he collapsed upon the floor. Some said he was delirious, but others said no, that couldn't be; there wasn't enough in the house to get him that way. Anyway, they took him over to the Dowager and tucked him snugly into bed and before leaving him they draped thh lifebuoy around his neck to soothe him when he awakened. And that, stranger, is how we came to have that lifebuoy.

Rev. M. T. Percival, the Kimberley-Creston Anglican pastor, was here for service on Sunday afternoon.

The gas and oil at the store is now kept under lock and key, and gas thieves will now find it difficult to supply their needs.

Saturday's rain, and Sunday's sun has made short work of the snow that came Friday night. Roads have been flooded and many deep ruts cut by the running water.

Bad weather and equally bad travelling prevented many attending Sarurday night's bridge drive. Seven tables were in play and the intake was $9.50. High score prizes went to Mrs. E. Uri and G. Benedetti, and consolation honors to Miss A Hook and M. Hagen. Proceeds were for fall fair prize list fund.

R. P. Brown, a representative of West Kootenay Power & Light Company, was through here last week canvassing the homeowners to wire their houses and take electricity from the company's development at Goat River canyon. Very attractive terms are offered to defray wiring costs.

The whist drive and dance held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Victor Carr on Friday night, 3rd, brought to a close one of the most successful seasons ever witnessed at Alice Siding. The prizes on that occasion were won by Mrs. Willis and Jack Smith. Following cards a very dainty lunch was served; and the evening was brought to a close with dancing, the music being supplied by Mrs. Willis, piano, and Ron. Smith, violin. It is hoped by all the local residents that the Social Club will resume operations at an early date as these Friday evening gatherings have become increasingly popular each season. It is now five years since the club was organized, and at its inception was composed of half a dozen families. It now has a membership of about 50, and the number present at the weekly meetings often exceeds that, with the frequent visitors from town. It hasn't been necessary to charge any admission fees as each family, in turn, entertains the other members and assumes all responsibility for that night. It is gratifying to learn that the harmony that has existed between all members has spread to other branches of community enterprise, as was shown this month at bees arranged to erect private residences.

Rev. T. Lindgren, Swedish Church pastor at Nelson, was here at the first .f the week and held service on Tuesday evening.

Canyon baseball club has come to life for 1933 and will have a dance at the hall on the 24th.

Eight inches of snow fell here at the storm on Friday night and Saturday morning, but has since disappeared. The big thaw has played havoc with the roads, ruts in the centre of the highway being almost a foot deep in some localties, making auto driving very risky. Right now Canyon roads are the worst ever known.

On account of so much flu of a mild sort amongst the younger pupils the junior room of Canyon school was closed Tuesday and Wednesday. W. H. Kolthamm is also home, laid up with flu and Arrow Creek school is also closed.

L. Rowe, who has been stopping with Hilton Young for the past two years, got away on Tuesday to Vancouver, from where he expects to sail for Shanghai, China, to resume steamship work. Rowe was a general favorite with all, lending a hand with every community effort in a capable but unassuming fashion as well as being personally equally likeable, and a host of friends will wish him the best of luck. A number of friends gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Halstead on Monday evening to tender him a sendo.r that was a most enjoyable function.

In connection with the dance for hospital benefit on February 17th, the Review is asked to submit the financial statement. The dance netted the hospital $66.50, thanks, to some extent, to the generosity of F. Putnam and Frank Staples, who donated the turkeys that were raffled. The receipts were: Door, $67.50; turkeys, $27.75; ticket sale $16; donations, $2; total, $122.26 Expense: Printing and advertising, $9; orchestra, $33.75; miscellaneous, $3. Total, $45.75.

The American tournament, which has featured badminton club activity for the past month was concluded on Monday. During the series the 44 players were paired and were to play against each All told 343 games were played and the winners of the tournament are Mrs. J. E. Johnston and Gib. Sinclair, who captured 16 out of 17 games they played. Second place went to R. M. Telford and Mrs. Sinclair, and third place was taken by Tom Crawford, jr., and Mrs F. C. Rodgers.

Mrs. Douglas Putnam (nee Vera McGonegal) was honor guest at a shower sponsored by the younger set at the home of Mrs. E. W. Payne on Saturday night which was a most enjoyable affair, reflecting much credit on the hostesses, Mrs. D. Weston and Miss Kate Payne. The evening was spent at bridge with the high score prize to Mrs. F. Levirs, and the consolation honors to Miss Betty Kemp. Mrs. Putnam was the recipeint of many very useful gifts, and a delightful lunch was served at the close of the evening.

Staked Gold Claim

Woman Prospector Beat Old-Time Miners Into Cariboo Country

Some of the old-time prospectors in the Cariboo gold country are losing out to newcomers in staking claims this winter, but not Mrs. Gertrude Murphy.

Mrs. Murphy has been prospecting in the Cariboo off and on for many years. Usually she spends the winter in California, but she heard of the early rush to the Cariboo this season and hurried north. She hiked in over the frozen wilderness on snowshoes and staked several promising claims on the headwaters of Lightning Creek several days before the vanguard of the newcomers arrived.

The grizzled old men who have habitually staked claims every spring in the Cariboo have not fared so well. By the time they got out on the trail they were too late.

In addition to Williams Creek, where gold was first discovered more than 60 years ago to start one of the most colorful stampedes in the mining history of the continent, several other creeks have now been thoroughly staked, including Lightning, Antler and Lover's Leap below Wingdam. All through the old town of Barkerville men have filed their claims.

THE EFFECTS OF ALCOHOLIC DRINKS

Golden Text: "At the last it biteth like a serpent, and stingeth like an adder."Proverbs 23:32.

Lesson: Proverbs 23:29-32; Isaiah 28:1-4; Daniel 5:1-4.

Devotional Reading: Galatians 5: 16-24.

Explanations and Comments

A Picture Of a Drunkard, Proverbs 23: 29, 30.—By a series of questions the writer of these verses gives us a vivid picture of a drunkard. "Who hath Oh! Who hath Alas!" the Hebrew literally reads, for the words translated "woe" and "sorrow" are interjections, not nouns. Woe and sorrow come to every one sooner or later, but the drunkard creates them for himself. "Who hath contentions? Who hath complaining?" Drunkenness embroils men in quarrels and strife. "Who hath wounds without cause?" Drunken men come to blows over nothing, without knowing why or wherefore. "Who hath redness of eyes?" Bleared eyes are one of the conspicuous signs of the drunkard.

The speaker then answers his own questions: "They that tarry long at the wine; they that go to seek out mixed wine.' By mixed wine may be meant wine mixed with spices or with opiates. "There is a touch of sarcasm in this answer; the word elsewhere used of diligent search after knowledge is here used, as if ironically, of the investigations of connoisseurs in wine, meeting to test its qualities."—Dr. Plumptre.

The poem closes with a soliloquy of a drunkard who is past reformation, he "will seek it yet again."

"Ah, that men should put an enemy in their mouths to steal away their brains! That we should, with joy, pleasure, revel, and applause, transform ourselves into beasts!"—Shakespeare.

The Appearance and the Effect Of Wine, Proverbs 23:31, 32.—The writer now counsels everyone to keep away from temptation. "Look not upon the wine when it is red." "Critics judge of wine, among other indications, by the color of it; some wine, they say, looks so well that it even says, 'Come and drink me'."—Matthew Henry.

"'When it sparkleth in the cup'; literally, 'When it gives its gleam, or eye, to the cup,' that is, when it is full of life."—Toy. Nor when it "goeth down smoothly"; see the Song of Solomon, 7:9. The wine which fascinates like a serpent is also as poisonous as a serpent—"at the last it biteth like a serpent, and stingeth like an adder."

"Not only the sting of the serpent, but the subtlety of the serpent is in wine. The deception lies in the fact that the habit of drinking will become confirmed before you know that it is enslaving you. Every glass of liquor increases the desire for another glass."

"Take heed of the bait, for fear of the hook.'

One Word Would Do

Complaint is made against the proposed slogan, "Buy American," that it would include articles produced anywhere between northern Canada and the Argentine. So the suggestion is made that the slogan read, "Buy United States." But another strong element is developing which seems to feel that all the good purposes will be served if the slogan be abbreviated to a single word, "Buy!"—Christian Science Monitor.

CORRESPONDENCE.

MORE ABOUT THE BURNELL PLAN

To the Editor:—I have received a number of requests to publicly express my views in respect to the Burnell Plan, which I have been studying for some months. I am of the opinion that this plan can revive business activity in Western Canada without government aid simply, soundly, and immediately.

It is universally admitted by economists and realized by business men that there can be no revival of business activity unless and until our agricultural income is revived. A greater purchasing power among farmers is the supreme need at this time.

The Burnell Plan, a strictly controlled inflationary device, offers a means of putting a greatly increased purchasing power to work immediately. It points out a simple and practical way for business people and farmers to join forces for their mutual benefit.

The plan has received the hearty endorsement of a number of leading economists, banking officials, and business executives in Winnipeg and other western cities. It is being closely studied by boards of trade, service clubs, retail merchants' associations, and other bodies directly interested in the revival of business. Interest in the plan centres chiefly around the fact that it indicates an immediate speeding up of business activity by increasing the velocity of retail and wholesale commodity turnover and avoids most of the objections to other inflationary schemes. The sponsors of the plan are asking professional and business men to study and criticise the details of the plan before it is introduced to the general public and the farming community.

In brief the plan is as follows: A Collective Produce Clearing Association is formed, having for its Board of Directors a group of men who are outstanding in the business world and whose names automatically inspire public confidence. Any farmer may become a member of the association upon payment of a fee of one dollar. The association is represented by an agent at every country point. (Negotiations are in progress with a view to having the branches of the chartered banks act as agents.) To its agents the association will issue "Produce Bonds" or vouchers and special stamps valued at multiples of four cents.

When a farmer sells produce (say a load of oats worth $5.00) he receives a cheque or cash ticket from the buyer. Ordinarily he would do $5.00 worth of business with this document. Under the Burnell Plan he endorses his cash ticket or cheque to the association, and receiving a produce voucher with a face value of double amount, namely $10.00. He affixes a 40 cent stamp, which he has purchased from the association, and tenders the voucher to a local merchant for $10.00 worth of goods The merchant affixes a 40 cent stamp, which he has purchased from the association, and passes the document on for $10.00 worth of goods or services.

The voucher passes through fourteen hands in this manner, each holder adding a 40 cent stamp. Each holder subsequent to the farmer gives $10.00 worth of goods or services and, after contributing his 40 cents, receives $10.00 of value. Thus everyone has done $10.00 worth of business instead of $5.00 worth, and has paid a discount of 4 per cent. for the opportunity.

When the fourteenth holder has added his stamp he takes the voucher to the nearest association agent and redeems it for its face value of $10.00 cash. To redeem the voucher the association has on hand the original $5.00 deposited by the farmer at the outset, plus $5.60 which has been paid in by the purchasers of stamps which are affixed to the voucher. Thus there is on hand $10.00 to pay to the 14th holder and a surplus of 60 cents to cover operating expenses and to build up a reserve. As soon as the voucher is redeemed it is cancelled and retired from circulation.

Certain natural objections to the plan are evident. For instance, it is said that the whole plan is based upon a sales-tax and that business cannot stand it. The answer to this argument is easy. Admitting that the 4 per cent. discount accepted by each holder of the voucher is in the nature of a sales-tax, it is readily seen that this is the only tax in existence which has the direct effect of stimulating business activity. Whereas an ordinary sales-tax represents a slice of your profit taken by the Government because you have done a stroke of business, the tax involved here is a portion of your profit which you voluntarily contribute directly to your own community for the purpose of speeding up business. Business men realize that taxation is the order of the day. It is inevitable. By accepting the voluntary taxation involved in the Burnell Plan you may prevent compulsory taxation of a more unpleasant type.

Another objection to the plan is summed up in the words, "I don't like scrip schemes." Here, again, it is a matter of facing what is almost inevitable. Whether you like it or not, scrip is rapidly working its way into the commercial life of western Canada, and will probably be adopted in many communities during the coming year. Some scrip schemes have more objectionable features than others. Great advantage will ensue if, instead of encouraging the mushroom growth of a score of unrelated scrip issues, we firmly establish one plan which is economically sound and applicable to the whole West.

Some critics have suggested that an inherent danger of the Burnell Plan lies in the possibility of vouchers getting "stuck halfway," and not completing the full round of 14 transactions. The likelihood of this occurring is so slight as to be practically negligible. As each voucher travels from the farmer to the ultimate holder there is actual cash behind it. The cash backing is never less than 54 per cent., and it is constantly growing as people use the vouchers. Value increases with use, and every voucher is 100 per cent. redeemable in cash to the 14th holder. No wise business man will refuse to accept the vouchers if the integrity of the issuing organization is firmly established. If he refuses to accept the vouchers he simply drives business across the street to the merchant who will accept them.

The sponsors of this plan fully realize the importance of public confidence. They are setting up a Board of Directors comprised of business men whose names are well known to the people of the West,—men whose association with the plan will automatically establish its integrity and inspire the necessary confidence.

The plan has been studied by professional and business men, economists and financiers. Weaknesses have been checked and remedied. It has now reached a stage where it has received the endorsement and backing of many of the most level-headed leaders in the West.

This plan will give an important stimulus to business,—not in the middle, and not at the tail-end,—but right at the beginning where it is most needed and where its effects will be shared by everyone in the community. It will solve the basic problem of diminished farmer purchasing power. It will enable the farmer to buy twice as many goods, to pay twice as many bills, as he could otherwise do. It will enable merchants to move twice as much merchandise from their shelves, at ordinary price-levels. It will permit municipalities to achieve double success in tax collections. It will enable wholesalers to get rid of more supplies. It will speed up the collection of long overdue doctor-bills and dentist-bills. It will mean that mortgage companies will be able to clean up their frozen accounts more rapidly. It will speed up business all along the line and create a new spirit of industry, energy and enterprise in Western Canada.

To accomplish this end the plan demands something from the public. It demands confidence and enthusiasm and interest and support. It does not pretend to give something for nothing. But it does, definitely and specifically, offer an appreciable reward to the community which is willing to help itself to the extent of contributing 4 per cent. of its normal profits for the sake of getting out of the awful hole of depression and stagnation.

Yours very truly,
Winnipeg. W. A. Landreth.

CHAPTER VII.—Continued

In his cabin, with the steamer throbbing on toward Steel-End, Alan wondered what Joyce's reacton would be if he should go to her and frankly tell her about that tragic incident in his life which had brought about his engagement to Elizabeth. Joyce would understand his motive. She would no longer think he'd acted of his own free will. Perhaps if she knew this truth, she might allow him to resume their old intimacy. . . . . But Elizabeth, what of her? She was waiting, waiting there at Endurance, for him to marry her. In honor and faith he could not break away now. That secret and powerful circumstance still bound him and would bind him to her all his life.

* * * * * * *

A half-mile up in the fleecy clouds up above the pretty city of Edmonton, Mr. "Buzzard" Featherof was dropping out toy parachutes carrying free cakes and printed matter of the E-Z Kleen Soap and Washing Powder Company, Ltd.

He was tired, stiff, hungry and indescribably bored.

During the late war Buzzard had knocked an assorted number of Fokkers, Taubers and Albatrosses out of the air; had come down hmiself a couple of times rather precipitately; and once, commanding a five-plane circus, hand brought down a Super-Zeppelin in the Channel after it had dropped its "eggs" in cabbage patches around darkened London.

Since his return to Canada, Buzzard had taken a fling at aerial map-making in British Columbia; had worked a season with the Manitoba Fire Prevention as a "smoke hawk"; had bombed papter-mache French chateaux down amid the flowers and climate of Los Angeles.

Recently, tired of working for other folk, he had raked together some money and bought a machine of his own, which he now was flying.

It was a queer nameless contraption, this monoplane of his—an assemblage of piano wire, canvas, spruce and iron, held together by luck and Buzzard's lizardry at flying. It had originally been a White Speedair with "Jenny" engine, but he had redoped the fabric and put in a second-hand Whirlwind and equipped it with third-hand under-gear of the float-wheel type, and overhauled it generally till little of the original machine remained. Only his warm friendship with the aviation inspector kept it from being junked. But somehow—and this is the rock-bottom test of any flying machine—it had never yet come down before Buzzard wanted it to. And it did have speed; anything lacking speed would never have satisfied him. Such as it was, it was his very own; and no mother was ever prouder of a cross-eyed snaggle-toothed child than Buzzard was of his White Speedair.

He was, however, ambitious to get a big new De Havilland, so that he could safely take up a girl down in Kamloops and carry her along with him on his airy path of life. But with no advertising or big company to back him, Buzzard had found this free-lance work to be tough sledding. Had found difficulty keeping up repairs on his old machine, let alone getting a new one. Jobs were sheer accidents. Except for the faint possibility of murdering some more grasshoppers over near High Hat, the work he was finishing this noon was the last thing in sight.

As he heaved overboard the last of the E-Z Kleen Soap and printed matter, and headed back for the landing field, he yawned and swore:

"The devil with this peace-time stuff; Oh, Lord, I wish they'd bring on another unpleasantness."

It was in some such frame of mind, as he landed and crawled out of the cockpit, that he saw a tall lanky individual, in lace boots, khaki trousers, jacket and gray hat, get out of a waiting taxi and saunter toward him.

The stranger, as he came up, looked at the machine with that peculiar respectful gaze of a person who has never flown in one.

Buzzard thought, "If that fellow asks me to take him for a joy ride, I'll murder him with a monkey-wrench!" A moment later, as he got a closer look at that hard purposive face, he decided: "No, he's not that kind. Looks lige some timber duke. Maybe wants me to fly him out to his limit. Thirty-dollar job—dam-will!"

The stranger came on. "Hello."

Buzzard answered tartly, "Hello yourself."

The stranger paid no attention to the brusque reply. Instead he reached out his hand. It was a good-looking hand, big, calloused, fingers like iron bars.

"Name's Baker," he introduced himself. "Alan Baker."

Buzzard partly thawed. This fellow Baker looked to be somebody. His slow smile was mighty fetching; his clear intelligent eyes were kindly, warm, friendly.

"Glad to know you, Baker. Mine's Featherof—James Arbuthnot Featherof."

"Good gracious! All that? But what do people call you?"

They both grinned. "They call me 'Buzzard.' Wear red helmet; never flop my wings."

" 'Buzzard'—that's more like. I saw you sailing around up there when I got off the train. Made inquiries and hustled out here to the field. Was on my way down to Winnpeg. Expected I'd have to go down there, or maybe to Calgary, to find a machine and a pilot."

"Uh-uh."

Baker jerked his thumb at the 'plane—"Whose is that?"

"Looking at you. Belongs to me and myself. Unlimited. Bought it with cigarette coupons."

Baker's face brightened a little, and now Buzzard noticed that this hard-bitten man was deeply worried but was hiding his trouble and talking with a jest on his lips.

"So the machine belongs to you. Glad to hear that. Working on your own hook, I suppose? That's still better. Say, Featherof, how long are you booked up ahead?"

Buzzard had found it good policy to lie. If he made out there was a crushing demand for his services, it impressed people and got him jobs—sometimes.

"Oh, about two months," he said carelessly. "All depends on how much flying weather I get."

Baker plucked a blade of grass and chewed it meditatively. Finally he asked: "Say, Featherof, you couldn't shake free for a couple or three weeks, could you? Get sick, or have to get married, or something like that?"

Buzzard took thought as he batted an eye. A couple or three weeks. . . . Must be a good-sized job. . . . . might pay well. . . . . Oh d—n the pay! Always thinking of pay. Getting commercial. . . . .

"I might," he answered. "Depends. What kind of flying do you want me to do? What for a job is it?"

"That would take me some time to explain. I wouldn't want any man to tackle it without him understanding the whole thing, or then he might feel I'd dragged him into trouble."

Something in Baker's tone made Buzzard look at him sharply. "Nothing illeg—crook—out of the ordinary, is it?"

"It's all three, and then some."

Buzzard bit his cigarette. "And then some! My eyes! Who're you declaring war on?"

"If you want to know who I am, I was in the Mounted. The O.C. here at Edmonton can tell you about me. And I can give you other references."

"You were in the Mounted?" Buzzard frowned thoughtfully. "Baker—the Mounted. . . . . Say, haven't I heard or read somewhere . . . . Are you that Sergeant Baker down north near the Arctic?"

Alan nodded.

"My eyes! I've read about some of your doings. You're on a detective trick or something like that, Baker?"

With expert judgment Alan had been sizing up his new acquaintance, from his brick-red helmet, down across his oil-spattered jumpers, to his "side-walk" shoes. He read the daredeviltry in this Featherof. He was a man after Alan's own heart. And he had a machine of his own! If only he'd go, it would save precious days looking for a 'plane and pilot.

Alan said: "My story is a long one. You look as hungry as I feel. . . . ."

"I am, Baker. Let's go eat and then talk."

Alan helped him pull a canvas over the machine. Together they stepped over to the taxi. As they rambled down town they swapped war yarns, discovered several mutual acquaintances and came down to "Alan" and "Buzzard."

At the Chateau MacDonald Alan sent a telegram to Colonel Steele in Victoria. He wrote it swiftly, not daring to think twice of the fatal step.

"Am out of Mounted accepting your fine offer will you wire me five hundred as salary advance would be mighty grateful letter following with details.

"ALAN BAKER."

He and Buzzard ate dinner; and then for a solid hour Alan talked.

He told of the Midnight Sun robbery, of the chase, fight, escape, of Dave MacMillan's trouble; of his resolve to help Joyce; of Joyce going bravely back to the lonely trading station; of his run-in with Haskell, his getting busted, his buying out of service, his thousand-mile trip to Edmonton.

"But just where do the old crate and me come in at?" Buzzard asked.

Monday's Nelson News carries a despatch from Victoria that one Christopher Willis, an inmate of the home for the mentally defective at Colquitz, had confessed to murdering the late Thomas Midgley who was shot at his home near Kootenay Landing on April 1st, 1929

Death came suddenly to Samuel J. Miller, quite a well known local resident, who was employed as cook's helper at the relief camp near Kitchener, and who was seized with a heart attack and expired almost immediately on Friday afternoon. Deceased was in his 65th year, and was for a time employed as cook with the Winlaw Company. He was a member of the Norwich Masonic Lodge and the funeral on Sunday was in charge of Creston Masons, with service at Trinity United Church at 3 p.m. where the lodge chaplain, Rev. A. Walker officiated, and the full Masonic service was given at the grave with W. Bro. W. Fraser conducting the last rites in most impressive fashion. The pallbearers were W. H. Crawford, S. A. Speers, R. J. Long and C. O. Rodgers, and there was a large turnout of the lodge members to pay a last tribute of respect. So far as could be learned his only relatives are a brother and sister living at Dunvegan, in northern Alberta.
