THE CRESTON REVIEW

Vol. XIX. CRESTON, B. C., FRIDAY, OCTOBER 21, 1927 No. 35

Highways Feature Board's Session

Transportation matters were again to the fore at the October meeting of Creston Board of trade on Tuesday night, which was in charge of President Mallandaine, and a fair turnout of members.

In connection with the highways the most important announcement was contained in a reply the secretary has just received from the deputy minister of public works, acknowledging receipt of the board's September resolution asking that next year's estimate contain a sum to take care of building the North and South Highway from Creston via the K.V. roadbed to Porthill, Idaho. Deputy minister Patrick Philip says "You may rest assured that this matter will be given the fullest consideration, and in the meantime I am forwarding a copy of your letter to the district engineer for investigation and report."

The executive reports that since the September meeting a resolution from Cranbrook Board of Trade asking that the 1928 programme of road improvements include a generous widening out of the narrow spots in she highway between Moyie and Kuskanook, had been approved and acknowledgement received from the minister of special consideration.

Under the head of committee reports C. O. Rodgers for the transportation committee reported that highway improvements in the Creston area this season, particularly in the matter of gravelling, had been well looked after. The president reported for the executive as to the action taken in connection with a Creston display at the Royal Winter Fair at Toronto next month. After taking into account the very limited display of boxed fruit at Creston fair, and in discussing the packing of a 50-box display with local orchardists, the board directors had decided it was financially impossible to assemble a creditable half hundred box exhibit for Toronto, and that the Toronto display had been cancelled. The board ratified the executive action.

Our former townsman, A. R. Swanson, has just been named one of a committee of three from Kimberley board of trade to work with a committee of two named by the town band, to devise ways and means of keeping the band together. Jealousy amongst the musicians seems to be the chief cause of friction.

Due the prospective hay shortage there is a larger than usual shipment of cattle from Creston this fall. Ike Lewis of Sirdar loaded out two carloads of beef cattle for Cranbrook at the local stockyards on Friday.

Rodgers' Sawmill Cutting Dec. 1st

A substantial and permanent addition to Creston's payroll before the year is out is in sight in the erection of a new sawmill by C. O. Rodgers on a site alongside the box factory, on which work is now well under way, and all plans laid to have the sawmill in operation about December 1st, giving employment to about 25 men in mill and yard.

The framework of the mill, which is about 25 x 90 feet, is now completed, and the machinery is being installed. Excavation is also under way on the millpond, which is to be concrected and will be 40 x 80 feet, and eight feet deep, holding just enough logs for one day's cut by the mill, which is to be a single band and to average not less than 25,000 feet a day. Power will be supplied from a boiler of 120 h p. capacity. The mill will have steam nigger and loader and the pond will be steam heated in order to get the frost out of the logs before puttiug them on the carriage

Along with the manufacture of lumber Mr. Rodgers intends to also operate a lath mill, and will also saw up the edgings and other waste material into the popular lengths of firewood.

On the siding he put in about three years ago for the box factory he will have ample room to take care of at least six carloads of logs into the pond, and to facilitate operations the C.P.R. is turning over to him a dozen flat cars which will be for the exclusive haul of logs to the Rodgers mill, and will be permanently rigged up for this work.

For the present logs will come in from a limit at Goatfell, which has been acquired and is estimated to have nine million feet of standing timber on it. Frank Tompkins has a crew of about 25 men employed. The Goatfell timber runs heavy to Spruce and white pine and it is figured will keep the mill running for possibly three seasons. In addition to this a stand of about a million feet of pine has been secured at Washout Creek, where a siding is to be put in and a crew of about a dozen men will be put to work almost immediately.

While a considerable part of the annual cut of the new mill will be required for the make of fruit crates and boxes at the Rodgers factory, it is not intended to confine the mill's operations to fit in with the box factory work. Mr. Rodgers states that so long as the market is good he intends to operate the sawmill to take care of a good trade he has maintained for lumber, and if the demand is steady the mill will run twelve months in the year.

Automobile Accidents

During the Great War the statement was frequently made that human life appeared to be the cheapest of all commodities. Judging by reports appearing in the press daily of the continuing and steadily mounting toll of lives lost as the result of automobile accidents the old war-time statement would almost appear to be true today.

Deaths from automobile accidents as reported in vital statistics and by insurance companies now measure up in their totals to the figures credited to many of our more serious diseases. To these fatalities must be added the very large number of persons crippled and maimed for life as result of such accidents. The record is not one that reflects much credit upon our vaunted twentieth century civilization.

Responsibility for only a very few of these fatal accidents can be laid at the door of defective construction of automobiles. Car construction has reached a high state of efficiency and great care is exercised by all manufacturers in the quality of materials used and in the excellence of workmanship in construction.

The vast majority of all automobile accidents are the direct result of foolhardy recklessness on the part of drivers of cars, or open disregard by them of the rights of other drivers and lack of respect for the laws and rules of the road.

Many drivers either fail to realize, or deliberately ignore the fact, that an automobile is a high powered machine, capable, because of its power and speed, of doing incalculable damage. The greater the power and speed of the car, the greater the danger, and the greater the need for the exercise of commonsense and caution. Too many drivers, however, because their car is capable of 50, 60, 70 or more miles per hour, feel impelled to drive it at that rate, quite ignoring the fact that a speed of which the car may be capable, and which may be comparatively safe on a clear, well-paved highway, is highly dangerous driving on the average earth road of Western Canada.

Then there is the road fool who because his car has the power, is afflicted with the insane mania of always striving to pass every other car and who seems to labor under the delusion that it is an insult to allow any car to pass him.

Again, there is the type, and a numerous type it is, which refuses to observe the automobile laws and rules of the road, takes the right-of-way from others entitled to it, and selfishly dashes along regardless of everybody else, and without giving the slightest consideration to the fact that, while he may get safely through, he may bring disaster upon less experienced or more nervously inclined drivers. Many, probably most, drivers give way and relinquish their rights to these roadhogs rather than invite an accident. Bot the roadhog can never be sure of this and an accident is the result.

Finally, there is the driver who rather than slow down and possibly wait a few seconds in safety at a railway crossing, or a dangerous curve in the road, speeds ahead. Many have saved a second or two only to be maimed for life or meet their death.

Legislators, road builders, car manufacturers, all are striving to devise ways and means of diminishing causes of accident. Roads are being built wider, with easier curves, less pitch to them, less pronounced ditches at the side, with guard rails at danger spots, warning signs, and a multitude of other devices. Legislators and others are seeking to evolve practical headlight and other traffic regulations. Manufacturers are exercising their ingenuity in the improvement of brakes and safety appliances. Still the death toll mounts higher and higher.

Why? There is only one answer. Because of a desire to boast of the performance of their car to achieve a momentary thrill, to travel at a totally unnecessary speed, in a word, to outdo somebody as foolish and reckless as themselves, people will hazard life and limb, not only their own but everybody's. Law officers are doing their best to protect a long suffering public, but they can only punish the offender; they cannot prevent the accident. Only an aroused public opinion, and a wider acceptance by all of the duties of responsible citizenship can remedy the evil and the loss to which attention is drawn.

Too many people know a lot of things that are none of their business.

People who borrow trouble are always anxious to turn it over to others.

When a man gets a chance to dispose of his troubles he always heaps up the measure.

It's difficult for a man to collect himself when his wits are scattered.

Planning Safety Airplane

New Idea Of North Carolina Man May Eliminate Hazards

Proposing the development of a monoplane with wings and fuselage carrying sufficient helium to make the craft lighter than air, Edward Simmington, a cigar maker, believes he may make flying as safe as motoring by eliminating nose dives, tail spins and other aviation hazards.

Simmington has designed a model of an all-metal plane with a wing spread of 80 feet and a length of 100 feet. The wings are rounded and 15 feet in width.

Motors and passenger cabin are slung below the fuselage, a feature which the inventor believes will give the craft an equilibrium by which it will right itself when swerved from its balance.

BENNETT CHOSEN NEW LEADER OF CONSERVATIVES

Hon. R. B. Bennett, K.C., Calgary, is the new leader of the Conservative Party in Canada.

On the second ballot, the national convention of the party accorded him two more votes than the necessary one-half of all votes cast.

Mr. Bennett, speaking with much emotion, acknowledged the election of his leadership.

"It was difficult, Mr. Bennett said, for him to find words with which to express his sentiments.

"I thank you for your more than generous support, which wwas wholly unmerited," he said.

Mr. Bennett recalled that men occasionally attended some great religious edifice for the purpose of renouncing many things and in order to be consecrated to a life of service. The feeling might be different about a meeting of this nature but Mr. Bennett felt that the delegates had endeavored to set him aside for a life of service to Canada.

Mr. Bennett declared he could think of no more appropriate reply than to quote from the Scripture: "Whosoever among you will be chiefest among you shall be servant of all."

"You have made me your leader for the time and please God that I may be your faithful servant," Mr. Bennett added, while cheers drowned the last of his remarks. He pleaded for the whole-hearted co-operation of the rank and file in discharging their duties and responsibilities as citizens of a great Dominion.

"If each of you must see to it that an educated democracy governs the destinies of Canada, if you have all become firm believers in Conservative policies, the party will act as an instrument for good in the development of our country and in the advancement of our national life."

Mr. Bennett stated that his election to the leadership involved his renunciation of many things he had held most dear in the past.

"These thing I must now put behind me, for no man may serve two masters," Mr. Bennett said. "You have told me to dedicate what talents and qualifications I may have to the interests of the party which I will now be privileged to lead."

It was true, Mr. Bennett continued, that he was a man of considerable wealth, wealth accumulated through capitalized opportunities on the great Western plains. No man, he said, could serve satisfactorily with pecuniary obligations hovering over his head. In this respect, he said, he could serve his country without fear.

Canada's future, the new leader declared, must be one of unlimited expansion and increased prestige among the nations of the world. There was a great opportunity for the Conservative Party to act as an instrument in bringing the right policies into being for the country. He emphasized the need of organizing the younger generation to which the present leaders could safely look to carry on the work of the party.

If effect were given to the Conservative policies sufficient industrial expansion would result to provide all our sons and daughters with employment within the borders of the Dominion.

"There must be no sacrifice of convictions; there must be no compromise of principles. Promise that you will be missionaries for your own party and your efforts will be crowned with success. You will then have a Government that will reflect your aspirations, your ideals and hopes, in power in Ottawa," he said.

Japanese Volcano Erupted

Covered Countryside For Seventy Miles With White Ash

Tokio.—With a thunderous roar, Asama-Yama, active Japanese volcano, erupted recently, emitting an immense volume of thick black smoke and covering the countryside with a white ash.

Farmers at work in the fields were compelled to use umbrellas as a protection from the ashes which fell as far distant from the volcano as Utsonomia, seventy miles to the east.

(Asama-Yama is about 80 miles northwest of Tokio.)

Says Baffin Land Habitable For Whites

But Is Not Desirable Place Dr. Livingston Finds

Ottawa.—Baffin Island, although not as pleasant a place of residence for white men as more Southern latitudes, is nevertheless capable of sustaining a vigorous and contented native population. This is an essential point in the report of Dr. L. D. Livingston who has just returned from 15 months duty as medical officer in the Canadian Arctic Archipelago. Dr. Livingston who was a member of the staff of each annual expedition to the Canadian Arctic, from 1922 to 1926, examining the natives at the different ports of call, remained in the North at the conclusion of the 1926 patrol and spent the winter of 1926-27, and the spring and summer of this year, in a detailed inspection of the natives in the interior whom it had not been possible to see on his previous annual visit.

The need of educating the Eskimos in wild life protection, in the practice of economy, and in methods of hygiene is strongly urged by Dr. Livingstone, The habit of putting aside supplies of food and other necessities for seasons of scarcity and a knowledge of sanitation would greatly improve general conditions among the Eskimos of the Eastern Arctic.

Plans For Willingdon's Visit To Washington

Program Being Worked Out By Canadian Legation and State Department

Washington. — The tentative program of entertainment of Lord Willingdon and Lady Willingdon at Washington, December 18, is now being worked out by the Canadian Legation and state department. It will be the first visit a Canadian Governor-General has made to Washington since that of the Duke of Connaught in war years, and the first time Canada's titular head has been entertained in Washington on Canadian territory.

His Excellency will exchange visits with President Coolidge and members of the cabinet and will be given the usual recognition of a representative of royalty.

It is understood that the visit has no special purpose except to establishment of personal contact between the governor-general and heads of the U.S. government.

On previous occasions the Canadian Governor-General has been a guest at the British embassy. The difference on this occasion will be that he will be able to entertain officially at the Canadian Legation as the representative of Crown in Canada.

Needs Full Autonomy

Canada's Highest Destiny Rests Within British Commonwealth Says Borden

Winnipeg.—"I yield to no man in my assertion of the fullest autonomy for this great country as a nation within the British Commonwealth of nations," declared Sir Robert Borden, former Prime Minister of Canada, in addressing the Canadian Club here.

The highest destiny of this great Dominion, Sir Robert said, rests within the British Commonwealth.

The former Premier dealt with the influence of the early French settlement in Canada on the development of the Dominion as an integral part of the British Empire.

Premier Offers Congratulations

Sends Wire To Hon. R. B. Bennett On His Appointment To Leadership

Ottawa.—Among the first to telegraph congratulations to Hon. R. B. Bennett, K.C., who was selected by the national convention to be leader of the Conservative Party, was the Right Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King, Prime Minister of Canada, and leader of the Liberal Government. The Prime Minister despatched the following wire to Mr. Bennett:

"I have just learned of your selection as leader of the Conservative Party of Canada, and desire to tender to you very hearty congratulations upon the confidence thus expressed in you by the members of your party, and on the distinguished honor which they have conferred upon you."

The telegram bears the Prime Minister's signature.

An Important Agenda

Ottawa.—The premiers of the provinces of Canada will face an imposing agenda of nearly forty items when they meet here on Nov. 3. The conference of the premiers promises to be the most important of its kind since Confederation, in view of the fact that several constitutional questions will come up for discussion and perhaps action. While the conference will have no actual legislative or administrative authority, its conclusion will be far-reaching, as they will affect the legislative programmes of the future of the nine provincial governments during the next year.

Employees Can Buy Shares

Sir Alfred Moved To Try Out Co-Operation Plan

London.—Co-operation between employers and employees, which is not a new matter in the United States, is about to be tried out here by Sir Alfred Mond with 40,000 employees in his big Imperial Chemical Industries. Sir Alfred's idea is to make a capitalist of every one of his factory hands.

Through his offer the employees can buy Imperial Chemical shares, quoted at 30 shillings, for 27 shillings, six pence. The only restriction is that they do not speculate. He will award free shares to workers on the basis of a man earning $1,000 annually or less getting a free share for every four purchased. The workers can vote on their stock.

"That will create a direct bond between the company officials and workers," Sir Alfred said. "Industrial peace will not be gained by pleasant talk and nice dinner parties, but by actual contact between the men and employers working out practical schemes."

Arrange Exhibits For Agricultural Jubilee

Every Branch Of Federal Department To Be Represented Says Motherwell

Ottawa.—Every branch of the Federal Department of Agriculture will be represented in the celebration of Canada's Agricultural Jubilee, Hon. W. R. Motherwell, Minister of Agriculture, annuonced, "and they are altogether aside from the provincial, educational and livestock displays which will be part and parcel of this presentation of the greatest of all of the Dominion's basic industries."

Alberta, which has had its banner crop year, has notified the minister that its exhibit will comprise grains from this year's yield, and that its display will be most comprehensive. Manitoba and Saskatchewan also will be represented.

The agricultural jubilee will be staged at the Royal Agricultural Winter Fair in Toronto from November 16 to 26.

Irish Free State

President Cosgrave Makes Few Changes In His Cabinet

Dublin.—President Cosgrave, re-elected as chief executive of the Irish Free State council in the Dail Eireann, has made few changes in his ministry.

The changes that were made give Hon. Ernest Blythe the postmastership as well as the portfolio of finance minister. Hon. Patrick McGilligan took over the internal affairs ministry in addition to his Ministry of Commerce, while Hon. James Fitzgerald Kenney, became Minister of Justice.

After a four-hour debate on the whole Government policy the Dail approved by a vote of 76 to 70, President Cosgrave's cabinet.

SEEKING LAND IN CANADA

This photograph, taken outside the Union Station, Winnipeg, is of a group of prominent United States farmers, who have been looking over settlement prospects in Saskatchewan and some of whom have purchased land. They were brought to Canada in September by Capt. L. B. Boyd, superintendent of the land, colonization and development department of the Canadian National Railways at St. Paul, Minnesota, and were interested in the Eston, Tyner Valley and Snipe Lake districts, on the Canadian National Railways. Their excursion resulted in the purchase of 16 quarter sections valued at $56,320, and a number of other deals are pending. These farmers belong to the States of Nebraska and Kansas and are all well established and possessed of considerable capital. Some of them have relatives and friends already settled in the Tyner Valley district and have been urged by them to come to Canada. Others not moving themselves, are taking land for their sons.

MOVE TO SPEED UP IMMIGRATION FROM BRITAIN

Winnipeg.—Adoption of a quota policy in Canada to restrict continental immigration was not regarded as feasible, Hon. Robert Forke, Minister of Immigration and Colonization, told a delegation of the general synod of the Anglican Church, which conferred with him here, but he gave his assurance that his department would do all it could to promote British immigration and to keep control over continental immigration.

The delegation consisted of Archbishop Matheson, the primate of all Canada; Chancellor Machray, Mr. Justice Dennistoun, J. W. E. Armstrong, W. G. Styles, Regina; G. B. Woods, Loftus H. Reid, Toronto; and Canon Vernon.

A statement issued said:

"Mr. Forke stated that the subject of immigration would occupy an important place on the agenda of the conference between the Dominion and provincial governments in November.

"The minister expressed a desire to meet representatives of the churches and other voluntary organizations interested in immigration to confer with him at Ottawa with a view to full co-operation in securing an increased flow of British settlers for Canada. The minister pointed out the valuable assistance that can be rendered by the churches in developing nominations for British families for land settlement, farm workers and household workers, to receive the assisted passage rate. He mentioned that in the past year more than 5,000 Britishers have been thus nominated.

"Mr. Forke told the delegation that the assistance to be offered to enable British lads who make good in Canada as farm workers to take up land of their own will be applicable to boys placed out through the church of England hostels at Winnipeg, Melfort and Edmonton. The department was doing everything possible to develop family settlement schemes along somewhat similar lines to the existing 3,000 family scheme.

"The Archbishop assured Mr. Forke that there had not been on the part of the synod or the church any intention of attacking or embarrassing the Government, nor were they actuated by any ill-feeling towards the Roman Catholic Church."

Trying To Reach Coast

Mexican Rebel Leaders Being Pursued By Federal Troops

Mexico City.—Pursued through the wild mountain country of western Vera Cruz, the rebel generals, Arnulfo Gomez and Hector Almada, were believed to be attempting to reach the coast, where passage in a fishing boat or other small craft would put them beyond the reach of the government.

Hot on their trails are scouting parties of federal troops under command of General Gonzales Escobar, who reported that he had dispersed the rebel forces and captured the main body, leaving Gomez and Almada with only about 100 followers.

To guard against the activities of bandits attempting to take advantage of the situation, the government has ordered an adequate escort of federal soldiers for every freight and passenger train.

Orchard Soil Upkeep

The growing season of 1927 opened with a very late spring and closed with an early, cool, wet fall, which reduced the optimum growing conditions to a few warm weeks during July and August.

When the soil is cold the bacteria become less active, nitrification is retarded and the needs of the growing plant are poorly supplied from nature's storehouse.

For the tree to get the full benefit from the soil during the growing period it is necessary that plant food in excess of its daily need should be present with sufficient moisture for its conveyance and retention.

The presence of humus helps to retain moisture, improve the tilth, and when decomposed it becomes a source of nitrogen to the growing plant. It is only available to the plant as a nitrate a soluble form and if not made use of by plant growth, it reaches out with the downward movement of the moisture in the soil.

Thus its condition is not stable as decomposition takes place nearly all the time, but is hastened by cultivation and warmth.

Bacteria are less active and humerous underneath a permanent sod of timothy as the soil cannot be warmed up to the same depth and the particles are not brought in contact with the air to the same extent as under clean cultivation, therefore nitrification is much slower and apple trees grown in an orchard under sod will in time show the effect of nitrogen starvation by the lighter color and size of the foliage, and shorter terminal growth unless regularly top dressed.

Trees grown under sod are greatly benefitted by liberal applications of nitrate of soda, especially in the early spring of the year and occasionally in the fall by top dressing of a fertiliser of a more general composition. When the annual precipitation is light, clean cultivation is generally practiced but it soon depletes the humus content unless maintained by top dressing with strawy manure, litter, etc., or by introducing cover crops. Legumes are generally selected, as they fix nitrogen from the air in the soil in nodules on their roots, which become available later when decomposed to plant growth.

Hairy vetch is more commonly used and returns greater value to the soil as the temptation to cut it for hay is not practised. In this section, if sown in June, at the rate of about twenty pounds to the acre and ploughed under the following May, and the land re-sown again, it helps to bring back the clay soil quickly, reduces cracking and surface baking, and aids in conserving the moisture during the hot month of July. When the physical condition of the soil is improved a more uniform and vigorous crop can be grown, then it may be allowed to grow for a whole season and mature at seed. In the following spring by heavy discing the surface can be broken up and levelled and the seed covered. In such a manner a cheap and efficient physical condition of the soil is maintained by adding to the humus content a nitrogen supply annually. The trees have something to feed on, but the effect is not noticeable at first as it takes four or five years for the humus to accumulate and decompose before the trees will show the direct benefit of it. Once it is established it is hard to eradicate, and when a short growing season occurs such as we have just experienced the roots can avail themselves fully of the time alotted to them and the size and quantity of the crop is more evenly maintained if the trees be not let to overbear.

The success of an orchard depends largely on the constant supply of available nitrogen in the soil, the trees need it to set the fruit in the spring, but cannot get much from the soil at that time because it is too cold. So it uses what it has stored up in its tissues from the growing period of the season before, also it is used in the growth of the new wood and young drop as it increases in size and maturity throughout the growing period. If the tree cannot get all its needs, the blossom buds may be weak the next spring, and may fail to set. So it behoves a grower to constantly maintain the humus supply in his orchard and it is more cheaply done by growing legumes if he has not enough farmyard manure to cover the orchard regularly.

Agricultural lime is a corrective applied to clay soils to induce the particles to coagulate together which improves the tilth and prevents baking to a certain extent, it helps to liberate the potash held in insoluble compounds in the soil, neutralizes humic acids which are formed by the process of decay of humus and is utilized by all growing plants more or less, it sweetens the soil and renders it conducive to the favorable growth of legumes as legume bacteria do not thrive under acid conditions. LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

About the Fall Fair

EDITOR REVIEW:

SIR,—This is the third year I have had the pleasure of a visit to Creston fair and enjoyed every minute of it, between feasting one's eyes on the extensive and wonderful exhibits of fruits, vegetables, flowers, domestic science and needlework, and renewing the acquaintance of old friends the time went rapidly.

On entering the exhibition building one is confronted by the exhibits of beautiful cut flowers of all varieties, roses, sweet peas, dahlias, asters nasturtiums, zinnias, pansies, etc., house plants, ferns, flowering potted plants of many varieties.

The full length of the building is flanked on the left side with boxed and crated fruits, with "King Apple" in evidence—the renowned fruit of the Creston Valley. Running paralell to this is the table containing the delicious looking plate exhibits of all varieties of fruit, while on the right side the vegetables and vegetable collections are shown.

Running down the centre are two tables; one with the artistic needle exhibits ranging from articles in embroidery and crochet, luxurious looking sofa cushions, to the more practical house dresses and aprons. The other table is laden with tempting looking cooking, from cookies, shortbread, and pastry of all descriptions, to a beautifully decorated birthday cake and a three-tier fruit cake which I was positive was decorated by a professional until convinced otherwise; and wonderful homemade bread and buns.

The canned vegetables were good, also the pickles, jams and jellies, but the canned fruit did not come up to my expeetations, or in accordance with the other perfect exhibits.

Looking over this table of domestic science one could see that even if the men were competent ranchers—fruit and vegetable growers—their partners were unusually competent in their line as housekeepers.

The children's exhibits showed keen competition, and especially worthy of mention was the pine needle basketry, rope and raffia work and reed and raffia work done by boys thirteen and under, taught by a diligent teacher who has given of her time and talents for 25 years in this line.

I have always taken a keen interest in the growing of fruit and vegetables and have enjoyed visits through the Santa Clara valley, California; Missouri; the Wenatchee valley in Washington, and other renowned fruit centres, and I feel that Creston Valley in our own home province is holning its own with the others, and has a bright future. MRS. G. A. HENNESSY.

Disposal of Stray Cattle

EDITOR REVIEW:

SIR—Re sale of strayed cattle I notice an advertisement "Sale of Cattle," in your issue of last week. May I be permitted to ask if I were to leave my gate open and cattle were to wander in would I be justified in keeping them for a week or two, then advertise them for sale. Would it not be proper to keep my gate shut and put the dog on to any cattle that hung around the place. It is one way of depleting one man's herd and enlarging another at the expense of the former. Such a thing would look half just if it took place during the winter, when the animal taken in was suffering hardship, but to have it done in the month of September, when there is abundance of feed all over the valley—the act looks funny. May I further ask do the local police look into such cases of strayed cattle. Furthermore the expense of advertising and feed amounts to, roughly $2. If when the animal so advertised is sold for $10 to $20 who keeps the amount over the expense. Does it go to charitable institutions, or retained by the parties whose place the animal came to. Yours for a FAIR DEAL.

Latest Achievement Of British Salvors

Towed Ex-German Warship Upside Down For Three Miles

The towing of a 23,000-ton warship upside down for three miles is the latest achievement of British salvors. The ex-German battle-cruiser Moltke was raised nearly three months ago from the floor of Scapa Flow, in the Orkneys, by Messrs. Cox and Danks. She lay on Cava Island bottom upwards, and much of her outer casing was removed. But in her exposed position work would be impossible during the winter gales, and it was decided to remove her to Lyness. All holes were plugged and pumping began, and as the air-pressure increased and she became partly buoyant a floating dock was placed on each side. Then her last voyage began to Lyness Pier.

Icelander's Remarkable Feat

Swam Twelve Miles In Arctic Ocean With Temperature at 33 Degrees

Swimming the English channel is mere play beside the feat of a young Icelander, Erlingur Palsson, a constable of Reykjivijk, who swam twelve miles in the Arctic Ocean with the water at a temperature of 32.8—barely above freezing point. He wore three bathing suits.

It is 900 years since this swim from the island of Drangoe, in the Skagafjord, to the mainland has been accomplished and that was by the legendary outlaw, Grettir. Until Palsson swam the distance nobody believed the legend, for it was regarded as impossible for a human being to endure the freezing water for the four and a half hours necessary to cover the twelve miles.

No one need endure the agony of corns with Holloway's Corn Remover at hand to remove them.

An Annual Event

Here is a story a Elawatha, Kansas, young lady told on herself. It is the honest truth. She is still wearing a dress she wore when she was 12 years old. The material is so good that she doesn't want to throw the dress away, has no younger sister to give it to. Each year she says, in order to keep pace with the march of fashion, she takes up the dress at the hem. So it annually gets shorter.

DEBILITY DUE TO INDIGESTION

Perfect Digestion Comes Through Rich, Red Blood

There can be no perfect digestion unless you have rich, red blood. This is scientifically true. It is also true that there is no tonic for the stomach that is not a tonic for every other part of the body. The way, then, to tone up the stomach is to tone up the blood.

The many so-called stomach remedies merely try to digest your food for you. How much better it is to tone up the stomach so that it will do its own work as nature intended. There is no pleasure in eating predigested food. Tone up your stomach and your appetite and digestion will soon be normal.

If your digestion is weak and your blood thin, you need the help of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills to enrich the blood and restore strength. In addition use care in the selection of your food and your stomach trouble will soon pass away. Mr. Gordon Dundas, Peterboro, Ont., tells as follows what this medicine did for him. He says: "Something over a year ago I was a gasoline salesman when I was taken sick. I felt very miserable and lost twelve pounds in weight. I did not sleep well and could not eat as I could scarcely retain anything in my stomach. I went to a local doctor who told me the fumes of the gas had got into my system. He gave me some medicine and told me I had better go to the country for a change of air. I did so, but I still felt listless and groggy, and had no ambition. On the advice of a friend I decided to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. I had not been taking the pills long before I was beginning to rest better, and to eat fairly well. I kept on taking the pills until at the end of the seventh box I knew I did not need any more, as I had gained the weight I had lost, slept well and could eat anything. I have since had splendid health and cannot say too much in praise of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.

TORONTO WOMAN IS GRATEFUL

To Gin Pills For Relieving Pain and Listlessness

Household duties were burdensome; pain wracked her body; medical skill accomplished nothing; then—and how often this happens!—a friend advised Gin Pills. This former sufferer writes:

"For about one year I had trouble with my back. I got tired so easily, had a terribly listless feeling at all times. I had medical attention all during this period but couldn't obtain relief.

"After using the first box of Gin Pills I got relief and, after taking three boxes, I feel that I am completely relieved. I always keep Gin Pills in the medicine cabinet."

THE CALL OF THE PROPHET

Golden Text: "And I heard the voice of the Lord, saying, Whom shall I send, and who will go for us? Then I said, 'Here am I; send me.'"—Isaiah 6.8.

Lesson: I Kings 19.19, 20; Amos 7.10-15; Isaiah 6.1-8.

Devotional Reading: Psalm 40.5-10.

Explanations and Comments

I. The Call Of the Prophet Elisha, I Kings 19.19, 20.—Elisha was plowing with twelve pair of oxen before him, eleven pair guided by his servants while he himself guided the twelfth pair. Elijah approached and cast upon Elisha his mantle, which was the characteristic garb of the prophets, Zech. 13.4; this was Elisha's call to the prophet's office. It is an interesting fact, by the way, that the insignia which graduates of certain colleges in England wear on appropriate occasions—the lambskin hood or cloak—can be traced back to Elijah's mantle, which was the skin of some animal dressed with the hair left on. "I wish that his mantle might fall upon me," is an expression not infrequently heard from one who covets another's gifts or graces.

Elisha ran after Elijah and promised to follow him after he had said farewell to his father and mother. And Elijah said to him, "Go back again; for what have I done to thee?" "Whatever sacrifice was involved in the prophetic call was to be made ungrudgingly. Elijah, like our Lord, would have no half-hearted service: Compare Luke 9.59-62."

II. The Call Of the Prophet Amos, Amos 7.14, 15.—"Then answered Amos." His consciousness of his divine commission upheld him in the face of the threats and commands of the high priest Amaziah: see verses 10-13.

"I was a herdsman and a dresser of sycamore trees." Sycamore trees yielded fruit which would ripen only after being punctured and to do this was the humble and scantily remunerating task of Amos. He was not a members of a prophetic guild, he was an "inspired farmer" chosen by God to be His messenger to Israel.

Value Of Newspaper Advertising

Says Advertising Is Right Hand Of Business of Today

Merchant, advertiser and publisher, the modern triangle of business, united in general discussion of problems at the semi-annual general meeting of the Canadian Association of Advertising Agencies held in Montreal.

Joe Laporte, vice-president and general manager of Laporte, Martin Ltd., in telling what the merchant thought of advertising, said advertising was the right hand of business and that "today a business has no right to be without its advertising agencies for the leading part they have taken in the development of newspaper advertising.

cases ended in death! So a recent Canadian investigation showed. These were not cases of infectious diseases—of consumption—of typhoid! They were cases where a person had sustained some slight injury—a cut, a burn, a wire-prick—and where the wound, being thought not serious enough for careful treatment, had been neglected. Blood-poisoning and death resulted.

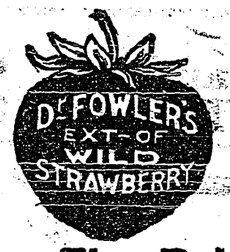
Celebrated Eighth Birthday

British civil aviation having recently celebrated its eighth birthday, I took the trouble to dig up a few facts concerning the career of this healthy youngster. I won't bore you with too many figures, but it should be placed on record that during the past eight years British Air Services have flown approximately six million miles and have carried 90,000 passengers on regular services, while since April 1, 1924, over 50,000 passengers have crossed the Channel alone. — London Bystander.

Mothers Should Use



When The Babies Are Cutting Teeth

During the baby's teething time, in the hot summer months, the bowels become loose and diarrhœa, dysentery, colic, cramps and other bowel complaints manifest themselves; the gums become swollen, cankers form in the mouth, and in many cases the child wastes to a shadow, and very often the termination is fatal.

This is the time when the mother should use "Dr. Fowler's," and, perhaps, save the baby's life.

It has been on the market for the past 80 years; put up only by The T Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

An Oil Without Alcohol.—Some oils and many medicines have alcohol as a promient ingredient. A judicious mingling of six essential oils compose Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil, and there is no alcohol in it, so that its effects are lasting.

One Crop Buys Farm

Remarkable Success Of New Settler On Lethbridge Irrigation Tract

Here is the report of the first new settler on the Lethbridge Northern irrigation tract to complete harvesting this year: Saunders Bros., of Iron Springs — purchased quarter section there last July paying $1,894.80, one-third crop to go to Lethbridge Northern as purchase price. Broke land in August. Seeded to spring wheat 140 acres. Harvest concluded, all wheat in elevator. Total crop 4,581 bushels. Grade No. 1. Offer for wheat today $1.33 per bushel net to owner. L. N. share 1,500 bushels at $1.33, total value $2,000; which means that the Lethbridge Northern, if it sells the wheat today, will have to return $105.20 to Saunders Bros., being the excess which one-third of the crop brought over purchase price of land. This crop was cut and harvested with a combine and the grain graded a perfect No. 1 direct from the machine.

PAINTED FIRES

The door of the common room opened quietly. The light was switched on, and Mrs. Wymuth in dishevelled night clothes stood blinking like an owl at the light. Helmi stood at the window facing her, unafraid and calm.

Mrs. Wymuth had a sudden plan. Helmi had come back to the scene—she was frightened—now was the time.

"I came the glass to pick up," said Helmi, in a whisper. "I hope he is not hurt bad."

"He is dead," said Mrs. Wymuth, in a voice as hollow as an empty church. "Oh, Helmi, you have killed him, killed him by your blow. He is lying now cold in death."

Dead! The room swam past Helmi, table—chairs—door. Dead! The word beat like a drum with every beat of her heart. Dead! Dead! Dead! Murha! Murha!

The red word danced before her eyes.

"Helmi, the police will come for you. I will have to send for them—I will have to tell them you struck him down. Listen, Helmi, tell me now who was it sent you for the dope? I'll save you, Helmi, even now, if you'll say the name."

Terror had frozen Helmi's blood. She knew how awful a thing it was to kill—people who kill are hanged! She locked and unlocked her hands.

"Just say the name, Helmi, and I'll save you—just the name."

For the moment Helmi could not remove her mind from the terrible present. Then she remembered. She began to speak mechanically.

"It was—" then she stopped abruptly. Her oath—she had sworn!

A deafening clanging outside drowned her words, the singing scream of a fire-engine that raced by rocking from side to side.

"Who was it, Helmi, dear—speak the name—I will save you." Mrs. Wymuth came closer, fawning terribly. "Helmi I will tell them you did not mean it. Just tell me who sent you. They will hang you, Helmi, and you so young. But tell me, Helmi dear, and I will be your friend—tell me, Helmi."

Helmi drew back, irresolute. There was a step in the hall, quick, impatient; then a voice.

"What the devil are you doing in there at this time of night?"

Mr. Wymuth came into the room. With a small piece of court plaster on his cheek, the only sign of the accident, stood the alleged corpse in a faded brown dressing-gown, his big bare feet spread hideously on the floor.

Helmi looked from one to the other, and a dull red came into her eyes—a surging rage, which with difficulty she controlled. She addressed Mrs. Wymuth. "It is you who is one damn liar," she said, in careful English. She walked past them through the open door, switching on the hall light as she passed and making no effort to walk quietly.

After that Helmi was not allowed to eat with the other girls. Helmi was a girl of evil temper—Mrs. Wymuth explained this very carefully when the girls were at breakfast. Mrs. Wymuth loved to mix morality and meals, so she made quite a little ceremony of the casting out of Helmi. The girls were asked if they thought she had done wrong. Knowing what they were supposed to say they said it—All but Minnie, who began to cry and was sent from the room.

Helmi was to be excluded from meals at tables, prayers and lessons until she apologized, Mrs. Wymuth rightly divining that she had struck a blow that would hurt deeply when she deprived Helmi of the lessons which she loved. She had her meals in the kitchen; prayers she could do without gladly, but the lessons!

Helmi was ordered to take her plate and cutlery to the kitchen. She did so, walking erect and calm, and looking straight into the eyes of the matron as she passed. The girls shuddered for fear for her when they saw how unconquered she was. At the door of the kitchen Helmi paused and looked back. Every eye was on her. They knew she was going to speak. She summoned her English as well as she could: "Your man," she said slowly, "Is he dead already yet?"

CHAPTER X.

Eva St. John had many terrifying moments when she thought of Helmi, and in so far as she was capable of feeling sorry she was truly repentant. "Poor kid," she often said to herself, "if she weren't so pretty it wouldn't matter so much. Ugly women might as well be in jail anyway, for all the fun they can have, but this kid could have had anything she wanted. I believe she'll keep her promise, she's that kind. If she doesn't it will be my word against hers, anyway, and she won't have much chance. But I'd hate it to come to that—I hate scenes. How could I tell there was going to be a raid that day? And I believe that Home is not such a bad place—there's a teacher there—and maybe she won't mind it. Anyway, I can't help it. A girl as pretty as that was likely to strike a snag anyway."

Users of the drug are not much troubled with pangs of conscience. Yet the thought persisted, gnawing, nagging cutting in upon her gayest moments. She could not forget Helmi with her worshipping eyes and her blind, unreasoning adoration — she couldn't forget her.

Then Eva tried another way. She had always been able by taking thought to justify her actions. She now justified her silence by telling herself that if she had come forward and confessed that she had sent Helmi for the drug it would have injured her husband's practice, and probably broken his heart. She told herself over and over again that she owed her first duty to him. He did so much for suffering humanity, eased so many people's pain, and did it so generously, that nothing must ever injure him. That was her first duty, to guard her husband.

Eva began to believe in her own wifely devotion. A woman's life should be submerged in her husband's anyway—she really had no life apart from him. She had been wrong to be so independent of dear old Humphrey—he was the safest port in a storm after all. An early Victorian spirit settled down upon her.

In her new-found enthusiasm Eva grew more thoughtful of the Doctor's comfort and more interested in his work. The Doctor, hungry for her favor, was quick to see the little attentions she was bestowing on him, and responded with the eagerness of a faithful dog. Eva, always analytical, and deeply interested in her own mental experiences, began to feel that the episode of Helmi was a providential thing, inasmuch as it was bringing her and her husband closer together, and under the stimulus of this belief she redoubled her efforts to please him. She went to church with him; she joined some of the women's societies. Eva was not unmindful of the benefit she would receive socially from these affiliations. It pleased her, too, to find what a flutter of pleasure her coming made in the societies. Anyway, it was good policy to make her social position as secure as possible, and if Helmi did accuse her it would be easier. Through all of Eva's plans there ran one cool purpose, yet she managed to keep her conscience clear as the noonday sun. She had mastered the art of self-deception.

Following out her plan to establish a blameless record and an invincible social one, it occurred to Eva that it might be well for her to show an interest in the Girls' Friendly Home. It would show to the world that although the young Finnish girl had treated her badly there was no room in her noble heart for resentment. She glowed with the thought. Having put her hand to the plow she would not turn back.

Miss Abbie was delighted when she heard that Mrs. St. John thought of going out to see the girls, and not only that but was going to give a tea for the Home. She reported this to Mrs. Wymuth the Sunday following, when paying her weekly visits to the Home. It was used by Mrs. Wymuth in her turn, not only to show the girls how grateful they should be for food, shelter, clothing, and the blessings of the gospel, but also for kind friends to think of them. Mrs. Wymuth's tongue dripped honey, when she made the announcement to the girls.

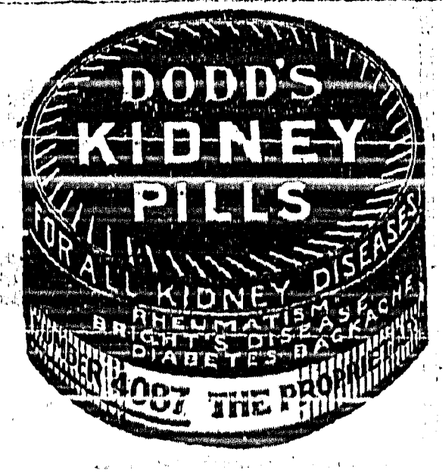
RUN-DOWN AFTER BIRTH OF BABY

Ottawa Woman Made Strong by Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Ottawa, Ontario.—"I was terribly run-down after the birth of my third baby. I had awful bearing-down pains and was afraid I had serious trouble. I was tired all the time and had no appetite. My sister-in-law is taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and cannot praise it too highly and asked me to try it. I have had splendid results and feel fine all the time now. Any one who needs a thorough pick-me-up soon learns from me what to take."—Mrs. Irene Paquin, 312 Cumberland Street, Ottawa, Ontario.

Terrible Backache

Hamilton, Ont.—"After my baby was born I had terrible backache and headaches. I could not do my work and felt tired from the first minute I got up. But worst of all were the pains in my sides when I moved about. I had to sit or lie down for a while afterwards. I could keep my house in order, but many things had to go undone at the time, because of my ailments. I was told by a neighbor to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, as she said it would build me up. I was relieved before I had taken the first we bought and have not had any trouble like it since."—Mrs. T. Markle, 60 Burton Street, Hamilton, Ontario.



Had Thrilling Trip

Girl Member Of Trader Crew Returns After Voyage To South Seas

A proposal of marriage from a cannibal chief in the New Hebrides and a score of other adventures in the South Seas were part of the story of a girl who returned to her home in New York after a runaway trip to sea.

The girl, Viola Irene Cooper, a member of a trader crew that included Malays, Arabs, Fijians, Portuguese and French men, stood watch and ate shark fins as regularly as the most able bodied seaman in the realization of a dream inspired by reading the sea stories of Stevenson, Conrad and Melville.

Miss Cooper shipped from San Francisco with a friend, Jean Schoen. The girls had considerable difficulty getting jobs but a kindly captain finally hired them and away they went on a cruise to the romantic lands they had long desired to see.

"We were treated courteously by every one we met," reports Miss Cooper. "I was only scared once, and that was by the cannibal chief. He pinched my arm and said "You belong to me," and I did not know whether he wanted to marry me or eat me. But we were good friends after that, and he promised me a copra island if I would send him a silk hat and a cutaway coat. I promised I would."

Little Helps For This Week

For we are saved by hope.—Romans viii. 24.

And do not fear to hope. Can poet's brain
More than the Father's heart rich good invent?
Each time we smell the autumn's dying scent
We know the primrose time will come again;
Not more we hope, nor less would soothe our pain.
—George MacDonald.

"We should hope for everything that is good," says the old poet Linus, because there is nothing which may not be hoped for, and nothing but what the gods are able to give us." Hope quickens all the still parts of life, and keeps the mind awake in her most remiss and indolent hours. It gives habitual serenity and good humor; it is a kind of vital heat in the soul that cheers and gladdens her when she does not attend to it. It makes pain easy and labor pleasant.
—Joseph Addison.

A Successful Rancher

French Countess Has Prosperous Plantation In Indo-China

Mme. Rivera de la Souchere of the French aristocracy has made a remarkable success of a rubber plantation and cattle farm in Indo-China. Recently she was decorated by the French Government with the Cross of the Legion of Honor. Her formidable task began twelve years ago alone in the virgin forest of the colony. Mme. Souchere, unaided by any white companions, made her plantation one of the most prosperous in the country. Everything is under her sole supervision, from the model village, with its meeting house, to the villa for sick natives.

Ride In Luxury Car

A "luxury car" has ended a strike of village school children in Awre, England. Parents of the pupils objected to a tumble-down vehicle used to convey the children to and from Newnham School, four miles away. They kept their children at home. Finally, the Gloucestshire Education Committee provided a bus which is termed a "luxury car," and the children have gone back to school.

Smallest Portrait Disappears

The BABY

Why do so many, many babies of today escape all the little fretful spells and infantile ailments that used to worry mothers through the day and keep them up half the night?

If you don't know the answer, you haven't discovered pure, harmless Castoria. It is sweet to the taste, and sweet in the little stomach. And its gentle influence seems felt all through the tiny system. Not even a distasteful dose of castor oil does so much good.

Fletcher's Castoria is purely vegetable, so you may give it freely, at first sign of colic, or constipation, or diarrhea. Or those many times when you just don't know what is the matter. For real sickness, call the doctor, always. At other times, a few drops of Fletcher's Castoria.

The doctor often tells you to do just that; and always says Fletcher's. Other preparations may be just as pure, just as free from dangerous drugs, but why experiment? Besides, the book on care and feeding of babies that comes with Fletcher's Castoria is worth its weight in gold!

Chiropractic for Stomach Trouble and Constipation

April 22, 1927

To Whom it May Concern:

I am so grateful for what Chiropractic has done for me, who had suffered for two years with indigestion and constipation, that I want everyone to become acquainted with the facts.

I have been under M.D.'s treatment but never got any better, always getting worse and losing weight fast so I thought I would try Chiropractic Adjustments.

I went to Dr. John H. Stoke of Roanoke, Virginia, in May 1926.

After the first two or three adjustments I began getting well and now, thanks to Dr. Stoke and the science of Chiropractic, I am well and enjoying life.

I earnestly advise anyone suffering with stomach trouble to investigate Chiropractic for I am sure they can be cured.

I will be glad to answer anyone who cares to write me concerning my case or my experience with Chiropractic.

It's What You Hear that Counts!

And listening to any radio set you can instantly detect superiority or inferiority of performance. We invite you to judge on this impartial basis. We are satisfied that Kolster superiority, its amazing quality of tone, its hair line selectivity, the remarkable ease with which it brings in distant stations, its simplicity and ease of operation will be so marked even when it is compared with sets costing much more that you will recognize it at once. We urge you to make it a point to have a Kolster demonstration before buying a radio set.
