VOL. XXIV — CRESTON, B. C., FRIDAY, MARCH 2, 1934 — No. 49

Council Names Town Handyman

Canute Anderson Appointed at 35 Cents an Hour—Employed Part Time—Decide on Having Medical Health Officer.

The village council was in special session on Monday nigh', with the meeting largely taken up with sanitary matters and the reconstruction of the main highway along Canyon street. Tenders for the position of village handyman were opened and very fully considered and on motion of Comfort—Murrell the job will be offered to Canute Anderson at 35 cents per hour.

For the handyman job there were eleven applications, one of which was from Erickson, and was not considered. Two of the applicants asked a straight $70 per month. Another would take it at $38 and give 13 days service. Another would serve part time at $35 per month, and another at $50 a month, or $3 for each day employed.

Final choice sifted down to the $25 a month for part time and the Anderson bid, with the decision in favor of the latter, who will commence his work at March 1st. The appointment is not a permanent one, but will be made so for the present appointee if he can deliver the goods.

A petition signed by 25 residents on Fourth and Fifth streets asking for a hydrant well down either thoroughfare, as well as a better water supply was discussed with Col. M llandaine of the waterworks company who was resent. who went into the water supply matter very fully, as well as the hydrant asked for. In discussing hydrants it was disclosed that the one at the Speers' corner on Hillside Road as well as the one serving the school have been tampered with and had a fire broken out the hydrants would have been useless.

The sanitary situation was definitely concerned with two very serious infractions of the Health Act on the lower side of town, and a minor one in the lane back of Canyon street at the rear of the new hot dog stand. The latter has been looked into and can be remedied with a little pick and shover work, but the other two are critical.

Discussion at this time had to do with measures to handle present cases and prevent further infractions of the regulations, and the upshot of the matter was that on motion of Comfort-Murrell it was decided the latter should interview Dr. J. Olivier to have him take the appointment of village medical health officer and along with the water committee chairman get busy at once.

The letter from A. L. Palmer, public works roads supervisor in this district, was read. It pointed out that the department was prepared to put down a first-class highway along Canyon street. but before doing any work it must have a guarantee from the village that the water pipes along that thoroughfare on the east end, from Victoria Avenue have been made watertight. The water pipe situation was discussed at length with Col. Mallandaine and it was disposed of by his agreeing to put in a new main to supply Canyon street between Barton and Victoria Avenues. The new pipe will be laid under the sidewalk, or in the lane at the rear. Beyond Bartou Avenue the company has plans made to eliminate all leaks, and on Tuesday morning the chairman of the roads committee with Col. Mallandaine went over the ground and discussed the whole matter with Wm Ramsay district public works enginter. who was in town at the first of the week.

If the information unofficially given the council is correct the plan of the department is to put in a high class road the full width of the business section of the street. About a mile of this very fine road is to be put down and if the council will do its part the whole mile will be built to best serve the village.

The community meeting called by the Women's Institute on Monday night at the hall to discuss the 1934 fall fair, particularly in connection with placing more of the responsibility for the exhibition on a committee made up of men of the district. Mrs. Vic. Johnson, president of the institute, presided. Discussion revealed the fact that there was no local men's organization, so the fair would still have to be sponsored by the Institute who might get the help of capable men of the district. It was decided that the Institute fall fair committee or directors get together, and then approach some of the men soliciting their help. An extraordinary meeting is called for March 6th, when the matter will be put before the community.

Review, Cardinals Maintain Lead

First Clash in Two-Game Final Basketball League Series Give Commanding Lead — Windup Scheduled for Tuesday Next

The basketball league season is rapidly drawing to a close with the playoffs in both sections in the final stages. On Tuesday night the Review squad took on the High School Reps. in the first of the chaampionship games. The game was rough, and the combination play of both teams was poor. However, the Review had very little trouble downing their opponents by a 16-3 margin. Mrs. Martello was the pick of the winners, with Mrs. Levirs playing her usually effective game. Mrs. McKay was also at her best, intercepting many passes and breaki g up the High girls invasions. For the losers Molly Moore was the best, playing a fast game and keeping her opponents a safe distance from the baskets. Ruth Hare on the forward line made a good showing. The teams lined up:

Creston Review—Levirs, N. Payne, Martello, McKay, M. McDonald, Henderson, A. Lewis, 16.

High School—Abbott, Crane, Bourdon, D. Palmer, Moore, Hare, F. Lewis, 3.

In the men's game the Cardinals took the Imperial Groceteria to the cleaners to the tune of 37-7. The red sweaters had much the better team and their floor play was almost faultless. H. Corrie and Holmes both went on a scoring rampage. Between them they scored 22. D. Corrie and B. Crawford, on the defence, gave a fine exhibition of basketball. The grocery boys, although they played a hard game, were unable to get through the Cardinal's defence. Herb Couling, Farris and E Christie did the scoring for the losers. The teams:

Cardinals—H. Corrie, Holmes, Bourdon, Ross, D. Corrie, Crawford 37.

Groceteria—E. Christie, A. Couling, H. Couling, Kirk, Miller, Farris. 7.

These same teams meet on Tuesday night, 6th, for the final game of the league season.

Build New Cabins "Bide-a-Wee"

Popular Auto Camp Increases Accommodation—Will Provide Tennis Court—First Registration for 1934 on February 2nd

With tourist visitors starting to arrive as early as February 2nd work has commenced at Knotts' Bide-a-Wee auto park at Erickson for a busier season than 1933 at this well known stopping place during 1934. Improved accommodation for this year will include a community kitchen and tennis court, while two additional log cabins are being built to handle the expected increase in patronage.

Bide-a-Wee, which was opened in 1932 by Mr. and Mrs. Kennard Knott with a registration of some 150 cars, had grown in popularity in 1933 to record a registration of 250 cars, and a like gain in trade is looked for the present season.

The log cabins at the park made quite a hit with the travelling public. There are eight of them, six of which are the double variety. All are fully furnished, with linoleum on the floor, the furniture being of the rustic design. The cabins are placed amidst groups of trees to provide the utmost in privacy, and bedding, towels, etc., are available at moderate prices for those requiring service of this sort. Two shower baths are available, and there is a convenient water supply for all the cabins from the East Creston irrigation system.

Last year cars were registered from Quebec, Ontario, U.S. as well as all prairie provinces and B.C. Some of the registrations were of note and included Mr. and Mrs. Carl Schott of Berlin, Germany, and Jas. Slade and two companions who hail from Eastburne, England. The first to book in this year are Mr. and Mrs. Peach of Calgary.

The School Of Experience

People learn their most important and valuable lessons in the school of experience. It is a school that opens at birth and closes with death, and there are no vacation periods. We are passing through some experience at all times, and we are imbibing knowledge, learning something as a result. It may be that, like lessons learned in school and from books, we may forget some of the lessons of experience, for a time at any rate; even more frequently we may ignore and neglect the lessons which experience has taught us; nevertheless they have left their imprint upon our minds and have influenced our lives for weal or for woe.

It not infrequently happens that a short, sharp lesson is learned never to be forgotten from some one brief experience. Something enters our lives,—it may be a great sorrow or a great joy,—which then and there alters the whole course of our lives. On the other hand, it is often the case that in order that a lesson may be effectively learned, the experience which is teaching it may be greatly prolonged in order that it may be impressed upon us in the way that is necessary. And while individuals may learn a lesson from some experience very quickly, it is usually a much slower process for communities and nations to so learn and profit by experience.

Consider the present economic upheaval throughout the world, now continuing into its fifth or sixth year. Some people, no doubt, learned valuable lessons from it during the first twelve-month of its duration; others have learned as the months and years have gone by. Communities and nations have learned some lessons, and some have, of course, learned more and faster than others. All are still learning; learning perhaps a little more thoroughly now than they were two and three years ago. But it is quite evident that the nations have not yet grasped, or at any rate accepted, the great truths which the Great Depression has been teaching any more than they grasped, or accepted, the great truths which the Great War should have impressed upon all mankind.

Possibly it is because man has not yet learned the lessons, or at least accepted the teachings of the existing depressed economic state, that the depression is so greatly prolonged and still continues. There are certain lessons which the nations of mankind must learn, and not only learn but put their learning and knowledge into practical effect, before the depression will be overcome. The longer the depression continues the more forcibly it is teaching those lessons. They are lessons being learned through a bitter experience, but it is the stupidity and unwillingness of man to learn obvious lessons that is prolonging that bitter experience.

The four years of death, horror, suffering and destruction of the Great War, together with its aftermath of trouble and losses, of which the present chaotic economic and financial situation is a part, have not taught the nations the utter futility of war. Surely they appreciate the teachings of the Great War and its outcome, but they absolutely will not take the lesson to themselves, with the result that the world is trembling to-day on the very brink of another terrible war.

But while the nations may thus be much slower than individuals to learn lessons they should learn and profit by, people in all countries are learning and in time their thoughts and their influence will direct the nations. It is, of course, much more difficult to bring a whole group or nation to accept a great truth as the result of experience than it is to get a few individuals to accept it. Individuals are now in ever increasing numbers learning valuable lessons as a result of the experiences through which they are passing,—lessons which will not be easily forgotten but which will leave their impress on several generations to come. It will take time to translate their views into community and national life and action. That evolutionary process, nevertheless, is under way.

It is inevitable, too, that out of the experiences of a transition period such as the present, many ideas and theories will be advanced in all sincerity and seriousness as the solution of existing ills. It has always been so in all transition periods in the world's history, and it will probably continue to be so at all times of marked change. The mental processes of people are quickened by the experiences through which they are passing, but in numerous cases this merely results in the adoption of faddist or extreme ideas, and these, advanced as cure-alls for existing ills, are, generally speaking, mutually destructive the one of the other.

Clear thinking, therefore, is one of the most essential requirements in times like the present. Our experiences should teach us not to act hastily. They should recall to us that we made great mistakes in the mounting days of prosperity, and they should put us on guard against committing other and equally great mistakes under the influence of a great depression. It is never wise to reach definite and far-reaching decisions beyond recall when we are either on the mountain peaks or at the bottom of the deep valleys.

In a word, in the school of experience we should learn that it is most important, vitally so, that we order and control our thinking powers, and apply them to the practical problems at hand in full realization of the fact that, while there is no short cut to betterment and perfection, betterment can be obtained by practical, united effort, while what now may be regarded as ideal will, if and when realized, prove to be but a stepping stone to a still nobler ideal.

Millions Made By Forgery

But Science Has Done Much To Aid In Detection

Between the scientist and the forger a relentless battle of wits is being waged. And although the reformed crook likes telling the public that dishonesty does not pay, the forger is always one move ahead of the scientist. The Statistical Bureau of the League of Nations estimates that this lead costs society approximately twenty million dollars a year. That is the sum which forgers manage successfully to amass at the expense of the public and the State.

It is only of late years that science has been called upon to co-operate with the police in the detection of forgeries. This is specially true in England, for even to-day England has nothing to compare to the elaborately equipped laboratories which the French police have at their disposal in every important town.

Until quite recently it was still possible to get away with the easiest and clumsiest form of forgery, which consists in rubbing or scraping out a figure or a name, polishing the roughened surface, and writing in a higher figure or a different name. To-day chemists have discovered that by exposing the paper to iodine vapor, the condensed iodine permeates the damaged surface and forms a blot.

This simple but infallible test requires no special apparatus, and can easily be applied by anyone. In many foreign banks handling large numbers of "travellers' cheques," which are the forgers' happy hunting ground, cashiers are supplied with special iodine capsules which require only the heat of a match to give off sufficient vapour to test any cheque which they may have reason to suspect.

The activity of the forger is not confined to the "dud" cheque or banknote. The manufacture of spurious works of art and paintings was until recently, probably the most lucrative branch of crooked skilfulness. But it is in this field that science can be said at last to have won the upper hand. If art experts were to make full use of all the resources science has put at their disposal since the discovery of the X-ray, there need never be another faked painting on the market.

Vanishing Fortunes

American Millionaires Reduced To Five Thousand Since 1929

Large American fortunes are disintegrating, remarks Mr. Samuel Cowther in the Cosmopolitan Magazine. The five thousand millionaires who today survive the thirty thousand of 1929 still have a good chance to lose their fortunes before they die, says the writer, who observes that only one sizeable fortune, the Astor estate, is more than a hundred years old—the three really large ones, the Ford, Rockefeller and Mellon estates, being still in the first generation. To find any fortune going back more than three hundred years, he says, one must turn to the Orient. Few of the Indian potentates know how old their fortunes are; some go back more than a thousand years. They keep their wealth in gold, silver and precious jewels.—Toronto Globe.

Adoption of a modified system of codes similar to that used in the United States, mild inflation, raising of commodity prices, state control of business from a modifying and regulating point of view, and clear thinking as a means of returning Canada to an economic state of prosperity were advocated by Premier Brownlee in addressing a banquet of the Alberta provincial board of the Retail Merchants' Association.

Construction Program

Proposed Building Undertakings Will Stimulate Industry

Canada's recovery efforts are to be strengthened in the early spring by a moderate programme of building and construction—"moderate" compared with the gigantic United States plan "because we have not their resources"—Major L. L. Anthes, president of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association, said in addressing the Canadian Hardware convention and exposition delegates at Toronto.

Major Anthes said the proposed building programme throughout the country would stimulate industry. "It is obvious that such a programme will help your business and it will help ours," he said. "It will give work to many thousands and put money in circulation.

"We believe that our export trade will continue to increase in 1934. We have turned an adverse balance into a favorable balance of very large proportions. Canadian exporting firms are putting forth extraordinary efforts to maintain and extend the markets for their goods in other countries. If their hopes are realized they will bring much business and, consequently, much employment to Canada during this year."

Majority Would Not Work

New York city authorities the other day began an experiment to see just what percentage of street beggars are really "deserving cases." They arrested 63 panhandlers on the streets, investigated them, and offered jobs to those who wanted them. Seven of the 63 were delighted to get the jobs. The other 56 being men who preferred begging to working, immediately were sent to jail.

Those who think only of themselves have but little or nothing to think about.

GERMANY BACKS BRITISH PLAN FOR DISARMAMENT

Berlin.—Chancellor Adolf Hitler will join forces with Great Britain in a supreme effort to start a new movement for disarmament, it was reported here.

The chancellor, according to well-informed persons, approved a British memorandum "in principle," following a long and cordial conversation he had with Capt. Anthony Eden, British lord privy seal, at the British embassy.

It was understood Herr Hitler decided to bury whatever doubts he is reported to have had about certain features of the proposed British plan in order to strengthen Capt. Eden's hand in the latter's negotiations with Premier Mussolini in Italy shortly.

Persons close to the situation wondered whether Mussolini will join in a possible front with London and Berlin against Paris on the question of armaments.

Conversations between the chancellor and Capt. Eden will continue, and it is understood that they will touch on the British proposal of postponing any action on air forces for two years.

This angle may prove a stumbling block to the general negotiations between the British arms expert and Hitler.

Thirty-Hour Week Bill

Arbitrary Ruling Could Not Be Applied To U.S. Industry

Washington.—Hugh S. Johnson, who has asked a lot of questions of other persons during the last few months, answered a few himself, during the course of which he told a house of representatives committee that he thought an arbitrary 30-hour week could not be applied to industry in the United States.

He went to the labor committee early in its hearing and sat by while Gerard Swope, president of General Electric, voiced similar views against Chairman William Connery's 30-hour work week bill. Both he and Swope took the attitude that hour reduction should come through the more flexible operations of N.R.A. codes.

"I think something has got to be done very promptly to shorten hours and raise wages," Johnson said, however, "and it is my intention to do more."

He explained that further shortening of hours should be in proportion to the return of business, "not in one bite, but in two or three bites."

Countess Brassey

Passing Of Second Wife Of Earl Brassey In London

London.—The famous voyages on the yacht Sunbeam by the first Earl Brassey were recalled by the sudden death in London of Sybil, Countess Brassey, second wife of the earl who died in 1918. She was 75.

Lady Brassey, five years after her marriage, accompanied Lord Brassey on the Sunbeam to Australia in 1895 on his appointment as governor of Victoria, and they returned on the yacht in 1900. She was a stepmother of Lady Willingdon, wife of the former governor-general of Canada.

New Territorial Force For Erin

Dublin, Irish Free State.—The ministry of defence announced a new territorial force would be established and its members would wear uniforms similar to those of the famous "Irish brigade" which Roger Casement, later hanged for treason, attempted to form in Germany for the 1916 Irish rebellion.

Feed Shortage In Ontario

Toronto.—The Ontario department of agriculture report livestock in most counties of the province suffering as a result of a serious feed shortage. Feed grains are particularly short, although supplies of hay and other roughage are adequate in most sections.

Given New Constitution

Self-Government For Ceylon With Safeguards

London. — Constitutional government in Ceylon stood trial in the house of commons, emerging battered but still holding the field, after the whole question of British government in the colonial empire had been threshed out in debate.

A novel experiment in colonial autocracy, Ceylon was given a new constitution in July, 1931, getting self-government with safeguards—somewhat along the lines proposed for India. In the house, Sir Henry Page-Croft (Conservative), sharply attacked the scheme and demanded a parliamentary committee be appointed to inquire on the spot into its working.

Sir Henry's motion was finally talked out.

So far from the Ceylon constitution breaking down, it was working smoothly, satisfactorily and with goodwill, asserted Malcolm Macdonald as acting colonial secretary.

Sir Henry protested against what he called "surrenders." Since the war successive British governments had been too ready to abandon their own people overseas, he added. "Have we lost our backbone?" he demanded. "We are shedding territories without any mandate from their possessors."

Sir Nairne Sanderson, another diehard, said Ceylon was in the hands of politicians, and politicians were the curse of any country. The British policy of conciliation in Ceylon was merely taken for weakness, he said.

"What are we afraid of," Sir Nairne asked the house. "Are we afraid to rule as we used to? Are we going to be bullied by the first person who comes along? We can purchase peace far too dearly."

Nitrate Shipments

Opinion Expressed That Nitrates May Be Used In Making Munitions

Colon.—Chilean nitrate shipments to Europe so far this year were shown in official figures to be 700 per cent. greater than those during a like period in 1933.

Canal zone shippers remarked about the increase particularly in view of the troubled European situation, and the opinion was advanced that the nitrates may be used in making munitions, although Chilean officials declared the shipments were for agricultural purposes.

Only 2,238 tons of nitrate were shipped through the Panama Canal in January, 1933, to Europe, compared to 146,167 tons in January, 1934. Last February 33,259 tons were shipped.

Canadian Destroyers At Trinidad

Port Of Spain, Trinidad. — Four Canadian destroyers paid a surprise visit to Port of Spain and sailed after rushing a rating to hospital with a broken leg. He was C. Blakey of Esquimalt. It was understood Blakey, a 29-year-old petty officer, was injured boarding a Caracas-Laguayra train while on shore leave.

PRAISES NEWSPAPERS

In a recent speech at Ottawa, Dr. R. W. Boyle, head of the physics department, National Research Council, referred to a good newspaper as a "veritable university and a world-embracing education". He added: "Anyone who has observed the press over a period of years will have seen a growth in idlealism, accuracy, honour, truth and fairness."

Land Settlement Plan

Movement To Assist Settlers To Take Up Land In Saskatchewan

Regina.—The Saskatchewan government will shortly launch a large scale land settlement scheme, acting in co-operation with the railway companies and the cities.

Through arrangements with the railway companies, settlers are taking up raw land and will be allowed a four-year period free of the payment of principle or interest. Partially improved land will be subject to a two-year term clear of payment. Concessions have been granted on passenger rates by the railroads.

Unanimous endorsation was accorded to the plan by the mayors of Regina, Saskatoon, North Battleford, Moose Jaw, Swift Current, Prince Albert and Weyburn.

Regina has already taken steps to come into line with the proposal. Applications from relief recipients to come under the scheme are now being received by officials of the Regina relief board to be submitted to the government for approval when that stage of the plan is reached.

Socialist Paper Seized

Chancellor Dolfuss Organizing New Hope For Austrian Working Class

Vienna. — Chancellor Engelbert Dollfuss took his first step toward organizing a new life for the Austrian working class by placing the director of the official news agency in charge of the seized Socialist party publishing house.

Through the former official Socialist organ, the Arbeiter Seizung, remodeled in conformity with the spirit of the new times, the government will endeavor to make it clear to workers "the government's Christian conviction makes it as a matter of principle the friend and protector of the working class."

Discipline In Jails

Hon. O. L. McPherson Defends Administration Of Alberta Institution

Edmonton.—Defending the administration in provincial jails, Hon. O. L. McPherson, minister of public works, declared here in the Alberta legislature that there was a great need for strict discipline in the institutions.

His declaration came in answer to a series of articles, purportedly written by an ex-prisoner and appearing in an Edmonton newspaper.

"I do not uphold brutal treatment, nor is it sanctioned in these institutions, but there is the greatest necessity for the strictest form of discipline, otherwise there would be riots, outbreaks, bloodshed and death," asserted the minister.

Answering "black-hole" allegations, he said that between April 1, 1931, and March 1, 1933, only 91 out of 3,463 prisoners passing through Fort Saskatchewan jail, named in the articles, received punishment in the form of solitary confinement for an average of 2.1 days each.

Moccasin Telegraph

Demented Indian Tied To Stake To Protect Family

Winnipeg. — The "moccasin telegraph" is swift but not always accurate. The central figure in a distorted story of death by torture was revealed as a kindly Indian who insisted on being tied to a stake to avoid the risk of harming his family in sudden fits of insanity. "His torturers" were neighborly braves who slept by his side and brought him food and drink.

The story of Gasgana, the Chipewyan, was told by Sergeant Percy Rose of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police. Early in December he was sent into the Lac Du Brochet country of northern Saskatchewan to investigate vague rumors a demented Indian had been tied to his sled and left to die in a recrudescence of "weteego" or witchcraft death. That story had spread all through the north. The sergeant found the Indian died of natural causes.

B.C. Loggers Get Sympathy

Vancouver Mayor Approves Request For Permission To Hold Tag Day

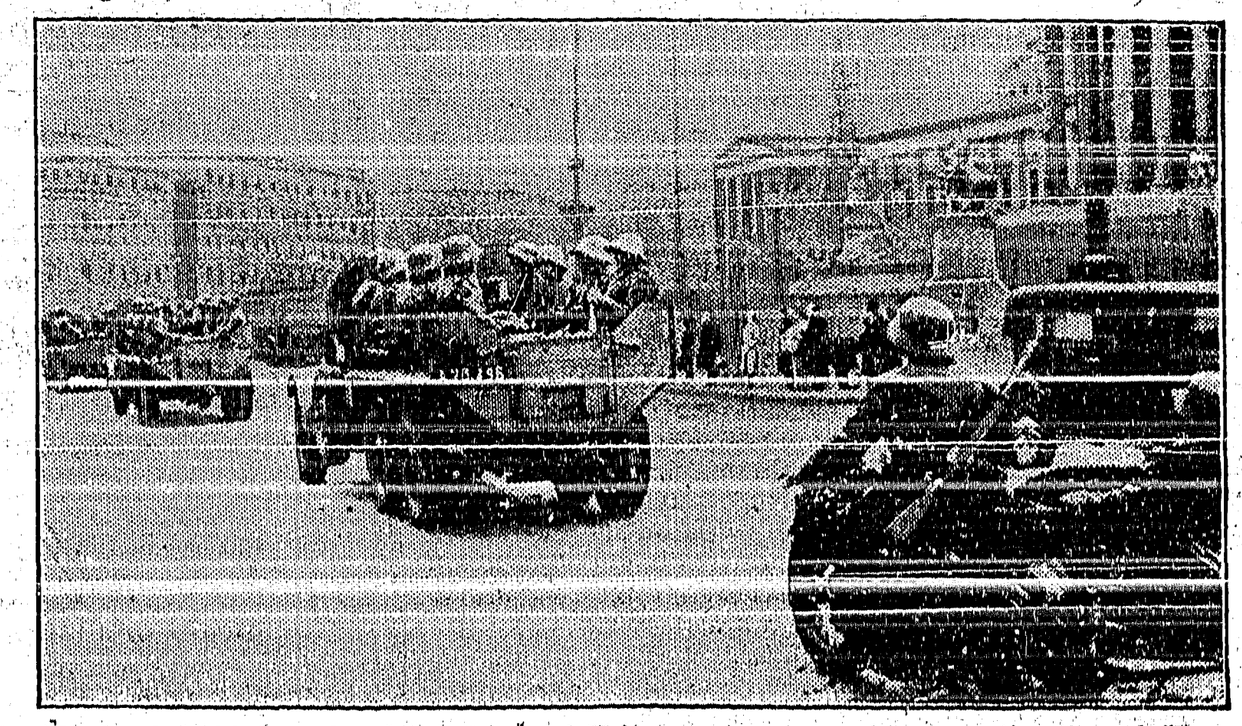
Vancouver.—"I'm with the strikers", declared Mayor L. D. Taylor in placing his approval on a request by striking British Columbia loggers for permission to hold a tag day in Vancouver.

"The industry has been taking advantage of an unemployment situation to have this work done cheaply," said his worship. "It is nothing more nor less than a racket and the sooner it is stopped the better."

Japanese Air Disaster

Tokyo.—Two naval planes crashed into a mountainside in a heavy fog near Heijo, killing five Japanese flyers, the newspaper Asahi reported here. This brought to 12 the number of fatalities in a recent series of army and navy air disasters.

HEIMWEHR TROOPS FOR VIENNA FIRING LINE



Truckloads of steel-helmeted and heavily-armed Heimwehr troops are shown speeding through Vienna on the way to battle against Socialists entrenched at strategic points in the city. Use of artillery became necessary later as troops found Socialists equipped with machine guns, grenades and rifles.

NEW CHAPTER IS OPENED IN THE STAVINSKY CASE

Paris.—The slaying of a prominent judge and a police announcement that Serge Stavisky may have been an international spy opened new chapters in the sensational $40,000,000 Stavisky pawnshop bond swindle.

The body of Judge Albert Prince, who had worked on several financial scandals and was to have been a witness in the Stavisky investigation, was found, mutilated, on a railroad track near Dijon. He was bound, and a bloody knife was found nearby.

Authorities revealed they were probing the possibility that "Handsome Alex" Stavisky acted as an international spy, selling secret information to Germany and using women agents.

Stavisky was the founder of the Bayonne municipal pawnshop whose recent collapse led to accusations of irregularities in connection with it among high-placed officials, to the downfall of two French cabinets, and riots that cost hundreds of casualties.

Stavisky, the friend of many authorities, was found dead when police closed in upon him in his Chamonix retreat.

Police declared that Judge Prince, of the court of appeals, had been trapped by a faked telephone call that his mother was ill in Dijon, that he left Paris in answer to the message, and that he had been slain en route under mysterious circumstances.

Drive Against Bootleggers

U.S. Government Brings New Weapon To Bear On Illicit Trading

Washington.—Urged on by President Roosevelt, the administration has undertaken an intensive drive against high liquor prices and bootleggers throughout the United States.

The government has brought a new weapon to bear on the bootlegger, one designed specifically to wreck his modernized system of pouring the illicit product into legal channels. Treasury officials said this was the new stamp tax, which became effective a fortnight ago.

Under this law, every liquor container must bear a stamp. Behind the stamp is an elaborate inspection system and the provision that if it is not used or is illegally used a long prison sentence awaits the offender.

A State Of Mind

Psychology Rather Than Revolution For World's Ills

Washington.—The opinion that "psychology rather than revolution is the best instrument of adjustment" to new conditions throughout the world was expressed by Robert Cromie, editor of the Vancouver Sun.

Addressing a luncheon in his honor at the National Press club, following a tour of Italy, Russia, Germany and China, Mr. Cromie also took occasion to "congratulate your leaders on what they are trying to do to speed up these adjustments."

Streamline Steam Locomotive

Ottawa.—A new model for a streamline steam locomotive has been made at the National Research laboratories. It has been so designed as to reduce the air resistance 35 per cent. and to lift the smoke from the stack clear of the cab. Particulars of the new locomotive were contained in report of the National Research council tabled in the house of commons.

Women's Franchise Defeated

Quebec.—Another six months' hoist to a measure proposing women be given the right to vote in provincial elections was given in the Quebec legislative assembly by a vote of 52 to 25.

She went visiting --but never left her house

"You must get lonely, shut up in this house all day," said Mrs. Murkroyd to Mrs. Redfern, one evening.

"One might think so," smiled Mrs. Redfern, "but I visited twenty people today, although I never left my home."

"I suppose you're joking," said Mrs. Murkroyd.

Mrs. Redfern laughed, and then pointed to her telephone.

"There's the explanation," she said. "I may be shut up in this house, but as long as I can visit folks by telephone there's not much chance for me to be lonely."

CRESTON, B.C., FRIDAY, MAR. 2

HOME BREW

Constituents in this district of W. K. Esling, member for Kootenay West, will read with satisfaction that he has so far recovered from a quite prolonged attack of pneumonia as to be able to leave the hospital early last week and return to his home in Rossland, where he is making a slow but sincerely hoped-for sure recovery to former health. Readers who may have matters they wish him to take up for them at Ottawa are advised that it will be some time yet before he will be able to take his seat in parliament, but in the meantime it is announced that he has been able to arrange with Senator R. F. Green, who was member for Kootenay West up till 1921, to look after matters at Ottawa for the convalescing representative, which will also be good news because as former representative Mr. Green showed considerable efficiency in handling all matters entrusted to him.

With March 2nd set as the date for returning ballots locally in connection with the Growers' Stabilization Committee plebiscite, and with action looked for in the Okanagan for an early-March return of the votes in that district, orchardists who are desirous of keeping closely in touch with the 1934 marketing situation may do so with confidence and at very little cost by subscribing for Country Life in British Columbia, published at Vernon, which may be described as the official organ of the movement. It is in charge of Chas. A. Hayden, who was with the Calgary Daily Herald when the Alberta wheat pool, was formed, and whose services to the prairie farmers at that time won him high praise. B.C. fruit growers are fortunate in having a man of his wide experience in charge of County Life at this particular time.

Standing committees for the 1934 session of the British Columbia legislature have just been announced, and locally there is very general satisfaction with the placing of Frank Putnam, local member, of the committee of agriculture as well as the municipal committee. While his special usefulness will be in having a hand in directly shaping w atever legislation may be introduced effecting the man on the land, he should also be of service to the village council if it has any betterments to put forward in connection with the Village Act, which certainly has some defects as applying to a growing municipality like Creston. Orchardists can take additional satisfaction in that E. D. Bar ow, former minister of agriculture, has been named chairman of the committee on agriculture. When it comes to marketing legislation, particularly, Barrow can be counted upon to go the limit in doing what he can to give producers the best of any legislation.

Standing committees for Creston board of trade have also been announced, and if the gentlemen who have been favored with committee positions take their work seriously 1934 ought to be a year of progressive action all along the line of this organization. If the council can be just a little bit enthused some headway should be made in the matter of improving sanitary conditions about town, including something definite as to the probable cost of a sewer system and the area it will directly serve. The new council has shown it is prepared to do some stepping out, as it were, by taking into serious consideration the matter of employing a town handyman, and with the backing of the board ought to go further than some of its predecessors in modernizing the village in several respects. The Review commends to the committee on industries the matter of a creamery for the valley. That is an industry that is almost within reach and every possible assistance should be given those who are pressing for its establish ment. If funds are forthcoming the publicity committee is prepared to function efficiently but funds it must have; the days of free advertising are gone forever.

After telling a trio of organizations that they were too late to book the evening of February 23rd, and just about as many that were out of luck insofar as March 16th is concerned, the Review is of the opinion that a conference of representatives of these lodges, societies, etc., should be held and some agreement arrived at as to dates and the class of entertainment to be offered the public on such occasions. Considering the amount of money that is available for such purpose it seems to us the supply of public entertainment is somewhat in excess of the demand, and if some sort of stabilization arrangement could be entered into there would still be ample pleasure for all concerned and more profit to the promoters. If such get-together ever eventuates the accredited representatives might discuss admission charges to at least bridge drives, and dances with and without supper. Notwithstanding the depression 50 cents is still a bargain for a whist drive with lunch included, particularly wher the proceeds are going to some community cause.

Premier Pattullo's anouncement last week that he intends forthwith to restore the former Columbia (Golden) constituency and presumably have it elect a a representative for the 1935 sitting of the legislature, seems just a little premature. In the redistribution effective last year Columber was in part merged with Revelstoke, and the south end with Cranbrook, and certainly is no worse off than Creston riding which was in its entirety tacked onto Nelson. Under existing conditions the Review is of the opinion no harm would have come if still more doubling up had taken place, and to revert back to the ord order of things, for Columbia's exclusive benefit, before even one year has elapsed, is not in line with the efficiency the premier has shown in ot er directions since assuming power in November.

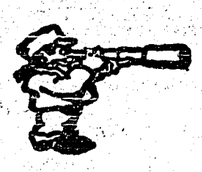
SETTING EGGS—For sale purebred White Leghorn setting eggs. Now is the time to place your order. V. Mawson, Creston.



See the Point?

Many business men, when considering the cost of any particular job of printing, look only at the small sum they may be able to save at the time on any order.

They fail to ask themselves what the order taker leaves with them throughout the year in way of bnsiness as compared with the local publisher and members of his staff.

He also seems to forget that if he and his fellow business men would get more of their printing requirements done in their home town the publisher might be able to employ additional help, which would still further swell the amount of money to be spent in the home town.

Always remember! A dollar spent with a firm in a distant town is gone forever so far as its service to the community is concerned. A dollar spent with firms in the home town stays there and performs many good services in its own community. Get your printing requirements from

Stevens, minister of trade and commerce, has recently been placed at the head of a committee to recommend measures to better safeguard the inter ests of the retailers against the unfair buying systems of chain and department stores. After discussing Mr. Stevens' Speech and going into the whole matter, a number of resolutions were passed and will be forwarded the proper authorities. The gathering was presided over by A. Corrie, with M. R. Joyce acting as secretary.

Hatchery in Operation

Operations at the new Farmers's Institute hatchery commenced on Thursday, when Manager W. S. McAlpine turned on the blaze for the first thousand eggs. There is a brisk demand for chicks locally, and the orders booked for March and April delivery indicate that a great many are planning to take advantage of the early fall egg market. Just over 1000 eggs have also been booked for customs hatching. Those who will want chicks are asked to order early so that the quantity desired can be reserved before the Institute takes up outside business. Special instructions have been issued in regard to the care of hatching eggs. The collections will be made by the egg circle truck on Tuesdays and Wednesdays each week. At the grading station the eggs receive a thorough inspection over the light and are then sent to the hatchery A very busy season is expected.

"Nations made treeless by the hand of man are dying nations which once were great and which no longer count, and are those the forests of which have been ruthlessly exterminated.

"No matter what political cataclysm has overtaken and submerged peoples whose governments foster and care for forests, their potency remains, their vigor still endures, their racial resurrection is certain.

"Take a map of the world and look upon the peoples who gradually are perishing. Those doomed lands are treeless. They are nations which, once mighty, have become negligible.

"Once there were trees in Spain. Once China grew vast forests. So sceptors pass.

"Our food and raiment begin in the living leaf. The leaf enables us to drink. There would be little sweet water in the world—little rain—except for the sheltering leaves of trees.

"Hatred for the forest was an evil heritage for us. Heed lest it be our national undoing. Where forests die, waters die. Where waters die, the fruits of the earth perish.

"And out of those mutilated and abominable wastes where ax or fire or both has passed, unguided by knowledge or common sense, are born tornadoes that devastate and kill; floods that destroy fertility, harrow the shrinking earth to the rocky ribs, and turn arable land to desert.

"Springs, once protected by the spongy mesh of roots and mosses, dry up; rivulets disappear, brooks dwindle, rivers shrink into worn and narrow channels bordered by burning boulders bare as bleached bones.

"Rains bring rushes of flood water only — terrifying inundations that come in the twinkling of an eye, thunder by in devastating fury and are gone, leaving behind dead springs, dying and the ghastly bones of withered rivers.

"The forest hatred inherited from our pioneers has degenrated into the stupidity of apathy. And with it the land is degenerating too.

"Next decade or so there will be no more lumber to sell."

That's the story. It is the story of a singular creature known as the Great American Ass.

"Three hundred years ago the forests and the fertility of America were supposed to be inexhaustible.

"To-day vast tracts of once fertile soil are exhausted and can be bought for almost nothing. And three-fifths of the original timber of the United States has disappeared.

"When the forests go, the waters go, the fish and the game go, crops go, herds and flocks go, fertility departs. Then the age old phantoms appear, stealthily one after another—Flood, Drougth, Fire, Famine, Pestilence.

"The picture painted here isn't a pretty one. Nor have the colors been lurid or too thickly laid on. Alas, they have even been toned down.

"All lumbering should be under governmental control. The most drastic regulations should govern every operation which entails the felling of trees for whatever purpose.

"Always lumber will be in demand. Always there will be need of home consumption also.

"Would it be a hardship if a State law made it obligatory that a certain percentage of every farm should be planted and maintained in trees?

"This country's well being, prosperity—yes, it's very survival lies in the swift resurrection of its forests.

"Somehow this work will have to be done, and done very soon."—Robert W. Chambers in McCall's Magazine.

The Moon Man

Used Position Of The Planets To Predict Grain Prices

Virgil Moore, 69, a grain market "moon man" who was once an Alaskan adventurer, died recently in a Kansas City hospital of pneumonia. He used the position of the moon and the planets as a part-basis for long distance price predictions.

He would go home after a day at the market, dig out a chart he had made months before, compare it with the price quotations for that day, his wife said, and remark: "Allie there you are. I didn't miss it an eighth of a cent."

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

MARCH 4

JESUS' TESTIMONY CONCERNING HIMSELF

Golden Text: "Come unto me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest." Matthew 11:28.

Lesson: Matthew 11:1—12:50.

Devotional Reading: Revelation 1:12-18.

Explanations And Comments

The Testimony of Jesus' Works, 1:2-6. John the Baptist was imprisoned by Herod (Mt. 14:3-5), and his disciples came and told him what Jesus was doing. When John was free he had been the first to recognize in Jesus the Messiah, the Coming One, but in his imprisonment he grew doubtful, for to that caged eagle Jesus seemed too gentle and mild in his dealings with men. Moreover in his depressed state of mind, he may have thought that Jesus was indifferent as to what might befall his herald. Evidently he began to fear that he had misled the multitude when he pointed Jesus out to them as the Lamb of God that should take away the sins of the world. "It is a terrible moment when one who has poured out his strength in any cause is not quite sure that his sacrifice was warranted." (George Clark Peck).

John sent his disciples to Jesus with the question, "Art thou he that cometh or look we for another?" If thou art he that cometh, where is your ax? John seems to mean, for he had told the people (Mt. 3:10) that "Even now the ax lieth at the root of the trees. He that cometh after me, whose fan is in his hand, will thoroughly cleanse his threshing-floor; and he will gather his wheat into the garner, but the chaff he will burn up with unquenchable fire."

John's disciples found Jesus busy with the very work that had disappointed John. The sick were coming to Jesus and he encouraged their coming, to the poor he proclaimed the gospel but uttered no word about the fire or the ax. Jesus stopped his work long enough to answer John's messengers, bidding them return to John and tell him what they saw and heard; his deeds of mercy to blind, the lame, and deaf, to lepers and the dead and the poor—all a fulfilment of the prophecy as to the Messiah in Isaiah 35:5., 6; 61:1. "'Tell your story over again and remind him of those prophetic texts. Let him study the two types and draw his own conclusion.' It was a virtual invitation to John to revise his Messianic idea, in the hope he would discern that, after all, love was the chief Messianic charism." (A. B. Bruce).

Empire Settlement

Establishment Of Separate Village Communities In Dominions

Empire settlement by establishment of new separate village communities in the Dominions is the basis of a scheme contained in a report issued in London by the Empire development and research committee headed by Sir Henry Page Croft. The committee has been examining the question unofficially.

The plan contained in the report would create entirely new bodies of settlers in the Dominions in districts remote from settled areas. Railways would be built to reach the new settlements.

Marvels of the Human Eye

By F. M. CROWE, Optometrist-Optician, Calgary

NO. 11—THE EYE IN ITS RELATION TO HEALTH

The eyes are large factors in our health and efficiency. Since Nature allots to each organ its proper share of our total nerve energy, it follows that if defective eyes use too much, other organs suffer a shortage, leaving them too weak to carry on their functions properly. Hence we often suffer ills in other organs, while the primary cause is to be found in the eyes.

The eye is the most wonderful of the five special senses, extremely sensitive and delicate and very easily thrown out of adjustment by overwork or abuse. A tired body or limb is given rest but the eye which has shared the general fatigue of the body is often required to go on working long after the work of the day is abandoned. Do not imagine that close work, like reading, is the only time when the eyes work. Quite true, close work requires the use of extra nerve energy but the eyes are working and using nerve power every moment they are open.

The possibility of conserving human energy by correcting eye defects is greater than by any other means. These defects are usually due to the eyeball being imperfectly shaped and the muscles are involuntarily constantly trying to overcome these defects in the interests of better vision. The resulting strain can only be relieved by wearing correcting lenses.

It is not good for even normal eyes to concentrate too long on reading or sewing. Make it a habit to "look off" periodically for a few seconds and thus allow the muscles to relax and restore their nerve force. Avoid shadows and glassy paper as much as possible. Do not permit the light to shine into the eyes but rather on the book. Reading lying down is injurious. Hold the head erect with your work fourteen or sixteen inches from the eyes. It is harmful to continue at close work if the eyes smart, water, ache or blur, as these are some of nature's warnings that there is trouble ahead. Have your eyes examined by an expert and know their condition.

Little Journeys In Science

THE SCIENTIFIC SPIRIT

(By Gordon H. Guest, M.A.)

How a backwoods doctor over a hundred years ago made discoveries which are accepted today as fundamental in the study of the human stomach, is an interesting page in the history of medical science. Dr. William Beaumont, self-taught from books available in small villages, proved that the true scientific spirit is as likely to flourish in the wilderness as in the university. When the war of 1812 broke out he joined the American army as a surgeon, and was stationed on the island of Mackinac at the head of Lake Michigan.

It was there that an extraordinary accident started him on his scientific career. Alexis St. Martin, a Canadian coureur du bois, came to the post with a frightful gunshot wound in his abdomen. The wounded man recovered under the doctor's care, but there remained an opening in his left side which resembled a window, and through which food could be observed in its course through his stomach. Dr. Beaumont at once seized this opportunity to study food after it had been chewed and swallowed.

He hired St. Martin to submit to observation, and took the poor fellow with him from one army post to another, forever peering into the "window", and making the most ingenious experiments with every kind of food available. Dr. Beaumont possessed that tremendous desire to know about things, out of which true greatness in science springs. Year after year he observed this unusual case, and at the end of ten years, he wrote a book entitled: "Experiments and Observations on the Gastric Juices and the Physiology of Digestion."

This book made Dr. Beaumont's name famous in the world of medicine, and his unusual patient immortal. To-day text-books on physiology quote the original statements of this backwoods doctor, and many of his observations are held as the best which have yet been made on the human stomach.

Audience Was Satisfied

Did Not Know Caruso Used Record Instead Of Singing

A recent writer says his funniest expereince at a banquet was when Caruso was called on to sing at one. "Caruso declined," he said, "but the people were insistent, and Caruso agreed to sing. He went behind a screen and played one of his gramophone records. The audience was spell-bound. Caruso was enjoying a quiet chat with a friend, and at the end of the song he stepped in front of the screen and, with a bow, acknowledged the storm of applause. He explained that his voice was not in good fettle that evening. The audience never knew the trick he had played."

SYNOPSIS

Camilla Hoyt and Peter Anson, young and in love, marry secretly, deciding to live their own lives apart until Peter is able to provide for her. Peter is a young, struggling sculptor trying to win a competition for a scholarship abroad and Camilla is the adopted daughter of a wealthy family. She is not to inherit money when she coves of age and so is studying commercial art in the hope of landing an agency job. Others in the story are Avis Werth, another wealthy girl who is trying to win Peter, Sylvia Todd, Peter's model, and Gus Matson, his former roommate with whom he has quarrelled. At a party at an exclusive club Peter entertains Camilla's guests with impersonations. When the rest of the members of the party go to a cabaret to continue the gaiety, Peter and Camilla slip off to the beach by themselves and fall asleep on the sand. When they awake it is early morning and Avis and another boy are standing near them. This makes it necessary for Camilla to announce before the party that she and Peter are married. Avis is stunned and Camilla's mother likewise. Camilla decides that she must leave the home of her adopted parents immediately and go to live with Rose, her sister, who is a file clerk in a business house. They decide to take an apartment. Bowman and Weeks, an advertsing agency, where Camilla has submitted some of her work, send for her and tell her they have a new account which requires unusual treatment of juvenile art. To Camilla's surprise she learns that the account is that of her foster father's company, which has decided on an extensive campaign to bolster up lagging business. After a conference with Mr Bowman, Camilla decides to attempt the work. With ideas running riot in her head she goes home and spends the night sketching. In the morning, armed with her samples she sets out for the agency. The critics were enthusiastic about her work, and Mr. Weeks offers her a salary of $50.00 a week to start and a prospect of having it doubled. She goes to keep a dinner engagement with Peter.

(Now Go On With The Story)

CHAPTER XXXII.

Peter detected her electrified manner the moment he saw her, and thought he never had seen Camilla so lovely. He took both her hands in his, gently, and poured his love and adoration into her eyes with his gaze. "Camilla, I can't endure this—sweet agony of living without you any longer."

"Even the agony is sweet?" she asked.

"Yes, because I live every hour in the anticipation of seeing you again."

She smiled into his eyes, happily. "Then our plan is a huge success. That is just the way I wanted it to be. Don't you see, dear, if I were with you always, there would be no sweet agony of anticipation? And that would be tragic—very tragic for us. Half of the joy of life is anticipation."

He sighed with resignation. "Why do I argue with you about coming to me when I know I can't take care of you?"

"We're not going to argue about it, Peter. That's all settled. Besides, tonight is a very special celebration. I can't wait another minute to tell you my secret, so let's go in and sit down where we can talk. Do you suppose we can get the same table we had on our wedding night? This occasion is almost as important."

"It must be important, if it makes you so beautiful." His eyes did not leave her face, as he tucked her hand into his arm and they entered through the gracious doorway of Charm Cottage again.

Camilla glanced up from the menu delightedly. "Here is the same special menu we had for our wedding dinner, Peter."

"Then that's what we're having. Okay?"

"It couldn't be better."

"Two special dinners," he said to the hovering waitress. "Now tell me," he folded his arms on the table and faced Camilla eagerly. "You have a position?"

"Oh, yes, but that isn't the best part of it," she exclaimed. "Let me begin at the very first and tell you everything!"

He laughed agreement. "Suspenses, thrills and all. It promises to be dramatic."

It was, he had to admit when she had finished. His heart swelled with pride for her success and ached a little with regret—not because he envied her, but because she was so exquisite and precious that he wanted to claim his right to take care of her and spare her all the sordid demands and sacrifices which even so promising a future involved.

He knew that this sudden achievement flooded the whole world with a golden light for her, like the varicolored spotlights on the stage enhance soiled costumes, worn property and faulty makeup.

She had yet to learn that for every victory there is some defeat, for every joy some disappointment and heartaches, for every task achieved endless hours of toil and anxiety. He knew that Camilla would meet these challenges gallantly, of course. But he wished that he might spare her any of the disillusion and could sort out for her only the sparkling gems of genuine worth, sparing her the bitter disappointment of synthetic substitutes which prevailed their majority in everything that belonged to life.

Camilla deserved to be treasured like a precious jewel, herself, yet she belonged to him and he could not lift a finger to protect her from the slightest need or anxiety. Rather, he had added to these. A fierce determination burned within him while he watched her happy face. He would give his soul to keep her happy like that, always, he thought.

Mrs. Hoyt accepted the news of Camilla's position and her departure from her home with resigned cheerfulness. She had not gained her objective, but to her way of thinking, Camilla would live to see the day when she would regret her rash determination to be independent and master of her own destiny.

In Mrs. Hoyt's past experience, youth profited by the wisdom of its elders or reaped the consequences of its folly. But hers was a mind that dwelt in the past in ancestors, social registers, inherited fortunes and blue-nosed conventions.

Her mind obstinately denied what her eyes beheld: proud names made ignominious and supplanted by plebian worth, the rapid rise of a social order which recognized ability above class, established fortunes tottering by the hour while new ones of magic-beanstalk growth replaced them, life that loved and laughed and snapped its fingers at smug convention.

She had been trying to fit a product of this modern age into the pattern of two generations before. No wonder she had failed to accomplish her purpose. Strange, that she had selected this child of foreign parentage to replace those denied her. Just another inconsistency of human emotions, that the beautiful little child had appealed so strongly to her motherless heart.

"I hope you won't think I am ungrateful if I leave you before the end of the summer?" Camilla inquired anxiously, after she had listened with calm patience to her foster mother's surprised comments upon her new position.

"But I don't see why you should. If you have to work in an office all day, it would be much easier for you to stay here until you are adjusted. For that matter, you need not leave here at all this year. We'd really like to have you with us, even if you are working for yourself." Her compromise was offered with more wistfulness than she would have admitted to herself.

"That's very kind of you, but I prefer to do all the adjusting now and have it over with. I really could not feel as if I were independent so long as I lived here with you, in such circumstances as my salary could not afford. Besides, Rose needs me for awhile. I believe we can do a lot for each other while I am waiting for Peter to become established."

Mrs. Hoyt sighed heavily. "I'm afraid, Camilla, that never will be. A man has to have more than ambition to succeed, and Peter's opportunities are so limited. I don't know why—"

"Please, let's not go over all that again," Camilla entreated. "I know why I married Peter, and I'd marry him again, even if I thought he had no chance. But he has. He does have more than ambition. He has talent, which will win out sooner or later."

Mrs. Hoyt's grieved eyes still accused her gravely while she resumed her tolerant acceptance of the situation. "Just where do you propose to live, Camilla. I hope you will consider that you have been a Hoyt for most of your life." Already, she was reaching out tentacles into Camilla's future life, in an attempt to order it according to her desires, as she had done in the past.

"I can't very well consider anything except the total of mine and Rose's salaries," she protested. "After all—I'm sorry—but it was you who changed my position from that of a Hoyt, even before I became Camilla Anson. That is what I shall have to be—a working girl and the wife of a genius. I'll look for an apartment as near town as rents will permit, so that we can save time for housekeeping. Somewhere in the sixties or seventies, probably."

"But that's an impossible location," objected the horrified Mrs. Hoyt.

"How, impossible?"

"Why—so very common and unattractive. How could you endure living in such surroundings?"

"I don't expect to gratify my beauty-loving eyes for awhile. If we have a clean room in an agreeable atmosphere, it will do until we can afford better. That may be even sooner than we hope," she added optimistically, pulling a wide-brimmed panama hat over her soft black curls and tucking in the curious locks that persisted in peeping curiously into her face and shining eyes. "But I must hurry along and find just such a place to-day, so we can get settled tomorrow, rest Sunday and be ready to work on Monday. I'll see you at dinner."
