The speakers included student pastor N. G. Smith of Creston Presbyterian Church, whose talk was along the line of a world wide return to Christ in order to end the depression. Pastor Rev. E. B. Neve of Kimberley, who is also the district presbyter, had a helpful message, as did also pastor Rev. E. J. North of Cranbrook. Equally helpful were the talks by Ralph Cranston of the Nelson Full Gospel Assembly; G. A. Wynndel Fair Attracts Interest

Heirlooms and Freaks of Nature Will Produce Novel Display—McAlpino to Judge Poultry—Raffling Linen Chest-

Since the announcement has been made that entries at Wynndel fair on September 20th will be accepted from bona fide residents outside the Wynndel district, there has been considerable enquiry for prize lists and it would look as if the competition in the needle work section, particularly, will be somewhat keener, and doubtless there will be a like interest in some of the other departments.

Everyone is admiring the stained veneer linen chest that has been made by C. Hindley, and which is to be filled with household linen and will be one of the articles on which raffle tickets will be sold on fair day.

W. S. McAlpine of Creston has again consented to act as judge in the poultry and farm products department. He had charge of this work a year ago and those having poultry at the 1932 fair were well pleased with his work.

A feature of the 1933 fair that is bound to hold the attention of visitors is the class for heirlooms. Wynndel residents are taking a keen interest in this and some valuable and many interesting articles of the good old days will be on display.

In the freaks of nature class exhibitors are on the lookout for oddities in vegetables, fruit, as well as the animal kingdom and this class will be a strong competitor for the honors of being the most looked-at exhibit at the fair.

Another reminder is issued as to entries closing on September 18th, with the secretary, Miss Olga Hagen, who will appreciate all who can turning in their lists as early as possible.

WORLD HAPPENINGS BRIEFLY TOLD

Prefer Staying On Ship

Port Of Churchill Has No Attraction For Sailors

While skippers of the deep water vessels who have arrived at Churchill this season say they are delighted with prospects of business in and out of the port, the crews turn a sad eye on the construction camps and the townsite.

They claim it is the dullest of all the 57 varieties of ports they visit in the course of a year or two. Sailors coming ashore, for the most part, play an odd game of English billiards, sip an occasional orangeade, and purchase a few picture post cards of Eskimos.

Then sighing for the "wine, women and song" of other harbor-fronts, they crunch their way over the gravel heaps and go abroad their various ships.

Accumulated Large Estate In Last Thirty-Five Years

Pietro A. Ierardi, of Elmsford, who accumulated a fortune shining shoes, left an estate of $150,815 gross and $121,091 net, according to a transfer tax appraisal. Ierardi, who died on July 7, 1932, owned the bootblack concessions in the Grand Central Terminal in New York for 35 years. A native of Naples, he came to America when he was 15 years old and started his career as a bootblack on the streets. Only $17 of his estate was in stocks and bonds. He had $98,900 in New York and Westchester real estate, 11 bank accounts totalling $21,000 and mortgages totalling $7,289.

New Trade Envoy

A new trade commissioner is to be appointed to represent Canada in Britain, it has been announced at Ottawa. The department of trade and commerce expects to secure an expert in Canadian fruit growing for the position.

Vacuum cleaners are replacing the bucket and mop as deck cleaners on British war vessels.

Gas From Coal

Huge Industry Being Established, An Industry Which Will Furnish Much Employment

One of the most striking of all the developments that have recently taken place in Great Britain is that of the production of petrol from coal. A week or so ago Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald announced in the House of Commons that it had been decided to place a preference of fourpence a gallon on petrol so produced, and this was immediately followed by the public statement of the Imperial Chemical Industries that the construction of a plant to cost $35,000,000 at Billingham-on-Tees would be proceeded with at once.

This plant will produce 70,000,000 gallons of petrol a year. It will provide employment for 2,000 workers, and will absorb the mine production of three thousand miners, that is 850,000 tons of coal a year.

Another plant is to be erected, probably at Doncaster which will give 20,000,000 gallons, giving work to 10,000 miners, and other plants are to be built throughout the coalfields including South Wales, Northumberland, Lancashire, Forest and Dean and possibly Kent. As soon as construction begins, work for 7,000 will be provided, it is estimated. Further the iron and steel industries will be immensely stimulated, and seven thousand more men will be required in the near future.

For years scientists have been engaged in endeavoring to perfect the process of obtaining petrol from coal. It has now reached the commercial stage and it is reckoned that a high quality can be produced for seven pence per gallon. But the preliminary experiments have been costly, the expenditures on them being estimated at $250,000,000.

This great new industry is proving a veritable stimulus to Great Britain in its efforts to establish trade recovery. The benefits that will be derived from it by the coal industry and others are hardly to be imagined. To the coal miners, who have been such heavy sufferers by the decline in trade, it will be a godsend.—Regina Daily Star.

Trying Out New Method

An electric "anaesthetic" is being tried out in the slaughter house at Milan, Italy. The animal to be killed is subjected to a 70-volt current, which is said to make him insensible to pain for a time long enough to permit scientific slaughter. Until it can be fully determined whether the electricity has a harmful effect on the meat, the new system will remain in an experimental stage. Technical reasons forbid use of a current strong enough to produce instant death.

Artificially dried hay contains practically 100 per cent. of the nutrient value of the original grass, vitamins included, and cows fed on it produce milk and cream of the same quality as produced when they are eating summer grass.

Destroying Flower Bulbs

Holland Finds They Are Drug On Market At Present

A bulb-destruction week has been held in the Haarlem district particularly and in Holland generally. The object is the same as that of the Brazilians in burning their coffee—to reduce the supply and increase prices. The famous Dutch bulbs, once the pride of the nation, are now a drug on the market, after having made fortunes for many growers. In the Haarlem region they were brought in in carloads and thrown into garbage cans and refuse piles. Hundreds of thousands of tulips, hyacinths and narcissuses were destroyed in this manner. Destruction week was "decreed" by the "adjustment committee for rehabilitation of the industry."

Railway Accidents In Canada

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

SEPTEMBER 10

JONATHAN

Golden Text: "A friend loveth at all times."—Proverbs 17:17.

Lesson: 1 Samuel, Chapters 18-20.

Devotional Reading: Romans 12:1-5, 9, 10.

Explanations and Comments

The Covenant Between Jonathan and David, 18:1-4.—Jonathan, Saul's son, had watched David's brave deed, and he was present when Abner, the captain of the army, brought David, the victorious champion of Israel, into the kng's presence. While Saul talked with David, Jonathan's heart went out to him; his soul was knit with the soul of David, and Jonathan loved him as his own soul.

As the devoted friendship of the two young men is disclosed in the narrative, we marvel at the disinterestedness of Jonathan. David's love for Jonathan did not conflict with his own interests, but Jonathan's interests were all against his love for David. Nothing could better express the attitude of Jonathan's mind, Dr. Matheson says, than the words, "Jonathan stripped himself of the robe that was upon him, and gave it to David, and his apparel, even to his sword, and to his bow, and to his girdle." From beginning to end, the love of Jonathan for David was a disrobing, a divestiture. Only the noblest nature can love one who is a rival and whose success means one's own defeat.

"As one lamp lights another, nor grows less,
So nobleness enkindleth nobleness."
—Lowell.

"Blessed are they who have the gift of making friends, for it is one of God's best gifts. It involves many things, but above all, the power of going out of one's self, and appreciating whatever is noble and loving in another."—Thomas Hughes.

Biologist Speaks On Heredity

Education Is Also Needed To Produce Brilliant Men

The children of brilliant parents will never be as brilliant as their parents, but they will be above the average," said D. Ward Cutler, the biologist, at the British Social Hygiene Council summer school at Oxford.

"Similarly, except in the case of feeble-mindedness, the children of low-grade parents will not be quite as low-grade as their parents, but they will be well below the average of the country.

"I do not believe that education will ever produce a great scientist, historian, or literary man, unless the necessay characteristics are born in him.

"Nor do I believe that heredity can ever produce any of these men without the right environment and education."

"Plenty of love and cod liver oil," was urged by Hon. Mrs. E. Franklin, as a better dictum than much of so-called "modern" training of children, at the World Federation of Education Associations in Dublin.

"With all our scientific planning," she said, "the child's heart still leaps when he beholds a rainbow in the sky. But this part of the child is often starved."

Symbol Of Friendship

Canadian Institute Of International Affairs Receives Picture From Japan

Symbol of Japanese friendship toward Canada, a handsome picture by a noted Japanese artist has been presented to the Canadian Institute of International Affairs by the Japanese group attending the Pacific Relations Conference. The picture was presented to the Canadian group by Dr. Inazo Nitobe, leader of the Japanese group and accepted by E. J. Tarr, Winnipeg, Sir Robert Falconer, Toronto, and W. M. Birks, Montreal.

The handsome-framed picture is about 3½ feet by 3 feet in size and done in silk which, it is said, will endure almost 1,000 years. The painting was done by Juppo Araki, one of Japan's great artists, especially as a gift to Canada.

Linking World By 'Phone

Faraday Building In London Will Serve Over 32,000,000 Subscribers

Faraday building, in the city of London, is to be the centre of a gigantic spider's web of world-wide communications, equipped to serve over 32,000,000 telephone subscribers.

When completed, its 11 spacious storeys, covering a superficial floor area of 109,000 square feet, will be the most scientifically controlled building in Europe.

Many scientific devices to assist the operators and safeguard subscribers have been added. These include:

Special automatic timing apparatus which checks conversation periods on the continental and inland trunk services to a fraction of a second.

Two stop-watches attached to the exchange panels used for radio telephony check calls to one-fifth of a second.

White and green lamps signify to the operator, by pressing a button, the state of traffic at the continental exchange. This saves time by advising subscribers of the length of delay.

Small spot light systems reveal idle circuits associated with outgoing radio telephone or inland trunks.

Revolutionary changes are to be made in certain services to bring them up to date.

Chief among these will be the extension in the autumn of the "service on demand" to practically the whole of the inland long distance routes from London.

Services to be housed at Faraday house will include: A new toll exchange to serve 1,000,000 subscribers in and around London; city and central exchanges to be transferred from Carter Lane, E.C., the intenational switchboard at Carter Lane to be enlarged.

Secret Is Valuable

How Soft-Mouthed Creatures Tunnel Hardest Wood Problem For Scientists

The following article by W. Beach Thomas, appeared in the London Spectator:

Will our men of science who concern themselves with natural history settle the following point? How do caterpillars and other rather soft-mouthed creatures tunnel the hardest wood? Is their secret mechanical or chemical? I saw this week a bole of singularly hard English oak of considerable age converted almost into a comb by the caterpillars of the Goat Hawk moth. The beast is large and powerful and of that warning yellow coloration which suggests venom. But the tissue even of the mouth is soft, and a priori, it looks impossible that it should tunnel a substance which turns hard iron nails. It is a natural inference that the caterpillar ejects some chemical to help it. If so, it might be of no little importance to discover exactly what is this wonderful stuff which may make cellulose soft and palatable. Did not Mr. Haldane prognosticate this feat as one of the final revolutionary developments of the future.

Lens Made In Layers

British Opticians Have Perfected Unbreakable Glass For Spectacles

The great fear of spectacles being broken while worn and causing serious injury to the wearer is to be removed following long research by British opticians.

A lens made in layers, which, said the manufacturer to a newspaper representative, did not break when hit with a hammer, has been perfected.

It was tested for 500 hours with ultra-violet rays; boiled up to 500 degrees Fahrenheit, and baked in an oven.

After that it was frozen in a refrigerator.

Rewards Not So Meagre

Reading that when Henry Travis of Pullman, Wash., won a local "best-wheat" contest, fellow grain growers presented him with three gallons of ice cream, Junior is inclined to think that probably the rewards of agriculture are not so meagre as they recently have been pictured.

Aberdeen, Scotland, faces a water shortage.

SYNOPSIS

Camilla Hoyt, young and beautiful, falls in love with Peter Anson, fellow student in an art school. She is the adopted daughter of a wealthy family, and he is a poor, struggling sculptor. On their first date Peter spends most of his money to show Camilla a good time, and then decides he must give her up because he cannot stand the financial pace. A chance meeting, however, proves the way for another date. This time they walk in the park.

(Now Go On With The Story.)

CHAPTER VII.

"You think I am going to art school for the novelty of having something to do," Camilla began, as they walked through the park, "and that I haven't a serious thought in my head. You think I am a girl with a fortune and not an idea of earning a penny of my own. That's the girl you think I am. But you're wrong. My classes at National are only a part of my training to become a commercial artist. That means I want to work, and have to work. I'm not dabbling with art for a pastime, as you have been thinking. What's more, I'm not even planning for a distant future with the possibility of success as a famous artist who creates beautiful and lasting things. I intend to commercialize whatever talent I have just as soon as possible. Covers for magazines that will be glanced at and tossed aside, illustrations for stories that will be read and forgotten, fashions that are whims for a day, glaring advertisements for linoleum, tooth paste and whatnot. In fact, I'll do anything I have a chance to try. Now you know." She stopped abruptly and the soft silence of the night closed in about them isolating them.

Finally Peter said, "Know what? I'm glad to know that you are ambitious to do something for yourself, and all that, but what's that got to do with—with my forgetting you and your being blue?"

"Because I'm just a poor little rich girl who has to earn my own living after the first of September, next."

Peter was puzzled. "But you are the Hoyt girl, aren't you? I supposed you were only dabbling in art for amusement. Are you really serious?"

"Just as serious as my situation. I really am a little frightened, Mr. Anson—about earning my living, I mean. Sometimes I get to wondering how I could be of any service that would be worth money to people."

"But your fortune—"

"I have no fortune. And my name is not Hoyt, really."

He shook his head in bewilderment. "I'm still floundering."

"I don't mind telling you all about it, if you still care to listen."

"I'm very anxious to know."

Camilla turned on the bench facing him, and began earnestly, like a child reciting a story. "To begin at the beginning, I am one of a family of nine children—the middle one. My real name is Lorenz. But I didn't know that until three years ago, when I had been riding in the clouds for fourteen years and suddenly had to come down to earth in a parachute. I almost got tangled up in the strings and things, but I finally landed feet first and looked around to see where I was. It wasn't such a beautiful place as I had left, either."

"But how did you get up in the clouds in the first place?" Peter interrupted, amused with her quaint metaphor.

"Oh yes, I'm getting ahead of my story. I went up when I was four years old. It was this way. My people had come to America before I was born, and they hadn't done so well here at that time, it seems. Anyway, once when I was four years old, a volunteer social relief worker came to our house to tell mother how to put more water in the soup kettle so that she could feed nine mouths with half rations. Of course, my mother having lived in southern Europe, where many of the people are on half rations most of the time, and the wealthy Mrs. Hoyt never having known how soup was made—she could do that. Anyway, it seems that I was quite a pretty child—in fact, a beautiful child—"

"I don't doubt that," he interrupted again.

Camilla dismissed that with a gesture of impatience. "—and the rich lady who had no children of her own was so captivated by me that she came to see us again and wanted to take me home. The attraction was mutual. I liked the grand lady and wanted to go home with her when she suggested it. My parents objected at first, but she finally persuaded them to agree. It was my mother who did the objecting, it being my father's policy that there were plenty more where I came from and he already had more mouths than he could feed, anyway. Mrs Hoyt was to adopt me until I became of age. She promised to do everything for me that money could do: private schools, social advantages, travel and special education. I would be her daughter until I was twenty-one. Then I should decide for myself what I wished to do. But I would not be an heir to the Hoyt estate."

"But why not?" asked Peter. "Adopted children usually inherit estates from foster parents, especially if they have no direct heirs."

Camilla gestured with the eloquence of her Latin heritage. "Don't ask me riddles. Why does a fish swim? Who knows? This was some whim of an idea, no doubt. Perhaps they feared I should waste my inheritance on my large family, or they would take it away from me. As I said, I rode in the clouds for years. You can imagine what it was like for me—governesses, imported frocks, constant attention, people telling me how pretty I was, and all the rest. When I was eighteen, I made my debut. Soon afteward, I learned the facts. Naturally, it was a shock. Then I learned that my foster mother was ambitious for me to marry wealth, which would solve my problem very nicely. Prospects were offered to me continually, always with the deceitful ruse that I was the Hoyt heiress, to double the attraction. Foreign titles, industrial fortunes, social leaders. I despised it all. At first, I announced that I would leave them and be independent. But I learned that it was legally arranged for me to live as Camilla Hoyt until I was twenty-one. So I decided to make the best of it by training myself, while I had the chance, to make my living after I was dismissed from my adoption. Of course, I had to defy their wishes, by studying to be self-supporting instead of angling to be the mistress of a fortune. Thats' why I have the blues," she concluded suddenly. "I'm sorry I troubled you. I don't know why I should tell you, Mr. Anson—"

"I do," he declared vehemently. "Because I've been wanting terribly to know you ever since the first time I saw you—but I didn't dare to presume to a friendship with Miss Hoyt. I can be a friend to Camilla Lorenz."

"Why do you say that?" she asked with surprise.

"Because I am only Peter Anson, struggling for my degrees and possibly a scholarship with a year in Paris, and not a dollar in the world to back me."

A little groan of horror escaped her. "And I let you spend all that money on me the other night!" her voice almost sobbed.

He laughed shortly. "That was rather a strain. But I'll manage," cheerfully. "Did you think I was heir to J. P. Morgan?"

"I didn't know," with consternation. "You see I really haven't much sense yet about money—in that way. And you impressed me so with your importance. I didn't care a thing about the show and the Maddox Club, but I thought if I didn't suggest the swankiest places in town, you would laugh at me. I don't mind if other people laugh at me, but I didn't want you to," her voice was almost a whisper. "If only I had known—can you forgive me, ever—Peter—?"

"Camilla—why, you darling—you're crying—please don't—"

She was in his arms, their faces pressed close, trembling with happiness. "Peter—I'm crying because—I'm so happy—to be here with you," she whispered. "The blues are all gone for always."

And looking higher still we find those who never wait until their moral work accumulates who do the good only to see the better, and see the better only to achieve it, who are faithful for remorse, too earnest for repose, whose worship is action, and whose action is ceaseless aspiration.

THE RHYMING OPTIMIST

By Aline Michaelis

WITHIN THE DREAM

In truth, I know I cannot mold
Life's ways to my desire;
But could you know the hopes I hold,
My vision's flower and fire!

Could you but glimpse the loveliness
Which is my goal and guide,
Like shine and sheen of April's dress,
Like sunset on the tide;

You, too, would then forget the care,
The burden of the day,
Could you in this rich dower share
Of glory's hidden way!

The world, perhaps, must laugh at me,
The dreamer passing by,
With spirit drenched in ecstasy
And rapt, unseeing eye.

But though I know I cannot mold
Earth's ways to my desire,
I dwell within the dreams I hold,
My vision's flower and fire!

In Italy silk is now used for the covering of sausages. What is used for the inside remains as ever a mystery.

RHEUMATISM GOT HIM

80-years-old Pianist is Relieved by Kruschen

Although old age has not yet kept this man from his occupation as a pianist, rheumatism did threaten to do so recently.

"Two years ago," he writes, "I was suddenly taken with rheumatism, all down my left arm. I tried many things—all to no purpose. I then commenced taking a half-teaspoonful of Kruschen Salts every morning, and soon felt benefit. My arm, which was painful and nearly useless, to my astonishment is now, after a few weeks' treatment, quite better. I am more than pleased, as I am a pianist, and playing made matters worse. I am just entering my 80th year, and am in good health."—G.L.A.

The six mineral salts of Kruschen have a direct effect upon the whole bloodstream, neutralizing uric acid, which is the recognized cause of rheumatism. They also restore the eliminating organs to proper working order, and so prevent constipation, thereby checking the further formation of uric acid and other body poisons which undermine the health.

CRESTON, B.C., FRIDAY, SEPT. 8

Look for Another Candidate

With the date for the long awaited provincial election set, and polling due within less than eight weeks, the political pot is beginning to simmer, with most of the conversation devoted to a discussion of the possibilities of further candicates appearing in the Creston-Nelson riding in addition to the three now definitely in the field.

It is pretty generally conceded that there is little chance now of anyone coming along to carry the Bowser banner, but with Dr. Lyle Telford here last night to discuss the provincial features of the C.C.F. platform it now looks certain that the Co-Operative Commonwealth party will have a standard bearer, and if it is as active for the next two months as it has been in the past few weeks in the way of public meetings certainly the electorate will have ample opportunity to become thoroughly informed as to the aims and aspirations of the new political federation which is certainly putting on a wonderful front for an organization that would have you believe it has no campaign fund.

Apathetic to Independents

But while the C.C.F. just now is riding on the crest of a wave that they hope will sweep at least a few of their supporters into the next legislature, some of the erstwhile independents are not finding the going quite so encouraging.

After much preliminary work to assure a successful convention and bring about the nomination of Hon. W. A. McKenzie, former minister of mines, as an "independent" in the Similkameen riding, the faithful gathered at Keremeos on August 24th, but notwithstanding all this effort, and an abundance of complimentary speeches, Mr. McKenzie very respectfully declined the honor—for the present, at any rate—and after reading a quite detailed account of the convention it is quite clear that Mr. McKenzie was well advised in taking the tip of the Penticton Herald which sagely remarks that the "general apathy in the riding does not justify him in spending his time and money seeking election."

The cold feet attitude of Mr. McKenzie must come as a distinct shock to those who may have had the idea that the province is wanting a strong independent membership in the next legislature.

Nowhere in all British Columbia could the iedependents look with more confidence for encouragement than Similkameen, but it was not forthcoming, nor is it at all likely to manifest itself in other constituencies where former Conservative M.P.P.'s are trying to stay in public life by running on the new ticket.

Last Chance to Register

In connection with the oncoming election it seems clear that there will be one last chance for residents to get on the voters list, and this will be at a revision to be held Monday, September 18th.

On this occasion it will be necessary for the voter to appear in person, and the Review again urges upon Col. Lister to exert what influence he may have upon the authorities at Victoria to make it possible for those interested to appear before deputy registrars to be named for every polling place in the riding. Unless this change is granted the only place local voters can be registered will be at Creston.

For that day, too, the Review suggests that the local deputy registrar should have a downtown office which will be open from 10 a.m. to 10 p.m. in order to facilitate registration work. The district agriculturist has a very fine office centrally located that would be ideal for such purpose.

Game Law Enforcement

The hunting season is due to open on September 15th, and that the matter of enforcing the regulations of the Game Act is likely to be just a little more troublesome than in the past would seem likely in view of present day conditions.

If any doubt exists in this connection listen to this from the Fernie Free Press: "With the approach of the hunting season local hunters are reported to have sent in a request that all game wardens in the district be sent down to the coast to hunt cougars where, it is reported, they have been so numerous that they are a menace to the public."

Quite a few hundred dollars is paid annually at Creston for hunting licenses, and in return for thi the department has placed a game guardian h re, with very definite instructions to see to it that regulations obeyed, and before the season opens Mr. Cartwright wants it to be understood that the regulations are made to be respected and not to be broken and that he will very much appreciate having the full support of all who have the interests of game protection at heart.

The Review has been asked to help along the good work, especially in the matter of giving publicity where it may be necessary to resort to police court backing to enforce respect for the game laws. We mention this detail so that anyone having the bad luck to get into the clutches of the law will not be coming around asking that the bad news be withheld from the public.

The September meeting of Creston Valley Post Canadian Legion was held on Tuesday night, with a fair turnout. Plans for Armistice Day were discussed and it was decided to have a dance on November 10th. There will be the usual exercises on the 11th with the customary dinner.

All the schools in the valley resumed operations on Tuesday morning with a total attendance of over 700. Due to the fine work of cupid new teachees were required at Creston, Huscroft and West Creston, which accounts for half the staff changes in the whole district, which employs 22 teachers.

Mr. and Mrs. F. V. Staples, R Walmsley, S. A. Speers, Lloyd Couling, Percy Robinson, Adam Robertson and Arthur and Allan Speers were amongst those from town at the baseball tournament at Fernie on Labor Day All are of the opinion that had the umpiring been on the square Creston team would probably have brought back the championship cup.

The biggest public school attendance Creston has ever had is already enrolled for the fall term. It totals 227, as compared with 224 on opening day a year ago. There were 31 new beginners, or just about all one teacher can handle, and there are 22 students in Grade 8. The pupils have been all located as follow: Division 1, Principal E. Marriot, 35. Division 2, Adam Robertson, 38. Division 3, Miss Wade, 35. Division 4, Miss Learmonth, 40. Division 5, Miss Hazel Hobden, 40. Division 6, Miss Eva Holmes, 39.

Changing Civilization, The State, And The School

Prevailing economic conditions throughout the world have had a direct and calamitous effect on Canada, and particularly on the entire western half of the Dominion which has to depend so largely upon world markets for the profitable disposal of its products. The situation thus created was bad enough for the people to be called upon to face, but, unfortunately, it was intensified throughout very large areas by successive years of drouth and insect pests resulting in almost if not quite complete crop failure. Many people would have been able to fairly well contend against one of these adverse conditions, but were swamped by a combination of the two.

The result has, of necessity, been not only a loss of income and livelihood to thousands of individuals,—because the losses in the agricultural world has brought unemployment and loss in the industrial world,—but it has thrown a very heavy burden on all governments, while at the same time greatly reducing their revenues wherewith to meet that burden. People without incomes cannot, of course, pay taxes. Public services have had to be cut, and various economies enforced.

Canada, as a nation, and the Western Provinces in particular, have always been generous in making provision for the education of the youth of the land. They have been proud of their educational systems. They have never been backward in giving whole-hearted support to the improvement of education for their children and increasing the means of obtaining it by all. As a result, expenditures for education have been heavy, and school taxes high.

Owing to the necessity of cutting public expenditures in these times, some people have advocated a slashing of expenditures on education, involving drastic curtailments in the school facilities provided, and limiting the educational opportunities of the present generation. Serious reductions have aleady taken place, and in particular, teachers' salaries in rural schools have been reduced to a point where it is difficult for them to carry on. Nevertheless some short-sighted, panic-stricken people still clamor for still greater "savings" at the expense of the education of the children of today. To all such we would recommend a careful consideration of the following article contributed to the Victoria, B.C., Times, inasmuch as the application of the truths contained therein are by no means confined to the Province and people of British Columbia:

With economic conditions as they are, we hear on all sides the most fantastic suggestions about closing the schools, doing away with high school education after the age of 14, save for those who can afford to pay fees, about elimination of school services that make for education efficiency, about merciless slashing of teachers' salaries.

"Teach 'em till they are fourteen," said a man of reputed mental brilliance to me the other day. "Teach 'em till they are fourteen, then let them go,—unless their parents can afford to pay for them to go in for higher education."

"Let them go." But where? In Vancouver alone 40,000 children are attending school. What if 4,000, 5,000 of them were turned out of the schools? Were not able to go back this year? And probably as many more throughout the province?

Twenty years ago such children might have been absorbed in unconsidered labor of some kind, in apprenticeship, in farm work (though not in British Columbia this last).

What is there for them to do now? What?

And as every mother, every teacher knows, fourteen is a dangerous age.

Britain has been through a petty bad time these last ten years, but she has not cut her school services. As a matter of fact she has increased them. She knows she had to.

It seems to me if any of these drastic curtailments suggested by reactionaries are done save in tentative moderation and as temporary expedients, a Dark Age will set in.

Of course, the highest work in the intellectual world always seems to be beyond the range of intelligence of the majority of people. A nation's rank in the world may be estimated as high or low by the amount it allows itself for the higher kinds of work That is for its teachers, its clergy, its inventors, its social service workers, its creators of all kinds of art. Take the nations and see how they measure up in your estimation to this axiom.

If a nation wants able men and women to deal with and teach its children, it must pay for ability.

A mean demand will meet with a mean supply.

And the nation in the long run will be the loser.

Canada cannot afford to lose in th's matter of education. Children of this changing civilization,—for changing it is and very rapidly in form and ideals,— cannot afford to lose. We, the adults of this generation, have no right to steal from the future generation anything in the matter of educational opportunities or wisdom.

"Young Canada we stand on guard for thee" was the apt and intentional misquotation used by Dean D. Buchanan in his address to the British Columbia Teachers' Federation, in convention. It tersely sums up the attitude of teachers and parents during this time of economic stress.

Free-Handedness Of Patrons Means Terrific Loss To Railways and Hotels

How many towels are, let us say, appropriated by railway passengers? The figures for English trains are staggering, an English railway detective being authority for the statement that 25,000 towels were taken from the trains of one system last month. He says also that the thefts of cups, spoons, window straps and glasses cause a loss to British railway companies of thousands of pounds a year. Most of these disappearances occur in the summer holiday season. Hotels and restauurants, on the other hand, sustain their heaviest losses at Christmas, when glasses, jugs, ashtrays, cutlery and linen vanish by wholesale. According to an English hotelkeeper, this practice of picking up useful or fancy little articles is more frequent among well-to-do people than among the less fortunate. There is an aspect of this interesting custom which is not often thought of, and that is the necessity of not offending a good customer when mischance has revealed his free-handedness with mine host's property. Some years ago a valued guest, having paid her bill, was making her way to the door of the hostelry when one of the hotel's spoons clattered to the floor. An attendant promptly picked it up and hastened after her, with the obvious intention of handing it to her as if it had been her own, but his well-meant effort to save the lady's face was foiled by an acceleration in her speed which almost turned it into flight. The attendant's fears were realized. She never stayed at that hotel again.—New York Evening Post.

Doing Good Business With Other Countries

Japan Rapidly Forging Ahead Opinion Of British Shipowner

"The thing that impressed most on my five months' tour of the world was the way Japan is forging ahead in her business with other countries, and the way she is leaving us far behind," stated R. S. Dalgleish, British shipowner of Newcastle-on-Tyne, who reached Victoria recently from Australia. He spent several days at Vancouver before crossing the continent en route to England to complete a trip around the world. "Japan has knocked Great Britain and the United States flat," Mr. Dalgleish declared, "and the sooner we wake up to that fact the better for us all. Our costs are too high, and the sooner we get rid of tariffs, subsidies, restrictions and quotas the better."

Can Do Seventy Miles

Manitoba Police Using Midget Car For Highway Patrol Work

Two six-foot Manitoba patrolmen arrived at Calgary on business, driving a motor car which makes a Baby Austin look big in comparison.

The midget auto was imported from England for highway patrol work. The two men stated tiny cars and big cops form an ideal combination for the job.

Both men are employed by the Manitoba Motor League Safety Patrol, and have authority to lay informations and make arrests in connection with infractions of the Motor Vehicle Act of that province.

They stated that their little car can make 70 miles an hour, even on gravel highways.

Fingerprints Are Valuable

Worth Far More Than Photographs In Many Cases

Fingerprints as well as photographs should have their place in the family album, Police Commissioner Austin Roche, Buffalo, N.Y., told the annual convention of the international association of chiefs of police at Chicago.

"These prints," said Roche, "would be of great value in cases of missing persons or kidnapping. They would be worth far more than photographs in many cases."

Roche suggested the fingerprints be taken of a person as a child, thus assuring him his identity would be preserved as long as he retained his hands.

A "radium clock" is used to find the age of the earth. Erosion of the soil and salt is also an "hour-glass."

Established New Record

French Artist Crossed Atlantic Alone In Six-Foot Sloop

Claiming a record for a one man crossing of the Atlantic under sail, Marin-Marie, French seascape painter, whose real name is Durand Couppal, arrived at New York August 24, aboard the thirty-six-foot sloop "Winnibell II.", which he navigated single-handed from Brest.

Coming by way of Madeira, Dominica, and Port de France, Martinique, Marie has covered 2,850 miles since May 10. The famous Captain Slocum, in the equally famous "Spray," set the previous record mark, with a crossing from Cape Sable to Lisbon in twenty-eight days.

Marie took twenty-nine, but in that time he covered 250 miles more than the earliest mariner.

The "Winnibell" was launched at Boulogne in February, and it has several devices permitting navigation by a one-man crew. The sloop can be steered from the cabin. All the halyards run aft through leading blocks. A cover can be placed over the cockpit, and the "Winnibell" completely closed up, with her pilot inside.

Marie's purpose was to gather material for his seascapes. During the voyage to Martinique, he said, he took over the tiller only thirty-seven hours. For twenty-seven days he did not touch the helm. En route from Matinique to New York, he steered only three days. When the robot was at the helm, he could go below and sleep for hours or loll on deck in good weather as much as he pleased, confident that his sloop was on its course.

Like Canadian West

Lord and Lady MacMillan Hope To Return For Longer Visit

Lady MacMillan, whose distinguished husband heads the Royal Commission on Banking in Canada, likes the Canadian West and hopes to return for a lengthier visit soon. "We've been to Canada four times, but we've had only the most tantalizing short glimpses of the Rockies and the Prairies," she said. "Some day we hope to return for a real holiday and seek some of the far away mountain trails that appeal to us so much.

In 1926, Lord and Lady Macmillan were in Saint John for the meeting of the Canadian Bar Association; in 1928, they visited Regina for the Bar convention when Lord Macmillan represented Britain at that gathering.

The Maritimes hold a distinct appeal for Lady Macmillan, who is keenly interested in the Scottish people in Canada. "We are Scottish, you know, not English," she said.

While in Victoria, Lady Macmillan secured some flower seeds from the Butchart Gardens for their country estate in Surrey.

Veteran Engine Scrapped

Locomotive No. 2717 Only British Engine Captured By Germans

A battle-scarred British war veteran and ex-German prisoner of war, with a travel record of more than 1,220,000 miles, has just passed away.

This "hero" was locomotive No. 2717, believed to have been the only British railway engine to have been captured by the Germans. It has just been withdrawn from service and broken up.

While in use on the British front at Cambrai in 1917, No. 2717 was captured by the enemy and for five months was used as a machine-gun post in "No Man's Land." Following the March retreat the Germans removed the engine, patched up the bullet and shrapnel holes and used her for railway service until she was recaptured by the British in 1918.

On return to home duties after the war the engine was decorated with a plate recording its war services.

Queen Receives Degree

When the degree of Doctor of Music honor of the Royal College of Music was conferred upon the queen, her majesty received from the Prince of Wales a jewel and chain as a gift from the college, of which he is president. The degree was conferred at Buckingham Palace by Sir Hugh Allen, director of the college; Lord Palmer, vice-president, and Charles Morley, honorary secretary.

Honesty is the best in the long run. But, on the other hand, if you are honest you do not have to run.

Financial Strength Of Britain

Deposits In One Bank Increased $179,000,000 In Year

There is a striking indication of the financial strength of Britain in the matter of the saving of money by Britishers, contained in the annual report of a leading bank, one of the Big Five. The deposits compared with last year show a clear gain of $179,000,000.

The general prosperity of the institution was shown in the maintenance of three classes of dividends, one of 10 per cent., the others of 14 per cent. each.

With total resources approximating two billions of dollars, there is summoned up a satisfactory money prospect of capacity to finance enterprises under a widening market, such as was hoped for by the action of the Economic Conference, that is most reassuring.

The increased savings on deposit tell the story of latent financial reserves in England. This is fortified by the statement of the large dividends earned, and paid.—Winnipeg Tribune.

Television Tests From Crystal Palace Tower

Commanding Height Far Above Thames Makes Place Ideal

Negotiations have just been completed to permit experimental television transmissions from the south tower of Crystal Palace.

The transmissons wil be made for the first time, on ultra short waves below eight metres.

This tower is regarded as ideal because of its commanding height. It stands 550 feet above the Thames level.

Recently H. Thomas, the ass'stant organist of Crystal Palace, a wireless expert, carried out experiments from the north tower with his amateur transmitter (Q6Qb), using a five-metre wave.

Reports of successful reception came from various parts of the country, some 200 miles away.

CENTRAL BANK PLAN IS OPPOSED IN THE EAST

Halifax, N.S.—Creation of a central bank, widely advocated before the royal commission on banking in western Canada, did not receive support from the Halifax Board of Trade when that body made representations to the commission here.

It was the initial sitting which Lord Macmillan and his four colleagues have held in the Maritime provinces.

The brief of the board of trade was presented by A. B. Wiswell, vice-president of that body. It concluded by asking that the chartered banks be permitted to carry on as in the past, subject to such amendments of existing legislation as the commission might consider advisable. The board of trade expressed the view that "the federal government at Ottawa, by keeping in touch with the Canadian Bankers' Association, or heads of the larger banks, is quite capable of providing for the financing of the country, the movement of the crops and to meet any emergency which may arise from time to time."

The Canadian banks had come through the years of "stress and depression" with credit to themselves and "with the commendation of other countries where serious banking conditions had prevailed," the board of trade asserted. It expressed the view that the expense connected with establishing a central bank would outweigh the benefits to be derived from its creation.

Lord Macmillan interjected that a central bank would not necessarily be a very costly affair. The control of credit and the issuance of currency were functions usually associated with a central bank, he said.

Under present conditions, for instance, there was some room for criticism because the control of the note issues was in the hands of a political body. Dominion notes were issued by the government after the deposit of certain securities by the banks.

Miners, fishermen, agriculturists and lumbermen in eastern Canada were also having a hard time, Mr. Wiswell reminded the commission in referring to western representations on behalf of the wheat farmer.

This view was heartily concurred in by A. H. Whitman, who took up the situation from the point of the dry fish industry.

"As far as I can judge there is no demand or desire for a central bank or for any drastic changes in the Bank Act," Mr. Whitman said. He had never been refused adequate credit for his requirements by the banks.

Search For Old Forts

Expedition To North To Unfold Glamorous History Of Early Days

Prince Albert.—A unique expedition left here recently when Professor H. A. Innis, of the University of Toronto, and J. B. Tyrell, Toronto, president of the Kirkland Lake Mining Company, set off in an outboard motored freighting canoe with two guides to search for locations of old forts on the North Saskatchewan and Saskatchewan rivers east of here.

One of the objects of the expedition will be to relocate the remains of Fort a la Corne, originally established in 1748 by La Verandrye and first named Fort St. Louis. Some doubt has arisen as to the exact location of this fort and those on the novel expedition will attempt to remove these doubts. This is one of the oldest forts known in the history of the west and about it and the other forts in this part of the province is written the glamorous history of the early fur trading days when the flowing streams in this part of the province were the main arteries of travel. The two will spend a week in their quest.

Serious Feed Shortage

Toronto, Ont.—Feed shortage in Essex county, announced the Ontario Department of Agriculture, has left the cattle and hog-raising industry in the southern county in a serious condition. Probably 10,000 head of livestock, including cattle and hogs, will have to be sold at a sacrifice on account of feed shortage.

Deplores The Dole

Speaker At Calgary Contended That Relief Is Becoming A Racket

Calgary, Alta.—Unemployment relief in Canada is becoming little more than a racket, with both politicians and unemployed engaged in it, declared Rev. J. R. Craig, of Winnipeg, in addressing a service club. "The Canadian system is a dole, pure and simple," he said, "encouraging pauperization."

The nation owes no man a living, he contended, but it does owe him the opportunity to make a living. The plea for "easy money" is based on false understanding, and easy money has ruined the western farmer, Mr. Craig declared.

The speaker asserted the Canadian Goodwill Industries of Winnipeg had started with nothing but donations of used clothing, furniture and other articles and the voluntary work of a few men and women, had grown to an institution paying $15,000 in wages annually and providing employment or 100 to 150 persons.

Castoff articles were collected, repaired, and sold for wages. Though he did not hold it to be a permanent unemployment relief measure, yet he believed such schemes whereby a man was given a tool in his hand rather than a coin in his hat, were immeasurably of greater value.

The state was being called on to do what the individual should be doing, or the community, he added. The modern church had almost reached the limit of its helpfulness, for the reason its social service activities were left to the pastors.

Experiment Of United States Being Watched

Countries Interested In Stabilization Of Currency Through N.R.A. Operation

Banff, Alta.—If the United States can stabilize its dollar through the operation of the N.R.A., stabilization of currencies by three or perhaps four other great nations will follow, and thereafter will come stabilization of the currencies of the rest of the world. This, in brief, was one conclusion reached at the conference of the Institute of Pacific Relations just ended.

Meanwhile, other countries are closely watching the progress of the N.R.A. application, and the importance of the experiment, having regard to the social and economic welfare of the people of the world, cannot be overestimated, it was agreed.

Currency stabilization is linked with trade stabilization and with solutions of the problems of population pressure, so insistent in Japan and China; of trade conflicts, as, for instance, the bitter rivalry between Lancashire and Japanese textile spinners, and of disturbed relations between countries. The dispute of China and Japan over Manchuria was given as an example.

Ontario's Relief Bill

Estimated Total Of $30,000,000 To End Of Fiscal Year

Toronto, Ont.—At the end of Ontario's fiscal year, it is estimated a total of $30,000,000 will have been expended within the province on relief by the province, Dominion and municipalities. Of this sum the provincial exchequer will have provided about $13,750,000, the Dominion about $9,500,000 and the municipalities about $6,750,000.

From the first of 1930 to the end of July this year, the total bill was $77,800,000, of which the province has contributed $27,800,000, the Dominion $23,100,000 and the municipalities $26,900,000.

Brandon Aviator Injured

Accident Occurred When Propeller Of Monoplane Broke

Brandon, Man.—Crashing to the ground when the propeller of his monoplane broke, Alvin Kennedy, instructor for the Brandon Aero Club, escaped serious injury, but was detained at the Brandon General Hospital, where minor injuries were attended to.

The machine had been built locally and was owned by Gordon Brown. It had been taken up as high as 1,000 feet a few days ago, and, as the pilot put it, "behaved well."

NOVA SCOTIA'S NEW PREMIER

Angus L. MacDonald, 43-year-old native of Inverness County, leader of the Liberal Party in Nova Scotia, which secured 21 out of the 30 seats, defeating the government of Hon. G. S. Harrington. The premier-elect has not hitherto had a seat in the House.

Americans In Danger

Request For Warship To Protect Priests At Foochow, China

Washington.—The state department reports that commander-in-chief of the Asiatic fleet has been requested to send a naval vessel to Foochow, China, where three Americans were reported to be in the danger zone of operations of Communist forces.

The request for a warship was made by the American Minister at Peiping. The department said the purpose of the vessel was "to be available for the protection of Americans in the event of an emergency."

Two warships, the Tulsa and the Sacramento, are within short steaming time from Foochow, the former at Swatow and the latter at Hong Kong

The three Americans reported in the danger zone were Father Paul Curran, Father Bernard C. Werner, and Father John H. I. Werner.

Conquers English Channel

Dover, England.—The English Channel was conquered for the first time this year when Miss Sunny Lowry, 22-year-old Manchester girl, arrived at South Foreland after swimming from Cape Gris Nez, France, in about 15¾ hours. She had made two attempts beore succeeding in becoming the 18th swimmer and the eighth woman to swim the treacherous strip of water.

Believe Driver Was Asleep

Conciliation Board

Will Hear Wage Disputes Of Railway Employees

Ottawa, Ont.—Hon. W. A. Gordon, Minister of Labor, announced he had appointed two boards of conciliation to hear wage disputes between the Canadian National and Canadian Pacific Railways and their employees.

The first board will inquire into a dispute between the Canadian Pacific Railway and its clerks, freight handlers and station employees, numbering about 3,000. George S. Currie, Montreal, and W. F. O'Connor, Toronto, will be two members of the board, representing the company and the men. They will select a third member who will be chairman.

The second board will investigate two wage disputes between the Canadian National Railways and its men. The first dispute involves 4,300 men, clerks, freight handlers, laborers and employees of the ferry service between Tomentine, N.B., and Borden, P.E.I., and wharf employees at Halifax. The second dispute involves 847 employees, clerks of the railway's headquarters at Montreal. Two members of the board will be F. C. Dobell, Montreal, representing the company, and Rev. Russell McGillivray, Ottawa, representing the men. They will choose a chairman.

Dawson Has No Unemployed

Recent Activity In New Gold Fields Has Absorbed Labor

Victoria, B.C.—Dawson, in the Yukon, is one city in Canada that can report an absence of unemployment, according to G. A. Yardley, customs inspector, who has returned from an annual inspection tour of the Yukon. All labor in Dawson has been absorbed by recent activity in new gold fields, Mr Yardley stated, and he predicted another boom in the Yukon country.

Freight imported into the country this year was 800 tons greater than 1932 figures, which in turn were 500 tons greater than those of 1931.

He predicted that output of gold from the Yukon this year would be between $350,000 and $400,000 greater than last year.

Raps National Recovery Act

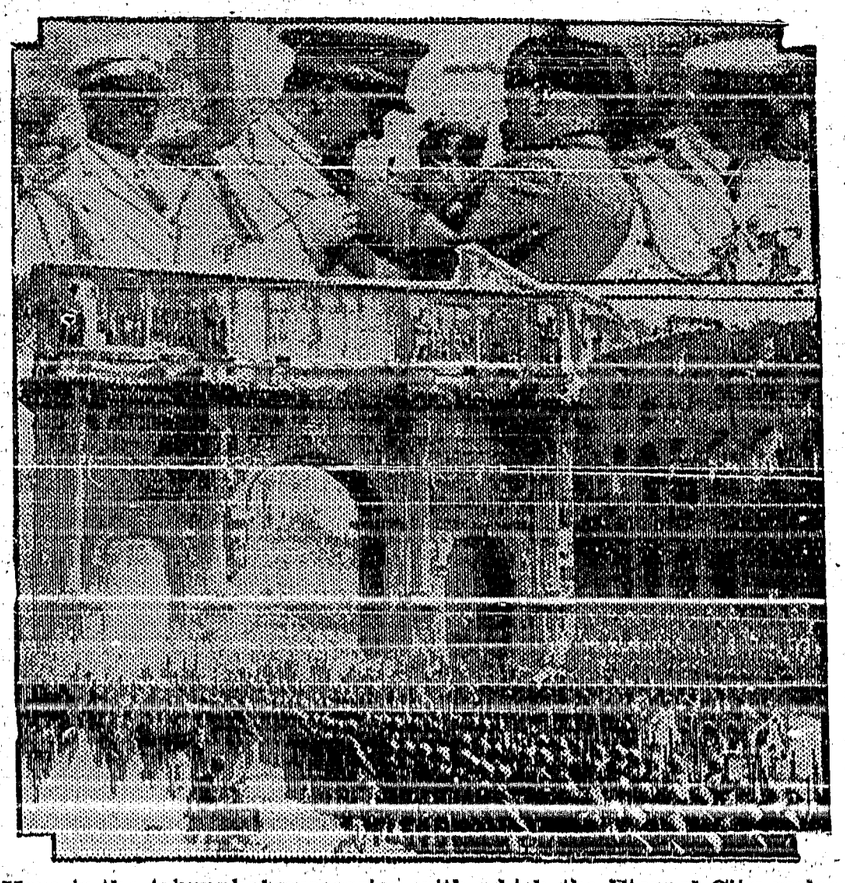
Nebraska Man Describes New Movement As "Pure Bunk"

Lincoln, Neb.—John H. Simpson, president of the National Farmers' Union, said he didn't blame individual farmers for taking all the government would give under the United States crop reduction plans, but added:

"It is against the laws of God and nature to plow up cotton, destroy things that could be used for food, and limit production."

The N.R.A., Simpson asserted, is "bunk, pure bunk to keep the suckers' minds off the real thing and is invented by Morgan and Mellon and others."

AS ROME WELCOMED BALBO



Here is the triumphal procession with which the Eternal City welcomed General Italo Balbo and his men on their return from the epic mass flight to Chicago and back. The parade is shown coming through the historic Constantine Arch on the way to Palatine Hill, where the fliers were received and decorated by Premier Mussolini. At top, Il Duce is shown decorating Balbo.

U. S. EMBARGO ON GOLD EXPORTS IS WITHDRAWN

Hyde Park, N.Y.—Acting with dramatic suddenness, President Roosevelt relaxed the United States gold embargo to permit sales of the newly-mined metal in foreign markets, where prices are higher.

At the same time the president tightened the prevailing restrictions against hoarding by requiring all persons holding gold coin, gold bullion or gold certificates in excess of $100 to file statements of their holdings within 15 days.

After 30 days all private gold holdings of more than $100 will be prohibited unless valid reasons are shown why the metal cannot be replaced by currency.

The decree would appear to nullify the recently authorized plan permitting American producers to export concentrates and amalgams to Canada or other countries for refining and export. Leading United States producing mines had applied to Canadian authorities for refining of their gold ore, but the order relieves United States producers of the necessity and expense of exporting for refining and round-about marketing.

Treasury officials interpreted his order as meaning that newly-mined gold could be sold in the world market at prevailing prices of around $30 an ounce as contrasted with the fixed price of $20.67 paid by the mint.

Gold mining shares immediately shot upward on the New York stock exchange, one issue advancing more than $15 to a record high.

Treasury department officials foresaw a quickening of activity in the gold mines of the west with profits increasing by more than $15,000,000 a year, as the president reopened the export trade to American miners. The presidential decree is effective immediately.

Junior Trade Commissioners

Two Western Candidates Qualify For Appointment

Ottawa, Ont.—Robert A. Cameron, Edmonton, and Christopher H. West, Cranbrook, B.C., were among the six high ranking candidates for posts as junior trade commissioners, the civil service commission announced. They probably will receive appointments shortly.

Passengers Got Thrill

Sky-Riders Stalled Between Towers For Over An Hour

Hanging 210 feet above the lagoon across which the ride takes passengers between 600-foot towers, the passengers remained calm and surveyed the fair grounds for more than an hour while workmen in tiny chairs that ran out on the cables fixed the wire.
