Creston Youth Drowns, Sunday

John Blinco Goes to His Death in Back Bend Kootenay River —In Swift Current Driftwood Causes Tragedy.

In the second drowning fatality within a week John Blinco, a well known Creston y ung man, lost his life Sunday afternoon, in the stretch of water known as the back bend of the Kootenay River, at the bridge at Nick's Island.

In company with his friend, George Connatty, the two left Creston early Sunday afternoon with packs, gun and fishing tackle, intending to spend a few days on a combined fishing and prospecting trip in the Corn Creek district at West Creston. With Kootenay flats now completely flooded it was necessary to make the trip by boat. Everything went well until the waters of the back bend were reached. Here a heavy current was encountered—so heavy that the craft got out of control, crashed against some heavy floating driftwood, which crashed in the side of the boat, and precipitated the occupants into the chilly waters.

Connatty had the good fortune to come up in close proximity to the piling of the bridge and pull himself out. Young Blinco's shout for help brought Billy Ferguson, who was in the neighborho d fishing, to the scene, and he immediately passed out a pole to the drowning man who, when almost within reach was, apparently taken with a cramp, and sank immediately. Notwithstanding his half drowned condition Connatty dove in after his friend without success, but came up so weak that he had to be pulled out of the stream by some of the onlookers.

The time of the accident would be shortly after 5 p.m., at which time deceased's watch stopped, and young Ferguson and chum at once set out for town and notified the provincial police, who arrived on the scene shortly after seven, and proceeded to drag for the body which they located about 150 feet from the spot where the boat capsized, but were unable to bring it ashore, the body getting away, and it was not until shortly after noon on Monday that it was secured, and after the statutory enquiry brought into the Hendren undertaking parlors.

The funeral took place on Wednesday afternoon from Christ Church, with the rector, Rev. M. T. C. Percival, in charge. The pallbearers were Bert Hendy, Harry Webster, Jeff Collis, Frank Foerster, Reg. Harris and John Harris, and there was a large turnout of friends to pay their last respects. Floral remembrances were also numerous and beautiful.

Deceased is the eldest son of the late Mr. and Mrs. John Blinco, who predeceased him some three and four years respectively, and was in his twenty-second year. He is survived by one sister, Miss Margaret, who is at present visiting in England. He has just recently become of age and had taken over the Buckingham ranch, an excellent orchard property developed by his father, and his untimely death at such a promising period of his career comes as a distinct shock to all.

Notable Business Property Sale

Imperial Groceteria Building is Purchased by Power Company —Fully Modern New Store to be Built at Once for Grocteria

An outstanding sale of business property was negotiated on Wednesday when S. A. Speers disposed of the building now occupied by the Imperial Groceteria to West Kootenay Power & Light Company, Limited, who are developing hydro power at Goat River canyon.

The purchasers intend to use the premises for a store for the sale of electric ranges, washers, vaccum cleaners, heaters, irons, and every other known electric appliance, which will be made available to purchasers on the company's attractive payment plan. Provision will also be made for the company's local office quarters.

Upon completing the sale of this very desirable property Mr. Speers at once started in preparing plans for a new building which he will erect on the lot next to the Imperial and which will be the new home of this well known cash and carry grocery.

The new Imperial will be of adequate size and the fixtures and layout will be the very latest in use in self-serving establishments, assuring the public still better service from a store that has already demonstrated its usefulness to the community in providing larger variety, better quality and lower prices in all lines of foodstuffs.

Wigen had the lucky ticket on the drawing for the tea set.

The very sincere sympathy of the whole district is extended Mr. and Mrs. Robert Crane whose second son, Neil, was drowned in the mill pond at the Winlaw sawmill, where he was employed, late Thursday afternoon last. The body was not recovered until Sunday. A funeral service was held at the Presbyterian Church, Creston, Monday evening, and on Tuesday the parents accompanied the remains to Owen Sound, Ontario, where burial will take place.

The water guage at Slough bridge reads 16.25 a rise of 3.35 over last week. The water now stands about two feet less than the high of last year. The determining factor will be the condition of the weather during the next ten days, but as matters stand now indication points to excessively high water.

Sad Drowning Fatality, Wynndel

Neil Crane Loses Life While at Work on Mill Boom, Thursday Last—Prominent in Athletics —Remains Taken Ontario.

The life of one of the district's promising young men was suddenly cut off late Thursday afternoon, June 1st, in the drowning of Robert Neilson Crane in the log pond at the J. B. Winlaw sawmill at Wynndel, where he was employed.

Deceased was working on the boom and with the assistance of a pike pole was endeavoring to clear the channel of some driftwood in order to allow free passage of the logs. Losing his balance he fell backward into the water and it would appear that he struck his head in the fall as the body never came to the surface. Geo. Huscroft, an eye witness to the tragedy, dove in after the unfortunate young man but with no success as the water in the pond is dirty.

Dragging operations were at once instituted and were carried on continuously, and on Friday the diver employed by West Kootenay Power & Light Company at Goat River canyon, was put to work but with a mud bottom to work on and the consequent dirty state of the water his efforts proved unsuccessful both Friday and Saturday.

Meantime dragging was continuing and some of the local indians also tried out diving without success, but shortly after noon on Sunday Skinny, one of the local indians, located the body in dragging, at a point about 100 feet from where the fatality occurred. After the statutory enquiry by the coroner the body was removed to the Hendren undertaking parlors at Creston.

Wynndel, Creston and other points in the district were largely represented at a funeral service held in St. Stephen's Presbyterian Church on Monday evening, which was in charge of the student pastor, N. G. Smith, assisted by Rev. A. Walker, pastor of Trinity United Church. An address appropriate for the occasion was delivered by Mr. Smith and a feature of the musical service was the solo, "Nearer My God to Thee," which was sympathetically rendered by Miss Annie Hook of Wynndel. The pallbearers were Gilbert Payette, Clarence Wilson, Telesford LaBelle, Adam Rebertson, Earl Christie and Jim Cherrington. On Tuesday morning the remains were taken to the old home at Owen Sound' Ontario, for burial in the family plot. The floral remembrance were numerous and beautiful.

Neil Crane, as he was so familiarly know, was the second son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Crane who moved to Wynndel to reside about five years ago, from Owen Sound, and was in his twenty-second year. Due to his prominence in athletics, more especially basketball, baseball and hocky—in which sports he excelled—and in all other young people's activities, deceased enjoyed a well merited popularity and his untimely end at the threshold of young manhood is keenly felt by all and very genuine is the sympathy extended the family and parents in their great loss. In addition to his parents he is survived by a brother' John, and sister, Miss Agnes, a student at Creston high school.

A Simple Resuscitator

Double Can Device Rocks Patient and Restores Breathing

A simple resuscitator which creates respiration in newly born babies and restores breathing to adults by the simple process of rocking the patient in a double can device has been developed at the Shreveport Charity Hospital in Arcadia, Louisiana.

The front end of the double can has a hole and rubber collar to allow the patient's head to protrude. The inner cylinder is an air chamber while the area between the inner and outer can is partly filled with warm water. The upper side of the inner can has a hole that allows passage of air which is increased or decreased by pressure of the water as the can is rocked.

As explained, the air is compressed into the air chamber as the can is rocked upward and the opposite motion causes a partial vacuum. The changing of the air pressure has the same effect upon the chest, as hand pressure system used by swimming resort lifesavers.

Additional advantages were that the water warms and moistens the air and the blood circulation is stimulated by the rocking.

Cannot Lower Banner

Religious Sect In Calcutta Paid Well For Protection Of Principles

So that their banner might never be lowered, in accordance with their principles, a religious sect known as the Jains, paid telephone and street car officials of Calcutta, India, $2,500 to cut off the overhead wires during the recent procession of the faithful. The banner is 60 feet high and always heads their processions; and must never be dipped at any time or any place. The sect traces its religion back to 600 B.C. It has beautiful temples in out-of-the-way mountain spots. The one in Calcutta is famous for its many mirrors.

Might Use Rubber Mop

The home service department of a large electrical concern received this note from a woman customer: "I have a pet dog which insists on chewing the electric lamp cords. If he ever bites through a cord and any of the juice leaks out, will I get a shock if I mop it up?"

Bargains In European Tours

Cheap Rates Making It Possible For Many Canadians To Make First Trip To Old Country

(By E. L. Chicanot)

A great many Canadians who all their lives have thought and talked vaguely of going to Europe some time and who have year by year relegated this expectation to an indefinite future, are this summer realizing their ambitions. This is the conclusion at which one arrives after attending early departures of Cunard liners from Montreal and analyzing the bookings for the season. A surprising number of those who will sail down the St. Lawrence on their way to Europe in the course of the present summer are making their crossing of the Atlantic for the first time.

Despite the continuance of unsettled economic conditions, reduced incomes, and restricted luxury purchasing, the realization has come home forcibly to many people that this is the year to make that European trip if it is ever to be made. Not since the war has it been possible to tour Europe so cheaply. It seems doubtful if after present economic troubles are straightened out it will ever again be possible to do it at such low cost. And so those appreciating the opportunity and able to do so are seizing it.

Imagine being able to bid a carefree farewell to this continent for thirty-one entire days, enjoy a luxurious river and ocean voyage, and see all that is loveliest and most interesting in Europe for as little as $205.50! Thirty-one delightful summer days of tranquil sailing between the romantic, village-dotted shores of the St. Lawrence River, of comfortable ocean travel in veritable floating hostelries, of touring in commodious motor coaches through the choicest sections of England, Belgium, Holland and France—at $6.60 a day.

The amazing feature of the arranged tour, in addition to its economy, is the amount of actual travel and visiting that can be crammed into the limited extent of time. Within the space of the month at his disposal, the trans-Atlantic traveller can cover a surprising amount of territory and visit virtually all those romantic and historic localities of which he has long dreamed, which he would probably list if he were making a trip on his own account, of indefinite duration. Certainly he returns completely satisfied, with adequate appreciation of the countries he has visited, satisfied that he has spent his time to the best advantage.

For the traveller venturing alone to secure so comprehensive a picture no such satisfaction is possible in the time at his dispoaal. The less than twenty days he actually spends in Europe are scarcely more than sufficient to make a commencement on all he would like to do. He discovers travelling ever so much more complicated than at home. Left to his own devices with so many places he wants to see he finds himself more or less in a daze, wondering where to commence and how to proceed. At every turn he loses precious minutes of his holiday time.

When he goes on an arranged tour things are very different. Apart from the fact that from the start and throughout the trip he has the most congenial company in which to travel, the itinerary has been calculated with the most absolute precision so that all those places he most wants to see have been squeezed in without a minute's wastage of time. He steps from the boat upon Europe's soil to find a motor coach waiting for him and thereafter there is one continually in the offing to transport him without loss of time through the romantic and picturesque countryside from one revered spot it has been lifetime's dream to visit to another, which will be a cherished memory for the remainder of his days.

Take, for instance, the 31 day tour of which mention has been made, typical of others which are expanded up to three times its length. The amount and variety of sightseeing crowded into it is at first unbelievable when it is considlered that more than one-third of the time must be spent in voyaging to and from Europe. The Canadian visitor making such a trip returns to Canada with a more diversified knowledge of England than the average Englishman has, having visited many parts of France unseen by the majority of French people, with a panoramic impression of Holland and Belgium unpossessed by the greater number of the inhabitants of those countries.

A landing is made alternatively at Plymouth, romantic old south of England port, where legend has it Drake imperturbably continued his game of bowls when informed of the approach of the Spanish Armada, or Liverpool, the great shipping centre on the Mersey River. Then the traveller's eye is fixed on Mecca, London, centre of Empire.

One route takes the comfortable motor coaches through lovely Devonshire, one of England's fairest counties least touched by modern progress, to Torquay, one of the most attractive of English spas, so sheltered it basks in a luxuriant sub-tropical vegetation. After a day at this beautiful resort he passes on through Exeter with its lovely Cathedral, Shaftesbury, Wilton, Salisbury with another magnificent cathedral, Stonehenge, most famous Druid temple, Camberley, Bagshot Heath, and so to London.

The other route takes the traveller to the historic old city of Chester, with its ancient cathedral, its time-worn city walls and other old Roman remains. Thence he journeys through Shakespeare's country, shrine of all lovers of English literature, through picturesque Warwick with its handsome castle, Kenilworth, reminiscent of Elizabeth and Amy Robsart, Guy's Cliff, Leamington, popular inland spa, Oxford, city of spires and centre of learning, Windsor with its stately castle, Hampton Court with its exquisite gardens, to London.

Two days are spent in London, a mere taste of its delights it is true, upon which one could feast for months, but sufficient under expert management to cover the main points of interest the Canadian wishes to see, including the City, the river, Guildhall, Tower of London, St. Paul's Cathedral, Westminster Abbey, the Horse Guards, the Tate Gallery, and other art galleries and museums

To leave for the continent the tourist makes for Dover. To reach it he passes through one of the most entrancing sections of England, including Kent, which is a veritable garden. Rochester is visited, a picturesque city immortalized by Dickens in his Pickwick Papers. Continuing on Canterbury is reached, a wonderful old city, built in 1370, with its famous old cathedral and the shrine of Thomas a Becket. Then by countless hop fields to the chalk cliffs of Dover and the English Channel. Here he boards the little steamer which lands him a few hours later at Ostend, the celebrated Belgian resort with its fine beach and casino.

From this point a full day's tour takes the tourist through Holland to the old town of Middleburg, through countless quaint old villages and the charmingly distinctive Dutch countryside. Another excursion from Ostend is to Bruges, the 14th century commercial centre of Europe, a veritable northern Venice with its more than fifty canal bridges; Ghent, a city famed alike for its many interesting and beautiful buildings and its cotton, linen, and horticultural industries; Brussels with its lovely boulevards, botanical gardens, museums, and public buildings.

Making a final departure from Ostend that part of France of keenest interest to Canadians, the Battlefields area, is visited via Menin, Lille, Arras, and Amiens, as the comfortable motor coach rolls on to Paris. Here adequate time is spent to visit under skilful direction all those historic, romantic and beautiful places the Canadian on his first trip to Europe will ant to see in the justly famed French capital—the Tuilleries, Arc de Triomphe, Eiffel Tower, Napoleon's Tomb, Louvre, Latin Quarter, Luxembourg, Sorbonne, Bastille and the various boulevards. A full day is spent journeying to Versailles, visiting the wonderful castle there of the kings and queens of France, and returning by the beautiful Bois de Boulogne.

From Paris the Canadian visitor proceeds to Le Havre just in time to board another palatial trans-Atlantic liner. After an enjoyable voyage on the ocean and St. Lawrence, not the least recreational part of his trip, he is home again almost before his friends have had time to realize he was away but with memories stored up for a lifetime's delectation.

This is but typical of many European tours, of longer duration and costing bnt proportionately more, which can be taken inexpensively this year. It is little wonder that many people are remarking today that it is cheaper to travel abroad than to stay at home. It is proving so if one can but secure the time. And many people are finding that in the existing lull in the progress of the world's material affairs they can more easily take time than they could in the hectic days before 1930, or than they will be able to do when adjustments to conditions under way are concluded and the wheels of industry resume their normal turning and grinding.

That is why one hears of so many Canadians making their first trip to Europe this summer. They are real economists—these happy individuals one sees climbing the gang plank of each Cunard majestic liner about to depart from Montreal,—who gaily wave farewells from the rail as the tug strains at the hawser and the vessel recedes into the river. They are spending their money and spending it wisely, getting the fullest possible return in travel pleasure.

JESUS ON THE CROSS

Golden Text: "God commendeth His own love toward us, in that, while we were yet sinners, Christ died for us." —Romans 5:8.

Lesson: Mark 15:1-47.

Devotional Reading: Isaiah 53:1-6.

Explanations and Comments

Simon Of Cyrene Compelled To Carry the Cross, verse 21.—"There were two kinds of crosses; the "Crux Simplex," a mere stake on which the victim was impaled, and the "Crux Compacta," which had three forms: (1) the "Crux Decussata" or St. Andrew's Cross X; (2) the "Crux Commissa" or St. Anthony's Cross T; (3) the "Crux Immissa" †. The last was the commonest. It appears from tradition and from the circumstance that His accusation was set up over His head, i.e. on the projection of the upright, that this was the form of cross on which Jesus suffered. The victim carried his cross, at least the transverse beam, to the place of execution."—David Smith.

The Crucifixion, verses 22-27.—The knoll outside Jerusalem to which Jesus was brought to be crucified is called Golgotha in Greek, and Calvary in Latin, words which mean "a skull," for it was skull-shaped. It was customary to give one about to be crucified something to stupefy him, and Jesus was offered wine mixed with myrrh, but He refused it He had work yet to do, Luke 23:39—43; John 19:26, 27. There they crucified Him.

Jesus' garments, as was the custom, wese the perquisites of the executioners. His headdress, shoes, outer garment and girdle furnished one article for each of the four, and then the seamless inner garment was drawn by lot.

Above the cross this accusation was written, in Hebrew, Latin and Greek, John 19:20: "The King of the Jews." Pilate could ascribe no crime to Jesus, therefore he had this inscription written so as to annoy the priests who, as he expected, considered it an insult to themselves: see John 19:21, 22. On each side of Jesus a robber was crucified. Many ancient authorities insert here verse 28 of the Authorized Version: "And the Scripture was fulfilled, which said 'And He was reckoned with the transgressors'." See Luke 22:37, R.Vm.

Taunts Of Spectators, verses 29-32.—The cross was erected where all that passed by could see it, and they taunted Jesus with having said that He would destroy the temple and build it in three days, and, since such was His power, why did He not save Himself and come down from the cross.

Working Model Of Elevator

Interesting Feature To Be Shown At World's Grain Show

A feature of the exhibit which the Saskatchewan Wheat Pool is preparing for the World's Grain Show, to be held at Regina in July and August, is a full working model of a modern terminal elevator. This is an attractive miniature of Pool Terminal No. 4 at Port Arthur, which has a total capacity of over 6,500,000 bushels of grain.

The model, painted ivory, consists of workhouse and storage annexes, boiler house, track shed and railway trackage. In addition there will be a model boat—a typical Great Lakes grain carrier—alongside the dock, loading up from the shipping spouts, thereby lending an additional touch of realism to the picture.

This will be an excellent opportunity to learn just what happens to Western Canada's wheat when it enters one of these big terminal elevators, for by means of an electrically driven motor the main handling process may be followed with ease. Some of the storage annexes are shown in section to indicate their construction, while a good view may also be obtained of the horizontal and vertical grain conveyors in action. The conveyors are accurately reproduced even to the numerous buckets attached to the belts.

The dimensions of this model terminal are 57 inches by 36 inches, the height of the workhouse being 17 inches and of the annexes, 13 inches.

Competing For World's Honors

Women Athletes Will Enter British Empire Games In 1934

The biggest gathering of women athletes ever known is to take place in London, England, in 1934. Events for women are to be included in the British Empire games, which take place in August next year, and representatives of every part of the empire will attend.

The women's world games are being held in London in the same month, and it is hoped that most of the British athletes will stay for the international gathering. Mrs. Muriel A. Cornell, secretary of the women's amateur athletic association, said recently: "We expect that from 20 to 25 nations will send women to the world games. Each will send a dozen representatives and more if they wish.

"Good Lord! And you've deserted, too, Ped."

"But I couldn't miss out on a trick like this, could I?"

Alan winced. Here was Pedneault mixed up in his trouble. Like an eager wolf-hound whom his master has left behind, Ped had chewed his collar and come along on the hunt.

"Where's Bill and Joyce?" Pedneault's face grew long, his eager excitement sobered down. He decided it was better to say nothing just now about Dave's suicide. Alan had enough anxiety preying on him.

"I'm thankful for that gasoline," Alan said. "And for you throwing in with us, Ped, at the price you'll pay. But I don't see how you can help. We can't carry a third person on this trip. I'll have to have room to work the machine gun—"

"Then I'll go in the launch."

"You can't make it. Above the Alooska forks there's twenty miles of low water that you can't get through."

"I can make it now. I know what the launch can do. After all these heavy rains, draining down that left fork from the Thal-Azzah . . . Look there—" he pointed at the water stage on a pier—"that's eighteen inches higher than when we made our first patrol after them. I can get through; and once I'm in those deep-water channels of the Thal-Azzah—"

"All right," Alan agreed. "You'll be a mighty big help. If they put us out of it, you'll be in position to carry on with them. Let's go up to the post and make our arrangements. You'll be leaving ahead of us."

Meeting Buzzard in the trading hall, he introduced Pedneault and explained. They went on back to the kitchen and worked out their plans.

Pedneault was to leave at dawn in the launch. Then the 'plane would leave at ten o'clock. Passing Pedneault just inside the Thal-Azzah, the 'plane would fly ahead, locate the bandits and bring them to bay. The two craft would thus close in together for the battle.

There was but one hitch in the plan. All three men were aware of it, but no one mentioned it. Those bandits had Joyce with them; they could and would use her for protection. How could they be swept with a machine gun's deadly spray when she was with them?

It was something which had to be left to luck or fate.

Alan gave final instructions: "If anything happens to the 'plane, don't try to fight those five men by yourself, Pedneault. Swing wide of them, go on east to that big lake I mapped for you, and join Bill there. Then the two of you fight them to a finish.

"One other thing. I don't want Buzzard or myself to be charged with murder. You're in service, Pedneault; you'll not only be on a legitimate patrol, but you have the power to deputize us as special constables. We'd better put that down in black and white."

It seemed strange to Pedneault, who had sworn in half-breeds and Indian scouts and dog-team drivers on emergency occasions, to be swearing in his former officer commanding in so lowly a capacity. He wrote out the formal authorization: James A. Featherof; status, special constable temporary; capacity, aviator. Alan McCleod Baker; status, special concial constable temporary; capacity, scout and machine gunner.

At the earliest hint of dawn they went down to the landing, inspected the launch and lashed Joyce's light canoe on the stern half-deck. Pedneault shook hands with them, slipped into the wheel seat, and set out alone, a solitary figure, up the Big Alooska.

Waiting, nervous and jumpy, as both had waited for zero hours in France, Alan and Buzzard stalked about the unutterably lonely post.

At nine o'clock, drawn down to the landing, they went over the 'plane for the third time, and Alan mounted the machine gun in the cockpit. When their zero hour came, he towed the craft out into midstream, held it there while Buzzard warmed the spluttering motor, and then sending the canoe spinning with a kick, he sprang up into his seat.

Buzzard lifted the 'plane out of the river, climbed to five thousand feet, and headed into the northeast.

CHAPTER XII.

The Swan Nest

Thirty miles above the Alooska forks, they caught up with Pedneault. When he saw that all was going well with him, Alan turned his glasses ahead again, sweeping the dozen waterways within vision. He picked up two tiny black objects creeping up a broad blue channel ten miles on into the Thal-Azzah.

Signaling Pedneault that they had sighted the canoes, Buzzard slowed down to stalling speed. Pedneault answered back that he understood and they saw him open out the launch till a long narrow V-wake of white froth stretched behind it. Then, winging on ahead, they closed in for the battle.

As they drew near and Buzzard dropped to a couple thousand feet, Alan began to make out figures in the two craft. His heart leaped as he counted six persons. Nearer still, he distinguished a slender girlish figure in the prow of the lead canoe. They must have found that gun on Joyce, or else she had clung to her faith that he would save her.

Half-raising, Alan glanced back westward to find how near Pedneault was. A puzzled expression crept over his face as he failed to glimpse the launch in either the Alooska branch or the broad blue channel. With a premonition of disaster clutching him, he whipped up the glasses, focussed on the connecting creek, and caught the big boat in clear vision.

The thing he saw brought a cry into his throat.

The craft was not moving. It lay on its side, half out of water, hopelessly stranded. Either from reckless piloting or from an accident no man could have averted, Pedneault had struck a mud bar hidden under the treacherous muskeg water; and now the scarlet-and-gold launch, lodged solidly in the muck by the momentum of its headlong dash, was out of the battle for good and all. Pedneault could not even go and help Bill.

Alan tore his gaze away from this disaster. It was all up to him and Buzzard now. Pedneault was out, the launch was out; Bill was a hundred miles away, and alone.

He tilted the Browning muzzle downward and steadied himself to run a burst at the rear canoe. But that craft darted up alongside the leading boat and hovered there, protected against his machine gun by their nearness to Joyce. With sullen faces upturned, the bandits watched the maneouvring 'plane, waiting for Alan's next move, defying him to touch them.

Buzzard had banked in a neat hairpin turn, had dropped down to six hundred feet and was flying back past, a hundred yards off the vertical so that Alan could fire down at them diagonally and double his concentration by riocheting bullets off the water. It was a superb position. Alan could have killed those five bandits and sunk their canoes in half a minute. But he dared not fire a shot.

It was in that space of hopeless deadlock that Joyce came through. Alan saw her make him some slight sign, a mere gesture which the bandits, leering up at him, did not see. He read the meaning of that gesture; Joyce was preparing for some sudden action; she was signalling him to be ready!

Without a whisper of warning, so swiftly and neatly that the bandits looked around in dazed bewilderment, she half-rose in the canoe, dived headlong over the gunwale, and disappeared.

It came so suddenly that for moments Alan himself hardly comprehended what she had done. When he did realize that she had given him his splendid chance, his finger tightened on the trigger and the Browning leaped into play.

For twenty seconds, till there was danger of Joyce reappearing, he flailed and swept the two canoes with a rain of bullets. He scorched one man, who jumped and yelled. The deadly hail drove them pellmell in terror of their lives, into shelter of the nearest flags.

Fifty feet from where she had dived, Joyce reappeared a moment, cast a frightened glance back, tossed the disheveled hair from her eyes, swam a stroke or two, and then flipped under again like a young otter, making for a soggy reed bed on the other side of the lake.

"Low! Fly low!" Alan shouted into Buzzard's ears. "Sweep low over 'em. They'll try to get her again, if we don't force the fight now!"

With rifles snarling at them from flags below, with white puffs of smoke drifting away on the breeze, the 'plane banked and dived; and less than four hundred feet high, it soared over the bandits, its third time, its last and fatal time. . . . .

Nearly flung bodily by the quick wrenching maneouvres, Alan braced himself and hung grimly to the Browning and ran a burst at the flags that the bandits were firing from. He killed a man; he saw the criminal fling up his arms and stagger and fall face downward in the reeds and water. With another burst, enfilading those flags from a side angle, he would have wiped out the other four.

But that chance was not given him.

The thunder of the engine suddenly slackened, the motor spluttered and died; in place of the throbbing roar Alan heard only the swish of struts and hum of wires. In the suddent quiet he heard Buzzard's cry of consternation and saw his flight partner turn a white face toward him; and he guessed the engine had been put out of commission by those snarling rifles in the flags below.

The next instant, with those rifles still blazing away, a tremor seemed to hit the 'plane, as though other bullets had struck it. It lurched violently, its nose and right wing dropped, and it started a steep side-slip. With a gesture of sickened despair at this second mortal blow, Buzzard cut off ignition and battled with stick and rudder-bar to keep the 'plane from plummeting into the bog under keel.

Two-thirds of a mile from the bandits, it fell heavily into the water on one wing and pontoon, rocked a moment uncertainly, righted itself and floated—but disabled, useless, out of the battle.

Perfectly Safe

A woman went to the bank and asked for a new cheque book. "I've lost the one you gave me yesterday," she said. "But it doesn't matter. I took the precaution of signing all the checks as soon as I got it—so, of course, it won't be any use to anyone else."

Divorces In England

Seven Thousand Persons Divorced In Great Britain Every Year

One out of every 83 marriages in England ends in divorce.

There are now about 30,000 divorced persons in England and Wales—and 25 per cent. of them live in London. These are some of the facts revealed by the latest divorce records given in the register-general's annual report. Because divorce is now easier to get, more unhappy marriages are being terminated. As a result there are now five times as many divorces in a year as there were twenty years ago.

Men are petitioning for divorce in greater numbers, For years the records showed that it was the wives who got most of the divorces. But for the coming term of the law courts at which divorce cases will be tried there are 197 petitions filed by husbands and 351 by wives.

Although 7,000 persons in Great Britain are divorced every year, 66 per cent. of them re-marry. Two out of every three divorced men contract second marriages. And so do three out of every five divorced women.

But when they marry again they choose partners who have had no previous experience of matrimony. Only in one case out of ten do divorced men marry divorced women.

In three cases out of four divorced men marry spinsters. The spinster brides are usually under 30 and the husbands between 30 and 40.

In two cases out of three divorced women get bachelors for their second husbands. Most of the divorced women are from 30 to 35 and they generally marry bachelors about five years younger than themselves.

About one-half of the divorces occur within the first ten years of married life, although the general tendency is for divorces to take place later in life.

THE RHYMING OPTIMIST

By Aline Michaelis

VILLANELLE OF SPRING

I saw the nesting robin light
Upon the branch, with twig in mouth,
I sensed the feather thing's delight
In end of barren winter's drouth,
In spreading leaf and swinging bough
And warm wind blowing from the south.

The whistling farm boy with his plow,
The furrows deep and straight and long,
Gold daisies on the green hill's brow,
The rainbow butterflies that throng
The waving, many-colored grass,
All blend with nesting robin's song.

Anew the old enchantments pass
And lend brief magic to the earth,
Till ever eager lad and lass
Must joy in rosebuds' fragrant birth,
And share the nesting robin's mirth!

Champion Jig-Saw Puzzler

Blind Man Claims Inability To See Is An Asset

Stanley Wartenburg, 26, of New York, blind since childhood, is a champion jig-saw puzzler, and he claims that his inability to see is really an asset in putting the puzzle pieces together.

According to Wartenburg, color and lines in the puzzle pictures are handicaps to their rapid assembly.

His method is to first turn all the pieces either face up or face down and then sort out the border pieces, and then the other sections according to their shape. A remarkably trained memory is also a great asset. With his left-hand he explores the curves of the pieces already assembled and with the right seeks their mates.

Wartenburg is industrial adviser to broom and mop makers in the New York workshop of the Association of the Blind. He has invented many pieces of machinery used by blind workers.

Little Helps For This Week

"Thy servants are ready to do whatsoever my lord the king shall appoint."—2 Samuel 15:15.

I love to think that God appoints
My portion day by day;
Events of life are in His hand,
And I would only say,
Appoint them in Thine own good time,
And in Thine own best way.

If we are really and always ready to do whatsoever the King appoints all the trials and disappointments arising from any change, great or small, simply do not exist. If I meant to write His messages this morning shall I grumble that He sends interrupting visitors, rich or poor, to whom I am to speak the messages, or to whom I am to show kindness for His sake. If all my members are really at His disposal why should I be put out if today's appointment is some simple work for my hands or errands for my feet, instead of some seemingly more important doing of head or tongue.—Frances R. Havergal.

Hunting For King's Baggage

Sunk In North Sea Over 700 Years Ago Says Tradition

Fen Research Limited, London, England, is the name of a company formed to hunt for the famous baggage and regalia of King John lost in the waters of the Wash a little more than 700 years ago.

This is a change from the usual treasure hunts organized with an eye on Cocos Islands or the Spanish Main, and many think it probably will prove about as successful. Tradition says King John's baggage and regalia were lost in the Wash, and the company mentioned, appears to think tradition is right and is about to start digging for the lost treasure. It proposes to locate the treasure by "electrical divination." The Wash is a shallow bay of the North Sea, on the Lincolnshire and Norfolk coast of England.

Many Protest Against Plan

Auto Drivers In Greece Do Not Favor Restrictions

Greece's new odd-or-even auto license idea is arousing much protest. The plan is that cars bearing even tag numbers may use the streets on certain days of the week and those with odd numbers the other days. The idea was to reduce imports of gasoline, but in Athens retail sales of "gas" have dropped less than three per cent. since the rule was enforced. One-car owners do not relish having their machines idle half the time. Taxi users in Athens complain that now there are not enough taxis.

Many Honest Passengers

Glasgow, Scotland, believes that it has many honest street-car passengers. Because conductors missed many fares in the rush hours officials of the municipal trolley lines placed little red boxes near the exit, and a sign asked those who had not paid to drop the penny in the box as they left. Since the plan was started more than $100 a week has been collected by the boxes.

OFF COLOUR? HOW IS YOUR LIVER?

Wake up your Liver Bile —Without Calomel

Your liver's a very small organ, but it certainly can put your digestive and eliminative organs out of kilter, by refusing to pour out its daily two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels. You won't completely correct such a condition by taking salts, oil, mineral water, laxative candy or chewing gum, or roughage. When they've moved your bowels they're through—and you need a liver stimulant.

Carter's Little Liver Pills will soon bring back the sunshine into your life. They're purely vegetable. Safe. Sure. Ask for them by name. Refuse substitutes. 25c at all druggists.

"Yes, I'm working—thanks to my telephone!"

"I hear you're working now, George," said Bill.

"Yes, I am—thanks to my telephone," replied George. "I was out of work for a long time, as you know, but I managed to hang on to my telephone, and I'm glad now that I did. I went the rounds pretty well in applying for work, and I always made a point of leaving a telephone number. The other day I received a call to go to work. The boss told me that several other men had applied, but I was the only one who could be reached by telephone."

Death Removes Canyon Pioneer

Eric Olson Passes After Somewhat Lengthy Illness—Came to Canyon 1910—Served School Trustee—Mason, Orangeman

In the death of Eric Olson at Creston Valley public hospital on Friday evening Canyon loses one of its most respected pioneer citizens. "Old Eric," as he was affectionately known, had been in failing health for the past three or four years. He entered the local hospital in December and fought off his sickness with the same indomitable spirit that influenced his life throughout his years.

Born in Sweden, 1860, he came to the United States in the early 80's, following farming and woods work in Michigan and Wisconsin. He crossed into Ontario and became "walking boss" for Swan Swanson, railroad contractor, until 1909, when along with Phonse Huygens and J. D Crawford, who were sent to assist in clearing 40 acres of land then owned by Swanson, now the Jas. Compton ranch. After finishing the work deceased decided to make his home in the valley, purchasing ten acres from Canyon City Lumber Company and converted the ten acre-block of dense forest into one of the best orchards of the entire valley, which was his pride up till the 1924 mid December cold snap that damaged his fruit trees almost completely.

The following year he sold to Axel Berggren and immediately left for Spokane, intending to make his future home in that city, but soon found that city life did not appeal to him. After a few months away he returned to his cabin on the ranch where he desired to spend his remaining days among his old friends.

Deceased took a keen interest in local community affairs. He served six years as school trustee, and the last public service rendered the community was the planting of twelve soft maple trees about the school ground in 1918 which have grown to splendid shade trees and a living monument to Eric Olson. He took a keen interest in lodge work and was a member of Creston Masonic and Orange orders.

His wife predeceased him some years, but three daughters survive. They are Mrs. John Porterfield, Spokane, and an elder daughter at Sudbury, Ontario. Three sons survive, all resident at Flint, Mich.

The funeral took place Sunday afternoon from Trinity United Church, Creston, Sunday afternoon, and was in charge of Rev. A. Walker, and at the cemetery the Masonic and Orange lodges conducted the last sad rites, with W. H. Crawford, Jas. Compton, E. Langston and Al. Hendren, members of both orders, as pallbearers. The flowers and the many out to pay a last tribute of respect, bespoke the high esteem in which deceased was held in the community.

Saved $4.00 by Buying in Creston

For May accounts we this week supplied a local firm with 2000 duplicate Statement—ruled, punched and perforated, to quote shop talk—at our regular price of $18.00.

Previously this customer bought these in Toronto at a price of $21.50, plus express, which would be at least fifty cents, making the total cost not less than $22.00.

These are actual figures and the name of the firm can be supplied. And the $21.50 all went out of Creston, never to return—except fifty cents the order taker spent for lunch, in his hurry to get on to Cranbrook for the night, and the price of a few gallons of gas.

This is just one sample of several we can quote to demonstrate the luxury, along with poor business ideals, of those who buy from the out-of-town order taker without even giving the Review opportunity to quote prices and submit somples.

The Review can beat or meet competitors' prices, so what is the object of buying from the outsider who contributes nothing to the upkeep of the community or your business.

Band Concert

Creston band, under the leadership of W. G. Hendy, made its third open air appearance on Saturday night, and rendered the most popular programme of the season. Nine numb rs were given, and included the Maple Lea; two marches, Nifty and National Emblem; two waltz numbers, Marjorie and Mellow Moon, and a couple of overtures, Masterbilt and Field Day. Fred Duck as trombone soloist was popular in Sliding Easy, and the well known hymn, Nearer My God to Thee, was sympathetically handled. Due to the berry season now being at hand this will be the last outdoor appearance of the band for a few weeks.

CARD OF THANKS

Creston Band takes this opportunity to thank the merchants a d citizens for financial support. The list of contributors to the band funds is too lengthy to publish but the total received is most encouraging and for donations both small and large the band is deeply grateful.

"SALADA" TEA

"Fresh from the Gardens"

Vacation Days.

Schools all over this western land will soon close their doors for the summer months and tens of thousands of boys and girls will joyfully welcome the "holidays."

In offices and shops week by week employers and employees will for longer or shorter periods relinquish their tasks to enjoy their hard earned summer vacation.

Work on the farms will ease up a bit following Spring activities and during the period while the crops grow and ripen for the harvest.

In a word, Western Canada's short playtime period is at hand.

It is a time to forget, as far as that may be possible, the worries and difficulties of the months of depression, and for the younger generation in particular every reasonable effort should be made to make the next two or three months as happy and health-giving as possible, with life lived largely in the open.

There will not be much money to spend, and vacation plans will have to be made upon a cheap scale by most people, but that is no reason why these holidays should not be just as enjoyable as if planned in a much more elaborate and expensive way.

Long journeys may be out of the question, but fortunately Western Canada has been blessed by nature with an abundance and variety of lovely summer resorts and camp sites which can be reached easily and at little expense, and where the daily cost of living is extremely low. Such a vacation will serve to remove the strain and worry of school studies and exams, which youth has been undergoing, and blow away the fogs of the depression in which all people, young and old, have been living. It will mean renewed mental and physical vigor.

Fortunately, too, in this year when money is not a plentiful article wherewith to make trips to other Provinces or countries, opportunity is being afforded right in the heart of Western Canada for a holiday which combines all the essentials of an enjoyable, worthwhile respite from daily toil,—a holiday that will provide relaxation, entertainment and thrills combined with educational features and opportunities never before offered in this Western country, and all at small expense.

Reference is to the World's Grain Exhibition and Conference to be held at Regina during the last week of July and the first week of August. This will be a truly wonderful exhibition, a magnificent enterprise. Over Forty nations, states and provinces will be represented in the specially constructed quarter of a million dollar building, having a floor space of 148,000 square feet, and actually miles of exhibits. It will be not only a sight worth seeing, but a great education.

A vacation visit to this great exhibition, which will be the result of three years of intensive preparation, will not be a costly one. For the people of the prairie provinces, the distance to be travelled is short, and specially low rates on the railways will make the journey within reach of most people, even in these days of restricted finances. A huge city of tents will be built adjacent to the exhibition grounds, with modern facilities provided, where groups and families can stay at the very minimum of expense, and will constitute an ideal outing for motor parties from all over the land.

Western Canadians, old and young, need not deny themselves a real and enjoyable vacation this summer. They owe it to themselves to take all the enjoyment and recreation they can from the opportunities afforded them. They will be better for it, whether it be the spending of a lazy time at some camp or small summer resort, or in a visit to the big world show at Regina. In any event they can get to know their own Western country better than ever before, and to appreciate it and its possibilities, and many of them can combine with it the obtaining of a glimpse of the world, and more especially of those nations which are engaged in the same major activity as the people of Western Canada, namely, agriculture.

So,—take a holiday. Pack the family in the old car and hike away to some new scene. Live in the open, rambling over the country side. Go fishing. Let the boys and girls paddle and swim, enjoy out-of-doors games, gather around the bonfire at night for an old time sing-song. Everybody will be the bettter for it.

Long-Lived Monarchs

None Have Occupied Throne As Long As Queen Victoria

King George recently attained the 23rd anniversary of his accession to the throne as compared with the nine years' reign of his father Edward VII. Counting from 1154 when the House of Plantagenet was established he is now exceeded in length of occupancy of the throne by twelve others: Queen Victoria, 63 years; George III., 59 years; Henry III., 56 years; Edward III., 50 years; Elizabeth, 44 years; Henry VI., 39 years; Henry VIII, 38 years; Charles II., 36 years; Edward I., 35 years; George II., 33 years; Henry VII., 24 years and Charles 1., 24 years.

Rotating Reserve Plan

U.S. Navy Department Abandons This System

The rotating reserve plan by which Admiral William V. Pratt, chief of naval operations, hoped to save a large sum through keeping one-third of the United States fleet in reserve has been abandoned by the navy department because a study shows the savings would be only $5,000,000.

Secretary Claude Swanson, of the navy, said that only the destroyers and submarines now on a rotating reserve plan would be laid up at any time.

Burning Ten Million Yearly

Figures compiled by the Forest Service of the Department of the Interior show that the annual forest-fire loss in Canada for the ten year period 1922-31 was $10,000,000. It is something that appals. Canada's forests are among the richest of her heritages, and the fact that we, the trustees of that heritage, should be sending it up in smoke at the rate of $10,000,000 a year, is a blot upon our capacity as a people. The melancholy aspect of it all is that most of this fire-loss is the result of indifference, of a carelessness that will not heed warning or educational propaganda. We talk loudly about the exploitation of promoters and about the failures of the newsprint industry, yet all the time we permit or cause a condition which is doing more to ruin our forests than all the capitalists and greedy promoters combined. It is one of the discreditable things in our whole scheme of national economy.—Ottawa Journal.

NURSE LOSES 7 LBS.

"I weighed 145 lbs.," writes a nurse, "when I bought the bottle of Kruschen Salts which I have just finished. I have taken a good half-teaspoonful in a glass of hot water every morning. Now I weigh 138 lbs., a loss of 7 lbs. I am very glad to have lost weight, especially without trouble."—M.H.R. (Trained Nurse.)

Unlike most salts, Kruschen isn't simply a laxative. When you take Kruschen Salts you not only stimulate your liver and kidneys to function naturally and perfectly, but you supply every internal organ, gland, nerve and fibre in the body with Nature's own revitalizing and rejuvenating minerals.

Get a bottle of Kruschen Salts today, and take one-half a teaspoon in a glass of hot water every morning before breakfast.

Before the bottle is empty you'll feel years younger—eyes will brighten—step grow sprightlier—nerves steadier—you'll sleep sound, enjoy your meals, and after a hard day's work you'll be ready for wholesome recreation—one million women already know all this.

World Meat Reserve

Experts Believe Reindeer Will Add Greatly To Supply

Experts believe that a great world meat reserve can be established in northern Canada, and that the millions of acres hitherto regarded as waste land will give the empire a useful and cheap addition to its meat supply. They expect that a vast business organization with a cold storage plant and transport installations will result from the successful migration of a large herd of Alaskan reindeer.

When the herd has developed sufficiently, tinned reindeer meat and reinder tongue—held to be a great delicacy—will be exported. The animals will be of the greatest use, as they provide their own food, even in mid-winter. They are generally regarded as the most widely versatile animals in the world.

Turks Eat Little Meat

Quantities Of Rice, Bread, and Fish Constitute Meal

One of the best ways of getting to know a man or a nation is to study what he eats. The inhabitant of Constantinople is a big bread eater and a tremendous rice eater. Strangely enough, considering what a fighter he is, he does not go in for meat very much. He will devour at a single sitting huge quantities of boiled corn, Indian corn, stewed barley, haricot beans, lentils, and aubergines. He cooks in olive oil and will eat fish of any freshness—just out of the sea or in the last stages of decomposition.

What He Wanted

"I don't know about granting you another divorce, Jake," the judge said. "You've had three already and if I grant you another you'll simply go and get married again."

"Oh, no, judge your honah," Jake protested. "I ain't figurin' on that 'tall—I jes' wants you to put me out of circulation."

"Did you sleep well, sir?"

"Wonderfully! You remember I dreamed the night before last that somebody gave me a bad $5 note? Well, last night I managed to spend it."

Background For Exhibit

Map Of Canada Will Be Flood-Lighted At Chicago Exposition

History was made in Montreal when Gordon Hammond, internationally famous scenic artist, saw his latest effort, the largest map in the world, a map of Canada in colors, 30 by 130 feet, leave for the Century of Progress Exposition in Chicago where it will hang, framed and flood-lighted, as a breath-taking background for the Canadian exhibit in the great hall of the travel and transport building, in which the Dominion Government, the Canadian Pacific and the Canadian National Railways are participating.

The Canadian coat of arms in color, measuring approximately seven by eight feet and surmounted by the word "Canada" in huge cut-out letters, will hang from the centre of the map at the top and constitutes another record achievement in that it is the largest photographic enlargement made to date in the Dominion. The third record is that the complete map, models, dioramas, etc., have been completed in about three weeks, when ordinarily the job would have taken three months. The result has been a real triumph for Canadian artists, Canadian material and Canadian methods.

The huge map, of course, will be the main attraction, containing as it does farming and mining areas, national parks, both trans-continental railway systems on general lines, principal resorts and cities, and three large cartouches or inserts in which information concerning Canada as a land of opportunity for industry or tourists, is presented in condensed form. Its message is easy to grasp. Its huge size immediately impresses one with the vastness of the Dominion, and as one stands back from it, it is then that Mr. Hammond's ability becomes evident. One has the sense of being high above the earth looking down at a scene stretching from the Aleutheran Islands in Behrings Seas to Iceland and from the Arctic to Southern Illinois, in which every detail appears.

Solves One Problem

New York Church Replaces Choir With Record Music

The problem of maintaining a choir when economic conditions prohibit has been solved by the Presbyterian Church of the Convent at New York.

Phonograph records of choir singing are played and amplified at the Sunday evening services. The congregation sings to the accompaniment of electrical transcriptions of the choir music from famous churches all over the world. It has been contended more elaborate programmes can be offered than it could present with its own reduced choir.

Stamp Fraud Laid Bare

Clever Machine Discovered In Britain To Defraud Government

Infra-red ray, the remarkable scientific discovery which enables the camera to penetrate fog and darkness, has been the means of unmasking an astonishingly elaborate fraud on the inland revenue.

It is understood that Scotland Yard has been investigating the matter secretly for many months past, and it has now become evident that many thousands of pounds are involved.

The conspiracy to cheat the exchequer has been worked with complete success for years by a clever gang, who have found a means of obliterating the cancellation marks on the stamps issued by the post office for the payment of income tax.

Thousands of the stamped cards tendered by weekly wage-earners in payment of income tax have apparently been obtained by some means.

The stamps have been steamed off, subjected to a cleaning process which has removed every mark of cancellation, and then sold at half their original face value.

The inland revenue authorities had not the slightest cause for suspicion until months ago, when someone noticed that the stamps had peeled off one of the cards sent to Somerset House.

It was at first surmised that the gummaker must be at fault. The cards and the stamps were sent to the firm concerned. The gum was analysed and found to be different from that they had applied.

Even then the fraud was not suspected, but when more and more examples of re-gummed stamps came to light, experts were consulted. They declared the stamps perfectly genuine, and the authorities remained mystified until some one suggested taking infra-red photographs.

Then the secret came to light.

Numerous confessions have been obtained from income taxpayers who have admitted the purchase of stamps at half their face value from mysterious hawkers, and one after another of these hawkers have been found and interrogated, but the police have not been able to trace the reissued stamps to their original source.

HEIR TO THRONE DEPLORES POLICY OF ISOLATION

London, Eng.—The Prince of Wales told a distinguished Anglo-American gathering of the Pilgrims Society that the United States and Great Britain are now realizing "no country can prosper in isolation."

The heir to the throne introduced Robert W. Bingham, new United States ambassador to the court of St. James, to the 250 persons The Prince paid tribute to the "strong lead" the new United States government has taken to end the depression.

The Prince of Wales said recent world conditions had caused "untold suffering, but citizens of the United States have renewed confidence and hope."

He plunged into the realms of economics and world affairs in his address, declaring "in the great catastrophe which has overtaken the world, America is realizing with Great Britain that under the present economic system no country can prosper in isolation."

He talked of the growing independence of nations and said "if the depression can teach us the vice of economic nationalism, then the great depression itself may prove the opening of a way to the ideal day when there will be no poverty."

The Prince stressed the importance of the disarmament conference and the coming world economic conference, saying the degree of their success may well depend upon the co-operation of the United States and Great Britain.

Mr. Bingham was given an unusually warm welcome when he rose to speak. The guests, including the Archbishop of Canterbury, stood and applauded before drinking Mr. Bingham's health.

Quoting a passage from Mr. Roosevelt's inaugural address—"The only thing we have to fear is itself"—Mr. Bingham said "from the moment that inaugural address went out to the whole listening nation, the sombre clouds of despair began to lift, paralysis of fear was replaced with hope and courage and with uplifted minds and hearts the whole people accepted a leadership, bold, wise, statesmanlike and inspiring."

"What has happened since then is really incredible," he continued. "But what perhaps is of more importance to you is the phenomenal recovery which has been made which indefinitely enlarges the influence which the United States has to offer in behalf of world peace and world recovery and, also vitally important, the changed attitude on several subjects by the people of the United States through their misfortunes in recent years.

"This change must be understood by anyone who seeks to measure the future of the American government and the American people," he said.

Discussing what he described as a changed attitude of Americans, Mr. Bingham said: "I shall give you one concrete example. For years the majority of American people believed that the higher the tariff, the higher wages and the general level of prosperity in the country would be. Now they have learned the grim lesson that with the highest tariff the country has ever had, more than 13,000,000 people have no wages at all.

"By bitter experience they have learned how unfounded this tariff doctrine is. They have learned how impossible it is to continue selling when they do not buy and they at last are prepared, through proper agreement, to lower tariff barriers so that international trade may begin to move again."

Mr. Bingham summed up the Roosevelt administration's foreign policy as that of "a good neighbor." He declared the message recently delivered in Geneva regarding neutrality "marked a definite departure from certain principles maintained by the United States since the nation was founded."

"It is a great step forward towards maintenance of the peace of the world," he asserted. "It does contain a reservation similar to the reservation retained by Great Britain in the Locarno Treaty. But, from my standpoint, I do not believe there is a 10-year-old child of average intelligence anywhere in the world ho could fail, in event of war, to select instantly the aggressor.

"I do not now speak to you pessimistically," Mr. Bingham went on. "This is not time for pessimism but for faith and courage. But I am convinced our civilization is trembling in the balance. I do believe another general war will certainly destroy it.

"Moreover, I believe that civilization, as we have known and enjoyed it, cannot exist much longer unless the burdens which oppress mankind are lifted soon. In this, the great crisis in human history, I repeat I believe the foundation of hope of our world lies in whole-hearted concerted action between Great Britain, the great self-governing British Commonwealth, and the United States."

Central Wheat Production

Western Provinces Have Pledged Support To the Principle

Winnipeg, Man.—Governments of the three prairie provinces have pledged their support for the principle of curtailing wheat production or controlling exports for the purpose of stabilizing prices, and have offered to co-operate with the Dominion Government in achieving such an objective. The proposals are contained in a wire to Premier R. B. Bennett, forarded by representatives of the three provinces this week.

The proposals particularly stressed the desirability of an agreement being reached at the World Economic Conference in London, England, beteen the wheat-exporting countries of the world, to become effective in the marketing of any crop handled after July 1 this year.

World Postal Union

Executive In Session At Ottawa Settles Vexed Question

Ottawa, Ont.—The question of the amount to be paid countries carrying mail intermediate from origin and destination has been settled by the executive of the World Postal Union in session here. It was agreed to recommend to World Postal Congress which meets in Cairo next year, a modest reduction be made in the amounts paid to carrying countries other than nations in which the mail originated or to which it was designed.

The question has been a concern of the Union since its inception. Closer unformity in postal rates was also agreed upon. The universal rate is theoretically 25 centimes in gold. The allowable deviation above this was recommended as being reduced from 50 to 40 per cent. The allowable rate is below 20 per cent.

The delegates here are preparing the agenda for the World Postal Congress to be held in Cairo next year and will be in session for more than six weeks.

Disease Is Depleting Herds

Strange Malady Killing Off Moose In Northern Manitoba

The Pas, Man.—A disease, unknown to trappers and Indians of the Grand Rapids country east of here, is killing off a large number of moose, according to word brought here by Valentine McKay. The malady has depleted the herds in the neighborhood of the head of Lake Winnipeg.

Caribou, on the other hand, have not suffered, according to bushmen. The caribou are said to be in good shape, and have plenty of feed. They are starting their northward migration, and many have been seen moving to summer feeding grounds during the past few weteks.

Defective Ties Blamed

Raynes Park, Surrey.—A coroner's jury inquiring into deaths of five persons, including Roderick Duthie, 11, a Vancouver-born boy, killed in the derailment of a train here, returned a verdict of accidental death. The jury added a rider to the verdict, however, attributing the accident to failure in packing of the ties along the track.

Export Balance

Canada Shows Excess Of Exports Over Imports Of Large Figure

Ottawa, Ont.—Canada as an international trading corporation issued a balance sheet for 1932 operations, reporting a net export balance of $623,000,000. Exclusive of capital movements, it showed an excess of exports over imports of $72,000,000.

Commodity trade alone showed an export balance of nearly $80,000,000. In the invisible trade column—tourist traffic, interest payments, etc. — there was an import balance of $123,000,000. Deducting net gold exports of $67,000,000 and the commodity export balance from the invisible import balance left a net export balance of $623,000,000 for the year.

In net commodity trading, considering deductions for settlers effects and other non-commercial imports, exports totalled $496,575,000 and imports $416,566,000.

Considering sale and purchase of securities, maturities and direct investments, the net outflow of capital totalled $23,000,000 which represented the country's net export balance for the year.

Security transactions represented an export total of $150,000,000 and an import total of $100,000,000. Maturities added $75,000,000 to the import side of ledger. Direct investments totalled $2,000,000 leaving the net capital outflow at $623,000,000.

In issuing the statement, the Dominion Bureau of Statistics explained there were wide variations in the total debts and credits, due to the necessity of estimating such items as tourist traffic.

Arctic Murder Trial

Eskimo In Coppermine River District Charged With Killing Native

Edmonton, Alberta.—The first murder trial since his appointment last year as stipendiary magistrate for the Northwest Territory, will be held at the mouth of the Coppermine River next month by J. M. Douglass.

At this hearing, an Eskimo named Ah-Ig-Iak, will be tried on the charge of having killed another native named Arnauak. The crime, said to be another instance of the eternal triangle, was committed a year ago on the mainland, immediately south of King William Island.

According to police reports, the accused is alleged to have committed the crime through fear and jealousy. Arnauak had made improper advances ta Ah-Ig Iak's wife, it was claimed.

Owing to the remoteness of the northern posts, word of the crime was not received by the R.C.M.P. until some months after it occurred. Then Constable A. S. Wilson set out from Campbridge Bay and later arrested Ah-Ig-Iak, who was a member of the Sherman inlet Eskimos, who are on Adelaide Peninsula.

Mr. Douglas will leave the city on June 13 for the north. He will travel by boat to Fort Norman, at which point he will board an aeroplane for Great Bear Lake. At that point another machine will continue the flight to Coppermine River.

Favors Gold Standard

Prof. Gregory Urges Return To Gold By Nations Of the World

Vienna.—Delegates to the seventh congress of the International Chamber of Commerce showed their first real burst of enthusiasm when Prof. T. E. Gregory, of Great Britain, urged the nations of the world return to the gold standard. All attempts to manage a paper currency have only made a bad situation worse, Prof. Gregory declared. He said individual nations are timid about returning to gold because each fears others will make use of the opportunity to obtain special advantages.

The way to overcome this fear, the British representative told the congress, "is the same as overcoming fear of a lonely road—we must all take the road together."

Other speakers shared his views, but Eliot Wadsworth, of Boston, Mass., warned the congress to remember that the gold standard really is "99 per cent. confidence and one per cent. gold."

Mr. Wadsworth said he would prefer to emphasize balancing budgets and restoring to its pedestal the old maxim, "as good as a government bond."

Seeking Trade With Russia

New York.—Trade discussions between the United States and Russia, looking toward an enlargement of the export market for American agricultural products will take concrete form very soon. They will centre largely on cotton and livestock—two of the Soviet Union's prime needs.

"EVERY NICE GIRL LOVES A SAILOR"

Earl Beatty, Admiral of the British Fleet, was photographed above as he expressed interest in the dresses of the ladies who will take part in the colorful Greenwich Night Pageant held by the British Royal Naval College in June. The ladies are dressed in costumes of the early eighties.

HOPE TO REACH AGREEMENT TO LIMIT ACREAGE

London, Eng.—Hon. G. Howard Ferguson, Canadian High Commissioner in the United Kingdom and chief Canadian delegate to the wheat conference here, told the meeting that before committing his country to a policy of wheat acreage restriction, he must await the arrival of Prime Minister Richard B. Bennett, who is leaving Ottawa to attend the World Economic Conference opening June 12.

The threat to the success of the wheat restriction agreement, which is seen in the announcement from Sydney that Australia will not participate in an accord to limit acreage, failed to disturb the hopeful attitude of the delegates.

Stanley M. Bruce, the Australian High Commissioner, announced at the first formal session of the four-power conference that his government could not participate in a proposed international scheme for limiting production of the cereal.

The United States delegates are understood to take the view that Australia is bargaining for an arrangement whereby that country would not have to restrict production as drastically as Canada and the United States.

The harmony between Argentine and the other great wheat-growing countries, which developed at Geneva in the earlier discussions, became more apparent here as the Argntine spokesman expressed his willingness to co-operate to the fullest extent in solving the question of world grain surplus.

Judge Stubbs Retired

Order-In-Council Is Passed By Ottawa Cabinet

Ottawa, Ont.—Dominion cabinet passed an order-in-council retiring Judge Lewis St. George Stubbs, of Winnipeg. It did not name his successor.

The Ford report found Judge Stubbs guilty of misbehaviour on four separate charges. The order-in-council then says: "The commissioner has made specific findings of misbehaviour within the meaning of section 31 of the Judges act and that after very careful consideration of these findings and of all the circumstances and considerations appearing from the commissioner's report, the minister (Mr. Cahan) cannot avoid the conclusion that as the commissioner, whose ability and impartiality is unquestioned, has found his honor Judge Stubbs, guilty of misbehaviour in office, your excellency-in-council should forthwith give effect to these findings."
