Five Queens Enter Contest

Moore's Garage, Pythian Lodges, Legion, Canyon and Huscroft-Lister Have Candidates and Ticket Selling Under Way.

The sale of tickets on the five queens in the popularity contest as well as arrangements for the parade, maypole, barbecue, sports, etc., in connection with Creston Valley's observance of the King's Silver Jubilee, are well under way. Ticket selling on the queens got under way at the firrt of the week, and all the candidates are being well supported. Those in the running are:-

MARY ABBOTT, sponsored by Cecil Moore's Garage.
JUNE BROWELL, sp nsored by Canyon District.
DORIS FERGUSON, sponsored by Knights of Pythias and Pythian Sisters.
MINNIE HUSCROFT, sponsored by Lister-Huscroft District.
KATE PAYNE, sponsored by the Legion and Legion Auxiliary.

Considerable support is already in sight for the barbecue, arrangements for which are in charge of Matt. York, and it is expected this will be a big drawing card for young and old alike.

Oldtime maypole dancing will be under the directio of Mrs. W. Fraser, and a special committee will handle the sports. Merchants and organizations have promised to equip floats and decorate cars. A prize for the best turnout has been promised by West Kootenay Power & Light Company, Limited.

Tickets on the five queens, in addition to providing a vote also give the holder a chance to win one of three cash prizes. The tickets are ten cents, and the drawing for the prizes will be at the Jubilee dance on the evening of May 6th.

Crowning of the Jubilee Queen, the parade to Exhibition park, the maypole dance and all the other activities will be a pageant worthy of the occasion, and one to be remembered for many years, especially by the valley young people.

In entertaining the children of the entire valley the committee undertakes a large cash outlay, and since the sale of votes in the queen contest is expected to provide the greater part of the expense people are urged to back the venture by buying votes on one or more of the candidates. Proceeds of the d y will go to a charitable cause

That the rate of increase in hospital business, so noticable in 1934 has been maintained in 1935, is shown by a comparison of hospital days. There were 1072 days in the first quarter of 1935, compared to 586 in the first quarter of 1934.

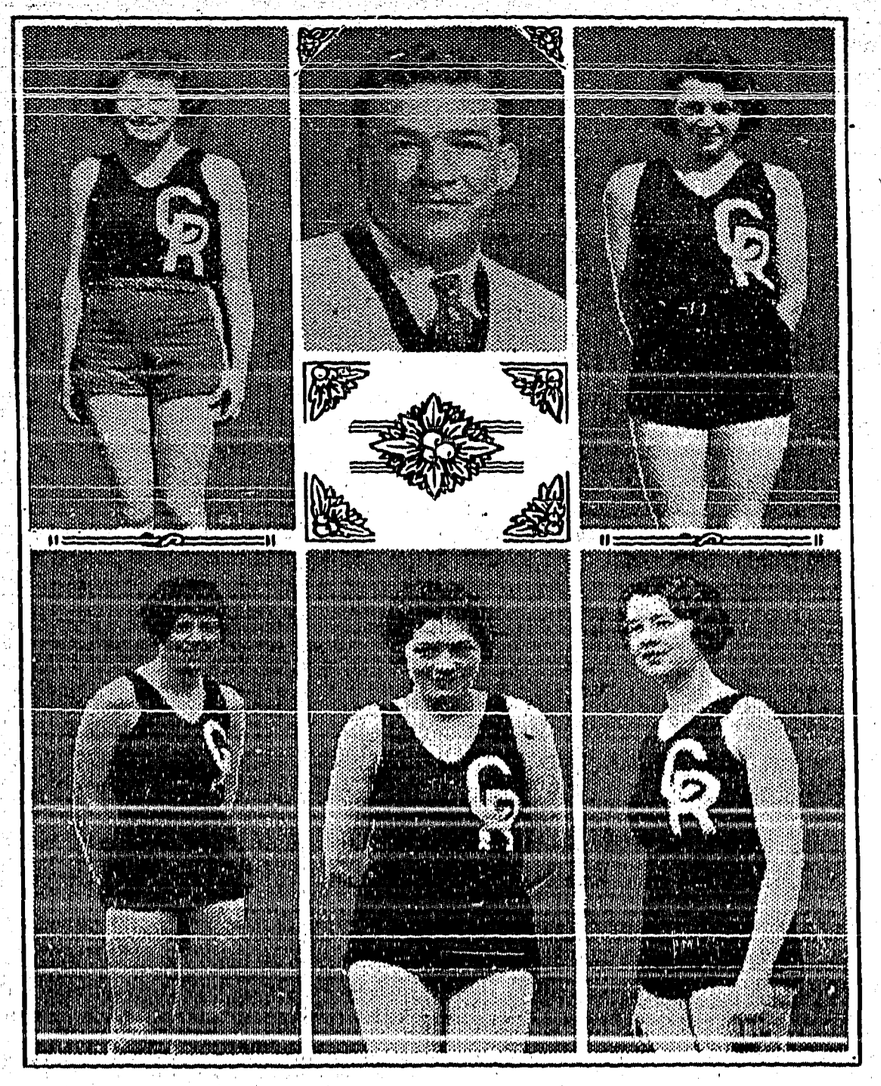
The meeting was informed that the institute is caring for a mother and baby until other arrangements can be made. Mrs. Mallandaine spoke on the "Maintenance Family act," affecting children of a first wife in the event of a second marriage. Mrs. R. Stevens reported for the home industries committee, which has been active in collecting work from members suitable to exhibit at the 1935 Vancouver exhibition.

Mrs. Jas. Cook reported for the hospital committee, mentioning that the hospital board would like to use the Institute room for a room for the matron until other arrangements can be made. Members, while conceding the board that privilege, made it plain that it was only a temporary arrangement. Screens will be needed for the windows of the hopital and organizations having their own rooms would look after this matter.

Mrs. F. C. Rodgers reported placing flowers on the cenotaph. The date for the bulb tea will be set by the directors. Mrs. McLaren read a paper on growing gladioli. For the visiting committee Mrs. Andrews and the president reported quite a busy month, and will be in charge of the work for another month.

The meeting was disappointed in that O. Sostad was unable to give his talk on Mexico as previously arranged. The tea hostesses were Mrs. Crawford and Mrs. J. E. Johnston. The freewill offering was generous and goes to the Crippled Children's hospital. The May meeting will be at the home of Mrs. Jas. Cook.

AGAIN! Meet the Lady Champions



Creston Review, Champions Ladies' Division Creston Commercial Basketball League

For the second year in succession the Creston Review squad has annexed the championship of the ladies' division of Creston Commercial Basketball League. The finish was a thriller, the newspaper girls taking the final encounter by a two point margin in a game that was twice tied and required an overtime period to decide matters. The Review win is particularly satisfactory in that the squad has had no spare players for service during the whole of the last half of the season. That the quint were able to stay in the running and trim the flashy Moore's Garage combination in the play-off series is eloquent tribute to their playing ability as well as exceptional staying power.

NEW SUPER-LINER "QUEEN MARY"

The decision of Cunard White Star marine designers to retain the knife-edge bow in the new super-liner "Queen Mary", as against the so-called bulbous bow, has started quite a controversy in shipping circles. All of the large liners built within the last few years feature the bulbous bow. However, it was the knife-edge bow which enabled the Mauretania to keep her laurels as speed-queen of the Atlantic for 22 years after her launching. The "Queen Mary" is expected to enter the trans-Atlantic service in the early summer of 1936.

Birds Cause War Worry

Superstitious People Of Northern Europe Dislike Wax Wings

Because birds known as waxwings have been seen recently in northern countries of Europe supersitious people are predicting a European war or some other great calamity. For centuries the arrival of wax wings in winter has been regarded over a great part of Europe as a harbinger of war, plague or death. They are said to be the devil's own birds and bear his mark in the shape of a globe of what looks like scarlet sealing wax at the end of the shaft of some of the wing feathers. In recent times the old belief has been strengthened by their being seen during the winter preceding the World War and the Franco-Prussian war.

THE FUTURE LIFE

Golden text: I am the resurrection and the life: he that believeth on me though he die, yet shall he live. John 11:25.

Devotional reading: Psalm 23:1-6.

Explanations And Comments

The Empty Tomb and the Good News, Luke 24:1-12. Early on Sunday morning after the crucifixion of Jesus, Mary Magdalene, and Joanna, and Mary the mother of James, and other women came to the tomb where his body had been laid, to embalm it with spices which they had prepared. To their great amazement, the stone that guarded the entrance to the tomb they found rolled away, and on entering, they found the tomb empty. They fell on their faces in fright when two men suddenly appeared and questioned, "Why seek ye the living among the dead?" Recall Peter's words in his sermon at Pentecost, "It was not possible that he should be holden of death." "He is not here, but is risen." Then the messengers reminded the trembling group that Jesus had foretold his crucifixion and resurrection.

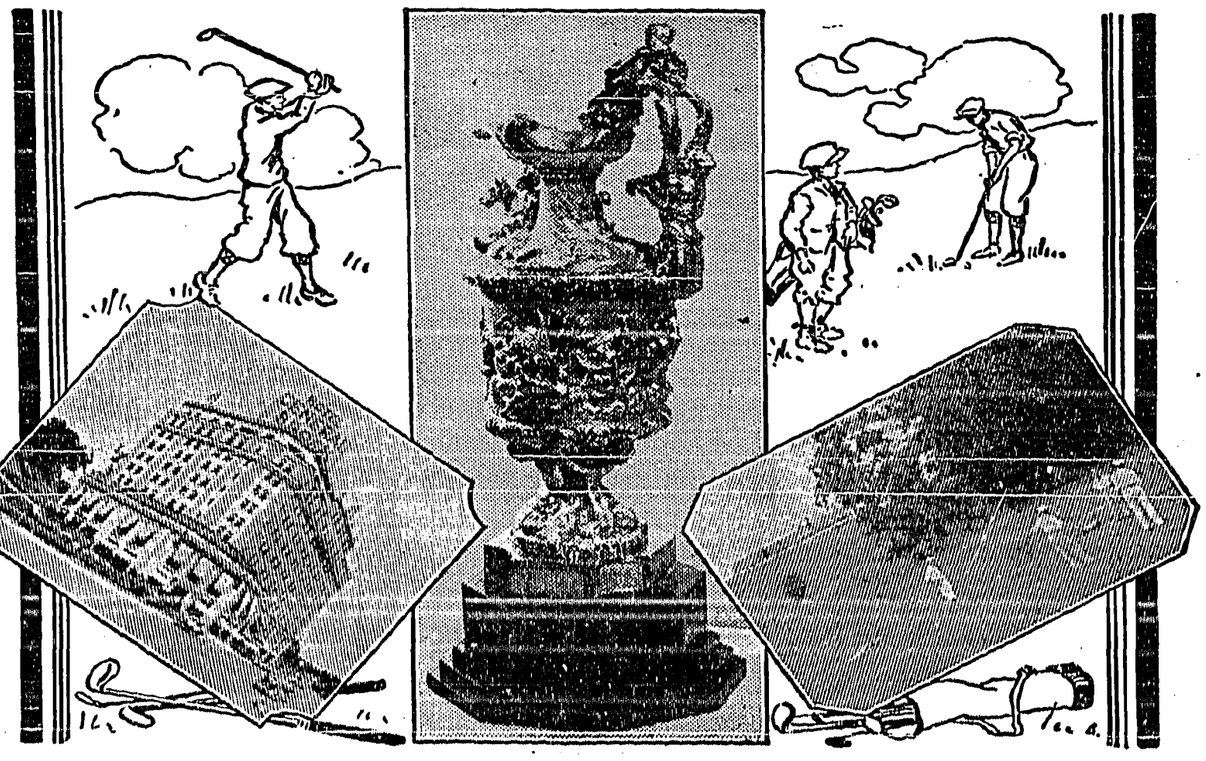
Can you not imagine in what excitement the women hurried off to tell the disciples? But the disciples could not credit their story. The words appeared to them "as idle talk." Peter hastened to the tomb and looked in to behold the linen wrappings there but no body of his Lord and went away overcome with wonder.

The Promise of Christ, John 14:1-3. "Let not your heart be troubled," Jesus bade his sorrowing disciples in his farewell talk with them. It was no mere exhortation to keep up their courage, no comfortable optimism that he bade them hold, for he gave them a reason for untroubled hearts, told them how they could face the dark days ahead, when he added, "Believe in God, believe also in me." In spite of everything they must trust in the goodness of God and in their Lord's loving thought of them.

Separation was at hand, but there would be a reunion. By going away Jesus would make ready for his followers abiding places in His Father's home. The Greek word translated mansions means places of shelter, and the margin of the Revised Version has the translation abiding places. All people have a belief in a future life and this belief, Jesus' words tell us, is true, for otherwise he would have disillusioned the minds of his followers.

Cowhides to the value of $277,547; sheepskins, $134,444; calfskins, $117,441, and "harness leathers", $322,940, were used during 1933 by the Canadian miscellaneous leather goods industry, which includes harness, saddlery, trunks, bags, purses, and belts. Other farm products in the shape of goatskins and pigskins were also used in smaller quantities.

$2,000 GOLD CUP FOR INTERNATIONAL GOLF TOURNAMENT AT FONTHILL, ONTARIO, JULY 11-12-13



Never in the history of Canadian golf has so handsome or valuable a trophy been donated for competition as the Seagram Gold Cup, presented by Seagrams for the six-man-team competition in the General Brock Hotel Open Golf Tournament to be played at the Lookout Point Golf Club, Fonthill, Ontario, on July 11, 12 and 13. The cup stands eighteen inches high, is mounted on an ebony base and is a very fine example of the goldsmith's craftsmanship of several hundred years ago. Moulded from Ormolu metal and plated with eighteen carat gold, it could not be duplicated to-day for less than two thousand dollars. Through Christie's of London, England, this trophy was secured from the estate of Lord Darnley.

The presentation of this heirloom revives memories of the ill-fated Lord Darnley (1545-1567), great grandson of Henry VII, first husband of Mary Queen of Scots, and father of James I. of England. Lord Darnley was considerable of a reprobate and his marriage with Mary was connived by Queen Elizabeth to anger John Knox as it would place their heir, a Catholic, in line for the throne. Lonely for the continental life she had been accustomed to, for Mary was brought up at the court of the Dauphin in France, she brought Rizzio, an Italian musician, to the Scotch court to entertain her. Returning one night in a rage, the jealous Darnley had Rizzio murdered by his followers. The Italian's dead body was then presented to the Queen. A short time later, when he was twenty-one years of age, Lord Darnley was murdered at the instigation, it is believed, of Mary and the Earl of Bothwell, for in the middle of the hunting season, when Darnley and his followers were celebrating at his hunting lodge, it was blown up.

The Cup's magnificent workmanship makes it a most attractive trophy and the winning team returning the lowest combined aggregate score for the seventy-two holes of medal play will keep it for one year. In addition, each member of the team will receive $50.

Entries are contemplated from teams representing Canada, Japan, native-born United States professionals, and foreign-born United States professionals and amateur teams from both the United States and Canada.

"But . . . My God, man! To do that you've got to inform on Peyotl . . . ."

"Well . . . What if I do? What good is Peyotl to anybody?"

"You . . . You can't do it, Sam. You just can't do it."

"Who? Me? I'll show you. I mean to have that girl. We've got our safe full of cash right now. In a week we'll own the Hour-glass and Soda Springs and the mine that old man Kane found. In a year I'll be travellin' with my red-headed wife and you can buy one for yourself. Like it?

Spike did not like it and said so. The risks were too great. But Dustin did not even listen to his objections. He rose suddenly and seized his hat.

"I'm goin' over to the Hour-glass right now," he said.

Spike watched him go and shook his head.

"I wish to God I'd kept clear o' Sam," he muttered. "They got nothin' on me though. It's always been Sam gave the orders about the cattle. It's been Sam tended to the money end of it. Come to think of it, if anything happens maybe I'll prove to be the smarter man. Sam's headin' fer trouble if his foot slips."

But Dustin was heading at that moment for the Hour-glass. He knew that Crewe and Carr with Stone would be delayed in Seco and he wanted to be the first to tell the news to Edith.

She met him as he was dismounting amid a ring og angry men, for the Broken Spur was not loved at the Hour-glass. Dustin stared them down and faced her calmly.

"I came over here to-night as a neighbor should," he said. "I've got some bad news for you. . . ."

"So you came to enjoy telling it . . ." She flung the words at him. "Go on. Tell your news . . . and go."

"All right . . . If you want it like this. But I warn you, you'd better send those men away and see me in private."

She scanned him even-eyed. There was some indefinable thing about him that convinced her that on this occasion at least he was telling the truth.

"Come then," she said shortly. The men stared after them as she led the way into the house and a little murmur arose that Red Thom quieted. The moment they reached the office she turned shortly on him. "Well," she said: "What is it? To what do we owe the honor of this call?"

"Do you know where your father went?" he asked.

"Of course. To meet his partner, Mr. Gerald Keene, who came on the evening train."

"Right. I'll tell you where he is now . . . They all went to the Silver Dollar saloon. Your father, Crewe, that wrangler Stone and the man Keene. They had hot words there of some kind. The lights went out. There was a shot fired. When the lights came on again the man Keene was lyin' over the roulette table shot through the body and they searched everybody. They found a Derringer pistol that had been fired in your father's pocket. He was standin' right by Keene. . . ."

For just a fraction of a second Dustin shrank back from the light in her eyes.

"You . . . You liar. . . ." Scorn ineffable rang in her voice. "To come here and tell me a thing like that . . . You mean to tell me that my . . . my father shot this Mr. Keene?"

"No. . . ." He held up a delaying hand . . . "I mean to tell you that the Sheriff has got evidence that will send your father to the gallows for having shot Gerald Keene. I'm the only man in the world who can prove he didn't . . . Get me now? The first thing they'll search for is a motive. Why should Joe Carr shoot his partner? They'll find the motive in old Peter Vinton's will. The man Keene died a little while ago. You can verify what I say by telephone. Call up Doctor Epps. He's taken the wounded man to his house. By Keene's death, your father gets the other half of the Hour-glass. He owes me more than he can pay. There's the motive. The fact remains that I've told you the truth. The Sheriff has got proof that your father shot his owner partner to get his share of the Hour-glass. . . . That's part of what I've got to tell you. . . ."

She swayed on her feet and her face, once red-and-white turned pale but the light in her eyes never changed.

"Call up Epps in Seco on the phone," he said.

She stepped to the wall-instrument, snatched the receiver and got the number. Dustin could not hear what was said from Seco but he saw her face blanch and her lips quiver. Her free hand grasped at the wall for support.

"Then as I understand you, Doctor, my father is under arrest for the . . . the killing of Gerald Keene . . . Is that right?"

Followed a buzzing again across the wire that her clear voice cut.

"What? . . . You say Mr. Keene died a short time ago . . . ? Oh . . . I see. . . ."

She turned away from the telephone and faced Dustin and her whole demeanor changed. She seemed to have shrunk and lessened but her eyes shone with an indomitable glow.

"He . . . . Doctor Epps says you are correct . . . That my father undoubtedly shot Mr. Keene. He says Mr. Keene died. . . . And . . ."

For the first time she broke down and sank into a chair and buried her face in her hands while her body shook. Dustin came over and stood by her and ventured to lay a hand on her shoulder.

"It may not be quite as bad as you think," he said.

"How? Not as bad as I think . . . I know Daddy never did it. Of course he didn't do it. . . ."

"The Sheriff has evidence that he did," said Dustin. "They've established the motive. They found the man dead across the roulette table. Shot with a big soft-lead bullet from a Derringer pistol They found Carr standing right by him and in his pocket was a Derringer pistol. It had just been fired and the bullet from Keene's body fitted it. Will a jury want more evidence than that? Use your brains."

She could not. They seemed atrophied.

"There's one way out," he said. His eyes sought hers but her gaze wavered and dropped. Some occult sense told her what was coming.

"What would you give," he said, "if a man could be found who could refute all that circumstantial evidence? What price would you be willing to pay to save your father a coroner's inquest, an indictment, a trial and . . . a conviction. That conviction means a hanging."

"You mean . . . To hang some one else . . . ?"

"I mean to hang the really guilty man. Look here. No beating about the bush! I know who shot Keene. I'll come forward and give testimony that will clear your father and hang the guilty man . . . If you will marry me. . . ."

Her eyes stabbed him like a knife.

"You . . . you cur," she said "To bargain over a man's life. I knew what you were. . . ."

"Stick to your tie-rope," he said. "If I forget what I know, your father hangs. . . ."

In less than ten seconds she reconstructed the evidence She knew that Dustin told the truth. The evidence was sufficient for any Frontier jury. Her father would hang.

"I . . . I . . . You mean that if I marry you, you will clear my father?"

"Exactly. You've put it in a nutshell . . . ."

"I . . . I want time. . . ."

"In twenty-four hours the man will have left the country."

"I . . . I can't tell you now . . . I want time. . . ."

"I give you till to-morrow. . . ."

"Can't you be decent just once? There is no question of love in this . . . I hate you. . . ."

"What difference does that make? I break any horse in my corral till he answers to my hand. You'll do the same. I want you. That's enough! If I choose to marry the daughter of a cold-blooded murderer who shot his own partner . . ."

The telephone jangled again and she leaped for it.

"Epps again, Miss Edith. Crewe is comin' right out. Stone is staying in for the night." She turned to Dustin.

"Come over to-morrow," she said wearily. "You know of course that I will try to find some way out of this . . . If there is no way . . . I . . . I . . . I'll have to pay the price."

He had to be content with that but he almost slunk to his horse as he walked to the horse-block under the malignant stare of the Hour-glass waddies.

Stone went straight to Jameson's office and stayed there till Jameson stormed back into the place.

"No luck at the Broken Spur," he said. "Peyotl isn't there. And I can't get any trace of old man Kane. Have you telephoned Epps?"

"Listen to me, Jameson. I'm layin' all my cards on the table . . . But one. I'm keepin' an ace buried. Joe Carr never fired that shot. The man who shot Keene had the gun wrapped in this. . . ." He laid before the editor that yellow-and-green bandanna . . . "Look at the shot, holes in it. Smell it. . . ."

Stone fished from his pocket the broken fragments of cigarettes that he had found by the lonely camp-fire up Red Water canon and the single specimen that he had taken from Dustin in the golpe de caballo.

"Check 'em up," he said. "Who do you reckon fired that shot?"

Jameson considered carefully. "Some one who uses peyotl," he said.

"All right. Who's that?"

"I only know one. . . Peyotl Gregg and he ain't to be found at the Broken Spur."

"There's only one other place he can have gone. If he's not at the Broken Spur he must be here in Seco."

"We can probably find him down in the Mexican settlement," said Jameson. "That's the only place he can get his drug. Let's go there."

It took three hours but they finally dug Peyotl up, a drug-soddened wreck from the jacale of Pascual Mendez. He reeked of sotol, that drink that has a special stink of its own, and they slammed him unceremoniously into the rear seat of Jameson's car.

"You question him," said Jameson.

"Where did you get the pistol that you shot that man Keene with?" demanded Stone.

Queer Things At Auction

Only Curio Dealers Bid For Hand Of Witch

A witch's hand was offered at auction in London recently. It was that of Mary Holt, a Pulborough woman, who was hanged for witchcraft. It was not sold. Only curio dealers bid for it. They went up to nearly $20, at which point the hand was bought in by its owner. The same thing happened to a heart pierced with pins, another old Sussex witchcraft charm. One Hallet, who lived at New House, bragged with considerable success, and prospered greatly with the aid of his charms. Examples of his "life-giving" stock-in-trade were on sale. A glass-encased "grotto" called by Hallett a Nativity brought $55.

Steaming Ashes And Nile Mud Hatch Chicks In Egypt

Every year Egypt exports hundreds of millions of eggs to other countries, yet hens with chicks are almost never seen there. The explanation is that eggs are artificially hatched by a system that has not changed in 4,000 years. The eggs lie for a while in steaming ashes, deep down in the hatching pits. Later they are put beneath black cupolas of Nile mud, lying on camel dung and covered with palm leaves. The system is so accurate that attendants can tell to the hour when the chicks will hatch.—Detroit News.

Hospital Service Much Improved

Ladies' Hospital Auxiliaries Add Considerable Equipment Since New Building Opened Less Than Two Years Ago.

With the drawing of the lucky tickets in the recent sweeepstakes and announcement last week of the appointment of Miss Edythe Cooke, of Vancouver as permanent matron, Creston Valley public hospital has been a popular topic of conversation of late.

Since the new hospital opened in November, 1933, many changes have been made, both in appearance and general hospital accommodation. The staff too, has increased from two to four regular nurses, with a housekeeper, assistant to housekeeper, a caretaker, and secretary to handle the business affairs of the hospital.

Increased Accommodation

When the new hospital opened less than two years ago it had accommodation for nine patients, all wards being on the first floor. To day there is room for 21 patients The second floor has been fitted up during the past year for a maturnity floor and has two private rooms, one semi-private, and one public ward. One nursery and case room serves the whole floor. On the first floor there is room for 12 patients as compared with 9 originally.

The waiting room, at the entrance of the building, is suitably fitted up for the purpose with desk, easy chairs, and scales, also used as a chart room. Across the hall the men's public ward is situated on the sunny side of of the building and is furnished with five beds, easy chairs and Congolium rugs, the two latter which have been furnished by the Canyon Lad'es' Hospital Auxiliary. Small tables for the use of the patients are placed at the side of each bed. A small X-Ray, too, is kept in the ward for the use of patients who are unable to go down stairs to the X-Ray room. Along the hall from the men's ward, at the top of the stairs, is the only private ward in the hospital which has not been furnished by som organization and contain bed. table and chairs. In the ladies' public ward there are four beds, tables easy chairs and screens. Two, rugs, in suitable shade, put a finishing touch on the room. At the end of the main hall is the private room furnished by the Pythian Sisters. The color scheme is cream and brown ith Congoleum rug, easy chair, a bed and vanity dressing table This ward has always been popular and is seldom vacant.

Modern Operating Room

On the north side of the building, on the first floor, is the large and modern operating room. This is the most important section of the whole building. Last year over 123 operations were performed all of which were successful. The walls of this room have lately been enamelled in white and the lighting system has been improved, in order to make operating easier for the Doctor. In a small section off this room is the supply room and which also contains a sterilizer. A big sterilizer is contained in a small building at the rear of the Hospital.

Two bathrooms and a small utility room are also on the first floor. A wide hall extending the full length of the building is fitted up with a libriary and a reading bench for the use of the patients and were donated by Creston Hospital Womens' Auxiliary. Half-way down the main hall, a flight of stairs leads to the second floor Although this is a maternity floor, it is sometimes used for other cases in emergency. At the west end of the building is the Erickson Hospita Auxiliary Ward. This room is tastfully decorated in green and brown, is provided with two brown hospital beds, with dresser, chairs and tables to match. A large green figured rug covers the floor and screens and floor lamps complete the furnishings.

Wynndel Furnishes Ward

The Wynndel ward is smaller than Erickson, but equally appreciated. It is finished in cream color, which has lately been kalsomined and painted. The room is complete with bed, dresser, chairs, magazine stand, table, vases and other needed accessories This ward has been furnished by the Wynndel Women's Institute who, besides their room, have helped to supply bedding, awnings etc.

At the east end of this floor is the ladies' public maturnity ward at present furnished with two beds. Several tables and easy chairs; the latter given by the Canyon Hospital Auxiliary, with floor coverings complete the setting.

Creston Womens' Institute ward, the first one in the hospital to be furnished an organization, was moved up from the first floor, a little over a year ago. The color scheme is cream and rose, with screens, tables and two chairs to correspond. A linen cupboard has recently been installed for the Institute linen and other ward belongings.

A case room and nursery combined are on this floor, the floor of which has been covered with linoleum as is the hall. The bathroom was also furnished by the Canyon Auxiliary. The stair treads were provided by Kitchener Hospital Auxiliary.

Basement Fully Utilized

On the lower stair landing, leading to the basement floor, is the telephone booth, built by Creston Hospital Womens' Auxiliary and conveniently connected with the secretary's office by an electric bell system, the latter donated by Mrs. W. M. Archibald. An electric bell signal system has recently been installed on the maternity floor.

In the basement the greatest changes have taken place. When the hospital was first built there was only about one third of the basement excavated, giving room for a kitchen, dinning room, a bed room, and the room later fitted up for the X-ray room As the hospital business grew, it became evident that enlargements must get under way. The heating system, too, was far from satisfatory.

Last fall an up-to-date hot water heating system was installed by J. G. Bell, plumer. In order to give needed room for the new heating system, the remaining section of the basement was excavated and a cement floor and foundation were put in. The hardest part of this job was digging out all the way round the foundations and putting in a four foot cement wall. It is now possible, besides the new furnace, to store a winters supply of fuel. In this section, too, a dark room is fitted up for the developing of X-ray' pictures. Miss Nancy Downes is in charge of this work, and gives service while you wait, if at all possible. At the west end of the basement a patients' clothing room has been erected, alongside of which is a root cellar which enables the institution to keep vegetables, fruit, eggs, etc. in good condition, helping lower operating costs.

Office Quarters Cramped

The secretary's office, originally in the X-ray room, has been moved to the basement section, where a small room has been built. This office is very diminiture and does not afford sitting room for more than two people. The "office," as it is called, is poorly equipped for the purpose. There are no files, except certain homemade affairs, apparently invented by the secretary. A s fo has been lately installed making it much more convenient for the secretary. A typewriter was also added to the office furnishings of late. A side-door basement entrance gives entrance to people without going through the upstairs and disturbing the patients.

Now that the hospital is in good shape, it seems to be a most convenient time to do something about the cramped, and certainly inadequate, nurses' quarters. It appears that the matron's room is situated on the first floor, in a locality to connect with all possible noises and disturbances. Naturally sleep plays an important part in the health of a nurse and as a hospital stands for good health, this is a matter which should be attended to. Miss Downes has a room on the maternity floor and Miss Hyslop has her lodgings at a neighbor's home. In the face of these circumstances this is an opportune time to consider building a nurses' home, with the hospital kitchen also in the building. The kitchen could be connected to the main hospital by a passageway and the patient's meal wagons could be used.

At Bonners Ferry it is just announced bass fishing in the Kootenay River will be open all year round. Perch and catfish may also be taken twelve months in the year.

Making Survey Of Ireland

Scientists Have Already Found Mysterious Type Of People

Ireland, land of fairy legends and romantic twilights, is being put under the scientific microscope by American experts from Harvard University, who are engaged in a five years' archaeological, anthropometric, social and economic survey of the country.

As a result, all kinds of surprising, fascinating facts are being discovered, including a mysterious type of dark-haired, blue-eyed and fair-skinned people.

Dr. C. W. Du Pertuis, head of the radial section of Harvard's survey, who has established temporary headquarters at Ennis, County Clare, described how he and his little band of experts are taking the measure of Paddy and Molly. With him is his wife, an enthusiastic worker, who acts as recording secretary.

Ten thousand people will be measured and classified in 18 months, Dr. Du Pertuis hopes. In five minutes 125 facts are collected about each individual. At the end of the survey the Harvard workers will be in possession of one and a quarter million facts, which will be taken to Harvard and tabulated, a two-year task.

One thousand people will be measured in the Clare district during the next month, Dr. Du Pertuis said. He declared that Clare has been the easiest county to work so far because the people are taking an intelligent interest in the work and are more willing to co-operate than most people.

When all the facts have been digested at Harvard, Dr. Du Pertuis hopes they will answer such questions as: Who were the Celts? Where are their their descendants? And so on.

Go Through Long Ceremony

Ancient Rites Used When English K.C.'s "Take Silk"

Sixteen barristers, whom the King had been pleased to raise to the dignity of king's counsel, recently participated together in the quaint ceremony of being admitted "within the Bar." Jealous as is the English law for its ancient usages there repeatedly rises a demand that the ceremonial of admitting new K.C.'s should be considerably curtailed.

Wearing silk gowns, lace cuffs, full-bottomed wigs, white kid gloves, court breeches and buckled shoes, the new king's counsel assemble in a body in the law courts and proceed to the first court. Ordinary business is at once suspended.

The judge addresses the nearest new K.C.: "His Majesty having been pleased to appoint you one of his counsel learned in the law, you will be pleased to take your seat within the Bar accordingly." The K.C. so addressed steps into the front row of seats. He bows to the judge, then to the K.C.'s already there. Finally the candidate turns round and bows to the junior Bar in the rear seats.

"Mr. Blank, do you move?" inquires the judge. Mr. Blank merely bows and steps out. The next newly-fledged "silk" steps in and the same ritual is repeated. And so on, until the whole company of new K.C.'s have been so dealt with. Then they move off in a body to another court, where the ritual is again observed. It may be that 20 courts have to be visited.

It has often been suggested that the admission of the new K.C.'s would be more impressive if the ceremony was conducted before the Lord Chief Justice alone, with other judges supporting him.

Predict Longer Day

After some billions of years the earth's day will be 47 times as long as it is now, that is, there will be 1,128 hours to count instead of 24. Astronomers at Pasadena, Cal., have figured this out on the strength of the fact the moon is surely but gradually applying the brakes to the earth's spin. The day is now lengthening at the rate of 1-1000th of a second a century.

The Russian match industry has been built up to a scheduled production of around nine million cases of matches a year.

Decided In Dog's Favor

Magistrate Ruled Airedale Was Not Running At Large

Occasionally there comes from our courts pronouncements that are out of the ordinary but that immediately commend themselves to the good sense of the community.

Such a one emanated from the Calgary Police Court the other day and reveals Magistrate H. G. Scott in a Solomonic light. He ruled that a dog going in orderly fashion to the butcher shop to get his daily rations, according to his regular custom, cannot be declared to be wandering at large. Under this ruling, a charge against one John Riddock of violating a city bylaw was dismissed.

Riddock admitted his dog was about a block from his house without being under immediate restraint. He explained, however, that the 12-year-old Airedale was in the habit of going daily to a nearby butcher shop for a bone and on the occasion cited, a Wednesday afternoon, the dog forgot the butcher shop was closed for the half-holiday and was standing barking at the door when observed by the police constable. Such a dog could not be described as "wandering at large," the court held. He was in lawful pursuit of his business and might be described as a "purposeful dog."

"You might warn him about the early closing bylaw," the magistrate advised Riddock, a remark which, says the report, was greeted with laughter. But why?

An intelligent dog would soon realize that his butcher shop had two "Sundays" a week, and being a purposeful and orderly dog, would act accordingly. Undoubtedly on this occasion he was not inciting his butcher to a breach of the Wednesday closing bylaw. He, as his master explained, just forgot. Even humans do that, as witness the appearance of a tin of pork and beans for Wednesday evening dinners!—Edmonton Journal.

Fleet Greeted Islanders

Searchlight And Rocket Give Lonely People A Thrill

Greetings were exchanged between the residents of lonely Kangaroo Island, Australia, and the British fleet as it passed recently. Pennesha residents built a huge bonfire on Christmas Cove Hill, and when the warships arrived a man morsed "Kangaroo Island greets you." "Thanks" was flashed back from the fleet, which then turned its searchlights on the island, making it light as day. Then the searchlights were flashed into the air to form a crown. A rocket shot from one of the ships ended the display.

X-Ray Outwits Thief

Use of the X-ray enabled police to outwit an ingenious jewel thief. An elegantly dressed man entered a jeweller's shop in Bombay, India, and asked to see some valuable rings. During the inspection, he cleverly substituted a fake ring from his pocket for one of them. The shop assistant's suspicions were aroused and police notified. The ring, however, had myteriously disappeared. The man was X-rayed and the ring was discovered inside his stomach. 2093.

Cattle That Never Drink

Hawaii Has Cows That Balk At Sight Of Water

Hawaii has cows that never drink. Grazing in fertile valleys on the slopes of Mauna Kea, the 13,800-foot mountain in the northwest of the Island of Hawaii, where mists constantly drift in on the trade winds, the cattle slake their thirst through the air they breathe or by cropping the wet grass. When taken to drier regions they balk at the sight of water, not knowing what it is.

The existence of this non-drinking cattle has just been brought to the attention of the Bureau of Animal Industry of the Department of Agriculture. The cattle are bred on a ranch, adjacent to the 500,000-acre Parker Ranch, which has 32,000 Herefords. It was not intended to deprive the animals of water. Originally they were kept on land where water was plentiful. But portions of the herd, attracted by luxuriant grass, wandered into valleys where there were no streams nor lakes.

They soon discovered that they obtained enough moisture without drinking, because of the mist and rain. The offspring of these cattle grew to maturity without ever having seen as much as a bucketful of water.

Hawaii has been a paradise for cattle as well as for man. The natives had never seen cattle prior to 1793, when a British captain presented some to King Kamehameha I. The king forbade his people to kill them. In 1815, John P. Parker, a sailor from Newton, Mass., married a native girl and established a ranch. His descendants grew rich. They imported blooded Herefords from Kentucky, Missouri, Wisconsin and Indiana, and grass from England, South Africa and mainland United States.

Just As Represented

Canadian Poultry Is Being Appreciated By London Buyers

The following is an extract from "The Fish Trades Gazette", London, England, March 2, 1935:

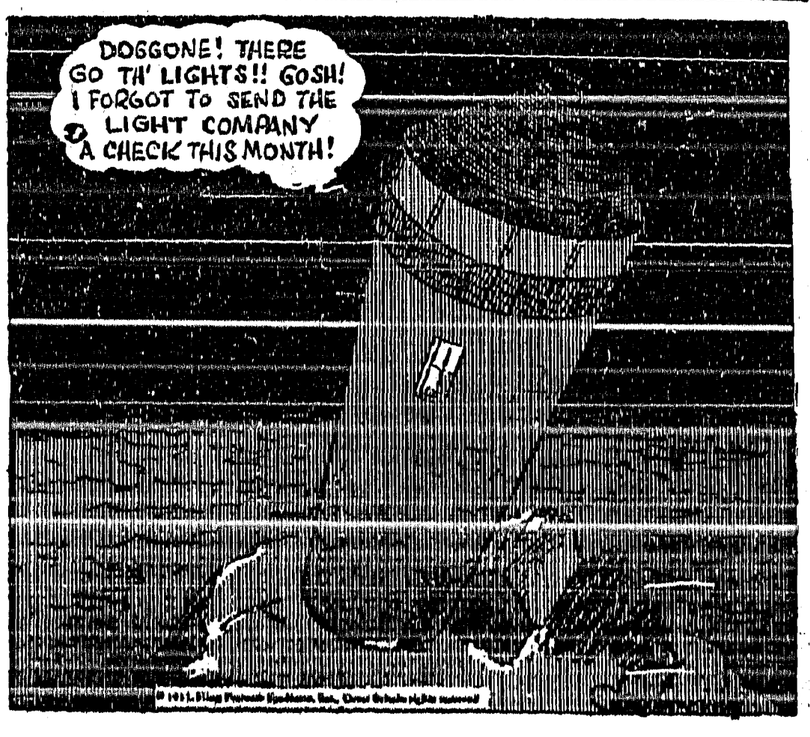
"There is one very good point this year when buying Canadian turkeys or chickens without inspecting them —whatever grade they are, or shall I say, whatever grade is put up to you for sale, you can rely on the marking, as all goods are under Canadian Government supervision and turn out according to what they are represented to be.

"Since writing about ducks and ducklings in these notes of February 16, I have seen some of the finest Canadian ducks that have ever been shipped to this country. These Canadians are quite as good as the Long Island ducks, which as you know are the produce of the United States. In fact the Canadian packing is far superior, being graded as 12 and six per case, which, as the trade is at the present time, is a very handy size for any tradesman. The quality is excellent, as they are ducklings of all sizes and cannot fail to please the most particular. Also, in my opinon, they will make a vast difference to the sale of the States ducks, as, if they have come to stay and the shipments can be relied upon, the demand is bound to increase as the season advances. As we all expect London to be the first on the list for a bumper time as far as poultry is concerned, these birds should hold first place amongst the imported ducks. They are Empire produce, which will go a long way when displayed for sale in the poulterers' shops, as no doubt they will be when better known."

Keeps You Awake

Here's another old theory shot to atoms. A Denver psychiatrist is authority for the statement that counting sheep is a sure way to stay awake at nights, his contention being that "we do not put ourselves to sleep, but rather allow ourselves to sleep," and having anything on the mind will not induce sleep.

FANCIFUL FABLES



Re-Union In Honor Of Selkirk Pioneer

Venerable Violin Plays Part In Festivities Of Occasion

It was just 125 years ago that a group of Highland families, leading a meagre life in the old land, were ejected from their homes, and sought a new land. Some were moved to other Isles; some went to Cape Breton. The ancestors of the people at a recent gathering were brought out by Lord Selkirk to the Red River.

There for many years, they lived a life of great hardship and isolation. Their only outlet to the world was via the Hudson Bay, and that was a nine months' journey.

All this was recalled by Dean J. W. Matheson at the annual reunion of the Lord Selkirk Association of Rupert's Land. Miss Janet Bannerman, now 96 and the oldest member, was present, and was the centre of a ring of old friends and well-wishers. Nearby were Mr. and Mrs. James Fraser, who will celebrate the 61st anniversary of their wedding this year. Scattered about were to be found the Mathesons, the Sutherlands, the MacBeths, the Gunns—members of all the families so intimately woven into the history of the Canadian west.

For the dance a link with the first settlers was present in a violin brought over by Donald "Sandy Sojer" Sutherland, father of the late Senator John Sutherland, in 1811. Before coming to the Red River, Mr. Sutherland had played it to his fellow-campaigners in the Napoleonic Peninsular wars.

The old violin has passed from father to son in the Sutherland family, and is now owned by John Hugh Sutherland. At the reunion it was played by Norman Matheson, of the fifth generation of that family. The first air he played, "The Road to the Isles," was the last song heard by the settlers as they left Stornoway in 1811; and just as their ship neared Churchill, the pipers played it again.

Miss Bannerman and John MacBeth led the way, followed by Mr. and Mrs. Fraser. Old hearts and feet lightened to the old-time music, and when the famous Red River jig was called soon after, the old people went into the intricate steps with a will. Couple after couple performed the jig, with others cutting in and giving the fiddler no rest for almost half an hour. The younger folk stood by, and applauded each dancer heartily as she or he left the floor.

A Powerful Telescope

Lighthouse Keeper Can See Fishpot Robbers Many Miles Away

Fishermen with light fingers are keeping carefully away from the Great Sound in Bermuda, following the latest exhibition of how wary an eye Edgar Gibson, keeper of the Gibbs Hill lighthouse, has peeled on the water around Bermuda.

Seated in the balcony of the lighthouse, 371 feet above sea level, the highest point in the islands, Gibson watches over the Sound with a powerful telescope. Latest malefactors to fall victim to his vigilance were two men whom he spied in a strange boat making off with fishpots that didn't belong to them three miles off shore. He promptly notified harbor police and then observed their arrest through his glass. Several months ago Gibson brought about the arrest of three other men who were raiding fishpots four miles off shore. Gibson can read the time on the face of the clock on the House of Assembly tower, eight miles away in Hamilton, so powerful is his telescope and so clear is the atmophere in Bermuda.

Proof Enough

Two travellers were comparing ideas about foreign cities.

"London," said one, is certainly the foggiest place in the world."

"Oh, no, it's not," said the other. "I've been in a place much foggier than London."

"Where was that!" asked his interested friend.

"I don't know where it was," replied the second man, "it was so foggy."

Waterloo, London's largest railway station, is to be enlarged at a cost of $2,500,000.

'35 Hoop Sport's Banner Year

Ladies' Section of League Has Spectacular Finish — Imperial Groceteria New Men's Champions—Review Repeats.

At the dance at Park pavilion Friday night the last epicode in the 1934-35 pasketball season was enacted. It was a banner year for the league, the main reason being the determination of all the teams to win, and the eveness of the various squads, especially in the ladies' division.

The seaaon was unique in that both the champions—Creston Review and Imperial Groceteria, stood second in the league standing. Both teams were four games down when the playoffs started. The Groceteria qualified for top place by winning two straight in the playoffs, running up a lead of 22 points on the two final games. The Review found the sledding tougher and had to go into a third fixture before annexing the championship.

Games Well Handled

The games were handled this season under the supervision of a referee board, and was a decided improvement over last year in that there were more people directly interested in the work, four of the local players writing on and passing their referees' examinations, which entitled them to referee on any floor in the Kootenays. F. P. Levirs, Earl Marriott and Howard Corrie are the most familiar to the crowd.

Rep. Teams were organized early in the year with the first outside games in February when men's and ladies' teams from Bonners Ferry visited Creston, and divided honors with the locals—Creston ladies winning. Later in the month the East Kootenay championship playoffs started with both Kimberley teams taking a trimming here. The following week the locals were eliminated from East Kootenay honors by taking beatings in the return games at Kimberley.

In intermediate play the Wynndel-Cresion squad lost to Kimberley in the game at Park pavilion, but were able to run up a tie score in the return encounter at Kimberley. Natal Pirates visited Creston a few weeks ago, trimming Creston rep-team by a ten-point margin

Men's Section

In the men's section, Imperia Groceteria took the championship from the Cardinal two straight games In the league schedule out of 12 games played the grocery lads lost three to their immediate rivals, the Cardinals, and one at the end of the season to Wynndel by default. In the playoffs, for semi-final honors, Wynndel defaulted which entitled Loallo to play against the second place team. The Groceteria winning out by quite a wide margin in a sudden death game. In the finals the first fixture was anybody's game, with Groceteria getting the edge on their opponents in the last few minutes to win by a three point score. In the second game, Groceteria went out on a scoring campaign and rolled up a 38 19 score at the end of one o the most thrilling games of the season.

Although this squad are the champions they did not have the highest scorers, but Fred Martello and Jack Hunden stand pretty close to the top with Herb Couling and Bill Bourdon not far behind. Syd. Rogers had a wonderful year as guard, putting up one of the best games on the floor throughout the season. Jack Payne, although not among the high scorers, is a steady player and uses his head to good advantage in working in tricky plays. Jim Downes, guard, has also steadily improved, and at the first of the season figured in the scoring incessintly. Herb Couling and Bill Bourdon, have both had a banner year, both at scoring and on general floor plays. Jack Hunden, centre, who also plays a nice guard game is, perhaps, the best all around player in the district and is particularly deadly on the free throws. This aggregation is coached and captained by Fred Martello of Sirdar, and it is to him a great deal of credit is due for the showing made by the Groceteria. When playing he switched from guard to centre as was thought necessary. Percy Robinson, is manager of the team and S. A. Speers, sponsorer.

Cardinals Strong

The second place team, Cardinals, put in a nice all around season winning 10 out of the 12 games played in the league losing only to the Groceteria and Wynndel. Charlie Holmes ranks as the highest scorer for the season in the men's division, Tony Cobus, also stands high in the scoring world and has made quite a name for himself shooting from rebounds. As substitute guard and centre, Bus. Ross has had to be reckoned with. Ben Crawford and Doug. Corrie, both guards, have a real system all of their own and work faultlessly together. Ben has not been seen as often as last year but when he's around there's something doing. Doug and Howard Corrie both have scoring records. Art. Mark, played for a few weeks as guard, in the absence of Ben Crawford. Harvey Gobbett and Steve Clark are also part time players, the latter having been seen seen quite often at the first of the season.

To Wynndel, probably comes the highest praise of any team entered, both for sportsmanship and progress made since the season commenced. The boys managed to win second place but due to bad roads were unable to play in the semi-finals. Fred Hagen was coach, and and the boys were backed by Wynndel Co Op. Fruit Growers and carried the name Maple Leafs The team is as follows: Melvin Hagen, Andy Hagen, Oswald Payette, Campbell Payette, Joe and Buster Martel, and Ken. Packman.

Loallo, another new team in the league, put up good opposition all year for the better squads coming very close to upsetting the Groceteria and the Cardinals in some of their last games Although the boys have no wins to their credit they will have a good opportunity next year as their team combination is good and they have improved a great deal since the league started. The team consists of Wilf. L Belle, Buff and Sam Nastassi, Frances Bourdon, Chester Goplin, Clifford York and Lance Maddess. Earl Marriot is the coach and is to be congratulated on his success with this promising squad. Loallo is sponsored by Long, Allan and Long fruit house.

Ladies' Section

In the ladies division play was more keenly contested than in the mens. After losing four straight games to Cecil Moore's Garage in the league season, Creston Review managed to redeem themselves by taking the championship in a two out of three games In the first game the Review had play pretty much as they wanted and managed to beat the garage girls by five points. The second meeting was not so nice, and resulted in an equally satisfactory victory for Moore's, by the margin of 4 points. The third game proved to be a whirlwind both for the spectators and the players with neither squad at any time sure of winning. At full time the score was tied. Five minutes overtime was played and the Review came out on top with a two point lead

This victory was not altogether unexpected, as the newspaper girls have one of the best coaches in the Kootenays, in the person of Fred Martello. This is the second year Fred has been in charge of this squad, although the team has changed considerably this season, having only three of the old recruits. Last year the Review took the championship from the High reps, but by a much larger score

Review Deserved Win

Besides being the champions this team has on its lineup the highest individual scorer in the ladies' division, Marjorie Levirs. Marge has had a banner year, playing the best season to date in the local league. She is a guard by preference but plays on the forward line beautifully, is a good shot, with a dribble that is hard to stop.

Ada Lewis, captain and guard, has also had a good year and can be depended on to stop her man, although she does not figure in the scoring. The mainstay of any team of course, is the centre which is well handled by Nora Payne. She is always there to get the tip off and when around the basket handles passes to excellent advantage and is especially good at taking re-bounds. Irene Bourdon, of last year's High Reps has this year made quite a name for herself on floor play and especially on long shots from which she has garnered quite a number of points for herself. Dorothy Palmer, of the High Fliers originally, joined the ranks of the Review and certainly puts all she has into the play especially when playing championship games. Dot is a fair shot and her long suite is getting the ball when she wants it, too. Hazel Sinclair joined the squad to make up a sixth just before the playoffs, she only played once and filled the bill to perfection. C. F. Hayes is the sponsorer of the Chhmpions.

Playoff Games Close

Cecil Moore's Garage runner-up was not far behind the champions in the playoffs the latter winning by three points. Moore's team is made up mostly of last year's High School Rep team, who have all had real basketball drilling while in school under the training of Mrs. F. P. Levirs. This year Tony Cobus, principal of Erickson school is to be patted on the back for his efforts as coach of the girls. Edith Swain, a new face in basketball, has made a big difference to this team. She is a dead shot and is especially good on penalty throws. Before coming here she played with the University of Toronto Senior Ladies and has had equal experience at coaching and refereeing. Nell Payne, captain and alternate centre and forward, has not been able to show her usual class owing to a game knee. This, however, did not handicap her excellent shooting. Mary Abbott has made a name for herself as guard and occasionally sneaks up and sinks some classy baskets. Thoe. Tompkins and Ruth Hare were also efficient guards. Betty Speers and Agnes Crane are on the forward line with Betty having the third highest scoring honors in the ladies' division of the league. Cecil Moore is sponsor of this team and they are a lucky quint, as there is nothing to good, for them according to Cecil.

Second Division Squads Classy

Creston Motors this year won third place and Elizabeth Armitage won second place as high scorer in the league. This was not unexpected as Liz. is a real basketball player. The team is sponsored by Creston Motors and was coached by Earl Marriott. Other Morors talent is Kate Payne, Margaret Armitage, Edith Avery, Dot. Wightman, and Jean McCreath.

Pharmacy, last but not least, bring up the rear This squad have the prettiest combination on the floor of all teams, but lack a good shot. Coaching honors have been divided between G. H. Kelly, the sponsor; Hunden and Charlie Holmes. The line up is Opal, Eva and Yvonne LaBelle, Dot. Olivier, Madge Moore, Marjorie Learmonth, and Fay Tompkins.

Junior League

A junior basketball league was in evidence the first part of the season, playing games on Fridays at Creston and Canyon alternately, with entries from eight teams representing three districts—Canyon, Erickson and Creston. Basketball was introduced at Canyon last fall by Principal Hunden and has been exceptionally popular. Both of Canyon's teams did well, the girls winning the championship of the league, and the boys tieing with Crestyn high school. Erickson, too, is just breaking in on the hoop sport with a team of girls playing the past season. Erickson, is at a disadvantage, having to come to Creston to both play and practice. The Erickson squad was trained by Principal Cobus. In the junior circuit Creston had two high school boys' teams as well as a girls' squad. The public school, a boys' and girls' quintette. The high school talent was handled by Principal and Mrs Levirs, while the public school teams looked after by Principal Marriott and vice-principal Adam Robertson.

You And Your Country

Throughout the length and breadth of this Dominion, at public gatherings of every description, banquets, Canadian Club, Service clubs, Board of Trade meetings, political gatherings, school assemblies, etc., men and women lustily sing "O Canada, we stand on guard for thee," while to the south across the line of the 49th parallel our neighbors sing "My country 'tis of thee." In Canada, on July 1st we proudly celebrate the uniting of the several Provinces into one confederation thus creating this young nation, while on July 4th our American cousins rejoice in commemorating the obtaining of their independence.

Both countries to-day, in common with the rest of the world, are facing grave difficulties,—difficulties of an economic character resulting from the Great War and the insane wave of narrow economic nationalism which has since swept over the nations, leading them to think of "my country" only and utterly regardless of the fact,—which should never have been lost sight of,—that in this modern world no country can think only of and live unto itself alone.

Now, because these policies of national self-sufficiency, of economic isolation, have failed to work,—on the contrary, have resulted in a stagnation of world trade and loss to all nations and peoples,—and unemployment on a gigantic scale with all its attendant losses and sufferings for millions of people prevail, men and women everywhere are no longer thinking in terms of their country, but are thinking solely of themselves.

As the direct outcome of their personal difficulties, and this thinking of themselves instead of their fellowmen, their community and their country,—in a word, narrow nationalism developed to its ultimate and inevitable end,—men and women are now demanding that, instead of standing on guard for their country, the country should do everything for them as individuals. Wrong thinking has brought many people to entertain the idea that, instead of them owing any duty or obligations to their country, the country owes everything to them, and if the country will not or cannot supply all their needs and desires, then they are prepared to destroy their country.

All governments the world over are now being asked to do the impossible, because people have forgotten that governments are, after all, but the people themselves acting in a corporate capacity. So it is that, as individuals, people are demanding that their governments shall do for them, and assume burdens and responsibilities on their behalf, which are too great and heavy for the people as a whole to assume and carry, because whatever a government does the people must pay for.

There is a crying need for a reconstruction in our thinking in these trying times; it is absolutely necessary that as a people we give much more thought to fundamentals and less to the incidentals of life.

One of these fundamentals is that no person should expect or ask a government to do anything for him that he can possibily do for himself. We create governments not to do things for us that we can and ought to do ourselves as individuals, but only to do those things that single-handed we cannot do, but collectively we can do. What we can do ourselves, we ought to do and must do because we can do it better, more economically and more efficiently, and more to our satisfaction, than any government can possibly do.

A second fundamental is that in order that those things we must rely on governments to do for us in our community or national life can be done we, as individuals, must supply with means through taxation to enable the government to act. Therefore, one of the first efforts of all people should be to pay their just taxes and pay them as promptly as possible. Unfortunately, a habit of mind has developed to an alarming extent that the payment of taxes is the last thing about which an individual should concern himself or herself. Many people are prepared to pay any and every other obligation before their obligations to governments; indeed, many go ahead gratifying their desires and wishes with money which actually does not belong to them, but is rightfully the property of the State,—that is, the property of all the people to be used for the benefit not of one individual but of the community and nation. So long as this idea prevails, and is acted upon, governments cannot do what they are created to do, are expected to do, and would do if they had the means where with to do it.

Within recent years thousands of people, lacking employment, have received hundreds, and some families over a period of years, thousands of dollars in relief payments to provide them with the necessities of life which in more normal times they provided for themselves out of wages earned. But if they are asked to do a few days or weeks work now to be credited against the advances made to them during these years, many of these people refuse to make payment through the rendering of the service asked of them. Yet they have already been paid for such work at a rate which actually totals hundreds of dollars a week for any work they might now do.

Are they giving a thought to their country now, or only thinking of themselves? Are they helping their governments to continue to help them, or are they weakening their governments in the efforts being put forth in their behalf.

What is your attitude to your country?

THE STRUGGLE TO LIVE

(By Gordon H. Guest, M.A.)

Every plant and animal is exposed to unfavorable conditions, and the organism must successfully contend with these conditions in order to remain alive. No two plants or parts of plants are exposed to exactly the same living conditions and a plant meets its particular conditions either by dying, or by adapting itself to them.

The tree withstands the cold by stopping its active growth, hardening its tissues and dropping its leaves. Many herbaceous or soft-stemmed plants meet the cold by dying to the ground and withdrawing all life into the root parts. Some plants combat the cold by dying outright, and providing abundance of seeds to perpetuate the kind next season.

Plants adapt themselves to light by growing towards it; or by hanging their leaves in such a position that they catch the light. In less sunny places they increase their leaf surface, or greatly lengthen their stems so as to overtop their fellows, as do trees and vines.

The struggle for existence and adaptation to conditions are among the most significant facts in nature. The sum of all the conditions in which a plant or an animal is placed is called environment. Environment comprises the conditions of climate, soil, moisture, exposure to light, relation to food supply and contention with other plants or animals. The organism either adapts itself to its environment or else it weakens and dies.

The plants that most perfectly meet the conditions in which they are placed are able to persist, and they perpetuate themselves. Their offspring usually inherit some of the characteristics which enabled them successfully to meet the battle of life, and the fit, that is those best adapted to their conditions, tend to survive.

Adaptation to conditions depends on the fact of variation. If plants were perfectly invariable, that is, all exactly alike, they could not meet new conditions. Conditions are necessarily new for every organism and it is impossible to picture a perfectly inflexible and stable succession of plants or animals.

Man has modified plants and animals for his use. All our common domestic animals are very unlike their original ancestors, and our common and long-cultivated plants have varied from their original forms.

By selecting seeds from a plant that pleases him, the plant breeder may, under given conditions, produce numbers of plants more or less as he desires them. From the best of these, he may again choose; and so on until the race becomes greatly improved. This process of continuously choosing the most suitable plants is known as selection. A somewhat similar process goes on in wild nature, and it is then known as natural selection.

Session Prorogued

Manitoba Government Authorizes Large Sum For Hydro Extension

The third session of the 19th Manitoba legislature has prorogued, Lieutenant-Governor W. J. Tupper giving royal assent to 56 bills passed during the last few days of the session.

Among bills given royal assent were money measures providing for total expenditures of $14,083,000 during the next fiscal year, and authorization for a capital outlay for Manitoba hydro extensions over a large area.

Enabling legislation making Manitoba the first province in the Dominion to take steps to provide pensions for blind persons also was approved.

Chinese Pirates

Vessels Along Coast Of China To Be Armed To Repel Attacks

Investigation following the pirating of the steamer Tungchow, attacked early in the year while she was carrying 75 mission school children, including some Canadians, from Shanghai to Chefoo has convinced the China Navigation Company that if piracy is to be stamped out along the China coasts, passenger ships must be protected by more guards who are "quick on the draw."

It was indicated the heavy pistols used by the Russian guards on the Tungchow were too unwieldly to be drawn quickly. The British-owned company has now announced the guards on its vessels will be increased 50 per cent. and be supplied with weapons which can be brought into action promptly.

Why Your Head Aches

Too Much Air In Ventricles According To Science

Does your head ache? Then there's too much air in your ventricles—tiny little spaces within the brain connected to the spinal canal.

Science has ascertained, Dr. Frederick Tilney told the New York Academy of Medicine that headaches are apt to occur when air gets into the third and lateral of these little spaces.

Hyper-sensitive persons may derive a headache from consuming milk or eggs, sugar and other foods, Dr. Alexander Lambert told the symposium. Excessive smoking may bring pain to another. Some persons get a headache from coffee; others may use coffee to cure the same ill.

He: "May I have some stationery?"

Clerk (haughtily): "Are you a guest of the hotel?"

He: "Goodness, no! I'm paying two guineas a day."

Clever Reporters

The versatility of ship reporters is noted wherever newspapers are published. They swarmed all over a vessel entering New York harbor when they learned a "Barbara Hutton" was aboard. Were they disappointed when they learned she was a Canadian girl and not the five and ten princess? Not a bit. They wrote a story about the "comedy of errors."

AT 62—IN BED WITH RHEUMATISM

At 65—Working Again

Why worry about rheumatism? This old fellow had it almost as bad as it could be. But he just found the right remedy, stuck to it, and now he's working again—at 65 years of age.

Let him tell you all about it:—"For two years and a half," he writes, "I have suffered from rheumatism. For eighteen months I could not turn over in bed, nor help myself in any way. My legs and feet were swollen, and I could not sleep or get any rest until I started taking Kruschen Salts. After taking one bottle, I went about on two canes. I kept on taking it, as I found the pains were leaving me. I have taken six bottles, and now I have started work again. I am 65 years of age, and everybody that knows me says I am a wonder to get on, after what I was."—J.B.

Do you realise what causes rheumatism? Nothing but sharp-edged uric acid crystals which form as the result of sluggish eliminating organs. Kruschen Salts can always be counted upon to clear those painful crystals from the system.

FEDERAL PLANS FOR RESCUING DROUTH AREAS

Ottawa.—Plans for rehabilitating the drouth and soil drifting areas of the prairie provinces were laid before the House of Commons by Hon. Robert Weir, minister of agriculture. He was introducing a bill which provides $750,000 this year and $1,000,000 annually for four years following, to put these plans into effect.

The prairie farm rehabilitation advisory committee will be appointed to advise Mr. Weir on plans for rescuing the drouth harassed areas. The minister will go west as soon as parliament adjourns for the Easter recess when the committee will be set up and begin operations.

The program in a general way has been worked out, but the committee will advise on its development. Five rehabilitation areas are planned, three in Saskatchewan and one each in the other provinces. Each of these will include about 36 square miles where methods for saving the lands will be demonstrated.

About 50 large illustration stations, ranging from one to two sections will be provided, where the best farmers in any area will be selected to proceed with illustration work. They will be supplied with proper seeds and allowed certain payments on an acreage basis for carrying out work of reclaiming the land.

Certain abandoned lands will be taken over and efforts made to bring them back into pastures.

Extensive tree planting will be carried out under contract with farmers in two areas, including shelter belts.

Possibly 1,000 small dams will be built on individual farms to conserve water supply. Owners of such farms will be supplied with engineering advice by the department of agriculture as to location of these dams, and in some instances farmers will be assisted to procure materials.

A number of larger dams, holding back spring freshets of streams in ranching areas of the three provinces will be constructed. The lakes thus formed will provide both water supplies for livestock and for irrigation purposes.

In addition there will be township areas where supplies of grass seed will be provided to restore pastures when rains make the sowing of such seed advisable.

A considerable program of seed production is planned which will provide abundance of suitable grass and clover seeds to supply areas as required.

The advisory committee, farmer appointees of which will be from drouth areas, will consist of a chairman appointed by order in council;

One representative each of the Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta grain growing farmers.

One representative of Saskatchewan livestock farmers.

One representative of Alberta range farmers.

One representative of mortgage companies of Canada.

One representative of the Canadian Bankers' Association.

One representative each from the Canadian Pacific Railway Company, Limited, and the Canadian National Railways.

Two representatives from the Dominion department of agriculture; and

One representative of the department of agriculture of each of the provinces of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta.

Mystery Story

Legendary Gold Find May Bring Gold Seekers To North Area

Edmonton.—District prospectors in the White Court area, 100 miles from Edmonton, are anxiously awaiting the spring breakup to start a search for the legendary gold find of Moostas, ancient Indian who died recently with the secret of the source of his reputed find of a few years ago. Inquiries reaching the district from all parts of Canada as a result of the revival of the mystery story, may bring gold seekers from a distance.

Oppose Plan To Sell Land

Doukhobors Unwilling To Give Up Land They Have Lived On For Many Years

Winnipeg.—Internal disagreement in the Christian Community of Universal Brotherhood appeared following a recent announcement of J. P. Shukin, vice-president of the brotherhood, that 30,000 acres of Doukhobor land in the Saskatchewan districts of Veregin, Kylemore and Kelvington would be sold.

Andrew F. Bloodoff, a member of the brotherhood at Veregin, has declared members of the sect in that district are unwilling to leave the home they have lived in for 30 years.

Learning of this alleged complaint from the Veregin district group, Mr. Shukin arranged an interview with Peter Veregin, president of the brotherhood and sect leader who is serving a two-month term in Headingly jail for having assaulted his interpreter.

Mr. Shukin declared, prior to seeing Veregin, the land would be sold and that "any statements to the contrary made by such people as Bloodoff or other Doukhobors in Saskatchewan should be disregarded."

To Aid Celebration

Band Will Offer Services Free For Jubilee Celebration In Calgary

Calgary.—Assistance of bandsmen in Calgary's celebration of King George's silver jubilee was pledged by E. S. Harris, secretary of the National Musicians of Canada, Calgary Branch, who said members of his organization were willing to give their services gratis in playing the accompaniment of children's singing May 6.

It was feared the celebrations would have to be called off when musicians, members of a union organization with headquarters in the United States, declined to assist unless payment was made for their service. Alderman Dr. W. A. Lincoln aid the city could not afford to pay musicians.

Held As German Spy

France Arrest Man Who Frequented High Political Circles

Paris.—Police claimed to have unmasked an important nest of spies in Paris with the arrest of a German, Edward Bernhueber, who they said frequented political circles posing as an apostle of Franco-German rapprochement.

Authorities said they had found on Bernheuber a list of questions asking information on varied military, diplomatic and political subjects which he had asked a French journalist named Armand Avrousart to answer.

Bernheuber, who police alleged was one of the cleverest members of the German intelligence service, was held on a warrant issued by Judge Benon, the magistrate who conducted the original investigations of Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Bercowitz, naturalized Canadians, and 19 other suspects on spy charges.

A search of Bernhueber's flat, police said, yielded nothing but a curious pencil case containing tear gas. A persuasive and interesting talker, he often frequented high political circles, they said.

Jap Nationals Admitted

Ottawa.—Japanese nationals admitted to Canada during the four years ended with March 31, 1934, totalled 546 of whom 183 were adult men, 195 adult women and 78 children of both sexes. Jubilee Medals

Want To Know If Medals Are Available For Sale In Canada

Ottawa.—Minister of Finance E. N. Rhodes promised to inform the House of Commons if medals commemorating King George's silver jubilee would be available for sale in Canada and whether they would be received from the royal mint in England for Canadian distribution.

The finance minister made the promise in a discussion launched by John Vallance (Lib., South Battleford) who told Secretary of State C. H. Cahan he had received a telegram from Lloydminster, Sask., asking if 500 medals could be obtained from the Canadian mint for distribution among school children.

Charles E. Bothwell (Lib., Swift Current) prompted Mr. Rhodes' promise when he asked for information "because the fact is I have written letters giving information to people in my own constituency who have made inquiries." He added: "I hope I have not been misled in the matter."

Making Complete Recovery

Premier Bennett Planning To Sail For England To Attend Jubilee Celebration

Ottawa.—Although Prime Minister R. B. Bennett had not yet left his apartment he was expected to take some outdoor exercise in a day or two for the first time since Feb. 24, when he was taken ill.

Tentative booking has been made for the prime minister on a steamship sailing from New York at the end of this week to take him to the King's Silver Jubilee celebrations in London.

Mr. Bennett has had several conferences with members of the cabinet over the works legislation now being drafted to put many thousands back to work..

Introduction of the works measure is expected before motion is made for the Easter adjournment.

Mr. Bennett is said to be making a complete recovery and only a further breakdown will prevent his heading the party in the forthcoming general election campaign.

WANT PREMIERS TO MEET WITH MAYORS IN EAST

Montreal.—Premiers of all nine Canadian provinces were invited by wire to meet here on April 22 with members of the continuing committee of the Dominion conference of mayors to consider "further decisive steps" in connection with the mayors' claim that the Dominion government should take over complete responsibility for unemployment relief.

The invitation was signed by the entire continuing committee, composed of Mayors Camillien Houde, Montreal; James Simpson, Toronto; G. G. McGeer, Vancouver; John Queen, Winnipeg; George Wenige, London; E. J. Cragg, Halifax, and by Fred Bancroft, Toronto, general secretary.

Mayors Houde, Simpson and Wenige, with Mr. Bancroft, met here to discuss the question, the other mayors being consulted by wire.

The wire to the various premiers read:

"You have received a complete copy of the decisions and proceedings of the Dominion conference of mayors which met in Montreal and Ottawa on March 25 to 28 and you will have noticed that one of our two main demands was that for the very strong reasons therein stated the Dominion government should assume the entire responsibility for unemployment relief.

"We have not so far received any answer from the Dominion government. It is urgently necessary to take further decisive steps. We strongly urge you or your representative on behalf of your government to attend a joint meeting of representatives of provincial governments and our continuing committee, in order to discuss the immediate calling of a joint conference of the provincial and municipal governments of Canada. We propose that this first meeting should be held in Montreal on Monday, April 22."

Following their meeting Mayors Houde, Simpson and Wenige wired their colleagues of the continuing committee that "notwithstanding the appalling situation which was laid before the members of parliament and the cabinet indications have reached us that the government is not yet alive to the existing menace to the peace, order and good government of Canada," through the unemployment relief situation.

The conference between the provincial representatives and the continuing committee would be preparatory, in the mayors' plan, to a conference between all Canadian mayors and provincial representatives with the intention of securing a united decision to lay before Dominion authorities.

The mayors saw such a conference a necessity following the statement of Sir George Perley, acting prime minister, last month to the mayors that unemployment relief matters should be taken to the provinces.

Help Railway Workers

Double Contributions From Heavy Earnings Would "Underdog" Assist

Ottawa.—Railway engineers, conductors and firemen working under certain conditions in a mileage basis that might give them two weeks' pay in one week should make a contribution of 25 cents for "each" week earned to the Dominion unemployment insurance fund, Senator James Murdock told the senate banking and commerce committee.

The former Liberal minister of labor believed the double contribution in such instances would be fair to the "underdog"—the railway sectionman receiving a week's wage for six days' work, and unemployed railwaymen.
